

General Assembly

Distr.: General
6 February 2003

Fifty-seventh session
Agenda item 105

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

[on the report of the Third Committee (A/57/552)]

57/188. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian children

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>1</sup>

Recalling also the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990,<sup>2</sup>

Recalling further the Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-seventh special session,<sup>3</sup>

Concerned that the Palestinian children under Israeli occupation remain deprived of many basic rights under the Convention,

Concerned also about the recent grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of the continuing Israeli assaults and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, resulting in the dire humanitarian crisis,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence resulting in extensive loss of human life and injuries, including among Palestinian children,

Deeply concerned about the consequences, including psychological consequences, of the Israeli military actions for the present and future well-being of Palestinian children,

1. Stresses the urgent need for Palestinian children to live a normal life, free from foreign occupation, destruction and fear, in their own State;

2. Demands, in the meantime, that Israel, the occupying Power, respect relevant provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child<sup>1</sup> and comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>4</sup> in order to ensure the well-being and protection of Palestinian children and their families;

<sup>1</sup> Resolution 44/25, annex.

<sup>2</sup> A/45/625, annex.

<sup>3</sup> See resolution S-27/2, annex.

3. Calls upon the international community to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian children and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions.

*77th plenary meeting
18 December 2002*

---

<sup>4</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
26 February 2004

Fifty-eighth session
Agenda item 113

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly on 22 December 2003

[on the report of the Third Committee (A/58/504)]

58/155. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian children

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>1</sup>

Recalling also the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s, adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990,<sup>2</sup>

Recalling further the Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-seventh special session,<sup>3</sup>

Concerned that the Palestinian children under Israeli occupation remain deprived of many basic rights under the Convention,

Concerned also about the continued grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of the continuing Israeli assaults and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, resulting in the dire humanitarian crisis,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all children in the whole Middle East region,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, resulting in extensive loss of human life and injuries, including among Palestinian children,

Deeply concerned about the severe consequences, including psychological consequences, of the Israeli military actions for the present and future well-being of Palestinian children,

1. Stresses the urgent need for Palestinian children to live a normal life free from foreign occupation, destruction and fear in their own State;

<sup>1</sup> Resolution 44/25, annex.

<sup>2</sup> A/45/625, annex.

<sup>3</sup> See resolution S-27/2, annex.

2. Demands, in the meanwhile, that Israel, the occupying Power, respect relevant provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child<sup>1</sup> and comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>4</sup> in order to ensure the well-being and protection of Palestinian children and their families;

3. Calls upon the international community to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian children and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions.

*77th plenary meeting
22 December 2003*

---

<sup>4</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
24 February 2005

Fifty-ninth session
Agenda item 101

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 2004

[on the report of the Third Committee (A/59/499)]

59/173. The situation of and assistance to Palestinian children

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>1</sup>

Bearing in mind the conclusion by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004,<sup>2</sup> that the Convention on the Rights of the Child is applicable within the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Recalling the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990,<sup>3</sup>

Recalling also the Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-seventh special session,<sup>4</sup>

Recalling further the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,<sup>5</sup>

Noting with grave concern that the Palestinian children under Israeli occupation remain deprived of many basic rights under the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Concerned about the continued grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, the severely detrimental impact of the continuing Israeli assaults and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, and the continuing dire humanitarian crisis on the safety and well-being of Palestinian children,

Concerned also about the severely detrimental impact being caused by the unlawful construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated

<sup>1</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

<sup>2</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1.

<sup>3</sup> A/45/625, annex.

<sup>4</sup> See resolution S-27/2, annex.

<sup>5</sup> See resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

regime, on the socio-economic conditions of Palestinian children and their families and on the enjoyment by Palestinian children of their right to education, to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food, clothing and housing, to health and to be free from hunger, in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all children in the whole Middle East region,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, resulting in extensive loss of human life and injuries, including among Palestinian children,

Deeply concerned about the negative consequences, including psychological consequences, of the Israeli military actions for the present and future well-being of Palestinian children,

1. Stresses the urgent need for Palestinian children to live a normal life free from foreign occupation, destruction and fear in their own State;

2. Demands, in the meanwhile, that Israel, the occupying Power, respect relevant provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child<sup>1</sup> and comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>6</sup> in order to ensure the well-being and protection of Palestinian children and their families;

3. Calls upon the international community to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian children and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions.

*74th plenary meeting
20 December 2004*

---

<sup>6</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

the United Nations Decade for Women have not yet been achieved;

5. Considers that the activities of the world community and of the United Nations should continue beyond the end of the United Nations Decade for Women and should be directed towards equal treatment for women and their full integration in development under conditions of peace.

*19th plenary meeting
24 May 1984*

1984/17. Women under apartheid

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of women and children living under racist minority régimes and in the occupied Arab territories and other occupied territories,<sup>28</sup>

Bearing in mind the conclusions of the International Conference on Women and Apartheid, held at Brussels from 17 to 19 May 1982, and of the Declaration adopted by the Conference,<sup>29</sup>

Noting the wide observance of 9 August annually as the International Day of Solidarity with the Struggle of Women in South Africa and Namibia, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 36/172 K of 17 December 1981,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Special Committee against Apartheid and its Task Force on Women and Children for giving special attention to the plight of women and children under apartheid, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 36/172 K;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Committee of Solidarity with the Struggle of Women in South Africa and Namibia for undertaking activities in support of women and children living under apartheid, and urges the Committee to exert greater efforts in support of women and children living under apartheid;

3. Urges all Governments, United Nations bodies, international, regional, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, women's and anti-apartheid groups and other concerned groups to give the highest priority to measures of assistance to women in South Africa and Namibia until the end of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace and beyond;

4. Invites the Special Committee against Apartheid and its Task Force on Women and Children to continue their activities in promoting the widest possible dissemination of information concerning women and children living under apartheid;

5. Appeals to all Governments, United Nations bodies, international, regional, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, women's and anti-apartheid groups and other concerned groups to support the various projects of the national liberation movements and front-line States designed to assist refugee women and children from South Africa and Namibia;

<sup>28</sup> E/CN.6/1984/10.

<sup>29</sup> See A/37/261-S/15150.

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-first session a preliminary report on measures of assistance provided to women inside South Africa and Namibia and to women from South Africa and Namibia who have become refugees as the result of the practice of apartheid;

7. Calls upon all women's organizations to support the women of Namibia in their efforts to attain independence, in accordance with Security Council resolution 435 (1978) of 29 September 1978.

*19th plenary meeting
24 May 1984*

1984/18. Situation of Palestinian women within and outside the occupied Arab territories

The Economic and Social Council,

Deeply concerned about the prevailing living conditions of Palestinian women within and outside the occupied Arab territories,

Recognizing that the mass uprooting of Palestinian women from their homeland seriously affects their participation and integration in the development process,

Noting that no comprehensive study relating to the status of Palestinian women within and outside the occupied Arab territories has been conducted in the United Nations system since the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, held at Copenhagen from 14 to 30 July 1980.

Recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and other appropriate United Nations organizations,

Taking note of chapter II of the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Arab territories,<sup>30</sup> submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirtieth session,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to submit an updated version of that report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-first session;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories and to submit it to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-second session;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit an interim report on the preparation of that study to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-first session;

4. Invites all Governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and United Nations bodies to extend all necessary assistance to the Secretary-General in this regard.

*19th plenary meeting
24 May 1984*

<sup>30</sup> E/CN.6/1984/10.

4. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to take adequate steps to give wide publicity to the Declaration and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-second session.

*19th plenary meeting
23 May 1986*

1986/21. Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Deeply concerned about the prevailing living conditions of Palestinian women,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>34</sup>

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the preparation of a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories,<sup>37</sup>

1. Requests the Secretary-General, in preparing the comprehensive report, to focus on the identification of the main humanitarian needs of Palestinian women;

2. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women at its 1988 session to propose concrete measures of assistance to Palestinian women on the basis of the conclusions of that report;

3. Calls upon United Nations organs and organizations, as well as national, regional and international women's organizations, to extend their assistance to Palestinian women;

4. Emphasizes that nothing less than the realization of their inalienable rights will put an end to the sufferings of Palestinian women.

*19th plenary meeting
23 May 1986*

1986/22. Women and children under apartheid

The Economic and Social Council,

Alarmed by the stepped-up repression and indiscriminate killing, maiming and detention of opponents of the apartheid system,

Noting the concern of women throughout the world about the continuing degradation and abuse to which African women and children are daily subjected by the white minority régime of South Africa,

Recalling that that concern was expressed in the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>34</sup> which also contain proposals for various forms of assistance to be rendered to women and children inside South Africa and to those who have become refugees,

Recognizing that the inhuman exploitation and dispossession of the African people by the white minority régime is directly responsible for the appalling conditions under which African women and children live,

Further recognizing that the equality and emancipation of African women cannot be achieved without the success of the struggle for national liberation and self-determination of the indigenous people and the total destruction of the racist régime of South Africa,

<sup>37</sup>E/CN.6/1986/6.

1. Condemns unequivocally the South African régime for the imposition of the state of emergency, the forcible separation of black families and the detention and imprisonment of women and children;

2. Demands the immediate and unconditional release of all political prisoners, who increasingly include women and children;

3. Commends the tenacity and bravery of those women inside South Africa and outside who have resisted oppression, who have been detained, tortured and killed, whose husbands, children and relatives have been detained, tortured and killed and who, despite this, have remained steadfast in their opposition to the racist régime;

4. Acknowledges the efforts of those Governments, non-governmental organizations and individuals that have campaigned for and applied sanctions against the racist régime;

5. Calls upon those countries that support or collaborate with the racist régime to desist from such support or collaboration in the political, military, economic and nuclear spheres;

6. Further calls upon Governments, in view of the deterioration of the situation in South Africa, as a matter of urgency, to impose comprehensive sanctions in accordance with Security Council resolutions and the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women;

7. Urges Member States and United Nations organizations to give effect forthwith, in consultation with the liberation movements, to the Forward-looking Strategies that deal with women and children under apartheid; particular attention should be given to education, health, vocational training and employment opportunities and the strengthening of the women's sections of the liberation movements.

*19th plenary meeting
23 May 1986*

1986/23. Namibia

The Economic and Social Council,

Gravely concerned by the delay in the implementation of Security Council resolution 435 (1978) of 29 September 1978 concerning the withdrawal of South Africa's illegal administration from Namibia and the holding of elections under the supervision of the United Nations,

Deeply concerned by the perpetual suffering of Namibian women under the illegal occupation of the racist South African régime backed by the allies, and further concerned by the utilization of Namibian territory as a springboard for attacking and destabilizing neighbouring States,

1. Condemns, in no uncertain terms, the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim Government at Windhoek;

2. Denounces the forceful conscription of Namibian men and women between the ages of 17 and 55 years into the racist army in order to consolidate and facilitate widespread repression throughout the country;

3. Rejects South Africa's insistence on linking the independence of Namibia to the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola;

4. Demands that South Africa refrain from using Namibia as a base to infiltrate Angola and other independent neighbouring countries;

Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-third session.

15th plenary meeting
26 May 1988

1988/24. Women and children in Namibia

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1986/23 of 23 May 1986,

Recalling also the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>30</sup> in particular paragraph 259, which calls for the speedy and effective implementation of Security Council resolution 435 (1978) of 29 September 1978 concerning the independence of Namibia,

Gravely concerned about the delay in the implementation of Security Council resolution 435 (1978) regarding the withdrawal of South Africa's illegal administration from Namibia and the holding of elections under the supervision of the United Nations,

Deeply concerned about the perpetual suffering of Namibian women under the illegal occupation of the racist South African régime, and further concerned about the use of Namibian territory as a springboard for attacking and destabilizing neighbouring States,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on new developments concerning the situation of women under apartheid in South Africa and Namibia and measures of assistance to women from South Africa and Namibia who have become refugees as a result of the practice of apartheid,<sup>45</sup>

1. Condemns, in no uncertain terms, the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim Government at Windhoek;

2. Denounces the forcible conscription of Namibian men and women between the ages of 17 and 55 years into the racist army, as well as the detention of children, practices which consolidate and facilitate widespread repression throughout the country;

3. Rejects South Africa's insistence on linking the independence of Namibia to the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola;

4. Demands the release of all political prisoners, among whom are included women and children, and the lifting of the state of emergency imposed by South Africa for more than twelve years;

5. Demands that South Africa refrain from using Namibia as a base from which to infiltrate Angola and other independent neighbouring countries;

6. Calls upon all women of the world to support and assist all bodies struggling to put an end to colonialism in Namibia;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-third session a comprehensive report on monitoring the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women with regard to women and children in Namibia.

15th plenary meeting
26 May 1988

1988/25. Situation of Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Referring to the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories,<sup>46</sup>

Mindful of the humanitarian principles and provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949,<sup>47</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>30</sup> in particular paragraph 260 thereof,

Noting with deep concern the escalating Israeli oppression and ill-treatment of the Palestinian people, including women and children in the occupied Palestinian territories,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women and children inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territories to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-third session;

2. Strongly condemns the application of an "iron-fist" policy by Israel, the occupying Power, against Palestinian women and their families in the occupied Palestinian territories;

3. Reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War is applicable to territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, as a matter of urgency, to send a mission composed of experts on the status of women to investigate the situation of Palestinian women and children, in the light of the recent tragic developments in the occupied Palestinian territories;

5. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to monitor the implementation of the provisions of paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women concerning assistance to Palestinian women inside and outside the occupied territories;

6. Reaffirms that Palestinian women, as part of a nation whose people are prevented from exercising their basic human and political rights, cannot participate in the attainment of the objectives of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies, namely equality, development and peace, without the realization of their inalienable right to return to their homes, their right to self-determination and their right to establish an independent State in accordance with the relevant United Nations resolutions.

15th plenary meeting
26 May 1988

1988/26. Elimination of discrimination against women in accordance with the aims of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women

The Economic and Social Council,

<sup>46</sup> E/CN.6/1988/8 and Corr.1.

<sup>47</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

1989/33. Women and children under apartheid

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1988/23 of 26 May 1988.

Noting the concern of women throughout the world about the continuing degradation and abuse to which African women and children are subjected daily by the white minority régime of South Africa.

Recalling that this concern was expressed in the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>59</sup> which also contain proposals for various forms of assistance to be rendered to women and children inside South Africa and to those who have become refugees,

Recognizing that the inhuman exploitation and dispossession of the African people by the white minority régime is directly responsible for the appalling conditions in which African women and children live,

Also recognizing that the equality of women cannot be achieved without the success of the struggle for national liberation and self-determination of the people of South Africa against the racist régime of Pretoria,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on new developments concerning the situation of women under apartheid in South Africa and Namibia and measures of assistance to women in South Africa and Namibia,<sup>61</sup>

1. Commends the tenacity and bravery of those women both inside and outside South Africa who have resisted oppression, who have been detained, tortured or killed, and of those whose husbands, children and relatives have been detained, tortured or killed and who, despite this, have remained steadfast in their opposition to the racist régime;

2. Acknowledges the efforts of those Governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals that have campaigned for and applied sanctions against the racist régime;

3. Condemns unequivocally the South African régime for the imposition of the state of emergency, the forcible separation of black families, the detention and imprisonment of women and children and the restrictions on non-violent anti-apartheid democratic organizations and individuals;

4. Urges the South African régime to accord prisoner-of-war status to captured freedom fighters, in accordance with the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949<sup>62</sup> and the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 relating to the protection of victims of international armed conflicts (Protocol I), adopted in 1977,<sup>63</sup> to accord all political prisoners sentenced to death, among whom are women, a fair trial based on international legal standards, and to stop the execution of political prisoners;

5. Demands the immediate and unconditional release of all political prisoners and detainees, among whom are an increasing number of women and children;

6. Again calls upon Governments, in view of the deterioration of the situation in South Africa, to impose, as a matter of urgency, comprehensive sanctions in accordance with the resolutions of the Security Council and the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women;

7. Appeals to all countries to support educational, health and social welfare programmes for women and children under apartheid;

8. Also appeals to the international community for increased assistance for women and children refugees in southern Africa;

9. Urges the international community to look into the newly developing situation of refugees and displaced persons, with a view to providing material assistance for them;

10. Urges Member States and United Nations bodies, in consultation with liberation movements, to give effect forthwith, to the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies that deal with women and children under apartheid, giving particular attention to education, health, vocational training and employment opportunities and to the strengthening of the women's sections of the liberation movements;

11. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to work closely with women in the liberation movements in order to disseminate information and to ensure a proper assessment of the needs and aspirations of the women and children living under apartheid;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session a comprehensive report on the implementation and monitoring of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies in regard to women and children under apartheid.

15th plenary meeting
24 May 1989

1989/34. Situation of Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>64</sup>

Mindful of the humanitarian principles and provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949,<sup>65</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>59</sup> in particular paragraph 260 thereof,

Recalling also its resolution 1988/25 of 26 May 1988,

Taking into account the intifadah of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territories against the Israeli occupation and the oppressive practices of Israel against the Palestinian people, including women and children.

1. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women, making use of all available information, including United Nations reports, information from Governments, non-governmental organizations and missions undertaken by United Nations bodies and specialized agencies to the occupied territories, and reports of meetings and seminars, as appropriate, and to submit the report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session:

<sup>59</sup>E/CN.6/1989/3.

<sup>62</sup>United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, Nos. 970-973.

<sup>63</sup>Ibid., vol. 1125, No. 17512.

<sup>64</sup>E/CN.6/1989/4 and Corr.1.

<sup>65</sup>United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

2. Requests the specialized agencies, in sending missions to the occupied Palestinian territories, to include an expert on women's issues to assess the situation of the Palestinian women and to elaborate specific projects of assistance;

3. Strongly condemns the continuation of the "iron-fist" policy practiced by Israel, the occupying Power, against Palestinian women and their families in the occupied Palestinian territories;

4. Reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949 is applicable to the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem;

5. Again requests the Secretary-General to send a mission composed of experts on the status of women to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children, in the light of the drastic deteriorating situation in the occupied Palestinian territories;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to monitor the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular the provisions of paragraph 260 thereof concerning assistance to Palestinian women and children inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territories;

7. Reaffirms that Palestinian women, as an integral part of a nation whose people are prevented from exercising their basic human and political rights, cannot fully participate in the attainment of the objectives of the Forward-looking Strategies, namely, equality, development and peace, without the realization of their inalienable right to return to their homes, their right to self-determination and their right to establish an independent State in accordance with the relevant United Nations resolutions.

*15th plenary meeting
24 May 1989*

1989/35. Women and peace in Central America

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that, in adopting the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace recognized that women should participate fully in all efforts to strengthen and maintain international peace and security and to promote international co-operation,<sup>66</sup>

Recalling also that the World Conference also recognized that the violence and destabilization in Central America hindered the fulfilment of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies, essential for the advancement of women,<sup>67</sup>

Recalling further the agreement on "Procedures for the establishment of a firm and lasting peace in Central America",<sup>68</sup> signed at the Esquipulas II summit meeting at Guatemala City, on 7 August 1987, by the Presidents of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua, and noting the subsequent meetings of the Presidents in 1988 and February 1989,

<sup>66</sup>Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A, para. 240.

<sup>67</sup>Ibid., para. 247.

<sup>68</sup>Official Records of the Security Council, Forty-second Year, Supplement for July, August and September 1987, document S/19085, annex.

Recognizing the valuable contribution of the Contradora Group and its Support Group to the process of bringing peace to Central America,

Recognizing also the valuable efforts put forth by the Secretary-General and the international community to secure peace and development in Central America,

Convinced of the exceptional importance to the peoples of Central America, particularly the women, of the achievement of peace, reconciliation, development and social justice in the region, as well as the recognition of their economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights.

Considering that the General Assembly, in its resolution 42/1 of 7 October 1987, requested the Secretary-General to promote a special plan of co-operation for Central America,

Desiring to encourage the active participation of women in the promotion of peace and development in Central America,

1. Expresses its satisfaction at the will to achieve peace manifested by the Presidents of the Central American countries in their signing of the agreement on "Procedures for the establishment of a firm and lasting peace in Central America" and at their efforts for the implementation thereof;

2. Again calls upon the Presidents of the Central American countries to continue their joint efforts to achieve peace in Central America, particularly the efforts to establish the Central American Parliament, in order to ensure conditions favourable for the attainment in the region of the objectives of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>69</sup> and requests the international community to support those efforts;

3. Urges all States to support the peace efforts, fully respecting the principles of self-determination of peoples and non-intervention;

4. Also urges the international community to ensure that programmes of technical, economic and financial co-operation for the region take account of the particular needs and interests of women in Central America;

5. Recommends to the Secretary-General that the special plan of co-operation for Central America include specific activities supporting the advancement of women in the region;

6. Exhorts the Governments of the Central American countries and of the countries of the Contradora Group and its Support Group to encourage and ensure the full participation of women at all levels in the search for peace, pluralism, democracy and overall development in the Central American region;

7. Urges national and international, governmental and non-governmental women's organizations to participate in and support actively the processes of democratization, peace and development in Central America.

*15th plenary meeting
24 May 1989*

Stressing the critical role played by women in the development process, and that women constitute 50 per cent of available human resources,

Noting that the Ad Hoc Committee of the Whole for the Preparation of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade, established by the General Assembly by its resolution 43/182 of 20 December 1988, will elaborate the outline, with a view to finalizing the international development strategy in 1990,

1. Recommends that the Ad Hoc Committee of the Whole for the Preparation of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade identify strategies for ensuring that women's needs and their contribution to the development process are reflected in all aspects of the international development strategy, including human resource development and economic growth;

2. Also recommends that the Ad Hoc Committee, in finalizing the international development strategy, consider measures to ensure the full and effective participation of women in development, taking into consideration Council resolution 1989/105, paragraph 11, of 27 July 1989, as well as relevant resolutions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session;<sup>15</sup>

3. Urges Member States to give special attention to the role of women in development when preparing their contributions to the work of the Ad Hoc Committee to finalize the international development strategy and, in this regard, to consult with national machinery and the non-governmental organizations concerned with women in development;

4. Decides that the Commission on the Status of Women should monitor the implementation of the international development strategy as it pertains to women and development in the context of its review of the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women.

13th plenary meeting
24 May 1990

1990/11. Situation of Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of a mission of experts to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children,<sup>16</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>2</sup> in particular paragraph 260 thereof,

Recalling also its resolutions 1988/25 of 26 May 1988 and 1989/34 of 24 May 1989,

Expressing concern at the persistent refusal of Israel to respect the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>17</sup>

<sup>15</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1990, Supplement No. 5 (E/1990/25), chap. I.

<sup>16</sup> E/CN.6/1990/10.

<sup>17</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

Deeply alarmed at the critical situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory, which is profoundly influenced by the consequences of continued Israeli military occupation,

Dismayed at the continuation of the oppressive practices of Israel, including collective punishment, curfews, demolition of houses, closure of schools and universities, confiscation of land and measures that are particularly harmful to the Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory,

Deeply alarmed by the practice of Israel of settling new waves of Jewish immigrants in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem, which is illegal and contravenes the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention,

1. Reaffirms that the basic improvement of the living conditions of the Palestinian women, their advancement, full equality and self-reliance can only be achieved through an end to the occupation and the attainment of their right to return to their homes, their right to self-determination and their right to establish an independent State in accordance with United Nations resolutions;

2. Reaffirms also that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Palestinian people in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem;

3. Strongly condemns the oppressive Israeli measures against the intifadah and the consequent suffering experienced by Palestinian women and their families in the occupied Palestinian territory;

4. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to monitor the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260, which concerns assistance to Palestinian women and children inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the experts continue to monitor and investigate further the situation of Palestinian women and children inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory, and to ensure that their report is submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fifth session;

6. Requests governmental, non-governmental and intergovernmental organizations, including organizations of the United Nations system, to encourage and assist in existing income-generating activities for Palestinian women and in the creation of new jobs;

7. Requests that Palestinian women be assisted in the creation of a women's centre that would provide possibilities for child care, educational discussion, cultural activities, women's solidarity and small-scale production;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to monitor the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the mission of experts to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic<sup>16</sup> in order to alleviate the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fifth session on the implementation of the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the mission of experts, taking into consideration all available information, including reports of the United Nations, its specialized agencies and its expert missions, reports of meetings, as appropriate, and information from Governments and non-governmental organizations.

*13th plenary meeting
24 May 1990*

1990/12. World conference on women to be held in 1995

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind General Assembly resolution 35/10 C of 3 November 1980, on special conferences of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 1987/20 of 26 May 1987, in which it recommended that world conferences to review and appraise the progress achieved in the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women be held during the decade of the 1990s, on a date to be determined by the General Assembly not later than 1990, and in 2000,

Recalling that the General Assembly, in its resolution 44/77 of 8 December 1989, requested the Commission on the Status of Women to consider at its session in 1990 the question of holding in 1995 a world conference on women, at the lowest possible cost, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session,

Bearing in mind that in its resolution 1987/20 the Council decided that the Commission on the Status of Women would be designated the preparatory body for those world conferences,

Convinced that without a major international event by which to focus national attention on the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies, the review and appraisal to take place in 1995 will not be given sufficient priority,

Reaffirming the continuing validity of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies, including the interrelationship between equality, development and peace, and stressing the need to ensure their full implementation by the year 2000,

1. Recommends that a world conference on women be held in 1995;

2. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women, as the preparatory body for the world conference, to include preparations for the conference in its regular work programme during the period 1991-1995 under the item concerning the monitoring of the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to include the relevant costs of preparing for and convening the world conference in the programme budget for the bienniums 1992-1993 and 1994-1995, within the respective budgetary limits;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to make proposals on the preparation and convening of the world conference for submission to the Commission at its thirty-fifth session.

*13th plenary meeting
24 May 1990*

1990/13. Women and children under apartheid

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1989/33 of 24 May 1989,

Noting the concern of women throughout the world about the continuing degradation and abuse to which African women and children are subjected daily by the white minority régime of South Africa,

Recalling that this concern was expressed in the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>2</sup> which also contain proposals for various forms of assistance to be rendered to women and children inside South Africa and to those who have become refugees,

Recognizing that the inhuman exploitation and dispossession of the African people by the white minority régime is directly responsible for the appalling conditions in which African women and children live,

Also recognizing that the equality of women cannot be achieved without the success of the struggle towards a united, non-racial and democratic South Africa,

1. Commends the tenacity and bravery of those women both inside and outside South Africa who have resisted oppression, who have been detained, tortured or killed, and of those whose husbands, children and other relatives have been detained, tortured or killed and who, despite this, have remained steadfast in their opposition to the racist régime;

2. Acknowledges the efforts of those Governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals that have campaigned for and applied sanctions against the racist régime;

3. Welcomes recent developments in South Africa, in particular the unbanning of political organizations and the release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners;

4. Demands the immediate and unconditional release of all other political prisoners and detainees, among whom are many women and children;

5. Condemns unequivocally the South African régime for the imposition of the state of emergency, the forcible separation of black families and the detention and imprisonment of women and children;

6. Urges the international community not to relax sanctions against South Africa until all the provisions of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, adopted by the General Assembly by its resolution S-16/1 of 14 December 1989, and contained in the annex thereto, are met;

7. Appeals to all countries to support educational, health and social welfare programmes for women and children under apartheid;

8. Appeals to the international community for increased assistance for women and children refugees in southern Africa;

Bearing in mind the relevant recommendations of the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders<sup>37</sup> and of the Eighth Congress,<sup>31</sup> as well as the relevant observations of the Seventh Congress,<sup>38</sup>

Bearing in mind also the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 of 18 December 1979 and contained in the annex thereto, which guarantees the right of women to equal status with men,

Noting that, in its general recommendation No. 12, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women recommended that States parties should include in their periodic reports to the Committee information on measures undertaken to protect women against the incidence of all kinds of violence in everyday life occurring within the family, at the workplace or in any other area of social life,<sup>39</sup> and that the Committee had decided at its tenth session to undertake at its eleventh session a study of violence against women,<sup>40</sup>

Noting, however, that the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women does not explicitly address violence against women,

1. Calls upon Member States to recognize that violence against women must be countered by a wide variety of measures;

2. Reminds Member States that violence against women is an issue of equal rights that derives from a power imbalance between women and men in society;

3. Urges Member States to adopt, strengthen and enforce legislation prohibiting violence against women;

4. Also urges Member States to take all appropriate administrative, social and educational measures to protect women from all forms of physical or mental violence;

5. Recommends that a framework for an international instrument be developed in consultation with the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women that would address explicitly the issue of violence against women;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, through the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, to convene in 1991 or 1992 a meeting, to be funded from extrabudgetary resources, of experts representing all regions and including representatives of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control, to address the issue of violence against women and to discuss the possibilities of preparing an international instrument and the elements to

<sup>37</sup> See Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, Caracas, 25 August-5 September 1980: report prepared by the Secretariat (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.81.IV.4), chap. I.

<sup>38</sup> See Seventh United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, Milan, 26 August-6 September 1985: report prepared by the Secretariat (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.86.IV.1).

<sup>39</sup> See Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-fourth Session, Supplement No. 38 (A/44/38), chap. V.

<sup>40</sup> Ibid., Forty-sixth Session, Supplement No. 38 (A/46/38).

be contained therein, and to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-sixth session;

7. Urges Governments at all levels to develop training programmes for members of the criminal justice and health-care systems, including police officers, doctors, nurses, social workers and members of the legal profession, to ensure sensitization to and fair administration of justice with respect to equality issues;

8. Requests Governments, international organizations, non-governmental organizations, other relevant bodies and academics, to undertake research into the causes of violence against women.

*12th plenary meeting
30 May 1991*

1991/19. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General<sup>41</sup> and the notes by the Secretary-General<sup>42</sup> concerning the situation of Palestinian women living inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>43</sup> in particular paragraph 260 thereof,

Recalling also its resolutions 1988/25 of 26 May 1988, 1989/34 of 24 May 1989 and 1990/11 of 24 May 1990,

Expressing concern at the persistent refusal of Israel to respect the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>43</sup>

Taking into account the intifadah of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territory against the Israeli occupation and its harmful effects on Palestinian women and children,

Dismayed at the continuation of the oppressive practices of Israel, including collective punishment, curfews, demolition of houses, closure of schools and universities, deportation, confiscation of land and measures that are particularly harmful to the Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory,

Deeply alarmed by the continuation of the practice of settling Jewish immigrants in the territory occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem, which is illegal and contravenes the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention,

1. Reaffirms that the basic improvement of the living conditions of the Palestinian women, their advancement, full equality and self-reliance can only be achieved through an end to the Israeli occupation and the attainment of the right of Palestinians to return to their homes, their right to self-determination and their right to establish an independent Palestinian State in accordance with United Nations resolutions;

2. Also reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of

<sup>41</sup> E/CN.6/1988/8 and Corr.1 and E/CN.6/1989/4 and Corr.1.

<sup>42</sup> E/CN.6/1990/10 and E/CN.6/1991/9.

<sup>43</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Palestinian people in the territory occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem;

3. Demands that an end be put to the oppressive Israeli measures against the intifadah and the consequent suffering experienced by Palestinian women and their families in the occupied Palestinian territory;

4. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 thereof, which concerns assistance to Palestinian women and children both inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory;

5. Requests governmental, non-governmental and intergovernmental organizations, including organizations of the United Nations system, to continue to encourage and assist in existing income-generating activities for Palestinian women and in the creation of new jobs;

6. Requests that Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory be assisted in developing small-scale industry and creating vocational training centres;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to monitor the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the mission of experts to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children<sup>44</sup> in order to improve the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his investigation of the situation of Palestinian women and children and to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-sixth session on the implementation of the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the mission of experts.

*12th plenary meeting
30 May 1991*

1991/20. Women and children under apartheid

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1990/13 of 24 May 1990,

Recalling also the provisions of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution S-16/1 of 14 December 1989 and contained in the annex thereto,

Noting the positive changes initiated by the Government of South Africa aimed at dismantling the system of apartheid,

Deeply concerned about the continuing degradation and abuse of African women and children by the white minority regime of South Africa, as noted in the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>34</sup>

Recognizing that the equality of women and men cannot be achieved without the success of the struggle towards a united, non-racial and democratic South Africa,

<sup>44</sup> E/CN.6/1990/10, annex I.

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on women and children living under apartheid;<sup>45</sup>

2. Commends those women both inside and outside South Africa who have resisted oppression and who have remained steadfast in their opposition to apartheid;

3. Urges all parties engaged in negotiations for a post-apartheid society to ensure that the principle of equality between women and men is incorporated in all laws and institutions;

4. Urges the Government of South Africa to ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women<sup>29</sup> at the earliest possible opportunity;

5. Appeals to all countries and United Nations bodies, in consultation with liberation movements, as appropriate, to increase their support for educational, health, vocational training and employment opportunities for women and children living under apartheid;

6. Demands the unconditional release of all political prisoners and detainees, among whom are women and children, in accordance with the undertaking of the President of South Africa;

7. Urges the international community to maintain all existing and any other necessary measures against South Africa until all the provisions of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa have been met;

8. Decides that the Commission on the Status of Women should remain seized of the issue of women and children living under apartheid.

*12th plenary meeting
30 May 1991*

1991/21. Disabled women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>34</sup> in particular paragraphs 277 to 282 and 296, in which disabled women are considered a vulnerable group,

Recalling also resolution 34/4 of 8 March 1990 of the Commission on the Status of Women,<sup>46</sup>

Reaffirming its support for the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons,<sup>18</sup>

Taking note with appreciation of Commission for Social Development resolution 32/2 of 20 February 1991 on the establishment of an ad hoc open-ended working group to elaborate standard rules on the equalization of opportunities for disabled persons,<sup>47</sup>

Affirming its belief that all women, regardless of their situation, are able to contribute to and benefit from development on an equal basis,

1. Takes note of the recommendations of the Semi-

<sup>45</sup> E/CN.6/1991/8.

<sup>46</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1990, Supplement No. 5 (E/1990/25), chap. I, sect. C.

<sup>47</sup> Ibid., 1991, Supplement No. 6 (E/1991/26), chap. I, sect. D.

1992/15. Women and children under apartheid

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1991/20 of 30 May 1991,

Reaffirming the provisions of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution S-16/1 of 14 December 1989,

Taking note of General Assembly resolutions 46/79 A to F of 13 December 1991,

Alarmed by the grave socio-economic deprivation to which the majority of the people, especially the women and children, are subjected as a direct consequence of apartheid,

Deeply concerned about the alleged State complicity in politically motivated violence that has to date claimed thousands of lives and has left hundreds of thousands homeless, the majority of whom are women and children,

Noting the positive changes initiated by the South African authorities aimed at dismantling apartheid, which were the result of the relentless struggle waged by the people of South Africa as well as the pressure exerted by the international community,

Noting with satisfaction the signing of the National Peace Accord in September 1991<sup>29</sup> and the convening of the Convention for a Democratic South Africa in December 1991, and expressing the hope that this will constitute a major contribution towards a final end to the violence in South Africa,

Welcoming the holding of the Convention for a Democratic South Africa as an attempt to resolve the problems of South Africa by peaceful means as envisaged in the Declaration on Apartheid,

Recognizing that the equality of women and men cannot be achieved without the success of the struggle towards a united, non-racist, non-sexist and democratic South Africa,

Aware of the attention given by the United Nations, and, in particular, the Centre against Apartheid of the Secretariat and the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, to the issue of assisting South African women to participate fully in the process of establishing a non-racist democracy in their country,

1. Commends those women both inside and outside South Africa who have resisted oppression and who have remained steadfast in their opposition to apartheid;

2. Demands the immediate unconditional release of all political prisoners and detainees, among whom are women and children, in accordance with the undertaking of the South African authorities;

3. Urges those involved in the Convention for a Democratic South Africa to place high on their agenda issues concerning women such as freedom, justice and equality, development and the environment;

4. Also urges the South African authorities to ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>34</sup> at the earliest possible opportunity;

5. Appeals to all countries and United Nations bodies, in conformity with General Assembly resolutions 46/79 A to F and in consultation with liberation movements, to increase their support for educational, health, vocational training and employment opportunities for women and children living under apartheid;

6. Requests the Centre against Apartheid of the Secretariat to widen and strengthen its cooperation with the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, with a view to creating specific programmes of assistance to South African women to enable them to participate fully in the process of transition of their country towards a non-racist democracy;

7. Appeals to the international community to give its full and concerted support to the vulnerable and critical process now under way in South Africa through a phased application of appropriate pressures on the South African authorities as warranted by developments, and to provide assistance to the opponents of apartheid and the disadvantaged sectors of society in order to ensure the rapid and peaceful attainment of the objectives of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa;

8. Decides to remain seized of the issue of women and children living under apartheid;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-seventh session.

*40th plenary meeting
30 July 1992*

1992/16. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General<sup>35</sup> and the notes by the Secretary-General<sup>36</sup> concerning the situation of Palestinian women living inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>31</sup> in particular paragraph 260 thereof,

Recalling also its resolutions 1988/25 of 26 May 1988, 1989/34 of 24 May 1989, 1990/11 of 24 May 1990 and 1991/19 of 30 May 1991,

Deeply alarmed by the deteriorating condition of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, as a result of the continued Israeli violation of Palestinian human rights, and oppressive measures, including collective punishments, curfews, demolition of houses, closure of schools and universities, deportation, confiscation of land and settlement activities, which are illegal and contrary to the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention relevant to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>37</sup>

1. Reaffirms that the basic improvement of the living conditions of the Palestinian women, their advancement, full equality and self-reliance, can only be achieved by an end to the Israeli occupation and by the attainment of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relevant to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and to respect the provisions of the Convention;

3. Also demands an end to the Israeli violation of human rights in the occupied Palestinian territory, including an immediate halt to the Israeli settlement activities that have harmful effects on Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon governmental, non-governmental and intergovernmental organizations, including organizations of the United Nations system, to assist Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory in developing small-scale industry and creating vocational training and legal consultation centres;

5. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to monitor the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning assistance to Palestinian women;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in monitoring the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the mission of experts to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children<sup>38</sup> in order to improve the condition of Palestinian women and children;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to review the situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory and in the refugee camps, and to submit a report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-seventh session, using all available sources.

*40th plenary meeting
30 July 1992*

1992/17. Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the fact that there are now one hundred and twelve States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>34</sup>

Noting the importance of the monitoring function of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, as demonstrated most recently in its general recommendation 19 on violence against women, adopted at its eleventh session,<sup>39</sup>

Recalling its resolution 1991/25 of 30 May 1991 and other relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council relating to support for the Committee,

Concerned that the duration of the annual session of the Committee, which is considerably less than that of other treaty bodies, has prevented the timely consideration by the Committee of many of the reports submitted to it by States parties to the Convention,

Noting with concern that the Convention is the human rights instrument with the most reservations, and welcoming the decision by a number of States parties to withdraw their reservations,

1. Supports the request of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women for additional meeting time and also supports the proposal that the twelfth session of the Committee should be of three weeks' duration;<sup>40</sup>

2. Recommends that three weeks be allocated for each subsequent session until the Committee removes the backlog of reports to be considered;

3. Strongly supports general recommendation 19 on violence against women, adopted by the Committee at its eleventh session, and calls on States parties to prepare their reports in accordance with this and other general recommendations of the Committee;

4. Welcomes other general recommendations adopted by the Committee at its previous sessions;

5. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to widely publicize the decisions and recommendations of the Committee.

*40th plenary meeting
30 July 1992*

1992/18. Violence against women in all its forms

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1991/18 of 30 May 1991, in which it requested that an expert group meeting be held to address the issue of violence against women and to discuss the possibilities of preparing an international instrument on this subject and the elements to be contained therein,

Bearing in mind that the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women<sup>31</sup> identify violence against women as a major obstacle to the achievement of the objectives of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace,

Noting that, in general recommendation 19, adopted by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women at its eleventh session,<sup>39</sup> the Committee recognized that gender-based violence was a form of discrimination that seriously inhibited the ability of women to enjoy rights and freedoms on a basis of equality with men,

Noting also the response of the Committee to the report of the Secretary-General on violence against women in all its forms,<sup>41</sup> the annex to which contains the recommendations and a summary of the discussion of the Expert Group Meeting on Violence against Women, held at Vienna from 11 to 15 November 1991,

1. Calls on Governments to recognize that the elimination of violence against women is essential to the achievement of equality for women and is a requirement for the full respect of human rights;

2. Urges Member States to adopt, strengthen and enforce legislation prohibiting violence against women and to take all appropriate administrative, social and educational measures to protect women from all forms of physical and mental violence, in accordance with its resolution 1991/18;

3. Calls on States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women<sup>34</sup> to take the steps necessary to implement general recommendation 19, adopted by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women at its eleventh session;<sup>39</sup>

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on violence against women in all its forms;<sup>41</sup>

5. Decides to convene an inter-sessional working group of the Commission on the Status of Women, open assistance to the opponents of apartheid and the disadvantaged sectors of society in order to ensure the rapid and peaceful attainment of the objectives of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa;

7. Requests the international community to provide financial, material and human resources to South African women towards the establishment of special programmes and projects geared to women's integration and advancement at the present time and in post-apartheid South Africa;

8. Calls upon the Secretary-General to consolidate the United Nations observer mission already deployed in South Africa to monitor and report on the unprecedented proportion of incidents of political and domestic violence directed against women and children from a variety of sources;

9. Decides that the Commission on the Status of Women should remain seized of the question of women and children living under apartheid;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its thirty-eighth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

*43rd plenary meeting
27 July 1993*

1993/14. Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind that the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women<sup>18</sup> is the most important international human rights instrument for the promotion of equality between women and men,

Welcoming the growing number of States parties to the Convention, which now stands at one hundred and twenty,

Noting with concern that the Convention is still the human rights instrument with the most reservations, despite the fact that some States parties have withdrawn their reservations to it,

Noting the importance of the monitoring function of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, as demonstrated most recently by the Committee at its twelfth session, at which it adopted suggestion 4 on the World Conference on Human Rights and also adopted, in substance, and decided to place on the provisional agenda of its thirteenth session for final approval without discussion, a draft general recommendation on article 16 and related articles 9 and 15 of the Convention, which would be its contribution to the International Year of the Family,<sup>40</sup>

Taking note of General Assembly resolution 47/94 of 16 December 1992,

Recalling its resolution 1991/25 of 30 May 1991 and other General Assembly and Economic and Social Council resolutions relating to support for the Committee,

Noting that the annual session of the Committee is the shortest of all the annual sessions of the human rights treaty bodies,

Welcoming the expressed intention of the Committee to strengthen the analysis of country reports provided to it,

1. Supports the request of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women for additional meeting time for its future sessions, as granted for its twelfth and thirteenth sessions;

2. Welcomes suggestion 4 on the World Conference on Human Rights, adopted by the Committee at its twelfth session, and the draft general recommendation on article 16 and related articles 9 and 15 of the Convention, adopted, in substance, by the Committee at that session, both of which were submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-seventh session,<sup>41</sup> and encourages the Committee to continue its work in developing detailed general recommendations;

3. Requests States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to review regularly their reservations and make efforts to withdraw them in order to enable the full implementation of the Convention;

4. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to widely publicize the decisions and recommendations of the Committee.

*43rd plenary meeting
27 July 1993*

1993/15. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report submitted by the Secretary-General on the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territory<sup>42</sup> and previous reports concerning the situation of Palestinian women inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>11</sup> in particular paragraph 260 thereof,

Recalling also its resolution 1992/16 of 30 July 1992 and its other relevant resolutions,

Deeply concerned about the additional suffering of women and children living under occupation,

Expressing special concern about the tragic situation of the Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, which has been dangerously deteriorating at all levels,

Deeply alarmed by the deteriorating situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, as a result of the continued Israeli violation of Palestinian human rights and oppressive measures, including collective punishments, curfews, demolition of houses, closure of schools and universities, mass deportation, confiscation of land and settlement activities and denial of family unification, which are illegal and contrary to the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>43</sup>

1. Reaffirms that for Palestinian women, equality, self-reliance and integration in the national development plan can be achieved only through the termination of the Israeli occupation and the attainment of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of

12 August 1949, to the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and to respect the provisions of the Convention;

3. Appeals to Governments, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to provide financial assistance to Palestinian women towards the creation of specific projects for them, in support of their attempts to achieve full integration in the development process of their society;

4. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue monitoring the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning assistance to Palestinian women;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to assist in the review of the situation of Palestinian women using all available resources, including missions of experts to the occupied Palestinian territory, and to submit to the Commission, at its thirty-eighth session, a report on the implementation of the present resolution, containing recommendations and a programme of action aimed at improving the situation of Palestinian women under Israeli occupation.

*43rd plenary meeting
27 July 1993*

1993/16. System-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1988/59 of 27 July 1988, by which it requested the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to initiate the formulation of a system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women for the period 1996-2001,

Having considered the note by the Secretariat containing the proposed system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women for the period 1996-2001,<sup>44</sup>

Convinced that a system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women can enhance coordination among the organizations of the United Nations system by providing a framework for including advancement of women in individual medium-term plans and programme statements,

Bearing in mind the fact that the United Nations planning cycle to which the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women was matched has changed, and that there has been a general shift to a more strategic form of planning,

Recognizing that the Platform for Action to emerge from the Fourth World Conference on Women: Action for Equality, Development and Peace, to be held at Beijing from 4 to 15 September 1995, cannot be reflected in the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women for the period 1996-2001, which must be approved in 1993,

1. Endorses the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women for the period 1996-2001 as a general framework for the coordination of system-wide efforts, as revised in the light of the comments set out in the annex to resolution 37/1 of 24 March 1993 of the Commission on the Status of Women;<sup>45</sup>

2. Requests the organizations of the United Nations system that are preparing medium-term plans for the period 1996-2001 to incorporate relevant aspects of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women in formulating their individual plans in terms of advancement of women;

3. Also requests the organizations of the United Nations system, when implementing the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, to take account of the importance of ensuring that humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and refugee programmes provide for the health needs of women and for their protection from violence and sexual abuse, especially in emergency and conflict situations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to arrange for a revision of the system-wide medium-term plan after the Platform for Action and the results of the second review and appraisal of the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women<sup>11</sup> have been adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women: Action for Equality, Development and Peace;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that any revised system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women is more concise, takes account of the changes in the United Nations planning cycle, takes a more strategic approach, highlighting policy implications, and includes more substantial strategies, time-frames, concrete measures, resources and allocation of responsibility for implementation;

6. Decides that the Commission on the Status of Women, together with the Committee for Programme and Coordination, should be given the responsibility for monitoring progress on the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women and that all United Nations entities should be held accountable for the components of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women that fall within their areas of responsibility.

*43rd plenary meeting
27 July 1993*

1993/17. International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1992/21 of 30 July 1992, in which it took note of the report of the Board of Trustees of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women on its twelfth session,<sup>46</sup>

Having considered the report of the Board of Trustees of the Institute on its thirteenth session,<sup>47</sup>

Recognizing the important role that the Institute could play in the substantive preparations for the Fourth World Conference on Women: Action for Equality, Development and Peace, to be held at Beijing from 4 to 15 September 1995,

Also recognizing the equally important contributions that the Institute could make in its area of expertise to activities related to the International Year of the Family, ganizations to submit their views on an optional protocol to the Convention, including those related to feasibility, taking into account the elements suggested by the Committee in its suggestion 7;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fortieth session a comprehensive report, including a synthesis, on the views expressed in accordance with paragraph 5 above, if possible six weeks prior to the commencement of the session;

7. Decides that the Commission should establish an in-session open-ended working group for a two-week period at its fortieth session to consider the report requested in paragraph 6 above with a view to elaborating a draft optional protocol to the Convention;

8. Once again urges all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention;

9. Encourages States to consider limiting the extent of any reservation they lodge to the Convention, to formulate any reservation as precisely and as narrowly as possible, and to ensure that no reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention or otherwise contrary to international law;

10. Requests States parties to the Convention to review their reservations regularly with a view to withdrawing them expeditiously so that the Convention may be fully implemented;

11. Also encourages States parties that are behind schedule in submitting their periodic reports to the Committee to do so promptly, and requests the Committee to follow up this problem;

12. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to publicize widely the decisions and recommendations of the Committee.

*50th plenary meeting
24 July 1995*

1995/30. Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women,<sup>82</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>74</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children,

Recalling also Commission on the Status of Women resolution 38/4 of 18 March 1994<sup>83</sup> and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Further recalling the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>84</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Welcoming the signing by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements, in Washington, on 13 September 1993,<sup>85</sup> as well as the implementation of the agreements reached between the two sides,

<sup>82</sup> E/CN.6/1995/8.

<sup>83</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1994, Supplement No. 7 (E/1994/27), chap. I, sect. C.

<sup>84</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>85</sup> AJ/48/486-S/26560, annex; see Official Records of the Security Council, Forty-eighth Year, Supplement for October, November and December 1993, document S/26560.

Deeply concerned about the continuing deterioration of all aspects of the situation of the Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem,

Gravely concerned about the severe consequences of the continuous Israeli illegal settlements activities, as well as the measures which isolate Jerusalem from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, on the situation of Palestinian women and their families,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation constitutes a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development plan of their society;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>86</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907<sup>87</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949,<sup>88</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

3. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugee and displaced Palestinian women and children and those who are political deportees to their homes and properties in the occupied Palestinian territory, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

4. Urges Member States, international financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women for the creation of projects responding to their needs, especially during the transitional period;

5. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission, at its fortieth session, a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*51st plenary meeting
25 July 1995*

1995/31. Rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 1995/24 of 3 March 1995,<sup>89</sup>

1. Decides to authorize the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities to establish an inter-sessional working group of the Subcommission, consisting of five of its members, which shall meet each year for five working days, initially for a three-year period, in order to promote the rights of persons be-

<sup>86</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>87</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>88</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>89</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1995, Supplement No. 3 and corrigenda (E/1995/23 and Corr.1 and 2), chap. II, sect. A.

3. Also endorses the proposed medium-term plan for the period 1998-2001, bearing in mind that in its implementation due emphasis will be given to the need for greater selectivity and impact;

4. Encourages the Executive Secretary to continue to strengthen the process of renewal and reform of the Commission in consultation with member States;

5. Requests the Executive Secretary, in close collaboration with the Bureau of the Commission, to carry out a revision of the work programme for the period 1996-1997, which has become necessary to reflect the new orientation of the Commission's work and to ensure a smooth transition in 1997 to the next medium-term plan, bearing in mind that the revision must be within resources already approved for the Commission by the General Assembly and must pay due regard to the efficiency measures required to implement the relevant decisions of the Assembly regarding the budget for the period 1996-1997;

6. Appeals to the Secretary-General to request the General Assembly to consider the revised work programme of the Economic Commission for Africa in conjunction with its review of the medium-term plan for the period 1998-2001.

*40th plenary meeting
18 July 1996*

1996/5. Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women,<sup>12</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>13</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>14</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 1995/30 of 25 July 1995 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>15</sup> as it concerns the protection for civilian populations,

Welcoming the signing by the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements<sup>16</sup> in Washington on 13 September 1993, as well as all subsequent agreements reached between the two parties,

Concerned about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous Israeli illegal settlements activities, as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families, resulting from the frequent closure and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Recognizes the gradual, positive changes that are taking place as a result of the implementation of the agreements between the two parties;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation continues to constitute a major obstacle to the advancement and self-reliance of Palestinian women and their integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>17</sup> the Hague Conventions<sup>18</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>19</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugee and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties in the occupied Palestinian territory, in compliance with relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women for the creation of projects responding to their needs, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action on the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all

<sup>12</sup> E/CN.6/1996/8.

<sup>13</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>14</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4-15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution I, annex II.

<sup>15</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>16</sup> See Official Records of the Security Council, Forty-ninth Year, Supplement for October, November and December 1993, document S/26560, annex.

<sup>17</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>18</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>19</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

available means and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-first session a report on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*43rd plenary meeting
22 July 1996*

1996/6. Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the adoption of the Platform for Action of the Conference,<sup>14</sup>

Bearing in mind Economic and Social Council resolutions II (II) of 21 June 1946 and 48 (IV) of 29 March 1947, by which the Council established the Commission on the Status of Women and defined its terms of reference, and 1987/22 of 26 May 1987, by which the Council expanded the mandate of the Commission,

Taking into account agreed conclusions 1995/1, approved by the Council on 28 July 1995,<sup>20</sup> as well as General Assembly resolution 50/203 of 22 December 1995 on the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration<sup>21</sup> and the Platform for Action of the Conference, in which the Assembly invited the Economic and Social Council to review and strengthen the mandate of the Commission,

Acknowledging the decision of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women to add to its reporting guidelines an invitation to States parties to include in their report to the Committee information on measures taken to implement the Platform for Action, in order to monitor effectively, within its mandate, the rights guaranteed under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>22</sup>

I

FRAMEWORK FOR THE FUNCTIONING OF THE COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Recalling that the General Assembly, in resolution 50/203, decided that the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women, in accordance with their respective mandates and in accordance with Assembly resolution 48/162 of 20 December 1993 and other relevant resolutions, should constitute a three-tiered intergovernmental mechanism that would play the primary role in the overall policy-making and follow-up and in coordinating the implementation and monitoring of the Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women, reaffirming the need for a coordinated follow-up to and implementation of the results of major international conferences in the economic, social and related fields,

<sup>20</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fiftieth session, Supplement No. 3 (A/50/3/Rev.1), chap. III, para. 22.

<sup>21</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4-15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution I, annex I.

<sup>22</sup> General Assembly resolution 34/180, annex.

Convinced that the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women should be undertaken on the basis of an integrated approach to the advancement of women within the framework of a coordinated follow-up to and implementation of the results of major international conferences in the economic, social and related fields, as well as the overall responsibilities of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council,

1. Decides that the Commission on the Status of Women shall have a catalytic role in mainstreaming a gender perspective in policies and programmes;

2. Decides also that the inter-agency committee on the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, established by the Administrative Committee on Coordination, shall inform the Commission and the Economic and Social Council of the progress of its work, for the purpose of system-wide coordination, and that a gender perspective shall also be fully integrated in the work of all thematic task forces established by the Administrative Committee on Coordination;

3. Decides further that the Platform for Action of the Conference should be implemented through the work of all the bodies and organizations of the United Nations system during the period 1995-2000, and notes that the institutions of the United Nations especially devoted to the advancement of women, including the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women and the United Nations Development Fund for Women, are in the process of reviewing their programmes of work in the light of the Platform for Action and its implementation;

4. Decides, in view of the traditional importance of non-governmental organizations in the advancement of women, that such organizations should be encouraged to participate in the work of the Commission and in the monitoring and implementation process related to the Conference to the maximum extent possible, and requests the Secretary-General to make appropriate arrangements to ensure full utilization of existing channels of communication with non-governmental organizations in order to facilitate broad-based participation and dissemination of information;

5. Decides also, in recognition of the valuable contribution of non-governmental organizations to the Fourth World Conference on Women, that the Council and its Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations will review the applications of those non-governmental organizations under Council resolution 1296 (XLIV) of 23 May 1968 as expeditiously as possible, and decides further that, prior to the forty-first session of the Commission on the Status of Women, the Council will take a decision on the participation of the non-

1997/15. Celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia in 1999 and the role of the Commission in the coming century

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1818 (LV) of 9 August 1973, by which it established the Economic Commission for Western Asia for the purpose of consolidating development efforts in the region and promoting economic cooperation among the countries of the region,<sup>54</sup>

Commending the Commission for the activities it has undertaken since its establishment in the various fields of economic and social development, thus supporting the development efforts of the States members of the Commission and promoting cooperation among them,

1. Decides that the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia shall be celebrated during its twentieth session, to be held in 1999;

2. Requests the Executive Secretary of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia to take all measures that he deems necessary in this regard, including the preparation of the necessary studies for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Commission;

3. Invites the Governments of the States members of the Commission to take this opportunity to formulate a new vision and define the role and tasks of the Commission in line with regional and world developments in the coming century;

4. Also invites the Governments of the member States to participate in this celebration at the highest level;

5. Invites the Secretary-General to take part in this event.

*34th plenary meeting
18 July 1997*

1997/16. Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General concerning the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women,<sup>55</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>56</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>57</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 1996/5 of 22 July 1996 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

<sup>54</sup> By its resolution 1985/69 of 26 July 1985, the Council, on the recommendation of the Commission, decided to change the name of the Commission to "Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia".

<sup>55</sup> E/CN.6/1997/2, sect. II.A.

<sup>56</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>57</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Aware of the signing by the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel, in Washington, D.C., of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements on 13 September 1993<sup>58</sup> and of the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip on 28 September 1995,<sup>59</sup> within the framework of the Middle East peace process,

Concerned about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous Israeli illegal settlement activities, as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families resulting from the frequent closure and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Stresses its support for the Middle East peace process and the need for full implementation of the agreements already reached between the parties;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>60</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907<sup>61</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949,<sup>62</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugee and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties in the occupied Palestinian territory, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women for the creation of projects responding to their needs, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the

<sup>57</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>58</sup> A/48/486-S/26560, annex; see Official Records of the Security Council, Forty-eighth Year, Supplement for October, November and December 1993, document S/26560.

<sup>59</sup> A/51/889-S/1997/357, annex; see Official Records of the Security Council, Fifty-second Year, Supplement for April, May and June 1997, document S/1997/357.

<sup>60</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>61</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>62</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>66</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>6</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-second session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

36th plenary meeting
21 July 1997

1997/17. Agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women on the critical areas of concern identified in the Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 50/203 of 22 December 1995 and 51/69 of 12 December 1996 on the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration<sup>63</sup> and the Platform for Action<sup>6</sup> of the Conference,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/6 of 22 July 1996 on the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, by which a multi-year programme of work for the Commission on the Status of Women was adopted as a framework for assessing the progress achieved in the implementation of the Platform for Action,

Noting that the Commission at its forty-first session reviewed progress achieved in the implementation of the Platform for Action in the critical areas of concern: women and the environment, women in power and decision-making, women and the economy and the education and training of women, and proposed ways and means to accelerate implementation in those four areas,<sup>64</sup>

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on thematic issues before the Commission on the Status of Women<sup>65</sup> and the recommendations contained therein;

2. Calls upon Governments, United Nations agencies and bodies and other international organizations, non-governmental organizations and civil society to cooperate in implementing the strategies adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women and other recent international conferences;

3. Calls upon Governments, the United Nations system and other international organizations to mainstream a gender perspective into all policies and programmes, while maintaining institutional arrangements to carry out research and develop methodologies and tools for mainstreaming, and to advocate gender equality and the enjoyment by women of their human rights;

<sup>63</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4-15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex I.

<sup>64</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1997, Supplement No. 7 (E/1997/27), chap. II.

<sup>65</sup> E/CN.6/1997/3.

4. Endorses the agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women on women and the environment, women in power and decision-making, women and the economy and the education and training of women.<sup>66</sup>

36th plenary meeting
21 July 1997

1997/18. International Year of Older Persons: towards a society for all ages

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 47/5 of 16 October 1992, in which it decided to observe the year 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons,

"Recalling also its resolution 40/30 of 29 November 1985, in which it expressed its conviction that older persons must be considered an important and necessary element in the development process at all levels within a given society,

"Mindful of the need to promote adherence to the United Nations Principles for Older Persons, as adopted in its resolution 46/91 of 16 December 1991,

"Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/22 of 27 July 1993, in which the Council invited Member States to strengthen their national mechanisms on ageing, inter alia, to enable them to serve as national focal points for the preparations for and observance of the Year,

"Recalling also the relevant provisions of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development<sup>4</sup> and the Programme of Action<sup>3</sup> of the World Summit for Social Development, the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development<sup>3</sup> and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993,<sup>67</sup> as well as of the Beijing Declaration<sup>63</sup> and the Platform for Action<sup>6</sup> of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the Habitat Agenda, adopted by the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), held at Istanbul, Turkey, from 3 to 14 June 1996,<sup>65</sup>

"Keeping in mind that the ageing of societies in the twentieth century, unprecedented in the history of humankind, is a major challenge for all societies and requires a fundamental change in the way in which societies organize themselves and view older persons,

"1. Encourages all States, the United Nations system and all other actors, in reaching out for a future society for all ages, to take advantage of the International Year of Older Persons to increase awareness of the

<sup>66</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1997, Supplement No. 7 (E/1997/27), chap. I, sect. C.1.

<sup>67</sup> A/CONF.157/24 (Part I), chap. III.

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that reports of future gender missions are made available to the Commission on the Status of Women.

*44th plenary meeting
28 July 1998*

1998/10. Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General concerning the situation of Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>2</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>3</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>2</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 1997/16 of 21 July 1997 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>29</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Concerned about the stalemate facing the Middle East peace process, including the lack of implementation of the agreements reached in Washington, D.C., between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel, and the deterioration of the socio-economic conditions of the Palestinian people as a result of the Israeli positions and measures,

Concerned also about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Stresses its support for the Middle East peace process and the need for speedy and full implementation of the agreements already reached between the parties;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>23</sup> the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907<sup>30</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian

Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>31</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugee and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties in the occupied Palestinian territory, in compliance with relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women for the creation of projects responding to their needs, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>3</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>2</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-third session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*44th plenary meeting
28 July 1998*

1998/11. Mid-term review of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996–2001, including the status of women in the Secretariat

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming the revised system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996–2001,<sup>32</sup> and the comments of the Commission on the Status of Women contained in Commission resolution 40/10 of 22 March 1996 and the annex thereto,<sup>33</sup>

Noting with concern that a number of obstacles have been encountered in the implementation of the plan,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the mid-term review of the implementation of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996–2001,<sup>34</sup> and endorses the recommendations contained therein;

2. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that the obstacles encountered in the implementation of the plan are dealt with effectively, in particular through heightened accountability at all levels, especially that of senior manager, and by including the necessary training, where appropriate;

<sup>28</sup> E/CN.6/1998/2/Add.2.

<sup>29</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>30</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>31</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>32</sup> See E/1996/16.

<sup>33</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1996, Supplement No. 6 (E/1996/26), chap. I, sect. C.2.

<sup>34</sup> E/CN.6/1998/3.

(c) Respect for the equal right of women to work and their reintegration in employment;

(d) The equal right of women and girls to education without discrimination, the reopening of schools and the admission of women and girls to all levels of education;

(e) Respect for the right of women to security of person and that those responsible for physical attacks on women are brought to justice;

(f) Respect for freedom of movement for women;

(g) Respect for the equal access of women and girls to health care;

5. Encourages the continuing efforts of the United Nations, international and non-governmental organizations and donors to ensure that all United Nations-assisted programmes in Afghanistan are formulated and coordinated in such a way as to promote and to ensure the participation of women in those programmes and that women benefit equally with men from such programmes;

6. Appeals to all States and to the international community to ensure that all humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan, in conformity with the Strategic Framework for Afghanistan, is based on the principle of non-discrimination, integrates a gender perspective, and actively attempts to promote the participation of both women and men and to promote peace and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

7. Urges States to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of women in Afghanistan and to mainstream a gender perspective into all aspects of their policies and actions related to Afghanistan;

8. Welcomes the establishment of the positions of Gender Adviser and Human Rights Adviser at the United Nations Office of the Resident Coordinator for Afghanistan, in order to ensure more effective consideration and implementation of human rights and gender concerns in all United Nations programmes within Afghanistan, taking into account the recommendations contained in the report of the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Mission to Afghanistan<sup>28</sup> led by the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women in November 1997;

9. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that all United Nations activities in Afghanistan are carried out according to the principle of non-discrimination against women and girls, and that a gender perspective and special attention to the human rights of women and girls are fully incorporated into the work of the Civil Affairs Unit established within the United Nations Special Mission to Afghanistan, including the training and selection of staff;

10. Stresses the importance of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan giving special attention to the human rights of women and girls and fully incorporating a gender perspective in his work;

11. Appeals to States and the international community to implement the recommendations of the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Mission to Afghanistan under the leadership of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women;

12. Urges all Afghan factions, in particular the Taliban, to ensure the safety and protection of all United Nations and humanitarian workers in Afghanistan and to allow them, regardless of gender, to carry out their work unhindered.

43rd plenary meeting
28 July 1999

1999/15. Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the section concerning the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system of the report of the Secretary-General<sup>29</sup> on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration<sup>20</sup> and the Platform for Action<sup>21</sup> adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>30</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Beijing Platform for Action,

Recalling also its resolution 1998/10 of 28 July 1998 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>31</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Gravely concerned at the suspension, on 20 December 1998, by the Government of Israel of the implementation of the Wye River Memorandum, signed in Washington, D.C., on 23 October 1998, including the negotiations on the final settlement which were to have been concluded by May 1999,

Concerned about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities, as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Stresses its support for the Middle East peace process and the need for speedy and full implementation of the agreements already reached between the parties;

2. Affirms that in spite of the actual deterioration of the Middle East peace process as a result of the lack of compliance by the Government of Israel with the existing agreements, increased efforts must be exerted to bring the peace process back on track towards the achievement of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region and the achievement of tangible results towards the improvement of the situation of Palestinian women and their families;

<sup>29</sup> E/CN.6/1999/2, sect. IV.A.

<sup>30</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>31</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

3. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development planning of their society;

4. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>17</sup> the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907<sup>32</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>27</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

5. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugee and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

6. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women for the creation of projects responding to their needs, especially during the transitional period;

7. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>30</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Beijing Platform for Action;<sup>21</sup>

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fourth session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*43rd plenary meeting
28 July 1999*

1999/16. System-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 2002–2005

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1996/34 of 25 July 1996 on the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996–2001, in which it called for a new draft plan to cover the period 2002–2005,

Considering that the new draft plan should take into consideration the outcome of the special session of the General Assembly on progress achieved in the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action,<sup>21</sup>

1. Invites the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to formulate the plan for the period 2002–2005 in two phases, a first phase consisting of an assessment of activities undertaken by the United Nations system and of the obstacles encountered and lessons learned from the present plan and the system-wide process of implementation, and a second phase consisting of a new plan that reflects the growing emphasis on action and delivery;

2. Decides that the assessment should be submitted to the Economic and Social Council through the Commission on the Status of Women in 2000 and that the new plan for the period 2002–2005 should be submitted to the Council through the Commission in 2001.

*43rd plenary meeting
28 July 1999*

1999/17. Agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women on the critical areas of concern of the Beijing Platform for Action

The Economic and Social Council

Endorses the following agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women with respect to the two critical areas of concern addressed by the Commission at its forty-third session:

I. WOMEN AND HEALTH

The Commission on the Status of Women

1. Reaffirms the Beijing Platform for Action,<sup>21</sup> adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, notably chapter IV.C on women and health, the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development<sup>13</sup> and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;<sup>22</sup>

2. Recalls the Constitution of the World Health Organization, which states that health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity; that the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being without distinction of race, religion, political belief, economic or social condition; and that the health of all peoples is fundamental to the attainment of peace and security and is dependent upon the fullest cooperation of individuals and States;

3. Requests States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to consider, when preparing their initial and periodic reports under the Convention, including on article 12, general recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women;

4. Acknowledges that the realization by women of their right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health is an integral part of the full realization by them of all human rights, and that the human rights of women and of the girl child are an inalienable, integral and indivisible part of universal human rights;

5. Also acknowledges the link between the physical and mental health of women throughout the life cycle and the level of national development, including the availability of basic social services such as health services, the status and degree of empowerment of women in society, employment and including the method for selection of its members, shall be carried out by the Council in the light of the experience gained;

<sup>32</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

8. Also decides, once the Permanent Forum has been established and has held its first annual session, to review, without prejudging any outcome, all existing mechanisms, procedures and programmes within the United Nations concerning indigenous issues, including the Working Group on Indigenous Populations of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, with a view to rationalizing activities, avoiding duplication and overlap and promoting effectiveness.

45th plenary meeting
28 July 2000

2000/23. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the section concerning the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system of the report of the Secretary-General<sup>87</sup> on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration<sup>36</sup> and Platform for Action<sup>37</sup> adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>88</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Beijing Platform for Action,

Recalling also its resolution 1999/15 of 28 July 1999 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>35</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Stressing the need for full implementation of the Memorandum signed at Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 4 September 1999 and full compliance with the existing agreements, as well as the need for the conclusion of the final settlement by the agreed time of September 2000,

Concerned about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities, as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the entire international community, to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the continuity and success of the peace process and its conclusion by the agreed time of September 2000 and the achievement of tangible progress in the improvement of the situation of Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>31</sup> the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907<sup>89</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>39</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>88</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Beijing Platform for Action;<sup>37</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fifth session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

45th plenary meeting
28 July 2000

2000/24. Revitalization and strengthening of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1979/11 of 9 May 1979, in which it recommended that the International Research and Training

<sup>87</sup> E/CN.6/2000/2, sect. III.A.

<sup>88</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>89</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

Resolutions

Substantive session of 2001

2001/1. Triennial policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration,<sup>1</sup> which sets out priorities and goals to be reached by the international community up to the year 2015,

Recalling also General Assembly resolutions 47/199 of 22 December 1992, 50/120 of 20 December 1995 and 53/192 of 15 December 1998 on the triennial policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system,

Recalling further its resolutions 1999/5 and 1999/6 of 23 July 1999 and 2000/19 and 2000/20 of 28 July 2000,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the triennial policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system<sup>2</sup> and on progress in the implementation of the multi-year funding frameworks and evaluation of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework,<sup>3</sup>

1. Requests the Secretary-General, when finalizing his report on the triennial policy review for submission to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, to take into account the views and comments expressed by Member States during the operational activities segment of the substantive session of 2001 of the Economic and Social Council and to make appropriate recommendations;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General, when finalizing his report on the triennial policy review, to provide an analysis of the current state of the implementation of resolution 53/192 and other related resolutions on operational activities;

3. Invites the Secretary-General, in accordance with the coordination, guidance and oversight roles of the Council in the implementation by the United Nations system of the triennial policy review of operational activities, to make recommendations, when finalizing his report on the triennial policy review, on the possible themes that could be discussed at the substantive sessions of 2002 and 2003 of the Council, taking into account the necessary preparatory work for the following triennial policy review.

*21st plenary meeting
10 July 2001*

2001/2. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation section III.A concerning the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system, contained in the report of the Secretary-General<sup>4</sup> on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration<sup>5</sup> and Platform for Action,<sup>6</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>7</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>8</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2000/23 of 28 July 2000 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>9</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Stressing the need for compliance with the existing Israeli-Palestinian agreements concluded within the context of the Middle East peace process and the need to resume peace negotiations, as soon as possible, in order to reach a final settlement,

Concerned about the deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlements activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families, resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

Expressing its condemnation of acts of violence, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinians, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

<sup>4</sup> E/CN.6/2001/2.

<sup>5</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex I.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid., annex II.

<sup>7</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>8</sup> See General Assembly resolutions S-23/2 and S-23/3.

<sup>9</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>1</sup> See General Assembly resolution 55/2.

<sup>2</sup> E/2001/66.

<sup>3</sup> E/2001/58 and Add.1 and 2.

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the entire international community, to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the immediate resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvements in the difficult situation on the ground and in the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>10</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907<sup>11</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>12</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>7</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action,<sup>6</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";<sup>8</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-sixth session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*39th plenary meeting
24 July 2001*

<sup>10</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>11</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>12</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

2001/3. Discrimination against women and girls in Afghanistan

The Economic and Social Council,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>10</sup> the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>13</sup> the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,<sup>14</sup> the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>15</sup> the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women,<sup>9</sup> the Convention on the Rights of the Child<sup>16</sup> and the optional protocols thereto on the involvement of children in armed conflict<sup>17</sup> and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography,<sup>18</sup> the Beijing Declaration<sup>5</sup> and Platform for Action,<sup>6</sup> the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session,<sup>19</sup> accepted humanitarian rules as set out in the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949,<sup>20</sup> and other instruments of human rights and international law,

Recalling that Afghanistan is party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide,<sup>21</sup> the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>13</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,<sup>13</sup> the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War,<sup>12</sup> and that it has signed the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,

Reaffirming that all States have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms and to fulfil the obligations they have freely undertaken under the various international instruments,

Welcoming the substantive report of the Secretary-General to the Commission on the Status of Women on the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan, and the conclusions contained therein, including the need to monitor and evaluate the promotion and protection of the human rights of women and girls who reside in all areas of Afghanistan,<sup>22</sup>

<sup>13</sup> General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>14</sup> General Assembly resolution 39/46, annex.

<sup>15</sup> General Assembly resolution 34/180, annex.

<sup>16</sup> General Assembly resolution 44/25, annex.

<sup>17</sup> General Assembly resolution 54/263, annex I.

<sup>18</sup> Ibid., annex II.

<sup>19</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>20</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, Nos. 970–973.

<sup>21</sup> General Assembly resolution 260 A (III).

<sup>22</sup> E/CN.6/2001/2/Add.1.

2002/25. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women,<sup>88</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>89</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>28</sup> adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",<sup>85</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2001/2 of 24 July 2001 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>23</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Stressing the need for compliance with the existing Israeli-Palestinian agreements concluded within the context of the Middle East peace process and the need to resume peace negotiations, as soon as possible, in order to reach a final settlement,

Concerned about the continuing dangerous deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlements activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families, resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

Expressing its condemnation of acts of violence, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the immediate resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvements in the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>19</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907<sup>90</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>91</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>89</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action,<sup>28</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",<sup>85</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-seventh session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*38th plenary meeting
24 July 2002*

2002/26. Further promotion of equalization of opportunities by, for and with persons with disabilities and protection of their human rights

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and reaffirming the obligations contained in the relevant human rights instruments, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women<sup>22</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>24</sup>

<sup>88</sup> E/CN.6/2002/3.

<sup>89</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>90</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>91</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

groups at risk of abusing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Concerned also about the trend towards the development of lenient policies relating to cannabis and other drugs that are not in accordance with international drug control treaties and about the fact that such trends may have a negative impact on efforts being made to eradicate cannabis cultivation and to combat drug trafficking,

1. Invites the International Narcotics Control Board to continue to monitor and report on the application of the international drug control treaties by Member States with regard to cannabis and other drugs;

2. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in collaboration with the World Health Organization, to report on new trends with regard to cannabis.

*44th plenary meeting
22 July 2003*

2003/42. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>98</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>99</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women<sup>100</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>101</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2002/25 of 24 July 2002 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>102</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other severe consequences of the continuing Israeli attacks and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, which has resulted in the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the immediate resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>103</sup> the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907<sup>104</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>105</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for

<sup>98</sup> E/CN.6/2003/3.

<sup>99</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>100</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>101</sup> See General Assembly resolutions S-23/2 and S-23/3.

<sup>102</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>103</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>104</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>105</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

the Advancement of Women,<sup>99</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>100</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>101</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>98</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

44th plenary meeting
22 July 2003

2003/43. Situation of women and girls in Afghanistan

The Economic and Social Council,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>103</sup> the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>106</sup> the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,<sup>107</sup> the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>108</sup> the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women,<sup>102</sup> the Convention on the Rights of the Child<sup>51</sup> and the Optional Protocols thereto on the involvement of children in armed conflict<sup>109</sup> and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography,<sup>52</sup> the Beijing Declaration<sup>110</sup> and Platform for Action,<sup>100</sup> the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session,<sup>111</sup> accepted humanitarian rules as set out in the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949,<sup>112</sup> and other instruments of human rights and international law,

Recalling that Afghanistan is a party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide,<sup>113</sup> the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>106</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,<sup>106</sup> the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court,<sup>15</sup>

Reaffirming that all States have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling the importance of the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000, on women and peace and security, and Council resolution 1460 (2003) of 30 January 2003, on children and armed conflict,

Recalling also the Agreement on Provisional Arrangements in Afghanistan pending the Re-establishment of Permanent Government Institutions, signed in Bonn, Germany, on 5 December 2001,<sup>114</sup>

Recalling further the funding commitments made at the International Conference on Reconstruction Assistance to Afghanistan, held in Tokyo on 21 and 22 January 2002,

Welcoming the establishment of the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission in June 2002,

Welcoming also the holding of the Emergency Loya Jirga in June 2002, establishing the Afghan Transitional Authority, and the participation of more than two hundred women in the meeting,

Welcoming further the continuing commitment of the Afghan Transitional Administration to the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms by women and girls, to the active participation of Afghan women in political, economic and social life, to the education of girls as well as boys and to the opportunity for women to work outside the home,

Welcoming the return to school of more than 3 million children, including 1 million girls, since March 2002, and the international support that has made it possible,

Welcoming also the inclusion of women in the Transitional Administration, the Judicial Reform Commission, the Independent Human Rights Commission and the Constitutional Drafting Commission, and stressing the importance of the full and effective participation of women in all decision-making processes regarding the future of Afghanistan,

Welcoming further the fact that the National Development Framework of the Transitional Administration reflects the needs of, and the importance of the role to be taken by, women and girls in the process of peace-building, reconstruction and development,

<sup>106</sup> General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>107</sup> General Assembly resolution 39/46, annex.

<sup>108</sup> General Assembly resolution 34/180, annex.

<sup>109</sup> General Assembly resolution 54/263, annex I.

<sup>110</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex I.

<sup>111</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>112</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, Nos. 970–973.

<sup>113</sup> General Assembly resolution 260 A (III), annex.

<sup>114</sup> See S/2001/1154.

the sound management of hazardous chemicals and dangerous pharmaceutical products;

8. Emphasizes the need to continue to utilize the work being undertaken by relevant organizations of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental organizations in this area, as well as that being carried out under international agreements and conventions in related areas, in updating the Consolidated List;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report every three years, in accordance with resolution 39/229, on the implementation of the present resolution, taking into account previous Assembly resolutions on the same subject, as appropriate.

50th plenary meeting
23 July 2004

2004/56. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>172</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>173</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women<sup>9</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>10</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2003/42 of 22 July 2003 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>40</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlements activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other severe consequences of the continuing Israeli attacks and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, which has resulted in the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Concerned also that the route marked out for the wall under construction by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, could prejudge future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement and would cause further humanitarian hardship to the Palestinians, in particular women and children,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to ensure the immediate resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>30</sup> the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907<sup>174</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>161</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>173</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing

<sup>172</sup> E/CN.6/2004/4.

<sup>173</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>174</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

Platform for Action<sup>9</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>10</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>172</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-ninth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*51st plenary meeting
23 July 2004*

2004/57. Participation of non-governmental organizations in the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Underlining the significance of the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, to be held in 2005, which will mark the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Beijing Declaration<sup>13</sup> and Platform for Action,<sup>9</sup> the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women<sup>173</sup> and the thirtieth anniversary of the World Conference of the International Women’s Year, held in Mexico City from 19 June to 2 July 1975,

Noting that the Commission on the Status of Women will undertake, at its forty-ninth session, a review of the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>10</sup> and will consider current challenges and forward-looking strategies for the advancement and empowerment of women and girls,

1. Decides, on an exceptional basis, to invite those non-governmental organizations that were accredited to the Fourth World Conference on Women or to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly to attend the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women;

2. Urges that, in recognition of the importance of equitable geographical participation of non-governmental organizations in the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, relevant bodies of the United Nations system assist those non-governmental organizations that do not have resources, in particular non-governmental organizations from developing countries, including the least developed countries, and countries with economies in transition, to participate in the forty-ninth session of the Commission.

*51st plenary meeting
23 July 2004*

2004/58. Preparations for the forty-third session of the Commission for Social Development

The Economic and Social Council,

Underlining the significance of the forty-third session of the Commission for Social Development, which will mark the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development<sup>61</sup> and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development,<sup>62</sup>

Noting that the Commission will undertake, at its forty-third session, a review of the implementation of the Copenhagen Programme of Action and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, entitled “World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world”, held in Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000,<sup>175</sup> which constitute the basic framework for the promotion of social development for all at the national and international levels,

Building upon its resolution 1996/7 of 22 July 1996, and also taking into account General Assembly resolutions 50/161 of 22 December 1995, 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 and 58/291 of 6 May 2004,

Considering the special nature of the task before the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session,

1. Decides to focus on the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development<sup>61</sup> and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development<sup>62</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly<sup>175</sup> through the expanded use of interactive dialogue, and with broad-based participation of governmental delegations at the highest level of responsibility and expertise, and of civil society and organizations within the United Nations system, bearing in mind the need to integrate the social development perspective in the comprehensive review of the progress made in the fulfilment of all the commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;<sup>12</sup>

2. Also decides that the Commission for Social Development, at its forty-third session, should emphasize the sharing of experiences and good practices on overcoming challenges to the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration and Programme of Action and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly;

3. Further decides that the Commission for Social Development should convene, during its forty-third session, high-level plenary meetings, open to all States Members of the United Nations and observers, on the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration and Programme of Action and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, and requests the Chairman of the forty-third session

<sup>175</sup> General Assembly resolution S-24/2, annex.

Recalling also its resolution 2004/49 of 23 July 2004 on the United Nations Public-Private Alliance for Rural Development,

Underlining the importance of the contribution of the private sector, non-governmental organizations and civil society in general to the implementation of the outcomes of United Nations conferences in the economic, social and related fields,

Recalling the central role and responsibility of Governments in national and international policymaking,

Bearing in mind General Assembly resolution 58/129 of 19 December 2003, entitled “Towards global partnerships”, in which the Assembly, inter alia, identified the principles and objectives of such partnerships and welcomed the establishment of a multitude of partnerships at the field level, entered into by various United Nations organizations, Member States and other stakeholders, such as the United Nations Public-Private Alliance for Rural Development (the United Nations Alliance),

1. Encourages the initiative of the Government of the Dominican Republic to serve as the second pilot country for the United Nations Public-Private Alliance for Rural Development (the United Nations Alliance);

2. Invites all Member States, the funds, programmes and agencies of the United Nations system, the Bretton Woods institutions, civil society, the private sector and other relevant stakeholders to support the programmes and activities of the United Nations Alliance in its mission to promote sustainable rural development, consistent with General Assembly resolution 58/129 and other relevant resolutions and decisions of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council;

3. Stresses that activities of the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system at the country level in support of the United Nations Alliance should take into account the implementation of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2007 on the work of the United Nations Alliance.

*39th plenary meeting
26 July 2005*

2005/43. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>116</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>117</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women<sup>87</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>88</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2004/56 of 23 July 2004 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

---

<sup>116</sup> E/CN.6/2005/4.

<sup>117</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>118</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Expressing the urgent need for the full resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli settlement activities and the unlawful construction of the wall, as well as the severe consequences arising from Israeli military operations on and sieges of civilian areas, which have detrimentally impacted their social and economic conditions and deepened the humanitarian crisis faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,<sup>119</sup> and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>77</sup> the International Covenant of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>77</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>47</sup> and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to ensure the full resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>76</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention respecting the Laws and Custom of War on Land of 18 October 1907 (Convention IV),<sup>80</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>120</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>117</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and

---

<sup>118</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>119</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1.

<sup>120</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>87</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>88</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>116</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fiftieth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*39th plenary meeting
26 July 2005*

2005/44. Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001–2010

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Brussels Declaration<sup>121</sup> and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001–2010,<sup>122</sup>

Recalling also its decision 2001/320 of 24 October 2001, in which it decided to establish, under the regular agenda item entitled “Integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the major United Nations conferences and summits”, a regular sub-item entitled “Review and coordination of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001–2010”,

Recalling further its resolution 2003/17 of 22 July 2003 and its decision 2003/287 of 24 July 2003, as well as the ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2004 on the theme “Resources mobilization and enabling environment for poverty eradication in the context of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001–2010”,<sup>123</sup>

Recalling paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 59/244 of 22 December 2004, in which the Assembly decided to hold the comprehensive review of the Programme of Action in 2006 during its sixty-first session, in accordance with paragraph 114 of the Programme of Action, and paragraph 6 of the same resolution, in which the Assembly decided to consider at its sixtieth session the modalities for conducting such a comprehensive review,

1. Takes note of the annual progress report of the Secretary-General<sup>124</sup> on the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001–2010;<sup>122</sup>

2. Expresses its deep concern over the insufficient progress achieved in the implementation of the Programme of Action, and stresses the need to address areas of weakness in its implementation;

3. Urges the least developed countries and their bilateral and multilateral development partners to undertake increased efforts and to adopt measures rapidly, with a view to meeting the goals and targets of the Programme of Action in a timely manner;

---

<sup>121</sup> A/CONF.191/13, chap. I.

<sup>122</sup> Ibid., chap. II.

<sup>123</sup> A/59/3, chap. III, para. 49. For the final text, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-ninth Session, Supplement No. 3.

<sup>124</sup> A/60/81-E/2005/68.

2006/8. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>13</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>14</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>15</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>16</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2005/43 of 26 July 2005 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>17</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the importance of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict, and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Expressing the urgent need for the full resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli settlement activities and the unlawful construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, as well as the severe consequences arising from Israeli military operations on and sieges of civilian areas, which have impacted detrimentally their social and economic conditions and deepened the humanitarian crisis faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Welcoming the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights<sup>18</sup> on the issue of Palestinian pregnant women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints owing to denial of access by Israel to hospitals, with a view to ending this Israeli practice,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,<sup>19</sup> and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>20</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>20</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>21</sup> and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

---

<sup>13</sup> E/CN.6/2006/4.

<sup>14</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>15</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>16</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>17</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>18</sup> A/60/324.

<sup>19</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1.

<sup>20</sup> General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>21</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to ensure the full resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>22</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land (Convention IV)<sup>23</sup> of 18 October 1907 and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>24</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>14</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>15</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>16</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>13</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-first session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*38th plenary meeting
25 July 2006*

2006/9. Future organization and methods of work of the Commission on the Status of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2005/48 of 27 July 2005, in which the Council welcomed the progress made in the review of the working methods of several functional commissions and invited those functional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies that had not yet done so to continue to examine their methods of work, as mandated by the General Assembly in its

---

<sup>22</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>23</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>24</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

most cost-effective manner no later than the end of 2007, and to make it available on CD-ROM and on the website of the secretariat of the Economic Commission for Europe, which provides secretariat services to the Committee;

4. Invites Governments that have not yet done so to take the necessary steps, through appropriate national procedures and/or legislation, to implement the Globally Harmonized System as soon as possible, with a view to having the system fully operational by 2008;

5. Reiterates its invitation to the regional commissions, United Nations programmes, the specialized agencies and other organizations concerned to promote the implementation of the Globally Harmonized System and, where relevant, to amend their respective international legal instruments addressing transport safety, workplace safety, consumer protection or the protection of the environment so as to give effect to the Globally Harmonized System through such instruments;

6. Invites Governments, the regional commissions, United Nations programmes, the specialized agencies and other organizations concerned to provide feedback on implementation to the Subcommittee of Experts on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals;<sup>25</sup>

7. Encourages Governments, the regional commissions, United Nations programmes, the specialized agencies and other relevant international organizations and non-governmental organizations, in particular those representing industry, to strengthen their support of the implementation of the Globally Harmonized System by providing financial contributions and/or technical assistance for capacity-building activities in developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

C. Programme of work of the Committee

Taking note of the programme of work of the Committee for the biennium 2007–2008 as contained in paragraphs 43 and 44 of the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>13</sup>

Noting the relatively poor level of participation of experts from developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the work of the Committee and the need to promote their wider participation in its work,

1. Decides to approve the programme of work of the Committee;

2. Stresses the importance of the participation of experts from developing countries and from countries with economies in transition in the work of the Committee, calls, in that regard, for voluntary contributions to facilitate their participation, including through support for travel and daily subsistence, and invites Member States and international organizations in a position to do so to contribute;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the Economic and Social Council in 2009 on the implementation of the present resolution, the recommendations on the transport of dangerous goods and the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals.

*40th plenary meeting
23 July 2007*

2007/7. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>26</sup>

---

<sup>25</sup> Information on the implementation of the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals by country and through international legal instruments, recommendations, codes and guidelines is available on the Economic Commission for Europe website at www.unece.org/trans/danger/publi/ghs/implementation\_e.html.

<sup>26</sup> E/CN.6/2007/4.

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>27</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>28</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>29</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2006/8 of 25 July 2006 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>30</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the importance of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict, and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Expressing the urgent need for the full resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli settlement activities and the unlawful construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, as well as the severe consequences arising from Israeli military operations in and sieges of civilian areas, which have had a detrimental impact on their social and economic conditions and deepened the humanitarian crisis faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Expressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the harmful impact of the financial crisis which has exacerbated the already dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Welcoming the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,<sup>31</sup> issued on 31 August 2005, on the issue of Palestinian women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints owing to denial to them by Israel of access to hospitals, with a view to ending this practice,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,<sup>32</sup> and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>33</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>33</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>34</sup> and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

---

<sup>27</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>28</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>29</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>30</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>31</sup> A/60/324.

<sup>32</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1.

<sup>33</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>34</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to ensure the full resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for intensified measures to be taken for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society, and encourages all women in the region to take an active role in supporting the peace process;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>35</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907<sup>36</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>37</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugee and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>27</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>28</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>29</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>26</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-second session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*42nd plenary meeting
24 July 2007*

2007/8. Flow of information for the follow-up to the World Summit on the Information Society

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the outcome documents of the World Summit on the Information Society,<sup>38</sup>

---

<sup>35</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>36</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>37</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>38</sup> See A/C.2/59/3 and A/60/687.

9. Requests the Advisory Group, in accomplishing its mandate, to continue to cooperate with the Secretary-General and his Special Representative in Haiti, the head of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, the United Nations Development Group, relevant United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, the Bretton Woods institutions, regional organizations and institutions, including the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, the Organization of American States, the Caribbean Community and the Inter-American Development Bank, and other major stakeholders;

10. Also requests the Advisory Group to submit a report on its work, with recommendations, as appropriate, to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2009.

*40th plenary meeting
23 July 2008*

2008/11. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women,<sup>17</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>18</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>19</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>20</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2007/7 of 24 July 2007 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>21</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the importance of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict, and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Noting the resumption of bilateral negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis, and expressing the need for the speedy achievement of a final and comprehensive peace settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Reaffirming the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security and the need to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution,

Concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including settlement activities and the unlawful construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods and the

---

<sup>17</sup> E/CN.6/2008/6.

<sup>18</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>19</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>20</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>21</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

many severe consequences arising from Israeli military operations in and sieges of civilian areas, in particular in the Gaza Strip, which have impacted detrimentally their social and economic conditions and deepened the humanitarian crisis faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Taking note of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights of 31 August 2005<sup>22</sup> regarding the issue of Palestinian women giving birth at checkpoints, and expressing grave concern at the increasing difficulties faced by pregnant Palestinian women owing to a lack of appropriate and timely antenatal, delivery and post-natal care due to the obstruction of access to proper medical care,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,<sup>23</sup> and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>24</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>24</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>25</sup> and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

Expressing grave concern over the increased difficulties faced by Palestinian women, including the sharp increase in poverty, soaring unemployment, incidents of domestic violence, and declining health and education standards as a result of the deterioration in the economic and social conditions on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to support the resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for intensified measures to be taken for the tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society, and encourages all women in the region to take an active role in supporting the peace process;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>26</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907<sup>27</sup> and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of

---

<sup>22</sup> A/60/324.

<sup>23</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1; see also Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory; Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136.

<sup>24</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>25</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

<sup>26</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>27</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

Resolutions

---

Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>28</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, to promote their development in various fields and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>18</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>19</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>20</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>17</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women, at its fifty-third session, a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*40th plenary meeting
23 July 2008*

2008/12. Report of the Committee for Development Policy on its tenth session

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 59/209 of 20 December 2004 on a smooth transition strategy for countries graduating from the list of least developed countries,

Recalling also its resolutions 2007/34 and 2007/35 of 27 July 2007,

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee for Development Policy on its tenth session,<sup>29</sup>

2. Requests the Committee, at its eleventh session, to examine and make recommendations on the themes chosen by the Economic and Social Council for the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2009;

3. Takes note of the proposals made by the Committee regarding its future work programme, in particular regarding the monitoring of the development progress of Cape Verde,<sup>30</sup>

4. Requests the Committee to monitor the development progress of countries graduating from the list of least developed countries and to include its findings in its annual report to the Economic and Social Council;

5. Invites the Chairperson and, as necessary, other members of the Committee to continue the practice of reporting orally on the work of the Committee.

*41st plenary meeting
23 July 2008*

---

<sup>28</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>29</sup> Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 2008, Supplement No. 13 (E/2008/33).

<sup>30</sup> Ibid., chap. I, para. 9.

Resolutions

---

Welcoming the contributions of the Institute to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and the implementation of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>55</sup> the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action,<sup>56</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly,<sup>51</sup>

Acknowledging the contributions of the Institute in promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women in the areas of security, international migration, in particular remittances and development, and governance and political participation,

Recognizing the contribution of the Institute to the ongoing efforts in gender mainstreaming through its research and training outputs involving national gender machineries, academic institutes, regional intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and the private sector,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on strengthening the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women;<sup>57</sup>

2. Requests the Institute, within its mandate, to continue to assist countries in promoting and supporting the political participation and economic and social advancement of women through training programmes;

3. Stresses the critical importance of voluntary financial contributions by Member States to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women to enable it to carry out its mandate, and invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund;

4. Calls for the diversification of funding resources, and in this regard invites Member States to continue to provide assistance and support to the Institute through voluntary contributions and substantive involvement in its projects and activities;

5. Looks forward to the enhanced implementation of the strategic plan of the Institute under the leadership of its new Director, and in this regard urges the Secretary-General to appoint its new Director as a matter of priority.

*40th plenary meeting
28 July 2009*

2009/14. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>58</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>59</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>50</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>51</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2008/11 of 23 July 2008 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of

---

<sup>55</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1249, No. 20378.

<sup>56</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annexes I and II.

<sup>57</sup> E/CN.6/2009/11.

<sup>58</sup> E/CN.6/2009/5.

<sup>59</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Reaffirming the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security and the need to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution,

Recalling the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>60</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>61</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>61</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>62</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern over the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the sharp increase in poverty, soaring unemployment, increased food insecurity, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern also about the deepening humanitarian crisis and rising insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploring the deteriorating economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access by pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Deploring also the intensified Israeli military operations in the Gaza Strip, which have caused heavy casualties among civilians, many of them children and women, and widespread damage to homes, United Nations schools and facilities, hospitals and public infrastructure, gravely impacting the provision of vital health and social services to Palestinian women and their families, and emphasizing that the civilian population must be protected,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region,

Affirming the importance of exploring means to address the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women in the resolutions of the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly under the relevant agenda items,

1. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures for improving the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

---

<sup>60</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>61</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>62</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women in terms of their advancement, their self-reliance and their integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>63</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907,<sup>64</sup> the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>12</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the international human rights covenants, in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, integrating a gender perspective into all international assistance programmes;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>59</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>50</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”;<sup>51</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>58</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fourth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*40th plenary meeting
28 July 2009*

2009/15. Future organization and methods of work of the Commission on the Status of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1998/46 of 31 July 1998, annex II of which contains the recommendation that the functional commissions responsible for follow-up to the major United Nations conferences adopt a multi-year thematic programme in their working methods,

Recalling also its request, in its resolution 2008/29 of 24 July 2008, that the functional commissions, the regional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies of the Council, in accordance with their mandates, as appropriate, contribute to the annual ministerial review and to the Development Cooperation Forum, in the context of their respective annual workplans, taking into account their specificities,

Recalling further that, in its resolutions 1987/24 of 26 May 1987, 1990/15 of 24 May 1990, 1996/6 of 22 July 1996, 2001/4 of 24 July 2001 and 2006/9 of 25 July 2006, the Council adopted

---

<sup>63</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>64</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

Resolutions

---

22. The Chair at each meeting of the Technical Committee shall be elected by the majority vote of those members of the Technical Committee present and voting.

Resources of the Centre

23. The Centre shall be financed from the following sources:

- (a) Support from the host country;
- (b) Support from the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia;
- (c) Income received by the Centre for services provided to beneficiaries;
- (d) Any other funding sources approved by the Board of Governors.

24. The Centre shall endeavour to mobilize sufficient resources to support its activities, in addition to those received from the host country pursuant to the agreement signed between the host country and the United Nations.

25. The United Nations shall maintain separate trust funds for donations for technical cooperation projects or other special contributions for activities of the Centre.

26. The financial resources of the Centre shall be administered in accordance with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations.<sup>25</sup>

Amendments

27. Amendments to the present statute shall be adopted by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia.

28. In the event of any procedural matter arising that is not covered by the present statute or rules of procedure adopted by the Board of Governors, the pertinent part of the terms of reference and rules of procedure of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia shall apply.

Entry into force

29. The present statute shall enter into force on the date of its adoption by the Commission.

2010/6. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>26</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>27</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>18</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",<sup>28</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2009/14 of 28 July 2009 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

---

<sup>25</sup> ST/SGB/2003/7 and Amend.1.

<sup>26</sup> E/CN.6/2010/4.

<sup>27</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>28</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

Resolutions

---

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>29</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>30</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>30</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>31</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the continuation of home demolitions, the sharp increase in poverty, soaring unemployment, increased food insecurity, incidents of domestic violence, and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern also about the deepening humanitarian crisis and rising insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploring the deteriorating economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the construction and expansion of settlements and the Wall and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the continuing deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from the Israeli military operations and the imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of all persons and goods, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

---

<sup>29</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>30</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>31</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>32</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907,<sup>33</sup> the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949<sup>6</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>30</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, integrating a gender perspective into all international assistance programmes;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>27</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>18</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>28</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>26</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fifth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*42nd plenary meeting
20 July 2010*

2010/7. Strengthening the institutional arrangements for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1998 (LX) of 12 May 1976 establishing the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010, in particular the section entitled “Strengthening the institutional arrangements for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women”, and the establishment, as a composite entity, of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women,

Noting the transitional arrangements set out in paragraphs 81 to 88 of resolution 64/289, in particular paragraphs 82, 83, 84, 87 and 88,

Expressing its deep gratitude for the support offered by the host country during all the years of operation of the Institute,

Decides to dissolve the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women as of the date of the adoption of the present resolution.

*42nd plenary meeting
20 July 2010*

---

<sup>32</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>33</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

and Development, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other relevant international and regional organizations;

(ii) Promote an integrated, international and collaborative approach in these areas, particularly to meet the needs of smallholder farmers;

(iii) Promote the exchange, dissemination and diffusion of best practice examples in the area of agricultural science, technology and innovation and promote cooperation between countries in order to face common challenges in matters of science and technology;

(iv) Facilitate new science, technology and innovation policy reviews, as requested by member countries, to emphasize science and technology and information and communications technologies in building human capacity and infrastructure to foster innovation in national development plans and programmes, in close collaboration with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Bank and other relevant international development banks and institutions, and consider new modalities to monitor progress for their implementation;

(v) In particular, the Commission should identify opportunities and best practices and synergies in and between e-science, e-engineering and e-education programmes worldwide in the course of performing science, technology and innovation policy reviews;

(vi) Complete and disseminate the new science, technology and innovation policy methodology guidelines and share outcomes and best practices resulting from their implementation;

(vii) Examine new metrics to assess and document outcomes of investments in science and technology and engineering research and development, education and infrastructure, in collaboration with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Bank and member countries that have established programmes in this field of research;

(viii) Continue to provide a forum, in collaboration with its Gender Advisory Board, to share good practice examples and lessons learned in integrating a gender perspective in science, technology and innovation policymaking and implementation;

(ix) Consider, on an annual basis, an award, in collaboration with the World Summit on the Information Society World Summit Awards and the International Center for New Media, in Salzburg, Austria, for the innovative application of information and communications technologies in the fields of science, technology and engineering that support development.

*44th plenary meeting
26 July 2011*

2011/18. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>56</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>57</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women<sup>58</sup> and the outcome documents of the

---

<sup>56</sup> E/CN.6/2011/6.

<sup>57</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>58</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

Resolutions

---

twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>10</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2010/6 of 20 July 2010 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>59</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>60</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>60</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>61</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians and arbitrary detention and imprisonment, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply, incidents of domestic violence, and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern also about the dire humanitarian crisis and insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the critical socio-economic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from the Israeli military operations and the imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

---

<sup>59</sup> See General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>60</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>61</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

2. Calls upon, in this regard, the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, and affirms its support for the plan of August 2009 of the Palestinian Authority for constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>62</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907,<sup>63</sup> the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>30</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>60</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

5. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>57</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>58</sup> and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>10</sup>

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>56</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-sixth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*44th plenary meeting
26 July 2011*

2011/19. Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2009/6 of 24 July 2009,

Having considered the report of the Executive Director of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS,<sup>64</sup>

---

<sup>62</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>63</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>64</sup> See E/2011/109.

recruitment processes in the relevant organizations, to continue working collaboratively to enhance gender mainstreaming within the United Nations system, including by:

(a) Continuing to work to better align gender equality programming with national priorities, as requested by the Member State concerned, with the aim of integrating gender mainstreaming into policies, legislation and programmes;

(b) Promoting a facilitative and evolving environment for gender mainstreaming at the headquarters level and ensuring that entities within the United Nations system dedicate adequate financial and human resources to gender equality programming at the country level;

(c) Strengthening the coordination of gender-responsive operational activities among entities of the United Nations system through existing coordination mechanisms at the country level and in partnership, where appropriate, with other relevant entities and national partners;

(d) Ensuring that the various existing accountability mechanisms of the United Nations system provide for more coherent, accurate and effective monitoring, evaluation and reporting on gender equality results and on the tracking of gender-related resource allocation and expenditure, including through the promotion of the use, where appropriate, of gender markers, and encouraging the use by United Nations country teams of gender accountability mechanisms to assist and improve their performance at the country level;

(e) Supporting UN-Women in its promotion of increased accountability for gender mainstreaming, including through the systematic use of monitoring and reporting mechanisms, including for United Nations country teams and for assessing individual staff performance;

(f) Securing technical expertise for gender equality in programme planning and implementation to ensure that gender dimensions are systematically addressed and, in this regard, drawing on the gender expertise available in the United Nations system, including in UN-Women, to assist in the preparation of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework and other development programming frameworks;

(g) Providing ongoing capacity development in the area of gender mainstreaming for all United Nations staff and personnel at the country level, including resident coordinators and members of the United Nations country teams, particularly gender experts, to ensure that they are better able to advance gender equality and the empowerment of women;

(h) Collecting, analysing, using and disseminating comparable data, disaggregated by sex and age, in a regular and systematic manner to guide country programming investments, to support the preparation of corporate and country-level documents, such as the strategic, programmatic and results-based frameworks, and to continue to refine their tools for measuring progress and impact;

(i) Ensuring progress, including through managerial and departmental accountability, towards achieving the goal of a 50/50 gender balance at all levels in the Secretariat and throughout the United Nations system, with due regard to the representation of women from developing countries and keeping in mind the principle of equitable geographical representation, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council at its substantive session of 2013 a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including the promotion of accountability and progress made in the implementation of the System-wide Action Plan.

*48th plenary meeting
27 July 2012*

2012/25. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>127</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>128</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth

---

<sup>127</sup> E/CN.6/2012/6.

<sup>128</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (A/CONF.116/28/Rev.1), chap. I, sect. A.

World Conference on Women<sup>129</sup> and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>130</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2011/18 of 26 July 2011 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>131</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>132</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>132</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>133</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights and arbitrary detention and imprisonment, as well as high rates of poverty and unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply, incidents of domestic violence, and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern about the dire humanitarian crisis and insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including displacement and the confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the critical socioeconomic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from the Israeli military operations and the imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

---

<sup>129</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>130</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>131</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>132</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>133</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, and commends the implementation of the August 2009 plan of the Palestinian Authority for building the institutions of an independent Palestinian State within a 24-month period and the significant achievements made, as confirmed by international institutions, including the United Nations, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>134</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907,<sup>135</sup> the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>136</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>132</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

5. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

6. Stresses the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in resuming, advancing and accelerating the peace process negotiations for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement, on the basis of United Nations resolutions, the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict<sup>137</sup> and the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session;<sup>138</sup>

7. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>128</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>129</sup> and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>130</sup>

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>127</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-seventh session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*48th plenary meeting
27 July 2012*

2012/26. Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2011–2020

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Istanbul Declaration<sup>139</sup> and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2011–2020,<sup>140</sup> adopted by the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in

---

<sup>134</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>135</sup> See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>136</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>137</sup> S/2003/529, annex.

<sup>138</sup> A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221.

<sup>139</sup> Report of the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, Istanbul, Turkey, 9–13 May 2011 (A/CONF.219/7), chap. I.

<sup>140</sup> Ibid., chap. II.

(k) Collecting, analysing, disseminating and using accurate, reliable, comparable and relevant data, disaggregated by sex and age, in a regular and systematic manner, in order to guide country programming, to support the preparation of organization-wide and country-level documents, such as the strategic, programmatic and results-based frameworks and evaluations, and to continue to promote and refine their tools for measuring progress and impact;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2014 a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including on the promotion of accountability at both the national and the global levels and on progress made in the implementation of the System-wide Action Plan.

*45th plenary meeting
24 July 2013*

2013/17. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>53</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>54</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>55</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>56</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2012/25 of 27 July 2012 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>57</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>58</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>58</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>59</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights, arbitrary detention and imprisonment, and settler violence against Palestinian civilians, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern about the dire humanitarian crisis and the insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe

---

<sup>53</sup> E/CN.6/2013/6.

<sup>54</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>55</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>56</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>57</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>58</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>59</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including displacement and confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the critical socioeconomic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from Israeli military operations and the imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, and commends the implementation of the August 2009 plan of the Palestinian Authority for constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State and the significant achievements made, as confirmed by international institutions, including the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United Nations;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>60</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>61</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>58</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

5. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

6. Stresses the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in resuming, advancing and accelerating substantive and credible peace process negotiations for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement, on the basis of United Nations resolutions, the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict<sup>62</sup> and the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session,<sup>63</sup>

---

<sup>60</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>61</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>62</sup> S/2003/529, annex.

<sup>63</sup> A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221.

7. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>54</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>55</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>56</sup>

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>53</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-eighth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

46th plenary meeting
24 July 2013

2013/18. Future organization and methods of work of the Commission on the Status of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that in its resolutions 1987/24 of 26 May 1987, 1990/15 of 24 May 1990, 1996/6 of 22 July 1996, 2001/4 of 24 July 2001, 2006/9 of 25 July 2006 and 2009/15 of 28 July 2009, the Council adopted multi-year programmes of work for a focused and thematic approach for the Commission on the Status of Women,

Recalling also that in its resolution 2009/15, the Council confirmed that the Commission should maintain its current working methods, as adopted by the Council in its resolution 2006/9, and should continue to keep its working methods under review,

Recalling further that in its resolution 2009/15, the Council decided that the Commission at its fifty-seventh session, in 2013, would discuss the possibility of conducting, in 2015, a review and appraisal of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action<sup>64</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>65</sup>

Recalling that in its resolution 2009/15, the Council decided that at its fifty-seventh session the Commission would decide on priority themes for future sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 2012/30 of 27 July 2012, in which the Council called upon its functional commissions, the regional commissions and other subsidiary bodies, within their respective mandates, to provide coherent support to the Council in the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of all major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social, environmental and related fields, and noting in this regard the ongoing review of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 61/16 of 20 November 2006 on strengthening of the Council,

Reaffirming the central role of the Commission in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly,

Recognizing that the organization of work of the Commission should contribute to advancing and accelerating the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly at the local, national, regional and international levels, and in this regard stressing the need to further enhance the impact of the work of the Commission,

Recognizing also that the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly and the fulfilment of the obligations of States parties under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women<sup>66</sup> are mutually reinforcing in achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women,

<sup>64</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annexes I and II.

<sup>65</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>66</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1249, No. 20378.

Resolutions

2014/1. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>1</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>2</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>3</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>4</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2013/17 of 24 July 2013 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>5</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>6</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>6</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>7</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights, arbitrary detention and imprisonment and escalating settler violence against Palestinian civilians and their property, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply and unsafe drinking water, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern about the dire humanitarian crisis and the insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the forced displacement of civilians and confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including the permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

---

<sup>1</sup> E/CN.6/2014/6.

<sup>2</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>3</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>4</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>5</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>6</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>7</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the critical socioeconomic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from Israeli military operations, including those in November 2012, and the continuing imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families, and recognizing the essential efforts and support being provided by the United Nations agencies and other humanitarian aid organizations on the ground,

Reiterating the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, commends the implementation of the August 2009 plan of the Palestinian Authority for constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State and the significant achievements made, as confirmed by international institutions, including the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United Nations, and calls for continued support of these efforts;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>8</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>9</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>6</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

5. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

6. Stresses the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to assist the parties in advancing and accelerating peace process negotiations for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement that ends the occupation which began in 1967 and results in the independence of a democratic, contiguous and viable State of Palestine living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its neighbours, on the basis of United Nations resolutions, the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict<sup>10</sup> and the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session,<sup>11</sup>

---

<sup>8</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>9</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>10</sup> S/2003/529, annex.

<sup>11</sup> A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221.

7. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>2</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action,<sup>3</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”;<sup>4</sup>

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>1</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-ninth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

22nd plenary meeting
12 June 2014

2014/2. Mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming its agreed conclusions 1997/2 of 18 July 1997 on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system,<sup>12</sup> and recalling its resolutions on the subject matter, including resolutions 2011/6 of 14 July 2011, 2012/24 of 27 July 2012 and 2013/16 of 24 July 2013,

Reaffirming also the commitments to gender equality and the advancement of women made at the Millennium Summit,<sup>13</sup> the 2005 World Summit,<sup>14</sup> the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals,<sup>15</sup> the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development<sup>16</sup> and other major United Nations summits, conferences and special sessions, and reaffirming further that their full, effective and accelerated implementation is integral to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Reaffirming further the commitment made at the 2005 World Summit to actively promote the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all political, economic and social spheres and to further undertake to strengthen the capabilities of the United Nations system in the area of gender,

Reaffirming that gender mainstreaming is a globally accepted strategy for achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls and constitutes a critical strategy in the full, effective and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action<sup>17</sup> and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>18</sup> as well as in the full implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development,<sup>19</sup>

Underlining the catalytic role played by the Commission on the Status of Women and the important roles played by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly, and taking note of the agreed conclusions and decisions of the Commission related to the promotion and monitoring of gender mainstreaming within the United Nations system,

<sup>12</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-second Session, Supplement No. 3 (A/52/3/Rev.1), chap. IV, sect. A, para. 4.

<sup>13</sup> See General Assembly resolution 55/2.

<sup>14</sup> See General Assembly resolution 60/1.

<sup>15</sup> See General Assembly resolution 65/1.

<sup>16</sup> See General Assembly resolution 66/288, annex.

<sup>17</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annexes I and II.

<sup>18</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>19</sup> Report of the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo, 5–13 September 1994 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.95.XIII.18), chap. I, resolution 1, annex.

to promote more coherent, accurate and effective monitoring and reporting on progress on gender equality, the impact of the promotion of gender equality and the use of common indicators on gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls, taking into account the situation of women and girls who face discrimination and marginalization and those in vulnerable situations;

(o) Continuing to promote the institutionalization of transparency and robust accountability systems, with a focus on assessing gender mainstreaming, including at the level of United Nations country teams, through capitalizing on the lessons learned from the design and implementation of the System-wide Action Plan, while both expanding and drawing on assets and resources instituted to support the implementation of such transparency and accountability systems;

(p) Facilitating complementarity among accountability instruments at the global and country levels;

(q) Striving for both dedicated results at the outcome level and the mainstreaming of gender equality considerations through other priority areas;

(r) Ensuring adequate resources for meeting gender-related goals and targets across the post-2015 development framework;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Economic and Social Council, at its substantive session of 2016, a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including on the promotion of accountability at both the national and the global levels and on progress made in the implementation of the System-wide Action Plan.

*36th plenary meeting
10 June 2015*

2015/13. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>66</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>67</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>68</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>69</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2014/1 of 12 June 2014 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003, on the prevention of armed conflict, and Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 and 2122 (2013) of 18 October 2013 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>70</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>71</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>71</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>72</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

---

<sup>66</sup> E/CN.6/2015/5.

<sup>67</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A

<sup>68</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>69</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>70</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>71</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>72</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council,

Taking note of the recent accession by the State of Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law treaties,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including as a result of the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights, arbitrary detention and imprisonment and escalating settler violence against Palestinian civilians and their properties, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply and unsafe drinking water, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, particularly in the Gaza Strip, where a grave humanitarian crisis continues to severely affect the situation of women and girls,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the forced displacement of civilians, especially among the Bedouin community, and confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including the permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health-care services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Condemning the military conflict in and around the Gaza Strip in July and August 2014 and the civilian casualties caused, including the killing and injury of thousands of Palestinian civilians, including hundreds of children, women and elderly persons, as well as the widespread destruction of homes and critical civilian infrastructure, including schools, hospitals, water, sanitation and electricity networks, economic, industrial and agricultural properties, public institutions, religious sites and United Nations schools and facilities, as well as the internal displacement of hundreds of thousands of civilians, and any violations of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law,

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the critical socioeconomic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from the Israeli military operations in July and August 2014, as well as the long-term negative impact of Israeli military operations from December 2008 to January 2009 and in November 2012, and the continuing imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the need for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in accordance with international humanitarian law,

Stressing also the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families, and recognizing the essential efforts and support being provided by the United Nations agencies and other humanitarian aid organizations on the ground, particularly in response to the grave humanitarian crisis in the Gaza Strip,

Welcoming the convening of the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, on 12 October 2014, and urging the timely and full disbursement of pledges for expediting the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families,

Reiterating the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of women's equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

Resolutions

---

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and immense reconstruction and recovery needs in the Gaza Strip, and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, commends the achievements of the Palestinian Government in constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State, as confirmed by international institutions, including by the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United Nations, and calls for continued support of these efforts;

3. Calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges made at the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza in order to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>73</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949<sup>74</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>71</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

5. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

6. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

7. Urges the international community to make renewed efforts aimed at advancing and accelerating the conclusion of a peace treaty based on clear parameters and with a defined time frame to attain without delay an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 by resolving all outstanding issues, including all core issues, without exception, for a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, in accordance with the internationally recognized basis of the two-State solution, and of the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole, for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East;

8. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>67</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>68</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",<sup>69</sup>

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out in his report,<sup>66</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixtieth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*36th plenary meeting
10 June 2015*

---

<sup>73</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>74</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

(b) Sixty-second session (2018):

(i) Priority theme: Challenges and opportunities in achieving gender equality and the empowerment of rural women and girls;

(ii) Review theme: Participation in and access of women to the media, and information and communications technologies and their impact on and use as an instrument for the advancement and empowerment of women (agreed conclusions of the forty-seventh session);

(c) Sixty-third session (2019):

(i) Priority theme: Social protection systems, access to public services and sustainable infrastructure for gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls;

(ii) Review theme: Women's empowerment and the link to sustainable development (agreed conclusions of the sixtieth session);

2. Requests the Commission, in order to achieve concrete results in each review cycle, to consider and make a recommendation at its sixty-second session on how best to utilize the year 2020, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women, so as to accelerate the realization of gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls;

3. Affirms that the Commission will contribute to the thematic reviews of progress on the Sustainable Development Goals taking place at the high-level political forum on sustainable development.

*27th plenary meeting
2 June 2016*

2016/4. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>21</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>22</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>23</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",<sup>24</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2015/13 of 10 June 2015 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 and 2122 (2013) of 18 October 2013 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>25</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>26</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>26</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>27</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

---

<sup>21</sup> E/CN.6/2016/6.

<sup>22</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>23</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>24</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>25</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>26</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>27</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council,

Taking note of the accession by the State of Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law treaties,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including as a result of the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights, and arbitrary detention and imprisonment, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply and unsafe drinking water, shortage of electricity and fuel, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, particularly in the Gaza Strip, where a humanitarian disaster continues to severely affect the situation of women and girls,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the forced displacement and transfer of civilians, especially among the Bedouin community, and confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including the permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health-care services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Expressing grave concern about all acts of violence, intimidation and provocation by Israeli settlers against Palestinian civilians, including women and children, and properties, including homes, mosques, churches and agricultural lands, condemning acts of terror by several extremist Israeli settlers, and calling for accountability for the illegal actions perpetrated in this regard,

Gravely concerned by the tensions and violence in the recent period throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and deploring the loss of innocent civilian life, including among girls and women, as a result of excessive and indiscriminate use of force by Israeli occupying forces,

Condemning the military conflict in and around the Gaza Strip in July and August 2014 and the civilian casualties caused, including the killing and injury of thousands of Palestinian civilians, including hundreds of children, women and elderly persons, as well as the widespread destruction of homes and critical civilian infrastructure, including schools, hospitals, water, sanitation and electricity networks, economic, industrial and agricultural properties, public institutions, religious sites and United Nations schools and facilities, as well as the internal displacement of hundreds of thousands of civilians, and any violations of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law,

Taking note of the report and findings of the independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1,<sup>28</sup> and stressing the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to end impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations, protect civilians and promote peace,

Gravely concerned, in particular, by the persisting disastrous humanitarian situation and socioeconomic conditions in the Gaza Strip, including those resulting from the Israeli military operations in July and August 2014, as well as the long-term negative impact of Israeli military operations from December 2008 to January 2009 and in November 2012, and the continuing imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

---

<sup>28</sup> A/HRC/29/52.

Stressing the need for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, consistent with the provisions and obligations under international humanitarian law,

Stressing also the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families, and recognizing the essential efforts and support being provided by the United Nations agencies and other humanitarian aid organizations on the ground, particularly in response to the grave humanitarian crisis in the Gaza Strip,

Recalling the convening of the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, on 12 October 2014, and urging the timely and full disbursement of pledges for expediting the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families,

Expressing grave concern that Palestinian women and girls continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres under harsh conditions, including, inter alia, unhygienic conditions, solitary confinement, extensive use of administrative detention of excessive duration without charge and denial of due process, and noting that women and girls also face gender-specific challenges, including inadequate access to medical care, risks associated with pregnancy and giving birth in prison and sexual harassment,

Reiterating the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of women's equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services, bearing in mind, inter alia, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development<sup>29</sup> and national priorities, in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and immense reconstruction and recovery needs in the Gaza Strip, and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, commends the achievements of the Palestinian Government in constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State, as confirmed by international institutions, including by the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United Nations, and calls for continued support of these efforts;

3. Calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges made on 12 October 2014 at the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, in order to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>30</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949<sup>31</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>26</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

---

<sup>29</sup> General Assembly resolution 70/1.

<sup>30</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>31</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

Resolutions

---

5. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

6. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

7. Urges the international community to make renewed efforts aimed at advancing and accelerating the conclusion of a peace treaty based on clear parameters and with a defined time frame to attain without delay an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 by resolving all outstanding issues, including all core issues, without exception, for a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, in accordance with the internationally recognized basis of the two-State solution, and of the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole, for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East;

8. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>22</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>23</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”;<sup>24</sup>

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out in his report,<sup>21</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixty-first session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*27th plenary meeting
2 June 2016*

2016/5. United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 2013/12 of 22 July 2013, 2014/10 of 13 June 2014 and 2015/8 of 9 June 2015 on the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases,

Acknowledging that the global burden and threat of non-communicable diseases, principally cardiovascular diseases, cancer, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes, which are linked to four main risk factors, namely, tobacco use, harmful use of alcohol, unhealthy diet and physical inactivity, as well as the global burden of mental health and neurological issues, constitute major challenges for economic and social development in the twenty-first century and may lead to increasing inequalities within and between countries and populations,

Reaffirming General Assembly resolution 70/1 of 25 September 2015, entitled “Transforming our world: the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development”, in which the Assembly adopted a comprehensive, far-reaching and people-centred set of universal and transformative Sustainable Development Goals and targets and affirmed its commitment to working tirelessly for the full implementation of this Agenda by 2030, its recognition that eradicating poverty in all its forms and dimensions, including extreme poverty, is the greatest global challenge and an indispensable requirement for sustainable development, its commitment to achieving sustainable development in its three dimensions – economic, social and environmental – in a balanced and integrated manner, and to building upon the achievements of the Millennium Development Goals and seeking to address their unfinished business,

Reaffirming also General Assembly resolution 69/313 of 27 July 2015 on the Addis Ababa Action Agenda of the Third International Conference on Financing for Development, which is an integral part of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, supports and complements it, helps to contextualize its means of implementation targets with concrete policies and actions, and reaffirms the strong political commitment to address the challenge of financing and creating an enabling environment at all levels for sustainable development in the spirit of global partnership and solidarity,

Welcoming the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, while highlighting the integrality of the Sustainable Development Goals, in particular, goals and targets related to health and non-communicable diseases,

2017/10. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>65</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>66</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>67</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>68</sup>

Recalling also its resolution 2016/4 of 2 June 2016 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 and 2122 (2013) of 18 October 2013 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>69</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>70</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>70</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>71</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council,

Taking note of the accession by the State of Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law treaties,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including as a result of the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights and arbitrary detention and imprisonment, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply and unsafe drinking water, shortages of electricity and fuel, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, particularly in the Gaza Strip, where a humanitarian disaster continues to severely affect the situation of women and girls,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the forced displacement and transfer of civilians, especially among the Bedouin community, and confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including the permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health-care services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

---

<sup>65</sup> E/CN.6/2017/6.

<sup>66</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>67</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>68</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>69</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>70</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>71</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Resolutions

---

Expressing grave concern about all acts of violence, intimidation and provocation by Israeli settlers against Palestinian civilians, including women and children, and properties, including homes, mosques, churches and agricultural lands, condemning acts of terror by several extremist Israeli settlers, and calling for accountability for the illegal actions perpetrated in this regard,

Gravely concerned by the tensions and violence over the recent period throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and deploring the loss of innocent civilian life, including among girls and women, as a result of excessive and indiscriminate use of force by Israeli occupying forces,

Condemning the military conflict in and around the Gaza Strip in July and August 2014 and the civilian casualties caused, including the killing and injury of thousands of Palestinian civilians, including hundreds of children, women and elderly persons, as well as the widespread destruction of homes and critical civilian infrastructure, including schools, hospitals, water, sanitation and electricity networks, economic, industrial and agricultural properties, public institutions, religious sites and United Nations schools and facilities, as well as the internal displacement of hundreds of thousands of civilians, and any violations of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law,

Taking note of the report and findings of the independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1,<sup>72</sup> and stressing the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to end impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations, protect civilians and promote peace,

Gravely concerned, in particular, by the persisting disastrous humanitarian situation and socioeconomic conditions in the Gaza Strip, including those resulting from the Israeli military operations in July and August 2014, as well as the long-term negative impact of Israeli military operations from December 2008 to January 2009 and in November 2012, and the continuing imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the need for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, consistent with the provisions and obligations under international humanitarian law,

Stressing also the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families, and recognizing the essential efforts and support being provided by the United Nations agencies and other humanitarian aid organizations on the ground, particularly in response to the grave humanitarian crisis in the Gaza Strip,

Recalling the convening of the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, on 12 October 2014, and urging the timely and full disbursement of pledges for expediting the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families,

Expressing grave concern that Palestinian women and girls continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres under harsh conditions, including, inter alia, unhygienic conditions, solitary confinement, extensive use of administrative detention of excessive duration without charge and denial of due process, and noting that women and girls also face gender-specific challenges, including inadequate access to medical care, risks associated with pregnancy and giving birth in prison and sexual harassment,

Reiterating the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of women's equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

---

<sup>72</sup> A/HRC/29/52.

Resolutions

---

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;
2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services, bearing in mind, inter alia, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development<sup>73</sup> and national priorities, in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and immense reconstruction and recovery needs in the Gaza Strip, and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, commends the achievements of the Palestinian Government in constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State, as confirmed by international institutions, including by the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United Nations, and calls for continued support of these efforts;
3. Calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges made on 12 October 2014 at the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, in order to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families;
4. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>74</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>75</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>70</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;
5. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;
6. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;
7. Urges the international community to make renewed efforts aimed at advancing and accelerating the conclusion of a peace treaty based on clear parameters and with a defined time frame to attain without delay an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 by resolving all outstanding issues, including all core issues, without exception, for a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, in accordance with the internationally recognized basis of the two-State solution, and of the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole, for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East;
8. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>66</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>67</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>68</sup>
9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>65</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixty-second session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*32nd plenary meeting
7 June 2017*

---

<sup>73</sup> General Assembly resolution 70/1.

<sup>74</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>75</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

3. Strongly encourages Governments to continue to support the role and contribution of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations and women's organizations, as well as national human rights institutions where they exist, in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, and in this regard calls upon Governments to collaborate with relevant stakeholders at all levels on preparations for the 2020 review so as to benefit from their experience and expertise;

B. Themes for the Commission on the Status of Women in 2021 and beyond

4. Requests the Commission at its sixty-fourth session to decide on its future multi-year programme of work;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its sixty-fourth session a report containing proposals on the Commission's priority and review themes for 2021 and beyond.

*34th plenary meeting
12 June 2018*

2018/9. Twenty-fifth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the significance of the Fourth World Conference on Women, held in Beijing in September 1995,

Recalling that the Council, in its resolution 2016/3 of 2 June 2016, requested the Commission on the Status of Women, in order to achieve concrete results in each review cycle, to consider and make a recommendation at its sixty-second session on how best to utilize the year 2020, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women, so as to accelerate the realization of gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls,

1. Decides to recommend to the General Assembly that, in order to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women, so as to accelerate the realization of gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls, a one-day high-level meeting of the Assembly be convened in the margins of the general debate of the Assembly at its seventy-fifth session, and that the outcome of the high-level meeting take the form of a Chair's summary;

2. Recommends that the President of the General Assembly conduct consultations to finalize the organizational arrangements for the high-level meeting of the Assembly.

*34th plenary meeting
12 June 2018*

2018/10. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>62</sup>

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>63</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>64</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",<sup>65</sup>

---

<sup>62</sup> E/CN.6/2018/6.

<sup>63</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>64</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annex II.

<sup>65</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

Resolutions

---

Recalling also its resolution 2017/10 of 7 June 2017 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 and 2122 (2013) of 18 October 2013 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>66</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>67</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>67</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>68</sup> and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council,

Taking note of the accession by the State of Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law treaties,

Deeply regretting that 51 years have passed since the onset of the Israeli occupation, stressing the urgent need for efforts to reverse the negative trends on the ground and to restore a political horizon for advancing and accelerating meaningful negotiations aimed at the achievement of a peace agreement that will bring a complete end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and the resolution of all core final status issues, without exception, leading to a peaceful, just, lasting and comprehensive solution of the question of Palestine, and stressing the importance of the inclusion of women in the peace negotiations and peacebuilding processes,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including as a result of the continuation of home demolitions, evictions of Palestinians, the revocation of residency rights and arbitrary detention and imprisonment, as well as high rates of poverty, unemployment, food insecurity, inadequate water supply and unsafe drinking water, a sanitation crisis, shortages of electricity and fuel, incidents of domestic violence and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, particularly in the Gaza Strip, where a humanitarian disaster continues to severely affect the situation of women and girls,

Deploring the dire economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the forced displacement and transfer of civilians, especially among the Bedouin community, and confiscation of land, particularly in connection with the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, which continue to constitute a major obstacle to peace on the basis of the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders, and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including the permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health-care services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Expressing grave concern about all acts of violence, intimidation and provocation by Israeli settlers against Palestinian civilians, including women and children, and properties, including homes, mosques, churches and agricultural lands, condemning acts of terror by several extremist Israeli settlers, and calling for accountability for the illegal actions perpetrated in this regard,

Gravely concerned by the tensions and violence over the recent period throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and deploring the loss of innocent civilian life, including among girls and women, as a result of excessive and indiscriminate use of force by Israeli occupying forces,

---

<sup>66</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>67</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>68</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

Condemning the military conflict in and around the Gaza Strip in July and August 2014 and the civilian casualties caused, including the killing and injury of thousands of Palestinian civilians, including hundreds of children, women and elderly persons, as well as the widespread destruction of homes and critical civilian infrastructure, including schools, hospitals, water, sanitation and electricity networks, economic, industrial and agricultural properties, public institutions, religious sites and United Nations schools and facilities, as well as the internal displacement of hundreds of thousands of civilians, and any violations of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law,

Taking note of the report and findings of the independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1,<sup>69</sup> and stressing the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to end impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations, protect civilians and promote peace,

Gravely concerned, in particular, by the persisting disastrous humanitarian situation and socioeconomic conditions in the Gaza Strip, including those resulting from the Israeli military operations in July and August 2014, as well as the long-term negative impact of Israeli military operations from December 2008 to January 2009 and in November 2012, and the continuing imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, as well as the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the need for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, consistent with the provisions and obligations under international humanitarian law,

Stressing also the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socioeconomic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families, and recognizing the essential efforts and support being provided by the United Nations agencies and other humanitarian aid organizations on the ground, particularly in response to the grave humanitarian crisis in the Gaza Strip,

Recalling the convening of the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, on 12 October 2014, and urging the timely and full disbursement of pledges for expediting the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families,

Expressing grave concern that Palestinian women and girls continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres under harsh conditions, including, inter alia, unhygienic conditions, solitary confinement, extensive use of administrative detention of excessive duration without charge and denial of due process, and noting that women and girls also face gender-specific challenges, including inadequate access to medical care, risks associated with pregnancy and giving birth in prison and sexual harassment,

Reiterating the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of women's equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

2. Calls upon the international community, in this regard, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services, bearing in mind, inter alia, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development<sup>70</sup> and national priorities, in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and immense reconstruction and

---

<sup>69</sup> A/HRC/29/52.

<sup>70</sup> General Assembly resolution 70/1.

Resolutions

---

recovery needs in the Gaza Strip, and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, with the integration of a gender perspective into all of its international assistance programmes, commends the achievements of the Palestinian Government in constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State, as confirmed by international institutions, including by the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United Nations, and calls for continued support of these efforts;

3. Calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges made on 12 October 2014 at the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, in order to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, which is essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>71</sup> the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>72</sup> and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights,<sup>67</sup> in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

5. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

6. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

7. Urges the international community to make renewed efforts aimed at advancing and accelerating the conclusion of a peace treaty based on clear parameters and with a defined time frame to attain without delay an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 by resolving all outstanding issues, including all core issues, without exception, for a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, in accordance with the internationally recognized basis of the two-State solution, and of the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole, for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East;

8. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>63</sup> in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action<sup>64</sup> and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>65</sup>

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report,<sup>62</sup> and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixty-third session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the gender-specific impact of the occupation and the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

*34th plenary meeting
12 June 2018*

2018/11. Strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming General Assembly resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 and the guiding principles contained in the annex thereto, and recalling other relevant resolutions of the Assembly and relevant resolutions and agreed conclusions of the Economic and Social Council,

---

<sup>71</sup> General Assembly resolution 217 A \(III\).

<sup>72</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

Resolutions

---

15. Encourages the Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

16. Requests the administering Powers concerned to continue their cooperation with the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in the framework of the responsibilities established in Article 73 of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular subparagraph d, and to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the relevant meetings and conferences of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations, including the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories, so that they may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

17. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts within the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories on a case-by-case basis;

18. Draws the attention of the Special Committee to the present resolution and to the discussion held on the subject at the 2019 session of the Economic and Social Council;

19. Recalls the adoption by the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean on 16 May 1998 of its resolution 574 (XXVII),<sup>195</sup> in which the Commission called for the mechanisms necessary for its associate members, including the Non-Self-Governing Territories, to participate, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, in the special sessions of the Assembly convened to review and assess the implementation of the plans of action of those United Nations world conferences in which the Territories had originally participated in their capacity as observers, and in the work of the Council and its subsidiary bodies;

20. Requests the President of the Council to continue to maintain close contact on those matters with the Chair of the Special Committee and to report thereon to the Council;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to follow up on the implementation of the present resolution, paying particular attention to cooperation and integration arrangements for maximizing the efficiency of the assistance activities undertaken by various organizations of the United Nations system, and to report thereon to the Council at its 2020 session;

22. Decides to keep the above questions under continuous review.

*37th plenary meeting
23 July 2019*

2019/28. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>196</sup>

Recalling its relevant resolutions and all other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\) of 31 October 2000, including its call upon all parties to armed conflict to respect fully international law applicable to the rights and protection of women and girls, especially as civilians, and its emphasis on the responsibility of all States to put an end to impunity,

Recalling further the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>197</sup>

---

<sup>195</sup> See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1998, Supplement No. 21 (E/1998/41), chap. III, sect. G.

<sup>196</sup> E/CN.6/2019/6.

<sup>197</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1249, No. 20378.

Recalling the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>198</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Reaffirming the obligations of States and all parties to armed conflict to comply with international humanitarian law and international human rights law, as applicable, and the need to end all violations of international humanitarian law and all violations and abuses of human rights,

Reaffirming also the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>199</sup> the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action,<sup>200</sup> the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>201</sup> and the political declaration on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-ninth session,<sup>202</sup> and reaffirming its commitment to their full, effective and accelerated implementation,

Reaffirming further the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of women’s equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, and its impact on women and girls,

Expressing grave concern also at the deaths of and injuries caused to civilians, including children, women and peaceful demonstrators, and emphasizing that civilian populations must be protected by all parties in accordance with international humanitarian law,

Stressing the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to end impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations, protect civilians and promote peace,

Deeply concerned about violence against women and girls in all its different forms and manifestations worldwide, which is underrecognized and underreported, particularly at the community level, and its pervasiveness, which reflects discriminatory norms that reinforce stereotypes and gender inequality and the corresponding impunity and lack of accountability, reiterating the need to intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls in the public and private spheres in all regions of the world, and re-emphasizing that violence against women and girls violates, and impairs their full enjoyment of, all human rights,

Noting the accession by Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law conventions, as well as other international treaties, and stressing the need to implement fully obligations under those instruments that protect the rights of women and girls, including during and post-conflict,

Underlining the limitations on Palestinian jurisdiction in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which undermine the ability of the Palestinian Government to protect Palestinian women and girls in certain areas,

Noting the importance of the agencies, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system in facilitating the advancement and empowerment of women in development in line with General Assembly resolution 71/243 of 21 December 2016,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women and girls with regard to the fulfilment of their rights, and their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society;

---

<sup>198</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>199</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>200</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annexes I and II.

<sup>201</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>202</sup> Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 2015, Supplement No. 7 (E/2015/27), chap. I, sect. C, resolution 59/1, annex.

Resolutions

---

2. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to immediately cease all measures contrary to international law, as well as discriminatory legislation, policies and actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people, and stresses that Palestinian civilians, particularly women and children, account for the vast majority of those adversely affected by the conflict;
3. Calls for urgent measures to ensure the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in accordance with the relevant provisions of international humanitarian law and as called for by the Security Council in its resolution 904 \(1994\) of 18 March 1994;
4. Calls upon the parties to comply fully with their obligations, including as States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>197</sup> taking fully into consideration the concluding observations as well as the general recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women;
5. Acknowledges the contribution of national coalitions and committees in advancing women's rights, including those pertaining to resolution 1325 \(2000\), the Convention and combating violence against women;
6. Welcomes the adoption by the Palestinian Government of a national action plan for the implementation of resolution 1325 \(2000\);
7. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families, including those living under Israeli occupation, and recognizes the importance of integrating gender considerations across humanitarian programming by seeking to ensure the provision of access to protection and the full range of medical, legal and livelihood and psychosocial services, including services for survivors of sexual and gender-based violence, without discrimination, and through ensuring that women and women's groups can participate equally and meaningfully and are supported in being leaders in humanitarian action;
8. Calls upon the international community, including the United Nations, in particular the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services, bearing in mind, inter alia, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development<sup>203</sup> and national priorities, in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and deteriorating socioeconomic conditions in the Gaza Strip;
9. Recalls the need for all parties to armed conflict to respect the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and to take into account the particular needs of women and girls, and stresses that the situation of the Palestine refugees, including women and girls, continues to be a matter of grave concern and that they continue to require assistance to meet basic health, education and living needs, pending a just resolution of the problem of Palestine refugees in conformity with General Assembly resolution 194 \(III\) of 11 December 1948;
10. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and urges in this regard the intensification and acceleration of renewed international and regional diplomatic efforts and support aimed at achieving, without delay, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative,<sup>204</sup> the Quartet road map<sup>205</sup> and an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967;
11. Stresses the importance of efforts to increase the role of Palestinian women in decision-making and of their equal and meaningful participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security, and encourages Member States and observer States as well as the United Nations system to ensure systematic attention to, recognition of and support for the crucial role of Palestinian women at all

---

<sup>203</sup> General Assembly resolution 70/1.

<sup>204</sup> A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221.

<sup>205</sup> S/2003/529, annex.

levels by, inter alia, promoting women's capacity, leadership, participation and engagement in political, economic and humanitarian decision-making;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report, and to include information on the gender-specific impact of the occupation and the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution in his report on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan to the Economic and Social Council at its 2020 session.

*37th plenary meeting
23 July 2019*

2019/29. Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 73/98 of 7 December 2018 and 73/255 of 20 December 2018,

Recalling also its resolution 2018/20 of 24 July 2018,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 \(1967\) of 22 November 1967, 252 \(1968\) of 21 May 1968, 338 \(1973\) of 22 October 1973, 465 \(1980\) of 1 March 1980, 497 \(1981\) of 17 December 1981 and 2334 \(2016\) of 23 December 2016,

Recalling the resolutions of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly, including resolutions ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, ES-10/14 of 8 December 2003, ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/17 of 15 December 2006,

Taking note of the report of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan, as transmitted by the Secretary-General,<sup>206</sup>

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>207</sup> to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>208</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>208</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>209</sup> and affirming that these human rights instruments are applicable and must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as in the occupied Syrian Golan,

Noting with concern that more than 70 years have passed since the adoption of General Assembly resolution 181 \(II\) of 29 November 1947 and 52 years since the occupation of the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Taking note, in this regard, of Palestine's accession to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law conventions as well as other international treaties,

---

<sup>206</sup> A/74/88-E/2019/72.

<sup>207</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>208</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A \(XXI\), annex.

<sup>209</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

22. Decides to include the item entitled “Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan” in the agenda of its 2022 session.

*1st plenary meeting
14 September 2020*

2021/5. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>25</sup>

Recalling its relevant resolutions and all other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\) of 31 October 2000, including its call upon all parties to armed conflict to respect fully international law applicable to the rights and protection of women and girls, especially as civilians, and its emphasis on the responsibility of all States to put an end to impunity,

Recalling further the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>26</sup>

Recalling the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>27</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Reaffirming the obligations of States and all parties to armed conflict to comply with international humanitarian law and international human rights law, as applicable, and the need to end all violations of international humanitarian law and all violations and abuses of human rights,

Reaffirming also the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>28</sup> the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action,<sup>29</sup> the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>30</sup> and the political declaration on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-ninth session,<sup>31</sup> and reaffirming its commitment to their full, effective and accelerated implementation,

Reaffirming further the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, stressing the importance of women’s equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and

---

<sup>25</sup> E/CN.6/2019/6.

<sup>26</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1249, No. 20378.

<sup>27</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>28</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>29</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annexes I and II.

<sup>30</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>31</sup> Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 2015, Supplement No. 7 (E/2015/27), chap. I, sect. C, resolution 59/1, annex.

Resolutions

---

promotion of peace and security, and welcoming in this regard the global call by international women leaders made on 1 July 2020,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, and its impact on women and girls,

Expressing grave concern also at the deaths of and injuries caused to civilians, including children, women and peaceful demonstrators, and emphasizing that civilian populations must be protected by all parties in accordance with international humanitarian law,

Stressing the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to end impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations, protect civilians and promote peace,

Deeply concerned about violence against women and girls in all its different forms and manifestations worldwide, which is underrecognized and underreported, particularly at the community level, and its pervasiveness, which reflects discriminatory norms that reinforce stereotypes and gender inequality and the corresponding impunity and lack of accountability, reiterating the need to intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls in the public and private spheres in all regions of the world, and re-emphasizing that violence against women and girls violates, and impairs their full enjoyment of, all human rights,

Noting the accession by Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law conventions, as well as other international treaties, and stressing the need to implement fully obligations under those instruments that protect the rights of women and girls, including during and post-conflict,

Noting also the importance of giving high priority to the swift adoption of the Family Protection Law to ensure that women and girls are protected from gender-based violence, including domestic violence,

Underlining the limitations on Palestinian jurisdiction in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which undermine the ability of the Palestinian Government to protect Palestinian women and girls in certain areas,

Noting the importance of the agencies, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system in facilitating the advancement and empowerment of women in development in line with General Assembly resolution 71/243 of 21 December 2016,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women and girls with regard to the fulfilment of their rights, and their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society;

2. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to immediately cease all measures contrary to international law, as well as discriminatory legislation, policies and actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people, and stresses that Palestinian civilians, particularly women and children, account for the vast majority of those adversely affected by the conflict;

3. Calls for urgent measures to ensure the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in accordance with the relevant provisions of international humanitarian law and as called for by the Security Council in its resolution 904 \(1994\) of 18 March 1994;

4. Calls upon the parties to comply fully with their obligations, including as States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, taking fully into consideration the concluding observations as well as the general recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women;

Resolutions

---

5. Acknowledges the contribution of national coalitions and committees in advancing women's rights, including those pertaining to resolution 1325 \(2000\), the Convention and combating violence against women;

6. Welcomes the adoption by the Palestinian Government of a national action plan for the implementation of resolution 1325 \(2000\) as well as of initiatives at the legislative, administrative and security levels to advance women's rights, notably in relation to family law and combating violence against women;

7. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families, including those living under Israeli occupation, and recognizes the importance of integrating gender considerations across humanitarian programming by seeking to ensure the provision of access to protection and the full range of medical, legal and livelihood and psychosocial services, including services for survivors of sexual and gender-based violence, without discrimination, and through ensuring that women and women's groups can participate equally and meaningfully and are supported in being leaders in humanitarian action;

8. Calls upon the international community, including the United Nations, in particular the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services, bearing in mind, inter alia, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development<sup>32</sup> and national priorities, in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and deteriorating socioeconomic conditions in the Gaza Strip;

9. Recalls the need for all parties to armed conflict to respect the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and to take into account the particular needs of women and girls, and stresses that the situation of the Palestine refugees, including women and girls, continues to be a matter of grave concern and that they continue to require assistance to meet basic health, education and living needs, pending a just resolution of the problem of Palestine refugees in conformity with General Assembly resolution 194 \(III\) of 11 December 1948;

10. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and urges in this regard the intensification and acceleration of renewed international and regional diplomatic efforts and support aimed at achieving, without delay, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative,<sup>33</sup> the Quartet road map<sup>34</sup> and an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967;

11. Stresses the importance of efforts to increase the role of Palestinian women in decision-making and of their equal and meaningful participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security, and encourages Member States and observer States as well as the United Nations system to ensure systematic attention to, recognition of and support for the crucial role of Palestinian women at all levels by, inter alia, promoting women's capacity, leadership, participation and engagement in political, economic and humanitarian decision-making and by improving the gender balance in senior civilian government positions and in security functions;

---

<sup>32</sup> General Assembly resolution 70/1.

<sup>33</sup> A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221.

<sup>34</sup> S/2003/529, annex.

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report, and to include information on the gender-specific impact of the occupation and the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution in his report on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan to the Economic and Social Council at its 2021 session.

*1st plenary meeting
14 September 2020*

2021/6. Programme of work of the United Nations Forum on Forests for the period 2022–2024

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2020/14 of 17 July 2020, entitled “Outcome of the fifteenth session of the United Nations Forum on Forests”,

Adopts the programme of work of the United Nations Forum on Forests for the period 2022–2024, as contained in the annex to the present resolution.

*8th plenary meeting
8 June 2021*

Annex

Programme of work of the United Nations Forum on Forests for its seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth sessions

Table 1

Seventeenth session of the United Nations Forum on Forests, 2022 (policy session)

---

Priorities in support of implementation of the United Nations strategic plan for forests 2017–2030

---

1. Thematic priorities for the biennium 2021–2022: selected global forest goals and associated targets in accordance with the sixteenth session of the Forum and consideration of relevant proposals contained in the Chair’s summary from the sixteenth session
2. Other policy session items and consideration of relevant proposals contained in the Chair’s summary from the sixteenth session
  - (a) New announcements of voluntary national contributions
  - (b) Updates by stakeholders and partners on activities in support of the thematic priorities
    - (i) Collaborative Partnership on Forests and its workplan
    - (ii) Regional and subregional organizations and processes
    - (iii) Major groups and other relevant stakeholders, including the private sector and philanthropic community
  - (c) Interlinkages between the global forest goals and targets and the Sustainable Development Goals under review by the high-level political forum on sustainable development in 2022 and international forest-related developments between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, in order to pave the way for the realization of the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders, and the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-eighth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to continue to include in the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator an update on the living conditions of the Palestinian people, in collaboration with relevant United Nations agencies;

22. Decides to include the item entitled “Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan” in the agenda of its 2023 session.

*34th plenary meeting
22 July 2022*

2022/23. Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,<sup>161</sup>

Recalling its relevant resolutions and all other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\) of 31 October 2000, including its call upon all parties to armed conflict to respect fully international law applicable to the rights and protection of women and girls, especially as civilians, and its emphasis on the responsibility of all States to put an end to impunity,

Recalling further the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>162</sup>

Recalling the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women<sup>163</sup> as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Reaffirming the obligations of States and all parties to armed conflict to comply with international humanitarian law and international human rights law, as applicable, and the need to end all violations of international humanitarian law and all violations and abuses of human rights,

Reaffirming also the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>164</sup> the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action,<sup>165</sup> the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,<sup>166</sup> and the political declaration on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixty-fourth session,<sup>167</sup> and reaffirming its commitment to their full, effective and accelerated implementation,

Reaffirming further the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, stressing the importance of women’s equal participation and involvement in all

---

<sup>161</sup> See A/77/90-E/2022/66.

<sup>162</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1249, No. 20378.

<sup>163</sup> General Assembly resolution 48/104.

<sup>164</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15–26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>165</sup> Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4–15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution 1, annexes I and II.

<sup>166</sup> General Assembly resolution S-23/2, annex, and resolution S-23/3, annex.

<sup>167</sup> Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 2020, Supplement No. 7 (E/2020/27), chap. I, sect. A.

Resolutions

---

efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security, and welcoming in this regard the global call by international women leaders made on 1 July 2020,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, and its impact on women and girls,

Expressing grave concern also at the deaths of and injuries caused to civilians, including children, women, peaceful demonstrators and journalists, and emphasizing that civilian populations must be protected by all parties in accordance with international humanitarian law,

Strongly condemning, in this regard, the killing of the journalist Shireen Abu Akleh, and stressing the need to promptly ensure accountability,

Stressing the need for the protection of civil society actors to allow them to conduct their work freely and without fear of attacks and harassment from any party, and rejecting any attacks against civil society,

Stressing also the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to end impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations, protect civilians and promote peace,

Deeply concerned about violence against women and girls in all its different forms and manifestations worldwide, which is underrecognized and underreported, particularly at the community level, and its pervasiveness, which reflects discriminatory norms that reinforce stereotypes and gender inequality and the corresponding impunity and lack of accountability, reiterating the need to intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls in the public and private spheres in all regions of the world, and re-emphasizing that violence against women and girls violates, and impairs their full enjoyment of, all human rights,

Noting the accession by Palestine to several human rights treaties and the core humanitarian law conventions, as well as other international treaties, and stressing the need to implement fully obligations under those instruments that protect the rights of women and girls, including during and post-conflict,

Noting also the importance of giving high priority to the swift adoption of the Family Protection Law to ensure that women and girls are protected from gender-based violence, including domestic violence,

Underlining the limitations on Palestinian jurisdiction in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which undermine the ability of the Palestinian Government to protect Palestinian women and girls in certain areas,

Noting the importance of the agencies, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system in facilitating the advancement and empowerment of women in development in line with General Assembly resolution 75/233 of 21 December 2020,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women and girls with regard to the fulfilment of their rights, and their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development of their society;

2. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to immediately cease all measures contrary to international law, as well as discriminatory legislation, policies and actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people, and stresses that Palestinian civilians, particularly women and children, account for the vast majority of those adversely affected by the conflict;

3. Calls for urgent measures to ensure the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilian population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in accordance with the relevant provisions of international humanitarian law and as called for by the Security Council in its resolution 904 \(1994\) of 18 March 1994;

4. Calls upon the parties to comply fully with their obligations, including as States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, taking fully into consideration the concluding observations as well as the general recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women;

5. Acknowledges the contribution of national coalitions and committees in advancing women's rights, including those pertaining to resolution 1325 \(2000\), the Convention and combating violence against women;

Resolutions

---

6. Welcomes the adoption by the Palestinian Government of a national action plan for the implementation of resolution 1325 \(2000\) as well as of initiatives at the legislative, administrative and security levels to advance women's rights, notably in relation to family law and combating violence against women;

7. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families, including those living under Israeli occupation, and recognizes the importance of integrating gender considerations across humanitarian programming by seeking to ensure the provision of access to protection and the full range of medical, legal and livelihood and psychosocial services, including services for survivors of sexual and gender-based violence, without discrimination, and through ensuring that women and women's groups can participate equally and meaningfully and are supported in being leaders in humanitarian action;

8. Calls upon the international community, including the United Nations, in particular the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services, bearing in mind, inter alia, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development<sup>168</sup> and national priorities, in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families, in particular for addressing the humanitarian crisis and deteriorating socioeconomic and psychosocial conditions in the Gaza Strip;

9. Recalls the need for all parties to armed conflict to respect the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and to take into account the particular needs of women and girls, and stresses that the situation of the Palestine refugees, including women and girls, continues to be a matter of grave concern and that they continue to require assistance to meet basic health, education and living needs, pending a just resolution of the problem of Palestine refugees in conformity with General Assembly resolution 194 \(III\) of 11 December 1948;

10. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and urges in this regard the intensification and acceleration of renewed international and regional diplomatic efforts and support aimed at achieving, without delay, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative,<sup>169</sup> the Quartet road map<sup>170</sup> and an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967;

11. Stresses the importance of efforts to increase the role of Palestinian women in decision-making and of their full, equal and meaningful participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security, and encourages Member States and observer States as well as the United Nations system to ensure systematic attention to, recognition of and support for the crucial role of Palestinian women at all levels by, inter alia, promoting women's capacity, leadership, participation and engagement in political, economic and humanitarian decision-making and by improving the gender balance in senior civilian government positions and in security functions, while recognizing the need to protect women participating in public spaces from threats and reprisals;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report, and to include information on the gender-specific impact of the occupation and the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution in his report on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan to the Economic and Social Council at its 2023 session.

*34th plenary meeting
22 July 2022*

---

<sup>168</sup> General Assembly resolution 70/1.

<sup>169</sup> A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221.

<sup>170</sup> S/2003/529, annex.

Economic and Social CouncilDistr.
GENERALE/CN.6/1986/6
27 January 1986

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-first session
Vienna, 24 February-5 March 1986
Item 5 of the provisional agenda*

PARTICIPATION OF WOMEN IN PROMOTING INTERNATIONAL PEACE AND CO-OPERATIONInterim report of the Secretary-General on the preparation of a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories

1. In paragraph 2 of its resolution 1984/18 of 24 May 1984, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories and to submit it to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-second session.
2. In paragraph 3 of the resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to submit an interim report on the preparation of that comprehensive report to the Commission at its thirty-first session. The present report is submitted in response to that request.
3. It should be noted that, in paragraph 1 of the resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its thirty-first session an updated version of the report on the situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Arab territories submitted to the Commission at its thirtieth session. The updated report has been circulated as document E/CN.6/1986/7.

---

* E/CN.6/1986/1.

4. With respect to the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories, it is proposed that the first part of the report should deal with Palestinian women living within the occupied Arab territories. Since this subject is covered in the updated report mentioned in paragraph 3 above, that report, duly adapted and further updated, will constitute the first part of the comprehensive report.

5. The second part of the comprehensive report will contain information on the situation of Palestinian women living outside the occupied Arab territories. It is proposed that, in keeping with established procedure, this part of the report should focus on the situation of Palestinian women in the host countries as defined in United Nations practice, namely, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

6. In order to prepare the second part of the report, the Secretariat will seek from the Governments of Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, as well as from the Palestine Liberation Organization, relevant information on the situation of Palestinian women living in those host countries. Consultations with the appropriate bodies of the United Nations will also be undertaken for this purpose.

-----

UNITED NATIONS ECONOMIC
AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1988/8
11 November 1987

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-second session
Vienna, 14-23 March 1988
Item 4 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE
NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES
FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

The situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report has been prepared in response to Economic and Social Council resolutions 1984/18 and 1986/21 and Council decision 1987/121. The report describes the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories in the period from 15 October 1985 to 30 September 1987.

---

*E/CN.6/1988/1.

CONTENTS

	Paragraphs	Page
INTRODUCTION .....	1-13	3
Chapter
I. SITUATION OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN LIVING WITHIN THE OCCUPIED ARAB TERRITORIES .....	14-48	5
A. Background information .....	14	5
B. Political and social matters .....	15-40	5
C. Assistance to Palestinian women within the occupied Arab territories .....	41-47	12
II. SITUATION OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN LIVING OUTSIDE THE OCCUPIED ARAB TERRITORIES .....	48-74	14
A. Background information .....	48-49	14
B. Political and social matters .....	50-66	14
C. Assistance to Palestinian women outside the occupied Arab territories .....	67-74	21
III. CONCLUSIONS .....	75-78	22
Annexes
I. REPLY FROM THE ARAB REPUBLIC OF EGYPT .....		24
II. REPLY FROM THE SYRIAN ARAB REPUBLIC .....		26
III. REPLY FROM THE PALESTINE LIBERATION ORGANIZATION .....		27
Tables
1. West Bank and Gaza Strip: distribution of refugee pupils.....		7
2. UNRWA health facilities .....		9
3. Maternal and child health care services provided by UNRWA .....		10
4. Preventive services .....		10
5. Distribution of refugee pupils receiving education in UNRWA schools .....		15
6. Training places for males and females in UNRWA training centres ....		16
7. Female and male university scholarship holders, by faculty and country of study .....		17
8. Population eligible for health services .....		17
9. UNRWA health facilities .....		18
10. Maternal and child health-care services provided by UNRWA .....		19
11. Preventive services .....		19
Figure . Infant mortality rates, West Bank camp population, 1975-1986 ...		11

INTRODUCTION

1. This report has been prepared in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolutions 1984/18 of 24 May 1984 and 1986/21 of 23 May 1986.

2. In paragraph 2 of its resolution 1984/18, the Council requested the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories and to submit it to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-second session. In paragraph 3 of the same resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its thirty-first session, an interim report (E/CN.6/1986/6) on the preparation of the comprehensive report. In paragraph 1 of the same resolution, the Council also requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission, at its thirty-first session, an updated version (E/CN.6/1986/7) of the report on the situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Arab territories that had been submitted to the Commission at its thirtieth session. 1/

3. On the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women, at its thirty-first session, the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1986/21, requested the Secretary-General, in preparing the comprehensive report, to focus on the identification of the main humanitarian needs of Palestinian women.

4. The present comprehensive report has been prepared in accordance with the interim report of the Secretary-General (E/CN.6/1986/6). It is composed of two chapters and conclusions derived therefrom. In pursuance of paragraph 4 of the interim report, chapter one is a further update of the updated report of the Secretary-General (E/CN.6/1986/7) and deals with the situation of Palestinian women living within the occupied Arab territories.

5. In pursuance of paragraph 5 of the interim report, chapter two contains information on the situation of Palestinian women living outside the occupied Arab territories. In keeping with established procedure, this chapter focuses on the situation of Palestinian women living in the host countries as defined by United Nations practice, namely, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

6. The Secretary-General, in his Note Verbale of 26 February 1987, invited the Governments of Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, as the host countries, and the Government of Israel, as the occupying power, to provide the Secretary-General with appropriate information on the situation of Palestinian women living in the host countries and the occupied territories. The invitation to provide the information on the situation of Palestinian women by 1 August 1987, for the completion of the report, was reiterated by the Secretary-General in his second Note Verbale of 12 June 1987 to the same Governments. At the time of preparing the present report, replies had been received from the Governments of Egypt and the Syrian Arab Republic. These replies are attached to the present report.

7. In a letter of 19 February 1987, the Secretariat invited the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) to provide information required for the report. The invitation was reiterated by the Secretariat in its letter of 9 June 1987. The reply, which is annexed to the present report, and four publications reached the Secretariat on 15 October 1987. Owing to time constraints and the limitation of the length of the present report to 24 pages, the contents of these publications could not be incorporated in the present report.

8. The present report has, accordingly, been based exclusively on United Nations documents concerned with the situation of Palestinian people. Analyses of these documents, issued by numerous United Nations bodies and agencies during the period under review, namely from 15 October 1985 to 30 September 1987, provided little specific information concerning Palestinian women. For example, it was not possible to determine the total number of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories.

9. Only reports of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) contained data on assistance provided by UNRWA to Palestinian women. That data, however, did not cover those Palestinian women who were not registered with UNRWA and did not provide any information on assistance provided to Palestinian women by institutions other than UNRWA (i.e. Governments, charity organizations etc.). The present report, therefore, reflects mainly information from UNRWA on the situation of Palestinian women registered with it.

10. The difficult living conditions of the Palestinian people are, however, generally known. Some broad conclusions can be drawn from the overall picture of the situation of Palestinian women that emerges from literature on the subject.

11. Palestinian women, like the rest of the Palestinian people, have for four decades been subjected to a life of deprivation and hardship. They have been expelled from their homes and faced the separation of their families. Most Palestinian women today live either under occupation or in exile. Some have been living in daily terror or harassment, arrest and imprisonment. Those who have been separated from their male family members have often had to assume the function of head of household, which has compelled them to take decisions and sometimes to seek employment for which they have not been adequately prepared. For some, this has meant putting their children in nurseries or kindergartens, thereby foregoing some of their traditional duties. The disruption of family life has led in some cases to emotional disturbance and conflict within the family, which has added to the difficulties of adapting to life in the camps, under occupation or in the countries of exile.

12. Various charity organizations and women's associations have tried to help Palestinian women to improve their living conditions and to undertake their new responsibilities. Some of them have tried to promote, through their activities, the new roles of Palestinian women and to make them properly understood and socially accepted.

13. Palestinian women living in refugee camps have been confronted with special hardship and instability. The daily life in camps has meant for women a struggle against dust and mud, fetching water from distant stand-pipes, patching up walls and leaking roofs, washing the clothes of a family of eight or more, baking bread, coping with all the diseases that arise from leaking drains, filthy streets, poor quality of food and squalid housing conditions. Women in camps, therefore, have experienced not only difficult living conditions, but also insecurity of life inside the camp, deprivation of freedom (often because of being without passports) and lack of prospects. Under conditions of war or in attacks against Palestinian camps, women have been deprived of adequate protection and often have been among the killed or wounded. They have often had to flee from one camp to another and have suffered from lack of food, water and medical aid.

I. SITUATION OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN LIVING WITHIN THE OCCUPIED ARAB TERRITORIES

A. Background information

14. In 1985, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip had a total estimated population of 1,380,000. 2/ In 1987, according to the report of the Commissioner-General of UNRWA, there were 373,586 refugees registered with UNRWA in the West Bank, and in the Gaza Strip, 445,397 (A/42/13). 3/

B. Political and social matters

1. Political matters

15. Examples of oppressive practices by the military authorities in the occupied territories continued to be reported by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories (A/41/680) 14/ and the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (A/41/35). 5/ During the period under review, the Special Committee expressed its concern with regard to the "iron fist" policy, which had been revived in 1985 by the Israeli authorities, and the reinstatement of the emergency regulations of 1945. The iron fist policy caused an escalation of violence and resulted in an increasing number of administrative punishments, such as arrest and detention, including short-term detention without trial, as well as large-scale expulsion, deportation and collective punishment, including demolition and sealing of houses (A/41/680, paras. 41-47; annex III, paras. 11-25, 30-53 and 83; A/41/35, paras. 21-23). Prevailing tension in the occupied territories continued to affect the daily life of Palestinian people, men, women and children alike, leading to demonstrations, disturbances at schools and universities, and numerous incidents with Israeli settlers. In preparing the present report, only those examples that directly related to women were extracted.

16. In the period under review, the Special Committee heard extensive testimony on harsh treatment of suspects and detainees. The attention of the Committee was drawn to the severe conditions prevailing in Israeli investigation centres, detention camps and prisons, including one prison for women in Neve Tirtza. Most of the prisons were reported to be overcrowded; medical care inadequate, security prisoners were often put together with criminal prisoners and punitive action, such as prolonged solitary confinement, denial of visits, withholding of educational, cultural or information materials and deprivation of hot water, had been applied. There were alleged instances of torture and physical violence (A/41/35, para. 22; A/41/680, annex III, para. 356). These conditions had caused protest actions, including demonstrations and hunger strikes of Palestinian female prisoners at the Neve Tirtza prison (A/41/680, annex III, paras. 348 and 373).

17. On some occasions, protest actions by prisoners were supported by demonstrations and protests by their family members. For example, on 17 October 1985, dozens of women, mothers, sisters and wives of administrative detainees reportedly held a sit-in strike at the Red Cross offices at East Jerusalem, in protest against the alleged ill-treatment and harsh prison conditions of the detainees (A/41/680, annex III, para. 350).

18. The Special Committee drew attention to reports of torture and inhuman treatment of young detainees (A/41/680, annex III, paras. 352 and 357).

2. Social matters

(a) Employment and working conditions

19. When preparing the present report, no data or information were available on the demographic trends in the territories and on the employment of women. During the period under review, the overall situation was characterized by economic stagnation (a decline in private investment and a slow-down in public investment, an increase in taxes), expropriation and confiscation of Palestinian land, exploitation of land resources, insecurity and restrictions on freedom of movement (A/41/35, paras. 21-26). In 1984/86, fragmented internally and dependent externally, the economy of the territories began to be affected more than it had ever been since 1967 by the downturn of the economy in Israel and in other countries of the region. 6/ Agriculture continued to decline and the Palestinian industrial sector was unable to withstand Israeli competition. A low overall employment rate prevailed (affecting approximately one third of the working-age population) and to some extent this resulted from the very low employment rate of women, which was partly caused by local traditions and customs. 7/ Unemployment remained highest among graduates from higher educational institutions. 8/

20. During the period under review, there was no major change in the level of irregular employment in Israel of workers from the occupied territories, despite efforts by the Israeli authorities to combat this type of employment, which related to the generally difficult living conditions in the occupied territories and to family needs. 9/ Those employed unofficially included women and children working in seasonal agriculture and in small enterprises.

(b) Education

21. Information presented in this section relates exclusively to the education and training services UNRWA provided for women. 10/

22. In 1986/87, as far as UNRWA schools were concerned, enrolment in elementary and preparatory classes in the West Bank totalled 40,088 pupils (40,221 in 1985/86) and 86,906 in the Gaza Strip (86,928 in 1985/86). There were 98 schools in the West Bank served by 1,304 teachers (98 and 1,290 respectively in 1985/86) and 145 schools in the Gaza Strip served by 2,405 teachers (145 and 2,360 respectively in 1985/86) (A/41/13, table 5; A/42/13, table 5). Many schools of UNRWA and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip operated on a double shift. The double-shift system was generally recognized as detrimental to the children's development. Also, the much shorter school day made life more difficult for mothers, particularly in the many cases where children from the same family attended different shifts, but it was not possible to discontinue this system because of shortage of funds.

23. Detailed information on the distribution of refugee pupils receiving education in 1985/86 and 1986/87 is given in table 1 below.

24. The major problems faced during the period under review were posed by overcrowded classrooms and unsuitable school premises. Owing to a number of donations enabling the necessary repairs and new constructions to be carried out, however, some progress was noted in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (A/41/13, paras. 57, 59, 60; A/42/13, paras. 36-37). Some of these investments covered the construction of new schools for girls, such as Biddo Preparatory Girl's School and the girl's school at Rummaneh in the West Bank.

Table 1. West Bank and Gaza Strip: distribution of refugee pupils

Type of school	Number of pupils		Number of pupils
	1986		1987
	West Bank	Gaza Strip	West Bank	Gaza Strip
Number of pupils in elementary classes at UNRWA schools
Girls	15 354	29 870	15 310	29 844
Boys	13 243	32 979	13 154	32 688
Total	28 597	62 849	28 464	62 532
Number of pupils in preparatory classes at UNRWA schools
Girls	6 092	11 351	6 138	11 557
Boys	5 532	12 728	5 486	12 817
Total	11 624	24 079	11 624	24 374

Sources: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1985-30 June 1986 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-first Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/41/13)), table 5; and ibid., Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13), table 5).

25. During the period under review, the situation of pre-school, elementary, preparatory and secondary education remained basically unchanged from previous years (A/41/680, para. 65). Despite the teaching process being affected by numerous incidents and disturbances, specifically in the early months of 1987, and an increasing number of resignations or dismissals of teachers (A/41/680, paras. 60-64, 313-316), the UNRWA education programme continued to run at all levels without major interruption (A/41/13, para. 56; A/42/13, para. 36).

26. The vocational training centres attended by women functioned without major interruption. In the Ramallah Women's Training Centre in the West Bank, which was the only women's training centre run by UNRWA in the occupied territories in 1985/86, 288 female graduates completed post-preparatory and post-secondary levels of training in technical, commercial and para-medical fields. They qualified as laboratory technicians and in the fields of dressmaking, clothing production, home and institutional management and hairdressing. In 1986/87 the number of graduates was 328. Three hundred and fifty female graduates completed pre-service teacher training in 1985/86 and 300 in 1986/87 (A/41/13, table 6; A/42/13, table 6). In order to reduce the discrepancy in training opportunities given to men and women, UNRWA plans to extend the level of training for women and to introduce new courses.

27. During the period under review, the restrictions on academic freedom, textbooks, programmes and staff led to continuous dissatisfaction among professors and students. Numerous incidents occurred, including the arrest and transfer of male and female students and professors, and their expulsion from universities (A/41/680, annex III, paras. 297-312).

28. In the academic year 1986/87, out of 63 university scholarship holders in the West Bank there were 13 females: 3 in engineering, 1 in medical and paramedical and 9 in the arts and sciences (A/42/13, table 7).

(c) Health

29. This section concentrates on the health services UNRWA provided to women. UNRWA medical-care services were provided through a network of health centres/points, maternal and child health clinics, specialist and special care clinics, dental clinics, central and clinical laboratories, rehabilitation centres, maternity centres and beds reserved in private or voluntary hospitals under contractual agreements.

30. According to the annual reports for 1985 and 1986 of the Director of Health of UNRWA, 11/ the health conditions of the Palestinian population (men, women and children in the occupied territories) were closely linked to socio-economic conditions and remained unfavourable and basically unchanged. Inadequate sanitation, nutrition and water supply, insufficient access to medical facilities and the high cost of medical care in Israel continued to constitute the main health problems of Palestinian people (A/41/35, para. 27). Although they affect the population as a whole, health conditions have a greater significance for women, who bear and rear the children and look after the health and nutrition of the family. In 1985 and 1986, there was a higher percentage of adult women than of men in the occupied territories.

31. A certain amount of progress was noted during the period under review with regard to medical personnel, basic biochemical tests and dental care services, including the provision of dental services to schoolchildren, pregnant women and nursing mothers, and the construction of UNRWA health premises. Communicable diseases showed a decrease, except those linked to environmental sanitation (A/41/13, para. 71; A/42/13, para. 52). Medical supplies were, in general, satisfactory (A40/INF.DOC./5, annex, para. 74; A/42/13, para. 47). Although acute malnutrition among refugee children, nursing and pregnant women had declined since 1978, except in the Gaza Strip, chronic malnutrition and anaemia prevailed during the period under review (A/41/13, para. 88; A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 95). Deterioration of the mental well-being of the population continued, including mental disorders and problems of psychosocial development among children, who could not be properly treated by the existing services (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 39; A40/INF.DOC./5, paras. 102-103; A/41/13, para. 79). The improvements made in the health services were far from adequate to meet the needs of the growing Palestinian population and the demand for UNRWA medical care services (A/42/13, para. 48).

32. UNRWA continued to provide maternal and health services, pre-natal, natal, infant and child care at its health units, supported by specialist and hospital referral services. Maternal care provided by UNRWA clinics consisted of regular health supervision, nutritional support and treatment of anaemia throughout pregnancy and the nursing periods. In 1985/87 there were six maternity wards attached to the UNRWA health centres in the Gaza Strip and two in the West Bank (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 36; A40/INF.DOC./5, annex, para. 56; A/42/13, para. 50). To increase the coverage of the service through the expansion of community outreach programmes, a second mobile health team was established to service the six maternal and child health care sub-centres in Gaza (A/42/13, para. 53).

33. Details of the maternal, child health and preventive services provided by UNRWA are set out in tables 2, 3 and 4 below.

Table 2. UNRWA health facilities

Service	1985		1986
	West Bank	Gaza	West Bank	Gaza
Out-patient care
Number of health centres/points	32	9	32	9
Number of pre-natal clinics	23	9	25	16
Number of child health clinics	21	9 a/	24	16
In-patient care
A. Subsidized hospitals
Number of hospitals	5	0	5	1
Number of beds available:	225	0	227	20
General	88	0	88	20
Paediatric	39	0	41	0
Maternity	13	0	13	0
B. UNRWA hospitals
Number of hospitals	3	7	3	6
Number of beds available:	42	129	42	129
General	28	0	28	0
Paediatric	4	0	4	0
Maternity	6	59	10	59

Sources: Excerpted from World Health Organization, "Health conditions of the Arab population in the Arab territories, including Palestine" (A39/INF.DOC./2), appendix 3, part B, p. 24, and ibid. (A40/INF.DOC./15), appendix 3, part B, p. 27.

a/ Excluding six maternal child health sub-centres operating in Gaza.

Table 3. Maternal and child health-care services provided by UNRWA

Service	West Bank		Gaza
	1985	1986	1985	1986
Pregnant women registered	5 658	5 898	18 135	18 823
Deliveries attended	6 080	6 341	14 831	11 651
Children registered:
0-1 year	5 333	5 527	14 762	15 250
1-2 years	5 777	5 846	13 166	13 441
2-3 years	5 075	5 451	11 138	12 038

Sources: Excerpted from World Health Organization, "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine" (A39/INF.DOC./2), appendix 3, part C, p. 25, and ibid. (A40/INF.DOC./5), appendix 3, part C, p. 28.

Table 4. Preventive services
(As of 30 June 1987)

Service	West Bank	Gaza Strip
Maternal and child health care
Pregnant women (average monthly attendance)	2 009	5 420
Children below three years (average attendance) a/	18 594	35 039

Source: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1986-30 June 1987 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-First Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13)), table 9.

a/ Health was monitored monthly for the age group 0-1 year; bimonthly for the age group 1-2 years; and trimonthly for the age group 2-3 years.

34. Successful monitoring of the health of children, pregnant women and nursing mothers was continued during the period under review. In the West Bank camps, where infant mortality statistics have been closely monitored for over two decades, the infant mortality rate in 1986 declined to 27 per thousand compared with 84 per thousand ten years ago. To increase further the effectiveness of the health monitoring programme, a new maternal and child health-care intervention strategy was implemented in the West Bank (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 57; A40/INF.DOC./5, para. 91; A/42/13, para. 53).

35. The decrease in infant mortality rates in the West Bank is reflected in the figure below.

Infant mortality rates, West Bank camp population, 1975-1986

Source: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1986-30 June 1987 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-First Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13)), chart 3.

36. Family planning services continued to be provided, on request, in some health centres in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank (A/41/13, para. 77). In Gaza, the programme also included family-life education in the preparatory schools for girls of 12-15 years of age. Nurses took part in this programme by giving lessons and demonstrations in mother- and child-health care in the schools (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 54; A40/INF.DOC./5, para. 86; A/42/13, para. 54).

37. UNRWA provided preventive and curative oral health services, as well as nutrition and supplementary feeding services (A40/INF.DOC./5, paras. 66, 149 and 158; A39/INF.DOC./2, paras. 94 and 100). Two major improvements were introduced in the UNRWA programme of immunization: tetanus immunization of pregnant women and rubella immunization of 11- and 12- year old schoolgirls and of non-pregnant women of child-bearing age (A39/INF.DOC/2, annex; para. 55; A40/INF.DOC./5, annex, para. 89). To improve the general health status, health education of mothers and families was carried out by maternal and child health-care clinics (A40/INF.DOC./5, para. 87).

38. Nursing activities were central to the on-going health-care services of UNRWA. Nurses were directly involved in therapeutic, preventive, curative, and promotive care services; delivery, maternal and child health-care services, and nutrition and supplementary feeding services. They also provided supportive and supervisory services in other areas, namely, environmental health services, health education, epidemiology and control of communicable diseases, special care and rehabilitative services (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 70; A40/INF.DOC./5, paras. 116, 122 and 127; A/41/13, para. 81). UNRWA nurses also organized meetings with selected women from the camps, for the purpose of gaining their co-operation and assistance in providing education on health and family life to families in camps, as well as in promoting relevant health-care activities. The initial results of these meetings were encouraging (A/42/13, para. 56). In some of the UNRWA health centres, dayahs (traditional birth attendants) received training and were used for natal and post-natal care because of the inadequate number of fully qualified nursing staff. In many camps, dayahs performed home deliveries and were supervised by health-centre nursing staff, constituting an important link between the health services and the community services (A/41/13, para. 82; A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 71).

39. Qualified nurses were provided with post-basic education in midwifery or community health on a continuing basis. The upgrading of nursing staff continued to be a major goal of the nursing programme (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 72). In the period under review, one senior staff nurse from Gaza completed in December 1985 a 10-month training course in community health nursing at Cumberland College, Sydney, Australia (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 23) and another completed a similar 12-month diploma course in December 1986 (A40/INF.DOC./5, para. 40; A/41/13, para. 90). A senior staff nurse of the Rafah Health Centre, Gaza, who had been awarded a one-year scholarship to pursue a post-basic training course in public health nursing at the University of Cairo, completed it in November 1986 (A40/INF.DOC./5, para. 40).

40. With regard to environmental health, some developments were noted. The water augmentation schemes aimed at providing indoor water taps to refugee shelters and sewage schemes were carried out in some camps in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Refuse collection and removal facilities were also gradually improved. Chemical control of rats, mice and domestic flies was carried out selectively. The focus was on general cleanliness (A40/INF.DOC./5, paras. 143 and 145-147; A/42/13, paras. 57 and 59). Hygiene education programmes, covering the situation in homes, schools, shops, slaughterhouses and food storage, was expanded (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 80). Despite improvements in this programme during the period under review, a number of problems remained. These included the provision of an adequate indoor water supply, construction of sewage systems, mechanization of refuse disposal, renovation and replacement of dilapidated school latrines and augmenting the work-force of sanitation staff (A39/INF.DOC./2, para. 90).

C. Assistance to Palestinian women within the occupied Arab territories

41. During the period under review, United Nations bodies and specialized agencies continued to provide assistance to Palestinian people, including special programmes of assistance for Palestinian women and children in the occupied Arab territories (A/41/319-E/1986/72). 12/

42. UNRWA continued to provide both regular and emergency programmes of assistance to eligible refugees. Education services were provided in co-operation with UNESCO, and health services in co-operation with the World Health Organization (WHO). Health monitoring of children, pregnant women and nursing mothers was the major component of the UNRWA health programme. The relief programme concentrated mainly on providing assistance to the most needy groups, including widows and orphans. UNRWA also initiated special projects to improve environmental health conditions and school premises (A/41/319-E/1986/72, paras. 15, 18, 19 and 25-27).

43. Considerable progress was noted with respect to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) programme of co-operation in the West Bank and Gaza. The programme consisted of three elements: primary health care, pre-school stimulation and the promotion of child development centres. It aimed at promoting a cost-effective approach to the survival and development of Palestinian children and mothers through the prevention, early detection and treatment of childhood disabilities and through the development of innovative approaches to early child care. Within the programme, 28 village health workers in the Hebron District were trained in simple preventive, promotive and curative tasks relating to maternal and child health. Twenty-five kindergartens were renovated and 30 sets of basic kindergarten furniture provided. Every kindergarten in the West Bank and Gaza Strip was provided with an Arabic language teacher's manual. Three new child development centres were opened in Hebron, Jenin, and in Gaza (A/41/319-E/1986/72, paras. 36-38).

44. The International Labour Organisation (ILO) provided the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) with an expert in the vocational training of women to implement a UNDP project of assistance to Palestinian women's institutions, aimed at expanding vocational training opportunities offered by these institutions and by Palestinian community development centres. ILO also announced its intention to formulate, with UNDP, projects to provide assistance to Palestinian women in its area of competence, such as long-term facilities for vocational training at a higher level, promotion of vocational training courses in income-generating activities for women's organizations, and support to craft-production activities (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para 65).

45. The assistance of UNESCO to the Palestinian people concentrated mainly on the award of university fellowships and the provision of educational supplies and equipment.

46. WHO provided assistance to Palestinian people, and in particular women and children, in the areas of primary health care, environmental health, and the training and education of health personnel. Two centres were designated as WHO Collaborating Centres in Primary Health Care Research: the Ramallah Health Services Research Centre on the West Bank and the Gaza Health Services Research Centre. The Ramallah Centre placed special emphasis on the monitoring and evaluation of an expanded primary health care programme, the evaluation and supervision of the work of dayahs, and a review of infant and child mortality (A/41/319-E/1986/72, paras. 72-76).

47. Some development projects for improving the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied territories were elaborated at the Seminar on the Living Conditions of the Palestinian People in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, which was held at Vienna from 2 to 6 March 1987. 13/

II. SITUATION OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN LIVING OUTSIDE THE OCCUPIED ARAB TERRITORIES

A. Background information

48. On 30 June 1987, in Lebanon there were 278,609 refugees registered with UNRWA, in the Syrian Arab Republic 257,989, and in Jordan 845,542 (A/42/13, table 1).

49. At the time of preparing the present report, no information was available on the legal and political status of Palestinian women outside the occupied Arab territories and their situation regarding employment. The information on education and health below is based exclusively on UNRWA reports.

B. Political and social matters

1. Political matters

50. Special attention should be given to the situation in Lebanon and the critical situation of Palestinian refugees, including women, under the emergency conditions prevailing during the period under review (A/41/35, para. 18; A/42/13, paras. 19-34). Ongoing fighting and renewed attacks against Palestinians in the refugee camps of Rashidieh, Shatila and Burj el-Barajneh caused a number of casualties among the civilian population, who had inadequate protection. Some Palestinian camps were particularly affected by prohibition of entry or exit, frequent blockades of food and humanitarian aid, and the severing of water and electricity supplies. In some besieged camps (such as Rishidieh camp) only women and children were allowed out to bring some supplies to ensure the minimum of services. The lives of the women in the refugee camps, like those of the men, changed dramatically, because of hunger, lack of water, destruction of houses, lack of oil and gas, bombardments and extreme deterioration of the sanitary situation. In addition, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People expressed its grave concern at air raids carried out by the Israeli Air Force against Palestinian refugee camps near Sidon (A/42/35). 14/

51. In 1987, because of the difficulty of maintaining a distinction between Palestinian refugees affected directly by the fighting and other refugees whose living conditions were rapidly deteriorating, UNRWA emergency assistance was extended to all Palestinian refugees in Lebanon, including those not registered with UNRWA.

2. Social matters

(a) Education

52. In 1986/87, as far as UNRWA schools were concerned, enrolment in elementary and preparatory classes in Lebanon totalled 34,002 pupils (33,959 in 1985/86), 51,653 in the Syrian Arab Republic (51,914 in 1985/86) and 135,990 in Jordan (136,202 in 1985/86). There were 82 schools in Lebanon served by 1,199 teachers, 114 in the Syrian Arab Republic and 196 in Jordan with 1,539 and 3,702 teachers respectively.

53. Detailed information on the situation of refugee pupils receiving education in 1986/87 is given in table 5 below.

Table 5. Distribution of refugee pupils receiving education in UNRWA schools a/ (As of October 1986)

Field	Number of UNRWA schools	Number of teachers	Number of pupils in elementary classes b/			Number of pupils in preparatory classes b/			Total no. of refugee pupils
			Girls	Boys	Total	Girls	Boys	Total
Lebanon	82	1 199	11 449	12 032	23 481	5 125	5 396	10 521	34 002 c/
Syrian Arab Republic	114	1 539	16 992	17 901	34 893	7 942	8 818	16 760	51 653
Jordan	196	3 702	44 772	46 617	91 389	21 607	22 994	44 601	135 990

Source: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1986-30 June 1987 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13)), table 5.

a/ Excluding 102,637 refugee pupils attending elementary, preparatory and secondary government and private schools.

b/ Including non-eligible children attending UNRWA schools, who, in October 1986, numbered 42,619. Of these, 16,818 were in the Gaza Strip, where all refugee children have always been regarded in practice as eligible for education services.

c/ In October 1986, no enrolment figures were received for the Tyre area. This figure comprises the actual figures for the whole of Lebanon excluding Tyre and an estimate for the Tyre area.

54. Although in the period under review, progress was made in school construction in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, overcrowded classrooms and some unsuitable school premises continued to be a problem in UNRWA schools (A/42/13, paras. 36-37). Schools in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic operated normally throughout 1986/87. In Lebanon, the teaching process was seriously affected by the prevailing emergency situation, which led in some instances to an interruption of school services, restriction on movement making schools inaccessible, and occupation of schools by displaced refugees.

55. Although UNRWA continuously tried to provide the same education and training to Palestinian men and women, the discrepancy in vocational training opportunities for men and women prevailed. Detailed information on training places in UNRWA centres is provided in table 6 below.

Table 6. Training places for males and females in UNRWA training centres (Academic year 1986/87)

Type of training	Jordan				Lebanon		Syrian Arab Republic
	Amman Training Centre		Wadi Seer Training Centre		Siblin Training Centre a/		Damascus Vocational Training Centre
	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F
A. Vocational and technical education
1. Post-preparatory level b/	32	-	542	2	-	60	544	-
2. Post-secondary level c/	224	-	125	75	110	210	206	22
Total	256	-	667	77	110	270	750	22
B. Pre-service teacher training	-	-	-	-	110	190	-	-
Grand total	256	-	667	77	220	460	750	22

Source: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1986-30 June 1987 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13)), table 6.

a/ Centre was inoperative throughout 1986/87. Trainees shown above attended courses off the premises.

b/ Courses were offered to post-preparatory-level students in the mechanical, metal, electrical and building trades.

c/ Courses were offered to post-secondary-level students in the technical, commercial, electronics and paramedical fields.

56. Training at UNRWA centres in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic proceeded normally throughout 1986/87; in Lebanon, however, the training process was disrupted by the hostilities.

57. Some students received university scholarships to study abroad. More information on the distribution of these scholarships in 1986/87 is given in table 7 below.

Table 7. Female and male university scholarship holders, by faculty and country of study (Academic year 1986/87)

Faculty	Egypt		Jordan		Lebanon		Syrian Arab Republic		Other countries a/
	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M
Engineering	-	2	7	89	1	12	4	8	-	4
Medical and paramedical	-	-	15	31	1	4	46	61	2	5
Arts and sciences	-	1	9	3	6	9	-	-	1	1
Total	-	3	31	123	8	25	50	69	3	10

Source: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1986-30 June 1987 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13)), table 7.

a/ Other countries were: Algeria (one male student), Democratic Yemen (one male student), Iraq (three male and two female students), Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (one male and one female student) and Turkey (four male students).

(b) Health

58. During the period under review, UNRWA continued to provide health services to the eligible refugee population outside the occupied Arab territories. Table 8 below provides exact information on the Palestinian population eligible for health services.

Table 8. Population eligible for health services

Country	As of 30 June 1985	As of 30 June 1986
Jordan	728 807	750 560
Lebanon	229 096	235 625
Syrian Arab Republic	219 636	225 261

Sources: Excerpted from World Health Organization, "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine" (A39/INF.DOC./2), appendix 1, part A, p. 20; and ibid. (A40/INF.DOC./5), appendix 1, part A, p. 23.

59. In the period under review, the major tendencies characterizing health services and the health status of the Palestinian refugee population corresponded with those in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. A certain degree of progress was noted with regard to health infrastructure and equipment in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic.

60. Maternal and child health-care services continued to be the important area of the health activities of UNRWA. Tables 9, 10 and 11 below provide detailed information.

Table 9. UNRWA health facilities a/

Service	1985			1986
	Jordan	Lebanon	Syrian Arab Republic	Jordan	Lebanon	Syrian Arab Republic
Out-patient care
Number of health centres/points	16	20	21	16	20	21
Number of pre-natal clinics		14	19	21	15	20
21
Number of child health clinics	14	19	21	15	17	21
In-patient care a/
Subsidized hospitals
Number of hospitals	2	16	5	2	20	5
Number of beds available:	38	322	48	38	362	48
General	25	186	48	25	208	48
Paediatric	13	0	0	13	0	0
Maternity	0	0	0	0	0	0

Sources: Excerpted from World Health Organization, "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine" (A39/INF.DOC./2), appendix 3, part B, p. 24; and ibid. (A40/INF.DOC./5), appendix 3, part B, p. 27.

a/ UNRWA does not operate hospitals in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

Table 10. Maternal and child health-care services provided by UNRWA

Service	1985			1986
	Jordan	Lebanon	Syrian Arab Republic	Jordan	Lebanon	Syrian Arab Republic
Pregnant women registered	10 039	3 437	4 015	10 024	3 550	4 215
Deliveries attended	9 888	3 321	3 598	11 229	3 035	3 809
Children registered:
0-1 year	12 834	5 333	4 864	13 331	4 222	5 008
1-2 years	12 529	3 037	5 401	12 530	4 067	5 704
2-3 years	12 262	2 977	4 528	13 028	3 137	5 132

Sources: Excerpted from World Health Organization, "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine" (A39/INF.DOC./2), appendix 3, part C, p. 25, and ibid. (A40/INF.DOC./5), appendix 3, part C, p. 28.

Table 11. Preventive services
(As of 30 June 1986)

	Lebanon	Syrian Arab Republic	Jordan
Maternal and child health care
Pregnant women (average monthly attendance)	847	1 275	3 250
Children aged below three years (average attendance) a/	8 590	13 840	31 546

Sources: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1985-30 June 1986 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-first Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/41/13)), annex I, table 9.

a/ Health was monitored monthly for the age group 0-1 year, bimonthly for the age group 1-2 years and trimonthly for the age group 2-3 years.

61. In collaboration with family planning associations, family planning services continued to be provided, upon request, in some health centres in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. In the Syrian Arab Republic, the family planning services were provided in maternal and child health-care clinics in the Damascus area. In Jordan, the family planning services consisted of advisory services provided by health centre staff with designated family planning clinics (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 54). Training of staff was completed to expand these services to the additional health centres in the Syrian Arab Republic (A/41/13, para. 77).

62. Nursing activities were central to the ongoing health-care services of UNRWA. During the period under review, therefore, various forms of training were offered to qualified nurses. Scholarships for nursing education were donated by voluntary and non-governmental agencies. In 1985/86, in Jordan, a 27-month basic midwifery course was offered at the College of Nursing. Eighteen practical nurses from Jordan received on-the-job training in community nursing at Amman New Camp, Zarqa and Irbid camps in December 1986 (A39/INF.DOC./2, paras. 11 and 19). A community nursing programme was implemented in all camps in Jordan to enhance community awareness and involvement. Nurses assisted by carrying out tasks, which went beyond the traditional ones, such as collection of family and community data, identification of health or health-related problems, and assistance in solving or reducing these problems with the family or other staff (A40/INF.DOC./5, paras. 131-134). A senior staff nurse from the Syrian Arab Republic was offered a scholarship to pursue a one-year diploma course in community health nursing at Cumberland College, Sydney, Australia and completed it in December 1986. All qualified nurses at Damascus attended a six-week training course in community nursing at the rate of one full-day session per week, which started in October 1986. One UNRWA-employed dayah at North Shouneh Health Point attended a two-week refresher course at the Government Maternal and Child Health Clinic, Irbid, in October 1985. In Lebanon, a senior practical nurse was awarded a scholarship to pursue a one-year course in public health nursing at the University of Cairo, which she completed in 1986 (A/41/13, paras. 90-91 and A40/INF.DOC./5, annex, chap. II, para. 40).

63. In other areas of UNRWA activities, developments can be noted. In the period under review, immunization of pregnant women with tetanus toxoid, which was carried out in Lebanon, was extended to other fields of operation (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 53); the nutrition survey for Jordan was concluded with results similar to those for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 95); in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic more teachers were enrolled in an in-service training programme on health education and oral health (A/41/13, para. 78).

64. In view of the generally deteriorating mental and sociological conditions of the Palestinian population, and children in particular, a pilot project to assess the mental health of refugee children was initiated in refugee camps in Jordan (A/41/13, para. 79; A/42/13, para. 55). Also in Jordan, two community projects to assist mentally retarded and physically disabled children were started (A/40/13, para. 105). As in previous years, a summer camp was organized jointly by UNRWA and the Young Men's Christian Association for refugee orphans at the UNRWA training centre at Amman (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 40).

65. During the period under review, the situation in Lebanon adversely affected the delivery of UNRWA health services, particularly in the refugee camps. Compared to previous years, the utilization of UNRWA medical services decreased, owing to the security situation and limited accessibility of refugees to UNRWA services (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 29; A/42/13, para. 48). Also, the implementation of nutritional support programmes and supplementary feeding was frequently interrupted in Lebanon because of continuous fighting (A40/INF.DOC./5, annex, para. 155). Feeding centres became inaccessible for certain periods of time (A39/INF.DOC./2, annex, para. 97) and hospitals and clinics in the besieged camps were shelled and seriously damaged.

66. With regard to environmental health, in a number of camps in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, owing to government, municipal and UNRWA efforts, refugee shelters were provided with indoor water taps, and water and sewage schemes were completed. Because of the ongoing hostilities, there was little progress in improving sanitary conditions in Lebanon (A/42/13, para. 60).

C. Assistance to Palestinian women outside the occupied Arab territories

67. During the period under review, United Nations organizations continued to provide assistance to the Palestinian people, including special assistance to women and children in the countries outside the occupied Arab territories.

68. UNRWA continued to provide regular assistance to eligible refugees, in all areas of its activities. It also extended emergency relief services to all refugees in Lebanon (A/41/319-E/1986/72, paras. 16 and 20).

69. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) implemented its programmes aimed at rehabilitation and provision of assistance to Palestinian mothers and children, despite deteriorating conditions in Lebanon. The programmes were supported by non-governmental organizations and Palestinian philanthropic societies. With regard to women's income-generating activities, UNICEF reorganized an embroidery workshop for women. Some progress was also made in pre-primary education, to upgrade the quality of kindergarten teachers (A/41/319-E/1986/72, paras. 28 and 31). In Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, UNICEF continued to strengthen the expanded UNRWA programme of immunization activities and maternal and child health-care services, and assisted in financing the training of nurses and dayahs (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 33). In Jordan, UNICEF significantly supported the training of dayahs and midwives and the home-visiting programme by nurses and paramedical personnel (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 34).

70. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) undertook surveys on the economic and social conditions of Palestinian people in refugee camps in the Syrian Arab Republic in January 1986.

71. ILO participated in the formulation of two projects in the fields of labour and training to be implemented by UNDP. One of the projects, concerning the promotion of vocational and technical education, should expand the existing vocational training facilities offered by UNRWA centres, government services or private institutions (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 64). An ILO expert in the vocational training of women was made available to UNDP to implement a project of assistance to Palestinian women's institutions (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 65).

72. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued its assistance in the field of training. Palestinian families of the Gilline and Ramadan refugee camps in the Syrian Arab Republic were instructed in how to improve the cultivation and yield of crops and livestock through the provision of facilities, knowledge, skills, material inputs and technical leadership for demonstration and training work (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 70).

73. UNESCO continued its assistance in education, including the provision of fellowships and educational supplies and equipment (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 71).

74. In Jordan, WHO sponsored a Workshop on Community Needs for Health Care Delivery. Fifteen nurses from UNRWA and six from the Ministry of Health participated (A/41/319-E/1986/72, para. 74).

III. CONCLUSIONS

75. The difficult living conditions of Palestinian women described in the present report indicate the need for special attention and assistance, particularly for those women living under occupation and in the camps. At present, the assistance provided to the Palestinian people by the United Nations system does not focus adequately on the needs of women. In order to provide Palestinian women with more appropriate help in specific areas, their needs should be ascertained, if possible through special missions. Programmes of assistance should be designed to go beyond the mere delivery of services and take into consideration also ways and means and the cultural context of the delivery. It is necessary to analyse thoroughly the obstacles and barriers that might prevent Palestinian women from having full access to existing services.

76. With regard to the specific needs of Palestinian women linked to their gender, the hypothesis can be made that they are related to the new roles that Palestinian women now have to perform. These roles include the maintenance of national and cultural traditions in order to perpetuate the values of the Palestinian people. Also the roles imply that women should go out of their homes to study, to work, to seek medical or legal help, and to take part in social, economic and political activities.

77. These circumstances create many new needs and demands, which should also be addressed, namely, respect for women's dignity, self-determination and choices; support for the development of women's talents; enhancement of their aspirations; encouragement for their participation in social, political and economic life; and provision of help to women heads of households.

78. The situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories calls for assistance aimed at meeting their specific needs in all forms and at all levels by the relevant parts of the United Nations system, whenever possible through existing projects, namely as listed in document A/42/183-E/1987/53, annex, chapter III. As noted above, the present report has been based on United Nations sources, which, unfortunately, do not provide much specific information on women. For the elaboration of programmes of assistance that would focus on the specific needs of women, more data would be necessary.

Notes

1/ "The situation of women and children living in the occupied Arab territories and other occupied territories: Report of the Secretary-General" (A/CONF.116/6, 30 October 1984).

2/ International Labour Office, Report of the Director-General: Appendices, International Labour Conference, 73rd session, 1987 (Geneva), appendix III, "Report of the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories", para. 13.

3/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13), table 1.

4/ "Report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories, Note by the Secretary-General" (A/41/680, 20 October 1986), annex III, paras. 54-59.

5/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-first Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/41/35).

6/ United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, "Recent economic developments in the occupied Palestinian territories: A review of the work completed by the Special Economic Unit (Palestinian People)" (TD/B/1102, 30 June 1986); "Israeli economic practices in the occupied Palestinian and other Arab territories: Note by the Secretary-General" (A/42/341-E/1987/78, 16 June 1987), paras. 2-6.

7/ Report of the Director-General ..., paras. 13-15.

8/ Ibid., para. 19.

9/ Ibid., paras. 22-24; "Recent economic developments in the occupied Palestinian territories ...".

10/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-first Session Supplement No. 13 (A/41/13); and ibid., Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13).

11/ World Health Organization, "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine" (A39/INF.DOC./2, 7 May 1986); and ibid. (A40/INF.DOC./5, 8 May 1987).

12/ See "Assistance to the Palestinian people: Report of the Secretary-General" (A/41/319-E/1986/72).

13/ "Living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territories: Report of the Secretary-General" (A/42/183-E/1987/53), annex, chap. III.

14/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/42/35), paras. 35 and 38.

Annex I

REPLY FROM THE ARAB REPUBLIC OF EGYPT

Embassy of the Arab Republic of Egypt

Vienna
29/UN

The Permanent Mission of the Arab Republic of Egypt to the United Nations Office at Vienna presents its compliments to the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs and with reference to the Secretary-General's note of 26 February 1987 regarding the information available on the status of the Palestinian women living in Egypt, has the honour to enclose herewith the required information.

The Permanent Mission of the Arab Republic of Egypt to the United Nations Office at Vienna avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

Enclosure

Vienna, 6 May 1987

To the Centre for Social Development
and Humanitarian Affairs
United Nations Office at Vienna
Vienna

Seal of the Embassy

Memorandum

- Between 15,000 and 20,000 Palestinian women reside in the Arab Republic of Egypt. About 115 of them are employed by the public sector and the Government. A small percentage, about a thousand, are engaged in commercial activities (part ownership and management of supermarkets, management and operation of weaving factories). The majority, that is to say about 7,000 Palestinian women, are housewives or unemployed.
- Palestinian women are strongly inclined towards marriage to members of the Palestinian community resident in the country, although a weakening of this tradition has been noticed recently, as the women seek family stability through marriage to Egyptians, in order to obtain residence permits and to acquire Egyptian nationality. About 1,357 Palestinian women are married to Egyptians.
- Palestinian women resident in the country may be divided into three categories of standard of living:
  - First category: Below average; about 65 per cent of the total number, residing in the provinces;
  - Second category: Average; about 25 per cent of the total. This group is composed of the wives and daughters of PLO personnel in the country and abroad;
  - Third category: Above average and superior. This group consists of the wives and daughters of Palestinian capitalists in the country.
- There are about 8,000 female Palestinians enrolled at the various levels of education (schools, universities, institutions of higher learning).
- Problems faced by Palestinian women resident in the country are mainly the lack of job opportunities and the high cost of higher education at university level. The latter is particularly relevant where their parents are employed by the public sector or the Government.

Annex II

REPLY FROM THE SYRIAN ARAB REPUBLIC

Permanent Mission of the Syrian Arab Republic to the United Nations
820 Second Ave., 10th Floor, New York, N.Y. 10017
Tel: (212) 661-1313

SO/SW - 137

The Permanent Mission of the Syrian Arab Republic to the United Nations presents its compliments to the Secretariat of the United Nations and with reference to His Excellency's note no. SD 3012/22 dated 12 June 1987 has the honour to transmit herewith information on the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied Arab territories in preparation of a comprehensive report by the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-second session in 1988.

The Permanent Mission of the Syrian Arab Republic to the United Nations avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Secretariat of the United Nations the assurances of its highest consideration.

New York, 9 October 1987

Signed

Secretariat of the United Nations
United Nations
New York

Annex III

REPLY FROM THE PALESTINE LIBERATION ORGANIZATION

Palästinensische
Befreiungsorganisation
Vertretung Wien
Wambachergasse 10
A-1130 Wien

Nr. AK/UN/10
Datum: 15 September 1987

Mrs. Chafika Sellami-Meslem
Director
Branch for the Advancement of Women
Centre for Social Development
and Humanitarian Affairs
Vienna International Centre
P.O. Box 500
A-1400 Vienna

Madam,

I have the honour to refer to your letter of the 9th of June 1987 concerning information about the situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the occupied territories.

I have to apologize for the late answer due to communication difficulties with the concerned department within the Palestine Liberation Organization. In the meantime I refer to the following studies and research material which I hope will be of use for your report:

"Women in the Middle East"
Published by Khamsin - Z - Books 1987

This book contains two informative studies with the following subtitles:
- "Palestinian Women and the National Liberation Movement" by Hamida Kazi
- "A Palestinian Woman in Prison" by Laila Al-Hamdani

"Women in Emergency Situations: Palestinian Women under Occupation" by the Association of Women Committees for Social Work; Jerusalem, Occupied Territories, 1985

"The Women's Role in the Palestine National Struggle" Published by the P.L.O., Department of Information and National Guidance

"Fighting on Two Fronts: Conversations with Palestinian Women" Soraya Antonius

"..... ein befreites Leben"
A manuscript prepared by Barbara Debus and Maria Spieker

Please accept the assurance of my highest consideration.

Daoud Barakat
Sd/-
Permanent Observer of the PLO to the United Nations (Vienna)

UNITED NATIONS
ECONOMIC
AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1988/8/Corr.1
25 January 1988

ENGLISH ONLY

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-second session
Vienna, 14-23 March 1988
Item 4 of the provisional agenda

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE
NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES
FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

The situation of Palestinian women living within and outside the
occupied Arab territories

Report of the Secretary-General

Corrigendum

Page 16

Replace table 6 by the table appearing overleaf.

Table 6. Training places for males and females in UNRWA training centres
(Academic year 1986/87)

Type of training	Jordan				Lebanon		Syrian Arab Republic
	Amman Training Centre		Wadi Seer Training Centre		Siblin Training Centre a/		Damascus Vocational Training Centre
	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F
A. Vocational and technical education
1. Post-preparatory level b/	-	60	544	-	32	-	542	2
2. Post-secondary level c/	110	210	206	22	224	-	125	75
Total	110	270	750	22	256	-	667	77
B. Pre-service teacher training	110	190	-	-	-	-	-	-
Grand total	220	460	750	22	256	-	667	77

Source: Excerpted from Report of the Commissioner General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1986-30 June 1987 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/42/13)), table 6.

a/ Centre was inoperative throughout 1986/87. Trainees shown above attended courses off the premises.

b/ Courses were offered to post-preparatory-level students in the mechanical, metal, electrical and building trades.

c/ Courses were offered to post-secondary-level students in the technical, commercial, electronics and paramedical fields.

NATIONS UNIES

CONSEIL
ECONOMIQUE
ET SOCIAL

Distr. GENERALE

E/CN.6/1989/4
17 février 1989

FRANCAIS
Original : ANGLAIS

COMMISSION DE LA CONDITION DE LA FEMME

Trente-troisième session
Vienne, 29 mars-7 avril 1989

Point 4 de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

SUIVI DE LA MISE EN OEUVRE DES STRATEGIES PROSPECTIVES D'ACTION
DE NAIROBI POUR LA PROMOTION DE LA FEMME

La situation des femmes palestiniennes

Rapport du Secrétaire général

RESUME

Le présent rapport a été établi pour donner suite à la résolution 1988/25 et à la décision 1988/23 du Conseil économique et social. Il décrit la situation des femmes palestiniennes vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires palestiniens occupés durant la période du 15 octobre 1987 au 1er novembre 1988.

* E/CN.6/1989/1.

TABLE DES MATIERES

	Paragrapbes	Page
INTRODUCTION	1 - 5	3
I. SITUATION DES FEMMES ET DES ENFANTS PALESTINIENS VIVANT DANS LES TERRITOIRES PALESTINIENS OCCUPES	6 - 43	4
A. Renseignements d'ordre général	6 - 7	4
B. Situation politique	8 - 21	7
C. Situation économique	22 - 24	10
D. Conditions de vie	25 - 27	11
E. Questions sociales	28 - 36	12
F. Assistance au peuple palestinien dans les territoires occupés	37 - 43	15
II. LA SITUATION DES FEMMES PALESTINIENNES VIVANT HORS DES TERRITOIRES ARABES OCCUPES	44 - 56	16
A. Renseignement d'ordre général	44	16
B. Questions politiques	45	16
C. Questions sociales	46 - 50	17
D. Services de santé	51 - 56	19

Tableaux

1. Répartition des réfugiés palestiniens immatriculés à la date du 30 juin 1988	4
2. Répartition par groupe d'âge des femmes palestiniennes vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés	5
3. Répartition par sexe des chefs de familles palestiniennes vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés	6
4. Age moyen, par sexe, des Palestiniens vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés	6
5. Personnes occupées - ventilation par profession et par sexe en 1986	11
6. Eléments de confort dans les logements pour divers types d'habitat (1985)	12
7. Rive occidentale et bande de Gaza : ventilation par sexe des élèves réfugiés fréquentant les écoles de l'UNRWA en 1987	13
8. Répartition des élèves réfugiés scolarisés dans les écoles de l'UNRWA (octobre 1987)	18

INTRODUCTION

1. Le présent rapport a été établi pour donner suite à la résolution 1988/25 du Conseil économique et social dans laquelle le Conseil priait le Secrétaire général de présenter à la Commission de la condition de la femme, à sa trente-troisième session, un rapport exhaustif sur la situation des femmes et des enfants palestiniens à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires palestiniens occupés. Quand cette résolution a été adoptée, le Secrétaire général a présenté un état relatif aux incidences de celle-ci sur le budget-programme (E/1988/15/Add.1, annexe IV), en indiquant que le nouveau rapport n'aborderait que les faits nouveaux intervenus depuis le 15 octobre 1987. Le présent rapport est une mise à jour du rapport précédent (E/CN.6/1988/8 et Corr.1) et traite de la situation des femmes et des enfants palestiniens vivant à l'intérieur des territoires palestiniens occupés, et en dehors de ceux-ci dans les pays hôtes considérés comme tels par l'ONU, c'est-à-dire l'Egypte, la Jordanie, le Liban et la République arabe syrienne.

2. Dans sa résolution 1988/25, le Conseil a aussi prié le Secrétaire général, à titre de mesure d'urgence, d'envoyer une mission composée d'experts de la condition de la femme pour enquêter sur la situation des femmes et des enfants palestiniens, eu égard aux faits tragiques récents qui se sont produits dans les territoires palestiniens occupés. Intervenant devant le Conseil économique et social le 26 mai 1988 pour expliquer la position de son gouvernement avant le vote sur le projet de résolution IX relatif à la situation des femmes palestiniennes figurant dans le rapport de la Deuxième Commission sur le point 11 de l'ordre du jour relatif à la promotion de la femme, le représentant d'Israël a déclaré que son pays estimait que les fonds des Nations Unies devraient être utilisés à des fins plus utiles et plus judicieuses que l'organisation d'une commission d'enquête, avec laquelle Israël de toute manière ne coopérerait pas. A l'occasion de plusieurs démarches effectuées ultérieurement par le Cabinet du Secrétaire général, Israël a maintenu sa position et empêché le Secrétaire général d'envoyer la mission d'enquête demandée. Par la suite, lors de l'examen par la Cinquième Commission des incidences sur le budget-programme de la résolution 1988/25, le représentant d'Israël a déclaré que son pays approuvait l'assistance prêtée aux Palestiniens par l'intermédiaire du Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement (PNUD), mais qu'il ne coopérerait pas aux travaux des missions ni à la réalisation des études décidées par d'autres organes tels que le Conseil économique et social. C'est pourquoi les autorités israéliennes ne recevraient pas les cinq experts et fonctionnaires dont il est question dans la résolution 1988/25. (A/C.5/43/SR.27, par. 20.)

3. Le présent rapport a donc été établi conformément au paragraphe 6 de l'état relatif aux incidences sur le budget-programme, qui est ainsi libellé :

"Le rapport de cette mission, si elle a lieu, formerait l'essentiel du rapport du Secrétaire général sur la situation des femmes et des enfants palestiniens dans les territoires occupés. En ce qui concerne la situation des femmes palestiniennes vivant en dehors des territoires occupés, on obtiendrait les informations nécessaires en s'adressant aux gouvernements concernés et en utilisant les sources de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, comme on l'a fait pour le document publié sous la cote E/CN.6/1988/8. Si la mission d'enquête n'a pas lieu, l'analyse de la situation des femmes et des enfants palestiniens vivant dans les territoires occupés serait faite sur la base des informations figurant déjà dans d'autres rapports de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, avec le concours des autres services compétents de l'Organisation."
(E/1988/15/Add.1, annexe IV, par. 6.)

L'analyse de ces rapports n'a pas apporté beaucoup d'informations pertinentes. Un certain nombre de rapports exhaustifs ont été établis, mais seuls ceux de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA), de l'Organisation mondiale de la santé (OMS) et du Comité spécial chargé d'enquêter sur les pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme de la population des territoires occupés ont fourni quelques renseignements concernant les femmes. Le présent rapport fait donc largement appel à ces sources officielles et le délai et les moyens impartis pour sa rédaction n'ont pas permis de rechercher des sources d'information supplémentaires.

4. Le Secrétaire général, dans sa note verbale du 29 juin 1988, a invité l'Égypte, la Jordanie, le Liban et la République arabe syrienne, en leur qualité de pays hôtes, et Israël, en tant que puissance occupante, à communiquer au Secrétaire général pour le 1er octobre 1988 des informations sur la situation des femmes et des enfants palestiniens vivant dans les pays hôtes et les territoires occupés. Aucune réponse n'avait été reçue au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport.

5. Par une lettre du 20 juin 1988, le Secrétariat a invité l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine (OLP) à communiquer les informations nécessaires pour le rapport. Il a été tenu compte de sa réponse pour l'établissement du présent document. Le présent rapport utilise également les données relatives aux territoires occupés publiées par Israël dans le Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1987.

I. SITUATION DES FEMMES ET DES ENFANTS PALESTINIENS VIVANT DANS LES TERRITOIRES PALESTINIENS OCCUPES

A. Renseignements d'ordre général

6. A la date du 30 juin 1988, le nombre total des réfugiés palestiniens immatriculés de la Rive occidentale et de la bande de Gaza était de 844 708 (voir tableau 1). Environ 40 % des réfugiés immatriculés vivent dans des camps. Suivant des estimations, les familles se composent en moyenne de six personnes, la proportion des hommes par rapport aux femmes est de 51/49, et le taux de croissance annuel de cette population immatriculée par l'UNRWA est de 2,5 % 1/.

Tableau 1. Répartition des réfugiés palestiniens immatriculés à la date du 30 juin 1988

Zone d'activité	Réfugiés immatriculés	Nombre de camps	Nombre total des réfugiés vivant dans les camps a /	Pourcentage des réfugiés immatriculés vivant dans les camps	Réfugiés immatriculés vivant en dehors des camps	Pourcentage des réfugiés immatriculés ne vivant pas dans les camps
Rive occidentale	385 634	20	100 499	26,1	285 135	73,9
Bande de Gaza	459 074	8	253 008	55,1	206 066	44,9
Total	844 708	28	353 507	41,85	491 201	58,15

Source : Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), tableau 2.

a/ On estime que 52 000 autres personnes, qui ne sont pas immatriculées comme réfugiés, vivent également dans les camps. Environ 37 000 d'entre elles ont été déplacées à la suite des hostilités de juin 1967.

Tableau 2. Répartition par groupe d'âge des femmes palestiniennes vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés

Age	Rive occidentale		Bande de Gaza		Jordanie		Liban		République arabe syrienne		Pourcentage	Total
	Pourcentage	Total	Pourcentage	Total	Pourcentage	Total	Pourcentage	Total	Pourcentage	Total
0-5	47,7	36 213	47,8	54 536	48,5	75 138	48,7	34 611	48,9	36 652	48,3	237 15
6-15	48,0	82 201	48,2	119 467	48,4	197 384	48,5	63 553	48,9	61 078	48,4	523 68
16-60	48,0	237 747	55,8	259 461	47,5	535 335	48,4	168 041	49,0	152 150	48,1	1 352 73
Plus de 60	55,4	37 084	48,8	31 269	54,4	78 265	54,6	26 224	55,0	19 587	54,9	192 42
Total	48,8	393 245	48,8	464 733	48,4	886 122	49,0	292 429	49,4	269 467	48,8	2 305 96

Source : Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-orient, 30 janvier 1989.

7. Sur la Rive occidentale, 37 % des chefs de familles de réfugiés palestiniens immatriculés par l'UNRWA sont des femmes, et ce pourcentage est de 18 % dans la bande de Gaza. Ces chiffres sont à comparer avec un pourcentage moyen de 20 % au Liban, en République arabe syrienne et en Jordanie. La proportion des hommes est légèrement supérieure à celle des femmes pour tous les groupes d'âge jusqu'à 60 ans. Au-dessus de cet âge, les femmes sont plus nombreuses que les hommes. La répartition par groupe d'âge des femmes palestiniennes immatriculées vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés est indiquée au tableau 2. On trouvera dans le tableau 3 la répartition par sexe des chefs de familles et dans le tableau 4, l'âge moyen des réfugiés de sexe masculin et féminin.

Tableau 3. Répartition par sexe des chefs de familles palestiniennes vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés

Sexe	Rive occidentale	Bande de Gaza	Jordanie	Liban	République arabe syrienne	Total
Hommes	56 250	78 968	98 178	51 927	43 395	328 718
Femmes	32 467	17 220	22 409	14 606	12 771	99 473
Total	88 717	96 188	120 587	66 533	56 166	428 191
Pourcentage des chefs de famille de sexe féminin	36,6	17,9	18,6	21,95	22,74	23,2

Source : Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient.

Tableau 4. Age moyen, par sexe, des Palestiniens vivant à l'intérieur et en dehors des territoires occupés

Sexe	Rive occidentale	Bande de Gaza	Jordanie	Liban	République arabe syrienne	Total
Hommes	28,9	25,5	28,4	27,3	25,9	27,5
Femmes	30,4	26,9	29,3	28,4	26,9	28,6
Total	29,6	26,2	28,8	27,9	26,4	28,0

Source : Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient.

B. Situation politique

8. La situation des femmes palestiniennes au cours de l'année écoulée a été profondément affectée par les événements liés à l'Intifada, ou soulèvement, qui a commencé en décembre 1987.

9. Suivant le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'enquêter sur les pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme de la population des territoires occupés (A/43/694), la violence et la répression dans les territoires occupés ont atteint un niveau sans précédent depuis le déclenchement de l'Intifada. Ce soulèvement a été marqué par d'importantes pertes de vies humaines résultant de l'utilisation d'armes à feu, de coups portés aux victimes ou de l'inhalation de gaz. Le nombre des morts ne peut être qu'estimé car les diverses sources fournissant des informations à ce sujet emploient des périodes de référence différentes. Selon les estimations d'avocats et de médecins palestiniens et israéliens, citées dans le document des Nations Unies, 20 % des personnes blessées pendant les premiers mois du soulèvement étaient des femmes, et leur nombre se situerait entre 126 et 153 sur la Rive occidentale et entre 90 et 264 dans la bande de Gaza. Selon la même source, 5 à 10 % des blessés étaient des enfants de 10 ans au plus. Au total, le nombre des blessés se situait entre 630 et 766 sur la Rive occidentale et entre 450 et 1 320 dans la bande de Gaza (A/43/694, par. 357). Selon une estimation de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine (OLP), le nombre total des femmes blessées se situerait entre 600 et 671*.

10. Le rapport du Comité spécial indique qu'au cours des quatre premiers mois du soulèvement, il a été enregistré parmi les femmes de la bande de Gaza une augmentation de 10 % du nombre de fausses couches par rapport à la période correspondante des années précédentes. Près de 70 % de ces fausses couches étaient imputables à l'inhalation de gaz lacrymogène (A/43/694, par. 365). Le nombre total des fausses couches signalées par les différentes sources des Nations Unies va de 124 2/ à 166 (A/43/694, par. 365). Une estimation de l'OLP basée sur une énumération de cas individuels fait état d'un total de 131. Soixante-cinq pour cent de ces fausses couches se sont produites après le troisième mois de la grossesse et 22 % pendant les huitième et neuvième mois.

11. Des civils palestiniens, parmi lesquels des femmes et des enfants, ont fait l'objet d'arrestations massives et ont été placés en détention administrative. Durant la période considérée, le Comité spécial a signalé des mauvais traitements infligés à des femmes et des enfants détenus, le surpeuplement des prisons et le caractère rigoureux des conditions de détention (A/43/694, sect. IV). Il a été rapporté que des enfants de moins de 15 ans avaient été battus, interrogés, torturés 3/. Des cas de harcèlement sexuel ont été signalés (A/43/694, sect. IV). Une douzaine d'enfants de 8 à 12 ans ont été arrêtés durant la première semaine de mai 1988 pour avoir jeté des pierres sur l'armée (A/43/694, par. 294) et suivant une information rapportée dans le document des Nations Unies A/41/INF.DOC/7, annexe, par. 11(4), le nombre des enfants détenus à la date du 28 mars 1988 était passé à 1 650. Selon des estimations de l'OLP relatives à la période du 9 décembre 1987 au 13 juin 1988, 1 087 enfants étaient maintenus en détention et 101 avaient été tués.

---

* Réponse du Bureau des affaires sociales de l'OLP en date du 2 décembre 1988 à la lettre adressée par le Secrétariat le 20 juin 1988.

12. Les descentes dans les maisons, la démolition ou la mise sous scellés des maisons ont été des formes de châtement communément pratiquées. Durant la période considérée, beaucoup plus de 100 maisons ont été démolies, suivant des estimations établies à partir de sources des Nations Unies 4/. L'imposition de couvre-feu d'une durée souvent de plusieurs jours, les diverses sanctions économiques et les grèves générales ont encore contribué à la dégradation des conditions de la vie quotidienne. Les autres mesures punitives employées ont été la coupure des services de distribution d'eau, d'électricité et des lignes téléphoniques desservant les camps de réfugiés ou des villes entières 5/. Les résidents palestiniens ont aussi été soumis à de nouvelles pratiques restrictives comme la confiscation des cartes d'identité (sans lesquelles ils ne peuvent pas se déplacer librement) et la préparation de "listes" spéciales de Palestiniens auxquels les autorités peuvent se référer avant d'accorder des autorisations ou des documents de voyage aux membres d'une famille (A/43/694, par. 248). Le 28 avril 1988, un nouvel arrêté a rendu les parents d'enfants de moins de 12 ans surpris en train de participer à une émeute (jet de pierres, incendie de véhicules automobiles ou construction de barricade sur la voie publique) responsables des actes de ceux-ci et passibles d'amende. Dans les cas graves, ils peuvent faire l'objet de poursuites pénales (A/43/694, par. 368).

13. Les descentes opérées dans des hôpitaux et des centres de santé* ont, dans certains cas, entraîné leur fermeture et l'interruption des services médicaux qu'ils assuraient, ainsi qu'un harcèlement des patients, du personnel médical et des visiteurs. Par exemple, le service de maternité du Women's Union Hospital a été envahi de force en une occasion. Il est arrivé que des véhicules et des ambulances soient empêchés de transporter des patients dans les hôpitaux. Du fait de couvre-feu et de bouclages, les habitants de camps de réfugiés et autres localités ont été privés de soins médicaux pendant plusieurs jours successifs. Un arrêté du 20 décembre 1987 des autorités d'occupation israéliennes a interdit à tous les centres de santé et hôpitaux de la Rive occidentale et de la bande de Gaza de recevoir des personnes blessées en participant au soulèvement 6/.

14. Un certain nombre de mesures ont été prises par les Palestiniens pour désengager l'économie des territoires occupés vis-à-vis de l'économie israélienne :

a) Boycott et abandon progressif de la consommation de produits israéliens se traduisant par une réduction du niveau de vie de la population (TD/B/1183, par. 11 et 16);

b) Initiatives destinées à assurer l'autosuffisance et le renforcement de "l'économie familiale" palestinienne grâce à la production de viande, de légumes et de fruits et à la création d'emplois locaux dans les zones rurales, les camps de réfugiés et certaines communautés urbaines (TD/B/1183, par. 11);

c) Création de comités locaux d'auto-assistance pour répondre aux besoins de la population sur le plan sanitaire, éducatif, économique et en matière de protection sociale 7/; création d'emplois pour les Palestiniens qui cessent de travailler en Israël ou démissionnent de leur poste dans l'administration publique israélienne (TD/B/1183, par. 11);

---

* Hôpitaux d'El-Shifa, Women's Union, Nasser, de Ramallah, d'El-Ahli et d'Hébron et dispensaire du Columbia Camp Clinic.

d) "Campagne de retour à l'agriculture", la production agricole ayant régulièrement décliné au cours des années précédentes (TD/B/1142, chap. D, par.11), qui met l'accent sur la nécessité de cultiver les produits alimentaires de première nécessité, des légumes et des fruits susceptibles de remplacer les importations d'Israël (TD/B/1183, par. 83).

15. Les mesures prises par les Palestiniens pour s'opposer aux autorités israéliennes ont pris la forme d'une "révolte fiscale", d'une solidarité du secteur commercial avec le soulèvement et de l'absentéisme des travailleurs migrants en Israël dans une proportion de 20 à 100 % au cours des différentes phases de l'Intifada.

16. Les écoles, universités et centres de formation ont été fermés pendant la plus grande partie de la période considérée. L'enseignement dans les écoles élémentaires, préparatoires et secondaires, a été perturbé par des fermetures fréquentes dues à des couvre-feu, à la tension régnante et aux incursions de manifestants et des forces de sécurité. Sur la Rive occidentale, les autorités d'occupation israéliennes ont ordonné la fermeture de tous les établissements d'enseignement du 4 février au 23 mai 1988. Les écoles privées de l'UNRWA et les écoles publiques ont été fermées à compter du 23 mai 1988; les centres de formation professionnelle ont aussi été affectés 8/ et de nombreux incidents se sont également produits dans des établissements d'enseignement supérieur, sous la forme de fermeture d'universités, de perquisitions et de saisies de livres et de documents, et d'immixtions dans la désignation du personnel enseignant masculin et féminin (A/43/694, sec. IV, par. 470, 471 et 478).

17. Les autorités israéliennes ont imposé des couvre-feu systématiques et prolongés, comme le 28 mars 1988 où les territoires ont été interdits pendant 72 heures. L'entrée des convois de vivres a été interdite dans les zones soumises au couvre-feu et l'approvisionnement des territoires en combustibles et produits pétroliers a souvent fait l'objet d'un blocus complet pendant des périodes allant jusqu'à deux semaines. Quelques villes et villages ont eu à subir des coupures des services de distribution d'électricité, d'eau et des lignes téléphoniques. Le village de Kabatiya a été complètement isolé pendant 33 jours à partir du 7 mars 1988 et privé de soins médicaux (A/43/694, par. 390 et 614). Des restrictions ont été imposées au transport de marchandises à l'intérieur de la Rive occidentale et de la bande de Gaza et entre celles-ci.

18. Des mesures financières et administratives restrictives ont également été introduites : réduction d'un cinquième de la quantité d'argent que les Palestiniens pouvaient importer de Jordanie vers la Rive occidentale, restrictions apportées à la possibilité de tirer des chèques sur les comptes bancaires des organisations de secours palestiniennes, obligation de justifier du règlement intégral des impôts avant toute délivrance de licences ou autres documents 9/.

19. En raison de la diminution des recettes fiscales, l'administration civile israélienne a déclaré qu'elle devait geler un grand nombre de projets de développement (subventions aux autorités locales, protection sociale, aménagement de réseaux de distribution électrique, travaux hydrauliques et systèmes de communication, et prestations d'assistance médicale (A/43/694, sect. IV, par. 429).

20. Les autres mesures prises ont été la confiscation de terres, la réglementation des cultures (abandon des cultures de plein champ au profit de la culture de légumes et de melons, se traduisant par une réduction de la croissance des revenus), la limitation des approvisionnements en eau et des possibilités d'irrigation, le contrôle rigoureux des exportations palestiniennes, l'importation de produits israéliens subventionnés dans les territoires palestiniens occupés 10/.

21. Le soulèvement a suscité l'apparition de structures sociales, économiques et politiques palestiniennes parallèles et des comités populaires ont été créés pour répondre à tous les besoins de la population palestinienne. Selon les autorités d'occupation, ces comités comprennent également des "comités de choc" chargés de prendre des mesures à l'égard de ceux qui ne suivent pas les mots d'ordre de grève, de fermeture des magasins ou de refus d'aller travailler en Israël 11/. Les femmes palestiniennes ont été actives dans les comités populaires et les diverses associations sociales ayant pour but de satisfaire aux besoins fondamentaux de la population palestinienne sur le plan économique et en matière d'enseignement et de secours. Il est arrivé que ces organisations fassent l'objet d'un harcèlement de la part des services de sécurité. L'organisation "In'ash al-Usra", à El-bireh, dont l'action touche 15 000 femmes et enfants palestiniens a été fermée par les autorités 11/ et les bureaux de la Palestinian Women's Union ont été envahis et ses dossiers confisqués. De nombreux centres sociaux, y compris ceux qui avaient l'habitude d'organiser des cours pour l'éducation des femmes et des jeunes ont dû fermer car les autorités israéliennes ont gelé les crédits d'assistance sociale en raison de la chute des recettes fiscales. Dans de nombreux endroits, les femmes ont organisé le 8 mars 1988 des marches et des manifestations silencieuses pour célébrer la Journée internationale de la femme (A/43/694, par. 205).

C. Situation économique

22. Il y a entre les structures économiques de la Rive occidentale et celles de la bande de Gaza des différences qui influent sur le rôle des femmes dans ces deux zones. Ainsi que le montre le tableau 5, les femmes représentent environ 14 % de la population active sur la Rive occidentale et seulement 4 % dans la bande de Gaza. Sur la Rive occidentale, elles travaillent essentiellement dans l'agriculture, tandis que dans la bande de Gaza, elles font surtout partie de la catégorie personnel des professions scientifiques, techniques, libérales et assimilées non classé ailleurs (53 % de la population active féminine), ce qui tient au fait que dans cette zone leurs possibilités de travailler en dehors de la fonction publique sont limitées. Sur la Rive occidentale, un petit peu plus d'un quart des femmes économiquement actives étaient employées dans le secteur public et une moitié dans les exploitations agricoles. Dans la bande de Gaza, près des deux tiers étaient employées dans le secteur public. Tant sur la Rive occidentale que dans la bande de Gaza, les femmes sont plus touchées que les hommes par le chômage (en 1986, le taux de chômage était de 6,4 % pour les femmes contre 3,8 % pour les hommes sur la Rive occidentale et de 9,1 % pour les femmes contre 3,5 % pour les hommes dans la bande de Gaza).

23. Dans la bande de Gaza, il semble aussi que les hommes sont dans une certaine mesure employés en dehors des territoires occupés mais que les femmes n'ont pas cette possibilité.

24. Il n'existe pas de données sur les différences de revenus selon le sexe dans les territoires occupés ni sur les effets spécifiques de l'Intifada sur l'économie et, en particulier, sur l'emploi et le revenu des femmes et des enfants.

Tableau 5. Personnes occupées - ventilation par profession et par sexe en 1986
(en pourcentage)

	Rive occidentale		Bande de Gaza
	Ensemble des personnes employées	Femmes	Ensemble des personnes employées	Femmes
Scientifiques et universitaires	2,7	5,2	1,3	3,55
Personnel des professions scientifiques, techniques, libérales et assimilées non classé ailleurs	5,9	18,85	5,9	53,3
Directeurs et cadres administratifs supérieurs	1,1	-	1,4	3,7
Personnel administratif et travailleurs assimilés	2,7	4,55	2,4	4,7
Personnel commercial et vendeurs	10,0	2,6	10,7	1,7
Travailleurs spécialisés dans les services	6,9	4,43	8,2	3,7
Travailleurs agricoles	23,2	54,04	18,9	7,6
Travailleurs qualifiés dans l'industrie, les mines, le bâtiment et les transports et autres travailleurs qualifiés	25,4	8,75	30,7	17,2
Autres travailleurs dans l'industrie, le bâtiment, les transports et travailleurs non qualifiés	22,0	1,03	20,4	2,4
Total	100	100	100	100
Nombre total de personnes occupées (milliers)	167,0	23,3	94,2	4,0
Pourcentage de femmes employées	13,95	-	4,25	-

Source : Statistical Abstract of Israel 1987, N° 38 (Jerusalem, Central Bureau of Statistics, 1987), tableau XXVII/25.

D. Conditions de vie

25. Au cours de la période considérée, la population palestinienne a continué à faire face à une grave pénurie de logements. D'après les statistiques les plus récentes, trois personnes en moyenne vivaient dans la même pièce; près de la moitié des habitants vivaient entassés à raison de sept personnes ou plus par logement. Les obstacles à l'octroi de permis de construire associés à la destruction ou la fermeture (apposition de scellés) systématiques des maisons de suspects ont accru les difficultés 12/.

26. Les données sur les éléments de confort élémentaires montrent les différences entre la bande de Gaza et la Rive occidentale. Ainsi qu'on le voit dans le tableau 6, la jouissance de certains éléments de confort, parfois fournis par des organismes publics, dépend du type d'habitat.

27. La vie des femmes palestiniennes est fréquemment caractérisée par la rupture de l'unité familiale et l'absence des membres masculins de la famille du fait de détention, d'expulsion, d'emprisonnement ou de décès. Selon des informations fournies par l'UNRWA, environ 130 000 réfugiés ont reçu en 1988 une assistance au titre de l'aide aux plus démunis 13/ et plus de 60 % des familles avaient à leur tête des femmes ou des personnes âgées. Des dons en espèces ont été accordés à titre d'aide d'urgence à 1 020 familles choisies parmi les plus démunies. Certains services d'aide sociale concentraient leurs efforts sur la formation professionnelle des jeunes et des femmes (couture et broderie) et l'exécution de programmes visant à préparer les femmes à participer aux activités éducatives, sportives, culturelles et récréatives (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 88).

Tableau 6. Eléments de confort dans les logements pour divers types d'habitat (1985) (en pourcentage)

	Rive occidentale		Bande de Gaza
	Villages	Villes	Camps de réfugiés	Villes
Moyens de chauffage	98,2	97,2	42,9	57,6
Eau courante dans le logement	49,5	91,0	68,5	83,2
Point d'eau dans la cour	15,3	7,3	29,4	15,0
Toilettes	44,4	77,7	97,4	98,7
Salle de bains	85,5	99,8	65,8	78,6
Electricité 24 heures sur 24	46,4	98,2	94,4	93,7

Source : Statistical Abstract of Israel 1987, N° 38 (Central Bureau of Statistics, 1987), tableau XXVII/17.

E. Questions sociales

1. Education

28. L'accès aux services d'éducation varie selon les zones et l'âge. D'après les données sur les effectifs scolaires figurant dans le tableau 9 du Statistical Yearbook 1986-1987, (recueil annuel de statistique pour 1986-1987) de l'UNRWA, à peu près les deux tiers des filles scolarisables de moins de 12 ans vont à l'école sur la Rive occidentale. Leur taux de scolarisation baisse avec l'âge. Par contre, dans la bande de Gaza, le taux de scolarisation des filles est d'environ 80 %. Ceci tient peut-être au fait que dans la bande de Gaza plus de la moitié des élèves fréquentent des écoles de l'UNRWA alors que sur la Rive occidentale, ils fréquentent pour la plupart des écoles publiques. Tant sur la Rive occidentale que dans la bande de Gaza, le taux de scolarisation est légèrement plus élevé pour les garçons que pour les filles 17/. On trouvera dans le tableau 7 ci-dessous des renseignements détaillés sur la répartition des élèves réfugiés fréquentant les écoles de l'UNRWA en 1987/88. Il y avait 98 écoles avec 1 328 enseignants sur la Rive occidentale et 146 écoles avec 2 545 enseignants dans la bande de Gaza. Grâce à l'augmentation du nombre d'enseignants, le nombre de classes comptant plus de 50 élèves est tombé de 59 à 10 à Gaza et de 28 à 11 sur la Rive occidentale.

Tableau 7. Rive occidentale et bande de Gaza : ventilation par sexe des élèves réfugiés fréquentant les écoles de l'UNRWA en 1987

Type d'école	Rive occidentale				Total	Bande de Gaza				Total
	Filles		Garçons			Filles		Garçons
	Nombre	%	Nombre	%		Nombre	%	Nombre	%
Primaire	15 395	54,2	13 032	45,8	28 427	30 539	47,9	33 224	52,1	63 763
Premier cycle du secondaire	6 135	53,5	5 333	47,3	11 468	11 847	47,3	13 206	52,7	25 053

Source : Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), tableau 5.

29. La disproportion numérique entre hommes et femmes dans les cours de formation professionnelle n'a pas disparu. Le Centre de formation professionnelle féminine de Ramallah est resté le seul centre de formation professionnelle féminine géré par l'UNRWA. En dehors des cours de formation à l'enseignement où la proportion de femmes a été supérieure à 50 %, le ratio hommes/femmes a été de 5 à 1. Afin d'atténuer cette disproportion, l'UNRWA a pris des mesures pour encourager les femmes à participer aux programmes de formation existants et a lancé de nouveaux cours. Vingt nouvelles stagiaires ont été admises à un nouveau cours de physiothérapie et il est envisagé d'instituer des cours supplémentaires de formation d'infirmières. Au cours de la période 1989-1990, des cours semi-professionnels ont été introduits pour la première fois pour les stagiaires femmes au Centre de formation de Gaza (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 36).

10. Au cours de la période considérée, le nombre d'heures d'enseignement aux niveaux du primaire et du premier cycle du secondaire a baissé de près de 40 % sur la Rive occidentale et de 35 % dans la bande de Gaza. Les centres de formation professionnelle ont été encore plus gravement affectés : sur la Rive occidentale, trois centres de formation n'ont été ouverts que 44 jours; dans la bande de Gaza, un centre de formation n'a été ouvert que 50 jours 14/. Par suite des fréquentes fermetures d'universités et des mesures administratives restrictives imposées aux établissements universitaires, 6 000 étudiants ont perdu toute une année universitaire (A/43/694, par. 496).

2. Santé

31. Selon le rapport annuel du Directeur de santé de l'UNRWA pour 1987 15/, la situation de la population palestinienne (hommes, femmes et enfants) sur le plan sanitaire est étroitement liée à la situation politique et socio-économique. On ne dispose pas de renseignements détaillés équivalents pour la population non réfugiée. Les services de santé qui étaient déjà insuffisants ont été gravement affectés par les nombreuses pertes subies pendant le soulèvement palestinien et par les mesures d'urgence prises par les autorités israéliennes (voir par. 11 et 12 ci-dessus).

32. Pour faire face à cette situation d'urgence, l'UNRWA a augmenté ses effectifs médicaux (10 médecins supplémentaires ont été employés dans les centres de santé situés dans les camps de la Rive occidentale) et prolongé la durée du travail dans les centres (certains ont fonctionné 24 heures sur 24) 16/. Pour développer ses services de soins maternels et infantiles sur la Rive occidentale, il a créé deux nouveaux centres et agrandi les locaux d'un centre de santé situé dans un camp. Dans la bande de Gaza, il a créé une deuxième équipe sanitaire mobile et ouvert deux fois - au lieu d'une fois - par semaine un centre secondaire de soins maternels et infantiles 17/. On a mis davantage l'accent sur la prévention et le traitement de l'incapacité chez l'enfant. De nombreux enfants ont reçu des soins à la fois en hôpital et dans des services de consultation externe sur la Rive occidentale et dans la bande de Gaza.

33. Appuyé par des spécialistes et des services d'aiguillage vers les hôpitaux appropriés, l'UNRWA a continué à dispenser des soins maternels et infantiles, des soins prénatals et natals ainsi que des soins aux nourrissons et aux enfants par le biais de ses groupes sanitaires. Il a disposé à cette fin de 41 centres de santé, de 6 centres secondaires de santé maternelle et infantile, de 8 salles d'accouchement (6 dans la bande de Gaza et deux sur la Rive occidentale) et de 46 centres d'alimentation d'appoint 19/. Les soins de santé maternelle dispensés par les centres de consultation de l'UNRWA ont comporté divers aspects : contrôle régulier de la santé, appui nutritionnel, traitement de l'anémie pendant la période de grossesse et d'allaitement et vaccination des femmes enceintes par l'anatoxine tétanique. Plus de 25 000 femmes enceintes, soit environ 75 % du nombre total de femmes enceintes estimé, ont été inscrites pour des soins prénatals dans les centres de consultation maternelle et infantile de l'UNRWA. Sur la Rive occidentale, 10 % des femmes inscrites dans les centres de consultation maternelle et infantile de l'UNRWA étaient exposées à de hauts risques et 12 % à des risques modérés, les risques étant du même ordre pour les nouveau-nés. Sur l'ensemble des accouchements signalés en 1987, 59 % ont eu lieu dans des hôpitaux subventionnés et des hôpitaux publics, 28 % à domicile avec l'aide de sages-femmes formées par l'UNRWA ou de dayahs (accoucheuses traditionnelles) et 13 % dans les centres de santé maternelle et infantile de l'UNRWA (où l'on ne disposait que de 65 lits répartis dans 8 camps). L'UNRWA, dans le cadre de ses services de soins aux enfants, a suivi l'état de santé des nourrissons et des enfants d'âge préscolaire et vacciné ceux qui étaient inscrits dans ses centres de consultation maternelle et infantile. Plus de 59 000 enfants âgés de trois ans au plus, soit 75 % du nombre total estimé d'enfants dans ce groupe d'âge, ont été inscrits à ces fins dans lesdits centres 20/.

34. L'UNRWA a continué à fournir des services de nutrition et d'alimentation d'appoint pour les enfants, les femmes enceintes, les mères qui allaitent et les nourrissons 21/. Depuis l'Intifada, le programme a été élargi. La distribution de déjeuners a été étendue à tous les enfants de 10 ans au plus - ainsi qu'aux enfants de plus de 10 ans lorsque des raisons médicales le justifiaient. La distribution de lait en poudre a été étendue à tous les enfants (y compris les non-réfugiés) de moins de trois ans. La distribution de rations et de lait déshydraté a été étendue à la population réfugiée qui n'y a normalement pas droit, notamment les femmes enceintes, les mères qui allaitent et les enfants âgés de 6 à 36 mois.

35. On a continué à fournir des services de planification de la famille axés sur l'éducation sanitaire aux femmes inscrites dans les centres de consultation maternelle et infantile de l'UNRWA. Le programme d'éducation sanitaire et familiale des trois écoles primaires de filles a été étendu aux écoles primaires de garçons 22/.

36. En ce qui concerne l'hygiène du milieu, des progrès ont été réalisés avec l'installation dans certains camps de l'eau courante à l'intérieur des logements et de réseaux d'assainissement, mais un certain nombre de problèmes liés à l'assainissement continuent de se poser. La fréquence des maladies transmissibles par le biais de l'environnement a augmenté. La présence de poux sur la tête et la gale sont devenus endémiques chez les écoliers 23/.

F. Assistance au peuple palestinien dans les territoires occupés

37. Au cours de la période considérée, les organismes des Nations Unies et les institutions spécialisées ont continué à aider le peuple palestinien en exécutant notamment des programmes spéciaux d'assistance aux femmes et aux enfants palestiniens (parmi les réfugiés essentiellement) dans les territoires palestiniens occupés.

38. Ainsi qu'indiqué précédemment, l'UNRWA a continué à exécuter à la fois des programmes ordinaires et des programmes d'urgence, ces derniers étant particulièrement importants. Des aliments et des sommes en espèces ont été distribués à des réfugiés et à un petit nombre de non-réfugiés dans la bande de Gaza et sur la Rive occidentale. Du personnel temporaire supplémentaire des services de santé, de secours et des réfugiés a été chargé de contribuer à la distribution de l'aide et de conseiller les familles en détresse (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 7). Une assistance a aussi été fournie aux réfugiés dans le cadre du programme à l'intention des plus démunis (distribution de rations déshydratées, de vêtements et d'allocations en espèces). On a estimé qu'à la fin de 1988, sur un total de 183 700 familles de réfugiés inscrites, 8 250 familles dans la bande de Gaza et 5 170 sur la Rive occidentale seraient placées dans la catégorie des réfugiés particulièrement démunis (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 86). Les enfants de ces familles ont bénéficié d'un droit d'entrée prioritaire dans les centres de formation. On a aidé certaines familles à créer de petites entreprises (A/43/367, par. 86 à 89). Une collaboration a été établie entre l'UNRWA et le Centre régional de la Méditerranée orientale pour les activités concernant l'hygiène du milieu (OMS) afin de donner une nouvelle impulsion aux programmes d'assainissement exécutés par l'UNRWA 24/.

39. Le Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance (UNICEF) a fourni une assistance par l'intermédiaire de l'UNRWA en concentrant ses efforts sur l'immunisation et la vaccination, l'assistance technique pour la formation et l'amélioration des infrastructures. Il a fourni une assistance technique aux services de santé locaux pour développer le programme de formation des accoucheuses traditionnelles et a financé la formation de 16 superviseuses (sages-femmes) et de 150 accoucheuses traditionnelles sur la Rive occidentale (A/43/367, par. 48). Il a aussi aidé à former 652 moniteurs de jardins d'enfants, améliorer les installations dans 60 jardins d'enfants, rénover 20 jardins d'enfants et en meubler 120 autres (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 49).

En coopération avec l'Organisation Save the Children Federation et les communautés intéressées, l'UNICEF a aussi aidé à réduire l'incidence des maladies d'origine hydrique dans 25 villages situés dans la partie septentrionale de la Rive occidentale et dans la partie méridionale de la bande de Gaza (A/43/367, par. 21).

40. L'Organisation internationale du Travail (OIT) a identifié en vue d'un financement partiel ou intégral plusieurs projets du Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement touchant la formation professionnelle des femmes (A/43/367, par. 32).

41. Le PNUD a exécuté deux projets dans le domaine de l'emploi et du développement : "Programme en faveur de la jeunesse" et "Institutions féminines" (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 33). Un projet intitulé "Institut pour les femmes" sera exécuté dans un proche avenir. On créera un centre qui dispensera aux femmes une formation technique et spécialisée dans divers domaines, servira de lieu d'exposition permanent pour promouvoir et écouler des produits traditionnels et nouveaux et, éventuellement, abritera de petites industries exploitées par des organisations bénévoles (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 33 et 34).

42. L'aide de l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour l'éducation, la science et la culture (Unesco) a consisté essentiellement à fournir du matériel et de l'équipement pour l'enseignement et à assurer la surveillance permanente du fonctionnement des établissements d'enseignement et du système de bourses d'études universitaires (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 41 à 44).

43. L'OMS et le Fonds des Nations Unies pour la population (FNUAP) ont fourni une assistance en particulier aux femmes et aux enfants dans le domaine des soins de santé primaires, de l'hygiène du milieu et de la formation et de l'éducation du personnel sanitaire. Deux centres ont été désignés centres collaborateurs de l'OMS en matière de recherche sur les soins de santé primaires : le Centre de recherche en matière de services de santé de Ramallah sur la Rive occidentale et le Centre de recherche en matière de services de santé de Gaza. Le Centre de Ramallah a mis tout particulièrement l'accent sur le suivi et l'évaluation d'un programme élargi de soins de santé primaires, l'évaluation et la supervision du travail des dayahs et l'étude de la mortalité chez les nourrissons et les enfants (A/43/367-E/1988/82, par. 60 à 68).

II. LA SITUATION DES FEMMES PALESTINIENNES VIVANT HORS DES TERRITOIRES ARABES OCCUPES

A. Renseignements d'ordre général

44. Au 30 juin 1988, il y avait au Liban 288 176 réfugiés immatriculés auprès de l'Office : 148 007 (51,36 %) dans 13 camps et 140 169 (48,64 %) en dehors des camps. En République arabe syrienne, il y avait 265 221 réfugiés : 77 779 (29,33 %) dans 10 camps et 187 442 (70,67 %) en dehors des camps. En Jordanie, il y avait 870 490 réfugiés : 213 539 (24,53 %) dans des camps et 656 951 (75,47 %) en dehors des camps 25/.

B. Questions politiques

45. Au cours de la période considérée, la situation au Liban est restée critique. Après la levée du siège mis autour de trois camps (deux à Beyrouth-Chatila et Bourj el-Barajné et un près de Turd Rachidiyé) en 1987, les réfugiés ont été évacués vers des camps situés dans le sud. En janvier 1988, plusieurs centaines de familles palestiniennes ont fui vers le nord à la recherche d'un nouveau refuge. Près de 100 d'entre elles ont occupé des écoles de l'Office dans la région de Saida. Le regain de violence enregistré plus tard en 1988 a fait de nouvelles victimes à Beyrouth et entraîné d'autres déplacements de familles 26/.

C. Questions sociales*

46. Au Liban, en 1987/88, plus de 30 000 élèves (sur un total de 33 500) étaient inscrits dans les 75 écoles de l'UNRWA (sur un total de 83) qui fonctionnaient en mars 1988. Certaines écoles ont été fermées en raison de la situation d'exception, de l'endommagement des locaux scolaires ou de l'occupation des établissements par des réfugiés sans-abri. Des élèves ont fréquenté des écoles situées en dehors des camps ou assisté aux cours organisés par des "comités populaires". En dépit de ces efforts, certaines écoles n'ont pu achever leurs programmes pour l'année scolaire 1986/87.

47. Les écoles installées en République arabe syrienne et en Jordanie ont fonctionné de façon satisfaisante tout au long de l'année scolaire 1987/88. Il y avait en République arabe syrienne 111 écoles de l'UNRWA employant 1 550 enseignants et en Jordanie 195 établissements employant 3 712 enseignants. En République arabe syrienne, les effectifs des classes primaires élémentaires et supérieures étaient de 52 576 et en Jordanie de 134 601. Une nouvelle école primaire élémentaire et supérieure (pouvant accueillir 1 300 garçons et filles) a été construite à Damas et plusieurs autres sont en construction en Jordanie et en République arabe syrienne 27/.

48. On trouvera dans le tableau 8 ci-dessous des renseignements détaillés sur la situation des élèves réfugiés scolarisés en octobre 1987 dans les écoles de l'UNRWA.

49. En République arabe syrienne et en Jordanie, les centres de formation ont fonctionné normalement. Au Liban, le centre de formation de Siblène, fermé depuis septembre 1983, a rouvert ses portes. Durant les quatre années de fermeture, l'UNRWA a assuré la formation de 225 stagiaires des deux sexes ailleurs au Liban 28/.

50. Soixante pour cent environ (529 sur 881) des stagiaires des centres de formation avant l'emploi pour enseignants de l'UNRWA étaient des femmes. Au centre de Siblène, au Liban, au centre de formation professionnelle de Damas et au centre de formation de Wadi Seer en Jordanie, 121 jeunes femmes ont achevé en 1987/88 leur formation de métreaux, de dessinatrices d'architecture, de dessinatrices industrielles, de techniciennes de la construction, de techniciennes radio et télévision, de techniciennes de laboratoires médicaux et de préparatrices en pharmacie. Au centre de formation d'Amman, en Jordanie, des femmes ont suivi des programmes de formation dans les secteurs suivants : soins de beauté, gestion familiale et gestion d'organisations, pratique du commerce et du travail de bureau, dans le cadre de la promotion de la femme palestinienne. Les inégalités entre hommes et femmes palestiniens en ce qui concerne les possibilités de formation professionnelle (sauf dans le domaine de la formation avant l'emploi pour enseignants) restent inchangées et 20 % seulement des stagiaires de ces centres sont des femmes**.

---

* L'information en matière d'éducation provient exclusivement des rapports de l'UNRWA.

** Réponse, en date du 10 octobre 1988, du Bureau exécutif de l'UNRWA à la lettre adressée par le Secrétariat le 20 juin 1988.

Tableau 8. Répartition des élèves réfugiés scolarisés dans les écoles de l'UNRWA a/(octobre 1987)

Zone d'activité	Nombre d'écoles de l'UNRWA	Nombre d'enseignants	Nombre d'élèves dans les classes primaires élémentaires b/			Nombre d'élèves dans les classes primaires supérieures b/			Effectif total des jeunes réfugiés scolarisés
			Filles	Garçons	Total	Filles	Garçons	Total
Jordanie	195	3 712	45 142	46 786	91 928	20 747	21 926	42 673	134 601
Liban	83	1 183	11 552	12 430	23 982	4 766	4 685	9 451	33 500 c/
République arabe syrienne	111	1 550	17 469	18 496	35 965	7 827	8 784	16 611	52 576

Source : Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), tableau 3.

a/ Non compris 104 017 élèves réfugiés fréquentant des écoles publiques ou privées du primaire élémentaire, du primaire supérieur et du secondaire.

b/ Y compris les enfants inscrits dans les écoles de l'UNRWA sans y avoir droit; ils étaient, en octobre 1987, au nombre de 54 080, dont 17 252 dans la bande de Gaza, où l'on a toujours considéré en pratique que tous les enfants réfugiés avaient droit aux services d'éducation.

c/ En octobre 1987, aucun chiffre concernant le nombre d'admissions n'a été reçu. Le chiffre indiqué représente le total : effectifs des écoles qui étaient ouvertes et effectifs estimés des écoles qui étaient fermées.

D. Services de santé*

51. Au cours de la période considérée, l'UNRWA a continué de fournir des services de santé aux réfugiés y ayant droit vivant hors des territoires arabes occupés.

52. En Jordanie et en République arabe syrienne, l'activité déployée en matière d'éducation sanitaire a surtout consisté à créer dans les camps et les écoles des comités sanitaires pour encourager les réfugiés à prendre eux-mêmes en main leurs problèmes de santé et ceux de la communauté 29/. Le modeste programme de planning familial, dont l'objectif est d'informer les femmes en âge de procréer sur les avantages qu'elles peuvent retirer sur le plan de la santé d'un espacement adéquat des naissances a été mis en oeuvre de façon limitée dans les cliniques de l'UNRWA 30/.

53. Les dispensaires de l'UNRWA ont enregistré un accroissement de 20 % des consultations. En République arabe syrienne, un centre de santé doublé d'un centre d'alimentation a été créé. En Jordanie, deux unités secondaires de santé maternelle et infantile ont été ouvertes 31/.

54. En Jordanie et en République arabe syrienne, des progrès constants ont été accomplis en ce qui concerne l'hygiène du milieu, avec notamment l'installation de robinets dans les abris dans cinq camps situés en Jordanie.

55. Les problèmes de sécurité que connaît le Liban ont gravement perturbé l'utilisation des services de santé en raison des couvre-feux, des affrontements entre milices et autres restrictions aux déplacements. Le taux d'utilisation moyen de 76 % des centres de consultations externes de l'UNRWA en 1987 pour les cinq terrains d'opération a été compensé, principalement au Liban, par les limitations imposées aux mouvements de réfugiés et par l'impossibilité d'accéder aux établissements de soins. Dans la partie centrale du Liban - région de Saida et de Tyr - quatre centres de santé n'ont pu fonctionner durant l'année. Les établissements sanitaires et médicaux de la région de Beyrouth ont également été affectés par la situation; ainsi, le dispensaire de l'UNRWA au camp de Chatila a été très endommagé en 1986 et les équipes sanitaires n'ont pu accéder aux autres camps avant la levée des sièges en janvier 1988. L'approvisionnement des services de santé a pu être maintenu, à Bourj el-Barajné en coopération avec l'hôpital du Croissant-Rouge palestinien, et à Rachidiyé dans des quantités limitées qui ont permis de traiter les femmes et les enfants. Certaines familles - qui ne se trouvaient plus dans leur camp d'origine - ont également eu des difficultés à bénéficier des services de l'UNRWA. Deux équipes médicales mobiles ont été mises en place dans les régions de Beyrouth et de Saida pour aider les familles déplacées. Le rétablissement graduel de l'ensemble des services dans toutes les régions a encore été interrompu par les nouveaux affrontements et incidents survenus en avril 1988 qui ont gravement perturbé la réalisation des programmes de l'Office en matière d'hygiène du milieu, de nutrition et d'alimentation complémentaire.

56. Toutefois, l'UNRWA a dispensé des services de secours à toutes les catégories de réfugiés palestiniens au Liban jusqu'à la fin de l'année 1988 et les distributions des rations de base ont même augmenté. Aucune grosse épidémie de maladies transmissibles n'a été signalée. Les programmes de vaccination se sont déroulés normalement. L'UNICEF, en coordination avec l'UNRWA, l'OMS et les autorités sanitaires locales, a entrepris une campagne générale de vaccination des enfants, notamment les enfants palestiniens non encore vaccinés. Certaines améliorations ont été apportées au secteur de la santé et aux infrastructures d'hygiène du milieu. La polyclinique de Beyrouth a été agrandie et un nouveau centre de santé a été créé à Saïda. Certains projets d'adduction d'eau ont été menés à terme.

---

* Les informations sur les services de santé proviennent exclusivement des rapports de l'UNRWA, en particulier des documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), et du document A/41/INF.DOC/5 de l'Organisation mondiale de la santé.

Notes

1/ "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine : annual report of the Director of Health of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for the year 1987" (A/41/INF.DOC/5), par. 2.

2/ OMS, document A/41/INF.DOC/7, annexe, appendice 1.

3/ Ibid., document A/41/INF.DOC/7, annexe, partie II, sect. A.2.

4/ Ibid., sect. A.10; documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), chap. II, par. 109; A/43/362-S/19881; A/43/477-S/20052); et A/43/694.

5/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13) chap. 2, sect. B, par. 30.

6/ Organisation mondiale de la santé, doc. A/41/INF.DOC/7, annexe, partie II, sect. B.1-B.4.

7/ Bulletin de la Division des droits des palestiniens, vol. XI, N° 7 (1988), p. 3; et A/43/694, par. 71.

8/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13, chap. II, sect. B, par. 42 et 44.

9/ A/43/694; TD/B/1183; et Bulletin de la Division des droits des palestiniens, vol. XI, Nos 5 et 7.

10/ TD/B/1142 et 1183; et A/41/INF/DOC.7, annexe.

11/ Bulletin de la Division des droits des palestiniens, vol. XI, N° 7, 1988, p. 3; et A/43/694, par. 71.

12/ Organisation mondiale de la santé, document A/41/INF.DOC/7, annexe, première partie, sect. B(4).

13/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), chap. II, par. 93.

14/ Ibid., par. 42 à 44.

15/ Organisation mondiale de la santé, doc. A/41/INF.DOC/5.

16/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), chap. II, par. 38 et 39.

17/ Organisation mondiale de la santé, document A/41/INF.DOC/5, par. 127.

18/ Ibid., par. 90.

19/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, Supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), par. 37.

20/ Organisation mondiale de la santé, document A/41/INF.DOC/5, annexe, par. 4, 101, 108, 118, 120 et 125 et tableau 7.

21/ Ibid., par. 177 à 200.

22/ Ibid., par. 103, 104, 109, 112 et 136.

23/ Ibid., par. 117, 118 et 165 à 167.

24/ Ibid., par. 176.

25/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), tableau 2.

26/ Ibid., chap. II, par. 11 à 13 et 27.

27/ Ibid., par. 60.

28/ Ibid., par. 26 et 67.

29/ Organisation mondiale de la santé, document A/41/INF.DOC/5, annexe, par. 135.

30/ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quarante-troisième session, supplément N° 13 (A/43/13), par. 82.

31/ Ibid., par. 73, 74 et 76.

UNITED NATIONS
ECONOMIC
AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1990/10
8 February 1990

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-fourth session
Vienna, 26 February-9 March 1990
Item 5 (e) of the provisional agenda*

REVIEW AND APPRAISAL OF THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

The situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territories

Note by the Secretary-General**

SUMMARY

The report of the mission of experts analyses various aspects of the living conditions of Palestinian women and, in particular, the impact of the Intifada on the Palestinian family; education; health, including the psychological well-being of women and children; economy and employment, as well as the changing traditional roles of women towards self-reliance and decision-making. Recommendations aimed at the long- and short-term improvement of the living conditions of Palestinian women are presented.

*E/CN.6/1990/1.

**Annexes I and II have been reproduced in the form in which they were received; only typographical errors and errors of fact or terminology have been corrected.

INTRODUCTION

1. This report has been prepared in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolutions 1988/25 of 26 May 1988 and 1989/34 of 24 May 1989. In resolution 1989/34, paragraph 1, the Council requested the Secretary-General:

"to prepare a comprehensive report on the situation of Palestinian women, making use of all available information, including United Nations reports, information from Governments, non-governmental organizations, missions undertaken by United Nations bodies and specialized agencies to the occupied territories, and reports of meetings and seminars as appropriate, and to submit the report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session."

2. Furthermore, in paragraph 5 of the same resolution, the Council again requested the Secretary-General "to send a mission composed of experts on the status of women to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children, in the light of the drastic deteriorating situation in the occupied Palestinian territories". The mission had originally been mandated by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 1988/25, paragraph 4, in which the Council requested the Secretary-General, "as a matter of urgency, to send a mission composed of experts on the status of women to investigate the situation of Palestinian women and children, in the light of the recent tragic developments in the occupied Palestinian territories".

3. In view of the reiterated request for the mission, the Secretary-General decided to send a mission composed of three experts plus United Nations staff to those countries in which Palestine refugees resided that would be willing to receive the mission, including the occupied Palestinian territories themselves. In a note verbale dated 3 August 1989, the Secretary-General invited the Governments of Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, as the host countries, and the Government of Israel, as the occupying power, to provide the Secretary-General with confirmation of their "support for this fact-finding mission". In a letter dated 3 August 1989, the Secretariat invited the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) to provide the Secretary-General with support for the mission.

4. In reply to the note verbale, the Governments of Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic expressed their support for the dispatch of a fact-finding mission. "Assistance and full support" to the mission was communicated to the Secretary-General by the Permanent Observer of Palestine to the United Nations (Vienna). The Government of Israel replied as follows:

"The Permanent Representative of Israel would like to draw the attention of the Secretary-General to the fact that the above mentioned resolutions contain already conclusions concerning the situation in the territories which makes - in our eyes - an additional investigation by a mission completely unnecessary. However, the Government of Israel will reconsider its position concerning the support of a fact finding mission if such a request of support will not be part of a resolution with a conclusive condemnatory nature."

5. Since some of the Governments concerned were willing to accept the mission, the Secretary-General decided that the mission should collect the information on the conditions of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territories in the neighbouring countries. It was decided that the mission would visit Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic during the week of 9-16 December 1989. The mission was to be composed of three experts on the status of women: an expert on women's rights from Argentina, a specialist on education from Norway and an expert on economic questions from the Philippines. Because of conditions in her country at the time, the expert from the Philippines informed the Secretariat two days before the departure of the mission that she would not be able to join it. Its final composition was, therefore, limited to two experts, a consultant and a staff member from the Division for the Advancement of Women, Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the United Nations Office at Vienna, accompanied by two technical assistants.

6. The experts were Ingrid Morken, Director for the Board of Colleges in Hedmark, Norway, and Ana María Alfonsín de Fasan, member of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women. Ingrid Morken was formerly President of the Women's University at Loten, Norway. Ana María Alfonsín de Fasan was formerly Director-General for Women's Affairs of the Ministry of Foreign and Religious Affairs of the Government of Argentina.

7. On 7 and 8 December 1989, the mission assembled at Vienna. From 9 to 12 December, and on 15 December, it visited Jordan, and on 13 and 14 December, it visited the Syrian Arab Republic. In both countries, the mission established contacts with the authorities and with representatives of the United Nations system and the General Union of Palestinian Women. The mission visited Baqa'a and Jerash Refugee Camps in Jordan and El Ermuk Refugee Camp in the Syrian Arab Republic. The mission also met with the representatives of the Palestinian National Council at Amman.

8. The main task of the mission was to obtain as much information as possible on the situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied territories. During the visit to Jordan, the mission interviewed people from the occupied Palestinian territories who either came directly from the territories to meet with the mission or were living in Jordan.

CONTENTS

	Page
ANNEX I. REPORT OF THE EXPERTS ON THE BASIS OF THEIR MISSION TO JORDAN AND THE SYRIAN ARAB REPUBLIC .....	6
INTRODUCTION .....	6
I. CONDITIONS OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN AND CHILDREN .....	7
A. Impact on the Palestinian family .....	7
B. Education .....	9
C. Health and psychological well-being .....	10
D. Economy and employment .....	11
II. CHANGING TRADITIONAL ROLES TOWARDS SELF-RELIANCE AND DECISION-MAKING .....	13
III. CONCLUSIONS .....	15
ANNEX II. MAIN STATISTICAL INFORMATION .....	16

ANNEX I. REPORT OF THE EXPERTS ON THE BASIS OF THEIR MISSION TO JORDAN AND THE SYRIAN ARAB REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territories is profoundly influenced by the consequences of continued military occupation, following war in 1967, and the tragic events connected with the Palestinian popular uprising against occupation, the Intifada, which began in December 1987.

The findings of the mission reveal that the situation of Palestinian women and children could not be separated from the larger political question. From the point of views of women interviewed, without a political solution such as an independent state, their situation and that of their children would deteriorate further and was not likely to be improved.

That political situation has aspects far beyond the mandate of the mission and which are dealt with in other United Nations bodies. However, for Palestinian women, the struggle for an independent Palestinian state and a Palestinian identity was central to their lives. They expressed a willingness to accept sacrifices, including their children, in order to achieve this.

There is no doubt that women and children are suffering physically, economically and emotionally under the existing situation. There is also no doubt that women are playing a central role in the struggle of their people. This increased participation is changing the nature of their role in society and they are accordingly changing society as such. The society which emerges as a result of these changes could be very different for women.

Given the limited time available to the mission and its inability to visit the occupied Palestinian territories themselves, an effort was made to select interviewees from the broadest possible spectrum of people who could provide information on conditions either from their personal or their professional experience. Because of concern for the physical security of interviewees and their families, the names are being kept confidential. The mission interviewed 22 persons, out of which three were men. Fifteen of the interviewees lived in the occupied territories, the remainder in Jordan. Out of 19 women interviewed, 13 were married, one divorced, one widowed and four single. A few women were separated from their husbands, due to deportation or their husbands' arrests, and were staying with their parents in Jordan. The age of interviewees ranged from 19 to 62 years. Only five of the interviewed women worked although most of them (16) had professional training, including university degrees. Several had doctorate degrees, a few were physicians, others were qualified teachers working previously in educational institutions of different levels from kindergartens to universities. The great majority of those qualified and unemployed women stated that they did not work because of a lack of any job opportunities. A few said they had lost their previous jobs for political reasons, deportation or forced emigration from the West Bank. Only very few stopped working after getting married and never returned to their jobs. The married and widowed women (14) all had at least two children each. In four cases the number of children was four or more.

About half of the interviewed women were involved in various kinds of social activities, working for women's organizations, charity and self-reliance associations, women's networks and workshops. A few of them have been involved, at least in certain periods of their lives, in direct political activities, such as demonstrations or "underground" education.

On the basis of the information obtained in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, the mission drafted its report in Vienna from 17 to 19 December 1989. The statistics included in Annex II were prepared by the Division for the Advancement of Women.

I. CONDITIONS OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

The conditions of Palestinian women and children can be seen in terms of longer-term trends, reflected in statistics and in studies, as well as in testimony about their daily lives under the occupation and in the Intifada. Many of the conditions described could be termed violations of human rights as these are defined in international law. Many of these are reflected in the mission's findings regarding specific sectors like education, health and employment.

Military occupation tightening its grip during Intifada, has involved administrative and judicial measures that have had particular effects on women. This is reflected in the increased levels of violence, in the use of collective punishment such as detentions or searches of houses, or curfews, cutting off of electricity and water supply, closing of schools or demolition of houses.

Practices affecting the lives of women which were important included: land confiscation, demolition of trees and crops, employing cultural taboos in a way to cause stress to women, shooting, imprisonment of women, including pregnant women, health problems facing women in jail, deportation of husband or wife, closing down of women's organizations and women's production centers, destruction of hospital equipment, destruction of property in the home, and destruction of family homes. Women are also affected by punitive measures employed against them and members of their families: arrests and beatings, verbal insults, forced cleaning of slogans from walls and, above all, school closings.

The efforts to suppress the Intifada had included administrative measures which did not involve due process of law. The mission heard extensive testimony on the harsh treatment of women detainees, including women held in administrative detention. Prisons were reported as overcrowded and medical care, especially for pregnant women, was reported as inadequate. Infants born in prison remaining with the mother during her period of incarceration receive very poor health care. The imprisonment of women is particularly stressful to the family since in traditional cultures women are totally responsible for the private sphere of the home. While women from the community may seek to perform a detained woman's roles as best they can, her children are also sometimes cared for by relatives who may live in a distant village or section of town. This upheaval in the family causes stress on the children as well as stress on the mother.

The witnesses interviewed felt that the punitive measures were intended to make life difficult and even impossible in order to encourage emigration.

A. Impact on the Palestinian family

The situation has an impact on the Palestinian family. On the one hand its traditional structure regained its importance during the Intifada. Its members comfort each other and give more feelings of security to the children. On the other hand, the role of women has become more important and on a more equal footing with men. Partnership between men and women, including in some cases sharing of domestic duties and child care, is becoming more natural and frequent. The relations within the families are becoming mutually supportive, families unity strengthened. Only in a few cases was there an indication that stress resulted in tension between the husband and the wife.

However, because schools are closed, many parents consider it safer for girls to marry early and for this reason they are beginning to have many children and from a very early age. For women giving testimony, the high fertility of mothers is seen as something positive, as a reassurance of the continued existence of the nation. Although before the Intifada, people were beginning to talk about family planning, now mothers are said to want to have more children. It was stated by many that loss of land and freedom is worse than losing one's children.

In the context of the Intifada, the family lives under tremendous psychological pressure. While children distribute pamphlets and participate in the conflict, it is reported that at night they display psychosomatic symptoms such as convulsions, bed-wetting and even cases of diabetes. Many women indicated a sense of guilt because they could not prevent children from participating in actions that they know could be physically and morally harmful to the child. This may have long-term effects on the child as an adult.

In addition to the stress produced by their direct involvement in community aspects of the Intifada, women must cope with difficult conditions within their families. Women separated from their husbands live in fear for the husbands lives, since they often have no information about what is happening to them. The accompaniment of curfews with cutting off of electricity means that many large families are forced to live in close quarters for many days without amenities. Instances were reported where deportations of wives who had not been born in the occupied territories was employed as a punitive measure to coerce the husbands. If the husband refused to collaborate with the authorities, the wife's permit to stay in the occupied territories was not extended.

This also affects the children. Children are exposed to violence often at an early age and rapidly are made aware of the political realities of occupation. During curfews that sometimes last for several days, fear and aggression is expressed inside the house. This places considerable pressure on the members of the families sometimes causing tension between the parents. The children engage in role-playing the Palestinian/Israeli conflict - acting out the stress by fighting and screaming. If not, they sit frequently in front of the TV watching violence. The psychological impact on the children can be seen in the frustration, nervousness, stress, fear and aggression. The long term effects cannot be predicted with certainty. However, from previous conflicts and wars, research shows that this lack of normal childhood will influence the rest of their lives. Many of the mothers feel that the next generation is going to pay too high a price. Not having schools, children are irritable and nervous and sometimes throw stones at each other; their mothers have to explain to them that the enemy is external. Before, the respectful and obedient child was considered superior; now the strong, muscular and aggressive child is more popular.

In sum, the Intifada, implying a constant state of uncertainty and fear combined with the new roles and responsibilities, place considerable stress and pressure on Palestinian women. They have to assume a major part of domestic and economic responsibilities in order to ensure a minimum of subsistence to their families. They also have to educate their children, making up for closed schools and kindergartens. Their houses have been often searched, children threatened by soldiers breaking in at any time of day or night. Some women lost their children, husbands or other close family members. Others lost their houses, furniture, property, pieces of land or have been deported. Many women live with their extensive families in the overcrowded rooms, without proper nutrition, health care, proper hygienic standards. Having to cope with all those demands often lead to and affect seriously their health in an environment where health services are becoming precarious, as seen below.

B. Education

Education has long been viewed as an important asset by Palestinians but has become specially important since the occupation of 1967. It is perceived as a way of giving children some security for the future in an uncertain world.

During this period, there have been some marked changes regarding who has access to education, with quite rapid increases in the numbers of girls who go to school, including university level. While women's access to education and the impact it has on their lives are conditioned by the social attitudes to women within Palestinian society, there is full acceptance today that girls, whatever their social background, as well as boys should attend school for at least 6 years.

Palestinian children living in the occupied territories receive formal education through institutions managed by the occupying authorities, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and private organizations. Over 60 per cent are institutions controlled by the Government of the occupation authorities. These institutions include a small number of kindergarten schools for children below 6 years of age; elementary schools for children between 6 and 12 years of age; and preparatory schools for children between 13 and 15 years of age. The elementary and preparatory levels are compulsory serving well over 450,000 pupils. Schools in the Gaza Strip follow the Egyptian curriculum and those in the West Bank the Jordanian curriculum, except for Al-Quds, Jerusalem, where schools are compelled to follow the educational system of Israel, the occupying power.

In rural areas of the West Bank, schools above the primary level are few. This means that children continuing their schooling have to commute, sometimes quite long distances, especially to secondary schools. Many families do not regard commuting as acceptable for girls. In rural areas this often combines existing social pressures to keep girls at home after the primary cycle to help with domestic or agricultural work. The fact that many men are not present in their families - so that the women are heads of households - often leaves the burden on these girls which is viewed as necessary to the family's survival. It certainly seems to be the case that girls in the camps generally stay at school longer than their rural sisters.

Since 1987, intrusions by the military of kindergartens, preschools and school campuses have been commonplace particularly in West Bank. The main current educational problem is that since December 1987, hardly any formal education at any level has been provided to about 500,000 people in the Occupied Territories. This leads to serious consequences for the pupils and their families. Kindergartens, schools and universities have been closed for weeks and months. The children have to play and act in the streets. This gives them the opportunity to confront the violence they are experiencing: they throw stones and burn tires.

To try to make the best out of the situation, the women are maintaining "underground teaching" and clandestine education. The women - mothers or volunteer teachers - are teaching the children in the mosques and homes. However, at the beginning of the third year of the Intifada this has continued, although some women have had to stop their participation because of harassment and provocation.

As noted earlier with Intifada the Palestinian women found themselves involved in many new roles and tasks. They consider themselves ahead of other Arab women, for example women interviewed referred to new development such as men starting to accept women's involvement outside the house and even encourage women to be active in the community. TV certainly has an important impact in this respect - they can watch what other women are doing, especially in the occupied territories. The fact that school girls frequently have taken part in demonstrations and strikes has certainly altered men's perceptions of them, and these exceptional circumstances have altered what is permitted as far as girls' behavior in public. In that sense, the Intifada is clearly speeding up the process of equal rights for males and females.

The Women's Union, which now is forbidden at the West Bank and Gaza Strip, is running hospitals, schools and kindergartens. Important work for pre-school children is done. This aim to fill the gap which has existed in preschool education, and to develop new, more child-centered and less rigid educational ideas is something which may also help to break down some male-female stereotypes.

For years the universities face constant challenges from the occupation authorities, including military raids on campus, arrests of students, and closures. For persons with vocational and university education, unemployment has reached crisis levels. Job opportunities are limited for any graduate. This fact means that men's needs tend to take priority and women are therefore less likely to seek employment. Because of this, some families do not see the value of higher education for their daughters and prefer early marriages.

The Intifada is, as we see, seriously inhibiting girls from pursuing their education, as well as influencing the quality of education provided. There is no continuity in teaching. Especially at the preschool, primary and secondary level, the most fundamental and necessary equipment are missing. When schools were open, they were frequently invaded by occupation authorities, with accompanying disturbance to the children and teaching staff and damage to furniture and equipment.

C. Health and psychological well-being

According to a number of witnesses interviewed, the health conditions of the Palestinian population (men, women and children in the occupied territories) is rapidly deteriorating due to an increase in curfews, use of tear gas against the population, wounding by rubber and live bullets, delays in getting wounded to hospitals, beatings and broken bones, and the general decline in economic standards. Casualty statistics indicate that 10 percent of the fatalities and 23% of the injured connected with the Intifada and measures to suppress it were women. Also, inadequate sanitation, nutrition and water supply, insufficient access to medical facilities and high costs of medical care provided by Israeli authorities continue to be factors contributing to poor health conditions in the area. Pregnant women in particular suffer from the use of tear gas in closed areas and statistics indicate a significant increase in miscarriages as a result. The stressful situation in the occupied territories is linked to the drying up of the mother's breast milk supply causing problems of malnutrition among infants and new born babies. In times of curfew, no other milk can be found to feed the babies. Water mixed with starch has been used as a substitute for mother's milk with unsuccessful results. Also, some families are unable to afford the cost of purchasing canned milk for infants, and consequently the babies suffer from poor nutrition.

In times of general curfews, telephone communications are sometimes cut. Ambulances are prevented from responding to emergency calls, including deliveries. Home deliveries are, therefore, increasing. Complications for mother and infant mortality rates are rising as a result. Jalazoon camp was under curfew for 48 days, other camps as well were under long periods of curfew.

There is as well a deterioration of the psychological well-being of mothers in particular. During prolonged periods of curfew, women are fully responsible for finding food to feed the large Palestinian family. They must also insure that the children stay within the family home which is often over-crowded. Women must also deal with their husband's frustration at his inability to go out and earn an income. It was stated that women seemed to be stronger and more able to cope with the circumstances than men, some of whom had developed psychological problems. However, the combined effect of this stressful situation is linked to an increase in cases of high blood pressure, miscarriages, diabetes, headaches and psycho-somatic illnesses among women. There are few medical services available for these stress-related problems.

D. Economy and employment

The deterioration in the economic standards of the territories and the decline in employment rates had a strong impact on the socio-political situation which caused the young generation to resist occupation. The young and the professional class see a dim economic future for them in the Occupied Territories since the economy is set up to absorb and encourage workers who labour for the benefit of the Israeli economy. The situation of the worker is also insecure since most work without official papers and therefore receive no benefits. There was some evidence given that Palestinian workers receive less than an Israeli worker. These are the general conditions that existed in the territories before the Intifada.

Prior to the Intifada women worked in Israel in four main areas: manufacturing, cleaning, sweatshops, and picking fruits. They were paid roughly 50% of what an Israeli worker received, since they were not part of the formal labour force covered by labour regulations. Some women experienced stress because of the distance between their village and their work place. Some women felt that they prefer not to work for an economic system perceived by the local population to be oppressive. During the Intifada many women quit these jobs and sought to replace them with independent work within the home: growing vegetables for the market place, knitting caps and sweaters for prisoners and sewing.

During the last year, firstly because of curfews, fewer workers, including women, worked in Israel. Consequently, in order to survive the population returned to practices that exist in less economically developed cultures where household economies predominate. A second motivating factor was the desire to boycott goods made in Israel. By returning to a more primitive form of economy, i.e., forming small co-operatives for canning, growing small vegetable gardens and raising poultry, women's role in the economic system became more important since women have been traditionally the ones to carry on such work. Should these small industries indeed become the new infrastructure of the new State, as many have said, then women are currently building this infrastructure. Many women felt that it is important to insure their continued participation in socio-economic matters after a solution to the current situation has been reached.

A number of co-operatives planned by women and run by women are operating on the West Bank. These co-operatives produce canned goods, biscuits and cookies, grow and sell vegetables, and raise poultry for local markets. Their objective is to encourage women to earn a living within reach of their children, in the same village. These co-operatives provide a sample of a very productive system of production in which women could become more involved. The women stated that they need more funding and more training in order to improve this system.

Women are also engaged in sewing, knitting and embroidery centers that operate all over the occupied territories. However, some of these centers have been closed down in recent months by the occupation authorities. Women are working in their homes, but the problem they now face is that of marketing their products since the organizations which used to buy these products are having financial problems and the export of many commodities is prohibited..

The closing down of women's organizations such as In'ash al-Usra (family rehabilitation) was considered to be a step that will retard the self reliance measures that women have recently assumed in order to cope with current conditions. Such organizations, run by women for women, account for many home industries such as sewing and embroidery. Through these organizations women can supplement their income without having to leave their children. These institutions were instrumental also in education adult women and in providing them with vocational training. In'ash al-Usra used to provide for 5,400 families, it is now shut down. In order to continue to employ its of staff 198 women, the organization continued to operate on a smaller scale in a clandestine fashion in private homes. The organization had centers for sewing, centers for embroidery, and a production center for making cookies. It used to lend money for small agrarian projects headed by women. Since the organization is now prevented from selling products made before the closing orders went into effect, the organization has been totally disabled financially.

Since men are home due to curfew and unemployment, they are now helping in home industries. Some men learned how to knit caps for prisoners. These developments mark an important role transformation for women in Palestinian society, focussing on self reliant and independent economic system.

The problem facing the population is that they currently have very little control over their economic system, including agrarian and small-scale industries. In times of curfew big trucks loaded with home grown vegetables are left by the sidewalk to rot while the population is in need of these nutrients. During curfews, the electricity is sometimes shut off causing damage to products in co-operatives that need refrigeration or baking. While these economic steps are helping women heads of households increase their meager income, under the current conditions home economics cannot provide a viable alternative to an economic system that is based on developing the potential of the occupied territories. It must also be noted that home industries cannot absorb the high rates of professionals who cannot find employment in their own fields.

In order to ensure the subsistence of the Palestinian population, it appeared nonetheless necessary in the short term to provide women's co-operatives and organizations with measures that would allow them to continue their efforts towards self reliance. Assistance in marketing products as well as training in production sales and management were identified as important areas that could effectively ameliorate the conditions of women struggling for the survival of the Palestinian economy.

II. CHANGING TRADITIONAL ROLES TOWARD SELF-RELIANCE AND DECISION-MAKING

A central women's role has been the preservation of tradition, national heritage, culture and its symbols, instilling in their children respect for national values and knowledge of their history. This was regarded as a necessary cultural and social precondition for the Intifada and a sustaining element in the continuing commitment of the Palestinian people to the uprising. The importance of this role has increased during two years of Intifada and clearly contributed to resisting the debilitating effects of the measures adopted by the occupation authorities to suppress the Intifada as well as to maintaining the morale and unity of Palestinian families, communities and nation. The preservation and increased importance of the traditional roles of Palestinian women have been accompanied by changes regarding many aspects of their family, social and political lives. In the context of the Intifada, women have gradually started to assume new roles and responsibilities. In addition to their roles of mothers, wives and sisters, they have become heads of household, main income earners, teachers, as well as social and political activists.

According to the interviewees Intifada would not have broken out and continued without the involvement of women. In particular certain traditional roles which women have customarily played in the family and in society, as well as traditional family structures have been crucial for the survival of Palestinian society under extremely repressive living conditions.

As a consequence of the conditions in the occupied territories, many women have been separated from their husbands and male family members when these were arrested, deported or detained. Some have become widows. In some families, male members have become physically or psychologically disabled. In all these cases many women have had to assume the role of head of households. As a result women have to make all decisions concerning both families and households on a daily basis, they undertake whatever paid work they can obtain to support their families, including work outside their homes and communities. Some women became the only bread winners in their extensive families, providing children, parents, younger brothers and sisters and often other relatives - such as the unemployed, elderly or handicapped - with the bare minimum of subsistence. These new roles, entailing often an economic dependence of male family members on their wives, mothers or daughters, has significantly strengthened the position of women in the family and in the community. It was stated by a number of the women interviewed that even the elderly fathers, who used to believe that a woman's place was at home, fully supported paid work of their daughters outside their households and considered them to be as good as men in providing for the family. Much of women's empowerment to participate in decision-making derives from their provision of essential income to the family.

It was also noted by the interviewees that women have begun to take increasingly decisions in the community, participate in local committees, prepare protest actions as well as and work for social welfare organizations, professional and labour unions. Women of all ages have begun joining men in public demonstrations, writing political statements on the walls, throwing stones and other forms of public political activities. For those activities, many women have been arrested, detained, deported, beaten or insulted along with men. As mentioned above, many Palestinians killed and injured during the Intifada were women.

Because schools have been closed during most of the Intifada. In particular in the West Bank, women have assumed the major responsibilities for teaching, running what has been termed "underground education" described earlier in the report. Because of the traditional importance of education within Palestinian society, this activity has particularly added to women's visibility and respectability.

Women also have been participating in women's committees, which have been responsible for various aspects of life during the Intifada, including education, health and self-reliance. This is particularly notable in providing support to special hardship cases, such as families with absent heads of household, numerous children and elderly, families without any income. This support takes various forms depending on existing circumstances. For example, women from the community take care of the children, provide the families with some clothes and food, often sewing and cooking in turns. In case of families whose houses were destroyed, women have organized shelter, sharing existing housing facilities or using houses of people from the locality who are living abroad. Whenever possible they also collect money, provide medicines and other basic necessities. A difficulty is that meetings have been prohibited because, at the meeting places, people are allegedly encouraged to participate in the Intifada.

The emerging new position of women in the society is reflected in many aspects of daily life. Besides the fact already noted that women can work outside the home and, by virtue of their income-earning, have a voice in domestic decision-making, women are also active members of various associations, unions and organizations both exclusively for women and with mixed membership. Some co-educational kindergartens and schools exist. Men and women can walk together down the street and attend meetings together.

The Intifada has meant in many respects a revolution for women. Women's issues have begun to be discussed as well as women's role in society. The traditional relations between men and women have been gradually changing, as is women's importance within their families, communities and the society as a whole. For example, more and more women decide themselves on choosing husbands, running households, seeking job opportunities, joining popular committees, and other forms of struggle.

This new role of women and their essential contribution to the Intifada have been accompanied by women's increased awareness of their new status and the wish to strengthen the participation in political decision-making both during the Intifada and in the future independent State. The ten percent participation of women in the Palestine National Council does not reflect - according to some women - their real contribution to and companionship in the struggle and has to be increased.

III. CONCLUSIONS

On the basis of its findings the mission reached the following conclusions:

In the long run, the basic improvement of the living conditions of the Palestinian women, their advancement, full equality and self-reliance can only be achieved by an end to the occupation. Until then and taking into consideration the present difficult and dangerous circumstances, some measures can be suggested as short-term, partial solutions to some problems.

- With regard to the legal aspects, there should be strict observance of relevant international legal norms, especially the application of international legal standards on armed conflict to protect women and children, such as the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949;
- With regard to the living conditions of Palestinian people the occupying power should stop collective punishment measures such as curfews, cuts of water supplies, electricity, demolishing of houses, closure of schools and hospitals, as those measures are particularly harmful to the Palestinian women and children.

Concerning women's self-reliance the following can be recommended:

- Israeli authorities should allow women's production centers to reopen;
- Governmental, non-governmental and intergovernmental organizations, including the United Nations system, should encourage and assist in existing income generating activities for Palestinian women, and in the creation of new jobs, whenever possible;
- Palestinian women should be assisted to create a women's centre that would provide possibilities for child care, education, discussion, cultural activities women's solidarity and some production. Such a centre could serve as a model for creation of similar institutions in other places, including refugee camps;
- Palestinian women should be encouraged to take part, whenever possible, in seminars and training workshops on equality rights, political participation and decision-making.

Palestinian women are part of what can only be termed a tragedy, but one which can and must be ended. It is a situation where people who were good, and still have the capacity for goodness, commit acts that violate the most elementary principles of humanity. It is reflected in the fact that young children are brought up in hatred and the need to participate in the strife, even being considered heroes and martyrs. It is also reflected in the fact that soldiers of the occupation, who are also young, kill and wound children and women and engage in other extreme behaviour. The mental stability of both occupied and occupier is endangered by this situation and it seems particularly important now, at a moment when humanity is celebrating the elimination of walls separating peoples elsewhere, that the wall between Palestinians and Israelis should come down as soon as possible, with a secure peace, with each people in its own land, so that the two peoples can develop culturally and economically, complement one another and even begin to look upon each other as brothers and sisters.

ANNEX II. MAIN STATISTICAL INFORMATION

POPULATION ESTIMATES, BY SEX AND AGE

1986	WEST BANK						GAZA STRIP
	F e m a l e s			M a l e s			F e m a l e s			M a l e s
	Number	Percentage	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Percentage
AGE	Thousand	within fem.	from Total	Thousand	within males	from Total	Thousand	within fem.	from Total	Thousand	within males	from Total
0-4	77,300	18.5	9.2	81,700	19.5	9.8	52,300	19.2	9.6	55,500	20.3	10.2
5-14	111,800	26.7	13.3	120,400	28.7	14.4	74,300	27.3	13.6	81,300	29.8	14.9
15-19	43,300	10.3	5.2	48,600	11.6	5.8	27,900	10.3	5.1	30,800	11.3	5.7
20-24	42,600	10.2	5.1	45,700	10.9	5.5	25,600	9.4	4.7	27,700	10.1	5.1
25-34	54,900	13.1	6.6	57,000	13.6	6.8	35,700	13.1	6.5	38,500	14.1	7.1
35-44	25,800	6.2	3.1	16,900	4.0	2.0	19,900	7.3	3.7	12,100	4.4	2.2
45-54	25,500	6.1	3.0	17,400	4.2	2.1	16,300	6.0	3.0	10,600	3.9	1.9
55-64	21,000	5.0	2.5	16,400	3.9	2.0	11,700	4.3	2.1	9,700	3.6	1.8
65+	16,700	4.0	2.0	14,700	3.5	1.8	8,300	3.1	1.5	6,900	2.5	1.3
TOTAL	418,900	100.0	50.01	418,800	100.0	49.99	272,000	100.0	49.9	273,100	100.0	50.10

Grand TOTAL 837,700

545,100

Source: Statistical Abstract of Israel 1988, No. 39 (Central Bureau of Statistics, 1988), table XXVII/3.

POPULATION ESTIMATES OF PALESTINIAN REFUGEES, BY SEX AND AGE

1989	WEST BANK						GAZA STRIP
	F e m a l e s			M a l e s			F e m a l e s			M a l e s
	Number	Percentage	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Percentage
AGE	Thousand	within fem.	from Total	Thousand	within males	from Total	Thousand	within fem.	from Total	Thousand	within males	from Total
0-4	11,453	5.8	2.8	12,339	6.0	3.1	16,753	7.1	3.5	18,297	7.4	3.8
5-14	39,292	19.9	9.7	42,485	20.6	10.5	60,349	25.7	12.6	64,627	26.3	13.4
15-19	20,307	10.3	5.0	22,066	10.7	5.5	24,834	10.6	5.2	26,966	11.0	5.6
20-24	18,515	9.4	4.6	20,331	9.8	5.0	22,302	9.5	4.6	23,813	9.7	5.0
25-34	32,061	16.3	7.9	35,141	17.0	8.7	36,833	15.7	7.7	39,864	16.2	8.3
35-44	25,333	12.8	6.3	27,606	13.4	6.8	25,905	11.0	5.4	29,020	11.8	6.0
45-54	20,371	10.3	5.0	21,864	10.6	5.4	19,534	8.3	4.1	21,337	8.7	4.4
55-64	13,836	7.0	3.4	11,647	5.6	2.9	14,936	6.4	3.1	11,511	4.7	2.4
65+	16,098	8.2	4.0	12,952	6.3	3.2	13,342	5.7	2.8	10,583	4.3	2.2
TOTAL	197,266	100.0	48.86	206,431	100.0	51.14	234,788	100.0	48.8	246,018	100.0	51.17

Grand TOTAL 403,697

480,806

Source: UNRWA Statistics of Palestine Refugees, REF. WWR 730/B run date 30/11/89

POPULATION ESTIMATES OF PALESTINIAN REFUGEES, BY SEX AND AGE

1989 AGE	J O R D A N						L E B A N O N
	F e m a l e s			M a l e s			F e m a l e s			M a l e s
	Number Thousand	Percentage within females	Percentage from Total	Number Thousand	Percentage within males	Percentage from Total	Number Thousand	Percentage within females	Percentage from Total	Number Thousand	Percentage within males	Percentage from Total
0-4	26,099	5.9	2.9	27,331	5.8	3.0	10,017	6.9	3.4	10,561	7.0	3.6
5-14	90,771	20.5	9.9	96,176	20.4	10.5	31,309	21.6	10.6	33,110	22.0	11.2
15-19	51,597	11.6	5.6	55,162	11.7	6.0	14,852	10.2	5.0	15,840	10.5	5.4
20-24	48,892	11.0	5.4	53,072	11.3	5.8	15,035	10.4	5.1	15,883	10.5	5.4
25-34	71,988	16.2	7.9	80,364	17.1	8.8	25,216	17.4	8.5	26,923	17.9	9.1
35-44	50,049	11.3	5.5	55,740	11.8	6.1	15,586	10.7	5.3	16,600	11.0	5.6
45-54	42,110	9.5	4.6	49,500	10.5	5.4	12,955	8.9	4.4	14,180	9.4	4.8
55-64	27,003	6.1	3.0	24,563	5.2	2.7	8,201	5.6	2.8	7,711	5.1	2.6
65+	34,650	7.8	3.8	28,702	6.1	3.1	12,068	8.3	4.1	9,895	6.6	3.3
TOTAL	443,159	100.0	48.50	470,610	100.0	51.50	145,239	100.0	49.1	150,703	100.0	50.92

Grand TOTAL 913,769

295,942

Source: UNRWA Statistics of Palestine Refugees, REF. WWR 730/B run date 30/11/89

POPULATION ESTIMATES OF PALESTINIAN REFUGEES, BY SEX AND AGE

1989 AGE	S Y R I A N A R A B R E P U B L I C
	F e m a l e s			M a l e s
	Number Thousand	Percentage within females	Percentage from Total	Number Thousand	Percentage within males	Percentage from Total
0-4	11,808	8.6	4.3	12,411	8.9	4.5
5-14	31,390	23.0	11.4	32,895	23.6	11.9
15-19	14,337	10.5	5.2	11,777	8.4	4.3
20-24	13,812	10.1	5.0	17,283	12.4	6.3
25-34	23,038	16.9	8.3	23,914	17.1	8.7
35-44	14,236	10.4	5.2	14,779	10.6	5.4
45-54	11,494	8.4	4.2	12,488	8.9	4.5
55-64	7,164	5.2	2.6	6,768	4.8	2.5
65+	9,331	6.8	3.4	7,278	5.2	2.6
TOTAL	136,610	100.0	49.46	139,593	100.0	50.54

Grand TOTAL 276,203

Source: UNRWA Statistics of Palestine Refugees, REF. WWR 730/B run date 30/11/89

ENROLMENT RATIO OF FEMALE REFUGEE PUPILS IN UNRWA, GOVERNMENT(a) AND PRIVATE(a) SCHOOLS, DISTRIBUTED BY SINGLE YEAR AGE GROUP, 1987-1988

West Bank							Gaza Strip
AGE	POPULATION		ENROLMENT		RATIO (%) *		AGE	POPULATION		ENROLMENT		RATIO (%) *
	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS		BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS
6	3594	3431	2324	2044	64.7	59.6	6	6367	5942	5629	5185	88.4	87.3
7	4015	3634	3037	2441	75.6	67.2	7	6400	6064	5912	5372	92.4	88.6
8	4175	3814	3116	2639	74.6	69.2	8	6522	6077	5797	5286	88.9	87
9	4119	3891	2913	2764	70.7	71	9	6206	5809	5573	5117	89.8	88.1
10	4253	3890	2855	2562	67.1	65.9	10	5861	5403	5163	4626	88.1	85.6
11	4255	3991	2926	2605	68.8	65.3	11	5933	5494	5175	4620	87.2	84.1
12	4236	3892	2762	2439	65.2	62.7	12	5768	5218	4903	4177	85	80
13	4284	4031	2859	2446	66.7	60.7	13	5818	5392	4662	4126	80.1	76.5
14	4480	3986	2797	2270	62.4	56.9	14	5526	5137	4297	3737	77.8	72.7
15	4242	4028	2008	1789	47.3	44.4	15	5114	4672	3067	2474	60	53
16	4352	3976	1368	1388	31.4	34.9	16	4886	4478	2417	2300	49.5	51.4
17	4177	3848	1046	1097	25	28.5	17	4395	4178	1922	1940	43.7	46.4
18	4159	3755	455	453	10.9	12	18	4856	4490	839	826	17.3	18.4
19	3895	3610	134	115	3.4	0.2	19	4152	3912	243	207	5.9	5.3
TOTAL	58236	53777	30600	27052	52.5	50.3	TOTAL	77804	72266	55599	49993	71.5	69.2

Jordan							Lebanon							Syrian Arab Rep.
AGE	POPULATION		ENROLMENT		RATIO (%) *		AGE	POPULATION		ENROLMENT		RATIO (%) *		AGE	POPULATION		ENROLMENT		RATIO (%) *
	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS		BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS		BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS	BOYS	GIRLS
6	8654	8271	8069	7586	93.2	91.7	6	3429	3245	2272	1977	66.2	60.9	6	3229	3036	2903	2641	89.9	87
7	9483	8815	8343	7833	88	88.9	7	3486	3075	2232	1928	64	62.7	7	3271	3098	2804	2515	85.7	81.2
8	10041	9468	8562	8054	85.3	85.1	8	3372	3133	2137	1791	63.4	57.2	8	3145	3035	2777	2722	88.3	89.7
9	10115	9590	8435	7991	83.4	83.3	9	3285	3082	1802	1902	54.9	61.7	9	3114	2961	2710	2464	87	83.2
10	10225	9445	8309	7676	81.3	81.3	10	2811	2777	1827	1765	65	63.6	10	3022	2930	2705	2553	89.5	87.1
11	9668	9167	7740	7182	80.1	78.3	11	2901	2804	1783	2031	61.5	72.4	11	2852	2796	2671	2364	93.7	84.5
12	9827	9171	7761	6875	79	75	12	2969	2750	1905	1771	64.2	64.4	12	2780	2677	2655	2425	95.5	90.6
13	10815	10086	7895	7168	73	71.1	13	3138	2999	1553	1603	49.5	53.4	13	2976	2882	2802	2301	94.1	79.8
14	10933	10245	7503	6773	68.6	66.1	14	2986	2780	1855	1698	62.1	61	14	2867	2730	2254	1988	78.6	72.8
15	11090	10375	4205	4197	37.9	40.4	15	3159	2977	1687	1429	53.4	48	15	2988	2924	1464	1364	49	46.6
16	11015	10260	3094	3440	28.1	33.5	16	3218	2955	1173	978	36.4	33.1	16	3008	2896	1155	1122	38.4	38.7
17	11114	10332	2536	2761	22.8	26.7	17	3099	2903	870	676	28.1	23.3	17	2844	2845	919	914	32.3	32.1
18	10976	9930	1118	1150	10.2	11.6	18	3196	3019	348	263	10.9	8.7	18	2871	2757	396	386	13.8	14
19	10131	9479	324	286	3.2	3	19	3275	3056	95	54	3.1	1.8	19	2825	2730	116	96	4.1	3.5
TOTAL	144087	134634	83894	78972	58.2	58.7	TOTAL	44324	41555	21539	19866	48.6	47.8	TOTAL	41792	40297	28331	25855	67.8	64.1

*: Ratio of enrolment of pupils to the total number of population of each age group.

Source: UNRWA Department of Education Statistical Year book 1987-88, Table 9.

HEADS OF FAMILIES, BY SEX, 1989.

SEX/REGION	West Bank	Gaza Strip	Jordan	Lebanon	Syrian Arab Republic	T O T A L
Males	58728	84932	102145	52755	44619	343179
Females	33291	17796	22731	14846	12987	101651
TOTAL	92019	102728	124876	67601	57606	444830
% of female heads of family	36.2	17.3	18.2	22.0	22.5	22.9

Source: UNRWA Statistics of Palestine Refugees, REF. WWR 760/A /1989

HOUSEHOLDS, BY SIZE, HOUSING DENSITY, AND SIZE OF DWELLING, 1987

	West Bank	Gaza Strip
PERSONS IN HOUSEHOLDS	1987	1987
1	4.5	3
2	8.1	8.4
3	7.8	9.4
4	9.4	10.3
5	10.9	10.5
6	11.5	11.6
7 +	47.8	46.8
ROOMS IN DWELLING
1	11	17.6
2	29.3	28
3	29.4	26.4
4	20	17.3
5 +	10.3	10.7
PERSONS PER ROOM
less than 1	7.3	5.2
1	10.3	7
1.1-1.9	20.4	18
2-2.9	29.1	32.1
3-3.9	17.3	19.5
4-4.9	8	9.6
5-5.9	3.8	4.3
6 +	3.8	4.3
Average No. of persons per household (incl. singles)	6.51	6.5

Source: Statistical Abstract of Israel 1988, No. 39 (Central Bureau of Statistics, 1988), Table XXVII/15.

NUMBER AND DISTRIBUTION OF "SPECIAL HARDSHIP CASES" * ( As at 30 June 1989)

Field	Number of families	Receiving rations	Not a) receiving rations	Total	% of refugee population
West Bank	5841	21854	2353	24207	6.1
Gaza Strip	9052	39942	1959	41901	8.6
Lebanon	8157	31348	371	31719	10.8
Syrian Arab Republic	4011	13004	1240	14244	5.2
Jordan	6186	27237	2535	29772	3.3
TOTAL	33247	133385	8458	141843	6.1

a): includes children under 1 year of age, men serving compulsory military service or imprisoned, students studying away from home etc.

*: Families with no male between the ages of 18 and 55 years in the household, or with one who is incapable, for medical reasons, of earning a living.

Source: Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty fourth Session, Supplement No. 13, (A44/13) Table 3.

POPULATION AGED 14 AND OVER, BY YEARS OF SCHOOLING, AGE AND SEX.

WEST BANK

SEX and AGE	YEARS OF SCHOOLING					Thousands
	Percentage
	13+	9 to 12	7 to 8	1 to 6	0
MALES
1970	1.4	21.3	14.7	34.8	27.8	153.7
1975	8.6	26.0	14.7	30.5	20.2	177.2
1980	11.0	30.9	15.1	28.8	14.2	193.3
1985	13.7	32.5	16.2	24.2	13.4	215.1
1986	14.2	32.9	16.8	23.9	12.2	222.9
TOTAL 1987*	13.9	34.2	14.7	24.8	12.4	221.3
15-17	0.4	62.2	22.6	14.1	0.7	27.0
18-24	20.6	46.0	15.9	16.1	1.4	66.6
25-34	21.3	33.1	17.9	25.2	2.5	61.3
35-44	12.7	27.7	13.9	36.4	9.3	17.2
45-54	6.5	11.8	7.5	44.1	30.1	18.5
55-64	1.8	4.9	4.9	43.6	44.8	16.3
65+	0.7	1.4	2.1	23.1	72.7	14.4
FEMALES
1970	0.5	8.8	6.7	18.9	65.1	169.2
1975	2.3	13.9	9.5	21.5	52.8	189.7
1980	3.9	19.0	10.5	24.8	41.8	207.7
1985	6.6	22.2	11.9	23.0	36.3	228.7
1986	7.1	22.8	12.2	23.7	34.2	236.7
TOTAL 1987*	6.8	24.4	10.5	23.7	34.6	234.5
15-17	0.4	55.2	21.0	21.0	2.4	25.1
18-24	14.2	39.6	14.3	26.1	5.8	60.6
25-34	10.0	24.3	12.8	36.8	16.1	58.3
35-44	3.8	12.7	6.7	28.5	48.3	26.8
45-54	1.2	5.0	2.7	13.1	78.0	25.7
55-64	-	0.9	2.3	6.9	89.9	21.8
65+	-	1.2	1.2	3.8	93.8	16.2

GAZA STRIP

SEX and AGE	YEARS OF SCHOOLING					Thousands
	Percentage
	13+	9 to 12	7 to 8	1 to 6	0
MALES
1970	0.6	31.5	9.1	24.6	34.2	90.4
1975	7.7	33.6	10.0	23.5	25.2	104.8
1980	10.6	36.6	1.5	23.9	18.4	115.8
1985	15.5	36.5	10.4	23.5	14.1	125.8
1986	16.3	37.7	10.4	22.3	13.3	138.9
TOTAL 1987*	14.6	39.8	9.3	23.3	13.0	137.0
15-17	0.6	66.5	13.4	18.9	0.6	16.4
18-24	20.8	44.3	11.2	22.2	1.5	41.0
25-34	21.7	41.9	10.5	22.8	3.1	39.1
35-44	15.6	49.2	5.5	24.2	5.5	12.8
45-54	6.3	20.5	5.4	33.9	33.9	11.1
55-64	2.1	4.1	3.1	30.9	59.8	9.7
65+	-	1.5	1.5	13.4	83.6	6.9
FEMALES
1970	0.4	18.4	5.6	10.3	65.3	106.4
1975	2.6	24.8	7.3	14.1	51.2	120.2
1980	3.6	29.0	10.0	16.6	40.8	126.9
1985	6.0	33.8	9.5	16.9	33.8	135.6
1986	6.4	34.9	9.5	16.9	32.3	147.7
TOTAL 1987*	6.1	37.1	8.8	17.2	30.8	145.5
15-17	0.7	67.5	13.6	15.6	2.6	15.4
18-24	11.8	50.8	12.1	21.1	4.2	37.9
25-34	8.6	49.7	12.5	20.0	9.2	36.0
35-44	5.1	28.6	6.0	22.1	38.2	19.9
45-54	0.6	3.6	2.4	13.2	80.2	16.5
55-64	-	0.8	0.8	7.1	91.3	12.7
65+	-	-	-	1.4	98.6	7.1

*: Data refer to persons aged 15 and over.

Source: Statistical Abstract of Israel 1988, No. 39 (Central Bureau of Statistics, 1988) table XXVII/46.

DISTRIBUTION OF REFUGEE PUPILS IN UNRWA SCHOOLS a) (As of 15 October 1988)

Field	No. of schools	No. of teachers	Number of pupils in elementary classes c)			Number of pupils in preparatory classes c)			Total number of pupils
			boys	girls	Total	boys	girls	Total
WEST BANK b)	98	1340	12696	15225	27921	5207	6147	11354	39275
GAZA STRIP	147	2619	33735	31743	65478	13569	12175	25744	91222
LEBANON	76	1183	11385	11315	22700	5039	5087	10126	32826
SYRIAN ARAB REPUBLIC	110	1557	19123	17917	37040	8576	7762	16338	53378
JORDAN	197	3736	47505	46026	93531	21115	19789	40904	134435
TOTAL	628	10435	124444	122226	246670	53506	50960	104466	351136

a): Excluding 110339 refugee pupils attending government and private schools

b): 90 out of 98 schools in the West Bank were closed under Israeli military orders for almost all of the 1988-1989 school year, and so 36592 pupils were thus deprived of education

c): including all non-eligible children attending UNRWA schools, who now number 55790.

Of those, 18428 are in the Gaza Strip, where all refugee children are regarded as eligible for education services.

In addition, 2502 pupils in Lebanon have been accepted in Agency schools owing to the situation prevailing in the country.

Source: Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty fourth Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/44/13), Table 5.

EMPLOYED PERSONS AND EMPLOYEES, BY OCCUPATION AND SEX.

WEST BANK	YEAR	TOTAL/Thousand	Scientific & academic workers	Other professional, technical & related workers	Administrators & managers	Clerical & related workers	Sales workers	Service workers	Agricultural workers	Skilled workers	Other workers in	TOTAL %
										in industry, mining building, transport & other skilled workers	industry, transport, building & unskilled workers
all employed persons	1986	167000	2.7	5.9	1.1	2.7	10	6.9	23.2	25.4	22	99.90
	1987	177600	2.4	5.6	1.1	2.5	10.1	8	20.6	27.2	22.5	100.00
Thereof: Males	1986	143700	2.0	3.3	1.1	2.1	9.6	6.3	15.7	24.2	21.9	86.0
	1987	156200	1.9	3.3	1.1	1.9	9.7	7.3	14.8	25.7	22.3	88.0
Thereof: Females	1986	23300	0.7	2.6	0.0	0.6	0.4	0.6	7.5	1.2	0.1	13.85
	1987	21400	0.5	2.3	0.0	0.6	0.4	0.7	5.8	1.5	0.2	12.05
all employees	1986	99800	3.7	9.5	0.2	4	2.3	9.5	7.8	28.6	34.4	100.00
	1987	111100	3.3	8.6	0.4	3.5	2.4	10.6	8.4	28.7	34.1	100.00
Thereof: Males	1986	89600	2.7	5.2	0.2	3.0	2.2	8.6	6.9	27.0	34.1	90.0
	1987	101100	2.5	4.8	0.4	2.7	2.4	9.7	7.6	27.0	33.9	91.0
Thereof: Females	1986	10000	1.0	4.3	0.0	1.0	0.1	0.9	0.9	1.6	0.3	10.02
	1987	10000	0.8	3.8	0.0	0.8	0.0	0.9	0.8	1.7	0.2	9.00

GAZA STRIP	YEAR	TOTAL/Thousand	Scientific & academic workers	Other professional, technical & related workers	Administrators & managers	Clerical & related workers	Sales workers	Service workers	Agricultural workers	Skilled workers	Other workers in	TOTAL %
										in industry, mining building, transport & other skilled workers	industry, transport, building & unskilled workers
all employed persons	1986	94200	1.3	5.9	1.4	2.4	10.7	8.2	18.9	30.7	20.4	99.9
	1987	100200	1.8	5.9	1.3	2.2	11.4	8.5	18.1	31.7	19.1	100
Thereof: Males	1986	90200	1.1	3.6	1.2	2.2	10.6	8.0	18.6	30.0	20.3	95.8
	1987	96000	1.6	3.4	1.3	2.1	11.0	8.4	17.7	31.2	19.1	95.9
Thereof: Females	1986	4000	0.2	2.3	0.2	0.2	0.1	0.2	0.3	0.7	0.1	4.1
	1987	4200	0.3	2.5	0.0	0.1	0.4	0.1	0.4	0.5	0.0	4.2
all employees	1986	64300	1.4	8.2	-	3.3	1.1	10.6	17.2	30.3	28	100.1
	1987	66900	2.2	8.2	-	3.1	1.7	10.9	16.1	31.4	26.5	100.1
Thereof: Males	1986	61200	1.2	4.9	-	2.8	1.0	10.5	16.8	29.9	27.9	95.1
	1987	63600	1.8	4.8	-	2.7	1.7	10.7	15.9	31.0	26.5	95.1
Thereof: Females	1986	3100	0.2	3.3	-	0.5	0.1	0.1	0.4	0.4	0.1	5.0
	1987	3300	0.4	3.4	-	0.4	0.0	0.2	0.2	0.4	0.0	5.0

Source: Statistical Abstract of Israel 1988, No.39 (Central Bureau of Statistics,1988), table XXVII/25.

Employed Palestinian population by economic sector and sex (in thousands)

WEST BANK
Economic sector	1970			1975			1980			1986
	Females	Males	% of wom. by field	Females	Males	% of wom. by field	Females	Males	% of wom. by field	Females	Males	% of wom. by field
Agriculture, Forestry and Fishing	11	34	24.4	14.5	21.8	39.9	16.3	19	46.2	12.7	25.9	32.9
Industry (Mining and Manufacturing)	4.1	12.4	24.8	3.3	18.7	15.0	2.5	20.3	11.0	2.4	24.8	8.8
Construction Building and Public Work	3.7	13.1	22.0	0.1	29.9	0.3	0	30.5	0.0	0.2	40.8	0.5
Commerce, Restaurants & Hotels	0.7	12.1	5.5	0.6	15.1	3.8	0.8	16.4	4.7	0.8	22.2	3.5
Transport, Storage and Communication	0.6	4.1	14.6	0	6	0.0	0.1	5.9	1.7	0	8.1	0.0
Public and Community Services	6	8.6	41.1	4.8	12.8	27.3	5.1	12.8	28.5	6.5	14.7	30.7
Other Sectors	0.3	3.9	7.1	0.6	4.3	12.2	0.4	4.7	7.8	0.4	7.5	5.1
TOTAL	26.4	88.2	23.0	23.9	108.6	18.0	25.2	109.6	18.7	23	144	13.8

GAZA STRIP
Economic sector	1970			1975			1980			1986
	Females	Males	% of wom. by field	Females	Males	% of wom. by field	Females	Males	% of wom. by field	Females	Males	% of wom. by field
Agriculture, Forestry and Fishing	2.8	16.6	13.5	0.9	16.5	5.2	0.7	14.4	4.6	0.7	17.4	3.9
Industry (Mining and Manufacturing)	1.2	5.7	17.4	1	9.3	9.7	1.4	14.4	8.9	0.7	15.7	4.3
Construction Building and Public Work	2.1	5.2	28.8	0.1	16	0.6	0	18.7	0.0	0	23.6	0.0
Commerce, Restaurants & Hotels	0	9.5	0.0	0.4	9.8	3.9	0.2	11.1	1.8	0.2	13.2	1.5
Transport, Storage and Communication	0	3.5	0.0	0	5.3	0.0	0.1	5.2	1.9	0	4.8	0.0
Public and Community Services	2.8	6.2	31.1	2.3	7.3	24.0	2.5	8	23.8	2.4	9.6	20.0
Other Sectors	0.6	2.8	17.6	0.2	3.5	5.4	0	4	0.0	0.2	5.6	3.4
TOTAL	9.3	49.5	15.8	4.9	67.7	6.7	4.9	75.8	6.1	4.2	89.9	4.5

Source: S. ROY paper, tables 2.17 & 2.18/ PLO, Industrial Statistical Bulletin for the West Bank and Gaza Strip 1988, (Damascus: Central of Bureau Statistics, Economic Department, 1988)

Percent of Palestinian women of total employment in selected economic sectors in the West Bank.

Percent of Palestinian women of total employment in selected economic sectors in the Gaza Strip.

■ - Agriculture, Forestry & fishing	□ - Industry (Mining and Manufacture)	● - Construction Building and public work
-------------------------------------	---------------------------------------	---

NUMBER OF CASUALTIES, BY SEX, from the beginning of the Intifada until 7 December 1989

SEX	Number	Percentage
Females	95	10.0
Males	851	90.0
Total	946	100

Source: Table 6, p. 5, Palestinian Statistical Abstract presented to delegation, Amman, December 1989

UNITED NATIONS
ECONOMIC
AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1991/9
13 December 1990

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-fifth session
Vienna, 27 February-8 March 1991
Item 4 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

The situation of Palestinian women

Note by the Secretary-General

---

*E/CN.6/1991/1.

1. This note has been prepared in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 1990/11. In this resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General "to ensure that the experts continue to monitor and investigate further the situation of Palestinian women and children inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territories, and to ensure that their report is submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fifth session".

2. In the same resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to monitor the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the mission of experts (E/CN.6/1990/10) to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic in 1989, and to report to the Commission at its thirty-fifth session "on the implementation of the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the mission of experts, taking into consideration all available information, including reports of the United Nations, its specialized agencies and its expert missions, reports of meetings, as appropriate, and information from Governments and non-governmental organizations".

3. In a note verbale of 7 August 1990, the Secretary-General, in view of the new request that the mission monitor and further investigate the situation, requested the Government of Israel to provide confirmation of its "support for the visit of the mission in order to proceed with the necessary administrative arrangements".

4. The Government of Israel, through its Permanent Representative to the United Nations (Vienna), replied on 13 November 1990 as follows:

"The Permanent Representative of Israel would like to emphasize the fact that the above-mentioned resolution contains already conclusions concerning the situation in the territories which makes - in the opinion of Israel - an additional investigation by a mission completely unnecessary. However, the Government of Israel will reconsider its position concerning the support of a fact-finding mission if such a request of support will not be part of a resolution with a conclusive condemnation nature."

The mission could not, therefore, be sent to the occupied Palestinian territories.

5. A recommendation made by the 1989 mission and reflected in Council resolution 1990/11, was that "Palestinian women be assisted in the creation of a women's centre that would provide possibilities for child care, educational discussion, cultural activities, women's solidarity and small-scale production". Information on the situation of women's centres, provided by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East is annexed to the present note.

Annex

RELIEF AND SOCIAL SERVICE PROGRAMMES FOR PALESTINE REFUGEE WOMEN IN THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES

Introduction

6. In 1948, nearly three quarters of a million Arabs became refugees during the disturbances before and after the creation of the State of Israel in the former British mandate territory of Palestine. The refugees fled to eastern Palestine, now better known as the West Bank (of the river Jordan); and to Gaza, subsequently administered by Egypt until 1967; others to Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic; some even further afield. Following the 1967 war, refugees again fled from the affected areas, and the West Bank and Gaza were occupied by Israel.

7. Emergency assistance was provided promptly by international voluntary agencies supported by funds channelled through the United Nations Relief for Palestine Refugees (UNRPR). Then, as hopes for the immediate return of refugees to their homes faded, the General Assembly, by resolution 302 (IV) of 8 December 1949, set up the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) as a temporary organization and successor to UNRPR. UNRWA began operations on 1 May 1950.

8. By 31 December 1990, there were almost 2.5 million Palestinian refugees registered with UNRWA. Some 856,200 (34.71 per cent) of these registered refugees live in 61 refugee camps in the West Bank, Gaza, Lebanon, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. The majority of the refugee population lives in cities, towns and villages together with other Palestinians or host country nationals.

9. UNRWA provides humanitarian support and services to Palestinian refugees in the sectors of health, education, direct relief, social services and general assistance. A Special Hardship programme is extended to those refugee households that have no male adult present who is medically fit to earn a living and that have no other identified source of finances adequate to meet basic needs. By the end of December 1990, the number of refugees registered as Special Hardship Cases had reached 155,980 or 7.5 per cent of the refugees eligible for UNRWA services. Of these 29,358 were in the West Bank and 47,642 were in Gaza.

A. Palestinian refugee women

10. Women and girls account for 48.8 per cent of the Palestinian refugee population. Half of the households receiving assistance under the Special Hardship programme are headed by women. Women also carry heavy responsibilities in those refugee families where husbands are invalids, disabled or imprisoned. The intifadah in the Occupied Territories of the West Bank and Gaza, and the armed conflicts and violence in Lebanon during the past 15 years have greatly added to these responsibilities.

B. Programmes for Palestinian refugee women

11. Palestinian refugee women have always received assistance and services from UNRWA, benefiting directly from the health, education and relief projects and programmes. The annual reports of the Commissioner-General to the General Assembly of the United Nations describe these services.

Health

12. Recognizing the vulnerability of women and children, UNRWA has focused on preventive and community health programmes with women and children as the major target group. The programmes and services are carried out through a network of 104 health centres and sub-centres located in the refugee camps and in cities, towns and villages throughout the five fields of operation of UNRWA. Detailed information is available in the annual reports of the UNRWA Director of Health.

Education

13. UNRWA offers basic schooling at the elementary and preparatory levels, covering the age group 6-14 years, to all eligible Palestinian refugee children. Of these children, 49 per cent are females.

14. UNRWA operates eight Training Centres, all of which provide vocational and technical training. While the proportion of women attending courses in teacher training is 53 per cent (440 out of 823 students), it is only 20 per cent in vocational training. Efforts are being made to increase the proportion of women attending vocational training by offering a wider range of courses attractive to them such as computer sciences, business and office practice, and nursing. Detailed information is available in the Statistical Yearbook of UNRWA, Department of Education.

Relief and social services

15. Since 1989, the Relief and Social Services programme has given stronger emphasis to refugee women as a group requiring special attention, whose needs and priorities must be brought into the mainstream of UNRWA programmes and not addressed as a minority or as a secondary issue. This has involved not only developing tailored skills training and income-generation programmes for economic self-reliance, but also creating appropriate opportunities and the environment for enhancing their awareness, self-confidence, capacities and capabilities, and ensuring that their perspectives and concerns are explicitly taken into account, together with those of the man and the formal representatives of the refugee community, in the development of plans and schemes for the benefit of the family and the refugee community.

16. The Relief and Social Services programme has adopted a three-pronged objective for those activities that particularly address the needs and aspirations of refugee women: to enable more disadvantaged refugee women, especially from "Special Hardship" families, to acquire the skills and secure opportunities to earn a living; to enable such women to cope effectively with family and social problems; and to facilitate their role in the development of their own community.

Women's programme centres

17. The focal point of this endeavour is the multi-purpose Women's Programme Centres (WPC). WPCs offer facilities and opportunities to women and girls to participate in a diverse range of socio-economic activities.

18. By request of the women themselves, these include a sewing programme, a basic 11-month course in various techniques of hand- and machine-sewing, pattern-making, cutting and fitting, and in the traditional embroidery for which Palestinian women are renowned. Each course accommodates 30 trainees; on its successful completion, they are awarded a diploma recognized by potential employers.
19. On graduation, the trainees are able to use their newly acquired knowledge to make clothes for themselves and their families. Some find employment as neighbourhood seamstresses in the camp, or in workshops or factories. Others work in centres that produce fine traditional embroidery, in old and modern designs to suit the tastes of an expanding market both local and foreign.
20. Other courses organized at the WPCs include dress-designing and dress-making, typewriting, flower-making, knitting and hairdressing. Sessions in health education, first aid, environmental education, home economics, leadership training, sports and cultural events are also held.
21. Literacy instruction is given to illiterate women in WPCs. The inability to read, write and do simple arithmetical calculations limits women's roles as both beneficiaries and agents of development in their community. The women who are not functionally literate are very conscious of their handicap and many of them have requested assistance. Projects to expand classes in functional literacy and numeracy have been submitted to potential donors.
22. Group income-generation schemes among women are beginning to be developed based at WPCs. Technical assistance, advice and facilities are made available. Women can safely meet, plan and organize their productions, until the enterprise is firmly established to move to its own premises.
23. Since January 1988, in partnership with the British non-governmental organization, Co-operation for Development, UNRWA has implemented a scheme of loans for small-scale economic enterprises in the West Bank and Gaza. By the end of December 1990, there were 205 projects funded by loans in both territories in the approximate amount of $US 1.5 million. Twenty of these projects were run by refugee women themselves, and included micro-knitting, food-processing, children's clothing, a beauty salon, dental laboratory, medical laboratory and poultry farm. In most of the other projects women's labour was critical to the functioning of the enterprise.
24. WPCs provide an important forum where community workers - social workers, community health nurses, educators and others - can meet with the refugee women to discuss and share common issues, perceptions and concerns, and plan concerted action, projects and programmes.
25. Though skill training and all other activities were frequently disrupted in the Occupied Territories due to curfews since the start of the intifadah on 8 December 1987, the number of women attending WPCs has significantly increased. The need for women to get the necessary training to work and earn money has increased greatly with so many husbands and fathers unable to contribute regularly to the family. Moreover, the solidarity and mutual support that the refugee women give each other has become ever more important in coping with the stress of living under occupation.

26. At present there are 12 WPCs in the West Bank and 13 in Gaza. In the latter, funds have been sought to construct a new WPC in the Khan Younis camp, and project proposals to construct another two centres in the Beach and Rafah camps are under negotiation with two separate donors. Funds for constructing WPCs in Daraj, Gaza town and Jabalia camp were secured from two separate donors but the Civil Administration in the Occupied Territories blocked the two projects.

27. In the West Bank, a new centre funded by a non-governmental organization opened in May 1989 in Askar camp, and the centre in Arrub was upgraded. Another centre in Ama'ri was approved for funding by one Government and three other project proposals to construct WPCs in Fara'a, Jalazone and Shufat camps are under negotiation with different potential donors.

C. Future plans

28. The main functional objectives until 1993, as stated in the Relief and Social Services medium-term plan 1991-1993, are given below.

1. To support social workers in assisting women in Special Hardship families to cope with family and other problems;

(a) To conduct workshops to sensitize social workers to the perspectives and needs of wives and mothers in relation to family concerns;

(b) To equip social workers with information on services and programmes which can support women.

2. To develop the health education classes conducted at the Women's Programme Centres, in association with the Health Department;

(a) To open them to other women as well as those participating in the sewing courses;

(b) To build up the components relating to healthy life-styles;

(c) To include a component on the prevention of disability and the rehabilitation of the disabled.

3. To use the Women's Programme Centres as a vehicle for education in early childhood development:

(a) Where possible, and in partnership with a non-governmental or other organization, to associate the Women's Programme Centres with a pre-school programme, in which the women themselves participate;

(b) To seek the co-operation of the United Nations Children's Fund and other interested organizations in arranging sessions in early childhood stimulation;

(c) In fields where mothers are coping with trauma in their young children, to use the Women's Programme Centre as a place where problems can be discussed in a supportive group, with professional help, and with the offered assistance.

4. To develop multi-purpose Women's Programme Centres as the focal points in the community for UNRWA programmes with and for women, with the active involvement of the women themselves in selecting appropriate activities, and with UNRWA staff attached to the Centres acting as facilitators; in particular for skill-training courses, group income-generation projects, social and cultural activities, and meetings with women on community issues.
5. To provide, at the Women's Programme Centres and other UNRWA centres offering training courses for women, facilities for babies and infants whose needs might otherwise prevent mothers from attending.
6. To continue offering classes in functional literacy and numeracy for the refugee women and adults who lack these skills.
7. To identify specific employment possibilities for disadvantaged refugees, including women, unemployed youth and the disabled, with local employers or through an UNRWA sponsored income-generating enterprise.
8. In direct relation to identified employment opportunities, to introduce other appropriate skill-training courses targeted especially on women, unemployed youth and the disabled.

UNITED NATIONS
ECONOMIC
AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1992/6
3 December 1991

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-sixth session
Vienna, 11-20 March 1992
Item 4 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

The situation of Palestinian women and children

Note by the Secretary-General

1. By its resolution 1991/19 of 30 May 1991 entitled "Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women", the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to continue his investigation of the situation of Palestinian women and children and to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-sixth session on the implementation of the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the mission of experts. 1/ In the same resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to monitor the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the mission of experts to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children 1/ in order to improve the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory.

2. Accordingly, plans were made to send a consultant to the region to acquire the required information. In a note verbale of 5 August 1991, the Secretary-General, in order to continue his investigation of the situation, and to present to the Commission a report on the status of women in the occupied territories, particularly in relation to education, employment, health and decision-making, requested the Government of Israel to provide confirmation of its "support for this consultant's visit to take place in order to proceed with the necessary administrative measures".

3. The Government of Israel, through its Permanent Representative to the United Nations (Vienna), replied on 20 August 1991 as follows:

"The Permanent Representative of Israel refers to his note dated 13 November 1990 and would like again to emphasize the fact that the above mentioned resolution contains already conclusions concerning the situation in the territories, which makes - in the opinion of Israel - an additional investigation completely unnecessary."

*E/CN.6/1992/1.

4. In the absence of an appropriate means of acquiring the information required by the resolution, the Secretary-General is not in a position to provide a report.

Note

1/ "Review and appraisal of the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the advancement of women: The situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territories: Note by the Secretary-General" (E/CN.6/1990/10, annex I).

UNITED NATIONS
ECONOMIC
AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1993/10
19 January 1993

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-seventh session
Vienna, 17-26 March 1993
Item 4 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

Situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territory

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to present to the Commission on the Status of Women the annexed report, prepared in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 1992/16.

---

*E/CN.6/1993/1.

AnnexREPORT PREPARED BY THE CENTRE FOR SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND HUMANITRIAN AFFAIRS

CONTENTS

	Paragraphs	Page
INTRODUCTION .....	1-4	2
I. SITUATION WITH RESPECT TO GENERAL LIVING CONDITIONS ...	5-19	3
II. GENDER RELATIONS IN THE PALESTINIAN FAMILY .....	20-34	6
III. ECONOMY AND EMPLOYMENT .....	35-45	8
IV. EDUCATION .....	46-62	11
V. HEALTH AND PSYCHOLOGICAL WELL-BEING .....	63-71	13

INTRODUCTION

1. In its resolution 1992/16, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-seventh session, using all available sources, a report on the situation of Palestinian women and children in the occupied Palestinian territory and in the refugee camps.

2. Reports on the subject have been submitted regularly to the Commission. The last (E/CN.6/1990/10) was submitted to the Commission at its thirty-fourth session and was based on the findings of a mission of experts sent by the Secretary-General to Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic to investigate the condition of Palestinian women and children. That report examined the extent to which effect had been given to the recommendations made by the Secretary-General in preceding reports. When, however, plans were accordingly made to send a consultant to the occupied territories, in accordance with Council resolution 1991/19, the Government of Israel, through its Permanent Representative to the United Nations Office at Vienna, replied on 20 August 1991 as follows:

"The Permanent Representative of Israel refers to his note dated 13 November 1990 and would like again to emphasize the fact that the above-mentioned resolution contains already conclusions concerning the situation in the territories, which makes - in the opinion of Israel - an additional investigation completely unnecessary." (See E/CN.6/1992/6, para. 3.)

3. The Secretary-General, in his note to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-sixth session, stated that, in the absence of an appropriate means of acquiring the information required by Council resolution 1991/19 of 30 May 1991, he was not in a position to provide a report (E/CN.6/1992/6, para. 4).

4. Given the impossibility of visiting the occupied territory, the Council had given the Secretary-General the mandate to use all available sources in compiling this report on the Palestinian women and children in the occupied territory and in the refugee camps. The present report is therefore based on the findings of various documents published by the United Nations, as well as a number of publications from other sources. In it, the present situation of women in the critical areas of family life, economy and employment, education and health, with special attention to psychological well-being, is described. Political matters, as such, do not fall within the competence of the report. It is recognized, however, that the lives of Palestinian women in the occupied territory are profoundly affected by the complex political situation in the region. It is further recognized that all women are affected by the political consequences of the occupation.

I. SITUATION WITH RESPECT TO GENERAL LIVING CONDITIONS

5. It should be noted that the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territory remains characterized by the state of military occupation, which has lasted now for twenty-six years. The tense situation, which has been heightened by the popular uprising (intifadah), now in its sixth year, has been further aggravated as a consequence of the establishment of Israeli settlements in the occupied territory and the massive and rapid extension of these settlements.

6. The lack of coordination between positive developments at the diplomatic level and the rigid pattern of Israeli occupation policies, which affect the daily life of Palestinians living in the occupied territory, has further contributed to heightening the tension. 1/

7. According to the information available, in the period between 9 December 1987 (commonly accepted as the day of the outbreak of the intifadah) and 30 September 1992, 75,225 Palestinians had been injured. A total of 17,080 of those injured - representing 22.7 per cent of the total - were women. Nearly all those injuries were caused by bullet wounds, beatings or the effects of tear-gas inhalation. Out of the 1,131 Palestinians killed during the same period in incidents involving the Israeli security forces, 82 were women (55 in the West Bank and 27 in Gaza), which represents 7.2 per cent of the total casualties.*

8. Along with the Palestinian men, many women were administratively detained without being charged during the intifadah, while many others were subjected to torture and various forms of harassment while in prison. Incidents have also been recorded of pregnant women being denied medical care. 2/

9. The imprisonment of women is generally considered unacceptable in the traditional societies of the region. Moreover, in traditional Palestinian society, women remain totally responsible for the care of children, as well as for the private sphere of the home. The imprisonment of women is therefore more distressful to the family than the imprisonment of its male members.

---

*The figures for fatalities do not include killings of alleged collaborators (United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), October 1992).

10. The situation of Palestinian children in the occupied territory has deteriorated considerably in recent years. According to the data available from the beginning of the intifadah to the end of September 1992, a total of 26,527 children under the age of 15 - representing 35.2 per cent of the total injured - were injured in clashes involving the Israeli security forces. A total of 180 children under the age of 15 - representing nearly 16 per cent of the total - were among those killed in clashes between Palestinians and Israeli security forces.* According to several reports, detainees, including women and minors, have continued to be subjected to various forms of ill-treatment, both physical and psychological. 3/

11. Moreover, children in the occupied territory are exposed to severe psychological stress: they live under the constant threat of violence, are often separated from one of their parents because that parent has been deported or imprisoned, they may be witnesses to the forced deportation of parents and relatives, as well as to the beating and arrest of family members, and they suffer from the prolonged curfews and closure of their schools.

12. The exercise of family rights and customs has also been impeded by family reunification laws that have led to the deportation of husband or wife and children and denial of their right to return on a permanent basis, and in some cases, denial of registration for the children. Although the family reunification laws do not discriminate against women per se, they are detrimental to family life, and particularly to the lives of the children of marriages affected by these laws, who are denied registration in the occupied territory.

13. An analysis of population data over a number of years shows that the male-to-female ratio has been increasing since the occupation, particularly in recent years. The number of males for every 1,000 females increased from 985 in 1967 to 1,014 in 1989. This increase is mainly due to the growth in the male population group between 25 and 34 years of age, which rose from 9.7 per cent of the population in 1967 to over 15 per cent in 1989. 4/ A plausible explanation could be an increase in the return migration of adult male Palestinians to the West Bank and the Gaza Strip from the other countries in the region.

14. In recent years there has been a further deterioration of the economy of the occupied territory. The continuing state of military occupation makes it impossible for an economy to function in a healthy manner. 5/ The economy of the occupied territory remains precarious and overdependent on that of Israel. The security measures, including frequent curfews, travel restrictions and other constraints imposed by the occupying authorities as a response to the intifadah have had - and continue to have - serious repercussions for the workers of territories. Unemployment and underemployment in the occupied territory have reached alarming proportions. 6/ Moreover, collective punishment measures such as the uprooting of trees and crops and confiscation of land have significantly contributed to the poor economic performance of the occupied territory. 7/

---

*The figures for fatalities do not include killings of alleged collaborators (United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), October 1992).

15. In the aftermath of the Persian Gulf war the territory was, in addition, deprived of the considerable income that had been hitherto available from remittances sent by Palestinians working in the Persian Gulf States.

16. The above factors have significantly contributed to the decline in the living standards of Palestinian families. The latest data available indicate that the population registered as refugees accounted for approximately one third of the population in the West Bank and two thirds of the population in the Gaza Strip. Out of the registered refugee population, 26.3 per cent lived in camps in the West Bank and 55 per cent lived in camps in Gaza. 8/ The spread of poverty has had - and continues to have - serious repercussions on the Palestinian family (see section II below).

17. In recent years, there has been a parallel growth in the occupied territory, particularly in Gaza, of fundamentalist movements. There is evidence that a relationship exists between poverty and fundamentalism and that, living in an atmosphere of constant violence and economic hardship, the Palestinians have seen fundamentalism as an effective means of recovering their cultural identity - in the narrow sense of the word - and using it to oppose the occupation. In effect, the rise of fundamentalism is a manifestation of the radicalization of the protests of the Palestinians against 25 years of occupation. It is beyond dispute that the tight security measures taken by the occupying power as a response to the intifadah have contributed to both the spread of poverty and the restriction of movement among the Palestinians. Specific measures, such as the prolonged closure of institutions of higher learning, have directly led to a substantial restriction of the opportunities for women as well as curtailment of their movements, which have contributed to the spread of fundamentalism, manifested by the enhancement of the family's control over its female members.

18. There are, however, indications that the effects of fundamentalist movements on women has stabilized in the past year, owing to a number of inter-related socio-economic factors. First, the traditional paternalistic image of the family began to be eroded as its adult male members were subject to beatings and abuse by the occupation authorities, often in front of the entire family. Secondly, an alarmingly high rate of unemployment among the traditional male breadwinners compelled the family to accept women as wage-earners, particularly in the informal sector, in small-scale domestic enterprises. The reliance of the family on women's earnings has enabled these women to gain a certain degree of self-reliance and has led to an enhancement of their freedom of movement. These factors have helped to mitigate the effects of the spread of fundamentalist ideologies on women's lives. Moreover, the reopening of the educational institutions has also contributed to the breaking down of traditional constraints on women's mobility.

19. As things are, Palestinian women in the occupied territory are experiencing considerable hardship in all spheres of life - family, education, health, economy and employment. Out of their efforts to cope with the situation a new role for women has emerged. The increased participation of women, particularly in the economic sphere, has led to profound changes in the nature of their role in society. Their society's perception of the role of women is itself in the throes of change. Only time can tell, however, how many of these changes will be permanent.

II. GENDER RELATIONS IN THE PALESTINIAN FAMILY

20. The lack of an internationally recognized central authority in the occupied territory leaves the family to bear the main responsibility of protection and support of its individual members. As a basic unit of society, Palestinian families in the occupied territories are profoundly influenced by the economic, political and social changes that affect their society. These transformations of the socio-economic fabric in turn influence the ability of the Palestinian family to provide support to its members.

21. The Palestinian family was traditionally hierarchical, with the father as the head figure and sole decision-maker. Women tended to occupy a relatively lower place in the hierarchy, their contribution to the family stemming mainly from their reproductive capacity.

22. With the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip in 1967, major changes started to take place in the patterns of social relations inside the Palestinian family. There was a shift in the society's sense of commitment from the needs of the family to the cause of the nation, which led to the development of a new and more democratic environment in the family. Moreover, with their loss of control over their land and water resources and marginalization of their economy, the Palestinians developed a strong commitment to education as the only means of ensuring a certain degree of economic security and began to encourage their daughters as well as their sons to pursue higher education. Education, discussed in more detail in the sections below, has been a significant force in the liberation of women from certain traditional constraints on mobility and segregation between the sexes.

23. Women have played a major role in the popular uprising of the Palestinians against the Israeli occupation. In their role as the conservators of national heritage and culture, women have helped to create the necessary social preconditions for the intifadah by instilling in their children respect for their culture and knowledge of their history. The widespread participation of women in the intifadah side by side with men has resulted in their assumption of new public roles and responsibilities. In addition to their roles as mothers, wives and daughters, women have become heads of households, main income-earners and teachers, as well as social and political activists.

24. According to the data available, among the registered refugee population in 1992, 30.6 per cent of the families in the West Bank and 20.1 per cent of the families in Gaza were headed by a woman. Moreover, in 22 per cent of the families that qualify for the "special hardship" programme in the occupied territory, the head of the household is a woman, usually a widow or divorcee with dependent children. <sup>9/</sup> These estimates are relatively high for a region where, according to official census figures, about 16-19 per cent of the households are headed by a woman. <sup>10/</sup>

25. In both the region in general and in the occupied territory in particular, however, estimates of households headed by females are, in practice, much higher, for cultural reasons and because of the gap between the actual and legal definitions of the "headship" of the household. Moreover, in Middle Eastern societies, many women deliberately conceal the fact that they are the head of the household in an attempt to protect themselves from the law and the customary practices of society.

26. In the occupied territory, in the majority of the other families where the registered head is a male, the burden of ensuring survival in practice falls on a woman, particularly where the head of the household is imprisoned (8.4 per cent of the "special hardship" cases) or suffers from a disabling injury or illness (29 per cent of the cases). 11/

27. It has been noted that, after the first six months of the intifadah, which were characterized by spontaneous popular uprisings, often involving the participation of entire camps, villages or towns, the direct participation rate of women began to decline. Studies on segments of the Palestinian population by sex and age indicate, however, that the direct participation rate could be a function of age, social background or geographical location. The responsiveness of men over the age of 40 to direct participation in the intifadah, for example, was found in a study to be less than that of females, who are mostly students below the age of 18. 12/

28. Nevertheless, in recent years changes have occurred in the socio-economic structure that have influenced gender relations within the Palestinian family. With the spread of poverty, the household size has increased as deteriorating economic performance has compelled young couples to move in with their extended families in an attempt to save money. Simultaneously, the prolonged closure of educational institutions, particularly those of higher education, has considerably curtailed the movement of women. Moreover, the presence of men and children inside the house for longer periods owing to travel restrictions and frequent curfews has increased the amount of housework women are expected to perform. As a result, the family as a unit has begun to increase its authority over its members, especially its female members.

29. In recent years, women have begun to marry at an earlier age. The high fertility rate, particularly among young women, is a reflection of the general perception that having more Palestinian children would ensure the continuity of the nation. The tendency of young women to marry early, however, and to have more children does not seem merely to be a cultural choice of the Palestinians. Poverty correlates with lower levels of education and a higher rate of childbirth. The measures taken by the Israeli authorities as a response to the intifadah have contributed significantly to the spread of poverty. Living in an atmosphere characterized by violence, always fiercely protective of their women's honour, the members of the family see marriage as the only "safe" option for their young women.

30. It is too early to say whether early marriages are the norm in Palestinian families in the occupied territory, or whether they have been encouraged by the family, because of the prolonged closure of schools and universities in an atmosphere of continued violence, as an interim, "safe" option for young women. But the recent trend of early marriages and high fertility, if continued as an established pattern, is bound to have serious implications for the women's movement by imposing considerable restrictions on educational opportunities, especially the attainment of higher education, and on the mobility of women. There are indications, however, that the reopening of all educational institutions, particularly institutions of higher education, could lead to an improvement in the situation of women (see section IV below).

31. Moreover, economic necessity has increased the extended family's dependence on women for financial support, since it is not possible to rely solely on the traditional male breadwinner, who is often unemployed, has been imprisoned or, in some cases, deported, or is suffering from a disabling injury or illness. Traditional family-based income, mostly controlled by women, has become an indispensable source of income for the Palestinian family. Home-based economies, such as the cultivation of vegetable gardens and cottage industries, have also been encouraged in Palestinian society as part of the attempt to boycott goods from Israel.

32. On the subject of family reunification, a particularly acute problem has arisen in recent years in cases of marriages entered into by male residents of the West Bank with women, mainly from Jordan, who had applied for residence and were permitted to live in the West Bank only on short-term renewable visitors' permits. Under a new military order introduced in 1987, if the father is a legal resident but not the mother, then a child of the union, born in the West Bank, cannot be registered as a resident and is denied the right to remain as a permanent resident of the West Bank. The wives and children of these marriages have little scope for legal recourse. The enforced deportations by the Israeli military authorities of those women and their children - in 1989 totaling approximately 200 people, mainly women and children - created a climate of considerable stress and uncertainty for their families. 13/

33. Although the Israeli military orders that govern family reunification do not formally discriminate against women, they nevertheless have a serious detrimental effect on family life and have put the women of these marriages under considerable psychological pressure. In the traditional Palestinian society, the wife, on marriage, is expected to move to her husband's residence, but the new order has, in effect, deprived these women of a minimum stability in which they could live out their marriages and raise their children. Israeli authorities continue their policy of deportation 14/ in contravention of article 49 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949. 15/

34. Almost all Palestinian families have been affected directly by measures taken by the Israeli authorities in response to the popular uprising. Apart from physical suffering, Palestinian families in the occupied territory have undergone considerable psychological stress, particularly during the last five years (see section V below). The long-term psychological impact of the continuous exposure of children to violence cannot be predicted with certainty. It is certain, however, that this lack of a normal childhood will influence them for the rest of their lives. During the prolonged closure of schools and curfews, which lasted several days in a row, the children expressed their fear and aggression inside the house. While both male and female members of the family suffered, the women were subjected to much greater stress. They not only had to assume additional domestic and economic responsibilities to ensure a minimum level of subsistence for their families but also had to educate their children in an attempt to compensate for the closed classrooms and at the same time take care of family members who had been injured.

III. ECONOMY AND EMPLOYMENT

35. The latest data show that, in 1989, women accounted for 49.7 per cent of the Palestinian population in the occupied territory. 16/

36. Participation by females in the labour force has been low compared with male participation, particularly in the Gaza Strip. An analysis of employment data over a number of years indicates, however, that the Israeli occupation has had a negative effect on the participation rate of women in the labour force. In the West Bank, the rate fell from its peak of 14.3 per cent in 1974 to 12 per cent in 1987, to approximately 10 per cent in 1990. Figures for the

Gaza Strip reveal a steady decline in the female participation rate, from 6.4 per cent in 1968, to 4.6 per cent in 1974, to 4.2 per cent in 1987, declining to less than 2 per cent in 1990. The male participation rate was over 90 per cent in 1990. 17/

37. The Israeli occupation and the resultant economic decline had a particularly detrimental effect on female participation in the labour force in the industrial sector. After the Israeli occupation, the percentage of female workers in industry declined sharply, from 24.8 per cent of the West Bank residents employed in industry in 1970 to 11 per cent in 1980 and from 8.9 per cent in 1987 to 6.2 per cent in 1990. Similarly, in Gaza, the female labour force in industry declined from 17.4 per cent of all residents of the Gaza Strip employed in industry in 1970 to 8.9 per cent in 1980 and from 2.7 per cent in 1987 to almost nothing in 1990. The industrial sector, albeit small, is currently almost totally dominated by a male labour force. 18/

38. Although there is a cultural factor behind the low participation by females in the labour force, particularly in the Gaza Strip, it is not in itself a sufficient explanation. Deteriorating economic conditions and demographic factors have also contributed to the relatively low female participation rate in the occupied territory. In conditions of rising unemployment (currently estimated at 40 per cent of the registered workforce in the Gaza Strip, for example), women find themselves in a particularly vulnerable position where employment is concerned. Either they lose their jobs because they have been employed in enterprises that cannot survive the loss of purchasing power in the community, or they are put under pressure to make way for male job-seekers. Particularly during the past five years, a large number of males have lost their jobs in Israel as a result of the additional security measures taken by the Israeli authorities. These males have usually sought employment in the occupied territories, reducing the opportunities open to female labour.

39. There are indications that the traditionally weak integration of women into the productive sectors of the economy, particularly in the industrial sector, is in the process of change. As discussed in section IV below, there is a growing trend for women to enrol in industry-related vocational training programmes, including courses in commerce, computer science and electronics. These women, upon graduation, will have an important role to play in meeting future labour demands in the productive sectors of an independent Palestinian economy. It should also be recognized, however, that overall female enrolment in vocational training and the enrolment of women in university technical courses, such as engineering and management, remain relatively low.

40. The integration of women, particularly among the poor and refugee population, may largely be shaped by the economic changes that have evolved as a result of the intifadah. As the domestic economies of the occupied territory have declined to a subsistence level, alternative economic activities have been created (for example home production, sharing and unofficial markets), in which women play a key role.

41. As employees of small firms and subcontracted industries inside the occupied territories, women are, at present, more exposed to the production and marketing process: they are learning how to adapt their products to local markets and are learning new skills in industries in which they have traditionally been employed, such as animal husbandry and horticulture. Through their involvement in the domestic small-scale industries, women are, in fact, restructuring the domestic production base and helping to build self-reliance in their domestic economy. These income-generating women's projects have particularly benefited from the popular boycotts of Israeli goods and the corresponding rise in demand for locally manufactured products.

42. The availability of credit facilities, albeit limited, from several international sources, has also helped the small-scale industries that are run by women. The Palestine Women's Initiative Fund of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), which began its operations in 1992, finances group schemes, including a pilot business centre in Nablus to serve as a marketing and distribution centre for women's enterprises in the area; a cooperative in Aqabat Jabr, in the training phase where women are being taught business skills to enable them to select and set up an enterprise with potentially good economic viability; workshops at three centres in Gaza for household maintenance; and a library run by the women of Khan Yunis for their community. <sup>19/</sup> Women are also eligible for loans under the income-generation programme, under the auspices of UNRWA.

43. Women's participation in the generation of alternative sources of income, albeit at a subsistence level, has enabled them to gain a certain degree of self-reliance. As mentioned above (see section I) the reliance of the extended family on women's earnings during this time of economic hardship has resulted in a greater degree of freedom of movement for women than would have otherwise been possible in the presence of fundamentalism.

44. The women's commitment to enhancing their living standards is evidenced by the sharp increase in women's programmes in the occupied territory and refugee camps over the years (see table), where refugee camps in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic account for the majority of the participants and most of the centres. The West Bank and Gaza area accounted for 25 centres out of the Agency-wide figure of 65, and 2,494 participants out of the Agency-wide total of 9,143. In order to transform these initial and relatively modest efforts of women to generate alternate sources of income into sustainable businesses, however, intensive training in management and marketing is needed, as well as further training of the workers in technical skills. <sup>20/</sup>

Participation in UNRWA women's programmes, 1967-1992 <sup>a/</sup>

Participation	1967	1975	1985	1988	1990	1991	1992
Number of centres	49	47	47	47	49	58	65
Number of participants	2 057	1 345	1 450	1 516	3 526	5 818	9 143

<sup>Source:</sup> United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1992.

<sup>a/</sup> Agency-wide.

45. Many Palestinian initiatives could not, however, achieve their aims, owing to the administrative obstacles placed in their way by the Israeli authorities. 21/ In addition to Israeli Government control over land and water, Israeli policies include restrictions on trade and the protection of Israeli industries, licensing and institutionalized credit.

IV. EDUCATION

46. As noted earlier, since the occupation in 1967, Palestinians have regarded education as their only means of obtaining a certain measure of income security. Because of the correlation of education with better employment opportunities and higher living standards, Palestinians have traditionally encouraged their children to pursue higher education and training. Education has contributed significantly to liberating women from traditional constraints on mobility and segregation of the sexes.

47. The majority (60 per cent) of the schools in the occupied territory are managed by the Israeli authorities. Palestinian children also receive formal education through institutions managed by UNRWA and private organizations. 22/ These institutions include kindergarten schools, elementary schools, preparatory schools and post-primary schools.

48. Over the period in question, schools have been closed for long periods, especially in the West Bank, by order of the Israeli military authorities. While no general closure order has been issued in Gaza, pupils have still, on average, lost approximately one third of their school days because of curfews, military closures, general strikes and disturbances.

49. This serious disruption of education has left considerable gaps in the knowledge of pupils at all levels, regardless of age and sex. An analysis of achievement tests administered by UNRWA staff to assess the effect of the interruption of education and school closure on pupils in the school year 1991/92 revealed that all students, but particularly those in the lower grades, were affected detrimentally. 23/

50. In recent years, there has been a steady increase in the number of female pupils at all levels of education. These figures, however, must be compared with regional data in order to assess accurately the situation of women's education in the occupied territory. In 1992, female pupils represented 49 per cent of the total pupils enrolled in all first-level educational institutions, covering the age range 6-14 years. 24/

51. In 1989, the percentage of females in total secondary enrolment in the West Bank (44 per cent) was higher than that of the Arab region as a whole (41 per cent). In Qatar, Israel and the United Arab Emirates, women accounted for half of the total secondary school enrolment. 25/ Taking into account the disruption of the educational system caused by the intifadah and the response thereto of the Israeli authorities, it seems logical to infer that the female enrolment figures would probably be higher were the general conditions in the occupied territory more conducive to the functioning of a healthy education system.

52. The disruption of education, especially at the higher levels, regardless of gender, is reflected in official statistics. According to the Israeli Statistical Abstract, 1991, in 1986, the year before the intifadah, 6.4 per cent of the women (16.3 per cent of the men) in Gaza and 7.1 per cent of the women (14.2 per cent of the men) in the West Bank had 13 or more years of schooling. In spite of an annual population growth rate of more than 3 per cent, the enrolment numbers had fallen by 1989 to 4.9 per cent of the women (12.5 per cent of the men) in Gaza and to 6.2 per cent of the women (12.3 per cent of the men) in the West Bank. 26/

53. All Palestinian universities were closed officially by order of the Israeli authorities from early 1988. The closure of the universities lasted much longer than that of the schools. The six universities in the occupied territory were allowed to open by stages, starting from mid 1990. Bir Zeit University in the West Bank was allowed to reopen after four and a half years of closure, at the end of April 1992. The closure of universities and other educational institutions for that length of time would be contrary to article 26, paragraph 1, of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (General Assembly resolution 217 A (III)), in which the right of everyone to education is affirmed.

54. The latest figures available (for 1987) indicate that 39 per cent of the students enrolled in the West Bank universities were women. 27/ These figures are roughly equivalent to the average female university enrolment ratio of the Arab countries in the region, although there are many countries whose female university enrolment ratio exceeds 50 per cent: in Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, for example, 65 per cent of the students enrolled at universities in 1988 were women. At 50 per cent, the female enrolment rate in Israeli universities remains higher than that of the occupied territory, but low compared with some Arab States in the region. 27/

55. The relatively low level of female enrolment at institutions of higher learning, including universities, in the occupied territory (compared with Israel) is largely due to socio-economic factors, and particularly the extent to which the Governments are willing or able to invest in the human resources of their peoples. In 1987, Israel's total educational expenditure was 9.2 per cent of total government expenditure. Jordan devoted 13 per cent of its total government expenditure to education in 1985. For Kuwait, the proportion of government expenditure on education was 12.1 per cent, and for the Arab region as a whole it was, on average, 6.3 per cent in 1989. 28/

56. Even before the beginning of the intifadah, Palestinian educational institutions were experiencing a number of difficulties. Material deficiencies have always been a great problem. The quality of teaching has seriously suffered owing to overcrowded classes, the decrepit state of the existing buildings, inadequate library and laboratory facilities, and underpayment of teachers.

57. Overcrowding in schools has been identified as a critical problem: in Gaza, 70 per cent and in the West Bank 46 per cent of the classes in schools managed by UNRWA were operated in double shifts in 1991/92. The construction of new schools is said to have been delayed by lengthy administrative procedures on the part of the Israeli authorities. 29/

58. An increasing number of Palestinian women in the occupied territory have enrolled in recent years in departments that were traditionally male-dominated. Data indicates that, in 1989, 31 per cent of the women were enrolled in scientific and technical departments at universities in the occupied territory. In hard-core technical fields such as engineering, however, the percentage of female enrolment was still relatively low, at 20 per cent. Against that, women comprised 48 per cent of the students enrolled in the arts faculties and 40 per cent of those enrolled in education. 30/

59. The enrolment of women in the UNRWA vocational training centres also reflects the trend for women to study traditionally male-dominated subjects: during the academic year 1991/92, 43.5 per cent of the female vocational trainees were studying subjects traditionally reserved for men, including courses in technical and commercial subjects, electronics, computer science and paramedical work. These women, upon completion of their training, would qualify for jobs in architectural draughting and as quantity surveyors, as land surveyors, mechanical engineering technicians and assistant pharmacists. The enrolment of women in mechanical, metal, electrical and building trade-oriented courses, however, was still low, at 13.4 per cent. 31/

60. All institutions of higher learning in the West Bank, including training centres, were closed by military order from early in the intifadah until the spring of 1990. The training centres have continued to be disrupted for the past two years - particularly during the Persian Gulf crisis - by curfews, disturbances and strikes. Training centres in Gaza had lost 20 per cent of teaching days during this period. 19/

61. In a general atmosphere characterized by tension and violence, the prolonged closure of schools has added to the feelings of insecurity and fear, particularly among children. Not having regular schooling, children have had to play in the streets, which has exposed them to considerable violence. In Gaza, schools experienced major disruptions as recently as May 1992 from incursions of Israeli settlers and security forces into school compounds and subsequent curfews. 32/

62. During this period, women have contributed to "underground teaching" and clandestine education. Pupils have studied in mosques and other private locations and have achieved an attendance rate of approximately 95 per cent for both boys and girls. Most of the teaching in private locations was done by women - mothers or volunteer teachers.

V. HEALTH AND PSYCHOLOGICAL WELL-BEING

63. Health conditions have been affected by the five years of continuous tension in the occupied territory, particularly in terms of psychological well-being.

64. The atmosphere of constant mourning has also added to the stresses in the family. Many women have lost children, husbands or other close family members. Some have been detained, while others have forfeited their property. Given the precarious health services in the occupied territory, living with their extended families in overcrowded rooms, women suffer from a general lack of nutrition, health care and proper hygienic standards.

65. Inadequate sanitation, nutrition and water supply, insufficient access to medical facilities and the high cost of medical care provided by the Israeli authorities continue to contribute to poor health conditions in the occupied territory. In the Gaza Strip, for example, although the population has increased by at least 70 per cent since the occupation, the ratio of beds to population had fallen to a level of 1.3 per 1,000 in 1989 from 2.4 per 1,000 before the occupation. 33/

66. In the Gaza Strip, salinization and the depletion of water resources by over-drilling, including drilling done in Israel, have reached a dangerous level. Salinization is also a growing problem in the West Bank. The latest figures indicate that Palestinians in the West Bank were granted access to an average of 150 cubic metres per person, while Israeli settlers in the West Bank received an average of 2,000 cubic metres per person. 34/

67. Pregnant women and children were badly affected by the prolonged curfew and emergency regulations in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf crisis, when telecommunication lines would often be interrupted or cut and special permits had to be obtained for ambulances during curfews, leading to general delays in transporting patients to hospitals. 35/ The curfews and worsening economic conditions in the occupied territories have led to a substantial fall in income, giving rise to nutritional problems, including iron-deficiency anaemia, which particularly affects women of reproductive age and children under three years old. 36/

68. Fertility-related factors and short intervals between births are the main cause of the remaining infant mortality and maternal ill-health and death. 19/ The population data suggest an average rate of population growth of 3.4 per cent over the period 1988-1990, the highest rates being registered in the Gaza Strip. 37/ The data indicates that the population growth is mainly due to natural increase. The reasons behind the high fertility rate, particularly among younger women, are discussed in section II above.

69. The frustrations, the emotional deprivation and the physical and psychological humiliation, as well as the destruction of the paternal image, have been found to cause severe psychological stress to children and adolescents. 38/ These factors have resulted in a significant increase in psychopathology, such as personality disorders and delinquency, which, in addition to personal psychological disturbances, also have a feedback effect on the entire family, leading to disturbances of relationships within the family. These disturbances place additional stress on the mother, since, traditionally, it is she who is responsible for the household.

70. One form of psychopathology is the increase of physical and verbal forms of violence in young adolescents. This is manifested by the rise in intransigence among children and young adolescents accompanied by symptoms of psychopathology, such as depression, loss of sleep, loss of appetite and loss of concentration. Few children have escaped physical or psychological abuse by Israeli soldiers. Their fear of being abused by Israeli soldiers were reflected in the results of a study conducted in 1990 in the occupied territory, which indicates that nearly half of the Palestinian children sampled were terrified of Israeli soldiers, and more than one fourth said that they were afraid to leave the house. Boys seem to be relatively more prone to aggressive behaviour than girls. 39/

71. The United Nations and international non-governmental organizations are attempting to deal with the issue of mental health care in the occupied territories. A joint WHO/UNRWA Mental Health Programme, for example, was begun in May 1991 in the West Bank. In resolution WHA 45.26, entitled "Health conditions of the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine", adopted by the forty-fifth World Health Assembly on 14 May 1992, deep concern was expressed at the Israeli refusal to permit the Special Committee of Experts to visit the occupied territories.

Notes

1/ See the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories (A/43/694), para. 610.

2/ "Workshop I: Development of Palestinian women's movements in Palestine" (NGO/IMQP/VII/16 pp. 2-3), and "Report on Workshop I: Women" (NGO/IMQP/VII/25, p. 3), papers submitted to the Seventh United Nations International NGO Meeting on the Question of Palestine, held at the Palais des Nations, Geneva, from 29 to 31 August 1990.

3/ United Nations Secretariat, Division for Palestinian Rights, Bulletin, vol. XIV, No. 10/11 (October/November 1991), p. 12.

4/ Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1991, No. 42 (Central Bureau of Statistics, Jerusalem, 1991), table 27.2.

5/ See Living Conditions of the Palestinian People in the Occupied Territories (United Nations, Department of Public Information, 1988), pp. 3 and 13.

6/ International Labour Office, Report of the Director-General, Appendices (vol. 2), International Labour Conference, 79th session, Geneva, 1992, pp. 8 and 20.

7/ Question of Palestine, 1979-1990 (United Nations Secretariat, July 1991), p. 37.

8/ United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, June 1992.

9/ United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, "Statistics of Palestinian refugees" (WWR761/A), October 1992.

10/ Homa Hoodfar, "Legal barriers to the empowerment of female-headed households: women and custody in the Middle East" (EGM/VW/1990/WP.6), paper submitted to the Expert Group Meeting on Vulnerable Women, held at Vienna from 26 to 30 November 1990.

11/ United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, October 1992.

12/ Islah Jad, "Patterns of relations within the Palestinian family after the intifadah", in Gender in the Intifada, mimeographed version, 1991.

13/ "Workshop II: Human rights in the occupied territories: the reunification of Palestinian families" (IMQP/NGO/VIII/11), pp. 4-5, paper submitted to the Eighth United Nations International NGO Meeting on the Question of Palestine, held at the Austria Center, Vienna, from 28 to 30 August 1991.

14/ United States of America, Department of State, "Country report on human rights practices for 1991", submitted to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations, United States Senate (Washington, D.C., Government Printing Office, 1992) p. 1443.

15/ United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

16/ Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1991, No. 42 (Jerusalem, Central Bureau of Statistics, 1991), table 27.3.

17/ International Labour Office, Report of the Director-General, Appendices (vol. 2), International Labour Conference, 79th session, Geneva, 1992, p. 14; Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1988, No. 39 (Jerusalem, Central Bureau of Statistics, 1988), table XXVII/25; and Palestinian Liberation Organization, Palestinian Statistical Abstract, 1980 (Damascus, Palestine National Fund, Central Bureau of Statistics, 1980).

18/ Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1991, No. 42 (Central Bureau of Statistics, Jerusalem, 1991), table 27.20; Palestine National Fund, Industrial Statistical Bulletin for the West Bank and Gaza Strip, 1988 (Damascus, Central Bureau of Statistics, Economic Department, 1988), pp. 22-23; and "Palestine industrial sector: structure, institutional framework and future requirements", conference room paper prepared by Sara M. Roy, United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) consultant for the UNIDO Seminar on Prospects for the Palestinian Industrial Sector, held at Vienna from 11 to 13 October 1989, pp. 114-115.

19/ United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, July 1992.

20/ United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, Department of Relief and Social Services, "Palestinian Women's Initiative Fund: progress report on projects funded by the Canadian Development Agency", 30 June 1992; and Amal Abu Daqqa and others, "Evaluation of women's income-generating projects in the Gaza Strip", sponsored by Save the Children and Shu'un il Ma'ra, Gaza, July 1992.

21/ "Assistance to the Palestinian people: recent economic developments in the occupied Palestinian territory", report by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development secretariat to the Trade and Development Board at its thirty-eighth session (TD/B/1305).

22/ Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1991, No. 42 (Jerusalem, Central Bureau of Statistics, 1991), tables 24.47 and 24.48.

23/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-seventh Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/47/13), chap. VI, sect. A, para. 70.

24/ United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Statistical Yearbook, 1991 (Paris, 1991), table 3.4; and United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, Department of Education, July 1992.

25/ United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Statistical Yearbook, 1991 (Paris, 1991), tables 2.4 and 3.7.

26/ Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1991, No. 42 (Jerusalem, Central Bureau of Statistics, 1991), table 27.49.

27/ United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Statistical Yearbook, 1991 (Paris, 1991), table 3.11.

28/ Ibid., table 4.1.

29/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-seventh Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/47/13), chap. VI, sect. D, para. 102.

30/ State of Palestine, Department of General and Higher Education, Statistical Education Book (1989-1990) (Amman, 1990), pp. 224-225.

31/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-seventh Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/47/13), annex I, table 6.

32/ Ibid., Supplement No. 13 (A/47/13), chap. VI, sect. B, para. 81.

33/ Robert Giel and others, "Needs assessment in respect of emergency medical care in UNRWA clinics and non-governmental hospitals of the West Bank and Gaza", World Health Organization short-term consultancy report, 30 April-20 May 1989, chap. 5, para. 5.2.

34/ Life of the Palestinians under Israeli Occupation (United Nations Secretariat, Department of Public Information, July 1992), p. 17.

35/ United States of America, Department of State, "Country report on human rights practices for 1991", submitted to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives, and the Committee on Foreign Relations, United States Senate (Washington, D.C., Government Printing Office, 1992), p. 1440; and Robert Giel and others, "Needs assessment in respect of emergency medical care in UNRWA clinics and non-governmental hospitals in the West Bank and Gaza", World Health Organization short-term consultancy report, 30 April-20 May 1989.

36/ Life of the Palestinians under Israeli Occupation (United Nations, Department of Public Information, July 1992), p. 29.

37/ Ibid., p. 23.

38/ Ahmad M. Baker, "The psychological impact of the intifada on Palestinian children in the occupied West Bank and Gaza: an exploratory study", paper presented at the 1990 annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association, Miami Beach, Florida (American Orthopsychiatric Association, Inc., 1990); and United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, "Annual report of the Director of Health, 1991", pp. 67-68.

39/ Ahmad M. Baker, "The psychological impact of the intifada on Palestinian children in the occupied West Bank and Gaza: an exploratory study", paper presented at the 1990 annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association, Miami Beach, Florida (American Orthopsychiatric Association, Inc., 1990), pp. 4-6.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1994/6
28 February 1994

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
New York, thirty-eighth session
7-18 March 1994
Item 4 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING
STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Note by the Secretary-General

SUMMARY

In its resolution 1993/15, entitled "Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women", the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-eighth session a report on the implementation of the resolution, containing recommendations and a programme of action aimed at improving the condition of Palestinian women under Israeli occupation. The report describes how, in the context of rapid political change, the concern of the Commission on the Status of Women about the situation of Palestinian women and children may be entering a new phase.

* E/CN.6/1994/1.

CONTENTS

	Paragraphs	Page
INTRODUCTION .....	1 - 9	3
I. THE SITUATION OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN WITH RESPECT TO GENERAL LIVING CONDITIONS .....	10 - 19	5
II. IMPACT OF THE MIDDLE-EAST PEACE AGREEMENT ON PALESTINIAN WOMEN .....	20 - 24	8

INTRODUCTION

1. In its resolution 1993/15, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-eighth session a report on the implementation of the resolution, containing recommendations and a programme of action aimed at improving the condition of Palestinian women under Israeli occupation. The report should use all available sources of information, including missions of experts to the occupied territory.

2. Reports on the subject had been submitted regularly to the Commission, most recently at its thirty-seventh session, based on findings of various documents published by the United Nations and a number of publications from other sources. In 1989, a fact-finding mission had examined the situation of Palestinian women living outside the occupied territory and had interviewed women from the occupied territory. In 1993, missions of experts to the occupied Palestinian territory as requested in Council resolution 1993/15, could not take place in view of the changing political situation.

3. It has consistently been emphasized that, in preparing reports on Palestinian women and children for the Commission on the Status of Women, political matters were considered to fall outside the competence of the report. There has been general recognition, however, that the lives of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory are conditioned by the complex political reality in the region. The status of women of all ages had been profoundly affected by the political consequences of the occupation. Like previous reports submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women, the present report describes the situation of women in the critical areas of family life, economy and employment, education and health, with special attention to psychological well-being.

4. The report is based on various recent documents published by the United Nations and other sources, most of which do not yet take into account recent political developments. An effort has been made to seek out information about how the situation of women and children has evolved since September 1993. It should be noted that, despite the considerable documentation published on the Palestinian conflict, there is a lack of reliable statistics on the status of women, health, housing conditions, labour force participation, household composition and education. For example, population data on the occupied Palestinian territory are based on a census conducted in 1967 that has been updated annually. The figures may well underestimate the population by 10-15 per cent because of underreporting at the time of the census and underestimation of births and infant deaths. To obtain additional information, the present report has drawn on sample surveys which have been conducted recently in the occupied Palestinian territory.

5. The signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements by the Governments of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization in September 1993 (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) has transformed the political perspective of the region and has affected the future situation of women and children in the occupied territory. As repeatedly stated by the General Assembly, the question of Palestine was at the core of the Middle East conflict, and peace in the region should be based on a comprehensive, just and lasting solution, under United Nations auspices. The peace process would of course have an impact on all the women in the region. During the period in which the present report was prepared, the details of the Declaration of Principles, in particular the specific understandings and agreements set out in the Agreed Minutes, were still being negotiated. There has been a rush to define strategies for economic development during the interim period and afterwards by all partners concerned, including bilateral and multilateral donors.

6. In this context of rapid political change, the concern of the Commission on the Status of Women about the situation of Palestinian women and children may be entering a new phase. The forthcoming establishment, for a transitional period, of a Palestinian interim self-government authority and elected council for the Palestinian people in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip implies a shift of focus. In addition to monitoring the living conditions of Palestinian women and children, the authority will emphasize the enhancement of women's participation in the elaboration of a permanent settlement of the conflict and the integration of a gender perspective in all areas of legislation, infrastructure, human resource and economic development.

7. The rapidity of events has made it impossible for the present report to contain the requested recommendations and programme of action. They will have to await the outcome of the political developments that are now occurring.

8. This change of focus is taking place at a moment when the attention of the Commission on the Status of Women is drawn to preparations for the Fourth World Conference on Women (Beijing, 1995) and the second review and appraisal of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies. At the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace (Nairobi, 1985), the issue of Palestinian women and children was a main area of concern under the rubric "peace", as reflected in paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies:

"For more than three decades, Palestinian women had faced difficult living conditions in camps and outside, struggling for the survival of their families and the survival of the Palestinian people who were deprived of their ancestral lands and denied the inalienable rights to return to their homes and property, their right to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty. ... The special and immediate needs of Palestinian women and children should be identified and appropriate provisions made. United Nations projects should be initiated to help women in the fields of health, education, and vocational training. Their living conditions inside and outside the occupied territory should be studied by the appropriate United Nations units and agencies, assisted, as appropriate, by specialized research institutions from various regions." 1/

9. In light of the recent political developments, monitoring the implementation of paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies has gained new momentum. The second review and appraisal of the Forward-looking Strategies should acknowledge the progress achieved and identify the remaining obstacles. In the preparation of the report on the review and appraisal for presentation at the Fourth World Conference, all changes that have affected the situation of Palestinian women and children will have to be carefully investigated and taken into account. This will certainly be a concern of the Western Asia Regional Preparatory Conference, which will be convened in Amman from 6 to 10 November 1994.

I. THE SITUATION OF PALESTINIAN WOMEN WITH RESPECT TO GENERAL LIVING CONDITIONS

10. According to the information available, the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied territory is still characterized by the state of military occupation. In the period under investigation, living conditions drastically worsened - in particular during the first half of 1993. Despite the positive developments and increased hope for peace after the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements, no substantive or immediate improvement of living conditions could be reported.

11. The continuation of the occupation, buttressed by armed force, affected Palestinian society and its livelihood and resulted in serious human rights violations. In fact, during 1993 the number of total fatalities and injuries, particularly among children, was significantly higher than during the preceding period. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) reported that security forces were responsible for the death of 80 Palestinians from the West Bank, including 8 children and 120 persons from the Gaza Strip, among them 28 children. 2/ Since the beginning of the intifadah the total number of Palestinian casualties by shooting, beating or tear gas had risen to 1,240 by August 1993, and the total number injured to an estimated 130,000. Approximately one fourth of the fatalities continued to be children under 16 years. 3/ Palestinian women had similarly experienced violence and maltreatment caused by the situation of unrest and armed conflict. In Gaza, 722 women reported serious injuries and had to undergo medical treatment, as did 108 women in the West Bank. Eight of 48 women prisoners suffering from injuries and maltreatment were said to have been denied adequate medical treatment. During the reporting period, a total of nine Palestinian females were reported to have been killed as a result of direct or indirect actions of the Israeli security forces and settlers, among them three schoolgirls aged below 13 years and one 4-year-old girl.

12. Women and their families had been increasingly harassed - in particular when persons declared as "wanted" had been pursued. Military assaults were carried out massively against the homes of fugitives in February and April 1993 in the Gaza Strip, rendering hundreds of Palestinians homeless. Since the beginning of the intifadah, over 2,400 homes had been demolished or sealed. 4/ Women and their children were especially affected by measures of collective punishment. The Israeli-ordered closure of the Gaza Strip on 30 March and the West Bank on 31 March 1993 had a serious impact on the daily life and overall economic conditions of Palestinians, because it divided the occupied territory into four isolated regions. Special permits were required for entry into Jerusalem and Israel and travel between the West Bank and Gaza and within the West Bank itself. This had a negative effect on commerce, medical care, education and access to services, including those provided by UNRWA, and it caused unemployment to rise to over 50 per cent. 5/ Gaining access to medical facilities in Jerusalem necessitated permits and ambulances were refused entry in several emergency cases. In some areas, road blocks had created enclaves, depriving the Palestinians living in them of access to their families, places of work, schools, medical facilities, places of worship in Jerusalem and utility services. 6/ The closures resulted in a substantial rise in socio-economic hardship since some 130,000 Palestinians were suddenly cut off from their sources of income. Palestinians began to liquidate savings and sell personal belongings and household appliances to buy food, pay debts and cover rent. A change in consumption patterns and nutritional habits was noticed. There was concern that the percentage of growth-retarded children under three years of age and the number of child deaths could rise since protein-energy malnutrition was closely associated with infant and child mortality. 7/

13. A rapid worsening of the environmental situation in the occupied Palestinian territory has been noted. As reported by UNRWA, the ecological problems stemmed mostly from the over-exploitation by the Israeli authorities and the settlers of the available water resources, the lack of adequate waste management systems and the destruction of thousands of olive and fruit trees. The contamination and degradation of the environment had reached crisis dimensions in the Gaza Strip and presented a direct health threat to the population - in particular to the children. Palestinian households suffered from the poor condition of water distribution networks and considerable water losses. 8/ According to a recent survey, household indoor standards have remained relatively poor. Only approximately half the households in the West Bank camps and villages had a separate bathroom and inside flush toilets. Not even 10 per cent had fitted kitchens. 9/ Poor standards and scarcity of safe water affected women in particular since it has been their role to manage food preparation and hygiene.

14. The life of Palestinian families has been characterized by frequent separations. The absence of male family members due to detention, expulsion, imprisonment or death has increased the number of female-headed households. Over the past year, there were an estimated 12,000 Palestinian political prisoners held in Israeli prisons and detention camps. Deportations of male political activists had continued. The number of female-headed households had always been high among the Palestinian refugee population, since men tended to leave the camps in search of work. Thus, the camp population consisted in the beginning mainly of women, children and the elderly. Women were the backbone of refugee camp life. According to UNRWA data, 30.6 per cent of households in the refugee population in the West Bank and 20.1 per cent in the Gaza Strip were female-headed. UNRWA reported that 22 per cent of the families that qualified for the "special hardship" programme were headed by women. An analysis of the population of the occupied territory by age structure and sex showed large gender gaps for the age groups from 35 to 64 years, where women outnumbered men - in particular for the age groups 40-44, 45-49, and 50-54 years. 10/ Men of the concerned age groups migrated from the occupied territory in search of employment abroad, while women stayed behind. Family reunification laws had also led to the deportation of family members, including children, and have denied them the right to return on a permanent basis. Children had even been denied registration. In December 1992, the Government of Israel granted renewable visitor permits to the non-resident spouses and children of Palestinians carrying Israeli-issued identification cards. This decision affected about 1,000 Palestinians, mostly women and children who had entered the occupied territory on visitor permits in mid-1992. 11/

15. Female-headed households were particularly vulnerable to poverty, since women traditionally depended on men as providers of family income. The majority of women could not ensure a living for their families since they were impeded by lack of education, vocational training, skills and employment opportunities and were subject to socio-cultural restrictions concerning their freedom of movement. The condition of widows was particularly difficult and has not received sufficient attention in relation to the question of de jure headship, property rights and guardianship of the children. Certain customary practices, such as a widow's marrying her husband's brother or other close kin, were still widespread in the occupied territory. Large age gaps between spouses, which are common in Palestinian society and in countries of the region, have increased the likelihood of a woman being widowed, often at a young age. Social and legal pressures often force single women and their children to join the household of their kin and to give up independent living in the absence of a male head of family.

16. In Palestinian society, marriage determines a woman's life in social and economic terms. Marriage status has an impact on access to property and income and freedom of movement. Age at marriage is an indicator of women's education and expected fertility. A recent survey carried out in the West Bank and Gaza found that during the first period of the intifadah the age at marriage fell. In the previous two decades education and urbanization had led to a relative rise in marriage age. Thirty-seven per cent of the female population married under the age of 17, the legal minimum age required for marriage. The reasons for the increase in early marriages were said to be linked to the long term school closures and the deteriorating economic situation, which discouraged parents from continuing their daughters' education. The bans on wedding parties during the intifadah made weddings affordable for those who had not planned to marry for some time because of the costs involved. Furthermore, parents fearing for the lives of their sons encouraged early marriages since the loss was considered less tragic if the victim left behind a male heir.

17. According to a recent survey a relatively high number of women in the age group 30-39 were not married (17 per cent). Given the fact that marriage was less likely in the Palestinian society once a woman reached her thirties, this figure is important. It might imply that a certain number of women in this age group either chose not to marry or did not have an opportunity to do so. It confirmed the assertion that higher education might be counterproductive and an impediment to marriage. A greater percentage of the non-married women of this age group had a higher educational level and worked outside the home. 12/

18. Women experience the severe restrictions on movement within their communities which were imposed by the Israeli authorities on a daily basis, just as men do. Prolonged curfews and the fear of going out in the evening have profoundly affected the social life of Palestinian society. However, freedom of movement for women is also linked to marital status and age. It was considered indecent behaviour for a woman to be alone with a male non-family member.

Unmarried women are more restricted in their movements than married women of all ages, although freedom of movement increases steadily with age. Seventy-six per cent of women aged 50-59 said that they were free to move at will, but only 22 per cent of the 15-19-year-old young women said so. Only 71 per cent of women working outside the home felt free to move about freely. 13/

19. Despite the political and social changes that had occurred, the legal conditions governing the status of women had not been changed since the occupation of the West Bank in 1967. All the legislative, executive and administrative powers previously held by the Government of Jordan in the West Bank and Government of Egypt in the Gaza Strip were transferred to the General Military Commander and remained unchanged, unless modified by a provision from the Israeli Military Commander. Legislation relating to the status of women remained the same, with two exceptions. The law of personal status is governed by religious courts, which remain entirely outside the powers of the Israeli military authorities. This religiously based legislation is similar to laws in Israel and neighbouring Arab States and has had an important impact on issues affecting women and families. The second change concerns women's voting rights and candidacy rights for municipal posts, which was granted by Military Order 627 of 1976. Women had no right to vote under the 1955 Jordanian electoral law. The only occasion when women could vote was in the municipal elections of 1976; municipal elections were banned afterwards. 14/

II. IMPACT OF THE MIDDLE-EAST PEACE AGREEMENT ON PALESTINIAN WOMEN

20. The implementation of the Declaration of Principles will have an impact on the situation of Palestinian women. With political developments entering a new phase, the concerns of Palestinian women can be considered part of the development agenda. A women-specific agenda, similar to that of various developing countries, seems desirable. The prevailing approaches to "women in development" are either to add women's concerns to the development agenda set by others or to transform development agendas on the basis of women's analysis of what would both meet their basic needs and empower them. Donors and development agencies have an important role to play in the implementation of women-in-development policies. But little can be achieved without the active involvement of all concerned at all levels.

21. The process of structuring new governmental institutions and the capabilities to manage them will be taking place with the transfer of certain administrative responsibilities from the Israeli civil administration to Palestinian control. Palestinian women can bring a gender perspective to these developments. All of the areas mentioned in the Agreement, starting from direct, free and general elections for the council of Palestinian people in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to human resource development, environmental protection and cooperation in the field of communication and media, can benefit from the scrutiny of women for their gender components and impact. Development projects in agriculture, the setting up of infrastructure, housing, education and health facilities can best be elaborated with the participation of female experts. At the outset, however, a particularly important step would be the provision of de jure equality for women.

22. It is clear that Palestinian women are aware of the present challenge. The Palestinian Federation of Women's Action called for constitutional and judicial legislation to ensure equality and equal opportunities and confirmed the continuation of its struggle against the economic, social, political and cultural marginalization of women. It recognized the urgency of the need to have equality enshrined in the constitutional declaration of the national authority. Women's participation in the drafting of laws, regulations and legislature of the new national authority and in community life in all its aspects needed to be guaranteed. The Federation also asked for the participation of leading female professionals in the formation of the transitional national government and a larger proportion of women in principal and subsidiary organizations and institutions dealing with social, economic, educational, administrative and other matters. Their request covered civil rights, education, health provision, the planning and implementation of growth and development, and the media.

23. The question of accountability takes on a specific definition in the case of interim self-government arrangements which will have an impact on future developments and governmental structures. Adequate funds and resources should be given to women-in-development programmes and women-in-development personnel of sufficient authority should be included in all policy, planning and programming activities. Appropriate quantitative and qualitative national targets need to be identified. A national machinery for the advancement of Palestinian women is already in place but needs recognition, authority and influence at the highest political level. Women need to participate in future governance structures and in existing development institutions, and most importantly, need to be involved in the formulation of development strategies. Skills-training and gender-awareness are important tools for achieving these goals.

24. Besides providing adequate health services and improved education, the most important programme will be to enhance the development of sustainable income-generation activities for women. Realistic, feasible possibilities and basic support facilities need to be identified. Palestinian women need support from the international community, non-governmental organizations and donor agencies in this respect.

Notes

1/ Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations Publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10).

2/ "Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East" (A/48/13), para. 16.

3/ "Report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People" (A/48/35), para. 22.

/...

4/ Ibid., para. 24.

5/ "Assistance to the Palestinian people" (A/48/183/Add.1, E/1993/74/Add.1), para. 25.

6/ A/48/35, para. 28.

7/ A/48/13, para. 10.

8/ Ibid., p. 44.

9/ Marianne Heiberg and Geir Øvensen, Palestinian Society in Gaza, West Bank and Arab Jerusalem. A Survey of Living Conditions. Report 151 (Oslo, Fagbevegegelsens Senter, for Forskning (FAFO), 1993), p. 88.

10/ "Selected statistical series on the balance of payments, foreign trade, population, labour force and employment of the occupied Palestinian territory, West Bank and Gaza Strip, 1968-1987" (UNCTAD/DSD/SEU/1) table DP/III/4A.

11/ A/48/13, para. 2.

12/ Heiberg and Øvensen, Ibid., pp. 287-288.

13/ Ibid., p. 301.

14/ "Palestinian women and economic and social development" (UNCTAD/DSD/SEU/Misc.4), paras. 29-33.

-----

Economic and Social Council

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1995/8
13 March 1995

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Thirty-ninth session
New York, 15 March-4 April 1995
Item 5 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

SUMMARY

In its resolution 38/4, entitled "Palestinian women", the Commission on the Status of Women requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation of and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission, at its thirty-ninth session, a report on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution. The present report responds to that request and highlights the issues of concern for Palestinian women within the present political context. It monitors the situation in the fields of violence, governance, health, education and employment. Emphasis is put on the development aspects and the participation of women in political decision-making. Preparing for de facto and de jure equality has gained importance as has the integration of a gender perspective in all areas of legislation, infrastructure development and human resource and economic development.

* E/CN.6/1995/1.

CONTENTS

	Paragraphs	Page
INTRODUCTION .....	1 - 4	3
I. VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN .....	5 - 8	4
II. POLITICAL PARTICIPATION AND GOVERNANCE .....	9 - 17	5
A. Women's organizations and committees .....	10 - 12	5
B. Equal rights for women .....	13 - 14	6
C. Women in leadership positions .....	15 - 16	6
III. EDUCATION AND TRAINING .....	17 - 22	7
IV. EMPLOYMENT AND ACCESS TO ECONOMIC RESOURCES .....	23 - 27	8
V. HEALTH CONDITIONS AND SERVICE PROVISION .....	28 - 31	9
VI. VULNERABLE GROUPS .....	32 - 33	10
VII. PRIORITIES FOR ASSISTANCE .....	34 - 39	11
VIII. CONCLUSIONS .....	40	12

INTRODUCTION

1. In its resolution 38/4, entitled "Palestinian women", the Commission on the Status of Women requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation of and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission, at its thirty-ninth session, a report on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution. It requested the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children.

2. The World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace (Nairobi, 1985), considered the issue of Palestinian women and children under the rubric "peace" and concluded in paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies:

"For more than three decades, Palestinian women have faced difficult living conditions in camps and outside, struggling for the survival of their families and the survival of the Palestinian people who were deprived of their ancestral lands and denied the inalienable rights to return to their homes and their property, their right to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty. ... The special and immediate needs of Palestinian women and children should be identified and appropriate provision made. United Nations projects should be initiated to help Palestinian women in the fields of health, education, and vocational training. Their living conditions inside and outside the occupied territories should be studied by the appropriate United Nations units and agencies, assisted, as appropriate, by specialized research institutes from various regions." 1/

3. In preparation for the Fourth World Conference on Women, to be held in Beijing in 1995, the monitoring of the implementation of paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies is being undertaken, including consideration of recent political developments and their impact on the status of women. The Arab Regional Preparatory Meeting, convened in Amman from 6 to 10 November 1994, states in its general framework:

"A comprehensive and just peace and stability in the region are prerequisites to development and equality. A comprehensive and just peace would free the human and financial resources that are being spent on military equipment and wars, when they could be geared toward development that provides women with equal opportunities for participation." 2/

4. Since 1985, reports on Palestinian women have been submitted on a regular basis to the Commission on the Status of Women, most recently at its thirty-eighth session. The present report describes the situation of Palestinian women related to violence, equal rights, governance, employment, education and health. In view of the planned establishment, for a transitional period, of a Palestinian interim self-government authority and elected council for the Palestinian people in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, emphasis is placed on the development aspect and on the enhancement of women's participation in the elaboration of a permanent settlement of the conflict and the integration of a gender perspective in all areas of legislation, infrastructure development and human resource and economic development. The transitional period began in Gaza and Jericho, which in May 1994 became self-rule areas under the newly established Palestinian Authority. The present report is based on various recent documents published by the United Nations system and specialized agencies, as well as other sources. No information was available on the specific conditions of women in the self-rule areas.

I. VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

5. The period under review was characterized by a decline of the overall level of violence in the occupied territories following the signing by Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements in September 1993 and the Agreement on the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area (A/49/180-S/1994/727, annex). Since the beginning of the intifadah, dozens of Palestinian women have been killed by Israeli soldiers, settlers or collaborators, often random victims of violent clashes. Women have been harassed by soldiers, in particular when their homes were being searched. A number of female political prisoners remain in jail, several of them under the age of 18. Women prisoners have experienced violence in interrogation and imprisonment.

6. Sporadic outbreaks of protest and demonstration have been met by the Israeli authorities with repressive measures against the civilian population. Collective punishment such as prolonged curfews and closures has brought with it economic and social hardship and increased the level of poverty. <sup>3/</sup> In particular, the sealing of the occupied territories after the Hebron massacre on 25 February 1994 and its aftermath led to increased economic losses for Palestinian workers employed in Israel. Since the movement of goods between Israel and the occupied territories and within the occupied territories themselves had also been interrupted, Palestinian manufacturers and farmers lost considerable income. During the period under review the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) distributed food on an emergency basis to 75,000 families in the West Bank and 95,000 families in the Gaza Strip. <sup>4/</sup> In addition, continued confiscation of land and destruction of houses negatively affected the economic resource of Palestinian families.

7. The experience of violence during the intifadah and afterwards has had negative and chronic effects on the psychological well-being of children and their mothers. Children who were subjected to traumatic events such as torture or who witness the killing of a relative or friend display high levels of anxiety and psychosomatic illnesses. Curfews that confine family members to their home for extended periods, and other measures of collective punishment, continue to put psychological strain on family members. There has been an erosion of male authority within the household, since men were subjugated and helpless in situations of violence during the intifadah. Problems of depression, fear and aggressiveness have increased dramatically among children. Manifested symptoms include lack of concentration, disobedience and increased aggressiveness. Psychosomatic illnesses and ailments were reported at epidemic levels among traumatized mothers during the intifadah and continue to have an impact. 5/ Mental health care projects have been established in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to offer treatment and alleviate the harrowing effect of trauma in children and mothers. 6/

8. Besides the violence arising from the occupation, the Palestinian woman is confronted with various kinds of physical, sexual or psychological violence from her family or from society in general. Women's organizations have begun to collect evidence of domestic violence against women, which has previously been a taboo subject. They denounce traditional forms of social control such as urging girls to quit school prematurely, wear the veil or get married against their will.

II. POLITICAL PARTICIPATION AND GOVERNANCE

9. With the launching of Palestinian self-rule women's contribution to institution-building and legislation has gained importance. There is increased public awareness about women's status, respect for and acceptance of the work of women's organizations is high, and women are prepared to play an active role in government.

A. Women's organizations and committees

10. A historic review shows that Palestinian women's organizations have grown within the national movement and have been influenced by political events. The General Union of Palestinian Women (GUPW) was formed in 1965 as a women's section within the PLO. 7/ With the beginning of the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in 1967, traditional charitable organizations increased their relief activities, but also started to develop income-generating activities and vocational training for girls and women. These activities remained concentrated in the urban areas of the West Bank and were carried out by middle- and upper-class women.

11. In the late 1970s, a new generation of women activists, highly politicized and well-educated, emerged. Women's committees, relying on the various political factions and parties, were established to address the national and social oppression of women. The unified women's committees successfully mobilized women throughout the occupied territories, in refugee camps as well as in remote villages, which has engendered increased awareness among all women involved. Barriers between urban and rural, middle- and lower-class women were overcome.

12. Women's popular committees have often been considered as alternative institutions and part of a possible infrastructure within a future Palestinian Government. During the intifadah, which began in December 1987, women became actively involved in agriculture, education, food storage, medical and guarding committees. They developed home economy as a community-based form of self-reliance. Women continued their former charitable activities such as food distribution and support of homeless families and families of prisoners and victims. Their activities were recognized by the political leadership as an important support to the uprising.

B. Equal rights for women

13. In their early years, women's committees gave priority to the national struggle for liberation and neglected the issue of emancipation and achievement of equality in a patriarchal society. Women did not want to split their activities and open an internal argument at a time when all efforts were needed for the resistance against occupation. Living under occupation had impelled the Palestinian people to hold onto their customs and traditions as a mechanism for preserving their national, cultural and social identity. This has played a major role in enforcing many stereotypes that are discriminatory towards women. 8/ The active participation of women of all ages and social backgrounds in demonstrations and in confrontations with the army contributed to a change in the public image of women. Increased awareness and self-confidence encouraged women to take on leading positions and to publicly criticize the long neglect of social and gender issues. Women's participation in decision-making increased as a result of the experience in the popular committees. 9/ A new feminist consciousness set up a "gender agenda" for the women's movement. Palestinian women increasingly questioned their initial assumption that they would legally and automatically obtain their rights along with national independence. Women's committees and international organizations, including UNRWA, organized courses to inform women about their rights and to raise awareness on legal matters. 10/

14. Women's organizations and human rights groups prepared amendments to the proposed personal status, social and civil laws. Efforts were made to include the provisions of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women into the draft National Authority Law, the equivalent of a future constitution. Palestinian women's organizations knew that they had to grasp the historic moment to ensure that equality was enshrined in all Palestinian legal instruments. Leading Palestinian women inside and outside the occupied territories set up a special committee for the drafting of a declaration of principles, which was adopted in June 1994. This Women's Charter highlights personal status law, socio-economic rights, education and health. 11/

C. Women in leadership positions

15. The number of women in leadership positions has been growing. At present, women represent about 10 per cent of the Palestinian National Congress. From 25 members in 1980, their number increased to 35 in 1986 and 43 in 1992. Women did not hold any diplomatic position until 1980. In 1992, out of 93 women, two reached the level of ambassador. The 15-member Palestinian delegation to the Madrid Peace Conference, which began in October 1991, included three women. The spokesperson for the delegation was a woman. After the implementation of the self-rule agreement, a woman was appointed Minister for Social Affairs of the Palestinian Authority. A woman was appointed head of the women police, which enrolled about 70 women. 12/

16. In preparing for the future administration and establishment of interim self-government, the Palestinian Authority has set up a number of technical committees to define policies, and to assist the negotiating team in planning strategies and policies in all sectors. At the request of women's organizations, a Women's Affairs Technical Committee has been established. Its objective is to establish a system of governance that eliminates all forms of discrimination against women and ensures equal participation in the future legislative, executive and judicial structures. 13/

III. EDUCATION AND TRAINING

17. Palestinian educational achievement is, on average, the highest in the region, with 18 college graduates per thousand inhabitants. The high-quality human resource base has been recognized as the most important asset for the sustainable development of the occupied territories. 14/ The considerable increase - by 74.6 per cent - of the number of students in the past 20 years is partly due to the higher enrolment of girls. In 1967/68, girls represented 41 per cent of the school population; in 1989, their number reached 48 per cent.

18. Gender differences in enrolment appear in the final years of the preparatory cycle and in secondary schools. As much as 14 per cent of girls in the West Bank and 7.3 per cent in the Gaza Strip have not completed schooling. The major reasons given for the drop-out of girls above fourth grade elementary education include slow learning capacity, the political situation and the need to help at home or marry. 15/ Girls' lack of academic ability is linked to crowded classrooms, inadequacy of training material and non-availability of intervention programmes to allow girls a second entry after drop-out or failure.

19. Despite the success in providing compulsory primary education for girls and boys under adverse conditions, the quality of the education system and educational achievement are not satisfactory because of overcrowded schools, double shifts at the elementary level, lack of maintenance, inadequate teacher training, lack of educational material and low salaries. 16/ Girls' education is doubly affected by these adverse circumstances. Their enrolment in the non-compulsory secondary level remains low given the customary restriction on girls' mobility at the onset of puberty. Costs for education and the unequal geographical distribution of secondary schools are an additional obstacle.

20. The frequent closure of schools during the intifadah has had a long-term negative impact on educational achievement at the elementary level and will make it difficult to catch up in higher-level classes. It resulted in demotivation for continued education, in particular among girls, and increased illiteracy rates. During the period under review, disruption in education as a result of military closure orders, curfews and general strikes continued to decline. In UNRWA schools, only 10 per cent of school-days were lost, compared to 16 per cent in the previous year. Students from the Gaza Strip who were enrolled at UNRWA training centres in the West Bank did not get permission from the Israeli authorities to attend their classes owing to movement restrictions imposed in late February 1994. 17/

21. Illiteracy still persists among members of the adult population who have had no schooling or less than six years of schooling. Women of all ages were more likely than men to be illiterate, especially women over 34 years of age and those living in rural areas or refugee camps. In 1990, the data collected on illiteracy in West Bank villages and the Gaza Strip showed that between 30 and 55 per cent of women and between 10 and 35 per cent of men were reported as illiterate. 18/ The popular committees, in particular women's committees, have undertaken a large programme of literacy training for women of all ages in the rural areas and refugee camps. Methods of functional literacy training have been used, linking literacy training to education about health, nutrition, hygiene and child care. However, many women after graduating from a literacy programme gradually lose their skills because of lack of practice. 19/

22. The opening of various institutions of higher learning in the occupied territories between 1967 and 1987 brought with it the most significant change in women's education. Since the 1960s, eight universities have been set up in the occupied territories. In 1991, 25,393 students were enrolled in universities and other third-level institutions. Female students comprise 44 per cent of the total student population in the Gaza Strip and 46 per cent in the West Bank. Young women, who had no opportunity to pursue their education previously, could enrol in universities located close to their homes. This launched a democratization process which engendered broader participation in higher education, since the local universities offered educational opportunities for students from rural areas and refugee camps. The important percentage of women in tertiary education has created a new elite of highly educated women who became politicized during their university education and have become actively involved in setting up women's committees. Women still opted for typical female studies, with 26 per cent in education science and the humanities and only 5.7 and 0.5 per cent in engineering and agriculture, respectively. 20/ Local universities were closed by the Israeli authorities at the beginning of the intifadah and only resumed their full activities in 1992. Access to universities in 1994 was frequently hampered by the Israeli authorities.

IV. EMPLOYMENT AND ACCESS TO ECONOMIC RESOURCES

23. Women's access to economic resources is difficult to assess in a society in which women's participation in the formal labour force has been very low. Traditionally, the main mechanism used to ensure women some form of independent economic resources has been the payment of a dowry at marriage. This has continued as an important social practice, although it is no longer a sustainable source of income or economic support for women, given increased living costs. Jewellery, land, livestock, bank savings or tools of the trade were the main form of women's independent property. With increasing age, women are giving away their dowry resources and investing them in the family. 21/ In times of economic hardship, families have had to fall back on accumulated resources. Women's individual resources were used up for family maintenance, which, in return, increased women's economic dependence on husbands or male family members. There is evidence that Palestinian families exhausted their resources during the years of the intifadah, especially during periods when they were cut off from any sources of labour income.

24. Women's participation in the labour force averaged 11.7 per cent in the West Bank and only 3.9 per cent in the Gaza Strip. Restriction on women's mobility has made it difficult to search for employment inside Israel. However, a significant number of women, in particular female heads of household, have worked as migrant agricultural workers despite social inhibitions. Israeli enterprises specialized in garment production set up subcontracting in the occupied territories, and exploited women by paying wages 50 per cent lower than wages for equivalent work in Israel. 22/

25. Unemployment has been very high for women with high school, vocational or university education. Early surveys of university graduates suggested that few of the female graduates went on to pursue professional careers. Women remained concentrated in secretarial and service work and in the caring professions, in particular nursing and teaching. The female concentration in teaching was very high, especially in primary education.

26. In the 1990s, many women's organizations established income- and profit-generating projects for women. 23/ A survey on Palestinian women's organizations in the occupied territories conducted in 1992 reported a total of 174 women's organizations, including cooperatives, voluntary services, committees, centres and production projects. They run specialized educational, training and production projects, day-care centres, kindergartens and rehabilitation and health centres. In the economic and social context of the occupied territories, income-generating activities provided by women's organizations offer possibilities for female access to the labour market, even if they remain in the realm of traditional female occupations.

27. There is a lack of information on women in the private sector. Data provided by the Chambers of Commerce of five cities in the occupied territories indicate that women constitute only 2 per cent of investors in trade offices, most of them operating with very low capital. Information was provided on an oil factory, in which 13 per cent of investors were women, and on a medical company in Jerusalem, where women constituted 65 per cent of the investors, although no woman was on its board of directors. 24/

V. HEALTH CONDITIONS AND SERVICE PROVISION

28. Health conditions and provision of services in the occupied territories have been negatively affected by the political situation since 1967 and deteriorated during the intifadah. A recent development assessment suggested that too little attention was being given by medical services to reaching out to groups, especially women. 25/ The health-care system focused on female reproductive health and did not provide for women's health problems throughout the life cycle.

29. The West Bank has a high birth rate, at about 4.5 per cent, which has an adverse effect on the health of mothers. Infant mortality has been persistently high, at 50 to 100 deaths per thousand live births in the late 1970s and early 1980s. 26/ The disruption of all aspects of routine life during the intifadah may have resulted in a non-reporting of infant deaths. Birth practices have changed over the past 20 years, including a progressive increase in the proportions of births occurring in hospitals and medical centres. In 1990, only 20 per cent of mothers in the Gaza Strip and 32 per cent in the West Bank gave birth at home. The discrepancy between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip can be explained by the greater number and closer availability of medical services in the Gaza Strip, in particular through UNRWA clinics where pre- and post-natal care is provided. UNRWA also expanded its services of family planning in the context of maternal health. A rise in maternal anaemia in the third trimester of pregnancy has been reported for the West Bank (48 per cent) and the Gaza Strip (67 per cent). 27/

30. A recent survey conducted by UNRWA in 1990 suggested that there had been an improvement in nutritional status in the refugee camps since 1984. Other surveys carried out in the rural areas of the West Bank, however, suggested that malnutrition of children outside the camps was more prevalent. The difference could be explained by the fact that poor families in the refugee camps were receiving substantial food supplies through UNRWA. The economic recession, aggravated in particular in 1993 by measures of collective punishment, had negative effects on nutritional standards. The incidence of childhood anaemia, which has been as high as 70 per cent in camps in the Gaza Strip and 58 per cent in the West Bank, has an impact on a child's physical and psychological development. 28/

31. There is an acute shortage of doctors and clinics in the occupied territories. Non-governmental organizations and medical committees play an important role in providing health services in the West Bank, where they reach 45 per cent of the population through 132 clinics. One of the health service non-governmental organizations, the Union of Palestinian Medical Relief Committees is providing health services adapted to women's needs and priorities without focusing only on maternity health care. It is functioning with a network of volunteers and mobile clinics and puts emphasis on education campaigns and the training of rural women as village health workers. 29/

VI. VULNERABLE GROUPS

32. The violence to which the occupied territories have been exposed since the outbreak of the intifadah greatly increased the number of persons with disabilities. UNRWA has been running a physiotherapy programme, together with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) in six clinics in Gaza and five in the West Bank, but has not been able to meet the need for treatment. A great number of the injuries have led to permanent disability for which specific community care is needed. The UNRWA community-based rehabilitation programme for the disabled has had to further expand its provision of vocational rehabilitation. Since most of the injured are young men, women have had to take on the role of caregivers and providers of family income.

33. The number of female-headed households is high in the occupied territories. Some 36.6 per cent of all households in the West Bank are headed by women, compared to 17.9 per cent in the Gaza Strip. These figures do not include de facto female headship, where male heads of household have migrated for a longer period. 30/ Women heads of household face numerous legal, social and economic problems. The agreements between Israel and the PLO had a favourable impact on household composition since a number of long-term deportees returned to the occupied territories.

VII. PRIORITIES FOR ASSISTANCE

34. Following the signing of the Declaration of Principles, the programmes and agencies of the United Nations system have intensified their efforts to promote sustainable economic and social development in the occupied territories. In May 1994, the Secretary-General appointed a Special Coordinator in the occupied territories to facilitate coordination among the programmes and agencies to ensure an integrated and unified approach to development.

35. UNRWA identified projects that would improve social and economic conditions and infrastructure in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and that could be turned over to the Palestinian Authority in the future. The women's programme of UNRWA was gradually being integrated into the broader network of women's organizations in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in order to achieve greater independence. Two of the 14 women's programme centres were given over for management by elected women's committees, while still being assisted technically and financially by UNRWA staff. 31/

36. The United Nations Development Programme sent a Needs Assessment Mission for Palestinian Women to the West Bank and Gaza Strip in early 1994. The purpose of the mission was to collaborate closely with the evolving leadership of Palestinian women in developing a policy framework for facilitating equal access to and participation in all development efforts as well as in defining the requirements for nation-building efforts. The report of the mission sets out recommendations for action in all fields and policy interventions and operational action to achieve the objectives concerning women and governance. 32/

37. Following a review and analysis of previous cooperation, UNICEF has updated its programme of cooperation for Palestinian women and children in the West Bank and Gaza in close dialogue with the Palestinian Authority and its various institutions, United Nations agencies, non-government organizations and donor partners. UNICEF assistance gives priority to empowering women and girls to become full participants in the economic and social development process. The health programme focuses on maternal and child health, including safe motherhood and reduction of maternal mortality, and education relating to childbirth, motherhood and nutrition. The education component addresses gender disparities and promotes girls' education through formal and non-formal means. In support of greater participation of women in economic life, UNICEF is helping to develop a system of early child care. A youth and community development component, with a focus on girls, aims at constructive action for young people.

38. The International Labour Organization (ILO) sent an interdisciplinary mission to the occupied Palestinian territories in December 1993, the objective of which was to establish a plan of action to assist in the transition to political autonomy, in particular in the areas of human resource development, employment creation, labour institutions, social protection and equality for women. The proposals of the mission aim at promoting women's employment opportunities in agriculture, and small business and industrial development, through targeted poverty alleviation schemes and entrepreneurship development programmes. The integration of the principle of equality of opportunities for men and women in the current process of planning, priority setting and institution-building, with a special emphasis on labour law and international standards, is underlined. In view of the release of thousands of detained persons and prisoners, specific education and training needs have arisen. 33/

39. The World Bank estimated that US$ 5 million would be needed to fund programmes for women and youth during the interim period leading to the autonomy of the occupied territories. UNICEF, as a possible coordinating and implementing agency in this area, would earmark $2 million to mother and child health. 34/

VIII. CONCLUSIONS

40. As the peace process in the occupied territories and the self-rule area of Jericho and the Gaza Strip is being consolidated, many actors have recognized the importance of integrating the gender perspective in all areas of legislation, infrastructure development and human resource and economic development at this crucial period. Preparing for de facto and de jure equality between men and women is of primary importance. Palestinian women need practical support and assistance at all levels, from counterparts inside and outside the occupied territories, in their endeavour to become citizens with equal rights and responsibilities. The findings in the present report show that there is potential for development and that resources and support need to be made available immediately in order to create the necessary infrastructure, especially in the field of education, health and employment.

Notes

1/ Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

2/ Arab Plan of Action for the Advancement of Women to the Year 2000, adopted at the Arab Regional Preparatory Meeting, held at Amman from 6 to 10 November 1994, chap. I, para. 14.

3/ See note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (A/49/511), p. 5.

4/ Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 1 July 1993-30 June 1994 (Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-ninth Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/49/13)), para. 25.

5/ Ahmad M. Baker, "State of mental health among Palestinian children living in the occupied territories", paper presented to the International Meeting "Children of Palestine", Vienna, 8-10 May 1991.

6/ Report of the Secretary-General on assistance to the Palestinian people (A/48/183/Add.1-E/1993/74/Add.1).

7/ General Union of Palestinian Women, Palestinian Women, November 1989.

8/ General Union of Palestinian Women, preliminary report of Palestine to the Fourth World Conference on Women, 1994.

9/ Islah Jad, "From salons to the popular committees: Palestinian women, 1919-1989", in Intifadah: Palestine at the Crossroads, J. Nassar and R. Heacock, eds. (New York, Praeger, 1990).

10/ Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, ..., chap. VIII, sect. C.

11/ United Nations Development Programme, At the Crossroads: Challenges and Choices for Palestinian Women in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (New York, 1994), p. 97.

12/ General Union of Palestinian Women, preliminary report ...

13/ United Nations Development Programme, At the Crossroads ..., p. 95.

14/ World Bank, Developing the Occupied Territories: An Investment in Peace, vol. I (Washington, D.C., September 1993).

15/ United Nations Children's Fund, "The situation of Palestinian children in the West Bank and Gaza Strip" (Jerusalem, 1992).

16/ World Bank, Developing the Occupied Territories ...

17/ Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, ..., para. 137.

18/ United Nations Children's Fund, "The situation of Palestinian children ..."

19/ General Union of Palestinian Women, preliminary report ...

20/ United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Statistical Yearbook, 1993 (Paris, 1993).

21/ Marianne Heiberg and Geir Øvensen, Palestinian Society in Gaza, West Bank and Arab Jerusalem. A Survey of Living Conditions. Report 151 (Oslo, Fagbevegelsens Senter, for Forskning (FAFO), 1993).

22/ "Palestinian women and economic and social development in the West Bank and Gaza Strip" (UNCTAD/DSD/SEU/Misc.4).

/...

23/ Bisan Centre for Research and Development and United Nations Development Programme, Directory of Palestinian Women's Organizations (Ramallah, 1993).

24/ General Union of Palestinian Women, preliminary report ...

25/ World Bank, Developing the Occupied Territories ...

26/ "Palestinian women ..."

27/ United Nations Children's Fund, "The situation of Palestinian children ..."

28/ Ibid.

29/ United Nations Development Programme, At the Crossroads ...

30/ Ibid.

31/ Report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, ..., para. 131.

32/ United Nations Development Programme, At the Crossroads ...

33/ International Labour Organization, Capacity Building for Social Development: A Programme of Action for Transition in the Occupied Palestinian Territories (Geneva, 1994).

34/ World Bank, Emergency Assistance for the Occupied Territories, vol. I, Investment Programme (Washington, D.C., 7 December 1994).

-----

Economic and Social Council

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1996/8
4 March 1996

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

---

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Fortieth session
11-22 March 1996
Item 5 of the provisional agenda*

MONITORING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NAIROBI FORWARD-LOOKING STRATEGIES FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

SUMMARY

In its resolution 1995/30, entitled "Palestinian women", the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation of Palestinian women and to assist them by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fortieth session a report on the implementation of the resolution. The present report monitors conditions of human rights during the period under review and describes new developments, focusing on projects supported and carried out by the United Nations system. It also discusses emerging concerns and provides suggestions in line with the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. The emphasis of the report has shifted from monitoring the general living conditions of Palestinian women to monitoring aspects of their development and human rights, while not neglecting the specific political framework.

* E/CN.6/1996/1.

CONTENTS

	Paragraphs	Page
INTRODUCTION .....	1 - 4	3
I. RESULTS OF THE FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN .....	5 - 7	3
II. GENERAL LIVING CONDITIONS .....	8	4
III. EFFECTS OF THE PEACE PROCESS ON WOMEN .....	9 - 11	5
IV. ASSISTANCE TO PALESTINIAN WOMEN BY THE UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM .....	12 - 17	6
V. EMERGING CONCERNS .....	18 - 22	8
VI. CONCLUSIONS .....	23 - 24	9

INTRODUCTION

1. In accordance with paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for Women, 1/ the situation of Palestinian women and children has been monitored regularly by the Commission on the Status of Women.

2. In its resolution 1995/30, on Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General "to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission ... at its fortieth session a report on the progress made in the implementation" of the resolution. It requested the Commission to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Strategies. The Commission on the Status of Women, in its resolution 39/3, entitled "Women in the Middle East peace process", stressed the importance of, and need for, achieving a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East. It urged Governments, intergovernmental bodies and non-governmental organizations to include women in the peace process and to expedite economic, financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women.

3. Since the signing by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements, on 13 September 1993, the situation in the occupied territories has undergone major changes. Palestinian autonomy has taken shape with the establishment of the Palestinian Authority in May 1994, following the signing of the Agreement on the Gaza Strip and Jericho Area, and has been further consolidated following the signing of the Interim Agreement on the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Elections for a Palestinian Council and for the Ra'ees of the Executive Authority of the Palestinian Council were held on 20 January 1996. The Palestinian interim self-government authority will serve for a transitional period not exceeding five years.

4. As a result of these political developments, the focus of the present report has shifted from that of previous reports: instead of monitoring the general living conditions of Palestinian women under Israeli occupation, the present report focuses on the monitoring of violations of human rights that might persist as a result of the occupation and the consideration of women's participation and role in the establishment of a new political, economic and social regime. The report emphasizes aspects of development, accountability and respect for the human rights of women within a specific political framework. This new approach is in line with the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. 2/ However, the rapid pace of the political changes of the past year have made it difficult to obtain reliable data and up-to-date detailed information for the report.

I. RESULTS OF THE FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN

5. The Fourth World Conference on Women, without making reference to any particular national context, considered "women under occupation" in the strategic area of concern "Women and armed conflict". It established a link between the advancement of women and the peaceful settlement of conflicts:

/...

"An environment that maintains world peace and promotes and protects human rights, democracy and the peaceful settlement of disputes, in accordance with the principles of non-threat or use of force against territorial integrity or political independence and of respect for sovereignty as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, is an important factor for the advancement of women. Peace is inextricably linked with equality between women and men and development. Armed and other types of conflict and terrorism and hostage-taking still persist in many parts of the world. Aggression, foreign occupation, ethnic and other types of conflicts are an ongoing reality affecting women and men in nearly every region." 3/

6. The Platform for Action acknowledged the necessity for women to contribute to conflict resolution and their crucial role during times of armed conflict and collapse of communities:

"The equal access and full participation of women in power structures and their full involvement in all efforts for the prevention and resolution of conflicts are essential for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security. Although women have begun to play an important role in conflict resolution, peace-keeping and defence and foreign affairs mechanisms, they are still underrepresented in decision-making positions. If women are to play an equal part in securing and maintaining peace, they must be empowered politically and economically and represented adequately at all levels of decision-making." 4/

"(Women) often work to preserve social order in the midst of armed and other conflicts. Women make an important but often unrecognized contribution as peace educators both in their families and in their societies." 5/

7. The Arab Regional Preparatory Meeting for the Fourth World Conference on Women (Amman, 9-10 November 1994) makes specific reference to peace in the region:

"A comprehensive and just peace and stability in the region are prerequisites to development and equality. A comprehensive and just peace would free the human and financial resources that are being spent on military equipment and wars, when they could be geared toward development which provides women with equal opportunities for participation." 6/

II. GENERAL LIVING CONDITIONS

8. Despite significant progress in the implementation of the agreements between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization throughout 1995, conditions in the occupied West Bank remained tense, and life in the self-rule areas continued to be affected by measures undertaken by the Israeli authorities, including various military and economic measures that have been detailed in other United Nations reports. 7/ For example, the Israeli authorities sealed the West Bank and Gaza Strip entirely on several occasions, preventing workers with valid permits from entering Israel and East Jerusalem. These measures exacerbated the economic hardship of many families. In view of the harsh economic situation, the United Nations Special Coordinator in the occupied territories stated that the standard of living of Palestinians living under the autonomous region of Gaza had declined by 50 per cent since the signing of the Interim Agreement. 8/ A special appeal was launched to the donor community to support the Palestinian authorities in this crucial period.

/...

III. EFFECTS OF THE PEACE PROCESS ON WOMEN

9. The peace process, welcomed by the majority of the Palestinian population, has had a significant impact on the lives of women and the activities of women's organizations. One of the most significant questions has been the release of Palestinian prisoners, including a small number of women, whose health conditions had deteriorated. In accordance with the Interim Agreement, Israel was to release about 1,200 prisoners and detainees, including all female detainees and prisoners as soon as the Agreement went into effect. In October 1995, 21 women were released, but five others were not. Only one woman, who had been in solitary confinement, walked free; 20 others refused to leave their cells, protesting that Israel was not fulfilling its commitment regarding all female prisoners and detainees. The 25 women remaining in prison launched a hunger strike on 10 January 1996 in protest against Israel's continuing refusal to release them. 9/

10. Palestinian women, who played an active role during the intifadah, have remained involved since the establishment of the Palestinian Authority. Women's organizations and human rights groups formed coalitions in the areas of human rights and legal services. They drafted a bill of women's rights following the release of the Palestinian Draft Basic Law and focused on procedural and administrative law important for its implementation. Women activists undertook a legal analysis of existing laws from a gender perspective and a review of their implementation, which was included in a handbook for legal literacy training. The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women and other international standards on women and human rights were widely discussed at the grass-roots level. 10/ The issue was raised about which models or mechanisms for addressing women's issues would be most appropriate in the future government. It was debated whether the recently created Women's Affairs Bureau should be an integrated part of the Palestinian Authority or a separate body. 11/ The Women's Affairs Technical Committee, set up by the Palestinian Authority, became a forum for the concerns expressed by women's non-governmental organizations and dealt with the mainstreaming of gender issues in development policies. Recently a Gender Mainstreaming Department was established within the Ministry of Planning.

11. For the Palestinian elections on 20 January 1996, women's organizations undertook their own preparations. Non-governmental organizations had closely observed the elections in South Africa and the role of the women's charter there. The introduction of a quota system in the Palestinian elections was regarded as controversial at the level of the women's movement. There was concern that, through the quota system, women candidates who were not gender-sensitized would be appointed to governmental posts. It was also asked whether women would stand for election from within their political parties or independently of any political party. Despite the limitations, a view in favour of the quota system prevailed. Women led protests demanding a quota for women on the Palestinian Council, arguing that women faced difficulties in competing with men in the elections because of the historical inequalities in the male-dominated society. The Palestinian Election Law provided for a system of regulations that determine the number of assembly seats in each constituency in proportion to the population. Based on the registration of voters in the different constituencies, quotas were allocated only for Christians and the Samaritan sect, but no provision was made to ensure an equal representation of women. 12/ According to the Central Election Commission, 1,013,235 Palestinians aged 18 and over were registered in the Gaza Strip, West Bank and East Jerusalem to vote in the elections. Forty-nine per cent of the registered voters were women. Among the 676 candidates for the 88-seat legislative council, there were only 28 women (4 per cent). The sole opponent to PLO Chairman Arafat in the election for Ra'ees of the Executive Authority of the Palestinian Council was a woman, Ms. Samiha Khalil of Ramallah. Five women, representing 5.6 per cent, were elected to the Palestinian Council.

IV. ASSISTANCE TO PALESTINIAN WOMEN BY THE UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM

12. During the period under review, a number of projects for Palestinian women were carried out and initiated by the United Nations system and bilateral donors in close cooperation with the Palestinian Authority and non-governmental organizations.

13. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), in addition to its ongoing work for women, financed new projects under the Palestinian Women's Initiative Fund, including a community-run kindergarten in the West Bank and a training workshop in the maintenance and repair of sewing and knitting machines in Gaza. It operated a solidarity group-lending programme in the Gaza Strip to make credit available to women working in micro enterprises and as street vendors in the informal sector of the economy. The programme offered loans averaging $400 to individual women for the expansion of their income-generating activities. Under the Peace Implementation Programme, it established nine women's programme centres, and construction began for a College of Nursing and Allied Health Science. In the field of education, UNRWA awarded university scholarships to 863 Palestine refugee pupils, including 371 women. 13/

14. THE UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (PAPP), through its Gender in Development Programme (GIDP), carried out a variety of projects, including cooperation with the Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling on the improvement of Palestinian women's legal status. It organized a workshop for Palestinian media agencies and individuals on the portrayal of gender roles in the media and supported the Palestinian Coalition for Women's Health which aims to improve the provision of health services for Palestinian women by addressing their needs using a life-cycle approach. To improve access to education - so far limited for women in particular due to lack of adequate educational facilities and overcrowding in schools in the West Bank and Gaza Strip - classrooms in villages and rural areas were constructed and renovated, primarily for girls. UNDP/PAPP is upgrading a cultural and educational complex in Jericho to provide 23 additional classrooms for primary and secondary girls' schools and is engaging in an extensive school rehabilitation project to provide supplementary facilities for schools throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip, including at least 25 classrooms in primary and secondary girls' schools. A school drop-out study, sponsored by UNDP, to be carried out by the Palestinian Ministry of Education, will target Palestinian female youth. Women's enrolment in agricultural schools is encouraged in a project for agricultural education and training which will offer both pre-service and in-service training and target women as 50 per cent of the beneficiaries. The gender-in-development initiatives of UNDP/PAPP include a strategy of upstream interventions which aim at enlarging constituencies in advocacy and working directly with the Palestinian Authority ministries in order to enhance a gender-sensitive approach to policy planning and strategy formulation. They support the established women's units in the various ministries in order to build and strengthen their efforts for mainstreaming gender at the policy level.

15. The United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) focused on preparations for the Fourth World Conference on Women (Beijing, September 1995), providing support and training to the Palestinian participants at the Conference and the NGO Forum. One specific area of support was institution-building, in particular, efforts to institutionalize gender planning within the emerging bodies of the Palestinian Authority. Other areas were political participation and conflict resolution, with emphasis on awareness-building for women in elections, and follow-up to the Conference, including the preparation of a national strategy for women based on the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. 2/ UNIFEM also launched a permanent WID Facilitation Initiative to coordinate the multiplicity of donors, non-governmental organizations and initiators of WID projects.

16. In addressing the needs of Palestinian children, youth and women, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) moved away from emergency interventions towards longer-term basic services for development and sustainability. For the first time since 1980, when its programme in the West Bank and Gaza Strip was launched, UNICEF could work in cooperation with a central Palestinian authority which provided the framework for planning, policy development and harmonization of basic services to children and women on a national level. Strategies to promote basic education for all, health promotion and empowerment of women were carried out and included, for example, the standardization of women's health services through the development of a Unified Maternal Health card. UNICEF gave priority to programmes reaching out to children in underprivileged communities in refugee camps, rural and urban areas, with special focus on the girl child. Gender issues were integrated into programming and training to upgrade the skills of health care and education professionals. UNICEF also supported the Palestinian preparation for and participation in the Fourth World Conference on Women. For the collection of disaggregated data on health and education indicators, UNICEF launched a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey in collaboration with the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics. Support for capacity-building of the Palestinian Authority institutions was a priority for UNICEF in 1995 and included the formulation of a national programme of action in order to ensure political and social mobilization and long-term planning for children, in particular girls.

17. The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) undertook jointly with UNRWA and the World Health Organization (WHO) a needs assessment mission, whose recommendations will be taken into account in formulating projects to address the needs of Palestinian women. UNFPA also implemented two expanded maternal and child health and family planning projects in Gaza and the West Bank.

V. EMERGING CONCERNS

18. The need for sustainable economic development has been persistently underlined as crucial to the successful establishment of Palestinian interim self-government. In this respect the international community, including the donor agencies, made substantive commitments and were aware of their responsibility for providing support to the launching of an independent economy and for establishing a viable infrastructure. 14/

19. With regard to the inclusion of gender aspects, the development policies and planning in the Palestinian self-rule areas follow patterns similar to those that have been observed in other developing countries. From a number of critical assessments it seems apparent that women's status and potential roles in socio-economic development and their needs and interests were not given systematic consideration in the preparations of overall economic and social development plans or in the design of development proposals. An important study undertaken by the World Bank, for instance, did not consider women's role in the labour market. In a three-year emergency programme, only a pilot programme for youth and women in development was proposed. 15/ Conversely, the international donor community, particularly through their programmes on women in development, made a commitment to ensuring a more equal role for women in Palestinian society. From 1990 onwards, substantive support has been given for the development of women's institutions, income-generating projects and vocational training. 16/ This has contributed to the launching of small income-generating projects and greater professionalism in the work of the women's organizations, whose relevance for the overall economic development might, however, be questioned.

20. The approach taken in the design of development programmes had an impact on the elaboration of Palestinian national development priorities. Researchers on gender issues have been critical of the form and conceptualization of social entitlements and citizen's rights in the emerging policies of the Palestine authority. They have voiced concern that discussion of the Palestinian economy had been limited to macroeconomic trends and the formal market, with no regard to gender needs. They argued that, in the outline of a gender-biased and unequal system of social support, secure entitlements were based largely on waged employment and women's unpaid contribution; no recognition was given to unremunerated work. Women were not listed as components in the major programmes of national economic reconstruction. The household and, in consequence, women's multiple roles in it were considered important in the social welfare system only in the sense that they would have to absorb shocks and ensure service that could not be provided by the Authority. Scholars also identified a male bias in research, leadership, expertise and staffing by the international community as well as the local implementing authorities. 17/

21. Women's current roles in the economy, in particular in income-generating projects, and other economic projects have been scrutinized by scholars. A number of income-generating projects were set up during the intifadah, including women's cooperatives, home economy projects and a variety of small business projects. An evaluation of these projects found that the majority failed to survive and were closed not long after their establishment. At the root of their failure was disregard for the socio-economic and political context in which they operated. 18/

22. One particular concern of social scientists and policy researchers was the absence of reliable primary data on Palestinian society, which represents a serious obstacle when projects are being defined and future policies outlined. No reliable and comparable gender-segregated data existed on Palestinian women with regard to household composition, labour-force participation, access to property and resources, education or health. The lack was due to the different sources of collection and the number of researchers who could collect data on particular population groups only, such as the refugee population. A national census, as already envisaged by the Palestinian Bureau of Statistics, is urgently needed, as are in-depth sectoral and topical studies of selected aspects of society. 19/

VI. CONCLUSIONS

23. Support to Palestinian women during the transitional period was requested by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1995/30. In addition to other United Nations bodies with mandates concerning the Palestinian people, including the United Nations Relief And Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and others, the Commission on the Status of Women has shown a long-term commitment by monitoring the situation of Palestinian women, as set out in the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies 1/ and recalled in its various resolutions.

24. In view of the progress achieved in the peace process and the establishment of a Palestinian Authority, the Commission on the Status of Women, in accordance with the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action 2/ and in view of the shift in its monitoring of the situation of Palestinian women towards aspects of development, accountability and respect for the human rights of women, may wish that appropriate assistance be given to the following:

(a) Increase the participation of women in conflict resolution and decision-making;

(b) In implementing their agreements, the parties concerned should respect the human rights of Palestinian women;

(c) Ensure women's equal access to and full participation in power structures and decision-making;

(d) Integrate a gender perspective in legislation, public policies, programmes and projects;

(e) Ensure equality and non-discrimination under the law and in practice;

(f) Prepare for ratification of and accession to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, without reservations;

(g) Create a national machinery and other governmental bodies for the advancement of women at the highest possible level of government;

(h) Reduce the female illiteracy rate to at least half of its 1990 level;

(i) Improve women's access to vocational training, science and technology, and continuing education;

(j) Promote women's economic rights and independence;

(k) Facilitate women's equal access to resources, employment, markets and trade;

(l) Increase women's access throughout the life cycle to appropriate, affordable and high quality health care and information and related services;

(m) Generate and disseminate gender-disaggregated data and information for planning and evaluation.

Notes

1/ Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations publications, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

2/ "Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4-15 September 1995", chap. I, sect. 1.

3/ Ibid., para. 131.

4/ Ibid., para. 134.

5/ Ibid., para. 139.

6/ "Arab Plan of Action for the Advancement of Women to the Year 2000 adopted at the Arab Regional Preparatory Meeting for the Fourth World Conference on Women" (E/CN.6/1995/5/Add.5, para. 14).

7/ "Report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories" (A/50/170), covering the period from 27 August to 31 December 1994; "Report of the Special Committee ..." (A/50/282), covering the period from 1 January to 31 March 1995; "Report of the Special Committee ..." (A/50/463), covering the period 26 August 1994 to 18 August 1995; "Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli settlements on the Palestinian people in the Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, occupied since 1967, and on the Arab population of the Syrian Golan" (A/50/262).

/...

8/ See A/50/170.

9/ The New York Times, 8 October 1995.

10/ Report of the Workshop on Women, at the United Nations International NGO Meeting and European NGO Symposium on the Question of Palestine; Geneva, 29 August-1 September 1994.

11/ Suha Hindiyeh-Mani, "Working towards self-determination and promoting civil society", paper presented at the United Nations North American NGO Symposium on the Question of Palestine; New York, 19-21 June 1995.

12/ Palestinian election law, FBIS-NES-95-243-S of 19 December 1995.

13/ See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fiftieth Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/50/13), paras. 184 and 205.

14/ See A/50/286.

15/ World Bank, Developing the Occupied Territories: An Investment for Peace, vols. 1-6 (Washington, D.C., 1993).

16/ UNDP, Assistance to the Occupied Palestinian Territories. 1992 compendium of ongoing and planned projects (Jerusalem, 1992).

17/ Rita Giacaman, Islah Jad, and Penny Johnson, "For the public good? PLO and social policy", Working paper No. 2, in Gender and society (Birzeit, Birzeit University, 1995).

18/ Nahla Abdo, "Women and the informal economy in Palestine: a feminist critique", Working paper No. 3, in Gender and society (Birzeit, Birzeit University, 1995).

19/ Lisa Taraki, "Society and gender in Palestine: international agencies", Working paper No. 2, in Gender and society (Birzeit, Birzeit University, 1995).

-----

Economic and Social Council

Distr.
GENERAL

E/CN.6/1997/2
7 February 1997

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
Forty-first session
10-21 March 1997
Item 3 (d) of the provisional agenda*

FOLLOW-UP TO THE FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN:
REVIEW OF MAINSTREAMING IN THE ORGANIZATIONS OF
THE UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM

Progress achieved in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system

Report of the Secretary-General

CONTENTS

	Paragraphs	Page
INTRODUCTION .....	1 - 7	3
I. PROGRESS IN THE FOLLOW-UP TO THE FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN AND IN MAINSTREAMING A GENDER PERSPECTIVE WITHIN THE UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM .....	8 - 61	4
A. General Assembly and Economic and Social Council ..	8 - 15	4
1. Results of the fifty-first session of the General Assembly .....	8 - 9	4
2. Substantive session of 1997 of the Economic and Social Council: coordination segment .....	10 - 15	5

* E/CN.6/1997/1.

CONTENTS (continued)

	Paragraphs	Page
B. Activities in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system .....	16 - 24	6
C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality .....	25 - 30	8
D. Joint work plan of the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Centre for Human Rights of the United Nations Secretariat .....	31 - 47	9
1. Assessment of the implementation of the current work plan .....	32 - 39	9
2. Joint work plan for 1997 .....	40 - 47	11
E. Follow-up by Governments: national strategies or action plans .....	48 - 59	13
F. Reported follow-up by non-governmental organizations .....	60 - 61	15
II. REPORTS PREPARED IN ACCORDANCE WITH SPECIFIC MANDATES .	62 - 94	15
A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by the organizations of the United Nations system .....	62 - 88	15
1. Situation of Palestinian women .....	65 - 72	16
2. United Nations assistance to Palestinian women	73 - 86	18
3. Conclusions .....	87 - 88	22
B. Release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned .....	89 - 94	22

INTRODUCTION

1. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1996/6 on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, established the work programme of the Commission on the Status of Women, in particular the items to be included on the agenda of the Commission. As regards documentation for the sessions of the Commission, the Council decided, inter alia, that under item 3 (a) of the Commission's agenda a report of the Secretary-General on the measures taken and progress achieved in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system should be prepared on an annual basis.

2. Reporting requirements contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203 and 51/69 request the Secretary-General to report annually to the Assembly, through the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council, on ways to enhance the capacity of the Organization and of the United Nations system to support the ongoing follow-up to the Conference in the most integrated and effective way, including human and financial requirements.

3. The present report has been prepared in response to those two mandates. Given the need for integrated reporting, mandates contained in Commission resolution 39/5 on the preparation of a joint work plan between the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Centre for Human Rights of the United Nations Secretariat are reflected in section I of the present report. Section II of the report fulfils the reporting requirements of Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/5 on Palestinian women and Commission resolution 40/1 on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned.

4. The Secretary-General, in his report on the implementation of the outcome of the Conference (A/51/322), noted the understanding of the Secretariat that the report requested in General Assembly resolution 50/203 would be provided on a rolling basis. While briefly summarizing results from previous intergovernmental meetings, new material would be added to each report. Therefore, the three separate reports to be submitted in the course of a year to the three-tiered intergovernmental mechanism under the broader heading of follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and mainstreaming of a gender perspective would be self-standing. The complete picture of relevant intergovernmental, national-level and United Nations system activities taking place over a year, however, can be obtained only by consulting all three reports.

5. A particular effort was to be made in those reports to provide information that was most pertinent to the respective intergovernmental body in order to facilitate intergovernmental decision-making. Thus, the reports to the Commission on the Status of Women would emphasize efforts undertaken by the secretariat of the Commission in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective and other follow-up activities. They would also cover inter-agency activities and provide an overview of national action and action by civil society. Bearing in mind the need for integrated reporting, information requested under long-standing mandates or particular resolutions would be incorporated into those reports.

6. The emphasis of the reports to the Economic and Social Council would be on facilitating the coordination function of the Council. Thus, they would focus on activities in the area of the advancement of women and gender mainstreaming by other bodies reporting to the Council, as well as at the inter-agency level, with a view to supporting the Council's responsibilities in system-wide coordination in mainstreaming of a gender perspective, a task requiring the Council's ongoing and long-term attention. The Commission secretariat is assessing opportunities for including an annual thematic focus as well into the reports to the Council in order to increase their overall usefulness for intergovernmental decision-making.

7. It is intended that the reports to the Assembly should contain information from all intergovernmental bodies and United Nations system entities not reporting to the Council, including information from specialized agencies and international financial institutions. An analysis of activities undertaken at the national level by non-governmental organizations and civil society would also be provided. The reports would contain a section on means of implementation at all levels, including human and resource needs. To the extent possible and practical, reports required under specific resolutions would also be included.

I. PROGRESS IN THE FOLLOW-UP TO THE FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN AND IN MAINSTREAMING A GENDER PERSPECTIVE WITHIN
THE UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM

A. General Assembly and Economic and Social Council

1. Results of the fifty-first session of the General Assembly

8. The report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/51/322) contained a section on mainstreaming a gender perspective. The report outlined the implications of gender factors for research, analysis, programme and policy development, and decision-making, and proposed a series of steps to mainstream a gender perspective. Noting that considerable experience already existed in certain areas of United Nations system activities, the report concluded that further steps were necessary to strengthen the conceptual basis for the system-wide mainstreaming of a gender perspective and its practical implications and requirements.

9. The report was in general favourably received, and the Secretary-General was invited to focus on the practical implications of mainstreaming a gender perspective. Accordingly, in its resolution 51/69 of 12 December 1996, the General Assembly made a number of references to mainstreaming by different actors, including by States and the United Nations system, and in different areas, including the human rights of women. In particular, the Assembly welcomed the contribution of the report of the Secretary-General to translating the concept of mainstreaming into practical action, including the ongoing work to develop methodologies to facilitate the application of a gender perspective into all policies and programmes throughout the United Nations system.

2. Substantive session of 1997 of the Economic and Social Council: coordination segment

10. In General Assembly resolution 50/203, the Economic and Social Council was invited to devote one high-level segment, one coordination segment and one operational activities segment to the advancement of women and the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Accordingly, in its decision 1996/310, the Council decided to consider, at its coordination segment in 1997, the cross-sectoral theme "Mainstreaming of gender perspectives into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system".

11. In anticipation of that decision, the first steps for preparing the report of the Secretary-General on the issue were taken at the first session of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality (New York, 22 and 23 October 1996). A background paper on mainstreaming and coordination, prepared by the Division for the Advancement of Women of the United Nations Secretariat, in collaboration with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), served as the basis for discussion. The Committee agreed on the need to further clarify the system-wide implications for mainstreaming.

12. The preliminary outline of the report of the Secretary-General for the coordination segment of the Council's substantive session of 1997 covers:

(a) Clarification of the concept of mainstreaming a gender perspective: qualitative change from Nairobi to Beijing;

(b) Concise overview of intergovernmental actions taken since the Fourth World Conference on Women to mainstream a system-wide gender perspective: towards a comprehensive approach to mainstreaming a gender perspective at the intergovernmental level;

(c) Institutional requirements for mainstreaming a gender perspective, including policies, institutional cultures, incentive systems, operating procedures and gender training:

(i) At the intra-institutional level: administrative instructions, programme budgets, gender training etc.;

(ii) At the ad hoc inter-institutional level: parameters for lessons learned;

(iii) In the integrated follow-up to all United Nations conferences;

(iv) At the formal inter-agency level, in particular through the ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality;

(e) Resource allocation for mainstreaming: the need for a common base for the quantification of financial allocations;

(f) Assessment and proposals for further action.

/...

13. The Joint Consultative Group on Policy (JCGP) Women in Development (WID) Subgroup is preparing three discussion papers for the second session of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, covering three aspects of mainstreaming: indicators, parameters for evaluating best practices, and policy enforcement and accountability. All entities of the United Nations system were invited to contribute to the preparation of those papers; together with a background paper on mainstreaming and coordination and additional information on specific questions that is being gathered in accordance with the preliminary outline given above, those papers will form the analytical core of the above-mentioned report.

14. A preliminary draft of the report will be reviewed at the second session of the Committee, in March 1997, and guidance is expected for the finalization of the report.

15. Any comments that the Commission as a whole or individual members in their statements may make on the issue of mainstreaming would provide valuable input into the preparations of the report for the Economic and Social Council.

B. Activities in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system

16. Since the fortieth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, steps taken in support of implementation of the Platform for Action included a number of initiatives undertaken by the Division for the Advancement of Women of the United Nations Secretariat in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective.

17. Following the endorsement by the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1996/34 of 25 July 1996, of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996-2001, the Under-Secretary-General for Policy Coordination and Sustainable Development and the Director of the Division for the Advancement of Women of the United Nations Secretariat informed United Nations entities of the endorsement, in particular the comments made on the plan by the Commission on the Status of Women in its resolution 40/10 and the annex thereto, and the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC). It will be recalled that the Commission had commented, inter alia, that the United Nations Secretariat as a whole should undertake activities in the critical areas of concern, and it identified a number of Secretariat entities not included in the activities reflected in the plan.<sup>1</sup> CPC agreed to ensure, in its examination of the plan for the period 1998-2001, that the mainstreaming of a gender perspective was reflected in its individual programmes.

18. The above-mentioned communication by the Department/Division to the United Nations entities noted that the comments of the Commission required careful consideration, and would need to be clearly accounted for in the comprehensive mid-term review of the plan in 1998. It was noted that the Secretary-General had been requested to ensure the mainstreaming of a system-wide gender perspective in all United Nations activities, including in decision-making as part of the accountability of senior managers. The need for ongoing support and commitment to that task was emphasized.

19. In order to support efforts by a number of entities to mainstream a gender perspective, the Division for the Advancement of Women initiated a series of meetings with the Office of Legal Affairs, the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the United Nations Secretariat. During those meetings, the concept and practical implications of mainstreaming were discussed. Possible areas were identified within the work programmes of those departments that would seem to lend themselves most readily to mainstreaming efforts, including in their proposed programme budget for 1998-1999.

20. The Department of Political Affairs subsequently identified a number of steps that could be taken to ensure participation in the implementation of the Platform for Action, and to promote mainstreaming within the Department's areas of responsibilities, including the organization, in collaboration with the Division for the Advancement of Women, of workshops and seminars for its staff members. Existing collaboration between the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Electoral Assistance Division of the Department of Political Affairs on compilation of data disaggregated by sex and gender impact assessments is being strengthened.

21. At the invitation of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, senior staff of that Department were briefed by the Director of the Division for the Advancement of Women on the requirements for mainstreaming. Although difficulties were acknowledged in achieving certain goals, in particular the numerical goals of gender balance in peacekeeping missions, the importance of pursuing mainstreaming in the programmatic and policy orientations of the Department and its operations was emphasized. In a preliminary manner, ideas for conducting an analysis of one or several existing peacekeeping operations from a gender perspective were discussed with a view to developing a framework for mainstreaming in the operations of that Department.

22. There has been a noticeable increase in the number of requests to provide input and comments from a gender perspective to reports from different departments of the United Nations Secretariat, including the Department for Policy Coordination and Sustainable Development. Notably, the Division contributed to the Department's work in the area of poverty eradication, and is supporting preparations for the fifth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development and the special session of the General Assembly to review and appraise the implementation of Agenda 21 in order to integrate a gender perspective into those processes.

23. Similarly, in preparation for the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), a paper on gender aspects of Habitat II was prepared by the Division, which was made available at the Conference; the paper addressed the incorporation of the results of the Fourth World Conference on Women into the Habitat Agenda. The Division remains actively involved in the follow-up to Habitat II, with a special focus on mainstreaming. A paper was prepared for the World Food Summit, focusing on the gender aspects of land ownership.

24. Among activities jointly executed by several entities, cooperation continued among the Division for the Advancement of Women, UNIFEM and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

(INSTRAW) in the development of WomenWatch, a United Nations Internet site on the advancement and empowerment of women. The site will facilitate global information exchange for monitoring the implementation of the Platform for Action through the use of computer networking technology. It is expected to be launched in March 1997, and will be accessible via the World Wide Web, a gopher site and electronic mail. Although partial funding from extrabudgetary resources has been allocated, additional resources will be needed to implement the project. Phase one of the project will ink the Web pages of the Division for the Advancement of Women, UNIFEM and INSTRAW. It will contain archival information on the Fourth World Conference on Women and other recent global United Nations conferences, providing a single on-line source for key information and data on global women's issues, and will be linked with other relevant sites on the Internet. In a later phase, it is hoped that non-governmental organizations and other United Nations entities will become active partners in the expansion of WomenWatch. A training component is included in the project. In that regard, a seminar on information technology was held in January 1997 in Peru. Training on the use of electronic networking technology, which was provided by the Division at that seminar on a pilot basis, will be developed for use elsewhere.

C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality

25. Following the decision of ACC, at its first regular session of 1996 (Nairobi, 28 and 29 April 1996), to establish the ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, the first session of the Committee was held on 22 and 23 October 1996 at United Nations Headquarters, New York. It was chaired by the Senior Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues on behalf of the United Nations. The Division for the Advancement of Women serves as the secretariat of the Committee.

26. The Committee's terms of reference, as adopted by ACC, entrust the Committee with cooperation and coordination of United Nations system-wide efforts to implement the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, as well as gender-related recommendations emanating from recent United Nations conferences within the purview of the system. The Committee is also entrusted with supporting the mainstreaming of a gender perspective in the work of the United Nations system.

27. The Committee is expected to draft an advocacy or mission statement for the United Nations system on the advancement and empowerment of women and gender mainstreaming, for adoption by ACC. The statement will identify performance indicators, mechanisms for accountability and best practices, and will develop practical tools and approaches for mainstreaming and for monitoring and implementing the Platform for Action and the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996-2001.

28. Following its initial discussion, the Committee noted that mainstreaming was a responsibility of the United Nations system as a whole and of all staff in all policy and programme areas and in decision-making, and that responsibility for mainstreaming started at the highest level. The Committee agreed that it would follow carefully and would monitor regularly progress made throughout the United Nations system in incorporating a gender perspective in institutional structures, and in policies and programming. It also emphasized the need for the inter-agency task forces set up by ACC for integrated Conference follow-up to fully reflect a gender perspective in their work, including at the country level. It called on ACC to underline the importance of integrating a gender perspective in the work of the task forces and in subsequent activities on integrated follow-up to global conferences. Mainstreaming will be an ongoing concern of the Committee.

/...

29. The Committee put in place a short-term and a long-term programme of work. Among the short-term areas of work are the following: interaction with ACC inter-agency task forces on conference follow-up; indicators, evaluation of best practices, and accountability; and gender balance in the United Nations system. Among the long-term areas of work are: indicators; interaction with ACC machinery; and issue-specific concerns. For example, the Committee decided to review the issues of women in the peace process, women in conflict resolution and violence against women in March 1997. At subsequent sessions, it will discuss gender training and the implementation of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996-2001, among other issues.

30. The second session of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality will take place on 5 and 6 March 1997 in New York. An oral report on the results of that session will be before the Commission.

D. Joint work plan of the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Centre for Human Rights of the United Nations Secretariat

31. In its resolution 39/5, the Commission on the Status of Women requested the Secretary-General to prepare annually a joint work plan for the Centre for Human Rights and the Division for the Advancement of Women, which would help to facilitate the mainstreaming of women's human rights, and to inform the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission on Human Rights of the plan at their annual sessions.

1. Assessment of the implementation of the current work plan

32. In implementing the joint work plan (see E/CN.6/1996/13), the systematic exchange of information between the Division and the Centre, including in meetings between the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Rights and the Director of the Division for the Advancement of Women, continued and was expanded in the course of 1996.

33. The Division for the Advancement of Women and the Centre for Human Rights cooperated closely during the first session of the open-ended working group on the elaboration of a draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, held during the fortieth session of the Commission on the Status of Women in March 1996. The Centre also provided comments and information for the report of the Secretary-General on a comparative summary of existing communications and inquiry procedures and practices under international human rights instruments and under the Charter of the United Nations (E/CN.6/1997/4). The Division provided written information on the work undertaken at the first session of the open-ended working group of the Commission to the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in its elaboration of a proposal for an optional protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. The Division was represented at the fifteenth session of the Committee during discussion of the draft protocol to the Covenant.

34. In order to strengthen the cooperation and links between the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and other human rights treaty bodies, the exchange of information between the Division and the Centre regarding the work of the human rights treaty bodies serviced by them occurred on a regular basis, and included the provision of information to the experts on the work of other treaty bodies. Regular exchange of calendars of events took place to facilitate that coordination. The Division participated in the seventh meeting of persons chairing human rights treaty bodies in September 1996. It also participated in a meeting convened by the American Association for the Advancement of Science in October 1996, which prepared a background paper concerning the revision of reporting guidelines to ensure greater gender sensitivity in reporting under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. That paper was submitted to the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights at its fifteenth session in November. The Division provided support to the Chairperson and members of the Committee in attending the joint meeting with the Committee on the Rights of the Child at Cairo in November 1996, and it joined with UNICEF and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in sponsoring a dialogue between the chairpersons of the two Committees on 12 December 1996 at United Nations Headquarters.

35. The Centre made significant inputs into the preparation of a report for the Committee on ways and means, which examines the working methods of various treaty bodies with a view to enhancing the work of the Committee (CEDAW/C/1997/5).

36. The Division provided input into the work of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women contributed a paper to an expert group meeting on violence against women migrant workers, which was held at Manila from 27 to 31 May 1996.

37. The Division for the Advancement of Women has endeavoured to support the integration of a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system with regard to the human rights dimension of the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS). That work will continue, especially through the Division's participation in the development of human rights guidelines and by encouraging contributions by the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS to the work of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

38. The Division, together with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and UNFPA, convened the first meeting ever of members of all human rights treaty bodies to discuss an issue of common concern. The round table, comprising members of treaty bodies and representatives of United Nations entities and non-governmental organizations and held at Glen Cove, New York, from 9 to 11 December 1996, allowed for an exchange of views on human rights approaches to women's health in the work of all human rights treaty bodies, with a focus on reproductive and sexual rights.

39. The Division and the Centre were both represented at a meeting on women's health and reproductive rights (Toronto, 26-29 September 1996), convened by the Commonwealth Medical Association as follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and the International Conference on Population and Development. The meeting provided an opportunity to highlight the work of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women under article 12 of the Convention.

2. Joint work plan for 1997

40. During 1997, the cooperation between the Division and the Centre on the work of and cooperation among the treaty bodies, the elaboration of optional protocols and special rapporteurs will be further consolidated. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights/Centre for Human Rights and the Division for the Advancement of Women will continue to systematically exchange information about the work of each human rights mechanism for which they provide substantive servicing. Briefing notes will be exchanged, in particular on the outcome of the sessions of treaty bodies. There will also be a number of targeted activities that are expected to support the mainstreaming of a gender perspective in all human rights activities implemented by the Centre for Human Rights. Most notably, a joint project on the integration of a gender perspective into technical cooperation practices and procedures will become operational in 1997.

41. The Division will prepare a background paper on the relevance of gender in the enjoyment of rights covered by the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as an input to the elaboration of a new general comment on article 3 by the Human Rights Committee for its forthcoming session, in March 1997. It will also provide input to the work on a general comment on the right to health by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and will continue to contribute to the Committee's revision of its reporting guidelines so that they reflect a gender perspective. The Division will provide a selected number of briefs on the status of women in countries whose reports are considered by treaty bodies.

42. The Division will provide information relevant to the elaboration of concluding observations/comments of the other treaty bodies, ensuring that the concluding comments of CEDAW are immediately available to the other treaty bodies, and also that relevant concluding comments are available to thematic and country-specific rapporteurs.

43. The Division will provide the Centre with targeted inputs to the work of the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, which will include the establishment of direct contact with the experts entrusted with the preparation of studies on systematic rape and sexual slavery during periods of armed conflict, and on human rights and income distribution. The Division will also provide information on the status of women to country-specific rapporteurs. In addition, the High Commissioner/Centre for Human Rights and the Division for the Advancement of Women will coordinate their activities and exchange information in connection with the following mandates for which they are respectively responsible: (a) the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on armed conflict and children, and (b) reports on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned.

44. Cooperation between the Division and the Centre will be expanded and strengthened as they develop and maintain their respective Internet sites. The Centre's Web site already incorporates a number of the reports of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women. A link will be established from the Centre's site to the Division's CEDAW site, and vice versa, to provide for fast electronic cross-referencing.

45. The Division will contribute to the implementation of the recommendations of the above-mentioned round table of human rights treaty bodies on human rights approaches to women's health, which was held at Glen Cove in December 1996. One of the priority actions emerging from the round table is the preparation of a resource book on human rights to be used for training staff members of bodies of the United Nations in the field of human rights. It will be prepared jointly by the Division, the Centre for Human Rights and UNFPA.

46. Based on preparatory work that commenced in late 1996, a global project was elaborated and subsequently endorsed by the Board of Trustees of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights, in November 1996. The project, implementation of which is expected to commence in the first quarter of 1997, aims to facilitate the integration of a gender perspective into all aspects of technical cooperation practices and procedures, from the needs assessment and project formulation phases to monitoring and evaluation. The project will be implemented and funded by the Centre for Human Rights, with the Division contributing gender expertise and advice in the various stages of the project's implementation.

47. In the meantime, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights/Centre for Human Rights will continue to seek the assistance and expertise of the Division for the Advancement of Women for specific technical cooperation initiatives, including, as appropriate, needs assessment and project formulation missions. The Division will also continue to participate in training courses on reporting under human rights treaties organized by the Centre, as well as other ad hoc activities, such as national workshops on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. The Centre and the Division will also work together to mobilize extrabudgetary resources to permit the organization of similar initiatives, including training courses that seek to sensitize women and men to the rights to which women are entitled under international law.

E. Follow-up by Governments: national strategies or action plans

48. In the Platform for Action, Governments have made a commitment with regard to institutional arrangements for the implementation of the Platform at the national level. The importance of effective national machinery is stressed in paragraph 296. Paragraph 297 calls for the preparation of implementation strategies or plans of action by the end of 1996. Particular emphasis is placed on their comprehensiveness, the provision of time-bound targets and benchmarks for monitoring, and resource allocation or reallocation for implementation. The role of non-governmental organizations in such processes is noted in paragraph 298. The Platform also suggests improving the role of the United Nations resident coordinator system to take full account of the Platform for Action (para. 341).

49. The General Assembly, in its resolution 51/69 of 12 December 1996, welcomed the progress made by Governments in developing comprehensive implementation strategies or plans of action, including time-bound targets and benchmarks for monitoring. It also urged all Governments that have not yet done so to undertake efforts in that regard in order to fully implement the Platform.

50. In a note verbale of 13 May 1996, the Secretary-General invited all Member States to provide the Secretariat with copies of their national implementation strategies or plans of action as soon as they are completed. As recommended in Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/6, those national action plans will serve as a basis for the preparation of a synthesized report on implementation plans of Governments and the United Nations system, which will be submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-second session, in 1998.

51. As of 15 January 1997, 25 member States have complied with this request. Several others have informed the Commission secretariat that such information will be forthcoming. Although a limited number of national plans of action have been made available to the secretariat, the discussion at the fifty-first session of the General Assembly emphasized that a significant number of Member States have undertaken steps in implementing the Platform, and that many Governments are either in the process of preparing their national strategies or action plans or have already done so.

52. Based on a preliminary analysis of the national plans received to date, the following general trends can be identified. In addition to completed plans, a few of the replies received in response to the note verbale either provided a draft of a national plan or preview of a plan under preparation, or indicated that the preparatory process would be concluded within a certain period of time. The status at the national level of a few plans received was unclear (i.e., whether the plan had been adopted or endorsed by the Government, whether it had been brought to the attention of Parliament, whether it had been promulgated by decree, or a similar action). In such instances, it was not fully apparent how the process of implementation of the plan would proceed. In some cases, a plan had been prepared by the national machinery for the advancement of women without any indication of its subsequent adoption by the Government. In some cases, the implementation of the Platform is subsumed under existing action plans for the advancement of women, or will be incorporated into the next medium-term development plan. Information was also provided on activities already implemented.

53. Many of the plans indicated that the Platform for Action had been given wide publicity in the country, had been translated or summarized into the national language, or had been disseminated by the Government or by non-governmental organizations.

54. In a number of countries, a special body or coordinating committee has been set up to guide follow-up. Several plans indicated that there would be a strengthening of institutional mechanisms, in particular of national machinery. Many of the plans have been prepared in a cooperative effort between the national machinery, Government ministries and other governmental entities at the national/local level, non-governmental organizations and actors of civil society. Many of the plans state that, although the national machinery will assume a coordinating and monitoring role, individual ministries are responsible for incorporating relevant follow-up to the Platform into their sectoral programmes. Some state specifically that mainstreaming of a gender perspective into all policies and programmes is to receive priority attention.

55. Few plans cover all critical areas of concern; instead, most focus on a selected number of areas or issues, sometimes choosing priorities among those. Areas most often covered are poverty, participation in decision-making, education, economy, health, violence and human rights. Few plans provide specific benchmarks or targets, or time-frames for implementation. Most commonly, benchmarks are given in the area of education and health, such as the reduction of female illiteracy by a certain percentage by a certain date. Several plans indicate that resources for follow-up to the Platform will be increased, or that such resources will be sought in future national budgets.

56. Most plans provide for a combination of legislative actions, including the reform of discriminatory legislation, with policy and programme measures, as well as targeted projects in specific sectors for particular groups of women or in particular geographic areas. Plans include the ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women or the withdrawal of reservations to the Convention.

57. The importance of integrated follow-up to all United Nations conferences was mentioned. It was also stated that a particular emphasis would be placed on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women in bilateral and multilateral development cooperation. As most of the plans received had been prepared before the Subregional Conference of Senior Governmental Experts held at Bucharest developed a model national action plan, the influence of that meeting remains somewhat limited to date.<sup>2</sup>

58. Accordingly, the Commission secretariat reiterates its invitation to all Governments to provide it with their completed national action plans. Similarly, the secretariat would welcome receiving brief progress reports on the status of plans, their implementation or any other additional information that might be available in conjunction with the national implementation process. Any completed national plans should be made available to the secretariat no later than 30 May 1997 in order to serve as input for the preparation of the synthesized report for 1998.

59. The Commission secretariat also wishes to recall that the Directory of National Machinery for the Advancement of Women is being updated. To that end, a questionnaire has been sent to all Governments inviting them to return the completed questionnaires by 15 October 1996; the deadline was subsequently extended to 2 December 1996. To date, the secretariat has received more than 70 replies. In order to ensure that comprehensive information will be included in the Directory, all Governments are urged to return the completed questionnaires no later than 21 March 1997.

F. Reported follow-up by non-governmental organizations

60. Since the most recent report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/51/322), a number of events under the auspices of non-governmental organizations have occurred. For example, in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, an international conference on violence, abuse and women's citizenship was convened at Brighton by a consortium of non-governmental organizations from 10 to 15 November 1996. A national conference for young girls was organized at UNICEF headquarters, New York, by the United States National Young Girls Coalition on 3 and 4 January 1997. An international conference on eliminating poverty in old age was organized from 12 to 14 December 1996 in Malta by the International Institute on Ageing. An international conference on the Asia Pacific Economic Council was held on 15 and 16 November at Manila as a parallel forum during the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Summit.

61. The Inter-Parliamentary Union will hold an international symposium at New Delhi from 14 to 18 February 1997 on the theme "Towards partnership between men and women in politics". In cooperation with Women's World Banking and the Grameen Bank, the World Bank, Citibank and UNDP will hold a microcredit summit at Washington, D.C., from 2 to 4 February 1997, with a major focus on credit for women. The Friedrich Ebert Foundation, in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, will hold an international seminar on promoting the empowerment of women through adult learning at Bangkok from 24 to 28 February 1997.

II. REPORTS PREPARED IN ACCORDANCE WITH SPECIFIC MANDATES

A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by the organizations of the United Nations system

62. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1996/5 on Palestinian women, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission, at its forty-first session, a report on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

63. The Commission on the Status of Women, in accordance with paragraph 260 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,<sup>3</sup> has continued to monitor the situation of Palestinian women and children. The Fourth World Conference on Women added a new dimension to that reporting when it endorsed the importance of integrating a gender perspective in all policies and programmes of the agencies and bodies of the United Nations system. With regard to the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the mainstreaming of a gender perspective would ensure that all actors involved in the monitoring of respect for human rights or in providing assistance to the Palestinian people will take a gender dimension into account when fulfilling their mandates or designing and implementing their programmes.

64. Recent social and economic developments that occurred in 1996 and that had a particular gender impact are described below. Emphasis is placed on selected new developments and trends that have not been reported previously (see E/CN.6/1995/8 and E/CN.6/1996/8).

1. Situation of Palestinian women

65. When reviewing the economic and social situation of Palestinian women and respect for human rights throughout 1996, the conditions of Palestinian women living in the Palestinian self-rule areas and in the occupied territories remain of particular concern. Life in the self-rule areas has continued to be affected by measures undertaken by the Israeli authorities, including various military and economic measures, that have had an impact on social and economic development. The West Bank and Gaza Strip were entirely sealed on several occasions in the wake of suicide bomb attacks in Israel, thus preventing workers with valid permits from entering Israel and East Jerusalem. The economy remains dominated by the detrimental impact of the occupation, in particular the labour market imbalance (see UNCTAD/ECDC/SEV/12). As a result of the loss of employment in Israel and a decline in the trade flow caused by frequent and long-term closures, the real gross national product in the West Bank and Gaza Strip declined 22.7 per cent between 1992 and 1996. The unemployment rate increased and income levels dropped. By mid-1996, the average unemployment rate was 29.2 per cent in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, nearly 60 per cent higher than at the end of 1995. The unemployment rate has been magnified by the effect of high population growth rates and the large number of young people entering the labour market every year. Since 1995, real wages have fallen about 20 per cent.<sup>4</sup> The drop in household income was partly compensated by remittances from Palestinians abroad and by drawing on resources, such as savings.

66. The economic situation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip has exacerbated the hardship of many families, in particular households with low incomes or those headed by females. It is accepted that economic distortions tend to affect the poorest groups in society most. Owing to their economic and legal status, women are affected more severely than men.<sup>5</sup> It was estimated that 40 to 42 per cent of the Arab residents of Jerusalem, for example, live below the poverty line (see A/51/99/Add.1). Women and children, especially female-headed households, are particularly exposed to poverty.

67. The economic pressure caused by the inability of the male income-earner to provide adequately for the household and the high unemployment rates among men have caused women and children to start looking for work to maintain family living levels. There is a reported increase of 8.5 per cent in the number of women in the paid labour force in 1996, whereas the male labour force grew by only 5.1 per cent over the same period. A survey also found a participation rate as high as 11.5 per cent for children, mainly boys, in the labour force, a rate that is even higher than that of women. The highest concentration of female labour is in the agriculture sector, in which 35 per cent of women work for low wages and with unfavourable working conditions. However, there is also a high concentration of female workers (32.5 per cent of all workers) in relatively well-paid professional, technical and clerical positions. It is possible that women's increased participation in the formal labour market will become a new trend in Palestinian economic and social development that therefore needs to be taken into account.<sup>6</sup>

68. During the period under review, fundamental freedoms, including the freedom of movement, education, religion and expression, have been affected by various measures linked to occupation. Forms of collective punishment, such as the demolition or sealing of houses and rooms, imposition of curfews and the sealing off or closing of areas have been frequently reported, mostly in retaliation for attacks by suicide bombers (see A/51/99 and Add.1, 2 and 3). All population groups are affected by such measures, but some target women in particular. For example, since many Palestinian women work in the agricultural sector they are particularly affected by the land seizure, loss of water utilization and other economic and social repercussions of Israeli settlement (see A/51/135).

69. Another punishment that affects women was the confiscation of the identity cards of wives of Jerusalem residents who live abroad, and who under Israeli law lose their identity card if they leave the city for more than seven years (see A/51/99/Add.1, para. 215). Civilians have been exposed to harassment and physical ill-treatment. Palestinians, including women in labour, have been reported to be denied access to medical treatment in specialized hospitals (see A/51/99/Add.1, para. 167). It has also been noted that Palestinian women have been humiliated and harassed during raids on their homes. There have been continuing problems regarding Palestinian women detainees in Israeli prisons who have not yet been released in accordance with Israeli-Palestinian agreements (see A/51/99/Add.1, paras. 322 and 327).

70. The field of education continues to represent a major challenge to the Palestinian Authority and the donor community. With population growth for 1996 expected to be close to 6 per cent, the continuing provision of quality education for all boys and girls is of concern. It has been projected that 858 elementary schools and the same number of secondary schools would need to be built by the year 2000 to cater for the school-age population (see UNCTAD/ECDC/SEV/12, table IV-4). Frequent closures of the self-rule areas in 1996 have again prevented students and teachers from reaching their schools. As a result of those and similar measures during the Intifadah, which have been aggravated by conditions of overcrowding and lack of teaching materials, the educational achievements of Palestinians are jeopardized. Women and girls are being particularly affected, which has contributed to the fact that the illiteracy rate of Palestinian women remains higher than that of Palestinian men. In February 1996, the Palestinian Bureau of Statistics published the findings of a demographic survey conducted among 14,854 households in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank (not including East Jerusalem). According to the findings, 16 per cent of all residents aged over 15 were illiterate, with female illiteracy standing at 24 per cent (see A/51/99/Add.1, para. 224).

71. According to UNICEF, health conditions and provision of health services in the West Bank and Gaza Strip remain poor. The impact on the reproductive health of Palestinian women is of particular concern. Total fertility rates remain very high. For example, the average estimated total fertility rate for the period 1990-1995 in the Gaza Strip was 8.8 children per woman.<sup>7</sup> Low age at marriage, short birth intervals and lack of education are factors responsible for the poor health of many Palestinian women, in particular refugee women, of whom many are anaemic.

72. It should be noted that Palestinian women maintain a high level of participation in non-governmental organizations and women's committees. Progress can be reported on the establishment of national machinery for the advancement of women in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. The Palestinian Authority has set up an intergovernmental committee under the Gender Development and Planning Directorate of the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation. A non-governmental organizations committee has been formed under the General Union of Palestinian Women.

2. United Nations assistance to Palestinian women

73. In Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/5, the Council urged organizations of the United Nations system, among others, to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women. During 1995-1996, a number of projects for Palestinian women were initiated and carried out by the United Nations system and bilateral donors, in close cooperation with the Palestinian Authority and non-governmental organizations. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/58 H, entitled "Assistance to the Palestinian people", a coordinated, integrated and targeted programme was elaborated and is being implemented under the leadership of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories (see A/51/171). Activities for women have focused mainly on health and family planning, relief and social services, education and training, collection of statistics disaggregated by sex, and support for the national machinery for the advancement of women, including training on legal literacy and the enhancement of women's role in public life.

74. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to emphasize the improvement of socio-economic conditions within the Palestine refugee community in its operations. Some 3.31 million Palestinian refugees were registered with UNRWA in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip as of 30 June 1996, of whom women of reproductive age and children below the age of five comprised two thirds. UNRWA placed special emphasis on maternal and child-health care as an integral part of its regular programme. UNRWA increased its family-planning services in the Gaza Strip, offering services in 120 UNRWA health centres in 1996, up from 49 in 1992. A tripartite mission of UNRWA, UNFPA and the Palestinian Authority developed in October 1995 a strategic plan and operational framework for a women's health programme, covering reproductive health and family planning (see A/51/13).

75. Education and vocational training remain a field of major activities for UNRWA. Some 49.5 per cent of the total school population and half of the 12,000 teaching staff are female, making UNRWA schools one of the first in the Middle East to achieve gender equality. Eight vocational and technical training centres offer a wide range of courses at the post-preparatory and post-secondary level, and have enrolled 1,273 women in the total of 4,624 training places. Vocational training for women has been provided in typical female jobs, such as clothing production, hairdressing and beauty care. UNRWA seeks to raise the proportion of women trainees by expanding courses more likely to attract women, such as nursing, computer science and business and office practice. Out of 943 scholarships granted to refugee pupils, 437 or 46.3 per cent were awarded to women.

76. The UNRWA programme for women in development seeks to involve Palestinian refugee women in remunerative economic activity. Some 11,000 women received training in the production of goods or management of services, together with basic business skills. Some 1,089 women supporting 8,200 dependants participated in a solidarity-group lending programme that provided credit ranging from US$ 330 to US$ 8,000 for refugee women in microenterprises or working as street vendors. In UNRWA's small-scale enterprise programme, offering loans for capital investment to new and expanding enterprises and working capital to established enterprises ranging in value from US$ 1,000 to US$ 75,000, 10 per cent of the credits were given to women. Through its special hardship programme, UNRWA provided material and financial aid to refugee families who met the UNRWA criteria of being without a male adult medically fit to earn an income and without other financial support sufficient to cover basic needs, which represented 5.4 per cent of the registered refugee population.

77. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) gives assistance to Palestinian women within the framework of a UNDP-assisted project on capacity-building in agricultural policy analysis and planning, which was formulated in 1995. Gender issues are mainstreamed into the major components of the projects: policy advice, including the preparation of a gender-sensitive agricultural development strategy; training in policy analysis and planning; institutional support; and agricultural statistics and establishing a database. Of particular significance is the establishment of the Rural Development/Advancement of Women Unit within the Department of Agricultural Policies and Planning of the Ministry of Agriculture.

78. The programme of technical assistance to the Palestinian Authority provided by the International Labour Organization (ILO) is the third largest in the United Nations system, following UNRWA and UNDP. The ILO activities for women have been carried out mainly as components of major ILO programmes. The Training Centre of the International Labour Organization at Turin has developed a three-year programme for the socio-economic promotion of Palestinian women, focusing on the training of women for entrepreneurship. The ILO also carried out a study on gender and critical analysis of Palestinian law and practice regarding women workers, and organized a training course on the promotion of women worker's rights and equality in employment.

79. The World Health Organization (WHO) has conducted a situation analysis of women's health and development. It assisted the Ministry of Health and the coordination of various providers of women's health services within and outside the Ministry in preparing a strategic national plan on the role of women in health and development. Further areas of priority are primary health care, leadership training for nurses and nursing management, training on nutrition and provision of immunization.

80. UNICEF supports strategies that promote basic education for all, health promotion and empowerment of women in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Priority was given to children in underprivileged communities, especially in the rural poor communities in the West Bank and in refugee camps, while building on the capacity of local institutions to address the needs of those children and focusing on the girl child. Gender issues were integrated into programming and training programmes. The Palestinian Authority received technical assistance in prioritizing issues in women's health. In cooperation with the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, UNICEF finalized a multiple indicator cluster survey to provide reliable data on the situation of Palestinian women and men. UNICEF provided support for capacity-building to institutions of the Palestinian Authority, and considered the formulation of a national programme of action as an immediate goal so as to ensure political and social mobilization as well as long-term planning for children, in particular the girl child.

81. The UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (UNDP/PAPP) has implemented projects to foster and promote the full participation of Palestinian women in public life and in all aspects of Palestinian social and economic development. It has supported Palestinian women's initiatives through an extensive network of institutions, including the work of the Women's Center for Legal Aid and Counselling on gender sensitive amendments to legislation, the Palestinian Center for Democracy and Elections awareness-raising campaign for rural women, and the work of the Palestinian Coalition for Women's Health. It has also encouraged activities that promote a positive representation of women in audio, visual and written media. Technical assistance and staff training was provided to several women's units within the ministries of the Palestinian Authority. In addition, UNDP/PAPP has enabled Palestinian women to participate in the Woman's Observer Mission to the Election in Nicaragua.

82. UNIFEM, through partnership with non-governmental and governmental organizations, works towards strengthening the role of Palestinian women in the economy, governance, conflict resolution and peace-building. In the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, a project entitled "Post-Beijing follow-up operation" has been launched in April 1996, also involving four other countries of the Western Asia region (Jordan, Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic, Yemen). UNIFEM's goal is to promote the implementation of the Platform for Action and to assist in defining national strategies for the advancement of women. It also intends to strengthen working relations between non-governmental organizations and Governments, and to consolidate coordination and networking among non-governmental organizations at the national, regional and international levels. UNIFEM also carries out a project for the economic empowerment of women in Gaza, training women on how to start their own business and providing assistance for access to credit and business counselling services.

83. The World Food Programme (WFP) currently targets 6,600 households in the Gaza Strip registered by the Ministry of Social Affairs as hardship cases. The majority of those households are headed by women with a large number of dependants. WFP provides food assistance, pays special attention to primary health care, and supports two projects for pregnant women, nursing mothers and pre-school children. The programme distributes food aid as take-home family rations to encourage poor women to visit clinics and health centres operated by local non-governmental organizations.

84. UNFPA activities for Palestinian women have increased consistently since 1987, when small-scale maternal and child-health training and research was started. In 1995, UNFPA helped to establish a women's centre for reproductive health services, social assistance, legal counselling and community education in the Gaza Strip. As part of the reproductive health activities of the UNFPA Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (1996-1999) and in collaboration with WHO, support is provided to the establishment of the Women's Health and Development Department of the Ministry of Health. The projects involve, inter alia, training of the Department's staff on the management of reproductive health programmes, conducting research on policies, service delivery and socio-cultural aspects of reproductive health.

85. The World Bank, in its initial activities in the occupied territories, focused on emergency reconstruction and rehabilitation, and only incidentally on gender. In response to the deteriorating economic conditions, the World Bank's programme has concentrated primarily on short-term emergency assistance, with an emphasis on the rehabilitation of public works. As the Bank reports, future Bank-supported activities on strengthening civil society, education and health, will address gender issues. The Education and Health Rehabilitation Project (1995-1997) is of particular interest to women since it is rehabilitating and constructing schools for girls in Gaza. Women will also benefit from the rehabilitation of hospitals in Gaza. The Palestinian non-governmental organization project, proposed for early 1997, will seek to mobilize official and private donor funds to support the activities of non-governmental organizations in the West Bank and Gaza. Although many non-governmental organization subprojects will be demand-driven, it is expected that many projects will target women's income-generating projects and mother and child-health services.

86. Within the United Nations Secretariat, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, in its 1996-1997 work programme, initiated a multidisciplinary activity assessing the role of non-governmental organizations in the occupied territories and the Palestinian self-rule areas. The project focuses on income-generation, agriculture, industry and other areas, and considers prospects for networking among non-governmental organizations. The Division for Palestinian Rights within the Department of Political Affairs and the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, in executing their programme of work, make efforts to highlight the situation of Palestinian women and children and to involve women in various aspects of their programmes, such as inviting Palestinian women to participate as panelists in non-governmental organization symposia and seminars, and in new training activities. In a follow-up activity to the Fourth World Conference on Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Department for Policy Coordination and Sustainable Development facilitated the participation of a Palestinian expert to its workshop on global information through computer networking technology, organized in New York in June 1996.

3. Conclusions

87. As regards United Nations assistance to Palestinian women, it is recommended that the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system continue to incorporate a gender perspective in their activities. A gender perspective should also be integrated into the monitoring of possible violations of women's human rights, notably the monitoring carried out by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, and the Special Rapporteur on the Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967. In the case of the Special Committee, for example, it would be desirable to achieve a better perspective on the violations of the human rights of women and their needs and concerns by inviting more women to give oral testimonials before the Committee.

88. Women's status and potential roles in socio-economic development, their needs and interests need to be systematically considered in the preparations of overall economic and social development plans for Palestine and the Occupied Territories. While the international donor community has made a commitment to empower Palestinian women and enhance their role in society, including in public life, in leadership positions and through income-generating projects and vocational training, when it comes to programmes for macroeconomic development and market economy, gender needs are not as fully addressed. Women's increasing role in the labour market must be taken into account on a more consistent basis.

B. Release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned

89. A report on the implementation of Commission resolution 40/1 on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned was requested by the Commission for its forty-first session. Consequently, the Commission secretariat requested information from relevant United Nations entities on the implementation of that resolution.

90. From the four responses received by the secretariat, it was clear that there was no systematic collection of data and information on the release of women and children taken hostage in various situations of conflict around the world.

91. UNHCR pointed out that the question fell within the competence of the International Committee of the Red Cross. It also noted the difficulties in obtaining global figures since the circumstances of the detention and release of women and children hostages vary from situation to situation.

92. The Department of Political Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat focused its response on the situation in Angola, Guatemala, Lebanon and Bosnia and Herzegovina. With regard to the situation in Angola, the United Nations Angola Verification Mission reported that women and children were still being taken hostage and that it was currently examining petitions relating to 11 such cases arising from the first extraordinary session of the Joint Commission devoted to Human Rights, held on 8 May 1996, and from resolution 40/1 of the Commission on the Status of Women. Information on several United Nations peacekeeping missions indicated either that there was no knowledge of such cases (as in the case of the United Nations Mission for the Verification of Human Rights in Guatemala) or that such cases were not formally registered (as in the case of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina). In cases of kidnapping in Bosnia and Herzegovina, immediate investigations are carried out by the United Nations International Police Task Force. No figures were submitted, however. It was noted that the kidnapping of women and children in Guatemala was related to profit rather than to the political situation.

93. In its response, UNICEF referred to the report prepared by the expert of the Secretary-General, Ms. Graça Michel, on the impact of armed conflict on children, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 48/157 (see A/51/306 and Add.1). Although the report gives extensive information on violations of the rights of women and children, it does not provide specific information pertinent to the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflict and imprisoned.

94. With respect to the release of women and children taken hostage during armed conflicts and imprisoned, an important step for improving the situation would be for the Governments concerned to ratify without delay and to implement all relevant international instruments and Conventions, and for practical and cost-effective measures to be taken to collect information on women and children hostages on a systematic basis. Non-governmental organizations working in the field might also contribute to that effort.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, 1996, Supplement No. 6 (E/1996/26), chap. IC, resolution 40/10, annex, para. 6.

<sup>2</sup> Subregional Conference of Senior Governmental Experts on the Implementation of the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women in Central and Eastern Europe (Bucharest, 12-14 September 1996).

<sup>3</sup> Report of the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, Nairobi, 15-26 July 1985 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.85.IV.10), chap. I, sect. A.

<sup>4</sup> See "Economic and social conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip", Quarterly Report (Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories), Autumn 1996.

<sup>5</sup> See World Bank, Toward Gender Equality: The Role of Public Policy (Washington, D.C., 1995).

<sup>6</sup> See "Economic and social conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip", loc. cit.

<sup>7</sup> See World Population Prospects, 1996 Revision, forthcoming United Nations publication.

-----

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
26 January 1998

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Forty-second session

2-13 March 1998

Item 3 of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women: review of mainstreaming in the organizations of the United Nations system

Follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action

Report of the Secretary-General

Addendum

III. Reports prepared in accordance with specific mandates

Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system****

1. The present report on the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system, as requested by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1997/16, is based on information and data collected by United Nations bodies monitoring the situation in the occupied territories, such as the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, and by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on Palestinian territories occupied since 1967. Information on assistance to Palestinian women was requested from the United Nations system and replies from 12 entities have been included in this report.

1. Situation of Palestinian women

2. The situation of Palestinian women living in the Palestinian self-rule areas and in the occupied territories has not improved, according to the information provided. Daily life in the self-rule areas continued to be affected by the imposition of security-related measures by the Israeli authorities, which had a detrimental impact on the economic and social situation. As in the past, Palestinian women are experiencing the gender-specific impact of these measures, which is reinforced by existing inequalities in society between women and men.

3. In his report to the Commission on Human Rights, Mr. Hannu Halinen (Finland), the Special Rapporteur on Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, noted that the issue of settlements, including the confiscation of Palestinian land, was emerging as the greatest preoccupation of the inhabitants of the occupied territories, especially in the West Bank. Settler violence and closures imposed by the Israeli authorities on the occupied territories in the wake of security incidents were further issues of concern. The closures had a devastating impact on the fragile Palestinian economy and contributed to maintaining unemployment at an estimated 40 per cent in the Gaza Strip and 30 per cent in the West Bank (E/CN.4/1997/16). Palestinian incomes have dropped sharply since the Oslo Agreement in 1993, from $1,800 to $950 a year in the West Bank, and from $1,200 to $600 a year in the Gaza Strip.<sup>1</sup> With the established threshold for poverty at $998.50 a year, the poverty rate is estimated to be 20 per cent in the West Bank and 40 per cent in the Gaza Strip. As a result of the closure of the occupied Palestinian territories, much of the $1 billion assistance received since 1993 had to be spent on short-term job creation programmes and income support rather than the envisaged longer term investment in infrastructure and institution-building (see A/52/179-E/1997/76, annex).

* E/CN.6/1998/1.

** See also E/CN.6/1998/2, chap. III, sect. A.

4. The Special Committee reported that the deterioration of the economic situation has a negative impact on women, especially those who head households. Economic pressure is also contributing to the erosion of the social fabric, resulting in delayed marriage and the increase in the rate of divorce (see A/52/131/Add.2). The Special Rapporteur noted the deterioration of the situation of women in the occupied territories, which had been reported as one of the hidden effects of the closure (see E/CN.4/1997/16).

5. The closure affected the health conditions of the population in the occupied territories, especially in Gaza. Patients needing specialized treatment available only in Israeli hospitals frequently did not receive entry permits. According to figures collected, one third of the Palestinians referred by Palestinian health committees could not obtain permits to enter Israel (see A/52/131/Add.2). Women's reproductive health is of particular concern. The Special Rapporteur noted that at least 10 persons, including at least seven pregnant women, are believed to have died for want of ready access to better equipped medical facilities. The Palestinian Authority Ministry of Health issued a statement in Gaza claiming that 26 babies had been stillborn because of delays at security checkpoints during the lengthy closure imposed after the suicide bombings in 1996 (see A/51/131/Add.2). One woman had to give birth at a road block, having been prevented from travelling to a hospital (see A/52/131).

6. The closures had a negative impact on education, in particular for students from Gaza who could not attend their educational institutions in the West Bank. As the educational sector is already affected by overcrowding due to the population increase and deteriorating premises, any additional obstacle further jeopardizes the scholastic achievements of students and has a specific gender impact. Limited resources to fund the employment of teachers and the construction of new schools and classrooms have curtailed the educational activities carried out by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) for the refugee population. In the report of the Secretary-General on assistance to the Palestinian people, (A/52/159-E/1997/69), it was noted that improvements in the educational sector and capacity development in the classroom were a high priority for the Palestinian Authority.

7. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported several incidents of harassment and physical ill-treatment of civilians. The information provided indicates that women and girls were victims of violence and sexual harassment when their family homes were searched for weapons by the Israeli police force. They were subject to full strip searches, sometimes in front of their children and male policemen (see A/52/131).

8. The Special Committee also reported that family reunion was hampered. Palestinian women married to Jordanian citizens were refused renewal of their residence permits and the visas of their husbands were invalidated.

9. Progress has been achieved regarding Palestinian women prisoners in Israeli prisons who had not been released as previously agreed. The remaining women prisoners were released by the Israeli authorities on 11 February 1997 in accordance with the 1995 Interim Agreement between Israel and the Palestinian Authority (see A/52/131/Add.1).

10. The quality of services of UNRWA, the main provider of support for Palestinian refugees, has been eroding due to the steady increase in the refugee population and inflation on one side, and austerity measures and budgetary reduction that led to the reduction of a number of its programmes on the other side. The average expenditure per refugee has dropped by 29 per cent since 1992. Since Palestinian refugee women are direct beneficiaries of UNRWA programmes, they have been hit by the cut in services.<sup>2</sup>

2. Follow-up activities to the Fourth World Conference on Women

11. In the Palestinian self-rule areas and occupied territories, progress has been reported with regard to the elimination of some discriminatory laws and practices. The draft Palestinian constitution emphasizes the principle of equality between men and women. Palestinian women can now obtain a passport without written consent of so-called guardians, widows can obtain passports for their children without the permission of a brother or father. Women can take driving lessons without a male chaperone and married students are no longer dismissed from school (see A/52/179).

12. The action plan to implement the Beijing Platform for Action, entitled "Strategies for a Post Beijing Palestinian Governmental Plan of Action Through the Year 2000", was prepared under the leadership of an Intergovernmental Coordinating Committee, which included representatives of the various ministries, the Directorate for Women's Development and a committee of non-governmental organizations in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), jointly with the European Union, launched a "Post-Beijing Follow-up Operation" in the occupied territories and Palestinian self-rule areas and four countries of the Western Asia region (Jordan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Lebanon and Yemen). The International Training Centre of the International Labour Organization (ILO) at Turin organized a seminar on the strengthening of the national machinery for members of the Intergovernmental Coordinating Committee in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women in June 1997.

13. The "Strategies for a Post Beijing Palestinian Governmental Plan of Action Through the Year 2000" refer to the 12 critical areas of concern established in the Platform for Action. Measures to achieve the goals under the critical area of concern "women and armed conflict", include mobilization of Arab and international women's organizations in order to release all detainees, especially women; and to further cooperate with Israeli women to establish a peace culture.

3. United Nations assistance to Palestinian women

14. Information provided by the United Nations system shows that an increasing number of programmes and agencies of the United Nations system paid attention to gender aspects in development and continue to provide support to Palestinian women, in particular in the field of conference follow-up, income generation, health, education and training.

15. UNIFEM is supporting the effective implementation of the Palestinian action plan, its translation into national projects, and the establishment of institutional and human capacities within women's committees and non-governmental organizations at the national and regional levels, including the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into national development processes. Furthermore, UNIFEM launched a women in development facilitation initiative to better coordinate and exchange information on initiatives for women in development as carried out by donors, the Palestinian Authority and non-governmental organizations. It includes the establishment of a database of institutions and workshops on the use of the Internet. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) is providing support to established women's departments in the Ministries of Planning and International Cooperation, Youth and Sports, Social Affairs and Health, in order to enhance the capacity of the Palestinian Authority ministries to mainstream gender in development.

16. Many activities focus on women and the economy. ILO and its International Training Centre at Turin have implemented subprogrammes on the development of Palestinian women entrepreneurship and of Palestinian women's status. Four technical workshops have been organized in the Palestinian territories. The ILO programme of assistance places emphasis on income-generating opportunities for women. UNIFEM's Women's Economic Empowerment Programme in the Gaza Strip, undertaken jointly with the Ministry of Social Affairs, encourages enterprise development through the creation of entrepreneurial awareness, skills training and institutional capacity-building. Its goal is to decrease the burden of poverty and unemployment through a leadership and empowerment approach. The programme is carried out in close cooperation with the training department of UNRWA and the industrial development department of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA).

17. The International Trade Centre (ITC) reported that it was implementing a mainstream project for the development and promotion of high-value floricultural products from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, in collaboration with the Palestinian Welfare Association. The project would create additional employment opportunities for Palestinian women in the export-oriented floricultural industry. ITC also prepared a project to provide trade development support to Palestinian women entrepreneurs, for which funding has not yet been secured.

18. The World Bank's activity in the West Bank and Gaza Strip evolved from a programme designed to respond to emergency reconstruction needs to one focusing on longer-term development initiatives, which consequently pays greater attention to gender issues. No specific programmes directed towards women have been designed, but gender issues are addressed in projects of a social development nature. A Palestinian NGO Project was launched, which grants US$ 14.5 million for finance service delivery and capacity-building activities to Palestinian non-governmental organizations. The project is aimed at assisting poor and disadvantaged Palestinians and grants would be provided for projects focused on women in the field of health, income generation and agricultural extension.

19. UNRWA continued to assist disadvantaged refugees, particularly women, to raise their economic status through skills training, production units, group savings and credit provision. Women were particularly interested in utilizing group savings and loan schemes for home improvement and income generation. In the Gaza Strip, 66 per cent of 4,452 loans valued at US$ 5.4 million were awarded to women. A local investment journal noted that the Agency's credit activity had macroeconomic consequences and was beginning to influence Palestinian financial markets. UNRWA's plan to achieve managerial and financial sustainability for community centres progressed. As of June 1997, 52 of the 71 women's centres were managed by local committees.

20. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations carried out a consultancy mission on gender policies/institutions to the Palestinian territories. It identified four strategies to narrow down the gender gap in agriculture. Programmes of the International Fund for Agricultural Development addressed the needs of small farmers and fishermen, women and landless people in the rural areas of Jericho and the Gaza Strip.

21. The World Food Programme is providing assistance to the Palestinian non-refugee population, in particular in the Gaza Strip. Its poverty-alleviation scheme has targeted approximately 50,000 needy persons registered as special hardship cases, of which over 65 per cent are female heads of household.

22. In the field of education and training, UNDP has been carrying out a project on gender-sensitive education, implemented by four non-governmental organizations, which includes workshops for teachers on gender issues in teaching, subject curricula, counselling and discipline issues, the development of a gender-sensitive resource manual and community awareness campaigns. A rural girls development centre will train young rural women in various skills, including women's health and rights, agriculture and the arts. The Education and Health Project of the World Bank impacts positively on girls and women and will rehabilitate existing and construct new girls schools in Gaza. UNRWA is offering vocational and technical training for both women and men and, in addition, special courses for women. Sixty-nine per cent of the participants in a training course for teachers were women.

23. The programmes supported by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) promoted basic education and health, with a cross-sectoral strategy for the promotion of children's rights and the empowerment of women. The strategy focused on advocacy, capacity-building and community mobilization. Technical assistance was provided to support projects related to gender equality in education and women's health.

24. UNFPA reported the establishment of a women's centre for health care, social assistance, legal counselling and community education in the Gaza Strip. In cooperation with the World Health Organization, UNFPA is providing assistance to the Women's Health and Development Department of the Palestinian Authority Ministry of Health.

25. With regard to women's and children's human rights, UNICEF has promoted the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women within the national programme of action, in cooperation with the newly established Gender Planning and Development General Directorate and the Secretariat for Children at the Palestinian Ministry of Planning. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights is providing assistance to non-governmental organizations in the area of law reform and women's rights.

26. Within the United Nations Secretariat, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs organized a round table on promoting equality and the full participation of women in society as part of the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People (Amman, 20-22 May 1997). ESCWA conducted a field survey on the role of women's non-governmental organizations in the economy, education and health and on prospects for networking.

27. The United Nations Statistics Division gave technical assistance to the population and housing census conducted by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics in the Palestinian self-rule areas (December 1997). To improve the collection of timely and reliable statistics on gender issues, UNDP provided assistance to the Gender Statistics Unit in the Central Bureau of Statistics. UNFPA and the World Bank supported the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics in carrying out the census, which will provide reliable and up-to-date population and housing data necessary for development planning, including data disaggregated by sex.

4. Conclusions

28. Considerable efforts are being made by the Palestinian authorities and civil society to improve the economic and social conditions of Palestinian women, including legislative revisions. The 1997 population and housing census mentioned in paragraph 27 above will provide detailed information and data on the status of Palestinian women and become an important tool for policy planning and development aid. There is, however, little gender-specific information and analysis on the situation of Palestinian women with regard to, for example, the economy, social and political life, human rights or violence.

29. In the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, the international community, including the United Nations system, has provided assistance at various levels to implement the recommendations contained in the Platform for Action, to prepare a Palestinian strategy of action, to collect data disaggregated by sex, and to establish women-specific projects, particularly in the field of income generation. Further efforts and assistance are needed to implement the policies, in line with Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system (see A/52/3, chap. IV, sect. A).

30. As reflected in previous reports, the status and living conditions of Palestinian women are closely linked with the progress of the peace process. The present report indicates that women in the occupied territories continue to be directly affected in injurious ways by security measures and the overall effects of occupation.

Notes

- 1 See "Promoting poverty eradication and sustainable development", paper presented at the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Amman, 20-22 May 1997 (SAPP(97)/6).
  - 2 See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-second Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/52/13).
-

Economic and Social CouncilDistr.: General
22 December 1999

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women*Forty-third session

1–12 March 1999

Item 3 of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women*Follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action*Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The General Assembly, in its resolution 53/120 of 9 December 1998, requested the Secretary-General to report annually to it, through the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council, on follow-up to and progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Similar mandates were also contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69 and 52/100. The present report emphasizes efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective and follow-up activities, including activities undertaken by non-governmental organizations, since the submission of the previous report of the Secretary-General on the subject (E/CN.6/1998/2 and Add.1 and 2). It contains a joint work plan for the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. The present report has one addendum, which contains an analysis of additional national action plans and strategies submitted to the Secretariat during the reporting period.

---

* E/CN.6/1999/1.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction .....	1-5	3
II. Progress in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system .....	6-52	3
A. The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council .....	7-21	3
B. Activities in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system .....	22-37	6
C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality .....	38-42	9
D. Reported activities of non-governmental organizations and other institutions of civil society .....	43-52	10
III. Joint work plan of the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights .....	53-73	11
A. Assessment of the implementation of the current work plan .....	54-60	12
B. Joint work plan for 1999 .....	61-73	13
IV. Information supplied in accordance with specific mandates .....	74-118	15
A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system .....	74-112	15
B. Release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned .....	113-118	19

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 1996/6 on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, the Economic and Social Council established the work programme of the Commission on the Status of Women and decided, inter alia, that under item 3 (a) of the Commission's agenda, a report of the Secretary-General on the measures taken and progress achieved in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system should be prepared on an annual basis.

2. In its resolution 53/120, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report annually to it, through the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council on follow-up to and progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Similar mandates were contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69 and 52/100.

3. In each of the three reports submitted in the course of a year, the information that is most pertinent to the respective intergovernmental body is provided. The report to the Commission on the Status of Women emphasizes efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of gender mainstreaming, and follow-up activities by non-governmental organizations and others. The report to the Economic and Social Council focuses on facilitating the coordination function of the Council. The report to the General Assembly contains information from all entities of the United Nations system, including specialized agencies and international financial institutions, and an analysis of activities undertaken at the national level and by non-governmental organizations and civil society.

4. The present report has been prepared in compliance with General Assembly resolution 53/120. Section III contains a joint work plan for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, as called for in Commission on the Status of Women resolution 39/5. Section IV has been prepared in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/10 on Palestinian women and Commission on the Status of Women resolution 42/2 on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts, including those subsequently imprisoned.

5. The addendum (E/CN.6/1999/2/Add.1) to the present report contains an analysis of an additional 20 national action plans and strategies submitted to the Secretariat in response to a note verbale dated 2 July 1998, which was sent to Member States. This updates the report of the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-second session, in March 1998, entitled "Synthesized report on national action plans and strategies for implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action" (E/CN.6/1998/6).

II. Progress in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system

6. At its forty-third session, the Commission on the Status of Women will continue to conduct its assessment of progress achieved at different levels in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and in gender mainstreaming. In particular, it will conclude its review of the critical areas of concern of the Platform for Action with an assessment of women and health, and institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women. It will also initiate the comprehensive review and appraisal of the implementation of the Platform for Action and preparations for the special session of the General Assembly, to take place from 5 to 9 June 2000. The present report complements the reports submitted on those topics.

A. The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council

1. Fifty-third session of the General Assembly

7. The report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/53/308) focused on follow-up activities undertaken by entities of the United Nations system, including human and financial requirements for implementation. In its conclusions, the report drew attention to Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 and the follow-up resolution adopted by the Council (resolution 1998/43) on gender mainstreaming as a firm basis for concrete steps to achieve measurable progress in gender mainstreaming at all levels and in all areas. It further concluded that a broader assessment including indicators of and recommendations for further action with regard to capacity-building for gender mainstreaming at the national level remained to be made. The Commission's consideration of the critical area of concern IV.H (Institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women) at its present session provides an opportunity to address this issue on a priority basis.

8. The General Assembly, in its resolution 53/120, emphasized the need for further steps by the Secretary-General and by intergovernmental bodies to implement Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 and resolutions 1998/43 and 1998/26 (concerning operational activities and the advancement of women). In this regard, the Secretariat was once again requested to present issues and approaches in a gender-sensitive manner when preparing reports so as to provide the intergovernmental machinery with an analytical basis for gender-responsive policy formulation. The Assembly requested that a gender perspective be integrated into all operational activities and stressed the role of resident coordinators in this regard. The Council was requested to ensure that gender mainstreaming was an integral part of all its activities concerning integrated follow-up to recent United Nations conferences. In its resolution 53/192 on the triennial policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system, the Assembly identified gender as a cross-cutting theme and requested the Secretary-General and the United Nations development system to take all measures to ensure gender balance when making appointments. It also stressed the need for gender mainstreaming in operational activities of the United Nations system in all fields, in particular in support of poverty eradication.

9. The Assembly continued to provide guidance for the preparations of the special session in the year 2000 (resolution 53/120). It decided that the title of the special session would be "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century". It invited the Commission on the Status of Women acting as the preparatory committee for the special session to propose the agenda (structure and themes) and documentation for the special session, taking into account Assembly resolution 52/231. It also invited the Commission to focus in particular on the report requested from the Secretary-General containing suggestions on further actions and initiatives that might be considered during the review in order to achieve gender equality, with attention to mainstreaming a gender perspective and to common trends and themes across the 12 critical areas of concern. This report is before the Commission in document E/CN.6/1999/PC/2.

10. The Assembly emphasized the role of non-governmental organizations in the implementation of the Platform for Action and the need for their active involvement in preparations for the special session, as well as the need to ensure appropriate arrangements for their contributions to the special session. Specifically, it recommended to the Council the extension of the application to the forty-third session of the Commission of the interim measures for the participation of non-governmental organizations, contained in Council decision 1997/298. Furthermore, the Assembly invited the Commission on the Status of Women, meeting as the preparatory committee in March 1999, to recommend to the General Assembly appropriate arrangements for the involvement and participation of non-governmental organizations in the special session. Accordingly, the Commission meeting as the preparatory committee may wish to consider at its present session the question of NGO participation in the special session so that a decision may be taken by the Assembly at its fifty-fourth session.

11. The Assembly also recommended to the Economic and Social Council to decide that non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Council, as well as non-governmental organizations that participated in the Fourth World Conference on Women whose applications for consultative status with the Council were still under consideration, might participate in the sessions of the Commission meeting as the preparatory committee, in 1999 and 2000. The Secretariat will communicate to the NGO community Council decision 1998/301 concerning the participation of non-governmental organizations in the sessions of the Commission acting as the preparatory committee.

12. The Secretary-General was requested by the Assembly to provide by the end of 1999 a compilation of updated statistics and indicators, including by issuing a volume of The World's Women. As no provision for preparing this report had been made in the regular budget, extrabudgetary resources had to be sought. As of 18 December 1998, pledges had been received from the following Governments and United Nations entities: Denmark, Germany, Finland, Iceland, Malta, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) and the World Food Programme (WFP). The Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs has initiated work on this publication. It is expected to be launched in early 2000.

13. Also in resolution 53/120, the Assembly encouraged Governments to submit responses to the questionnaire prepared by the Secretariat on the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. The questionnaire was sent to all Governments in a communication of 28 October 1998 inviting replies no later than 30 April 1999 in order to enable the Secretariat to draw from the responses in preparing for the special session. The questionnaire is also available from the Web site of the Division for the Advancement of Women (www.un.org/womenwatch/daw). Further details on the questionnaire are contained in document E/CN.6/1999/PC/3.

14. Appropriate regional preparatory activities were encouraged, and results are expected to be provided as an input to the Commission at its forty-fourth session, in 2000. In addition to information provided in previous reports (A/52/789 and A/53/308), the following regional preparatory activities have recently taken place or are being planned.

15. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) convened the second follow-up conference to Beijing in collaboration with the League of Arab States and UNIFEM at Beirut from 12 to 15 December 1998. This conference served as the regional preparatory meeting for the special session of the General Assembly in 2000. ESCWA is also convening an Arab conference for the integrated follow-up to United Nations global conferences at Beirut, in December 1999. The Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) will hold a high-level intergovernmental meeting at Bangkok from 26 to 29 October 1999. The seventh session of the Regional Conference on the Integration of Women into the Economic and Social Development of Latin America and the Caribbean was held at Santiago from 19 to 21 November 1997 and adopted the "Santiago Consensus" (see A/53/87). The Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean will convene the eighth session of the Regional Conference in 2000. On the occasion of its fortieth anniversary, the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) held an international conference on the theme "African women and economic development: investing in our future" (April 1998). The Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) is holding consultations at the intergovernmental level with a view to convening a meeting of experts which would review issues and policies in the ECE countries as they relate to gender equality and the situation of women in the field of economics. Furthermore, regional preparations for the review of the Beijing Platform for Action will be discussed at the annual regional coordinating meeting established in follow-up to Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/3 on the review of the regional commissions. The meeting is chaired by the Deputy Secretary-General.

16. In its resolution 52/231, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to invite all entities of the United Nations system, including the specialized agencies, funds and programmes, to be involved actively in preparatory activities and to participate at the highest level in the special session, including through presentations on best practices, obstacles encountered and a vision for the future to accelerate implementation of the Platform for Action and address new and emerging trends. Accordingly, the Secretary-General, in a communication of 20 August 1998, invited heads of specialized agencies, funds and programmes and of regional commissions to participate in the preparations for the special session, and to cooperate with his Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, including in the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, in this endeavour. As of December 1998, 10 heads of agencies have communicated their commitment to the implementation of the Platform for Action and to involvement in the preparations for the special session and in the session itself.

2. Economic and Social Council, substantive session of 1999: high-level segment

17. Action taken by intergovernmental bodies in 1998, in particular the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, has been reported to the Council (E/1998/53). In particular, the Commission's attention is drawn to the decision taken by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 1998/33 with regard to economic, social and cultural rights. In that resolution, the Commission appointed a Special Rapporteur to focus on the right to education, taking into account gender considerations, in particular the situation and needs of the girl child, and promoting the elimination of all forms of discrimination in education. The Special Rapporteur is expected to report for the first time to the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-fifth session (22 March–30 April 1999). Any reports that pertain to the situation of women in the field of the right to education will be made available to the Commission on the Status of Women. The report of the Special Rapporteur will also be made available to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women at its twenty-first session, in 1999.

18. Building upon the Platform for Action and General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69 and 52/100, the Council, in its decision 1998/298, decided that the theme for the high-level segment of its 1999 substantive session would be "The role of employment and work in poverty eradication: the empowerment and advancement of women".

19. The Council's consideration of the topic is expected to benefit from, and to have a substantial impact on, a number of ongoing activities. Most important, the 1999 World Survey on the Role of Women in Development will be available to support intergovernmental deliberations. The Survey will contain a gender analysis of the major global trends. It will also assess the situation of women in the world of work in the context of globalization. The Survey is being prepared in a collaborative effort involving many parts of the United Nations system, under the leadership of the Division for the Advancement of Women. A preliminary executive summary highlighting the major trends and findings is before the Commission in a conference room paper (E/CN.6/1999/CRP.3).

20. Consideration of this topic provides an opportunity for the Council to underline the relevance and impact of gender considerations with regard to employment and poverty eradication, and thus to provide policy guidance, from a gender perspective, for ongoing processes such as the review of the World Summit for Social Development and the system-wide poverty eradication efforts. Building on its recent actions, including its agreed conclusions on poverty eradication of 1996, and on gender mainstreaming of 1997, the Council could further clarify how gender dimensions need to be taken into account in order to make poverty eradication efforts and employment creation policies sustainable and successful, particularly in the context of globalization and economic restructuring.

21. Attention is also drawn to Council decision 1998/290, in which the Council decided, inter alia, to hold an informal meeting with panels of experts immediately after its resumed organizational session for 1999. At that meeting, the Council will consider in a comprehensive manner the work being carried out by the United Nations system and other relevant international and national institutions on basic indicators to measure progress towards the implementation of the integrated and coordinated follow-up of all aspects of major United Nations conferences and summits. As the Council will focus, as a first step, on taking stock and identifying overlapping, duplication and gaps in the economic, social and related fields at all levels, the informal meeting provides an opportunity for a critical assessment of the gender responsiveness of such basic indicators. In this regard, the work of the United Nations Development Group (UNDG), in particular efforts to mainstream gender considerations into the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) process, could inform the discussions in the Council. The UNDG Sub-Group on Gender has provided extensive comments and input to the UNDG Working Group on Common Indicators.

B. Activities in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system

22. Since the adoption of the Council's agreed conclusions on gender mainstreaming (1997/2) and their subsequent communication by the Secretary-General to all heads of departments, funds, programmes and regional commissions, and to the heads of specialized agencies and international trade and financial institutions (see E/1998/64 for a detailed account of the activities undertaken), the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women has continued to follow up with senior officials throughout the system concerning their implementation. A summary of such activities is provided below.

23. The Special Adviser has continued to work with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations in the development of a project on mainstreaming a gender perspective in multidimensional peacekeeping operations. A draft project proposal was made available to interested delegations in mid-1998, and pledges of support were subsequently received from a number of Governments. The project has four major objectives: to analyse the extent to which a gender perspective is reflected in all stages of peacekeeping operations, with a view to strengthening this perspective; to increase the number of women in multidimensional operations at all levels; to assess the impact of peacekeepers on the local population, in particular women; and to review the contribution of local women to peacekeeping and peace support activities. It is anticipated that implementation of the project will commence in early 1999. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations has also stepped up its efforts to improve gender balance at Headquarters and in the field.

24. Further follow-up took place with the Office of Internal Oversight Services. The Special Adviser discussed with the Office opportunities for including gender considerations in two ongoing in-depth evaluations (i.e., of disarmament and of electoral assistance). The issuance of the two in-depth evaluations in 1999 for the Committee for Programme and Coordination might provide a good basis for assessing how gender considerations can further inform the work of the Office.

25. A gender advisory group consisting of representatives of all divisions and offices of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs and chaired by the Special Adviser was established to support gender mainstreaming in all activities of the Department. Various conference review processes in which the Department has the lead or is a major participant (the International Conference on Population and Development and the World Summit for Social Development) and the coordinated and integrated follow-up to United Nations conferences are receiving priority attention. Likewise, the gender advisory group is assessing how the Council's and the Assembly's request to present issues and approaches in a gender-sensitive manner when preparing reports can best be implemented in the preparation of the Department's flagship publications, including the World Economic and Social Survey and the Report on the World Social Situation.

26. In conjunction with her participation in the expert group meeting on national machineries organized by the Division for the Advancement of Women in cooperation with ECLAC (Santiago, 31 August–4 September), the Special Adviser met with the Executive Secretary and with senior staff to review the ongoing efforts of ECLAC to ensure the integration of a gender perspective into its programmes and policies. In particular, ECLAC's ongoing project in this field with the German Development Cooperation Agency (GTZ) and the possibility of replicating it in other regional commissions was discussed, and comparable experiences at United Nations Headquarters, such as the Department of Political Affairs's team building-cum-workshop on gender mainstreaming, were reviewed. The meeting also provided an opportunity to discuss questions of gender balance and of the creation of a gender-sensitive working environment.

27. The Special Adviser's mission to Rome, in conjunction with the workshop on a rights-based approach to women's advancement and empowerment and gender equality (see paras. 39–41 below) allowed her to meet with the Executive Director of WFP, and with senior staff of the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO). In each case, participation in the preparations for the special session, strengthening of gender mainstreaming in all policies and programmes, and questions of gender balance and of a gender-sensitive working environment were discussed. The insights gained from the FAO evaluation of the impact and long-term effect of compulsory gender training conducted agency-wide in 1993 for some 700 technical staff were reviewed and their relevance for the system as a whole discussed.

28. The Special Adviser also seeks to meet with senior United Nations officials who are stationed away from New York whenever they are on mission at Headquarters to discuss follow-up to the Platform for Action, gender mainstreaming and questions of gender balance.

29. Since leading an inter-agency gender mission to Afghanistan in November 1997, the Special Adviser has remained actively involved in the work of the Afghanistan Support Group. The report of the inter-agency mission was approved by the Support Group in December 1997. Some of its recommendations were reviewed by the third meeting of the Support Group, in London, in May 1998. The report was widely distributed and played a catalytic role in raising the awareness of the international community about the situation of women in Afghanistan. It has been taken into account in subsequent inter-agency planning documents concerning humanitarian assistance in Afghanistan and has also been considered by intergovernmental bodies. The Strategic Framework for Afghanistan, defining the principles, goals and institutional arrangements for a more coherent, effective and integrated political strategy and assistance, pointed out that nowhere was the need for an approach based on principles more evident than in the context of gender discrimination in Afghanistan. Two out of five key objectives of the assistance strategy in the Strategic Framework deal with the protection and advancement of human rights, with particular emphasis on gender.

30. A further update of the Special Adviser was reviewed by the Afghanistan Support Group in December 1998. This report, and other recent United Nations reports,<sup>1</sup> insofar as they concern the condition of women, showed that in spite of efforts of United Nations agencies, international organizations and non-governmental organizations, supported by the donor community, there is a further deterioration of economic conditions for women; widespread abuses and violations of women's human rights; continued enforcement of discriminatory measures against women; continued violence, including the rape and killing of women; and erosion of respect for women. The political situation on the ground, as well as the consequences of the earthquakes of February and May 1998 and the withdrawal of United Nations international staff from the country for security reasons, affected the implementation of the recommendations of the inter-agency gender mission. At the same time, positive developments include ongoing intergovernmental attention to the situation of women in Afghanistan; visits of high-level persons to Afghanistan, stressing the concern of the international community with regard to the situation of women (e.g. the Executive Director of UNICEF on behalf of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC)); the imminent appointment of a gender adviser and a human rights adviser within the Resident Coordinator's Office; the creation of a gender coordinating unit on the ground involving representatives from United Nations agencies working in Afghanistan. Furthermore, gender training for staff is being planned, and the gender coordinating unit is in the process of establishing minimum standards of best practices for gender programming.

31. Building on the experience of ACC in developing a strategic framework for Afghanistan with a strong gender component, the Special Adviser participates in the ongoing efforts of the United Nations system, under the leadership of the Deputy Secretary-General, to develop generic guidelines for a strategic framework approach for response to and recovery from crisis situations, with a view to ensuring that any such framework adequately accommodates gender considerations.

32. Another example of increased attention to gender issues is the appointment, by the Secretary-General of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) of a focal point on gender issues in ITU. The ITU Plenipotentiary Conference (12 October–6 November 1998), unanimously adopted resolution PLEN/1 on the inclusion of a gender perspective in the work of ITU. In that resolution, the Plenipotentiary Conference recognized specifically that ITU action was required in the light of the decision taken by the General Assembly to convene a special session in 2000. The conference also noted the need for ITU to investigate, analyse and further understand the impact of telecommunication technologies on women and men, and for a gender perspective to be included in all ITU policies, work programmes, information dissemination activities, publications, study groups, seminars and conferences. The Secretary-General of ITU was instructed to facilitate the work of the ITU Focal Point on Gender Issues and to ensure that a gender perspective was incorporated in the work programmes and leadership and human resources development activities of all sectors; and to report to the next Plenipotentiary Conference on the results and progress made. The ITU secretariat is developing a work plan to implement the resolution and the decision on the appointment of the focal point. This is expected to include a seminar or panel discussion in conjunction with the ITU Council meeting at Geneva in June 1999.

33. Ongoing attention is being paid to ensure that a gender perspective is adequately reflected in the work of UNDG, in particular in areas such as the UNDAF process, common country assessments, and the development of an indicator framework. The establishment by UNDG of a Gender Sub-Group, chaired by UNIFEM, provides a mechanism to monitor, and to provide input and guidance to UNDG. The Division for the Advancement of Women is a member of the Gender Sub-Group.

34. Cooperation continued between the Division for the Advancement of Women, UNIFEM and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW) on the joint project WomenWatch, a United Nations Internet site on the advancement and empowerment of women. Following the endorsement of WomenWatch as an inter-agency project by the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality at its third session, the World Bank, UNDP (Sustainable Development Networking Programme and Gender in Development Programme) and the Spanish National Machinery have joined the site as contributing partners and are thus members of the WomenWatch Web Committee, which sets policy for the site. Other United Nations entities, including the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), have expressed interest in becoming contributing partners.

35. In September 1998, the Division for the Advancement of Women conducted the Women and Health On-line Dialogue. The purpose of the dialogue was to promote wider participation of women from different parts of the world in discussions about national health policies with a gender perspective. Conducted through e-mail and the Web, the dialogue included 217 participants from more than 20 countries, one third of whom were from developing countries. The discussion was summarized and presented to the Expert Group Meeting on Women and Health: Mainstreaming the Gender Perspective into the Health Sector, held at Tunis from 28 September to 2 October 1998.

36. The dialogue focused on the following topics: (a) access to and quality of health services, (b) health education and promotion, (c) medical education and research, (d) nursing, and (e) reform of the health sector. Participants identified gender bias as a persistent factor that affects women as health care providers as well as their access to health services and information. They called for a new health paradigm that adopts a life-cycle approach and also urged better collaboration among health professionals, women's NGOs and Governments. Participants also made specific recommendations to the United Nations in the area of access, nursing, medical education and health reform.

37. In the course of 1998, the WomenWatch project has received financial contributions for outreach and for a series of on-line conferences on the critical areas of concern to be conducted during 1999 and 2000, in preparation for the special session of the General Assembly.

C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality

38. Following the third session of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality (IACWGE) (25–27 February 1998), inter-sessional work on a number of topics has been conducted by task managers, for presentation to and action by the Committee at its fourth session (23–26 February 1999). A series of informal meetings were held in New York during the year. An oral report on the fourth session will be presented to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-third session by the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, who also chairs the Committee. The Committee is expected to focus on the following items: preparations for the special session of the General Assembly in the year 2000, including issuance of an ACC statement as an input into that process; ongoing work on the compilation of good practices in the implementation of the Platform for Action and in gender mainstreaming; preparation of a review of the women-in-development/ gender focal point function; compilation of a database on gender training materials; methodologies for gender impact analysis; and gender sensitivity of budget codes and programme classifications. As part of its fourth session, the Committee is also convening a workshop with a number of resident coordinators and agency field staff to engage in a dialogue at the implementation of the Platform for Action and gender mainstreaming.

39. Based on a decision of the Committee, which was endorsed by the Commission in its agreed conclusions on the human rights of women, the Division for the Advancement of Women organized a workshop on a rights-based approach to women's advancement and empowerment and gender equality. The workshop, which took place in Rome from 5 to 7 October 1998, was hosted by FAO. It brought together 74 participants from the United Nations system and from the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development/ Development Assistance Committee (OECD/DAC) Working Party on Gender Equality. The workshop sought to review and clarify the rights-based approach to gender equality and its implications for policy and operations by bilateral and multilateral entities. The workshop contributed to the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

40. The workshop adopted a final communiqué summarizing the major conclusions and findings that emerged from the discussions and putting forward a number of specific recommendations. While agreeing that further efforts were required to specify the full implications of the rights-based approach to gender equality for policy-making and programming, the workshop made the following recommendations:

- Promote knowledge of human rights and concomitant obligations, and the indivisibility of economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights;
- Promote the principle of gender equality as central to the realization of human rights;
- Promote an enabling environment in which women and girls can exercise choice;
- Promote the availability of and access to gender-specific information and statistics;

- Provide support for participation and local activism through capacity-building and institutional development;
- Strengthen the rights-based approach by increasing contacts between development specialists and human rights specialists, including those of the United Nations Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality and of the OECD/DAC Working Party on Gender Equality;
- Increase the use of Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and other human rights instruments, the work of the human rights treaty bodies and of special procedures as guidance for operational activities;
- Strengthen national and international mechanisms for monitoring and accountability;
- Support the incorporation of international human rights standards into national legal systems;
- Share best practices and lessons learned in regard to tools, methodologies and monitoring mechanisms;
- Strengthen coordination among the United Nations system, bilateral entities and other partners, including at the national level.

41. The meeting was structured into two parts. Part I reviewed the conceptual and legal dimensions of a rights-based approach and its gender dimensions, and discussed the rights-based approach as understood in bilateral and multilateral policies. Part II assessed the practical implications of a rights-based approach to gender equality based on examples and case studies from bilateral and multilateral agencies. The workshop benefited from a background paper prepared by Professor Savitri Goonesekere (University of Colombo, Sri Lanka), in cooperation with the Division for the Advancement of Women, and from the guidance of Professor Cees Flinterman (University of Utrecht, Netherlands). In part II of the workshop, nine working groups dealt with the implications for programming of the rights-based approach for areas such as humanitarian assistance; women's right to food; and women's right to health. The impact of cultural particularities on rights-based programming for women and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women as a tool for rights-based programming were also discussed. A report on the proceedings of the meeting was compiled and made available by the Division for the Advancement of Women.

42. Following up on guidance provided by ACC concerning increased coordination of its standing subsidiary bodies, and on the discussions of the chairpersons of the Consultative Committee on Programme and Operational Questions (CCPOQ), IACWGE and the Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development (IACSD) in the framework of the session of the Economic and Social Council on integrated conference follow-up in May 1998, the Special Adviser, in her capacity as Chairperson of IACWGE accepted an invitation by the Chairperson of CCPOQ and addressed the Consultative Committee at its thirteenth session, in September 1998. She called for a process of regular exchanges between the two committees so that issues of common concern, especially cross-sectoral issues, may be addressed in a more systematic and sustained way in the work of the two committees. Based on CCPOQ's mandate to promote complementarities between the normative/policy side and the operational side of the United Nations system for economic and social development, and on the mandate of IACWGE, she identified various areas for such increased cooperation, including reflection of gender in UNDAF and operational activities in general, gender in the work of the resident coordinator system, gender concerns in the strategic framework process and guidelines, including for crisis situations, gender considerations in poverty eradication; and indicators and data collection. It is expected that the Chairperson of CCPOQ will accept the invitation extended by the Chairperson of IACWGE and address IACWGE at its fourth session, in February 1999.

D. Reported activities of non-governmental organizations and other institutions of civil society

43. Since the issuance of the latest report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/53/308), a number of events have occurred at the international, regional and national levels under the auspices of non-governmental organizations. While these activities were not reported systematically to the Secretariat, some of them have been brought to the attention of the Division for the Advancement of Women and are noted here as examples of the widespread follow-up to the Conference by civil society.

44. Some of the reported follow-up efforts are local level activities, and others are national, regional or global level activities. An example of global efforts was a three-day seminar on the subject of post-Beijing follow-up hosted by the All China Women's Federation in June 1998. The seminar brought together representatives of women's groups from more than 30 countries worldwide, who reported on progress in implementing the Beijing Platform for Action at the national level. The existing gap between the commitments made at the Beijing Conference and the reality of women, especially in poorer countries, was discussed.

45. A seminar entitled "Making democracy work: strategies for empowering women in political and public life", organized by the British Council, was held in Glasgow, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, from 30 August to 5 September 1998. With the aim of promoting the latest knowledge and advances made in social development and gender, the seminar was attended by representatives of women's rights groups and government agencies, academics, lawyers and journalists from 31 countries, with approximately half of them from African countries.

46. At the regional level, the Women's Programme of the Asian South Pacific Bureau of Adult Education and the Gender and Education Office of the International Council for Adult Education jointly convened a Regional Consultation on Women's Education on 26 and 27 September 1998 in Hua Hin, Thailand. The consultation was intended to strategize further coordination between the two organizations in building leadership capacity of women educators and in following up, inter alia, the outcome of the Beijing Conference. It was reported at the consultation that the existence of monitoring and lobbying mechanisms supported by women's groups at the national level helped Governments follow their commitments made at the Beijing Conference.

47. The Second International Women and Water Conference was held at Kathmandu, from 30 August to 5 September 1998, sponsored by Business and Professional Women of Nepal (BPWN), the International Institute for Human Rights, Environment and Development (INURID) and Women and Water, USA. The 20 women from rural Nepal people's organizations whose main daily duties include carrying water, were joined by 50 other women from urban Nepal, India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Australia, Germany, Canada and the United States to discuss the future of clean water at both the local and global levels. Participants agreed to stage a Women's World Water Day on the eve of World Water Day, 21 March 1999.

48. Efforts to expand and promote the well-being and the rights of young women have been gaining worldwide support. Emphasis was placed on educating and training adolescent girls as future leaders and equal participants in decision-making at a regional summer camp organized by the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) in Cyprus in August 1998. Participants were young women from Egypt,

Greece, Jordan and Lebanon, as well as young Palestinian women. The goal of this camp was to prepare young women for responsible participation at decision-making levels. The YWCA also conducted a workshop in Kenya from 9 to 13 March 1998, bringing together 30 young women from all over the country. The workshop was aimed at enhancing the awareness among young women of their human rights and the impact of violence against women.

49. The Japanese Organization for International Cooperation in Family Planning, Inc. has produced three video films advocating for the need for adolescent sexual and reproductive health programmes in Asia. Based on actual stories of three girls from Nepal, Viet Nam and the Philippines, the films address the issues of early marriage, unwanted pregnancy and unwanted delivery from the viewpoint of the adolescents themselves. The video films were designed to help policy makers understand the situation and problems surrounding adolescent girls and to develop appropriate policies to respond to their needs.

50. The Internet has become a preferred means of communication and forum for the exchange of information among women and women's groups worldwide. Although the Internet is still not accessible to many of the women in the South, the number of Web sites in the developing world addressing women's issues is rapidly growing. Furthermore, these Web sites are expanding their capacities, including on-line conferences, and are providing assistance to users. For example, it was reported to the Division for the Advancement of Women in September 1998 that the Women'sNet, a networking Web site initiated in South Africa, had started a new e-mail list to keep people up to date on the latest happenings at Women'sNet.

51. A growing interest in the use of information and media as tools to advance the status of women and to eliminate gender stereotypes has been further explored at various international conferences. A conference entitled "Know How Conference on the World of Women's Information" was held in the Netherlands from 22 to 26 August 1998. The objective of the Conference was to improve the visibility and accessibility of women's information at the global and local levels and to develop a strategy whereby women involved in information could promote the empowerment of women at the global level. The Conference, which brought together about 300 women and men from 83 countries, including information specialists, librarians and women and gender specialists in the field of women's information, adopted a draft declaration to further the cause. The International Information Centre and Archives for the Women's Movement, the organizer of the Conference, has started a new database called "Mapping the World of Women's Information", which is an inventory of women's information services available throughout the world. It also provides gender-specific information and connects government policy agendas with those of civil society.

52. Taking their cue from the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, which, for the first time, included media as a separate area of concern, the World Association for Christian Communication has organized a series of regional consultations aiming to bring together media practitioners, policy makers, activists and specialists. The latest in the series of conferences on gender and communication policy was held in Kingston, Jamaica, from 19 to 21 November 1998, to analyse key issues in gender representation and participation in the media.

III. Joint work plan of the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights

53. In resolution 39/5 of the Commission on the Status of Women and resolution 1997/43 of the Commission on Human Rights, the Secretary-General was requested to prepare annually a joint work plan for the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. In resolution 1998/51, the Commission on Human Rights requested that the joint work plan reflect all aspects of the work under way, and identify existing obstacles/impediments and areas for further collaboration. In the conclusions on the human rights of women (Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/12, sect. III) prepared by the Commission on the Status of Women, the two offices were requested to continue to prepare the joint annual work plan and strengthen cooperation and coordination in human rights activities, in particular (a) by collaborating in the writing of reports for the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission on Human Rights; (b) through sharing information systematically on the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, its sessions and documentation, in order to ensure that its work will be better integrated into the work of the other treaty bodies and United Nations human rights activities; and (c) through capacity-building to implement agreed conclusions 1997/2 of the Economic and Social Council on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system, in particular training and gender sensitization especially of human rights monitors.

A. Assessment of the implementation of the current work plan

54. In the implementation of the current joint work plan (see E/CN.6/1998/2/Add.1, paras. 13–23), the systematic exchange of information between the Office of the High Commissioner and the Division for the Advancement of Women continued and was expanded in the course of 1998. The Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women addressed the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-fourth session. In the course of the year, the Special Adviser met several times with the High Commissioner, and also met with the newly appointed Deputy High Commissioner for Human Rights. She participated in a special discussion, chaired by the High Commissioner, of senior United Nations officials on the occasion of the consideration, by the Economic and Social Council in its coordination segment in July 1998, of the follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action. Staff of the Division participated in several meetings held at the United Nations Office at Geneva, including the ninth and tenth meetings of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies. Division staff provided inputs to and contributed to the servicing of the Human Rights Committee during its New York session in March/April 1998. The Division facilitated the participation of the Chairperson of the Commission on the Status of Women in a panel discussion on women's human rights at the fifty-fourth session of the Commission on Human Rights.

55. The High Commissioner for Human Rights addressed the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-second session. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women served on the panel on the critical area of concern "violence against women", held at that session. Staff of the Office of the High Commissioner participated in the 1998 session of the open-ended working group of the Commission on the Status of Women on the elaboration of an optional protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and in the forty-second session of the Commission on the Status of Women. The newly appointed Chief of the Programmes and Activities Branch of the Office of the High Commissioner met with Division staff during a mission to New York, and contributed to the workshop on a rights-based approach to the empowerment and advancement of women and gender equality.

56. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner jointly prepared a report on women's real enjoyment of their human rights, in particular those relating to the elimination of poverty, economic development and economic resources

(E/CN.4/1998/22–E/CN.6/1998/11), which was submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-second session and the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-fourth session. The Division contributed substantive input and participated in inter-agency activities (representing the Department of Economic and Social Affairs) for the five-year review of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action. The Division also provided routine contributions to a number of reports of the Office of the High Commissioner on an ad hoc or as requested basis. It also provided input to the work of the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial executions.

57. The Division continued to provide input into the joint project on the integration of a gender perspective into technical and advisory services of the Office of the High Commissioner and chaired the technical meeting to finalize the fourth phase of the project. Follow-up activities include the development, in July 1998, of detailed guidelines on gender and the human rights of women for use by Office staff and consultants in the preparation and execution of all seminars and training activities. The guidelines prepared are currently being field tested by the Office. Similar guidelines for evaluating technical cooperation projects will be developed in the first quarter of 1999. These guidelines will feed into ongoing efforts to improve the methodology of the technical cooperation programme, including the revision of training and support materials. The Division will remain involved in the follow-up to this project.

58. In response to a request of the meeting of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies, endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 52/118, the Division for the Advancement of Women prepared a study on the integration of a gender perspective in the work of the human rights treaty bodies, and submitted it to the tenth meeting of the chairpersons (HRI/MC/1998/6). The chairpersons strongly endorsed the report and emphasized the usefulness of such a comprehensive study to the work of the treaty bodies, in particular in assessing current practices and in identifying and focusing on areas of improvement for the future (A/53/432, para. 53).

59. In commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, a number of activities were implemented. Based on a decision of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, the Division for the Advancement of Women organized a workshop on a rights-based approach to the empowerment and advancement of women and gender equality for members of the Committee and of the OECD/DAC Working Party on Gender Equality. The workshop sought to review and clarify the rights-based approach to gender equality and its implications for policy and operations by bilateral and multilateral entities. It contributed to the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The workshop adopted a final communiqué summarizing the major conclusions and findings that emerged from the discussions and putting forward a number of specific recommendations. A report on the workshop was compiled and edited by the Division and widely distributed (further details on the workshop are contained in paras. 39–41 of the present report).

60. A second information kit for the anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights entitled “Women’s rights — the responsibility of all”, was produced by the Office of the High Commissioner, with a substantial contribution from the Division for the Advancement of Women. The feature article of the kit examines and analyses the role of the United Nations in promoting the human rights of women. It also contains information on the activities of the United Nations system relating to the rights of women that were carried out in 1998.

B. Joint work plan for 1999

61. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will continue the targeted approach of the 1998 work plan. Major emphasis will be placed on the areas indicated below.

62. During 1999, the cooperation between the Division and the Office of the High Commissioner on the work of treaty bodies will continue. Work will also continue on the electronic database covering all six treaty bodies with a view to eliminating technical difficulties and making the database fully operational and accessible for both offices. The Division will continue to update its Web site (www.un.org/womenwatch/daw) to make information related to the human rights of women and to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women easily accessible. It will continue to provide the Committee’s concluding comments and general recommendations to the Office of the High Commissioner so that they can be made available promptly to the treaty bodies. The Division will ensure that its biannual briefing notes on the Committee’s work will be supplied to the chairpersons of the human rights treaty bodies. The Office of the High Commissioner will provide the Division with the core documents of States parties and with the concluding comments and general recommendations of the treaty bodies for the information of Committee members. The Office will also continue to update its Web site (www.unhchr.ch) to make information on human rights, in particular the human rights of women, accessible. It will continue to provide information to the Commission on the Status of Women and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and will inform human rights mechanisms of activities relating to the human rights of women.

63. In follow-up to the positive reception by the tenth meeting of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies of the Division study on the integration of a gender perspective in the work of the treaty bodies, the study has been posted on the Division’s Web site, and will be widely distributed to the members of the treaty bodies, delegations and other interested actors. The Division will continue to monitor progress in the work of treaty bodies in integrating a gender perspective and provide gender-specific input into their work. In this regard, support will be provided in the elaboration of general comments, and in the revision of reporting guidelines to reflect gender concerns.

64. The Division will provide targeted input into the work of non-conventional human rights mechanisms. During 1999, particular emphasis will be placed on supporting the work of the Special Rapporteurs of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, and on education.

65. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will support and facilitate the improved cooperation between the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission on Human Rights, building on the first dialogue held in 1998 between the Chairperson of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission on Human Rights, and the participation of the High Commissioner, in 1998, in the Commission on the Status of Women, and of the Special Adviser, also in 1998, in the Commission on Human Rights.

66. The information exchange between the Division and the Office of the High Commissioner on planned and ongoing research and study projects will be improved. Cooperation will also be improved in the area of report preparation. With regard to the comprehensive report on violence against women migrant workers requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 52/97 for submission to it at its fifty-fourth session, in 1999, and the comprehensive report, also on violence against women migrant workers, requested by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 1998/17 for submission to it at its fifty-sixth session, in 2000, these reports will be prepared by the Division and the Office together. The Division will contribute, on an ad hoc basis and as appropriate, information for reports on general human rights issues and for reports on the human rights of women prepared by the Office of the High Commissioner. The Office of the High Commissioner will contribute, on an ad hoc basis and as appropriate, to the preparation by the Division of reports or studies on gender and women's rights issues. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will continue to cooperate in exchanging information on communications in connection with the communications procedure of the Commission on the Status of Women.

67. The issue of traffic in women and girls will receive particular attention in 1999. The High Commissioner has identified trafficking in women and children for purposes of sexual exploitation as a priority issue. The Office of the High Commissioner has set up a project aimed at raising awareness on the issue at the highest political level. Efforts will be made better to support implementation of relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission on Human Rights. Cooperation will be sought with the Centre for International Crime Prevention at the United Nations Office at Vienna to cover action to combat international trafficking in women and children. Both the Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will contribute to the study on the criminal aspects of trafficking in human beings, which is being prepared by the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute on behalf of the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention.

68. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will hold a workshop to follow up the expert group meeting on the development of guidelines for the integration of gender perspectives into United Nations human rights activities and programmes, which was held in 1995 (see E/CN.4/1996/105). The workshop, which had already been foreseen in the 1998 workplan, is tentatively scheduled to take place in April 1999. The workshop, for which extrabudgetary resources will be sought, will assess the impact of the first meeting and consider further strategies required to integrate a gender perspective into United Nations human rights activities. The study on the integration of a gender perspective in the work of the human rights treaty bodies (HRI/MC/1998/6) will serve as a background paper for the workshop.

69. In follow-up to the conclusions and recommendations emanating from the joint project on the integration of a gender perspective in technical and advisory services of the Office of the High Commissioner, that Office will organize a strategy meeting with outside experts to discuss the current situation with regard to gender and to elaborate a gender strategy for the Office. The Division for the Advancement of Women will contribute to the conceptualization and implementation of this strategy meeting. It is foreseen that it will be organized back-to-back with the gender integration workshop discussed in paragraph 68 above.

70. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will discuss opportunities for cooperation in the area of national machineries for the advancement of women and national human rights institutions, in particular in technical and advisory services aimed at the establishment and/or strengthening of national institutions. A technical meeting between staff of both the Division and the Office will review the current status of activities in the Division and the Office with regard to national institutions and develop a project proposal for joint activities in this field.

71. The Division and the Office of the High Commissioner will develop a training module/framework on the human rights of women and on gender mainstreaming in human rights activities and programmes. Such a training module/framework would be used in conjunction with any human rights-related training activity for United Nations staff and mission training for peacekeepers and human rights field monitors, and also serve as specialized training in human rights of women for human rights experts such as special rapporteurs. The training would be intended to cover both human rights of women and gender mainstreaming in human rights.

72. The Office of the High Commissioner will continue to seek the Division's comments on all training materials under production, with a view to ensuring adequate inclusion of issues related to the human rights of women and gender mainstreaming. The Division has so far provided input for the draft Training Manual on Human Rights Monitoring prepared by the Office of the High Commissioner, and on the joint Department of Peacekeeping Operations/Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights Module on Gender in Peacekeeping, which are currently being produced.

73. The Office of the High Commissioner, in organizing training courses on reporting under human rights treaties, as well as other ad hoc activities, will continue to invite the Division for the Advancement of Women to participate. The Office of the High Commissioner will contribute to the work of the open-ended working group on an optional protocol at its next session (March 1999) and to its follow-up. The Office will also continue to participate actively in selected meetings organized by the Division. The Division will contribute to, and participate in, selected meetings of human rights bodies, in particular the meeting of persons chairing treaty bodies, and meetings organized by the Office of the High Commissioner. Both the Division and the Office will contribute to the follow-up to the Rome workshop, in the framework of the ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality.

IV. Information supplied in accordance with specific mandates

A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system

74. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1998/10, requested a report on the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system. The present report covers the period from September 1997 to September 1998<sup>2</sup> and is based on information from United Nations bodies monitoring the situation of Palestinians in the occupied territories as well as in refugee camps. Such bodies include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967. Information on assistance to Palestinian women was requested from the United Nations system and replies from 15 entities have been included in the present report.<sup>3</sup>

1. Situation of Palestinian women

75. According to the 1997 Palestinian Population, Housing and Establishment Census,<sup>4</sup> women constitute 49.2 per cent of the total Palestinian population of 2,895,683. The census classifies 64 per cent of the labour force as being economically inactive and women, as housewives, constitute 43.7 per cent of the economically inactive. This means that women constitute 28 per cent of the total labour force which is engaged in unpaid work. This might explain why women constitute only 16.3 per cent of the total number of people engaged in the private sector. The census also shows that 20.1 per cent of women are illiterate, compared with 7.7 per cent of men, and that the fertility rate is 6.1 per cent.

76. In his report on economic and social conditions in the West Bank and Gaza, the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories (UNSCO) stated that in comparison with 1996, there was an overall improvement in economic performance in the West Bank and Gaza during 1997. This was due, in part, to the fact that 1997 had fewer closure days than 1996, which was reflected in enhanced labour and trade flow between the West Bank and Gaza and Israel. However, this relative improvement must be seen in the context of the continuation of the general, comprehensive and internal closure policies which have caused a decline in incomes in the past several years. Lost income as a result of closures has been estimated at about US$ 4 million per effective closure day, amounting to about US$ 228 million in 1997 which is about half the value of donor disbursements for the year.<sup>5</sup>

77. The daily life of women continues to be adversely affected by the Israeli occupation, particularly by the imposition of security-related measures such as closures, which have a detrimental impact on their socio-economic condition. As in the past, Palestinian women are experiencing the gender-specific impact of these measures, which is reinforced by existing inequalities in society between women and men. Frequent Israeli closures have been a major factor behind the 18 per cent drop in the gross national product (GNP) of the West Bank and Gaza and the 35 per cent drop in per capita GNP between 1992 and 1996. The gross domestic product (GDP) was estimated by the Palestinian Authority and the International Monetary Fund to have grown by 1.2 per cent in 1997, down from 5.5 per cent in 1996.<sup>6</sup>

78. This socio-economic situation is reflected in household expenditures. There was an overall real decline of 2.3 per cent in average household consumption expenditures between the first and fourth quarters of 1997.<sup>7</sup> Given existing gender inequality, resulting in women's weaker negotiating capacity, any cut in household expenditure tends to hurt women and girls disproportionately. Furthermore, women's average labour force participation rate declined from 13 per cent in 1996 to 12.3 per cent in 1997, which is a relative decline of 5.8 per cent for women compared with a relative decline of 1.5 per cent for men. Further, women's full employment rates and the total number of fully employed women also fell in 1997, while those for men rose considerably. Also in 1997, women's average unemployment rate increased from 20.6 to 21.4 per cent.<sup>8</sup>

79. In his report to the Commission on Human Rights, Mr. Hannu Halinen (Finland), the Special Rapporteur on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967, stated that the lack of income and inability to buy food during closures of the occupied territories have reportedly led many families to eat only one meal a day and to significantly reduce their intake of protein.<sup>9</sup> An increase in malnutrition has been registered among pregnant women and pre-school age children who are suffering from iron and iodine deficiencies.<sup>10</sup> The phenomenon of malnourishment among children in the Gaza Strip was also reported by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and other Arabs of the Occupied Territories.<sup>11</sup>

80. The Special Rapporteur also noted that approximately 3,500 Palestinian prisoners, seven of whom were women, were held in Israeli prisons and detention centres in violation of articles 49 and 76 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. This remains a persistent source of concern and tension in the occupied territories.<sup>12</sup>

81. In Gaza, the Special Rapporteur met with some former detainees and with the mothers and relatives of Palestinian prisoners. He was informed about the economic and social hardships suffered by the prisoners' families, particularly if the prisoners were the main breadwinners. The families also complained of the frequent transfer of prisoners in Israel, which made family visits difficult. Family visits to prisoners were also hindered by difficulties in obtaining security clearance by relatives and the humiliating searches they undergo merely to spend 45 minutes with the prisoners in groups of 10.<sup>13</sup>

82. The Special Rapporteur also mentioned the situation of former prisoners who have undergone torture while in detention. They suffer from psychological consequences, such as chronic post-traumatic stress and depression. Many, as a result, behave violently towards their wives and children.<sup>14</sup> The wives and children of workers who are unable to go to Israel or find employment locally also tend to be victims of domestic violence. This phenomenon of domestic violence, due to the above factors, was also reported by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories.<sup>15</sup>

83. In its report, the Special Committee noted reports on "arbitrariness" in obtaining travel permits to enter Israel. There are no written rules issued by the Israeli authorities that govern the granting to Palestinians of permits and authorizations to enter Israel. Moreover, travel by Palestinians is accompanied by humiliation, especially of women, at checkpoints and border crossings, physical violence and the likelihood of being stranded in another part of the occupied territories in case of closure.<sup>16</sup>

84. The Special Committee also reported that a newborn baby died on 26 August 1998 because of delays at an Israeli Army roadblock near Hebron, in the West Bank. The mother gave birth in her car after soldiers at an Israeli military checkpoint forced her to take a longer route to a Hebron hospital.<sup>17</sup>

2. United Nations assistance to Palestinian women

85. Information provided by the United Nations system shows continuing support for Palestinian women by the United Nations, as well as increasing efforts of gender mainstreaming by the programmes and funds. However, the information available is not fully differentiated in terms of the extent of support to the different groups of Palestinian women, namely, women in Palestinian self-rule areas, women in occupied areas, and women in refugee camps.

86. The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) continued its four-year, $7.2 million Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People which commenced in 1996. The programme focused on three areas of assistance: reproductive health including family planning, population and development strategies, and advocacy. As part of this programme in the West Bank town of Jenin, UNFPA trained a team of 20 female and 10 male educators, to reach out to rural women and men in order to inform them about reproductive health issues, distribute oral contraceptives among them and refer them to clinics to obtain services. This was part of a project serving some 18,000 married women and their husbands and helped to upgrade the capacity of 20 clinics to provide quality reproductive health services and counselling.

87. UNFPA is currently supporting the establishment of a multidisciplinary women's centre at the Jabalia refugee camp, which is due to become operational in December 1998. The centre will provide a comprehensive package of reproductive health information and services covering the life cycle of women, as well as social assistance, legal counselling and community education on various issues such as domestic violence and women's rights, including reproductive rights. A similar UNFPA-funded centre at the Al Burej refugee camp was visited by 13,000 clients during 1997.

88. The World Health Organization (WHO) is assisting with the consolidation of the Women's Health Development Department at the Ministry of Health of the Palestinian Authority as well as with the implementation of two reproductive health projects in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. These projects, funded by UNFPA, aim at reducing maternal mortality by 50 per cent, introducing family planning counselling and screening in 50 per cent of all health facilities, increasing the contraceptive prevalence rate to 25 per cent, and providing post-natal care to all women by the year 2000.

89. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) provided assistance to Palestinian women through the following three programme areas: advocacy and capacity-building; health and nutrition; and basic education. During 1997, the UNICEF office for Gaza and the West Bank conducted a Gender Audit of four projects with a view to assessing the extent to which UNICEF's global commitment to addressing gender concerns was reflected in local level project activities. Following the audit, two workshops were held to share the findings with 100 key policy makers and professionals in order to raise awareness of gender mainstreaming in programming. The report of the audit as well as the workshops was issued by UNICEF's Gender and Partnership Section.

90. The UNICEF Women's Health Project involves the development of policies and procedures on key women's health issues and upgrading of services and human resources at the Ministry of Health of the Palestinian Authority. During the period 1997/98, 60 health professionals at the Ministry of Health were trained in the management of sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS prevention, as well as in cervical cancer and breast cancer screening. During April 1998, a one-day campaign on Safe Motherhood, as part of the Safe Motherhood Day celebrations, was carried out involving all health providers in the West Bank and Gaza.

91. As part of the Basic Education programme, UNICEF is at present conducting operational research on early marriage and school drop-outs. The results will be discussed with top policy makers in the education sector. In addition, there is an ongoing project — the Better Parenting Initiative — on parenting skills, covering such issues as early marriage, gender equality and child labour. This project now targets both mothers and fathers through male and female social workers.

92. The United Nations Volunteers are implementing the Community-based Youth Participation and Development Project, which aims at promoting the human development of young people, in particular young women, to be full participants in and contributors to the development of the Palestinian society. So far 21 United Nations Volunteers (2 international and 19 national volunteers) have worked directly or indirectly towards improving the situation of Palestinian women as women's health specialists, community health workers, coordinators of community activity centres.

93. As part of the International Labour Organization's (ILO) International Programme for More and Better Jobs for Women, a draft Action Plan for the West Bank and Gaza Strip has been formulated on the basis of a series of consultations between ILO, representatives of various ministries of the Palestinian Authority and employers and workers organizations, as well as other social partners. The draft Action Plan will include the development of a gender-sensitive labour market information system, which will improve gender disaggregated data collection, analysis and dissemination.

94. The draft Action Plan includes vocational training of about 100 women in the tourist sector and of about 200 women engaged in the informal handicrafts sector in the Bethlehem district. In the Gaza Strip, the programme targets about 300 women in poor rural areas to ensure their remunerative and viable employment. This involves the organization of the women in local support facilities and networks, training and the setting up of a viable savings and credit scheme.

95. Other ILO activities include the promotion of the socio-economic status of Palestinian women and the promotion and development of Palestinian women's entrepreneurship. For example, a two-week course was organized at the ILO Training Centre in Turin for 14 Palestinian women representing non-governmental organizations and women's associations active in the promotion of human and women's rights during the period of 24 November to 5 December 1997. From 15 June to 3 July 1998 another training course was implemented at the centre for 13 women and men representing the Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions. At the end of the course, participants formulated a national strategy for the promotion of women workers' rights. In addition, two training activities on costing and pricing were implemented for 20 women entrepreneurs in the territories under the Palestinian Authority, from 25 August to 5 September 1998.

96. The International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO conducted a project on export development and the promotion of high-value floricultural products from the Gaza and West Bank, which included a survey on the role of Palestinian women in the floriculture industry. The survey, which was completed in June 1998, assessed the extent to which certain gender-specific factors determine how Palestinian women perceive and articulate their development needs and how they participate in contemporary development activities (particularly those related to the floriculture industry).

97. As part of its ongoing development assistance to the occupied Palestinian territories, the World Bank invited the Director of the Women's Affairs Technical Committee, which represents a number of Palestinian women's organizations in the occupied territories, to a Gender Training Workshop for Bank staff. The discussion revolved around how the Bank and women's organizations active on the ground can learn from each other and work together to promote the socio-economic, political and legal status of Palestinian women.

98. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in conjunction with the United Nations Development Programme, is implementing a project designed to give policy and institutional support to the recently established General Directorate for Policies, Planning and Development of the Ministry of Agriculture. This directorate has a newly established Gender in Development Unit. This unit will assist rural women through awareness campaigns and gender-oriented training.

99. As part of its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, UNDP supported the establishment of a Gender Statistics Unit within the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics. Training for staff within the unit and the Bureau itself focused on assisting staff in selecting gender-significant indicators, formulating gender-sensitive surveys and questionnaires and evaluating statistics for accuracy in reflecting the actual situation of women within society.

100. Furthermore, UNDP in conjunction with the Inter-Ministerial Committee of the Palestinian Authority, created a Rural Girls Development Centre. The Centre provides general education and comprehensive training in the areas of health and agriculture. During 1997, training was offered for 27 young rural women. A second phase of this project aims at creating a mechanism by which the Rural Girls Development Centre will be able to sustain itself, further develop the curriculum and initiate small projects for the graduates to create long-term income-generating activities.

101. In addition, UNDP has engaged a local Palestinian non-governmental organization to carry out a comprehensive study on the status of women in the occupied Palestinian territories in relation to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

102. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has supported the establishment of a Women and Group Rights Unit within the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights in Gaza to work with the local community in support of the development of a favourable women's rights policy environment. The Women and Group Rights Unit's legal aid programme has provided direct legal counselling to individuals and intervened on behalf of women in the Sharia courts in Gaza in cases of separation, divorce, child visitation and nafaqa (alimony). It has also provided legal advice to women prisoners and other women's organizations and their constituents. In addition, the Unit has produced a series of guides on such issues as marriage law, divorce and inheritance.

103. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner of Human Rights also supports non-governmental contributions to the legal reform process through a grant to a Gaza-based organization, Mashraqiyyat, to enable it to contribute to the development of an equitable Personal Status Law. The focus is on the discourse and interpretations that deal with Sharia-based concerns.

104. The United Nations Development Fund for Women implements its empowerment agenda for women through three programme areas: strengthening women's economic capacity, engendering governance and leadership, and promoting women's human rights. As part of the celebrations marking both the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the fifth anniversary of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, UNIFEM is launching a Global Campaign for the Eradication of Violence Against Women. For Palestinian women, this will involve a public march in the West Bank, film shows and plays, radio campaigns, high school lectures, and round-table discussions with the Palestinian Working Women's Centre, the Women's Studies Centre, the Women's Legal and Social Counselling Centre as well as the Women's Affairs Technical Committee.

105. As part of its activities to follow up the Fourth World Conference on Women, UNIFEM has assisted the Inter-Ministerial Committee of the Palestinian Authority and the General Union of Palestinian Women in preparing a national strategy for the advancement of women. UNIFEM is now assisting these two Palestinian entities in the implementation of the strategy.

106. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has invited Palestinian women to participate in the World Conference on Education. However, the UNESCO strategy is geared towards integrating Palestinian women's concerns in its assistance work, which includes granting scholarships through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA).

107. The Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, in conjunction with UNFPA, executed the first population and housing census project of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics and provided technical support during all the preparatory activities and the field operations. Data from the census will, as far as possible, be disaggregated by gender.

108. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia seeks to mainstream a gender perspective in its activities focused on supporting the economic and social situation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and to provide advisory services and technical assistance services. ESCWA organized an Expert Group meeting on the role of women's non-governmental organizations in the economy of the occupied territories in December 1997 at Bir Zeit University.

109. UNRWA continues to provide assistance to Palestinian refugees in keeping with its mandate. That assistance includes the programme areas of education, health, relief and social services, income generation, peace implementation, and the Lebanon Appeal (which targets the refugees in Lebanon who are hardest hit). Women refugees are direct or indirect beneficiaries of these programmes. For example, in the education programme, which accounted for 50 per cent of the total budget of UNRWA in 1998, women accounted for 62 per cent of all trainees enrolled in technical/semi-professional courses in 1997/98. Of the 1,055 scholarships granted during 1997/98 by UNRWA to refugee students, 46 per cent went to women students. UNRWA, as part of its income-generation programme, granted loans valued at $2.7 million to 3,296 women who supported some 16,310 dependants. Those women were organized into 525 solidarity groups, which were part of the solidarity group lending programme, serving as a guarantee mechanism. This programme has a repayment rate of 98 per cent.

3. Conclusions

110. The Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action confirmed the human rights of women and of the girl child to be an inalienable, integral and indivisible part of universal human rights. Furthermore it obligates Governments and the international community to seek and ensure the full and equal participation of women in all spheres of life, as well as the eradication of all forms of discrimination on the basis of sex. The eradication of discrimination against women is fully elaborated in the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which 163 Member States have ratified. The principle of equality is inherent in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The principles enshrined in these documents are relevant to Palestinian women and intensified work is needed to fully implement them.

111. The Palestinian Authority and civil society, with the assistance of the international community, have taken considerable steps to advance the situation of Palestinian women. However, further efforts and assistance are needed, particularly within the context of mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes as mandated by the Economic and Social Council in its agreed conclusions 1997/2. A sound information basis is essential for gender mainstreaming, therefore the efforts of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics to acquire and disseminate gender-disaggregated statistics wherever possible should be augmented by efforts on the part of United Nations bodies to keep gender disaggregated data on their operations. This will aid the reporting process considerably and enhance the effectiveness of support to Palestinian women.

112. A significant proportion of Palestinian women are refugees with acute basic needs. Yet there is insufficient information on their status and the kind of assistance they are receiving. The efforts of UNRWA, in keeping with its mandate in this area, are commendable, but they are also constrained by the debilitating financial crisis which the agency is facing. As reflected in previous reports, the status and situation of Palestinian women are inextricably linked to developments on the peace front. Progress in the peace process should be translated in tangible benefits for the people of the occupied territories and the refugee camps.

B. Release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned

113. The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-second session, adopted resolution 42/2 on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts, including those subsequently imprisoned. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to prepare, taking into account the information provided by Member States and relevant international organizations, a report on the implementation of resolution 42/2 for submission to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-third session. A note verbale was sent to all Member States on 29 September 1998. As of 7 December 1998, the Secretariat had received five replies.

114. The Governments of Barbados and El Salvador reported that the situation described in Commission resolution 42/2 did not exist in their respective countries. The Government of Colombia confirmed its commitment to the resolution. However, it indicated that in the ongoing civil war, the armed groups opposed to the Government routinely detained civilians, including women, as part of their struggle. On 15 July 1998, one of the armed groups, the Army of National Liberation, signed an agreement with the National Committee for Peace and members of civil society, committing itself to stopping the practice of detaining civilians.

115. The Government of Croatia reported that the Governmental Commission for Imprisoned and Missing Persons has been conducting a search for 367 women who constitute 20.12 per cent of the total population of missing persons and persons forcibly taken away in the area of the Republic of Croatia during the war of 1991–1995.

116. The Government of Lebanon reported that three Lebanese women have been arrested by Israeli Intelligence and are currently in detention. One of the women is being held in Nablus prison in the occupied Palestinian territories. She has reportedly been tortured and suffers from severe head pains. The Government of Lebanon also reported that there are eight child prisoners in Israeli detention.

117. The Secretariat also requested information from relevant entities of the United Nations system. As of 7 December 1998, it had received five replies. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations provided information from three of its field missions. The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon indicated that, in accordance with publicly available reports, there were three women prisoners in the Khiam prison. The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) has been dealing with the issue. The United Nations Observer Mission in Sierra Leone reported that the rebels hold several thousands of civilian captives, women, men and children, who were used as porters, human shields and for forced sexual activity. The United Nations Liaison Office in Belgrade reported that, according to ICRC, nine women and four children under the age of 18 were missing in Kosovo. However it is not clear whether they were prisoners, abductees or just missing. ICRC was still seeking clarification of their fate. Furthermore, an estimated 521 Serbian women and 12 children have been missing since the 1991–1995 war in Croatia. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations stated, however, that the accuracy of these estimates could not be ascertained.

118. In their replies, the Department of Public Information and three regional commissions (ESCWA, ESCAP and ECA) did not provide any specific information on women and children taken hostage.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> Report of the Secretary-General on the situation in Afghanistan and its implications for international peace and security (A/53/455–S/1998/913); interim report on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan, prepared by Mr. Choong-Hyun Paik, Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights (A/53/539); and report of the Secretary-General on emergency assistance for peace, normalcy and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, Afghanistan (A/53/346).

<sup>2</sup> That is, the period since the preparation of the previous report (E/CN.6/1998/2/Add.2).

<sup>3</sup> The 15 entities that replied are: the World Health Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Development Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women, the World Bank, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the International Labour Organization, the United Nations Volunteers programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat.

<sup>4</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, the Demographic Survey in the West Bank and Gaza Strip: Final Report (August, 1997).

<sup>5</sup> UNSCO, "Report on economic and social conditions in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip" (Spring, 1998), p. ii.

<sup>6</sup> Note by the Secretary-General on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan (A/53/163–E/1998/79), para. 43.

<sup>7</sup> UNSCO, "Report on the economic and social conditions in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip" (Spring, 1998), p. 29.

<sup>8</sup> Ibid., p. 23.

<sup>9</sup> Report on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, submitted by Mr. Hannu Halinen, Special Rapporteur pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2 A (E/CN.4/1998/17), para. 37.

<sup>10</sup> Ibid., para. 35.

<sup>11</sup> Note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (A/53/661), para. 128.

<sup>12</sup> Report on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 ..., para. 21.

<sup>13</sup> Ibid., para. 30.

<sup>14</sup> Ibid., para. 27.

<sup>15</sup> Note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report to the Special Committee ..., para. 108.

<sup>16</sup> Ibid., paras. 70 and 83.

<sup>17</sup> Ibid., para. 90.

Economic and Social CouncilDistr.: General
31 December 1999

Original: English

Commission on the Status of Women*Forty-fourth session

28 February-17 March 2000

Item 3 of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women*Follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action*Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The General Assembly, in its resolution 53/120 of 9 December 1998, requested the Secretary-General to report annually to it, through the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council, on follow-up to and progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Similar mandates were also contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69 and 52/100. The present report emphasizes efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective and follow-up activities, including activities undertaken by non-governmental organizations, since the submission of the previous report of the Secretary-General on the subject (E/CN.6/1999/2 and Add.1). It contains a response to resolution 43/2 of the Commission on the Status of Women on women, the girl child and human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome.

The present report has one addendum, which contains a joint work plan for the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

---

* E/CN.6/2000/1.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	1–6	3
II. Progress in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system. . . . .	7–41	3
A. General Assembly and Economic and Social Council . . . . .	8–18	3
B. Activities in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system. . . . .	19–28	6
C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality . . . . .	29–33	8
D. Update on national action plans . . . . .	34	9
E. Reported activities of non-governmental organizations and other institutions of civil society . . . . .	35–41	9
III. Information supplied in accordance with specific mandates . . . . .	42–128	10
A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations in the United Nations system. . . . .	42–83	10
B. Release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned . . . . .	84–92	15
C. Women, the girl child and human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome . . . . .	93–128	16

I. Introduction

1. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1996/6, on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, established the work programme of the Commission on the Status of Women, in particular the items to be included on the agenda of the Commission. As regards documentation for the sessions of the Commission, the Council decided, inter alia, that under item 3 (a) of the Commission's agenda, a review by the Secretary-General of mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system should be prepared on an annual basis.

2. In its resolution 53/120 of 9 December 1998, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report annually to it, the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Similar mandates were contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69, and 52/100.

3. In each of the three reports submitted in the course of a year, the information that is most pertinent to the respective intergovernmental body is provided. The report to the Commission on the Status of Women emphasizes efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective and follow-up activities undertaken by non-governmental organizations. The report to the Economic and Social Council focuses on facilitating the coordination function of the Council. The report to the General Assembly contains information from all entities of the United Nations system, including specialized agencies and international financial institutions, and an analysis of activities undertaken at the national level and by non-governmental organizations and civil society.

4. Section II of the present report has been prepared in compliance with General Assembly resolution 53/120. Section III responds to resolution 1999/15 of the Economic and Social Council on Palestinian women and to resolution 43/1 of the Commission on the Status of Women on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflict and imprisoned.

5. Section IV responds to resolution 43/2 of the Commission on the Status of Women on women, the girl child and human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome.

6. In addition, the present report includes an addendum, section V (E/CN.6/2000/2/Add.1), which responds to the request made by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 1999/41 and by the Commission on the Status of Women in its resolution 39/5 that a joint work plan be made available to the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-fifth session and to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fourth session.

II. Progress in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system

7. At its forty-fourth session, the Commission on the Status of Women will continue to conduct its assessment of progress achieved at different levels since the adoption of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action<sup>1</sup> and in gender mainstreaming. In particular, it will undertake a comprehensive review and appraisal of the implementation of the Platform for Action and preparations for the special session of the General Assembly to be held from 5 to 9 June 2000. An assessment of activities of the United Nations system in follow-up to the Platform for Action in accordance with the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women for the period 1996-2001 is contained in E/CN.6/2000/3. The present report complements those reports.

A. General Assembly and Economic and Social Council

1. Fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly

8. The report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/54/264) focused on follow-up activities undertaken by entities of the United Nations system, including human and financial means of implementation. The General Assembly adopted a resolution on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (resolution 54/141 of 17 December 1999).

9. The Assembly also adopted a resolution on preparations for the special session, which had been recommended for adoption by the Commission on the Status of Women acting as preparatory committee for the special session at its second session in March 1999, through the Economic and Social Council (resolution 54/142). In that resolution, the Assembly took decisions on the format and agenda of the special session and on the documentation to be submitted to the preparatory committee at its third session in 2000. The preparatory committee will have before it a comprehensive report containing a review and appraisal of the implementation of the Platform for Action (E/CN.6/2000/PC/2), addressing achievements as well as obstacles encountered in the implementation of the 12 critical areas of concern. Emerging trends and issues and further actions and initiatives are highlighted in another report (E/CN.6/2000/PC/4). Discussions with relevant actors of civil society on the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action have continued, as called for by the Assembly, and the results of the on-line working groups on the areas of concern will also be available to the preparatory committee (E/CN.6/2000/PC/CRP.1).

10. Encouraged by the General Assembly, the regional commissions have carried out, or are planning to hold, regional preparatory events that will provide input into the preparations for the special session. The results of the regional meetings will be available to the preparatory committee. Within given time constraints for finalization of documentation, the results are also taken into account in documentation prepared by the Division for the Advancement of Women.

11. In the same resolution, the General Assembly encouraged all entities of the United Nations system to be involved in preparatory activities and to participate at the highest level in the special session. An assessment of activities undertaken by the United Nations system in support of implementation of the Platform is contained in a report that is before the Commission on the Status of Women (E/CN.6/2000/3). United Nations-system participation in preparatory activities is currently a focus of inter-agency cooperation and coordination. The Chairperson of the Inter-agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality has encouraged the active involvement of all United Nations entities in that process. This could include support for preparations at the national level, such as awareness-raising, support for activities of national machineries and of non-governmental organizations, and the provision of feedback to the Secretariat on emerging trends and issues; provision of substantive input to the global preparatory process, such as studies or reports on particular issues falling within an entity's area of responsibility; and/or the organization of side events, such as panels, workshops and film-screenings, during the preparatory sessions and at the special session. Emphasis is also placed on ensuring that heads of agencies give due attention to, and personally participate in, the special session.

12. The Assembly decided that non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and non-governmental organizations that were accredited to the Fourth World Conference on Women may participate in the special session without creating a precedent for future sessions of the Assembly. It decided to defer consideration of all the modalities for participation of non-governmental organizations in the special session until the next session of the preparatory committee. The preparatory committee is thus invited to consider this matter at its third session in March 2000.

13. In accordance with the same resolution, the Bureau of the preparatory committee convened a series of open-ended informal consultations to consider preparations for the special session. It submitted a draft of a political declaration, to be adopted by the special session, for consideration by States, and convened several informal meetings to discuss the draft. It also held informal consultations on a possible second document that might result from the special session. Based on these informal consultations, agreement was reached on the structure of a second outcome document. The Chairperson of the Bureau of the preparatory committee was entrusted with the preparation of a draft for consideration by delegations, in consultation with the Secretariat and the Bureau, and taking into account suggestions made by delegations during the consultations. Informal consultations on the modalities of participation of non-governmental organizations in the special session also took place in November and December.

14. The Assembly, at the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council, adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession, the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (resolution 54/4). The Assembly thus fulfilled one of the commitments made by Governments at the World Conference on Human Rights (1993) and the Fourth World Conference on Women (1995). The Optional Protocol was opened for signature in a ceremony on 10 December 1999, Human Rights Day, and 23 States signed that day (Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Czech Republic, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Senegal, Slovenia, and Sweden). The Optional Protocol will enter into force three months after the tenth instrument of ratification has been deposited with the Secretary-General. The Optional Protocol and its significance for women were the theme of a panel discussion to mark Human Rights Day at United Nations Headquarters. The Secretary-General made an opening statement. Ms. Aída González Martínez, Chairperson of CEDAW, Ms. Aloisia Wörgetter, Chairperson of the working group of the Commission on the Status of Women that drafted the optional protocol, Mr. Bacre Waly Ndiaye, Director of the New York Office of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Honourable Sujata Manohar, retired judge of the Supreme Court of India, and Ms. Fauzija Kassindja, of Equality Now, served on the panel, which was moderated by the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women. The Special Adviser and the High Commissioner for Human Rights issued a joint statement on the Optional Protocol and its significance for women worldwide.

2. Economic and Social Council, substantive session of 2000

15. Action taken by intergovernmental bodies in 1999, in particular the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, has been reported to the Council (E/1999/54). The Commission's attention is drawn to the decision of the Commission on Human Rights to appoint a Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants, requesting the Special Rapporteur to take into account a gender perspective when requesting and analysing information and to give special attention to the occurrence of multiple discrimination and violence against migrant women. The Special Rapporteur has met with the Division for the Advancement of Women to discuss the work done by the Division with regard to violence against migrant women workers, to exchange relevant information, and to discuss opportunities for cooperation. At its most recent session, the General Assembly adopted resolution 54/138 on this issue. (See also the report of the Secretary-General in document A/54/342.)

16. Information on the outcome of the Council's high-level segment of 1999 on the theme "The role of work and employment in poverty eradication: the advancement and empowerment of women" was provided to the Assembly (A/54/264).

17. The Council decided that the theme of its coordination segment in the year 2000 would be "Assessment of the progress made within the United Nations system, through the conference reviews, in the promotion of an integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major United Nations Conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields" (Council decision 1999/281). The Council's review of progress made in conference follow-up provides an opportunity to assess, and provide further guidance also on cross-cutting issues, especially on gender mainstreaming. In this regard, it will be recalled that the Council's agreed conclusions 1997/2 on gender mainstreaming have been instrumental in promoting progress in gender mainstreaming at the intergovernmental level, including the Council's functional commissions, and throughout the United Nations system with regard to normative and policy work, as well as in operational activities. The coordination segment of 2000 also provides an opportunity for an in-depth assessment of the follow-up given to gender-specific recommendations of other global conferences. This assessment should enable the Council to provide further guidance on how to achieve an optimal balance in intergovernmental and UN system work between women-specific activities in the framework of follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and other conferences and summits, and the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into all policies and programmes, independent of their specificity with regard to women. The Commission's attention is drawn to a note by the Secretariat on the Commission's follow-up to the Council's resolutions and decisions (E/CN.6/2000/5).

18. In accordance with the Beijing Platform for Action and resolutions of the General Assembly, the Council has considered follow-up to the Platform for Action at each of its three main segments. Since the adoption of the Platform for Action, a fourth main segment, on humanitarian affairs, has been added to the Council's agenda. At its substantive session in 1999, in its agreed conclusions on the segment, the Council stressed the need to integrate a gender perspective into the planning and implementation of activities concerning humanitarian emergencies. The Inter-Agency Standing Committee has adopted a policy statement on the integration of a gender perspective into humanitarian assistance. The Commission may wish to consider recommending to the Council that the gender dimensions in humanitarian affairs should be addressed at one of the future segments.

B. Activities in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective into the work of the United Nations system

19. The Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women has continued to work with senior officials in departments and offices of the United Nations and in the entities of the United Nations system to increase attention to gender issues in all sectoral areas, especially through improved use of the gender mainstreaming strategy. The capacity of the Special Adviser in this regard has been strengthened by the recruitment of a Principal Officer on Gender Mainstreaming in her office in September 1999, funded through extrabudgetary contributions, to work in a catalytic and advisory manner to support the implementation of mainstreaming in entities of the United Nations system. The Special Adviser has also given particular attention to preparations for the special session of the General Assembly, including regional preparations. A summary of such activities is given below.

20. In a follow-up to General Assembly resolution 52/100 and to Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 on gender mainstreaming, in which all bodies that deal with programme and budgetary matters are requested to ensure that all programmes, medium-term plans and programme budgets visibly mainstream a gender perspective, the Committee on Programme and Coordination expressed the view that the Secretariat should make every effort to address the issue of gender sensitivity in the budgetary process.<sup>2</sup> In response to these mandates, the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001 discusses the implications of gender mainstreaming as one of the factors underlying the budget proposals.<sup>3</sup> In response to the budget preparation instructions for the proposed programme budget, specific attention has been paid by a number of departments to gender mainstreaming. The document notes that although the concept may not be directly identified at the aggregate level of outputs and activities in the budget document, it will continue to be addressed at the policy and programme development stage, as well as during implementation, monitoring and evaluation of the outcome of the Organization's programmes and activities, in order to determine the extent to which the concerns and needs of the beneficiaries of the Organization's work – women as well as men – are adequately met. Such information would provide useful feedback for the preparation of future programme budgets and the determination of resource allocation.

21. Further insights into possible modalities, and benefits, of gender mainstreaming in budgets in the United Nations system are expected to be gained also from one of the ongoing projects of the ACC Inter-agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality. Phase I, an inventory of work on institutional budgets outside the United Nations system, started in December 1999. Phase II will look at the United Nations system itself, identifying what has been done and the potential that exists for reflecting gender equality in budgets. An interim report is expected to be ready at the time of the forty-fourth session of the Commission on the Status of Women and will be presented in a workshop. Phase III will look in depth at a selected number of United Nations entities, making proposals for further steps.

22. In conjunction with her participation in the high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council on the role of work and employment in poverty eradication: the advancement and empowerment of women, in July 1999 in Geneva, the Special Adviser met with the heads of the World Health Organization, the International Labour Organization and the International Trade Centre, with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as well as with officials of the Economic Commission for Europe, UNHCR, the International Telecommunication Union, and the World Intellectual Property Organization. The meetings allowed for exchanges of information on preparations under way in the agencies for the special session, on progress and specific steps taken to increase gender mainstreaming, and on issues of achieving the goals of gender balance and a gender-sensitive work environment. The Special Adviser invited agencies to make specific contributions to the preparations, in the form, for example, of studies on particular issues or on how the operational activities of the agencies benefit women and contribute to the achievement of gender equality at the national level. During a meeting with senior women staff at Geneva, issues with regard to the achievement of the Organization's gender balance goals and other work-related matters were discussed.

23. The Special Adviser and the Division for the Advancement of Women continue to support the Department of Peacekeeping Operations/Lessons Learned Unit in the implementation of the project on mainstreaming a gender perspective in multidimensional peacekeeping operations.<sup>4</sup> After the launching of the project in June 1999, a consultant will join the Lessons Learned Unit in January 2000 to prepare a systematic gender analysis of selected peacekeeping operations. It is expected that the findings will be available in time for the special session.

24. The Special Adviser remains actively involved in the work of the Afghanistan Support Group and continues to support the work of the Gender Adviser to the United Nations system in Afghanistan. Information and reports prepared by the Gender Adviser on the current situation and its implications for United Nations system activities in that country are regularly shared with the Inter-agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality. The Special Adviser has also endeavoured to ensure that the Gender Adviser participates in the meetings of the Afghanistan Support Group.

25. The Special Adviser continues to support preparations for the special session. She participated in two regional preparatory meetings – namely, the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) sixth African Regional Conference on Women (22-27 November 1999, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia) and the Arab Conference on Integrated Follow-up to Global Conferences, held by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) (29 November to 1 December, Beirut, Lebanon). A representative of the Office of the Special Adviser participated in the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) high-level meeting to review the implementation of the Jakarta Declaration and Platform for Action (26-29 October 1999, Bangkok, Thailand).

26. Participation in these regional meetings provided the opportunity for many informal meetings and discussions of the Special Adviser with governmental representatives to assess the status of national and regional preparations and to identify regional challenges, emerging issues and trends, and strategies for further action. During these missions, the Special Adviser also met with senior officials of regional commissions and held informal inter-agency meetings with gender focal points and field-based United Nations system representatives. It became apparent during these meetings that further efforts are needed to strengthen the flow of information between New York-based and field-based offices, including national machinery for the advancement of women, on the status of the global preparations for the special session. The Director of the Division for the Advancement of Women will participate in the remaining two regional preparatory meetings of ECE and of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC).

27. The Special Adviser attended FAO's High-level Consultation on Rural Women and Information, on behalf of the Secretary-General. The event was attended by over 360 participants from 118 countries, together with representatives from the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations. The Consultation reviewed a draft strategy for action on rural women as a follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and the World Food Summit (1996). The Special Adviser moderated a panel on methodologies and approaches to bringing information to rural areas, both through traditional forms of communication and through new technologies. During the meeting, the Special Adviser had opportunities to discuss follow-up to Beijing and preparations for the special session with ministers from a number of countries. She also participated in the UNESCO-sponsored Pan-African Women's Conference for a Culture of Peace and Non-violence, held in Zanzibar, United Republic of Tanzania, from 17 to 20 May 1999.

28. The Special Adviser opened and chaired the first day of the Judicial Colloquium on the Application of International Human Rights Law at the Domestic Level. The Colloquium, which was organized by the Division for the Advancement of Women, in close consultation with UNICEF, to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, took place from 27 to 29 October at the United Nations Office in Vienna. During the three-day event, almost 100 judges and magistrates from 65 countries discussed opportunities for wider and more routine use at the national level of the international human rights law contained in the two Conventions as a way to advance the rights of women and children, particularly girls. In plenary and working group sessions, participants focused on three themes: nationality, and marriage and family relations; violence against women; and women's and girls' work-related rights. At the end of the three-day session, participants adopted a communiqué. A comprehensive report containing keynote presentations and working group papers will be issued by the Division in time for the special session.

C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality

29. Following the fourth session of the ACC Inter-agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality (23-26 February 1999), inter-sessional work on a number of topics was conducted by the Committee's task managers. The Committee's fifth session will take place from 23 to 25 February 2000. A series of informal meetings were held in New York during the year. Based on a recommendation of the Inter-Agency Committee at its fourth session, in February 1999, the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) adopted a statement as input to the preparatory process. The statement will be made available to the preparatory committee. The results of several of the Committee's ongoing activities will also be provided as input to the preparatory process. The Special Adviser, in her capacity as Chairperson of the Inter-Agency Committee, will provide an oral report to the Commission/preparatory committee on the inputs.

30. In response to a decision of the Committee, the Division for the Advancement of Women, as the Committee's task manager, organized a workshop on women's empowerment in the context of human security. The workshop, which took place from 7 to 8 December 1999 in Bangkok, was hosted by ESCAP. The meeting brought together participants from a broad range of entities of the United Nations system and from the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development/Development Assistance Committee (OECD/DAC) Working Party on Gender Equality. Building on two previous workshops (on gender mainstreaming in 1997, and on a rights-based approach to gender equality in 1998) and in the context of the special session of the General Assembly in June 2000, the discussions focused on concrete actions to promote the interlinked issues of women's empowerment, gender equality, and human security.

31. The workshop adopted a communiqué summarizing its major findings. It noted that missing in discussions on human security has been an understanding of the fundamental differences and inequalities between women's security and men's security. The workshop identified five specific and interrelated issues that need to be incorporated into the discussion of human security – namely, violence against women and girls; gender inequalities in control over resources; gender inequalities in power and decision-making; women's human rights; and women (and men) as actors, not victims. Noting gaps in gender awareness of both policy and practice, the workshop proposed a number of recommendations for action to promote women's empowerment in the context of human security. At the policy level, they are:

(a) Incorporate gender-sensitive legislation and adherence to CEDAW in policy discussions and actions;

(b) Build on experience in facilitating policy dialogue that benefits from the interaction of non-governmental organizations and other actors in civil society with Governments to promote women's leadership;

(c) Establish effective accountability mechanisms for gender equality through more consistent documentation and dissemination of experiences and collection of data, disaggregated by sex, to influence policy formulation and operational activities;

(d) Recognize the leadership and innovative role that women are taking in conflict resolution and peace-building and support and incorporate those efforts in conflict prevention and post-conflict reconstruction.

32. At the level of practice, they are:

(a) Create an enabling environment that supports women's empowerment and provides resources to organizations, including non-governmental organizations, that are actively involved in this process;

(b) Facilitate capacity development and improve legal literacy to ensure more effective use of the CEDAW mechanism and its Optional Protocol;

(c) Ensure women's participation and full gender mainstreaming in mandates and missions related to peace promotion and post-conflict reconstruction;

(d) Ensure that all reporting to intergovernmental bodies on peace-building, peacekeeping and reconstruction gives consistent attention to gender equality;

(e) Work to create a common database of materials relevant to gender equality and human security, including lessons learned, good practice, guidelines, terms of reference, training materials, research results, and codes of conduct.

33. A report on the proceedings of the workshop is being compiled by the Division for the Advancement of Women.

D. Update on national action plans

34. In the course of 1999, 11 Member States (Belgium, Burundi, Cape Verde, Eritrea, Greece, Malawi, Namibia, Netherlands, Qatar, Republic of Moldova, Yemen) and one observer (Switzerland) submitted their national action plans to the Division for the Advancement of Women. A total of 116 plans by Member States, two by observers and five by regional and subregional groups had been received as of 1 December 1999. The national action plans constituted the basis for the review and appraisal of the Beijing Platform for Action. Many Member States built their replies to the questionnaire on a review and appraisal of the national action plan.

E. Reported activities of non-governmental organizations and other institutions of civil society

35. Since the issuance of the latest report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women (A/54/264), a number of events have occurred at the international, regional and national levels under the auspices of non-governmental organizations. Several initiatives have also been taken by non-governmental organizations worldwide as part of their preparations for the forthcoming special session of the General Assembly. While these activities were not reported systematically to the Secretariat, some of them have been brought to the attention of the Division for the Advancement of Women.

36. Various non-governmental organizations have been preparing their own reports on the progress of implementation as their contribution to the special session. Soroptomists International sent a questionnaire to its members worldwide to gather information. The International Confederation of Free Trade Union (ICFTU) Equality Committee will compile information collected from women trade unionists. Zonta International also sent out a survey questionnaire to its clubs to gather information about progress for women in each Zonta country and to establish the skills necessary for effective advocacy through the process of obtaining the information, and plans to feed the findings of the survey into its preparation for the special session. The NGO Working Groups on Girls (New York and Geneva) are in the process of completing an alternative report to that of Governments, evaluating recent progress for girls, to be presented to Governments and non-governmental organizations at the special session. The purpose of the report is to document the gaps between commitments and action, obstacles, and successful efforts by Governments and civil society organizations.

37. Non-governmental organizations have been active in compiling and disseminating information in order effectively to participate in the review process as well as at the special session. A scorecard/checklist for monitoring implementation of critical areas of concern on women and the media has been completed by Global WENT 99 as a possible template for other critical areas of concern of the Beijing Platform for Action. It will be disseminated to media networks, non-governmental organizations and other civil society organizations worldwide. The International Women's Tribune Centre has published three issues in a series entitled Preview 2000 that cover plans and preparations for the five-year review of the Platform for Action. Isis International-Manila has prepared the primer on the review process which contains basic information on activities, schedules, contact organizations and individuals involved in the preparations and the actual conduct of the special session. The primer is designed to inform and encourage the involvement of women's groups and organizations in the Asia and the Pacific region in assessing an international policy document that seeks to advance and promote women's empowerment and development.

38. Supported and sponsored by WomenWatch, WomenAction 2000 held a five-day workshop from 27 September to 2 October 1999 in Seoul, Republic of Korea, to train regional information facilitators and regional web site construction and maintenance people to develop a global web site that would serve as a central site for the collection, sharing and linking of information on the review process. The global web site was launched on 26 November 1999 (<http://www.womenaction2000.org>).

39. The community of non-governmental organizations has decided to hold an NGO working session from 3 to 4 June 2000, prior to the special session. The Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations in Consultative Relationship with the United Nations (CONGO) facilitated the first meeting of the international planning committee on 11 August 1999. The second meeting was held on 23 November 1999, facilitated by the Centre for Women's Global Leadership.

40. As part of their campaign for the special session, Equality Now issued Women's Action, to cite discriminatory laws that remain in force despite repeated legal affirmations of the commitment to equality that are often incorporated into national constitutions as well as international law. Flora Tristan, in cooperation with UNICEF and UNIFEM, has published case studies, entitled "Roads to Beijing", which reflect on the Beijing process in Latin America and the Caribbean. Network Women in Development Europe held a conference in Eede, the Netherlands, from 28 to 30 May 1999, jointly with Society for International Development and Vrouwenberaad Ontwikkelingssamenwerking, to discuss how non-governmental organizations could effectively follow up on the United Nations global conferences. The report of the conference was published in October 1999, entitled "Linking up – Cairo, Copenhagen, Beijing +5 reviews towards the 21st century".

41. The National Council for Research on Women, in collaboration with the Division for the Advancement of Women and UNDP, held its 1999 annual conference from 9 to 11 December 1999, focusing on the visions and values of women's and girls' leadership and the five-year review of implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action. A one-day conference to review accomplishments since the Fourth World Conference on Women was held in Chicago on 6 December 1999. Entitled "Women's rights are human rights: exploring the local global linkages", the conference was sponsored and organized by a number of non-governmental organizations and women's groups working in the region.

III. Information supplied in accordance with specific mandates

A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations in the United Nations system

42. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1999/15, requested a report on the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system. The paragraphs below cover the period from September 1998 to September 1999 and are based on information from United Nations bodies monitoring the situation of Palestinians in the occupied territories as well as in refugee camps. Such bodies include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories (UNSCO) and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission for Human Rights on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967. Information on assistance to Palestinian women was requested from the United Nations system, and replies from six entities have been included in the present report.

1. Situation of Palestinian women

43. In his report on economic and social conditions in the West Bank and Gaza, the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories stated that the overall economic performance in the West Bank and Gaza had improved since 1997. The positive economic growth rate had led to an increase in employment and higher household incomes in the occupied territories. Women's unemployment rate in 1998 declined by 21.3 per cent, to 16.9 per cent; for men it fell to 15.5 per cent. The overall proportion of women active in the labour force declined in 1998, falling to 11.7 per cent from 12.3 per cent in 1997.<sup>5</sup> In 1998, over 92 per cent of all new job opportunities in the West Bank and Gaza were filled by men. This could be due to the fact that most of the jobs were in Israeli-controlled Areas<sup>6</sup> and in the construction sector where women's participation is negligible for both cultural and structural reasons. Labour-force surveys continue to show that women's wages have remained consistently below those of men and that wages in the economic sectors where women were disproportionately represented are below-average.<sup>7</sup>

44. An increase in household income in 1998 was due to a real increase in average wages. In 1998, wages could cover an average of 70.5 per cent of basic household needs and 52.2 per cent of total household expenditures, compared to 63.79 per cent and 46.4 per cent, respectively, in 1997. However, with the exception of a 4.5-per-cent increase in education expenditures, due perhaps to the increased enrolments in more expensive private schools, there was an overall decline of 2.1 per cent in real household expenditures in 1998.<sup>7</sup> It seems that uncertainty about the future continues to constrain consumer confidence, resulting in higher levels of forgone consumption. Also, household income that fails to cover all households needs has negative gender-related impacts, such as increasing the burden of unpaid work on women.

45. There were considerably fewer comprehensive and internal closure days imposed by the Israeli authorities on the West Bank and Gaza during 1998 — a loss of 5.2 per cent of total potential work days, as compared to a 20.5 per cent loss in 1997 — greatly enhancing income and productivity.<sup>7</sup> However, the severity of the closure policies continues to manifest itself in both the social and economic spheres.

46. The Special Rapporteur on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967, Mr. Hannu Halinen (Finland) noted in his report to the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-fifth session, on 20 January 1999, that the number of Palestinian prisoners being detained in Israeli prisons and detention centres has gone down to 2,200, of whom seven were women. The issue of Palestinian prisoners who remained in detention, in violation of articles 49 and 76 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, was a cause of concern and tension in the occupied territories.<sup>8</sup> In Gaza, the Special Rapporteur met with former detainees and prisoners and was informed that their wives and children had experienced economic difficulties because the prisoners were often the sole breadwinners of their families. Family visits had been few, owing to both frequent transfer of prisoners in Israel and the difficulty of obtaining a permit to enter Israel.<sup>9</sup>

47. According to the report of the Special Rapporteur, some former prisoners suffered from psychological traumas which affected their families.<sup>10</sup> He suggested that the disturbing phenomenon of domestic violence in the occupied territories could partly be a consequence of psychological trauma experienced by former prisoners.

48. The Special Rapporteur reported that there had been fewer deaths at checkpoints as a result of ambulances being delayed by permit checks. Two deaths were reported in 1998. One was that of a mother who did not have a permit to enter Israel who died after childbirth while waiting at the checkpoint in Hebron. The Rapporteur noted that the Israeli army admitted that that was a mistake and brought the soldiers before a military court.<sup>11</sup>

49. According to the Special Rapporteur, the expansion of existing Israeli settlements and the building of new ones, as well as the construction of bypass roads, continued to be a source of great concern in the occupied territories and to have an effect on the socio-economic life of Palestinians. For example, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported that on 23 November a Palestinian woman from Hebron was found dead near the settlement of El-Azar, south of Bethlehem. Palestinian police accused settlers of her murder.<sup>12</sup> The Special Committee also reported an incident in which a Palestinian woman was attacked by settlers while re-entering her neighbourhood which had been under closure.<sup>13</sup>

50. The Special Committee reported that five Palestinian girls were injured in an incident which took place on 26 November 1998, involving Palestinian teachers and schoolgirls, Israeli policemen and some female settlers from Bet-Hadassa. The head teacher stated that female settlers began shouting at them as they walked by the Jewish settlement. The confrontation then escalated into a major scuffle. Israeli police were called in and reported that the students were asked to end their protest and go back to school. After refusing, a few were detained.<sup>14</sup>

51. It was also reported by the Special Committee that a violent confrontation occurred between angry Palestinian stone throwers and Israeli soldiers on 28 December 1998, following the eviction of two families at Kifl Harith.<sup>15</sup> During the confrontation seven Palestinians and two soldiers were injured, and 20 women refused to evacuate one family's house. They were forced out by tear gas fired into the house.

2. Follow-up activities to the Fourth World Conference on Women

52. Palestine responded to the Secretariat's questionnaire on the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action.

53. Following the adoption of the Platform for Action and in light of regional, Arab and national Palestinian instruments approved in the preparatory stages of the Conference and the outcome of the Arab ministerial conference held in Amman in September 1996, work was carried out at official and grass-roots levels to formulate a national strategy for Palestinian women, taking into account Palestinian resources and the priority needs of Palestinian women. As a result of these efforts, a national strategy for Palestinian women was formulated and announced at a conference held in June 1997.

54. Organizational mechanisms have been created to fulfil this goal. At the governmental level, a coordination framework (the Interministerial Coordination Committee) was formed of representatives from the women's affairs departments in ministries and State institutions with a view to promoting the national status of Palestinian women. The Committee pursues its work in accordance with the Beijing Platform and the needs and priorities of Palestinian women with a view to translating those into various activities and programmes.

55. The response of the Palestinian National Authority to the questionnaire provided comprehensive information on the situation of women. Based on the priorities of Palestinian women, activities were undertaken in accordance with the Platform with particular emphasis on the eight priority areas.

56. According to the report, traditions notwithstanding, the gender concept is now accepted in Palestinian society and the stereotypical image of women has begun to change. More education and employment are now available for women, and their capacity to work and participate in production and to use modern technologies will grow, thus strengthening their role and their equality with men in the fundamental areas of concern discussed in Beijing.

3. Assistance to Palestinian women

57. Information provided by the United Nations system shows that gender concerns are being increasingly integrated into the continuing assistance of organizations of the United Nations system to Palestinian women. This assistance ranges across various areas such as education, income-generation activities, capacity-building and institution-building. However, no information was provided in the critical area of reproductive health.

58. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) supported the establishment of a Women's Human Rights Unit in a local non-governmental organization which focuses on legal research and education to improve the status of women in Palestinian society and the provision of legal aid to both individual women and women's groups. The Office is also assisting legislators and civil society organizations in a review of personal status legislation. In addition, it is participating in the United Nations Gender Task Force, which has recently been focusing its efforts on the organization of a campaign on the prevention of violence against women.

59. During the period under review, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) carried out the following activities in support of the Palestinian National Authority:

(a) Provision of technical assistance and advisory services to the National Committee for Palestinian Women for Follow-up to Beijing in preparation of the Palestinian national report on implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action;

(b) Preparation of a research paper on gender and citizenship and the role of non-governmental organizations in the West Bank and Gaza Strip before and after the peace accords.

60. Since 1994, the World Food Programme (WFP) has been concentrating its activities in Gaza and the West Bank on poverty alleviation and social relief, aimed at reaching the most severely affected populations.

61. In May 1998, the WFP office began a two-year project which supports the social safety net programme of the Ministry of Social Affairs, addressing the urgent food security needs of poor households. About 16,000 very poor households in Gaza and 12,000 in the West Bank are benefiting from WFP food assistance. Of those, over 65 per cent are headed by women.

62. This strategy is based on the WFP commitments to women's advancement (1996-2001) following the Beijing Conference, which are aimed at reducing gender inequalities. In addition to the social safety net schemes, WFP has been providing food for the following gender-related activities in 1998-1999: training of 23 women in social work; literacy programmes for 754 women in Gaza; training in kitchen gardening and water recycling for 150 women; training in health care for 85 women; food-for-work for 50 women from low-income households.

63. In addition, to combat the conservative values limiting opportunities for Palestinian women, the WFP office is organizing gender-awareness sessions with WFP staff, governmental counterparts, and non-governmental organization implementing partners.

64. A recent assessment of activities (April 1999) noted that particular efforts had been made to involve women in all project activities at the decision-making level and as active beneficiaries.

65. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) provides essential education, health and relief and social services to some 3.6 million registered Palestine refugees in the Agency's area of operations, comprising Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Assistance to Palestinian women was delivered within the context of the Agency's regular programmes for Palestinian refugees.

66. In the 1998/99 scholastic year, 458,716 pupils were enrolled in Agency preparatory, elementary, and secondary schools, of whom 228,935, or 49.9 per cent, were female. Women accounted for 62 per cent of trainees in UNRWA's technical/semi-professional courses. Of the 866 continuing UNRWA scholarships in 1998/99, 46 per cent were held by women.

67. UNRWA provided expanded maternal and child health care and family planning services to Palestine refugees as an integral part of its primary health care services, in recognition of the fact that the burden of child and reproductive ill-health falls overwhelmingly on women in terms of complications in pregnancy and childbirth, infant and maternal mortality, congenital malformations and disability. With women of reproductive age and children comprising two thirds of the 3.6 million registered Palestinian refugees, that investment in maternal and child health was key for socio-economic development.

68. Difficult socio-economic conditions in refugee communities during the reporting period continued to create greater reliance on income earned by women. More than 50 per cent of UNRWA's special hardship case families, who received direct food and material assistance from the Agency, were headed by women. UNRWA's women-in-development programme provided a wide range of social, cultural, and educational services at the community level. Seventy women's programme centres served as focal points within the refugee community for UNRWA's work with women. During the period from June 1998 to July 1999, a total of 20,534 participants benefited from various programme centre activities such as lectures on health and civil society, legal assistance, childcare, computer and language skills training, and physical fitness courses. The programme centres continued to work towards administrative and financial self-sustainability.

69. During 1998/99, UNRWA's Income Generation Programme granted loans valued at $1.67 million to 2,612 women who supported 13,060 dependants. Since 1994 the programme has provided loans worth $8.18 million to 11,736 women organized in 1,773 solidarity groups. These women were granted loans at the end of each successful repayment cycle. The programme was self-sufficient, with all operational costs and loan loss provision covered from revenues generated by lending and banking activities. The programme maintained an annual repayment rate of 99.64 per cent.

70. During the reporting period, a total of 1,526 women benefited from the UNRWA Poverty

Alleviation Programme, which provided small amounts of credit for income-generation projects.

71. In 1996 the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) initiated a project to support women's departments within various ministries to promote gender equality. The project aimed to enhance the capacity of the ministries to mainstream gender and development and to create gender-sensitive policies, strategies and programmes. The project was completed in 1998.

72. The sharing of information, coordination of planning and exchange of experience within the framework of the project have improved the capacity of the women's departments to impart a gender perspective into all ministries of the Palestinian National Authority. Due to UNDP's capacity-building, organizational strengthening and institutional development efforts, different ministries were subsequently able to create, formulate and begin to implement their own projects to meet the needs of their target groups.

73. In order to strengthen the newly established women's department at the Ministry for Culture, UNDP, in 1998, funded a women's creative writing and illustrative arts competition. Almost 200 women participated in the competition, and the winners were honoured in an official ceremony. The five winning pieces in each category will be published in 1999 in the form of booklets.

74. In 1999, in an attempt to move away from the welfare system currently utilized by the Ministry of Social Affairs towards a more development-oriented approach, UNDP, in cooperation with the women's department in the Ministry, initiated a poverty alleviation project within the Ministry to support deprived families and groups, through income-generating projects and the creation of new job opportunities, with a special focus on women-headed households. Phase I of the project will entail the creation of a poverty alleviation centre. During phase II, the centre will study project proposals from the target groups based on pre-established criteria which will enable the individuals or groups to work their way out of poverty.

75. During 1997-1998 UNDP, in cooperation with the Inter-ministerial Committee for the Advancement of Women, initiated and succeeded in establishing a one-year pilot project, the Rural Girls Development Project, in Silt El-Dhaheer, Jenin. In 1999, the Project was implemented in three centres in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

76. On the non-governmental level, UNDP supports the formulation of a gap analysis report on the status of women in the occupied territories within the framework of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). This initiative is being implemented in cooperation with the Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling and involves a training symposium for mid-level and upper-level decision makers from non-governmental as well as governmental organizations to disseminate information on CEDAW and create working groups that will be following economic rights, education and training, family rights, health rights, political participation and representation, and the eradication of violence against women. The gap analysis report is expected to be published in March 2000.

77. In an attempt to promote a gender sensitive educational system, UNDP in 1997 developed a project to assist four educational non-governmental organizations in elaborating gender-sensitive curricula addressing the special needs of boys and girls. Teachers have been trained to develop modules that incorporate gender concerns into the learning process. During these training sessions a training manual on gender issues was prepared. Distributed to schools, it is to be used as an aid in the practical application of a gender perspective in the classrooms. The project covered public, private and UNRWA schools and included a community awareness campaign with a variety of reach-out activities such as a weekly radio programmes for youth addressing gender issues. It was successfully completed at the end of 1998.

78. UNDP participates actively in the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Task Force, which aims to move towards joint Women in Development/Gender and Development (WID/GAD) programming among United Nations agencies and to advocate for and support Palestinian partner institutions to mainstream gender into their policy-making process. In November 1999, within the framework of the Women's Rights Campaign, UNDP funded three TV spots on violence against women and a study day "Poverty and violence".

79. UNIFEM has established the second phase of its post-Beijing follow-up project with the following objectives: to support and strengthen permanent institutional women's machinery; to ensure the integration of gender concerns into the national planning process; and to consolidate the women's machinery network on the national, regional and international levels. The project which was initiated in October 1998 endeavours to focus on the three main thematic areas. In each project country, critical areas of concern have been identified as national priorities. For the Palestinian territories, they are: legislation, policies, economics, social dimension, education, health, environment, media and women under occupation.

80. UNIFEM has also initiated a Women in Development Facilitation Project which aims to strengthen the capacity of governmental and non-governmental organizations to follow up on the Platform of Action by documenting WID/GAD programmes and projects that are being undertaken in the Palestinian territories by various international and national governmental and non-governmental organizations. The compiled information will be widely disseminated to facilitate information exchange on WID/GAD issues among donors, United Nations agencies, and the Palestinian Authority, in addition to local and international civil society organizations, in order to ensure complementation of initiatives and prevent duplication.

4. Concluding remarks

81. In spite of considerable efforts on the part of the Palestinian Authority and civil society and by the organizations of the United Nations system to improve the economic and social conditions of Palestinian women, their situation still requires special attention. They still experience unequal access to the labour market and to income-generating activities. They are also victims of de facto occupational segregation accompanied by lower wages in the employment sectors in which they are concentrated.

82. As reflected in previous reports, the status and living conditions of Palestinian women are closely linked with the progress of the peace process. The present report shows that women in the occupied territories continue to be affected in an adverse manner by a variety of measures, such as closures and settlement activities.

83. The mainstreaming of a gender perspective into nation-building programmes and the full and equal participation of Palestinian women are critical to the sustainable outcome of the peace. With those objectives in mind, organizations of the United Nations system will continue to assist Palestinian women to increase their capabilities to participate fully and equally in the peace process and to build and develop Palestinian society.

B. Release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned

84. The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-third session, adopted resolution 43/1 on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts, including those subsequently imprisoned. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to prepare, taking into account the information provided by Member States and relevant international organizations, a report on the implementation of resolution 43/1 for submission to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fourth session. In pursuit of that mandate, the Secretary-General sent a note verbale to all Member States on 17 September 1999. As of 20 November 1999, the Secretariat had received 12 replies, six from Governments and six from the United Nations system.

85. The Governments of Antigua and Barbuda, Brunei Darussalam and the United Republic of Tanzania reported that the issue described in resolution 43/1 was not relevant to them since they were not involved in any armed conflicts.

86. The Government of Thailand reported that, although the issue of women and children taken hostage was not relevant to its context, Thailand had been providing shelter, education and health services to refugees, displaced persons and asylum seekers from the armed conflict in neighbouring countries, most of whom were women and children.

87. The Governments of Australia and Norway reported that they sought to follow-up on the resolution through their involvement in international activities related to humanitarian issues, preventive action, peacekeeping and peace-building.

88. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations provided information from three of its field missions. The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) reported that four women and three boys under 18 years old and 11 other boys who were under 18 years old at the time of their arrest continued to be imprisoned in El Khiam prison, operated by the South Lebanese Army. In a signed affidavit submitted to the High Court of Justice on 27 September 1999 in response to a petition on behalf of four of the El Khiam prisoners, Major General Dan Halutz, Head of Israeli Army Operations, admitted that its General Security Service (Shin Bet) instructed and paid the interrogators and jailers at El Khiam prison. The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) is the only organization that has access to El Khiam prison, but it has yet to make a statement regarding the conditions in the prison.

89. The United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) reported that the terms of resolution 43/1, specifically the reference to hostage-taking, did not appear to have direct application to cases in the Western Sahara. However, the parties to the conflict, the Government of Morocco and the Frente Polisario, have each charged that the other is holding women and/or children hostage.

90. The United Nations Mission in Sierra Leone (UNAMSIL) reported that the war in Sierra Leone had been characterized by widespread abduction of civilians, including women and children, by the forces opposed to the State. In the period prior to the adoption of the Lomé Peace Accord in July 1999, thousands of civilians were abducted. Estimates of the number of people in captivity at that time ranged from 12,000 to 20,000. According to UNAMSIL, one indicator of the scale of the problem was that some 3,000 children were abducted from just one location, Freetown, the capital city, during a rebel incursion in January 1999. UNAMSIL also reported that up to 30 per cent of the estimated 15,000 rebel combatants were children, most of whom had initially been abducted. Abductees had been used as porters, human shields and for forced sexual activity.

91. The Lomé Peace Accord stipulates that all abductees should be released immediately. Within its framework, a committee was established to facilitate the release programme. The committee is chaired by the UNAMSIL Chief Military Observer and includes United Nations human rights officers, representatives of non-governmental organizations, United Nations agencies, representatives of the parties to the Peace Accord, and, as an observer, ICRC. UNAMSIL reported that by September 1999, there had been a disappointing number of less than 500 people released formally. It also reported that a considerable number of captives had been released quietly and had slipped back to their homes. However, a large number of abductees remained in captivity, and the United Nations, through the committee, had recognized the need for sustained and effective advocacy and intervention on the matter. UNAMSIL also reported that released abductees frequently displayed signs of significant physical ill treatment. Almost all released females reported rape and other forms of sexual abuse. Many women, when released, were found to be pregnant. In close cooperation with relevant non-governmental organizations, programmes are being put in place to assist these persons. Upon release, all children benefit from care and family-tracing resources made available under the guidance of UNICEF.

92. In their replies, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, the World Food Programme and three regional commissions (ECA, ECLAC, and ESCWA) did not provide any specific information on women and children taken hostage.

C. Women, the girl child and human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome

93. In its resolution 43/2, "Women, the girl child and human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome", the Commission on the Status of Women noted the growing proportion of women becoming infected with HIV in every region, especially in sub-Saharan Africa and among the younger age groups. The Commission asked Governments, relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, individually and collectively, to make every effort to place combating HIV/AIDS as a priority on the development agenda and to implement effective prevention strategies and programmes. It called upon the international community to intensify its support of national efforts against HIV/AIDS, particularly in favour of women and young girls, in the worst hit regions of Africa and invited the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fourth session. The Commission urged Governments, with the assistance of relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, to adopt a long-term, timely, coherent and integrated AIDS prevention policy, with public information and education programmes specifically tailored to the needs of women and girls within their socio-cultural contexts and sensitivities and specific needs in their life cycle.

94. The present report complements information contained in other reports before the Commission.<sup>16</sup> In its section on health the report on the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action, based on replies by Governments, highlights the fact that many countries have taken action on HIV/AIDS. It also highlights specific activities of the international community in line with the resolution. Information on women and HIV/AIDS was requested from the United Nations system, and replies from the nine entities who had responded as of 15 December 1999 have been included in the present report.

1. Women and HIV/AIDS

Trends in HIV/AIDS infection of women

95. HIV/AIDS infection rates among women have been rising steadily, with new information suggesting that there are significantly more women than men living with HIV infection in sub-Saharan Africa. Studies conducted in nine different African countries suggest that between 12 and 13 women are infected for every 10 men. It is estimated that 12.2 million women and 10.1 million men aged 15-49 were living with HIV in sub-Saharan Africa at the end of 1999. Women tend to be infected at a younger age than men for biological and cultural reasons. Girls in Africa aged 15-19 years are five or six times more likely to be HIV positive than boys of the same age. The strongest increase worldwide in infection rates have occurred in the newly independent States of the former Soviet Union. As the prevalence of sexually transmitted infections had also increased considerably, the risk of further spread of HIV infection among the larger population and, in particular, among women was very high.<sup>17</sup>

96. Physiological differences in the genital tract contribute to the higher risk for women of acquiring HIV infection and sexually transmitted diseases. Gender norms limit women's ability to determine their level of risk due to ignorance about sex and sexuality, lower status in society and relationships and economic and social dependency on male partners. Gender is a decisive factor for people living with HIV/AIDS, since the burden of care generally falls on female members of the household. The stigma of living with HIV/AIDS is more painful for women than men, and the women affected are often victims of violence and discrimination. Mother-to-child transmission of HIV during pregnancy, childbirth or breastfeeding is of particular concern. Nine out of 10 of all HIV-infected babies were born in Africa as a consequence of high fertility rates combined with high infection rates.

Mainstreaming a gender perspective

97. The urgent need for a more coherent and intensified United Nations-system response to the pandemic was the rationale for the creation of the Joint and Co-sponsored United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) in 1996 by its co-sponsoring organizations, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), UNDP, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the World Health Organization (WHO) and the World Bank. The Programme had increasingly addressed the gender dimension of the pandemic. Gender-based differences were taken into account in risks and vulnerability-reduction approaches. UNAIDS was cooperating with women's networks that undertake advocacy, prevention and offer care and support to women affected by HIV/AIDS. To focus more specifically on gender issues, the UNAIDS Inter-Agency Working Group on Gender and AIDS was established in 1996. It brought together technical experts on gender to act as a policy advisory body on issues relating to gender and HIV/AIDS. Its role encompassed joint planning of substantive programmes that address gender concerns in HIV and development and finding ways in which gender can be incorporated into all the United Nations programmes and departments dealing with HIV/AIDS.

98. All of the United Nations entities have provided support to national efforts against HIV/AIDS, with a focus on gender issues, including advocacy efforts and policy advice to include the issue on the national and international agenda. At the regional level, the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) addressed HIV/AIDS in the programme of the 1999 Conference of Ministers of Finance and Ministers of Planning and Economic Development and at the meeting of the Committee on Women and Development. It was noted that the sense of urgency in addressing the HIV/AIDS issue seemed to vary from one African subregion to another.

99. HIV/AIDS was a key issue during the preparatory process leading up to the special session of the General Assembly for the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development (1999). A number of priority areas for further action were adopted relating to the prevention and treatment of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV/AIDS.

100. The World Bank has highlighted the need for top-level political commitment in terms of protection of women's rights, an expansion of health and educational facilities that are both physically accessible and socially acceptable to women, and a wide range of other multisectoral reforms that would bring about a sustained reduction in the risk of HIV transmission to women. In close collaboration with other international organizations, the World Bank has helped to place issues relating to HIV/AIDS and women on the agenda in a variety of international forums. The Bank's Economic Development Institute (EDI) and UNAIDS jointly conducted nine policy seminars for policy makers from 28 African and Asian countries, focusing on potential intervention strategies in specific vulnerable sectors.

101. United Nations entities are aware that action at the national level was crucial and that all means for reaching out to various groups should be employed. At the country level, HIV/AIDS prevention activities have been coordinated by the UNAIDS theme groups on HIV/AIDS. The United Nations system currently has 132 theme groups in over 150 countries, and partnerships are being expanded. Many groups include representatives from host country Governments, non-governmental and bilateral organizations and associations of people living with HIV/AIDS. This has increased understanding of factors influencing risk and vulnerability and of effective ways to address them.

102. The United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), in close collaboration with UNFPA and UNAIDS, supported a pilot initiative entitled "Gender-focused responses to address the challenges of HIV/AIDS". Orientation workshops on gender concerns in HIV and development were organized for UNIFEM and its partners in six pilot countries. In the Bahamas, India, Mexico, Senegal, Viet Nam, and Zimbabwe, partnerships between organizations working on gender and organizations working on HIV have been formed. Activities have included community-based data collection on the gender impact of the epidemic; capacity-building of media personnel in gender, HIV and human rights concerns; documentation of the abuses of human rights of people living with HIV/AIDS; and the development of resource materials on how to empower women to negotiate safe sex. A set of training materials has been developed which facilitates effective advocacy of gender and AIDS concerns. Causes and consequences of the epidemic are explored from a gender perspective which has enabled policy makers and planners to allocate and plan resources for the prevention of the epidemic in a gender-responsive manner.

103. With UNESCO's assistance, a comprehensive and Africa-wide project entitled "Guidance, counselling and youth development for Africa" was set up to train trainers and youth workers in guidance and counselling techniques to meet the needs of young people, particularly girls, as they enter adolescence. UNESCO/UNAIDS organized a regional workshop on preventive education against HIV/AIDS for grass-roots women's organizations in Africa (Abidjan, 1998). UNESCO stated that only a small percentage of the organizations working in the area asserted that they took gender into account in the preparation and dissemination of educational messages. To raise their level of risk awareness, men needed to be encouraged to show greater respect and protection towards women.

104. The International Labour Organization (ILO) launched its Preventive AIDS programme in Africa, in collaboration with UNAIDS, and intends to incorporate more AIDS awareness in private-sector initiatives. ILO uses existing international instruments like Convention 156, which emphasizes family responsibilities for promoting gender concerns in HIV/AIDS issues, especially those relating to male responsibility. It has undertaken studies on the commercial sex sector and child labour, since those groups are particularly exposed to the vulnerabilities that promote the spread of the HIV virus and have to cope with its effects.

2. Specific issues of concern

Promotion of female-controlled methods of prevention and vaccine development

105. The male condom represents the primary prevention technology available to protect against HIV infection during sexual intercourse. Increasing demands to find alternative prevention methods for women have led to the development of the female condom and research on vaginal microbicides that offer women more control for the protection of their reproductive and sexual health. The introduction of combination and anti-retroviral treatment has become a standard of care in developed countries and is the most effective treatment available for suppressing the replication of HIV. It has produced ethical challenges in both developed and developing countries, where the vast majority of the world's infected people live without access to new treatments. The development of vaccines that are inexpensive and easy to administer remains a priority for developing countries.

106. UNFPA and UNAIDS have been cooperating on condom distribution requirements through the Global Initiative on Global Health Commodities. WHO and UNAIDS have been working to ensure that methods capable of providing dual protection (against pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases) were given high priority. An informal consultation, "Launching and promoting the female condom in Eastern and Southern Africa" was organized in April 1999 in Pretoria, South Africa. Participants recommended possible ways forward for the effective, extensive and timely introduction and promotion of female condoms. Reducing the price of female condoms by re-using them was seen as a potentially important strategy; the impact on the safety and efficacy of the method was being investigated. WHO has been working with UNAIDS in assisting countries to make female condoms available in the most appropriate and inexpensive way, working with social marketing organizations, the manufacturer and governmental and non-governmental organizations. Involving and targeting men was seen as crucial in order for the product to be useful and acceptable, as social marketing experiences in Zambia and Zimbabwe showed. The two agencies have been developing a planning and programming guide for the female condom, which would be available early in 2000. UNAIDS and WHO were also involved in promoting the development of a microbicide, which could be an empowering tool, reducing women's social susceptibilities to the epidemic. The results have not been very encouraging, since pharmaceutical companies have not assisted in making the drug available to large parts of the developing countries.

107. The World Bank has been implementing a number of projects to increase the prevalence of modern methods of contraception and to slow the spread of HIV infection by both promoting behavioural and social change and increasing the facilities designed to treat sexually transmitted diseases among women and men in Burkina Faso, Chad and Kenya. Programme activities are designed to encourage women to recognize and seek treatment for sexually transmitted diseases.

Mother-to-child transmission and care of children orphaned by AIDS

108. Mother-to-child transmission (MTCT) of HIV during pregnancy, childbirth or breastfeeding is of particular concern. Nine out of 10 of all HIV-infected babies in Africa are born as a consequence of high infection rates. Mother-to-child transmission of HIV is eroding improvements in child survival in several of the most affected countries in Africa south of the Sahara. The care of and support for children orphaned by AIDS has increasingly come to the centre of attention and was the topic of the International World AIDS Day, 1999.

109. The immediate challenge is to reduce the transmission of HIV from mother to child, while at the same time reducing the overall number of infected women of reproductive age. HIV is acquired by the infant from the mother around the time of birth or through breastfeeding. Interventions such as anti-retroviral drugs, caesarian sections and alternative feeding options can significantly reduce the rate of transmission. Where the financial resources and technical infrastructure exist and where HIV testing can determine a pregnant woman's seropositive status, these interventions have brought mother-to-child transmission of HIV under reasonable levels of control. The use of different short-course anti-retroviral regimens given during labour and for one week postpartum have been demonstrated to reduce significantly mother-to-child transmission.

110. The mother-to-child transmission (MTCT) Inter-Agency Task Team, a joint UNICEF/WHO/UNAIDS/UNFPA initiative on prevention of mother-to-child transmission of HIV/AIDS, was established in 1998. Projects were being carried out on a pilot basis in nine countries (Botswana, Burkina Faso, Côte d'Ivoire, Kenya, Rwanda, United Republic of Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia, Zimbabwe). Measures for an integrated approach to significantly reduce mother-to-child transmission would include increased access to voluntary counselling and HIV testing, greater knowledge of men and women about their seropositive status, strong reinforcement of prevention messages by allowing people to act on the basis of their test results, expansion and strengthening of family planning information and services, early access to quality antenatal care with trained health and social workers, voluntary counselling, and HIV testing for women and their partners. Furthermore, it would include provision of anti-retroviral medication to prevent HIV transmission from seropositive women to their babies, improved care during labour, delivery and the postpartum period, counselling for HIV positive women on infant feeding choices, making replacement feeding available when needed and supporting women in their choice of feeding. The opportunity for promoting behavioural change through services related to pregnancy and delivery, the only entry point for service provision for many women in developing countries, should not be lost.

111. Specific activities on orphans has been carried out by several United Nations entities. FAO produced a report on rural children living in farm systems affected by HIV/AIDS. Farm households and extended families readily take in orphan children, but assistance provided by households and communities collapses when the increase in demand and numbers becomes unmanageable. UNICEF undertook various activities to care for orphans and provide skills that would help them avoid being legally or sexually exploited. The current decline in official development assistance (ODA) is threatening assistance to the children victims of the HIV/AIDS epidemic. At the International Day for the Eradication of Poverty, 15 October 1999, UNESCO launched an appeal to individuals, the business sector, non-governmental organizations, foundations, agencies and others to contribute to the welfare of children orphaned by AIDS so that they could receive food and shelter, good health care and education.

Violence against women affecting the health of women and girls

112. Steps have been taken to change harmful traditions and practices affecting the health of women and girls and to eliminate all forms of violence against women, which was identified as one of the root causes of HIV infection (A/54/341). Gender-based violence threatens sexual and reproductive health and greatly increases women's and girls' vulnerability to HIV/AIDS. The interplay between victimization and HIV infection is becoming increasingly evident and needs to be addressed through programmes that provide women with access to resources, capacity-building and empowerment and health services, in particular in the area of reproductive and sexual health care.

113. WHO is supporting a multicountry study on the prevalence, risk and protective factors and health consequences of violence against women. The study, currently under way in Bangladesh, Brazil, Namibia, Peru, the Philippines, United Republic of Tanzania and Thailand, is collecting data with a core protocol and using research teams that include at least one organization working with women experiencing violence. The results of the study, to be available in 2001, will provide comparative data for the first time on which to base intervention and prevention strategies.

114. The World Food Programme (WFP) has cooperated with organizations that provide women and girls with a safety net when they are vulnerable to risk of violence and HIV/AIDS infection. WFP has provided food to two institutions in Cambodia which rescue girls at risk of HIV/AIDS and offers skills and empowerment training so that they can have a source of income other than prostitution. UNESCO reported that funding had been approved to launch a two-year inter-agency project (UNDP, UNESCO, UNICEF, UNIFEM, UNFPA and WHO) on the eradication of female genital mutilation in Kenya.

Sexual and reproductive health education for young people, particularly girls

115. Given the high infection rate among young women, particularly among girls, special efforts were made by the United Nations entities to improve prevention and raise awareness. The overall objective was to provide women and girls with the required awareness and skills to tackle HIV and reduce the current rate of HIV transmission and sexually transmitted diseases.

116. UNESCO developed a programme for preventive education and communication which had been especially designed for societies in which men traditionally have the dominant role and women have little control over their own sexual behaviour and reproductive capacities. A series of regional seminars were organized for decision makers from the education sector. Specialists and teachers in China and Thailand participated in a regional workshop on the prevention of HIV/AIDS and drug abuse by improving the quality of curricula and teachers, organized by UNESCO and UNDCP (Beijing, 1997). UNESCO/UNAIDS held a regional workshop on preventive education against HIV/AIDS for grass-roots women's organizations in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, for 17 countries in sub-Saharan Africa. UNAIDS has been funding the UNESCO project on HIV/AIDS preventive education and health education for adolescents, particularly girls at high risk, in Chile.

117. The UNAIDS interregional project on the integration of sexually transmitted diseases and HIV prevention activities into reproductive health programmes at the primary health-care level comprises activities such as HIV/AIDS prevention training and gender-sensitive counselling skills for health information and service providers, including medical doctors, midwives, nurses, community health workers, psychologists, social workers, peer educators, counsellors and other groups that serve as multiplier agents for dissemination of information regarding HIV/AIDS prevention.

118. UNICEF is carrying out a project on integrating gender awareness into adolescent sexual health programmes, implemented by the Commonwealth Secretariat. The project has two phases: the development of an outline and a review with young people; and the pretesting of the educational materials and preparation of a guidebook.

119. Although it had no mandate to intervene directly on HIV/AIDS, the World Food Programme (WFP) has taken an active role in empowering women and educating girls so that they will be more aware of their rights and better informed about the dangers of HIV/AIDS. Activities include a vulnerable group development programme in Bangladesh and a pilot programme of take-home rations for girls in primary school in Benin, where enrolment increased — in one case by 280 per cent — after WFP gave food as an incentive to girls.

Support for women living with HIV/AIDS

120. Women and girls living with HIV/AIDS are often stigmatized and victims of violence and discrimination. The Commission on the Status of Women urged the creation of an environment that promotes compassion and support for those infected with HIV and the provision of a legal framework that would protect the rights of people living with HIV/AIDS. Various forms of support have been provided. The ECA African Centre for Women offers economic activities empowering women so that they can cope with the causes and consequences of the epidemic.

121. WHO and UNAIDS supported a project to explore the impact of HIV/AIDS on HIV-positive women's reproductive health and rights, focusing on women's experiences of the health service. Coordinated by the International Community of Women Living with HIV/AIDS (ICW), the participatory research project, carried out by HIV-positive women who are also the subject of the study, was being conducted in Thailand and Zimbabwe over 18 months. The results will be available in 2001. The project hopes to provide policy recommendations on measures to be taken to protect HIV-positive women from gender discrimination and to promote improvements in programmes and policies.

3. Conclusions

Good practices

122. The United Nations entities recognize that, for expanding the quality and scope of engendered HIV/AIDS strategies and interventions and thus for programme replicability, it is crucial to identify, promote and apply "best practices" in reducing both the risk and vulnerability of women and girls. One "best practice" is the innovative pilot project co-sponsored by UNIFEM, UNAIDS, and UNFPA on gender-focused responses to address the challenges of HIV/AIDS. The project was launched to address the challenge of HIV/AIDS in six countries (Bahamas, India, Mexico, Senegal, Thailand, and Zimbabwe). It aims at strengthening the capacity of women's organizations to recognize HIV/AIDS as a critical gender issue and to address it through a variety of initiatives. UNESCO is striving to reinforce the capacity of local facilitators in raising awareness, identifying examples of “best practice” concerning HIV/AIDS preventive education and proposing the compilation of strategies and research on the transfer of gender-sensitive health messages to illiterate and semi-illiterate people.

123. In its meeting held in June 1999, the UNAIDS Inter-Agency Working Group on Gender changed its modality of supporting individual initiatives through its members and instead evolved a unified work plan whereby it will develop a generic advocacy document/technical guide that will assist member agencies in the implementation of a programme/project in a particular country.

Further suggested activities

124. A gender-based response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic requires continued efforts, coordination and commitment over the long term at the country, regional and global levels within the framework of the United Nations system strategic plan for HIV/AIDS for 2001-2005 and within the work of the UNAIDS Inter-Agency Working Group on Gender. The new International Partnership Against AIDS in Africa, launched in January 1999 by the UNAIDS co-sponsors and secretariat must be given the highest priority, since more than half of current HIV/AIDS global infections are found in that continent.

125. Strategies should focus on improving women’s control over their reproductive health, because there is clinical evidence that infections of the reproductive tract and sexually transmitted diseases substantially increase the risk of HIV transmission.

126. Access to voluntary testing and counselling for men and women should be promoted.

127. The development of advocacy activities, including advocacy kits targeted at governmental officials and policy makers; senior health managers; religious, community, women and youth leaders; journalists and others is necessary in order to advance legal and policy reform concerning HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment. Special emphasis should be put on the impact of the epidemic on girls and women.

128. Vaccine development, promotion of female controlled methods of prevention and measures to decrease mother-to-child transmission of HIV/AIDS infection need to be reinforced.

Notes

- <sup>1</sup> See Report of the Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, 4-15 September 1995 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.96.IV.13), chap. I, resolution I, annexes I and II.
- <sup>2</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-third Session, Supplement No. 16 (A/53/16), part two, chap. II, para. 20.
- <sup>3</sup> Ibid., Fifty-fourth Session, Supplement No. 6 (A/54/6/Rev.1), vol. I, paras. 44-49.
- <sup>4</sup> See E/CN.6/1999/2 and A/54/264.
- <sup>5</sup> UNSCO Report on Economic and Social Conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip (spring 1999), issued by the Office of the Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories (Gaza, 30 April 1999).
- <sup>6</sup> According to the 1999 UNSCO report, Israeli-controlled areas included Israel, Israeli settlements and industrial zones in the occupied territories.
- <sup>7</sup> According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, and cited in the 1999 UNSCO report.
- <sup>8</sup> “Report on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, submitted by Mr. Hannu Halinen, Special Rapporteur, pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2 A” (E/CN.4/1999/24), para. 28.
- <sup>9</sup> Ibid., para. 29.
- <sup>10</sup> Ibid., para. 36.
- <sup>11</sup> Ibid., para. 46.
- <sup>12</sup> Note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (A/54/73), para. 148.
- <sup>13</sup> Ibid., para. 173.
- <sup>14</sup> Ibid., para. 150.
- <sup>15</sup> Ibid., para. 171.
- <sup>16</sup> “Review and appraisal of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action” (E/CN.6/2000/PC.2); “Final assessment of the system-wide medium-term plan for the Advancement of Women” (E/CN.6/2000/3).
- <sup>17</sup> UNAIDS/WHO, Global AIDS Epidemic Up-date: December 1999 (Geneva).

Economic and Social CouncilDistr.: General
9 January 2001

Original: English

Commission on the Status of Women*Forty-fifth session

6-16 March 2001

Item 3 of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women*Follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration
and Platform for Action*Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The General Assembly, in its resolution 55/71 of 4 December 2000, requested the Secretary-General to report annually to it, through the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council, on follow-up to and progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women. Similar mandates were also contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69, 52/100 and 53/120. The present report emphasizes efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of gender mainstreaming and follow-up activities, including activities undertaken by non-governmental organizations, since the submission of the previous report of the Secretary-General on the subject (E/CN.6/2000/2).

The report on the joint work plan for the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights is being submitted as a separate report.

---

* E/CN.6/2001/1.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction .....	1–4	3
II. Progress in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system .....	5–71	3
A. The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council .....	5–18	3
B. Activities in support of mainstreaming gender perspectives into the work of the United Nations system .....	19–38	5
C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality .....	39–44	8
D. Expert group meetings and other activities organized by the Division for the Advancement of Women .....	45–58	9
E. Reported activities of non-governmental organizations and other institutions of civil society .....	59–71	11
III. Information supplied in accordance with specific mandates .....	72–121	13
A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations in the United Nations system .....	72–101	13
B. Release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned in armed conflict .....	102–121	18

I. Introduction

1. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1996/6, on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women, established the work programme of the Commission on the Status of Women, in particular the items to be included in the agenda of the Commission. With regard to documentation for the sessions of the Commission, the Council decided, inter alia, that under item 3 (a) of the agenda of the Commission, a review by the Secretary-General of mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system should be prepared on an annual basis.

2. In its resolution 55/71 of 4 December 2000, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report annually to it, the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for Action. Similar mandates were contained in General Assembly resolutions 50/203, 51/69, 52/100 and 53/120.

3. In each of the three reports submitted in the course of a year, the information that is most pertinent to the respective intergovernmental body is provided. The report to the Commission on the Status of Women emphasizes efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of gender mainstreaming and follow-up activities undertaken by non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The report to the Economic and Social Council focuses on facilitating the coordination function of the Council. The report to the General Assembly contains information from all entities of the United Nations system, including specialized agencies and international financial institutions, and an analysis of activities undertaken at the national level and by NGOs and other actors of civil society.

4. Section II of the present report has been prepared in compliance with General Assembly resolution 55/71. Section III responds to resolution 2000/23 of the Economic and Social Council on Palestinian women and to resolution 43/1 of the Commission on the Status of Women on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflict and imprisoned. The report of the Secretary-General on the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan submitted in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/9 is before the Commission as an addendum to the present report (E/CN.6/2001/2/Add.1).

II. Progress in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system

A. The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council

1. Fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly

5. The report of the Secretary-General (A/55/341) on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", also known as Beijing+5, provided an overview of the provisions and recommendations for action contained in the "Political declaration" and "Further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action" (resolutions S-23/2 and 3, respectively). Those instruments focus on areas where the Platform for Action has been strengthened and reinforced, on implementation measures at the national and international levels by Governments, the United Nations, NGOs and other actors. They also focus on recommendations that have immediate implications for action at the international level, including those for consideration by the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session.

6. In its resolution 55/71 of 4 December 2000, the General Assembly, welcoming the outcome of its twenty-third special session (ibid.) and stressing the importance of strong, sustained political will and commitment at the national, regional and international levels in order to achieve full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and outcome of that special session, reaffirmed that the United Nations system should promote an active and visible policy of mainstreaming a gender perspective, including through the work of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and through the maintenance of gender units and focal points in order to ensure the effective implementation of the strategic objectives of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the Assembly.

7. In the same resolution, the Assembly reaffirmed the primary role of the General Assembly, Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women in the overall policy-making, follow-up and coordination of the implementation and monitoring of the Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly. The Council was invited to continue to promote a coordinated and integrated follow-up to and implementation of the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits and their reviews, and requested the Council further to intensify its efforts to ensure that gender mainstreaming is an integral part of all its activities concerning the follow-up.

8. The Council was also invited to continue to further policy coordination and inter-agency cooperation towards the achievement of the objectives of the Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly.

9. The Assembly reaffirmed the central role of the Commission on the Status of Women in assisting the Economic and Social Council in monitoring, assessing progress made and accelerating the implementation of the Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly within the United Nations system, and in advising the Council thereon. In this respect, the Assembly noted that at its forty-fifth session in 2001, the Commission on the Status of Women would develop a new multi-year programme of work, and in this respect requested the Secretary-General to report to the Commission with recommendations for the effective implementation of the Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, including through enhancing the effectiveness of its work and its catalytic role in mainstreaming a gender perspective in United Nations activities.

10. The Assembly recognized the importance attached to the regional and subregional monitoring of the global and regional platforms for action and the implementation of the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly by regional commissions. In this respect, the Assembly called for the promotion of further cooperation among Governments and, where appropriate, national machineries of the same region. The Assembly also reaffirmed the need for mobilization of adequate resources at all levels, particularly in developing countries and countries with economies in transition in order to implement the Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly.

2. Economic and Social Council, substantive session of 2000

11. In its decision 1999/281 of 30 July 1999, the Economic and Social Council decided that the theme for the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2000 would be "Development and international cooperation in the twenty-first century: the role of information technology in the context of a knowledge-based global economy". Consideration of this topic provided the Council with an opportunity to show that information communication technologies were central to the creation of a knowledge-based economy and society and that they could play an important role in accelerating growth, eradicating poverty and promoting sustainable development in developing countries and countries with economies in transition, particularly in facilitating their beneficial integration into the global economy.

12. For the first time, during its substantive session of 2000, the Council undertook a comprehensive assessment of conference review processes. At its coordination segment, the Council assessed progress made within the United Nations system, through the conference reviews, in promotion of an integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields. Based on an examination of lessons learned from the five-year reviews of conferences conducted to date, the report of the Secretary-General (E/2000/57) on the issue makes a number of proposals to assist the Economic and Social Council in its guidance to its subsidiary bodies with respect to the upcoming 10-year reviews of the conferences of the 1990s as well as in further enhancing its work on conference follow-up. The report also discusses the progress in implementing the conferences in a more integrated and coordinated manner at the national and international levels and makes a number of suggestions to ensure that the United Nations system provides enhanced support in this regard.

13. The report draws attention to overlapping consideration of cross-cutting issues and conference goals and points out that gender perspectives have not been consistently mainstreamed in the five-year reviews despite guidance on the topic in agreed conclusions 1997/2. However, the Council's efforts to support a more integrated and coordinated follow-up could reinforce the cross-cutting nature of the recent five-year reviews, including the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, and ensure the full incorporation of that outcome in follow-up activities of all organizations of the United Nations system (A/55/341, para. 35).

14. During the substantive session of 2000, the Council adopted a number of resolutions, agreed conclusions and decisions. The Council specifically addressed its subsidiary bodies, including functional commissions, in the agreed conclusions and resolutions and called on them to take necessary measures to implement the policy recommendations in their work and, where appropriate, communicate to the Council any specific follow-up actions.

15. In its agreed conclusions 2000/2 of 27 July 2000, on the integrated and coordinated follow-up to major United Nations conferences, the Council invited its relevant functional commissions to consider a number of options listed in paragraph 33 of the report of the Secretary-General (E/2000/57) for enhancing the reviews of the major United Nations conferences and summits and to inform the Council for its consideration at its substantive session in 2001 of the outcome of their discussion. The Council suggested that particular attention should be given to the periodicity of the conference reviews. The Council also recommended that functional commissions, in reviewing their options, should consider ways and means of ensuring their capacity to conduct follow-up of conference implementation.

16. The Council also adopted, on 28 July 2000, resolution 2000/26, entitled "The role of employment and work in poverty eradication: empowerment and advancement of women". The Council noted with concern the persistent problems in addressing the challenges of poverty eradication, gender inequalities, empowerment and advancement of women and employment, as reflected in the outcome documents of the recent five-year reviews of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the World Summit for Social Development.

17. The Council therefore strongly encouraged Governments to pursue and strengthen their efforts to work towards achieving the goals of poverty eradication and reiterated the call for the relevant organizations of the United Nations system and the international community to take consistent, coherent, coordinated and joint action in support of national efforts to eradicate poverty, with particular attention to employment creation and work and the empowerment and advancement of women. The Council urged all States that had not yet ratified or acceded to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to do so, and also to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Optional Protocol.

18. A draft decision on the participation of NGOs not in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council in the work of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission for Social Development was submitted to the Council for adoption during its substantive session. The Council decided, on an exceptional basis and as an interim measure, to invite those NGOs accredited to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly and/or the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly to attend the forty-fifth session of the Commission on the Status of Women and the thirty-ninth session of the Commission on Social Development, provided that they had started the process of applying for consultative status in accordance with Council decision 1996/315 of 14 November 1996. The decision was adopted by consensus under the new title "Participation of NGOs in the forty-fifth session of the Commission on the Status of Women and the thirty-ninth session of the Commission on Social Development".

B. Activities in support of mainstreaming gender perspectives into the work of the United Nations system

19. The Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women has continued systematically to promote, facilitate and monitor the integration of gender perspectives into all areas of the work of the United Nations system, in accordance with the Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 on gender mainstreaming and their subsequent communication by the Secretary-General to heads of all departments, agencies, funds, programmes and regional commissions, as well as the renewed mandate on gender mainstreaming contained in the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly to follow up implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action (resolution 55/71 of 4 December 2000). With the additional resource of a Principal Officer on Gender Mainstreaming, it has been possible to strengthen the catalytic and advisory work of the Office of the Special Adviser through initiating more in-depth processes of consultation with senior managers and competence development inputs. The Special Adviser also gave particular attention to the preparations for the special session of the General Assembly in June 2000, including inter-agency collaboration. A summary of such activities is given below.

20. The Special Adviser continued to meet with senior United Nations officials stationed away from New York during their missions to Headquarters, to discuss implementation of the Platform for Action, particularly the mainstreaming strategy, as well as equal opportunities for women and men in the United Nations, including gender balance. During 2000, for example, meetings were held with the Executive Secretaries of the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), the Deputy Executive Secretaries of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) and ESCAP, the Executive Directors of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), and the United Nations Coordinator for Afghanistan and the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan.

21. The Special Adviser also met with senior officials in United Nations entities and held inter-agency meetings with gender focal points and field-based United Nations representatives during visits to Geneva in March and June 2000 and Egypt in October 2000. These meetings allowed for exchange of information on specific steps taken to increase gender mainstreaming, gender balance and a gender-sensitive work environment, as well as on the preparations for or follow-up to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly. For example, in conjunction with attendance at the twenty-fourth special session to follow up the World Social Summit at Geneva, a meeting was held with OHCHR on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and its Optional Protocol, follow-up to the special session and the efforts of OHCHR to promote gender mainstreaming. An informal meeting was held with the Geneva-based members of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality. Other meetings were held with the United Nations Information Service at Geneva, United Nations Office at Geneva, and the Board of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW). In conjunction with the Special Adviser's attendance at the First Summit of Arab First Ladies on Current Challenges and Future Prospects, held in Cairo from 18 to 20 November 2000, meetings were held with representatives of the United Nations Egypt Country Team.<sup>1</sup>

22. The Special Adviser continued to meet with the heads of departments and agencies to discuss gender mainstreaming, for example, UNDP, UNICEF, and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations. Visits were made by the Principal Officer for Gender Mainstreaming in the Office of the Special Adviser to ESCWA in April 2000 and ECE in November 2000. Through a process of consultation with senior managers, concrete recommendations for increasing the incorporation of gender perspectives into work programmes were developed.

23. In its resolution 2000/9, the Economic and Social Council urged the Secretary-General to ensure that a gender perspective is fully incorporated into the work of the United Nations Special Mission to Afghanistan and to continue to review the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan and report to the Commission on the Status of Women. The Office of the Special Adviser has remained actively involved in the work of the Afghanistan Support Group and continues to support the work of the Gender Adviser to the United Nations system in Afghanistan.

24. Information and reports prepared by the Gender Adviser on the current situation and its implications for United Nations system activities have been regularly shared with the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality. The relevant report of the Secretary-General is before the Commission at the current session (E/CN.6/2001/2/Add.1).

25. Collaboration between the Office of the Special Adviser and the Office of Human Resources Management was established for the development of a framework for competence development in gender mainstreaming and a resource base of facilitators. The competence development programme for all divisions in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs was initiated in October 2000.

26. To promote greater understanding of how gender perspectives could be incorporated into different sectors, briefing notes were prepared by the Office of the Special Adviser in collaboration with various United Nations entities. The briefing notes outline the linkages between gender perspectives and the sector issues, indicate ways and means of bringing attention to gender perspectives and provide resource listings on where to go for more support — publications, guidelines, manuals and web sites. A series of briefing notes has been completed on gender and disarmament within the Department for Disarmament Affairs that are used internally in the department to foster greater awareness, commitment and capacity on gender mainstreaming. Similar series were prepared on macroeconomics, trade, statistics, environment and a number of other individual sectors/issues in the work programmes of the regional commissions.

27. A framework has been developed for assessing progress towards gender mainstreaming, utilizing the concrete guidelines included in the Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2, the letter of the Secretary-General of October 1997 and the outcome of the special session of the Assembly in June 2000. The framework will facilitate more systematic and effective reporting on gender mainstreaming and provide a monitoring tool for the Special Adviser in her efforts to promote and support gender mainstreaming throughout the system.

28. An Inter-Agency Steering Committee for the Special Session, chaired by the Special Adviser, met regularly to ensure coordination and collaboration in preparations for the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly. Members of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality were encouraged to make specific contributions to the preparations through producing studies and organizing side-events in conjunction with the special session. The Director of the Division for the Advancement of Women participated in the regional preparatory meeting of ECE, and was represented at the regional preparatory meeting of ECLAC. The Special Adviser attended the ILO Symposium on Beijing+5 entitled “Decent work for women: ILO’s Contribution to Women 2000”, which was held at Geneva in March 2000.

29. The Office of the Special Adviser and the Division for the Advancement of Women continued to collaborate with the Lessons Learned Unit of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations in the implementation of the project on gender perspectives in multidimensional peacekeeping operations. The overall findings were published in October 2000 and case studies from a number of individual missions are under preparation. In conjunction with the project, a workshop was held in Namibia in May 2000. The resulting Windhoek Declaration and Namibia Plan of Action provide greater clarity on gender mainstreaming in the area of peacekeeping. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations established gender units in both Kosovo, in 1999, and East Timor, in 2000, to promote incorporation of gender perspectives in all aspects of the work of the missions. The Office of the Special Adviser has supported the efforts of the Department by providing advice and support to the Gender Units on request. Efforts were made to influence the implementation plans developed on the basis of the Brahimi report from a gender perspective, including through the recommendation for a Gender Unit in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations.

30. The Special Adviser and the Executive Director of UNIFEM were invited to address the special session of the Security Council on women, peace and security. The resulting Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) provides a strengthened mandate for gender mainstreaming in peace support operations. To ensure collaboration and coordination of the efforts of the relevant parts of the United Nations system in promoting, facilitating and supporting the incorporation of gender perspectives into peace support operations, an inter-agency task force was established as part of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality.

31. As part of follow-up to General Assembly resolution 52/100 of 12 December 1997 and Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 of 18 July 1997, in which the General Assembly and the Council, respectively, requested all bodies dealing with programme and budgetary matters to ensure that programmes, medium-term plans and programme budgets visibly mainstream gender perspectives, as well as the strong emphasis in the outcome of the Beijing+5 special session on budgetary processes and resource allocations, many departments and regional commissions increased their attention to gender perspectives in the medium-term plans for 2002-2005. Many programmes, e.g., the programmes on peacekeeping, human settlements, human rights, protection of and assistance to refugees, trade and development and the programmes of all the regional commissions, have moved beyond a general mention of gender mainstreaming in the introductory section to more specific attention to gender perspectives in subprogrammes.

32. The Programme Planning and Budget Division in the Office of Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts, prepared clear instructions for the programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003. Programme managers were requested to ensure that in all subprogrammes at least one accomplishment with an appropriate indicator reflects the gender dimensions of the work. All entities in the United Nations have made efforts to identify and incorporate gender perspectives in their submissions. The work on planning and budgetary processes is supported by the work carried out in the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality task force on gender mainstreaming in budget processes.

33. The Department of Political Affairs participated in an Inter-Agency Committee project on gender mainstreaming in programme budgets, which included a workshop for managers within the department to discuss how gender perspectives could be more effectively incorporated in programme budgets.

34. The Department for Disarmament Affairs moved beyond encouraging the nomination of female candidates to its fellowship programme, to including a briefing for the fellows on gender perspectives in all areas of disarmament — small arms, weapons of mass destruction, landmines, disarmament, demobilization and rehabilitation programmes and disarmament for development initiatives.

35. The Division for the Advancement of Women in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, in collaboration with UNDP, organized a seminar on gender mainstreaming in the governance and poverty programmes of the Africa Branch of UNDP.<sup>2</sup>

36. OHCHR's policy statement on gender mainstreaming and the human rights of women is now included as part of OHCHR's web site. A series of two-day workshops was organized for all staff at Geneva and gender perspectives have been included in the human rights training manuals for judges, prison guards and police officers. A draft checklist for integrating gender perspectives into all aspects of OHCHR's work has also been developed.

37. The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) has documented three success stories on gender and environment. A framework for a global network of gender and environment focal points from both Governments and NGOs is being finalized. The focal point system would provide an opportunity for information exchange and data collection as well as capacity-building at the national, regional and global levels.

38. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) held an expert workshop prior to UNCTAD X, which was held in Bangkok, from 12 to 19 February 2000, to discuss gender perspectives in trade and development. The workshop recognized that the process of globalization brings a number of new challenges to the promotion of gender equality. Concrete recommendations were made to UNCTAD X concerning the integration of gender concerns into regular sessions of the Trade and Development Board; incorporation of gender perspectives into analytical work, policy development and flagship publications of UNCTAD; identification of good practices; promotion of full and equal participation of women in trade-related activities at all levels; and development of a strategy for making gender perspectives a core part of UNCTAD activities.

C. ACC Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality

39. The Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality (IACWGE), chaired by the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, has continued to provide an excellent forum for fostering and facilitating greater attention to gender perspectives in substantive work of the United Nations and supporting increased collaboration and coordination throughout the system. The Committee continues to carry out its work programme through task forces with clearly defined and time-limited mandates. The task forces report to the Committee as a whole and the Committee adopts their annual work programmes.

40. Following the fifth session of the IACWGE, from 23 to 25 February 2000, inter-sessional work was conducted on a number of topics by the Committee's task forces. Task forces have continued to be active in the following areas under the guidance of the designated task managers: gender focal points — UNFPA; compilation of good practices in implementing the Platform for Action — UNIFEM; database on gender training materials — UNICEF and UNDP; tools and indicators for gender impact analysis, monitoring and evaluation — ECLAC in collaboration with the other regional commissions; and gender mainstreaming in programme budgets — Office of the Special Adviser. Several of these were expected to be concluded at the Committee's next session in February 2001. Two new task forces established at the fifth session of the Committee began to initiate activities: gender mainstreaming in the Common Country Assessment/United Nations Development Assistance Framework (CCA/UNDAF) process — UNIFEM; and gender and information and communication technologies — International Telecommunication Union (ITU). A series of informal meetings was held in New York during 2000, particularly on the preparations and follow-up to the Beijing+5 special session, and the Geneva-based members of the Committee continued to meet regularly.

41. Based on the recommendation of the Inter-Agency Committee at its fourth session in February 1999, the ACC submitted a statement to the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session (A/S-23/8, annex). In their statement, members of the ACC commit themselves to accelerate the implementation of the Platform for Action and to promote gender mainstreaming within their organizations.

42. An Inter-Agency Steering Committee for the Beijing+5 special session, chaired by the Special Adviser, met regularly to ensure coordination of preparations, and the Deputy Secretary-General met with senior United Nations officials on preparations for the special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: Gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century". During the special session members of the Inter-Agency Committee prepared panels, presentations and exhibitions. The task forces on good practices in implementing the Beijing Platform for Action and on gender training materials launched their databases during the special session. In conjunction with the Beijing+5 special session, the task force on gender mainstreaming in programme budgets organized a workshop to present the findings of their work.

43. In response to recent developments, the Inter-Agency Committee established two new task forces. A task force on financing for development (ILO) would work to influence the preparations for the "high-level intergovernmental event" which will consider issues relating to financing for development, scheduled to take place in March 2002. The task force on women, peace and security, chaired by the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, provided input to the discussion of the Security Council on women, peace and security on 24 October 2000, and was preparing an action plan for the collaborative and coordinated implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) in the United Nations system.

44. The Committee continued its active collaboration with the OECD/DAC Working Party on Gender Equality. The annual joint workshop on governance, poverty reduction and gender equality was, however, postponed from October 2000 to early 2001. The sixth session of the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality will take place in New York from 26 February to 2 March 2001.

D. Expert group meetings and other activities organized by the Division for the Advancement of Women

1. Expert group meeting on the HIV/AIDS pandemic and its gender implications

45. International experts gathered in Windhoek from 13 to 17 November 2000 in a meeting on "The HIV/AIDS pandemic and its gender implications", organized by the United Nations Secretariat Division for the Advancement of Women in collaboration with WHO and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). The Namibian Government hosted the meeting, which brought together experts and observers from different regions working on HIV/AIDS as well as observers from Governments, the United Nations system and NGOs. The meeting addressed the seriousness of the HIV/AIDS pandemic, especially in Africa, and its gender dimensions.

46. Experts concluded that the HIV/AIDS pandemic must be regarded as a disaster that required gender-sensitive short-term relief measures to alleviate immediate emergencies and long-term interventions that transformed relations between women and men to eliminate gender inequality and reduce the risk of infection. It urged Governments and the international community to distribute immediately emergency food aid, including nutrient supplements and home-based care packs to women and men living with and affected by HIV/AIDS in the most severely affected countries and regions of the world.

47. The role of men and changes in gender relations were considered key elements in fighting the pandemic. Experts appealed to Governments, international organizations and NGOs to upscale significantly their work with men to challenge gender inequalities in relation to HIV and AIDS, and to encourage men's fuller participation in prevention, impact alleviation and care.

48. The experts' recommendations have been forwarded to the Commission on the Status of Women at the current session, at which it would consider "Women, the girl-child and HIV/AIDS" as a priority theme.

2. Expert group meeting on gender and racial discrimination

49. The Division for the Advancement of Women, in collaboration with OHCHR and UNIFEM, organized an expert group meeting on the theme of "Gender and racial discrimination". The meeting was hosted by the Government of Croatia in Zagreb, and took place from 21 to 24 November 2000.

50. The meeting was convened to consider the intersection of gender and racial discrimination and its consequences, as well as new and emerging manifestations of racism, xenophobia and related intolerance and the difficulties that women encountered in that respect.

51. The meeting considered three main topics: the intersection of gender and racial discrimination directed towards women and girls, such as ethnic/gender-based violence and trafficking; the disadvantages, obstacles and difficulties women face in the enjoyment of economic, social, cultural, political and civil rights as a result of the intersection of racial and sex discrimination both in public and private domain; and measures to eradicate racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and their specific effects on women and girls and provision of remedies and redress.

52. The expert group meeting made recommendations directed to Governments, the United Nations system, intergovernmental and regional bodies and civil society. The recommendations aimed to refine and expand the "actions to be taken" at both international and national levels outlined in the Beijing Platform for Action, as well as the further actions identified by the special session of the General Assembly on Beijing+5.

53. The results of the meeting have been made available to the Commission on the Status of Women at its current session, at which it would take up, inter alia, the thematic issue of gender and all forms of discrimination, in particular racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has indicated that the meeting's results would be included in the preparations for the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, as well as the World Conference itself, which will take place in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 7 September 2001.

3. Meeting on the draft rules of procedure of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women

54. Members of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women met in Berlin at the invitation of the Government of Germany, from 27 to 30 November 2000. The purpose of the meeting was to review and finalize the draft rules of procedure for the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Two members of the Human Rights Committee served as resource persons, and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights was also represented.

55. The draft rules of procedure, which were finalized at the meeting, were subsequently adopted by the Committee at its twenty-fourth session in January 2001. The Optional Protocol to the Convention entered into force on 22 December 2000.

4. Advisory services provided by the Division for the Advancement of Women

56. The Gender Advisory Services Unit of the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Department for Economic and Social Affairs implements technical cooperation programmes for the advancement of women and gender equality. This technical cooperation depends on Member States' requirements for technical support. Most Member States have begun to indicate a shift in government policy in terms of recognition of a gender equality approach to policy design, formulation and implementation.

57. In this context, the setting up and/or strengthening of institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women became an essential tool to move the gender equality agenda forward. However, national machineries were often marginalized and lack the capacity and resources to play a more effective role. The Division currently collaborates with the Division for Public Economics and Public Administration to address these issues. They have established a task force to provide technical support for the implementation, monitoring and evaluation of a project aimed at building the capacity of national machineries to promote gender equality in Africa. The project would promote mainstreaming of a gender perspective in national planning through a needs assessment and subregional workshops on gender sensitive national planning. It would also strengthen the data collection and analysis capacity to produce sex-disaggregated data related to the Convention as well as management information systems. To launch the project, a consultation meeting was organized on 12 June 2000 that brought together participants from Africa to implement the Secretary-General's directive to give priority to Africa's urgent development challenges, and the Arab, Caribbean, European, and Asia Pacific regions for an interregional perspective. Representatives from ECA and ESCWA and United Nations agencies such as UNFPA, UNDP and UNIFEM also participated.

58. The Division for the Advancement of Women carried out a study in collaboration with UNDP/Africa to assess gender mainstreaming activities in UNDP's governance and poverty eradication programme. The assessment was conducted in 22 sub-Saharan countries and completed in January 2000. A technical review meeting was held on 20 and 21 March to discuss the findings of the study. Participants included representatives from country offices, other divisions in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs as well as United Nations agencies, including UNFPA and UNIFEM. A report summarizing the discussions and recommendations includes a work plan prioritizing these recommendations as immediate, short-term and medium-term action. The results of the study will be launched on International Women's Day on 8 March 2001.

E. Reported activities of non-governmental organizations and other institutions of civil society

59. Since the issuance of the report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (A/55/293), a number of events have occurred at the international, regional and national levels under the auspices of NGOs. While these activities were not reported systematically to the Secretariat, some were brought to the attention of the Division for the Advancement of Women and were noted as examples of the widespread follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly by civil society.

60. Initiated by the Fédération des Femmes du Québec, a Canadian NGO, the World March of Women 2000, a global initiative that involved approximately 5,000 NGOs from 159 countries, culminated in New York in October 2000. Participants in each country conducted grass-roots activities to bring attention to, and develop proposals for addressing, the issues of poverty and violence against women. The march and the signed petitions highlighted and drew attention to the need for concrete measures to eliminate poverty, to ensure an equitable distribution of the world's wealth, to eradicate violence against women, and to ensure equality between women and men. A panel discussion was held on 17 October 2000 at the United Nations to mark the culmination of the World March of Women 2000, and the commemoration of the International Day for the Eradication of Poverty. An international delegation, made up of 250 participants of the March, attended the panel discussion, which was addressed by the Deputy Secretary-General of the United Nations.

61. The International Criminal Court Women's Caucus for Gender Justice coordinated a one-day public hearing on crimes against women in recent wars and conflict situations as a part of the Tokyo Tribunal 2000. The one-day public hearing, coordinated by the Women's Caucus for Gender Justice and co-sponsored by VAWW-Net Japan and ASCENT, included testimonies of victims and survivors of wars and conflicts in different regions of the globe.

62. The International Women's Tribune Center launched its web site, providing another link for women on the Internet. The site was designed to provide web addresses for a number of organizations for women and girls, thereby enabling networking.

63. African NGOs met in Accra, Ghana, in October 2000 to review the "case stories" they had drafted for the second meeting on the "African Best Practices for Gender Integration" publication. The meeting brought together nine NGO representatives from seven African countries, and was co-sponsored by the Gender Development Institute of Ghana and the Commission on the Advancement of Women. The Commission on the Advancement of Women aims to launch this publication at the annual Forum.

64. The NGO Women and Armed Conflict Caucus began to work towards bringing gender perspectives on armed conflict to the attention of the Security Council following the Security Council press release on women and peace issued for International Women's Day (8 March 2000). The Caucus facilitated the presentation of the views of women from armed conflict zones to Security Council delegations and relevant United Nations departments at events and private meetings during the forty-fourth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, in March 2000, and the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, in June 2000. The Coalition on Women and International Peace and Security was formed by members of the caucus based in New York and London specifically to coordinate preparation of the Arria Formula Meeting, held on 23 October 2000, and the meeting of the Security Council on women and peace and security. The Coalition was coordinated by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and included Amnesty International, the International Peace Research Association, The Hague Appeal for Peace, the Women's Commission for Refugee Women and Children and International Alert. The Coalition worked closely with the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, UNIFEM and the Namibian delegation to the United Nations, in identifying appropriate experts from the field for the Arria Formula briefing by NGOs to Security Council members. It also assisted in widely publicizing the meeting held on 24 October 2000 and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) adopted on 31 October 2000. The Coalition intends to continue to monitor implementation of the resolution.

65. The NGO Community on the Status of Women launched a LISTSERV to connect women worldwide with timely information coming out of the United Nations in New York. It initially targeted women who indicated an interest at the Beijing+5 meetings, and gave subscribers email information about the Commission on the Status of Women meetings and NGO events, and was designed to assist the NGO community in follow-up to Beijing+5.

66. NGOs have advanced gender issues for interaction at the special session of the General Assembly on children to be held from 19 to 21 September 2001. Organizations like the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, the Working Group on Girls of the NGO Committee on UNICEF, the International Federation of University Women, ESCAP and others interested in gender issues affecting children, hosted workshops on various subjects, including HIV/AIDS, emerging health issues affecting girls, education of refugee girls, tolerance and reconciliation, sexual exploitation of girls, and violence against girls. They were presented as part of an NGO programme to provide Governments and NGOs with information for drafting the outcome document of the Beijing+5 special session. The workshops were held in conjunction with the second session of the Preparatory Committee in January 2000.

67. Women'sNet, which aims to empower women to use information and communication technologies more effectively in their struggle towards advancing women's equality, received an "Innovative users of Internet" award at the Highway Africa Conference 2000. The spirit of the award was to inspire greater use of the Internet on the African continent. It is the only web site of its kind in South Africa. In an attempt to make this kind of information accessible to a wider community, Women'sNet forges partnerships with gender organizations and networks across South Africa and Africa. It has also started a community radio project.

68. In July 2000, 35 representatives of water management, water users and information organizations from Asia, Africa, South America and Europe met in Paris for three days to define the tasks of the newly formed Gender and Water Alliance. Initiated at the Second World Water Forum, in March 2000, the Gender and Water Alliance is an informal network of individuals, NGOs, resource centres, research institutions, grass-roots organizations, and regional, national and local institutions. Its goal was to achieve equality among women and men, regarding participation and decision-making in the water resources management.

69. The International Women's Democracy Centre, in partnership with the Ulster People's College in Belfast, Northern Ireland, brought together women leaders from Northern Ireland for a two-week programme to learn the process of lobbying. Designed to develop and strengthen their public policy, advocacy and lobbying skills, the hands-on, innovative training programme combined theoretical learning and practical experience focusing on the interaction of the legislative, judicial and executive branches of government with the public and private sectors to create public policy. The diverse group came from both rural and urban areas and different regional backgrounds.

70. Latin American countries and a growing number of other countries around the world have recognized 25 November as the International Day Against Violence Against Women. It was first celebrated by the first Feminist Encuentro for Latin America and the Caribbean held in Bogota, Colombia, from 18 to 21 July 1981, when women systematically denounced gender violence from domestic battery to rape and sexual harassment, to state violence, including torture and abuse of women political prisoners. On 17 December 1999, the United Nations adopted resolution 54/134, designating 25 November as the International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women. The first observance of the Day in the United Nations was held on 25 November 2000.

71. The World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts launched an initiative to combat the spread of HIV/AIDS in November 2000. Ten million girl guides and girl scouts in 150 countries earned a badge through specific activities that would help prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS or for projects that help persons infected with HIV/AIDS. The World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, International Council of AIDS Service Organizations and UNAIDS developed resource materials, which were distributed in December 2000 to all national organizations of WAGGGS.

III. Information supplied in accordance with specific mandates

A. Situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations in the United Nations system

72. In its resolution 2000/23 of 28 July 2000, the Economic and Social Council requested a report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women. The present report, which covers the period from September 1999 to September 2000, is based on information from United Nations bodies that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the occupied territories and refugee camps. Such bodies include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories<sup>3</sup> and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967. The report is also based on information submitted by entities of the United Nations system providing assistance to Palestinian people, i.e., ESCWA, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), ILO, the World Bank and UNICEF.

1. Situation of Palestinian women

73. In his report on the Palestinian economy, the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories stated that, according to estimates from the Palestinian Ministry of Finance and the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Palestinian economy improved in 1998: real gross domestic product (GDP) grew by about 7 per cent; Palestinian labour flows to Israel by 15 per cent; Israeli-Palestinian trade by 9 per cent. Donors' assistance increased by 12 per cent. In addition, the Palestinian Ministry of Finance and IMF revised their growth forecasts for 1999 upward to 6 per cent. In 1999, employment and labour force participation both increased so that the combined effect on the unemployment rate was a decline to 12.7 per cent from 15.6 per cent in 1998.<sup>4</sup>

74. Women's employment and participation in the labour force grew faster than for men. This could be explained by the rapid expansion in the agriculture and services sectors, including public services, where women were present in high numbers.<sup>5</sup> However, women were still found mainly in part-time jobs. In 1999, the proportion of women working less than 35 hours per week increased by 34.76 per cent while the same figure for men fell by 11.66 per cent. This tendency might have resulted from two factors. First, in the expanding agricultural sector women perform unpaid work, which is therefore not accounted for; secondly, married women tend to seek part-time jobs to increase the household income. Unemployment figures in 1999 suggest that the gap between women and men widened. In fact, while the number of unemployed men fell significantly — by 14.45 per cent — the number of unemployed women was nearly unchanged, falling only by 1.80 per cent.<sup>5</sup>

75. In 1999 there was no reduction in the severity of the closure policy applied by Israel to the occupied territories. Personal mobility remained severely restricted as Palestinians could not travel freely between the West Bank and Gaza Strip, or enter Jerusalem without permits from the Israeli authorities. Palestinian public agencies, businesses, NGOs and international agencies continued to experience higher transaction costs, time delays, and loss of productivity as a result of restrictions in the movement of personnel and goods at border crossings.<sup>5</sup>

76. The report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (A/55/373) stated that closures and restrictions at checkpoints continued to remain a cause of concern to Palestinians. For instance, on 9 February 2000, Israeli soldiers raided a Palestinian house and held family members, including women and children, at gunpoint. One woman suffered a heart attack. As the car transporting her to the hospital was delayed at an Israeli checkpoint (ibid., para. 84) she died.

77. The Special Rapporteur on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967, Mr. Giorgio Giacomelli (Italy), in his report to the Commission on Human Rights stated that the Israeli policy of closures and permits also affected the right to education as it had serious repercussions for students in the Gaza Strip. In fact, more than 1,300 students from Gaza were prevented from studying at universities and Palestinian institutions of higher education in the West Bank because Israel considered them to be a security risk (E/CN.4/2000/25, para. 47). In the same report, the Special Rapporteur noted that the issue of Palestinian prisoners detained in Israeli prisons remained a source of great concern. Although there had been releases of Palestinian (political) prisoners, within the framework of the peace agreements, the number remained high at 1,500. The conditions of detention were below international standards and difficulties of access to prisoners were faced by their lawyers as well as by their families.

78. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, reported that, in Ramallah, at various times, the General Security Service had banned parents, wives and siblings of 200 prisoners from visiting them (A/55/373, para. 114). The Special Committee also reported that the prison service had withheld permission for a British physician to examine the condition of a 16-year-old Palestinian girl detained in Ramle (ibid., para. 110).

79. As noted by the Special Rapporteur, harsh prison sentences often had the effect of taking fathers away from children and, upon their release from prison, led to an incidence of violence in the family. As a consequence, in many cases, men lost their protective and breadwinner's role within the household while women were forced to take additional burdens and acquire roles other than the ones traditionally performed by them (see E/CN.4/2000/25, para. 43) in order to provide for all the economic and social needs of the family. It is important to note two aspects related to women taking on new roles: on the one hand, it might lead to conflicts within the family due to the difficulty in adapting to and accepting change; on the other, it might provide opportunities for women's empowerment as women gain new decision-making power within the household.

80. The expansion of Israeli settlements, the demolishing of Palestinian homes and the building of bypass roads in the occupied territories continued to create difficulties for the Palestinians. In particular, the demolishing of houses in Jerusalem often forced families to consider moving to the West Bank, where it would have been cheaper to buy or rent another house, but where they would have lost their residency rights.

An incident of this kind was reported by the Special Committee (see A/55/373, para. 57).

81. The report of the Special Committee also stated that, according to the Palestinian Authority's Ministry of Health, the toxic gas pollution of the West Bank's water sources controlled by Israel, caused numerous miscarriages among Palestinian women (ibid., para. 60) living in the West Bank.

82. As the present report covers the period September 1999 to September 2000, it does not contain information related to the effects of the violent confrontation between Palestinian civilians and Israeli security forces that erupted at the end of September 2000. Clashes spread provoking numerous deaths, particularly among Palestinian civilians, including youth. Such violence had negative economic and social effects in the occupied territories as well as serious repercussions on the peace process and on the ability of the organizations of the United Nations system to operate effectively in the occupied territories.

2. Assistance to Palestinian women

83. The organizations of the United Nations system continued to provide assistance to Palestinian people, in particular women.

84. During the period under review, ESCWA prepared a study on gender and citizenship and the role of NGOs in the occupied territories, aimed at proposing action-oriented policy recommendations to inculcate a gender-sensitive citizenship in post-conflict countries. ESCWA organized a workshop for producers and users of sex-disaggregated data in the occupied territories and started ongoing projects such as a database on Palestinian refugees in the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon; a regional household survey in the occupied territories; and the development of national gender statistics in the Arab countries, including the occupied territories.

85. UNRWA provides essential education, health, relief and social services to some 3.7 million registered Palestine refugees in the Agency's area of operations comprising Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Assistance to Palestinian women is a priority, delivered within the context of the Agency's regular programmes for Palestine refugees.

86. During the period under review, UNRWA began a review of its gender policies with external technical expertise and funding from the Government of Denmark. The review sought to align the Agency's gender policy and practice more closely with the framework and targets agreed at the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women and subsequently reviewed at the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century".

87. In the 1999/2000 scholastic year, 468,651 pupils were enrolled in the Agency's elementary, preparatory and secondary schools, of whom 234,500, or 50 per cent, were female. Women accounted for 69 per cent of participants in UNRWA's pre- and in-service teacher training courses, and for 63 per cent of trainees in UNRWA's technical/semi-professional courses. Of the 673 continuing UNRWA scholarships in 1999/2000, 45.3 per cent were held by women. In addition, 14 Palestinian women in Lebanon would benefit from a scholarship project during 1999/2000 addressed to women only and managed by UNRWA on behalf of the Canadian International Development Research Centre.

88. UNRWA provided maternal and child health care and family planning services and sustained full immunization coverage to women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases. Those services were supported by school health services as well as by health educational programmes on the prevention of tobacco use and the prevention of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases.

89. Difficult socio-economic conditions in refugee communities during the reporting period continued to create greater reliance on income earned by women. More than 50 per cent of UNRWA's special hardship case families, who received direct food and material assistance from the Agency, were headed by women. UNRWA's women-in-development programme provided a wide range of social, cultural and educational services at the community level. Seventy Women's Programme Centres served as focal points within the refugee community for UNRWA's work with women. From the beginning of 2000 until 30 July 2000, a total of 27,634 participants benefited from the various activities of the Centres, such as computer training, photography, English language courses, child care services for working women, group-guaranteed lending, awareness-raising campaigns on health, disability diagnosis and awareness and legal counselling. The Agency is currently reviewing the quality of training at the Centres, with the aim of facilitating employment of women upon graduation.

90. During 1999/2000, UNRWA's income generation programme granted loans valued at $3.12 million to 3,716 women, who supported 20,050 dependants. Since 1994, the Solidarity Group Lending Programme has provided loans worth $11.39 million to 15,183 women organized in 2,271 solidarity groups. These women were granted loans at the end of each successful repayment cycle. The programme was self-sufficient with all operational costs and loan loss provision covered from revenues generated by lending and banking activities. The programme maintained an annual repayment rate of 98.65 per cent.

91. During the period under review, the ILO Arab regional office undertook a series of activities in support and assistance to Palestinian women:

- Gender mainstreaming in the Ministry of Labour (Gaza and Ramallah)

The inter-ministerial coordinating committee for the advancement of women mainstreamed gender concerns in certain ministries. In August 2000, the ILO supported a workshop, held in Ramallah, to develop an action plan for the Ministry of Labour.

- Strategy formulation on the promotion and development of women's entrepreneurship

Several activities were executed in the framework of a 1996-1999 training programme implemented by the International Training Centre of the ILO in Turin, Italy, to promote and develop Palestinian women's entrepreneurship. In particular, four courses to train trainers to develop technical capacities and nine technical workshops to enhance the knowledge and skills of women entrepreneurs were undertaken. In May 2000, a seminar comprising national governmental, non-governmental and private sector stakeholders was organized to design a national strategy for women's entrepreneurship development.

- ILO multidisciplinary mission to the West Bank and Gaza

From 31 January to 11 February 2000, the ILO developed two project proposals for the advancement of women. The first project aimed to strengthen the inter-ministerial committee for the advancement of women and the second to promote and develop female entrepreneurship.

- Capacity-building programme on gender, poverty and employment

In December 1999, a subregional planning seminar for the Arab States was organized in Beirut on an ILO capacity-building programme on gender, poverty and employment that resulted in national action plans. The action plan for West Bank and Gaza was developed into a draft project proposal early in 2000 and is expected to be developed further into a full-fledged project document.

92. In January 1999, the World Bank formally established a Consultative Council on Gender in the Middle East and North Africa Region in order to formulate solutions to the most pertinent gender concerns in the area. In the period under review, the World Bank undertook various assistance programmes and projects, including:

- Comprehensive development framework

A programme to address the increasing need for a holistic integrated approach to development balancing macroeconomic stability with human, social and structural elements.

- The Second Committee development project

A project designed and implemented with the full participation of women and included targeted interventions such as promoting women's centres and kindergartens.

- The Palestinian NGO project

A project which financially and technically supported NGOs that targeted the poor and marginalized Palestinian population, 70 per cent of whom were women.

- The education and health rehabilitation project

This project was completed in December 1999. It provided for appropriate and adequate sanitary facilities at school sites, promoted the development of teaching material free of gender bias, and aimed at increasing girls' access to schools.

- The pilot training centre for disadvantaged youth

Funded through the World Bank Development Market Place 2000 Competition, the centre would be created as part of a pilot project that targets poor rural young women and men who currently have no training skills useful in today's job market.

93. Based on its programme of cooperation with the Palestinian Authority for the years 1998-2000, UNICEF addresses gender issues through its programmes for Palestinian children and women.

94. UNICEF promotes advocacy for women's rights by increasing society's awareness of the scope and meaning of women's rights, non-discrimination and gender equality, using information from all its projects and education strategies, including better parenting, gender equity in education and life skills. The UNICEF strategy also supports an enabling environment that influences legislation and mobilizes resources for Palestinian women, in order to monitor and promote women's rights. Different types of media are used in pursuing that strategy, including television, radio, print media and theatre.

95. Within the women's health project, UNICEF supported the following activities aimed at improving the quality of life of Palestinian women:

- Eight-day training for 75 midwives from primary and secondary health care settings in the governmental sector as well as UNRWA and the Palestinian Red Crescent Society;
- Four-day workshop for 125 maternal care health professionals on the promotion of woman and child health and nutrition and the quality of services;
- Ten-day training for physicians and nurses within the obstetric and neonatal departments in four major hospitals;
- The maternal mortality survey being implemented in the West Bank, which would seek, inter alia, to identify the most common causes of maternal death, to strengthen the surveillance system in the country and to monitor the fate of orphans after the death of their mothers.

96. During the period under review, UNICEF supported a five-day training programme on first aid, health promotion, communication and leadership skills for 300 nursery teachers in 12 districts, undertaken within the better parenting initiative implemented with the Ministry of Social Affairs. UNICEF is currently supporting the following activities:

- A study on early marriage and dropouts in the Bethlehem district being conducted to understand the perception, attitude and practice related to early marriage, and to examine the relationship between early marriage and dropping out of school among females who marry early;
- An awareness-raising campaign on gender and development issues among students, grades 7 through 10, attending eight schools in the Bethlehem district;
- A review of new textbooks to assess whether they are gender sensitive. The results of the review would be shared with the Ministry of Education;
- Sixteen gender-training workshops targeting 400 education professionals in 8 districts (5 in the West Bank and 3 in Gaza). The training focuses on gender awareness and sensitization as well as on some basic skills to enable the education professionals to integrate gender into the teaching process.

97. Gender is mainstreamed in both projects of the advocacy and capacity-building programme: the planning, policy formulation and monitoring project and the children and women in need of special protection project. During the period under review, UNICEF worked on the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey II (still to be completed) aimed at providing sex-disaggregated data on Palestinian children and women. Furthermore, UNICEF provided:

- Technical and financial support to the Palestinian Authority in drafting the Palestinian Child Rights Charter and ensuring that it was gender sensitive;
- Support to the Palestinian Ministry of Social Affairs in carrying out a study of orphanages providing long-term residential care with emphasis on the under-served girl child;
- Support to efforts aimed at increasing media coverage of Palestinian children and women, jointly with the Ministry of Information;

- Support to the creation of a network of NGOs working to combat violence against women.

3. Conclusions

98. In the reporting period, the Palestinian Authority, civil society groups and organizations of the United Nations system made considerable efforts to improve the economic and social conditions of Palestinian women. Yet, despite these efforts and in spite of the positive trends of the domestic Palestinian economy in the period under review, women still experienced unequal access to the labour market and income-generating activities and continued to have higher unemployment rates than men. Thus, the situation of women still requires special attention.

99. The status and living conditions of Palestinian women are linked to the achievement of progress in the peace process. Women living in the occupied territories continued to be directly affected by Israeli policies, especially the closure hindering the efforts undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, civil society groups and organizations of the United Nations aimed at advancing women.

100. Towards the end of the reporting period, violence between Israeli security forces and Palestinian civilians erupted in the occupied territories creating great concern as it jeopardized the peace process and hindered assistance efforts by the organizations of the United Nations system. It is important that United Nations entities continue to be able to operate in the occupied territories and that efforts are made to continue working for the advancement and empowerment of Palestinian women. It is particularly important that Palestinian women continue to be given assistance in areas such as education, health, social services and micro-credit and that efforts are made to increase their full and equal participation in decision-making and peace programmes.

101. The gender perspective should continue to be fully integrated in international assistance programmes, through inter alia, greater gender analysis and the collection of sex-disaggregated data, which is currently insufficient. Although the reports of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People in the Occupied Territories, the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Process and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on Palestinian Territories occupied since 1967 all provided valuable information on the situation in the occupied territories, they still lack a thorough gender analysis. Thus, it is important to introduce a gender perspective in all studies and reports undertaken by the United Nations on the situation of Palestinian women.

B. Release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned in armed conflict

102. At its forty-fourth session, the Commission on the Status of Women adopted resolution 44/1 on the release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflict. The Commission on the Status of Women requested the Secretary-General to prepare, taking into account the information provided by Member States and relevant international organizations, a report on the implementation of resolution 44/1 for submission to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fifth session in 2001. In pursuance of this mandate, on 20 July 2000, the Secretary-General sent a note verbale to all States Members of the United Nations. As of 30 November 2000, the Secretariat had received a total of 17 replies from Member States and 12 replies from relevant entities of the United Nations system.

103. Fourteen Member States reported that they were not involved in armed conflicts, one Member State reported that the country's internal violence had assumed the characteristics of armed conflict and two Member States reported that their citizens, including women and children, were still kept prisoners by the Government of neighbouring countries with which they had been in conflict.

104. The Governments of Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, El Salvador, Marshall Islands, Morocco, Nauru, Portugal, Thailand and the United Republic of Tanzania reported that the situation described in resolution 44/1 did not exist in their respective countries.

105. Although not involved in situations of armed conflicts, the Governments of Argentina, China and the Philippines reported support for international humanitarian law and support for international community efforts to stop and prevent conflicts in order to safeguard the rights of women and children. In addition, the Government of the Philippines also stated its support for resolution 44/1 and called for the need to create a monitoring body on the proper implementation of the resolution and to ensure that violators were forced to comply.

106. The Government of Spain reported that, although the issue of armed conflict did not affect it directly, the Government was involved in cooperation and development projects in Latin America, including in many countries suffering from instability and violence deriving from wars, where mainly women and children were affected. Some of these projects were implemented by the Institute of Women through its "Women and Development" programme, which, inter alia, aimed to improve the situation of victims, strengthen good governance and prevent conflicts.

107. The Government of Bolivia reported that, although there were no armed conflicts within the country nor between Bolivia and its neighbouring countries, the eradication of cocaine had created a problem of violence in the Chapare area and other rural areas, which had the characteristics of armed conflict and which affected mainly women and children. The Government of Bolivia also stated its support for resolution 44/1 and for international humanitarian law aimed at protecting women and children in situations of armed conflict.

108. The Government of Azerbaijan reported that as a result of the Armenia-Azerbaijan conflict, a total of 4,959 citizens of Azerbaijan were counted as missing, including 71 children, 320 women and 358 elderly people. Efforts of the State Commission of the Republic of Azerbaijan on Prisoners of War, Hostages and Missing People in the 1992-2000 period resulted in the release from Armenian captivity of a total of 1,086 persons, including 67 children, 243 women and 246 elderly persons. The Government reported that, in order to address the issue, in December 1999, it advanced a new initiative in the Committee for Political Issues of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe confirming that the problems of prisoners of war, hostages and missing people should be solved in accordance with the articles of the Geneva Convention.

109. The Government of Kuwait reported that, as a result of the 1990 Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, a total of 605 persons, including 7 Kuwaiti women, were held in detention in Iraq. The Government called for the immediate publication by Iraq of the names of the prisoners who were still alive as well as those who had died. It stated that the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) should be allowed to perform the assigned tasks in Iraqi prisons and other places of detention in accordance with the Geneva Conventions. The Government of Kuwait stated that Iraq should expedite the tracing process and facilitate the flow of information related to cases of persons still kept in detention. It also stated that the Security Council should exert the necessary pressure on Iraq in order to bring this humanitarian issue to a conclusion, that this issue should be raised in the Security Council each time matters relating to Iraq's compliance with Council resolutions were addressed, and that Iraq's inadequate response to this issue should be taken into account whenever new resolutions were adopted.

110. The Secretariat also requested information from relevant entities of the United Nations system.

111. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations provided information from six of its field missions. The United Nations Mission in Sierra Leone (UNAMSIL) reported that the conflict in Sierra Leone had been, and continued to be, characterized by a high incidence of abductions of civilians, including men, women and children, for the purposes of forced recruitment, sexual slavery and forced labour. It also reported that many women and girls were forced to become the "bush wives" of their abductors and that social reintegration of released abductees was very difficult due to the stigmatization that accompanied rape and the resulting pregnancies.

112. UNAMSIL reported that the Committee for the Release of Prisoners of War and Non-Combatants, which was established in July 1999 in accordance with the Lomé Peace Agreement, continued to meet on a biweekly basis despite the renewed instances of fighting in Sierra Leone. It designated its representatives to carry out regular fact-finding missions that served to disseminate information about its activities and any options available to the released abductees.

113. The United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) reported that, according to information collected by the ICRC, following the transfer of prisoners from Kosovo to Serbia in June 1999, there were still 950 persons from Kosovo who remained in detention in Serbia, including 6 women and 6 minors.

114. Since it did not have a mandate to operate within Serbia, UNMIK was not able to monitor directly the conditions or proceedings against the women and children held in detention in Serbia. However, it continued to highlight the issue of these prisoners and attempted to rally international support to advocate for their release. UNMIK also reported that on 1 September 2000, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights appointed a Special Envoy on persons deprived of liberty in connection with the Kosovo crisis in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to seek comprehensive solutions to the problem of missing persons and detainees from Kosovo.

115. It was reported by the United Nations Mission in Georgia (UNOMIG) that, in its area of responsibility, the long-standing practice of hostage taking, in which women were sometimes the victims, continued. These cases were indirectly related to the 1992-1993 armed conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, which produced difficult socio-economic conditions, a lack of governance and effective law enforcement. UNOMIG reported that on 1 June 2000, a UNOMIG patrol, including a woman, was taken hostage for five days in the Kadori Valley and that on 4 August 2000, two international field staff workers of the ICRC, both women, together with their male local driver, were kidnapped and held for 10 days in the Pankisi Gorge.

116. UNOMIG reported that in several regions of Georgia, including Abkhazia, one of the greatest threats to the local population, representatives of the international humanitarian organizations and United Nations personnel, seemed to come from loosely organized and poorly commanded paramilitary organizations, some of which may be supported by political circles while others were exclusively criminally motivated.

117. UNOMIG stated that the Commission on the Status of Women should consider the plight of women and children living in "frozen armed conflict" where active military operations have ceased, but where armed combatants remain active. It stated that the situation of women and children in "frozen armed conflict" should also be reflected in the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of resolution 44/1.

118. The United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor (UNTAET) reported that, further to the violence which erupted in East Timor around the ballot of last year, more than 250,000 East Timorese, among them women and children, were forced over the border to West Timor, Indonesia, where they were kept in camps, often under the control of militia groups, and where access to basic needs and services remained poor. UNTAET reported that, in cooperation with UNHCR, UNICEF and international NGOs, more than 250 separated children were returned to their families in East Timor. A further 180 children were also reunited with their families through the Family Reunion Programme of UNTAET and UNHCR, aiming to bring together separated families from each side of the border.

119. The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) stated that it had no relevant information related to the implementation of resolution 44/1 and the United Nations Mission of Observers in Prevlaka (UNMOP) reported that, given its military observer mandate, it has neither the authority, nor the resources or the capability to investigate such matters.

120. In its regular work, the Department of Public Information reported that it had contributed to the implementation of resolution 44/1, particularly through the widespread dissemination of the international instruments on the advancement of women and the human rights of women and children (i.e., the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Beijing Platform for Action, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and its Optional Protocol), the coverage and promotion of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the organization of press conferences in conjunction with special meetings and awareness-raising activities on the issue.

121. No specific information on women and children taken hostage was provided by OHCHR, UNDP, UNRWA, ECA or ESCWA.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> The Egypt Country Team included representatives of: Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), International Labour Organization (ILO), International Organization for Migration (IOM), United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), World Health Organization (WHO), and the World Bank.

<sup>2</sup> Technical Review Meeting. Assessment of Gender Mainstreaming and the Empowerment of Women in Sub-Saharan Africa. A Review of UNDP Support Activities, 20-21 March 2000.

<sup>3</sup> In September 1999, the Secretary-General reconfigured the mandate of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories. His title was changed to United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority. In addition to his responsibilities relating to the occupied Palestinian territory, the Special Coordinator now also has responsibilities for coordinating United Nations development assistance related to the peace process in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic (A/55/137-E/2000/95, para. 2).

<sup>4</sup> See United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories report, Spring 2000, Executive Summary.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
4 January 2002

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Forty-sixth session

4-15 March 2002

Item 3 (a) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: review of gender mainstreaming in entities of the United Nations system

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2001/2 of 24 July 2001 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed concern about the deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-sixth session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report, which covers the period from September 2000 to September 2001, is based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the occupied Palestinian territory and in the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Commission on Human Rights, the United Nations Human Rights Inquiry Commission, and the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority.

3. The report is also based on information submitted by entities of the United Nations system providing assistance to Palestinian people, including the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and the World Bank.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

The unfolding of the crisis

4. In the period under review, the region was marked by the eruption of the Al-Aqsa Intifada, or second intifada. That crisis between the parties led to a year of violent confrontations which left hundreds of civilians dead, mostly Palestinians (approximately 660 of the over 800 people who died were Palestinians), and tens of thousands wounded and permanently disabled,<sup>1</sup> including many women and children.

---

* E/CN.6/2002/1.

5. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs in the Occupied Territories, in its reports (A/56/428 and Add.1 and A/56/491) described several cases of Palestinian women and girls having died or having been wounded by the Israeli Defence Forces (IDF) or by Israeli settlers as a result of the second intifada. For instance, on 3 November 2000, a 14-year-old Palestinian girl who was on her way back from school in Bethlehem was killed (see A/56/428). On another occasion, on 5 January 2001, a 19-year-old Palestinian woman from Hebron died of wounds from IDF fire in a clash which had erupted on the West Bank. On 7 May 2001, a four-month-old Palestinian baby girl became the youngest person to die in the ongoing hostilities after IDF tanks opened fire on the Khan Yunis refugee camp in the Gaza Strip. The infant's mother and grandmother were also seriously injured by shrapnel (see A/56/428/Add.1). In another incident, a Palestinian woman, the mother of three children, was shot by settlers (see A/56/491).

6. The explosive situation on the ground had been further exacerbated by the Israeli settlement policy, the protracted internal and external closures of the occupied Palestinian territory, and the rapid deterioration of the Palestinian economy over the course of the year.<sup>2</sup>

Israeli settlements

7. The expansion of Israeli settlements, the demolishing of Palestinian homes, the destruction of land and the building of bypass roads in the occupied Palestinian territory continued to create difficulties for the Palestinians. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People reported that, in the period from the beginning of the second intifada to 12 September 2001, IDF demolished a total of 559 Palestinian residential buildings and shelled a total of 3,669 residential buildings. In the same period, 112,900 olive trees were uprooted and 3,669,000 square miles of cultivated land destroyed. During 2001, the number of settlers in the occupied West Bank and

Gaza Strip increased by 17,000 and reached nearly 227,000.<sup>3</sup> Such policies continued to have a deteriorating effect on Palestinians living in the occupied territory, including Palestinian women, who, being traditionally employed in the agricultural sector, suffered markedly from the destruction of the land they were cultivating.

8. Episodes of violence against the Palestinian population perpetrated by settlers were frequent. Since the start of the intifada, settlers have killed 16 Palestinian civilians.<sup>4</sup>

Movement restrictions and closures

9. The reporting period was characterized by the most severe restrictions on movement imposed on the Palestinian population and territory since 1967.<sup>5</sup> The Israeli authorities introduced a policy of recurrent and often prolonged closures. The mobility of persons, vehicles and goods was severely restricted on the borders between the Palestinian territory and Israel, between the West Bank and Jordan, and between the Gaza Strip and Egypt. The closure of borders with Israel resulted in the closure of the safe passage route established as part of the peace negotiations, while internal closures within the West Bank and the Gaza Strip led to the establishment of a dense network of Israeli checkpoints which, in turn, resulted in traffic disruption and road blockades.

10. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported that, as a result of the closures, Palestinians were kept waiting for hours at the crossing points. Women carrying babies were kept waiting under the heat of the sun for hours at a time. Delays, increased travel costs and higher instances of road accidents were repeatedly experienced by the Palestinians who, in periods of severe internal closures, were obliged to use secondary and tertiary roads. The Special Committee reported that in many instances Palestinians had to change vehicles in order to go through border crossings (see A/56/491). During this period, Palestinians often risked intimidation and harm by military authorities or settlers.<sup>6</sup> This situation deterred many Palestinian women, particularly older women, from crossing borders for fear of experiencing intimidation and violence, or because of the inconvenience of having to wait at the crossing points for many hours, thus precluding older women from visiting their children and families.

III. Impact of the crisis on Palestinian women and gender relations and measures taken to overcome it

Education

11. During the reporting period, schooling was disrupted by systematic restriction on movement imposed by Israel, which prevented many Palestinian children and youths from reaching their schools on a regular basis. As of June 2001, an estimated 190 schools were reported to have been temporarily closed owing to Israeli military orders, curfews or physical damage.<sup>7</sup> In the centre of Hebron, 34 schools were closed, leaving 460 teachers unemployed and 13,000 students without educational facilities (see E/CN.4/2001/121). Furthermore, 55 per cent of older students experienced difficulties in reaching institutions of higher education and over 1,300 Gazan students enrolled at universities in the West Bank were unable to access their campuses.<sup>8</sup>

12. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported that, in East Jerusalem, an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 Arab children aged between 5 and 18 did not attend school. Tuition fees for private schools were high and there continued to be a shortage of public schools. The city spent only 7 per cent of its education budget on the Arab sector although Arabs constituted 33 per cent of the population. Girls continued to suffer from the insufficient number of schools for them. In the area of Sur Baher, for instance, there was not a single public school for girls (see A/56/428/Add.1).

13. In order to address the situation, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), through the Ministry of Education of the Palestinian Authority and non-governmental organizations supported a community-based education programme in Hebron, involving approximately 200 teachers, which allowed 12,000 children to continue their studies (see A/56/123). UNICEF organized summer training camps for youths as well as education classes for illiterate women. The latter initiative benefited 66 women.

14. Data showed that, in the 2000-2001 academic year, 477,216 pupils were enrolled in the elementary, preparatory and secondary schools of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine

Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), of whom 238,903, or 50.1 per cent, were women. Women accounted for 74 per cent of participants in the UNRWA pre- and in-service teacher training courses and for 65.2 per cent of trainees in the UNRWA technical/semi-professional courses. Of the 431 continuing UNRWA scholarships in 2000-2001, 43.9 per cent were held by women. That number was lower than the number of scholarships offered by UNRWA during the preceding year (673), 45.3 per cent of which benefited women.

15. UNRWA has reported that, during 2000-2001, 25 Palestinian women in Lebanon benefited from a scholarship project aimed at women and managed by UNRWA on behalf of the Canadian International Development Research Centre. Women also held 40 per cent of senior managerial posts in the UNRWA Department of Education.

16. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), through its Sustainable Human Development Unit, developed a project for a gender-sensitive education system aimed at assisting educational organizations in elaborating gender-sensitive curricula which address the specific needs of girls and boys. Teachers were trained to develop modules that incorporated gender concerns into the learning process. The project covered public, private and UNRWA schools.

Health

17. The current emergency situation has caused a severe breakdown in preventive services, including immunization, maternal and child health care and family services. Closures restricted the movement of patients, medical personnel and medical supplies, thus preventing many sick and injured people from accessing the care they needed and resulting in a significant increase in home deliveries, premature deliveries and stillbirths. The health system was under strain, owing particularly to the additional care needed by thousands of individuals who were wounded during the crisis.

18. Restrictions on movement limited access to primary and specialized health care, especially for Palestinians living in rural areas. The sick and wounded, as well as pregnant women, faced restricted access to hospitals. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported that 70 per cent of the citizens in Palestinian areas could not receive medical treatment in hospitals. Many patients died at checkpoints while waiting in ambulances. Owing to restrictions, pregnant women could not go for regular check-ups and some of those women delivered babies while waiting at checkpoints.

19. The Special Committee also reported a fivefold increase in the ratio of home deliveries since the start of the intifada (see A/56/491). UNRWA statistics point to a decline in the utilization of reproductive health services at health facilities. During the crisis, women's access to prenatal care has declined by 18 per cent, deliveries in health facilities have declined by 15 per cent, postnatal care has declined by 13 per cent and access to family planning services has declined by 12 per cent.<sup>9</sup>

20. In order to address the situation, the World Health Organization (WHO) has assumed a leadership role in advocacy and the coordination of the health resources deployed in the occupied Palestinian territory and has set up and coordinated the field task force in the West Bank.<sup>10</sup>

21. UNRWA has reported that the Palestine refugee population had one of the highest birth rates in the occupied Palestinian territory. Approximately one third of women married before the age of 18 years and an equal proportion of women of reproductive age suffered from iron deficiency anaemia. The social, economic and cultural context of women's health has remained underestimated. In order to address those challenges, UNRWA has provided maternal and child health care and family planning services and sustained full immunization coverage for women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases. Those services were supplemented by school health services and the provision of iron supplements for women throughout pregnancy and post-delivery, as well as by health educational programmes on the prevention of tobacco use and prevention of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases. The services were implemented as multisectoral activities targeting school children and women's programme centres.

22. The programme of assistance of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) was adjusted to address the needs determined by the crisis, particularly in relation to basic health services and systems. The emergency assistance included reproductive health supplies, commodities, contraceptives and necessary equipment. It also included training of midwives on basic emergency obstetric care. Through its programme, UNFPA funded three comprehensive women's health centres in Jabalya, Hebron and El Bureij (Gaza Strip).

23. UNFPA also launched a regional gender initiative aimed at integrating gender in reproductive health as well as in developing a monitoring and evaluation system with country-specific indicators. UNFPA, in collaboration with UNICEF and the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, also worked on a project to improve adolescent lives through the integration of sexual and reproductive health into the curriculum of girls' secondary schools. Support for women's health care was also provided through the strengthening of the Women's Health and Development Directorate at the Ministry of Health.

24. In Lebanon, in collaboration with the Palestinian Red Crescent Society, UNICEF undertook a health education campaign which reached 85 per cent of women living in the camps. The campaign included topics such as family planning, safe motherhood practices, control of the spread of HIV and other infectious diseases, personal hygiene, and prevention of malnutrition. In West Bank and Gaza, UNICEF provided psychosocial support for Palestinian women and youth affected by the crisis through projects such as telephone hotlines for counselling.

25. UNICEF's Health and Nutrition Programme included the "Women's Health Project" which, beside upgrading the Obstetrics and Neonatal Units in four Government-operated hospitals, provided more than 140 doctors and nurses with training.

Economy

26. The border closures mentioned in paragraphs 9 and 10 above had a devastating effect on the Palestinian economy. In his report on the Palestinian economy, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority (UNSCO) stated that, according to estimates from the Palestinian Authority's Ministry of Finance and the International Monetary Fund, the Palestinian economy was expected to continue to grow as it had grown for the past three years and that real growth rates for gross domestic product and gross national product for the Palestinian territory were expected to reach 5 and 6 per cent, respectively. Instead, the imposition of movement restrictions and border closures has disrupted the economic progress of the occupied Palestinian territory.

27. Estimates by the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator indicate that the total income losses of the Palestinian economy since the start of the second intifada ranged from $1.8 billion to $2.5 billion.<sup>11</sup> Core unemployment rose from the low of 10 per cent reached in September 2000 to 28.3 per cent by the end of 2000. Despite moderate improvements between the fourth quarter of 2000 and the first quarter of 2001, core unemployment remained high at 26.9 per cent of the workforce. Using a broader measure to include “discouraged workers”,<sup>12</sup> unemployment amounted to 37.8 per cent, an increase of 78 per cent from the pre-crisis levels.<sup>13</sup> According to the World Bank, poverty rates in the occupied Palestinian territory were expected to reach 43.8 per cent by the end of 2001 (see A/56/428), meaning that half of the population would have lived on $2.00 or less a day.

28. The crisis has exerted a structural impact on the Palestinian labour market. While the proportion of wage workers and employers in the labour force declined steeply, particularly as more than 110,000 Palestinian labourers were prevented from working in Israel (see A/56/428), the number of unpaid family workers and self-employed rose. That led to an increase in the “informalization” of the economy as well as to the worsening of labour market conditions in the context of declining domestic production and income.<sup>14</sup> Considering that women are highly represented in the informal labour force, that situation affected women adversely. In situations of crises and widespread poverty, women are forced to take additional economic and social burdens upon themselves.

29. Although comprehensive data on household coping strategies were scarce, existing information suggested that, owing to the increase in poverty, most Palestinian households had reduced overall consumption and were starting to spend their savings. According to a public opinion poll by Birzeit University in February 2001, 84 per cent of respondents indicated that, in order to cope with the economic downturn, they had reduced expenditures, while 55 per cent had spent accumulated savings. Furthermore, 43 per cent of respondents had taken new loans and 22 per cent had sold dowry or wedding gifts.<sup>15</sup>

30. Where women were heads of households, due to the death of their husband or other family members, they had to adapt to changes, including changes in their family role, under strained economic conditions. As a result, many women experienced severe psychological trauma. However, the changing role of women within the family, if accompanied by adequate economic conditions, might provide opportunities for women’s empowerment as women gain new decision-making powers within the household.

31. In order to counter the disastrous economic effects of income and job losses, the organizations of the United Nations system have provided assistance through various welfare and income-generating projects.

32. In 2000-2001, UNRWA, through its Income Generation Programme, granted loans valued at $1.9 million to 3,385 women who supported 22,481 dependants. Since 1994, the Solidarity Group Lending Programme provided loans worth $12.7 million to 18,182 women organized into 2,787 solidarity groups. Those women were granted loans through a graduated lending methodology that allowed them to obtain larger loans at the end of each successful repayment cycle. The programme was self-sufficient with all operational costs and loan loss provisions covered from revenues generated by lending and banking activities. As a result of the current crisis, the annual repayment rate for the programme fell from 98.65 per cent to 87.4 per cent.

33. In its women’s development project in Lebanon, UNICEF supported the camp committees’ microcredit revolving loan scheme, giving priority to ensuring that women benefited directly from the loans. Half of the loans were given to female-headed households and promoted women’s economic self-reliance. The project provided 350 loans as start-up capital, directly benefiting some 2,000 persons. For sustainability and close monitoring purposes, the management of the loans was turned over to the women’s union and camp committees.

34. In the West Bank and Gaza, the World Bank allocated $12 million towards job-creation projects. The projects benefited mainly men as they constituted the majority of workers in infrastructure rehabilitation and agricultural sectors. However, 15 per cent of the jobs created went to women and the percentage of women who benefited indirectly was much higher.

35. The World Bank also implemented the “Second Community Development Project”, which identified the need to include women on microprojects’ committees. The project included targeted interventions, such as promoting women’s training centres and nursery schools in order to benefit women directly. Through the Palestinian NGO Project, the World Bank financed 105 projects which provided development grants. Fifteen per cent of those projects benefited women directly.

36. Through its “Development Market Place 2000 Competition”, the World Bank awarded a pilot project on “Pilot Training Centre for Disadvantaged Youth” which aimed to empower both young women and men through skills training.

37. UNRWA provided direct food and material assistance to special hardship case families, around 47 to 50 per cent of which were headed by women. From July 2000 until June 2001, a total of 33,172 participants benefited from the various activities of the Women’s Programme Centre, such as skills training, awareness-raising lectures on health, social, gender, civic and disability issues as well as legal counselling, play centres and nursery schools. Furthermore, the Poverty Alleviation Programme (PAP) issued over $600,000 in loans to more than 160 women. The Solidarity Group Lending Programme had reached out to more than 260 women’s groups since project-start-up, with a total amount of over $400,000. Self-support programmes, which provided part-grant, part-loan financial allocations to special hardship case families to help them reach financial self-sustainability, benefited over 131 women and their families.

IV. Other measures for women’s empowerment

Human rights

38. With regard to violence and human rights, Palestinian women were impacted at different levels during the reporting period. On one hand, methods of arrest, administrative detention, methods of interrogation, conditions of detention and limited access to family and lawyers had a severe impact on Palestinians (see A/56/491). On the other hand, Palestinian women suffered from gender-related violence within society as well as within the family.

39. With regard to violence from Israeli authorities, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People reported that there were 2,500 Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails, many of whom continued to be subjected to psychological pressure and physical torture. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of Palestinian People and Other Arabs in the Occupied Territories reported that there were 10 female Palestinian detainees in the Ramla Prison Female Section. The Special Committee reported the case of one woman who was beaten and had her hands and legs shackled to a bed from 6 p.m. to 8 a.m. for two days. It also reported the case of two women who were kept in the same section as Israeli criminal prisoners and were subjected to attacks and harassment on a daily basis (see A/56/491). Those women prisoners protested against the prevailing conditions and asked for due representation, access to books, the media, letters, family visits and medical assistance. However, the prison administration did not respond to their demands. Female political leaders were kept together with Israeli criminal prisoners also in the Megiddo prison, where, owing to security reasons, family visits or telephone calls were restricted and access to lawyers was denied.

40. The Special Committee also reported that, on 23 January 2001, a Palestinian woman, suspected of luring an Israeli teenager to his death via an Internet relationship, petitioned the High Court of Justice demanding the right to meet with her lawyer. In her petition, she complained against the interrogation procedures of General Security Service interrogators. However, on 15 February 2001, the High Court of Justice issued a ruling stating that it was legal for the General Security Service to adopt interrogation procedures which would prevent suspects from sleeping, as long as the intention was to advance an investigation (see A/56/428).

41. With regard to gender-related violence within society and the family, a study funded by UNDP, and undertaken prior to the beginning of the second intifada, assessed the existing gaps hindering women from attaining equality and social justice within Palestinian society.<sup>16</sup> The study pointed out that Palestinian women and girls suffered from “honour crimes”, rape, incest and other forms of violence, particularly at the family level. For instance, the study suggested that annually, several girls were either killed or threatened with death for tarnishing “family” honour and that, in the period between 1996 and 1999, 38 cases of “honour crimes” had been documented. It also reported that, according to 1998 statistics issued by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, a total of 115 cases of rape or attempted rape occurred in the occupied Palestinian territory. However, given the taboo surrounding the issue of domestic violence, according to the study, figures did not necessarily adequately reflect the volume of the problem. Gender discrimination was also inherent in criminal legislation whereby the crimes of rape, indecent assault and incest fell under the category of “crimes against public morals and ethics” rather than “crimes against individuals”. Such crimes were thus punished with shorter sentences.<sup>17</sup>

42. In situations of conflict or complex emergencies worldwide, many cases of increasing violence against women and girls are documented. Thus, it might be possible that, even in the occupied Palestinian territory, gender-related violence against women and girls was exacerbated by the political situation owing to the widespread frustration that the conflict was creating among Palestinians.

43. In order to address the issue of violence, the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) implemented a project entitled “Helping victims of sexual abuse in Palestinian and Jordanian societies: strategies to aid disclosure and promote gender awareness within the criminal justice system” in February 2001. The project, implemented through the work of the Women’s Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling in Ramallah and the Jordanian Women’s Union, focused on the sexual abuse of women and the stigma that surrounded the disclosure of such abuse. Project activities included the organization of workshops with girls and boys in public schools, aimed at creating a more open environment to discuss abuse as well as the production of a database on honour killings.

44. The Sustainable Human Development Unit of UNDP, through the Women’s Rights Campaign, funded three television spots on violence against women, as well as a study day on “poverty and violence” in relation to Palestinian women. In order to address the issue of women’s human rights, UNDP also supported the formulation of “A gap analysis report on the status of women in the Palestinian territories in the framework of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women”, carried out in cooperation with the Women’s Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling.

Peace and security

45. In the follow-up to Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000, which recognized the important role played by women in conflict prevention and resolution as well as post-conflict peace-building, the Arab States Regional Office of UNIFEM, together with the Jerusalem office of UNDP, carried out a study on the impact of armed conflict on Palestinian women, in collaboration with the Women’s Department of Birzeit University. The study undertook an analysis of the ways in which the current conflict had altered the status and situation of women, both individually and within the Palestinian community, and how those changes impacted on the provision of social services, education and advocacy support for women in the Palestinian territory. It was expected to be completed by the end of 2001.

Decision-making

46. Despite the contributions of Palestinian women in most areas of development, their participation in the process of decision-making was remarkably low. Data from the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics indicated that, in 1996, women represented only 6 per cent of Legislative Council members, 8 per cent of Palestine National Council members, 8 per cent of Ministers and 8 per cent of Labour Union members.<sup>18</sup> In the judiciary, there were three female judges, but there was no woman judge in the religious courts.<sup>19</sup> There were insufficient statistics on the membership rate of women to make any assessment of the participation of women in all the political parties.

47. On the issue of women in decision-making, UNIFEM funded a project on the Empowerment of women’s leadership which was implemented by the Palestinian Initiative for the Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy. The project promoted gender awareness and capacity-building among Palestinian media professionals.

Awareness-raising

48. In order to create awareness about the situation of Palestinian women regionally and worldwide, the United Nations Department of Public Information undertook several activities. United Nations Radio produced numerous radio programmes, including a programme entitled “Women in black gain prominence”. This international movement of women, initiated in 1988 by a group of Israeli women protesting the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory, spread to many countries as a movement against violence. The Middle East Radio Unit produced seven features on the social, economic and political hardships faced by women in the occupied Palestinian territory. Among its activities on the question of Palestine, the Department of Public Information also organized a training programme for a group of nine Palestinian media practitioners, including four women, aimed at strengthening their professional capacity as media personnel.

Gender mainstreaming

49. UNIFEM implemented a regional project entitled “Post Beijing follow-up operation — phase II”, which achieved tangible results in building the institutional and organizational capacity of the General Union of Palestinian Women, as well as that of the Inter-Ministerial Committee for the Advancement of Women, to implement their national strategies and action plans for the advancement of women in the Palestinian territory. The project built the capacity of gender focal points in non-governmental organizations and line ministries to effectively advocate and mobilize Governments and other stakeholders to integrate a gender equality perspective into national planning and policy-making. It also played a facilitating role in establishing a network of Palestinian journalists around gender issues.

50. The UNDP Sustainable Human Development Unit reported that it was developing a comprehensive strategy to build capacity among the staff of the UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People to adopt a gender mainstreaming approach on the programme and project level and, more generally, to raise the level of awareness on gender issues.

51. The UNDP Sustainable Human Development Unit also initiated a project to support women’s units within various ministries. Furthermore, it funded the establishment of a Gender Statistics Unit at the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, whose purpose was to strengthen the Bureau’s capacity to produce and disseminate statistics related to gender issues.

V. Conclusions

52. In the reporting period, the violent conflict between Israel and the Palestinians had a significant negative effect on Palestinian women. Many women were killed or wounded and/or lost their husbands, children or other family members. Furthermore, the economic and social conditions of women were severely affected by the crisis as poverty rates continued to increase while access to basic services, such as education and health, was severely curtailed for women and girls.

53. During the crisis, the Palestinian Authority, civil society groups and organizations of the United Nations system have made considerable efforts to improve the conditions of Palestinian women and to encourage a negotiated solution. In particular, the United Nations organizations and specialized agencies reacted immediately to the emergency situation and shifted their focus from long-term sustainable development projects to the implementation of humanitarian assistance programmes aimed at meeting the urgent requirements of Palestinian women.<sup>20</sup>

54. In view of the current crisis, it is essential that United Nations entities continue to operate in the occupied territory and the refugee camps and that the focus on the advancement of women, particularly in areas such as education, health, social welfare, human rights, employment and economic empowerment, is strengthened. The meaningful work undertaken by UNRWA, as regards activities which benefit some 3.8 million Palestine refugees, including women and children, should be further supported.

55. Since the status and living conditions of Palestinian women are linked to the achievement of a peaceful resolution of the conflict, new efforts need to be made by the international community in order to end the violent confrontations in the occupied Palestinian territory. In this regard, it is particularly important that women are fully involved in any conflict-resolution and peace-building initiatives to be undertaken in the region in accordance with the Beijing Platform for Action and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000). It is also important that efforts be made to increase women’s full participation in decision-making processes at all levels.

56. The gender perspective should continue to be fully integrated in international assistance programmes, through, inter alia, greater gender analysis and the collection of sex-disaggregated data. It is also important that a gender perspective be introduced in all studies and reports undertaken by the United Nations on the situation of the Palestinian people.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-sixth Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/56/35).

<sup>2</sup> Ibid.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid.

<sup>5</sup> See the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories on the Palestinian Economy, Spring 2001, 6 September 2001, Gaza, Occupied Palestinian Territory, p. 1.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid., p. 2.

<sup>7</sup> See the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories on the impact on the Palestinian economy of confrontation, border closures and mobility restrictions, 1 October 2000 to 30 June 2001, Gaza, Occupied Palestinian Territory, p. 16.

<sup>8</sup> Ibid.

<sup>9</sup> These UNRWA statistics were taken from a presentation made by the United Nations Population Fund entitled "Aspects of the crises: clashes between Palestinians and Israelis".

<sup>10</sup> Ibid.

<sup>11</sup> See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-sixth Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/56/35).

<sup>12</sup> "Discouraged workers" included those who exited the labour force and those of working age who never entered the labour force owing to their belief that it would have been impossible to find a job (see the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories on the Palestinian economy, Spring 2001, 6 September 2001, Gaza, Occupied Palestinian Territory, p. 17).

<sup>13</sup> See the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories on the impact on the Palestinian economy of confrontation, border closures and mobility restrictions, 1 October 2000 to 30 June 2001, Gaza, Occupied Palestinian Territory, p. 10.

<sup>14</sup> Ibid.

<sup>15</sup> Ibid., p. 30.

<sup>16</sup> See the gap analysis report on the status of Palestinian women in the context of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, 2001, pp. 5-8.

<sup>17</sup> Ibid., p. 9.

<sup>18</sup> Statistics were taken from the web site of the Palestinian Bureau of Statistics (<http://www.pcbs.org/english/gender/gdr.htm>).

<sup>19</sup> See the gap analysis report on the status of Palestinian women in the context of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, 2001, p. 14.

<sup>20</sup> The humanitarian assistance programmes of the United Nations system were coordinated through the Humanitarian Task Force for Emergency Needs, established on 3 October 2000. The Task Force was chaired by the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories and comprised representatives of the Palestinian Authority, the United Nations system, the donor community, the International Committee of the Red Cross and key international non-governmental organizations (see A/56/123-E/2001/97 and Corr.1).

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
27 December 2002

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women*Forty-seventh session

3-14 March 2003

Item 3 (a) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: review of gender mainstreaming in entities of the United Nations system

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women*Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between September 2001 and September 2002. It reviews the effects on the situation of women of Israeli settlements and movement restrictions and closures, as well as the effects of the unfolding humanitarian crisis. The report provides an overview of the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system, in particular with regard to economic activities, humanitarian assistance, education and training, health, the human rights of women and the media. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2003/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2002/25 of 24 July 2002 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed concern about the continuing dangerous deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-seventh session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report, which covers the period from September 2001 to September 2002, assesses the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the United Nations Human Rights Inquiry Commission, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967, and the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority. Despite occasional references to the situation of women, the reports of these bodies and individuals rarely provided in-depth analysis of the specific situation of women within the overall population during the reporting period. Two recent studies, focusing on the situation of women, were also consulted in the preparation of the report.<sup>1</sup>

3. The report further reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the World Food Programme (WFP), the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and the World Bank.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. In the period under review, the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including major towns such as Jenin, Ramallah, Nablus and Bethlehem, was characterized by continued violence, which left hundreds of civilians dead and thousands of Palestinians, including women and children, wounded (A/57/63-E/2002/21, para. 4; see A/ES-10/186, sect. III). Between 28 September 2000 and 31 January 2002, the records of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East indicate that an estimated 558 Palestinians were killed in the West Bank, and an estimated 364 Palestinians were killed in the Gaza Strip (A/57/63-E/2002/21, para. 4). Women have been injured near or inside their homes or when attempting to cross checkpoints. They have also assumed the major responsibility as caregivers to the injured.

5. In May 2002, the Security Council held an Arria Formula meeting with two women, one Israeli and one Palestinian. The closed meeting provided an opportunity for the members of the Security Council to hear the views of women from the region, including on the importance of women's equal participation and full involvement in all conflict resolution efforts in the region.

Israeli settlements

6. The expansion of the Israeli settlements, the demolition of Palestinian homes, the destruction of land and the building of bypass roads in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to create difficulties for the Palestinians.<sup>2</sup> In the Gaza Strip over 400 houses were completely destroyed and 200 seriously damaged, leaving over 5,000 persons homeless (E/CN.4/2002/32, para. 29). Women are affected by house demolitions that usually render whole families homeless, with little or no means to rebuild their homes. Carried out without prior notice, families usually find themselves without clothes, food, furniture or other basic necessities, increasing the hardship for women who carry household responsibilities.<sup>3</sup>

Movement restrictions and closures

7. Movement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has been severely restricted (E/CN.4/2002/32, para. 33), with Palestinians being subject to a variety of internal and external closures, curfews, roadblocks and restrictions that prevent or seriously inhibit movement and generally keep people confined to their villages or cities and often to their homes for extended periods, making it extremely difficult for the great majority of civilians, including women, to sustain their livelihoods.<sup>4</sup>

The unfolding humanitarian crisis

8. On 7 August 2002, the Secretary-General appointed Catherine Bertini as his Personal Humanitarian Envoy, who travelled to the region (11-19 August) to assess the nature and scale of the humanitarian crisis, review humanitarian needs and propose recommendations for action. The mission concluded that there was a serious humanitarian crisis in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, inextricably linked to the ongoing conflict, and characterized it as a crisis of access and mobility.<sup>5</sup> During her mission, the Envoy also met with women's groups.

9. As a consequence of the restrictions on movement, normal economic activity, movement of persons and goods, and access to basic services throughout the West Bank and the Gaza Strip have been paralysed, with devastating effects on the Palestinian economy (A/ES-10/186, para. 37 [d]) and sharp declines in all sectors, especially in agriculture, industry, commerce and tourism. Daily Palestinian income losses have been estimated at some $7.6 million. Since the start of the current intifada, overall income losses have been estimated at $3.3 billion.<sup>6</sup>

10. The severe economic depression in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip has led to an increase in poverty, including among women. The Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator estimates that the 60 per cent poverty rate has already been reached, with levels at approximately 55 per cent in the West Bank and 70 per cent in the Gaza Strip. Total economic breakdown has been prevented only with continued injections of budgetary support from international donors. Donor aid, currently at $900 million United States dollars (US$) annually, cannot come close to covering the cumulative losses.<sup>7</sup>

11. Lack of domestic economic activity has led to an almost 20 per cent contraction in employment,<sup>8</sup> raising the unemployment rate from 11 per cent in the third quarter of 2000 to 78 per cent in the second quarter of 2002.<sup>9</sup> This decline has also affected women's labour force participation, which has remained persistently low. Women have been severely affected by the decline in the agriculture sector as they play a major role in agriculture production for the household economy, and loss of land, or of access to land, deprives them of a vital source of income for the household. The decline in agricultural activities not only greatly increases the burden on women to provide for their families, but also negatively affects their status within the household and society.<sup>10</sup>

12. Access to water has been greatly affected by closures owing to obstacles placed in the way of water lorries, the destruction of wells, rooftop water tanks and rain collection pools by shelling, the damaging of water resources by settlers and soldiers and the high consumption of water by settlers (E/CN.4/2002/32, para. 36). The plight of some 200,000 Palestinians who do not have access to a water network and rely mostly on rainfall remains especially difficult. Water costs have tripled in some areas, making it more difficult for families to meet their basic domestic and vital needs. Some of the population reportedly went into debt to purchase water, while others cut consumption or used unclean supplies.<sup>11</sup> The water used is of extremely poor quality and has a detrimental effect on people's health, in particular on the most vulnerable population groups — children, women and the elderly.<sup>12</sup>

13. The ongoing conflict has affected the nutritional and health status of women and children. A recent study funded by the United States Agency for International Development<sup>13</sup> found widespread malnutrition, in particular among children and women of childbearing age, with a significant proportion of chronically malnourished children. Children's levels of moderate and severe malnourishment were found to be at 13.2 per cent for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip combined, with rates in the Gaza Strip five times those of the West Bank (17.5 per cent and 3.5 per cent, respectively). The study also found that women in the Gaza Strip showed a tendency towards a greater prevalence of anaemia, which can lead to low birth-weight infants and premature delivery among pregnant women. A market survey within the study found that market disruptions from curfews, closures, military incursions, border closures and checkpoints affected access to key high protein foods, especially meat and poultry and dairy products, and in particular, infant formula and powdered milk. It also found that a significant portion of the population could not afford high protein foods, and nearly a third had difficulty affording basic inexpensive staples such as bread and rice.

14. According to the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the adverse impact of closures and prolonged curfews on Palestinian villages and towns severely restricted the access of civilians, especially women, to life-saving services such as emergency obstetric care (see A/57/207). Indicators of a breakdown in preventive services in the West Bank, in particular, include an increase in stillbirths and low birth-weight rates, late registration and irregular attendance of pregnant women for antenatal care (see A/57/63-E/2002/21). According to witnesses, the current crisis has adversely affected not only Palestinians' general physical health and health-care facilities, but also their psychosocial well-being. Trauma and stress have already become a serious health problem, especially for women and young people (see A/57/207).

15. The human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has also deteriorated seriously, with severe violations of the human rights of the Palestinian civilian population and a rapid escalation of violence in the region. A report prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (A/57/63-E/2002/21) described the serious gender impacts of the crisis and reported that incidences of gender-based violence within families had been multiplying. The report also stated that the destruction of homes and the death of male heads of household, coupled with men's frustration owing to unemployment and immobility, have resulted in a sharp increase in incest and domestic violence. According to a UNIFEM study,<sup>14</sup> Palestinian women have been subjected to various violations of their human rights including forced displacement, loss of employment and lack of health services. It reported that over the years many women had been arrested for political reasons, held in solitary confinement, forced to give birth in their prison cells, tortured, verbally and sexually threatened, and abused.

16. Education at all levels has suffered seriously since the beginning of the crisis. Some schools have been used by the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) as military outposts; others have been bombed; over a hundred have come under fire, both in the daytime when the schools are in session and at night. School attendance has been hampered by checkpoints, which prevent both pupils and teachers from reaching school on time, and by military curfews. Schools have lost considerable teaching time as a result of interruption and closures; absenteeism is rife as schools no longer provide a secure environment; and academic performance has deteriorated (E/CN.4/2002/32, para. 45).

17. Female pupils and teachers tend to be affected more gravely by the increased problems of access to education and the dangers involved in travelling to and from school, as well as the danger students and teachers are exposed to in schools. Parents have prohibited daughters from attending classes out of fear for their safety, and female pupils and teachers walk long distances in deserted areas to avoid soldiers and settlers. Female teachers are more likely to discontinue working owing to these dangers and to gender-based social perceptions that reduce the woman's role in public life.<sup>15</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

18. While the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has made it difficult for international organizations to provide direct assistance to Palestinian women, the organizations of the United Nations system have continued to respond to their needs.

Economic activities

19. In its Medium-Term Plan for 2002-2005 and its current programme of work and priorities for 2002-2003, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia has given special attention to the socio-economic situation of Palestinian people in general and to Palestinian women in particular. In collaboration with the Arab Gulf Programme for the United Nations Development Organizations and the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics in Damascus, ESCWA is also executing a project to provide gender-sensitive socio-economic data on the situation of Palestinian refugees in Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, more than 60 per cent of whom are women.

20. The United Nations Development Programme has continued to provide support and services to women-owned household economy projects in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. One project aims to create opportunities for women to establish new, or rehabilitate and maintain existing, household economy activities to increase their production and sales volume and improve their financial and technical capacities. The ultimate objective of the project is to secure additional income for poor families, especially in the existing situation, with efforts directed at the poorest areas of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. So far, two Palestinian non-governmental organizations have been contracted to implement such projects in the West Bank. UNDP also supported the establishment of a women's design centre in Bethlehem, which aims to increase the income of rural and urban artisan women and contribute to their sustainable livelihood by promoting Palestinian handicrafts in local and international markets.

21. The United Nations Development Fund for Women launched and continues to support a regional resource network of women's small and microenterprises in the Gaza Strip as well as in Lebanon, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. The aim of the project is to increase women's access to and control over economic resources by upgrading their technical and financial business management skills. The network also aims to strengthen the outreach and sustainability of gender-sensitive small and medium-sized enterprise development programmes, and it promotes cooperation between such institutions.

22. During the period 2001/2002 the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East delivered economic assistance to Palestinian refugees through the provision of credit to microentrepreneurs. UNRWA's microfinance and microenterprise programme granted 2,893 loans to women, valued at $1.36 million. Until the onset of the economic crisis resulting from the closures and restrictions on movement of Palestinian labour and commodities beginning in October 2000, the programme had been fully self-sufficient, covering its costs from credit operations. In 2001, the programme's rate of self-sufficiency fell to 89 per cent as expenditures outstripped income, with declining repayment rates and a reduction in loan size brought about by the closures and economic decline. As a result of the current crisis, the annual repayment rate for the product fell from 97 per cent in 1999 to 91 per cent in 2001 and to 83 per cent in the first half of 2002. However, despite the loss in portfolio efficiency and quality, the women's credit product continued to perform adequately in the face of the enormous pressures facing the business community, and it remains one of the only sources of credit for women microentrepreneurs.

23. From July 2001 to June 2002, UNRWA assisted approximately 6 per cent of its poorest registered refugees (special hardship case families). Out of a total population of almost 4 million Palestine refugees registered with UNRWA, 43 to 52 per cent, depending on the field of operation, are families headed by women. The Agency's special hardship assistance provided those families with a critical safety net in the form of food support and selective cash assistance. The Agency also promoted community participation by and community services for Palestinian refugee women through 70 women's programme centres, which included occupational training programmes, kindergartens and nurseries. A total of 40,240 participants, mainly women and children, benefited from these services. Furthermore, the Agency promoted the self-reliance of Palestinian refugee women through its poverty alleviation programme, which issued $81,750 in small loans during the period under review to more than 70 women and through the solidarity group lending product, which assisted 261 women's support groups with a total of $371,186. Other self-support programmes, which provided part-grant, part-loan financing to help special hardship case families generate income, benefited more than 25 women and their families, with a total amount of $59,265.

24. The United Nations Industrial Development Organization established an integrated support programme to Palestinian industry with a focus on industrial upgrading. The programme is comprised of two major components: (a) building capacity of the Ministry of Industry; and (b) building capacity of the private sector with five subcomponents respectively. While the programme does not have a specific component of assistance to Palestinian women, during the period under review, women were trained in quality management and enterprise upgrading. Women also participated in the training on UNIDO business performance software, and received training in Quality and Enterprise Diagnostic.

25. The ILO Regional Office for Arab States has undertaken activities to provide assistance to Palestinian women. An interregional programme on capacity-building for gender equality, employment promotion and poverty eradication in selected countries of Western Asia and North Africa and in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip is currently under implementation. The main objectives of the programme are to enhance capacities at local, national and regional levels to address the linkages between gender, poverty and employment, and to develop and implement anti-poverty employment policies and programmes that contribute to gender equality. The International Labour Organization has also developed several projects aimed at strengthening the national capacity for promoting women's security and employability in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and at strengthening women's participation in Palestinian trade unions. The ILO also reported that disruption created by the crisis made it impossible to implement the action plan for gender mainstreaming in the Ministry of Labour that it had developed in 2000.

26. In response to the emergency needs, the World Bank manages a total of over $25 million bilateral donor funds destined for job-creation projects. One of the main selection criteria is a project's ability to benefit women directly. The West Bank and Gaza: second community development project, funded by the World Bank, identifies the need to integrate criteria such as inclusion of women, youth and the poor in social appraisals. Targeted interventions, such as promoting kindergartens and training centres for women, will benefit women directly. Under this project, a series of meetings attended only by women enabled them to voice their opinion on the design and implementation of different project components.

27. The World Bank is also implementing its emergency services support project, approved by the Bank's Executive Directors in February 2002, which aims to mitigate the deterioration of basic social and municipal services brought about by the ongoing conflict and its negative effects on economic activity and revenue. The project will, among other things, improve the availability of basic services in the health sector, sustain municipal waste management and secure essential school supplies. Through its country office in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the World Bank, with other donors, is also an active participant in the gender task force.

Humanitarian assistance

28. At the beginning of 2002, the World Food Programme was providing assistance to some 371,000 non-refugee vulnerable Palestinians who had no reliable source of income. To respond to the increased food aid requirements of the non-refugee population in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the World Food Programme merged its ongoing emergency and protracted relief and recovery operations into a new and bigger emergency operation, which was approved jointly with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in May 2002, at a total cost to the World Food Programme of $18.3 million.

29. Women remain the primary recipients of World Food Programme food aid in the Palestinian territories, constituting about 60 per cent of the food aid beneficiaries of WFP's emergency operation, and food aid is used as a means to reinforce the woman's role as a decision maker in society. Around 900 women participated in committees managing food aid at the municipal and village levels. In September 2000, the chairperson of the inter-ministerial relief committee, who was also the Minister of Social Affairs, was a woman, as were 60 per cent of the social workers in the Ministry of Social Affairs. The strong presence of women in social institutions and their active involvement in welfare work ensured that women's needs as beneficiaries and participants were considered.

30. To the greatest extent possible, considering distances to distribution centres and security conditions, the World Food Programme makes all efforts with its partners to distribute the food rations directly to the adult women of registered families. This is considered a tool to strengthen the woman's role within the family. About 55 per cent of food aid recipients at distribution sites were women. Women were encouraged to participate actively in food-for-work schemes that included rehabilitation of agricultural land in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, rehabilitation of water cisterns and rehabilitation of home gardens. Training activities were organized on topics such as food processing, food security, first aid and literacy, where the women who attended received in exchange a monthly ration of food for their families. About half of the persons living in hospitals and charitable institutions who received WFP food aid were women and girls.

31. Until December 2002, the World Food Programme planned to provide food aid to half a million food insecure poor and destitute persons who were either not able to work even if employment were available (among them many female heads of households, disabled or elderly people) or who had been unemployed for over one year. The plan also included some 10,000 people in hospitals and social institutions.

Education and training

32. The education programme of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to be one of the primary means by which the Agency promoted the human resource development of female Palestinian refugees. In the 2001/2002 academic year, 486,026 pupils were enrolled in UNRWA elementary, preparatory and secondary schools, of whom 243,259, or 50 per cent, were female. Of the Agency's 16,168 teachers, 48 per cent were female. Palestinian refugee women accounted for 72 per cent of the participants in UNRWA's pre and in-service teacher training courses and for 64 per cent of its trainees in technical and semi-professional courses. Of the 197 continuing UNRWA scholarships in 2001/2002, 46 per cent were held by women. In addition, during 2001/2002, 58 Palestinian women in Lebanon benefited from a scholarship project addressed to women only and managed by UNRWA on behalf of a donor country. A separate scholarship programme, administered with the support of two international non-governmental organizations and the Cisco Learning Institute, provided training scholarships to 60 disadvantaged Palestine refugees from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Of those, 75 per cent were given to female refugees.

33. The Department of Education of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East/United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) made special efforts to help Palestinian refugee women acquire modern technological skills through a gender-specific project in collaboration with the United Nations Development Fund for Women. The project emphasized equal access to information and communication technologies by Palestine refugee women and men, encouraged gender balance in recruitment and retention policies, built capacity to produce appropriate information content for Palestine refugee women and helped them to fulfil their socio-economic, reproductive and community participation roles. In a further effort to improve the human resources of Palestine refugee women, in 2001 UNRWA revised the admissions policy at its Education Science Faculty in Jordan, which offered pre-service teacher training leading to a first-level university degree, by assigning 50 per cent of the places to qualified Palestinian refugee women in order to promote gender balance in the faculty. UNRWA also sought to promote the human resource capacities of Palestinian refugee women through its recruitment policy. Women occupy 55.5 per cent of senior managerial posts in the UNRWA/UNESCO Department of Education.

34. The United Nations Children's Fund supported the Ministry of Education in the back-to-school campaign, aimed at maintaining high enrolment rates despite economic and mobility difficulties. A media campaign to encourage children to return to and stay in school was conducted, and schools are being supported by UNICEF to provide assistance to 14,000 Palestinian children in need. UNICEF support also reached a considerable number of Palestinian refugee women in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, through a variety of activities. These included training of pre-school teachers, adult literacy sessions, administrative and computer skills training courses, and vocational training for women, including management of small businesses. UNICEF also supported income-generating projects, health education, basic health and first aid concepts, nutrition and early child development, including the detection and prevention of child abuse, and the training of health workers to educate mothers, provide antenatal care and promote breastfeeding.

35. The International Labour Organization faced difficulties in administering training courses. Owing to internal travel restrictions and border closures, Palestinian participants, including women, were unable to attend annual Arabic language courses undertaken in collaboration with the Arab States programme at the International Training Centre of the ILO in Turin. They were also unable to attend courses on women workers' rights, equality in employment and family responsibilities.

Health

36. In order to promote the health status of Palestinian refugee women, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East provided maternal and child health care and family planning services as an integral part of its primary health care. During 2001, more than 76,000 women received antenatal care in the Agency's five fields of operation, representing approximately 59 per cent of all expected deliveries among registered refugees. Approximately 20,800 new family-planning acceptors were enrolled in the programme and the total number of continuing users exceeded 87,000.

37. UNRWA sustained full immunization coverage of women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases, supported by school health services and iron supplementation for women throughout pregnancy and post delivery as well as by health education programmes on the prevention of tobacco use and of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases, which were implemented as multisectoral activities targeting schoolchildren and women. Great attention was paid to improving the access of women to quality care, health information and services. Within the context of its family planning services, the health programme addressed such issues as early childbearing and its consequences for the health of women and children as a matter of high priority. The health programme sought to strengthen its gender-sensitive programming by obtaining, whenever possible, sex-disaggregated data, with the objective of reducing gender-based health disparities.

38. The United Nations Children's Fund continued to facilitate Ministry of Health access to remote and closed areas by making available international staff and a United Nations vehicle, thereby sustaining routine vaccination services in the West Bank. Technical support was given to the Ministry of Health to expand immunization, monitor maternal and child health programmes, and train health workers. UNICEF also assisted in the procurement of vaccines and essential medicines on behalf of the United States Agency for International Development. In response to the growing concern for the nutrition of women and children in the occupied Palestinian territories, UNICEF supported the Ministry of Health's efforts to enhance the capacity of maternal and child health workers in the following areas: providing appropriate child feeding, growth monitoring, advice and referral; coordinating with all key stakeholders to ensure the fortification of flour supplies with iron; proposing more efficient iron and folic acid supplementation programmes; increasing awareness-raising activities on the importance of breastfeeding; and expanding public education programmes, including public health announcements on television.

39. The United Nations Children's Fund supported a women's health project in which the obstetrics and neonatal units of two hospitals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were upgraded with the provision of equipment and support for staff training in quality essential obstetric and neonatal care. To strengthen the maternal care monitoring system, UNICEF supported the updating and printing of registry books for high-risk pregnancy and maternal and child health, in addition to the completion of a verbal autopsy of all deaths of women of reproductive age as part of a national survey on maternal mortality. UNICEF supported psychosocial interventions at the national and district levels conducted by the Palestinian Authority and non-governmental organizations, including the training of social workers to improve their skills; the provision of psychosocial information and services to families; awareness-raising through television spots and brochures for parents; and the delivery of family kits. UNICEF initiated or supported psychosocial coordination and planning in Jenin, Jericho, Tulkarem and the five districts of the Gaza Strip, and continued to chair the United Nations psychosocial coordination group.

40. The outcomes of various nutrition studies by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and its own recent field mission to Jerusalem reinforced that agency's determination to pursue its initiatives to provide assistance for policy formulation and strengthen the institutional capacity of the Ministry of Agriculture, and to support the field activities of the numerous local non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations and other international stakeholders.

Women's human rights, including violence against women

41. Under a technical assistance project, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights funded the women's unit of a non-governmental organization dealing with human rights. The United Nations Development Fund for Women supported the Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to develop strategies to aid disclosure and promote greater awareness within the criminal justice system of crimes of violence committed against women. The project has trained judges on the legal aspects of sexual abuse and provided information on such cases to promote greater public awareness on the issue. Through the Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence Against Women, UNIFEM supports a project to empower Palestinian women to confront and protect themselves against violent behaviour.

Media

42. The Department of Public Information held its annual training programme for Palestinian media practitioners from October to December 2001, in which nine Palestinian broadcasters and journalists, including four women, participated. United Nations radio produced an English magazine entitled "Israeli and Palestinian women offer a model of cooperation" which focused on the Security Council meeting held in May 2002 during which Israeli and Palestinian women were invited to share their views on the conflict in the Middle East. The Middle East Radio Unit produced five features on Palestinian women, including their activities in a non-governmental organization conference held concurrently with the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance in Durban, South Africa in 2001, and their role in helping children to cope with violence. During the reporting period, the Department of Public Information interviewed a number of prominent Palestinian women.

43. The United Nations Development Fund for Women supports a project to strengthen strategic partnerships between media and women's organizations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Through the initiative, a media and women leaders network has been established, and local media and women's organizations have been trained in gender-sensitive reporting and campaigning.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

44. The situation of Palestinian women is inextricably linked to overall developments in the region and to progress in the peace process. There are, however, important and significant differences in how women and men respectively are affected by the socio-economic and political situation. These effects are apparent in such areas as basic social services, including education and health, economic opportunities and means of livelihood, and require particular attention in terms of data collection and analysis as well as remedial action. As the international community seeks ways to end the conflict, it is important that gender perspectives are highlighted and that women are fully involved in the conflict resolution and peace-building initiatives, as called for in the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly.

45. While the reports by relevant bodies and individuals provided valuable information on the overall situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in some instances also referred to the particular situation of women, further opportunities should be sought to highlight fully the specific ways in which the crisis impacts on women as compared with men so that targeted action can be taken to mitigate negative gender-specific impact. The collection of data disaggregated by sex, which is currently insufficient, and specific studies on the impact of the crisis on women in particular areas should be encouraged.

46. The entities of the United Nations system, and especially the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, continued to provide assistance to Palestinian women through humanitarian assistance, as well as projects to enhance women's capacity to provide for themselves and their families and to maintain women's access to education and health. United Nations entities, however, also encountered difficulties in their work as a result of the crisis.

47. Continuing support by the entities of the United Nations system is critical for the benefit of Palestinian women in the occupied territories and refugee camps. As the conflict exacerbates existing hardships and creates new difficulties, continued assistance should focus in particular on such areas as women's employment and economic empowerment, education, health, social welfare and violence against women. Further efforts should be undertaken to explicitly identify and address gender perspectives in all international assistance programmes, in addition to implementing projects specifically targeted to women.

---

Notes

- <sup>1</sup> Eileen Kuttab and Riham Bargouti, “Impact of armed conflict on Palestinian women”, study prepared for the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the United Nations Development Programme/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (2002); and Johns Hopkins University and Al-Quds University, “Preliminary findings of the nutritional assessment and sentinel surveillance system for West Bank and Gaza” (Global Management Consulting Group; Brussels, Care International; and Washington, D.C., United States Agency for International Development, 2002). Available from http://www.usaid.gov/wbg/reports\_1.htm.
- <sup>2</sup> Office of the United Special Coordinator, The Impact of Closure and Other Mobility Restrictions on Palestinian Productive Activities, 1 January 2002-30 June 2002 (United Nations, 2002).
- <sup>3</sup> Kuttab and Bargouti, op. cit.
- <sup>4</sup> Kuttab and Bargouti, op. cit.; Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator, The Impact of Closure ...; Catherine Bertini, “Mission report of the Personal Humanitarian Envoy of the Secretary-General, 11-19 August 2002” (United Nations, 2002), available from http://domino.un.org/bertini\_rpt.htm.
- <sup>5</sup> Bertini, ibid.
- <sup>6</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-seventh Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/57/35), para. 21.
- <sup>7</sup> Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator, The Impact of Closure ....
- <sup>8</sup> Ibid.
- <sup>9</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-seventh Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/57/35), para. 21.
- <sup>10</sup> Kuttab and Bargouti, op. cit.
- <sup>11</sup> Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator, The Impact of Closure ....
- <sup>12</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-seventh Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/57/35), para. 29.
- <sup>13</sup> Johns Hopkins University and Al-Quds University, “Preliminary findings ...”.
- <sup>14</sup> Kuttab and Bargouti, op. cit.
- <sup>15</sup> Kuttab and Bargouti, op. cit.
-

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
22 December 2003

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Forty-eighth session

1-12 March 2004

Item 3 of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between September 2002 and September 2003. It reviews the effects of continued movement restriction and closures, the construction of settlements, outposts and a separation wall, as well as the unfolding socio-economic crisis, on the situation of women. The report provides an overview of the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system, in particular with regard to economic activities, humanitarian assistance, education and training, health, the human rights of women, and the media and advocacy. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2004/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2003/42 of 22 July 2003 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report, which covers the period from September 2002 to September 2003, assesses the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the United Nations Human Rights Inquiry Commission, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967, and the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority. Despite occasional references to the situation of women, the reports of those bodies and individuals rarely provided an in-depth analysis of the specific situation of women within the overall population during the reporting period.

3. The report further reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the World Food Programme (WFP), the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the World Health Organization (WHO) and the World Bank.

4. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/42, ESCWA commissioned a report which provides an overview of the most important demographic indicators over the period 1990-2000, such as population size, age/sex, structure of the population, marriage patterns, fertility rates, types of households and employment status.<sup>1</sup> It further examines the situation of Palestinian women in different areas, such as political participation, the labour market, education and health, and focuses also on poverty among women.

5. The second part of the report provides a review of the political and socio-economic situation facing the Palestinian community as a whole since the inception of the second intifada (29 September 2000) and the particular impact of that intifada on the situation of Palestinian women. The report indicates that women's lives were greatly affected by loss of income, increased poverty and decreased access to health services as well as by the death or injury of family members, including primary breadwinners and children.

6. The report emphasizes the need for mainstreaming a gender perspective in policies and programmes. It also highlights the importance of developing special policies and programmes that will target the vulnerable groups of women, such as women heads of household and women in poverty.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

7. During the period under review, the occupation of Palestinian territory by Israel continued to have a serious detrimental effect on all aspects of the living conditions of the Palestinian people. The Palestinian economy continued to accumulate losses, currently equal to half of its annual gross domestic product. Unemployment increased threefold and poverty rose among more than two thirds of the population. Women and children have borne a special and enduring burden resulting from the occupation.<sup>2</sup>

8. The human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, including the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose a residence, the right to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food, clothing and housing, the right to education, the right to health and the right to life, has drastically deteriorated.<sup>3</sup> The serious violation of economic, social and cultural rights has been accompanied by the continued violation of civil rights and international humanitarian law. Detentions, inhuman treatment and the destruction of property have also multiplied, while Israeli settlements in the West Bank and Gaza continue to grow.<sup>4</sup> Despite some hopes generated by the launching of the road map in early June 2003, a number of concerns were reported in connection with the humanitarian crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>5</sup>

9. According to the Palestine Monitor and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel, between September 2000 and July 2003, the deaths of 2,572 Palestinians and 828 Israelis were recorded as a result of widespread violence. The Palestine Monitor reported that the vast majority of Palestinians killed were male, 325 were children under the age of 15, and 173 were women.<sup>6</sup> Between 1 July 2002 and 30 June 2003, 696 civilians were killed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (413 in the Gaza Strip and 283 in the West Bank), according to the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights.<sup>7</sup>

10. The humanitarian crisis, emerging from sharply increasing unemployment and deteriorating economic conditions due to the Israeli closure policy, has been further exacerbated by the increasing restrictions imposed on access to international humanitarian agencies. Between April and June 2003, access to the Gaza Strip was denied or delayed to international citizens, including staff of United Nations agencies, and international and Palestinian organizations. In May 2003, borders were closed to all international citizens, except diplomatic passport holders, for a period of nine days.<sup>8</sup>

11. According to the Palestinian Ministry of Detainees, women living in the Occupied Palestinian Territories have been arrested in Israel for political reasons.

Prior to the outbreak of the crisis in September 2000, there were three Palestinian women prisoners. Over the past three years, an additional 77 women were arrested, seven of whom are from Jerusalem.<sup>9</sup> Since June 2002, the reunification of Israeli-Palestinian families has been suspended.<sup>10</sup> Under the new Israeli rule, Palestinian women living in East Jerusalem, currently governed by Israel, were regarded as mere residents and were not allowed to give their nationality or residency to their husbands or children.<sup>11</sup>

12. The current crisis continued to affect the situation of Palestinian women. Women's responsibilities within households had expanded due to the death, imprisonment or unemployment of male members of households. Many women were placed in the position of being a primary household provider, caregiver and the main strategist for coping financially, mentally and physically with the new situation.<sup>12</sup>

Movement restrictions and closures

13. Due to the closures of roads, local curfews and the multiplication of checkpoints, thousands of ordinary Palestinian citizens are prevented from going to work, cultivating their fields or sending their children to school. In some cases, women were injured near or inside their homes or when attempting to cross checkpoints in the course of going to work or seeking employment.<sup>13</sup> About 140 checkpoints operated in the West Bank, and 25 to 30 others in the Gaza Strip.<sup>14</sup> Hundreds of farmers lost their income since they were unable to cultivate their fields due to local curfews, road closures and checkpoints.<sup>15</sup> Women have been severely affected by the decline in the agricultural sector, a vital source of income for the household.<sup>16</sup> Many schools were unable to operate for extended periods during curfews. According to the World Bank, 170,000 children and over 6,650 teachers were unable to reach their regular classrooms and at least 580 schools were closed owing to curfews, closures and home confinement.<sup>17</sup> Since September 2002, children and students from kindergarten to the university level in most areas have been unable to attend school for about half of the total school days due to closures and curfews. School closures, loss of employment and economic pressures contributed to an increase in child labour, especially for those under 15 years.<sup>18</sup> Many secondary school students, including girls, failed to reach the examination centres in time for their yearly exams.<sup>19</sup>

14. For security reasons, visas are no longer issued for young Palestinians under 35 years of age to travel abroad or to move from one city of the Occupied Palestinian Territory to another. It was also reported that a number of expectant mothers could not reach the nearest hospital in time and gave birth instead at checkpoints under disastrous hygienic conditions. An increasing number of ambulances have been made to wait for hours at the checkpoints.<sup>20</sup>

The construction of a separation wall

15. According to the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Israeli Ministry of Defence announced on 31 July 2003 that the construction of Phase I of the wall had been completed. Its 145-kilometre route runs from the village of Salem in the north to the "Elkana" settlement, south-east of Qalquilya. During the construction, Palestinian homes were demolished and swathes of land were bulldozed and seized. The completed construction has already resulted in the confiscation of 2,850 acres of high-income Palestinian land. Over 50 communities along the wall's path have been affected. In August 2003, the Israeli authorities issued land expropriation orders for the "Jerusalem Envelope" barrier, which could leave some 50,000 Palestinians isolated on the Israeli side. In early September 2003, the Treasury decided to provide an additional 500 million new shekels (about $112 million) to complete the separation wall in the Jerusalem area. On 1 October 2003, the Israeli Cabinet approved the second phase of the wall, running from "Elkana" to Jerusalem, where a separate network of barriers was being built.<sup>21</sup>

16. In some places the wall is located as much as 6 kilometres inside the West Bank. As a result, villages and communities are physically separated from the rest of the West Bank and have become isolated Palestinian pockets where the inhabitants will be effectively cut off from their land and work places and/or their schools, health clinics and other social services.<sup>22</sup> It was estimated that about 200,000 inhabitants of the West Bank in more than 65 towns and villages will be directly affected.<sup>23</sup>

17. Access to safe drinking water will be disrupted and farmland destroyed, threatening the livelihoods of tens of thousands of Palestinians and damaging a wide spectrum of economic flows and social and educational services. It has been estimated, in accordance with UNICEF statistics, that 100,000 dunums of the West Bank's most fertile agricultural land, confiscated by the Israeli occupation forces, has been destroyed during the first phase of the wall construction. Vast amounts of property, notably private agricultural land and olive trees, wells, citrus groves and hothouses, which tens of thousands of Palestinians relied upon for their survival, have disappeared. In addition, further agricultural land adjacent to the wall has allegedly been declared off limits to Palestinians.<sup>24</sup>

Humanitarian and socio-economic crisis

18. According to the World Bank, at the end of 2002, all Palestinian economic indicators showed a persistent decline. Gross national income per capita had fallen to nearly half of its 2000 level. More than 50 per cent of the Palestinian workforce was unemployed. The portion of the population in the West Bank and Gaza Strip living under the poverty line of US$ 2 per day had increased from 20 per cent in 1999 to 60 per cent by December 2002. The number of the poor had tripled from its level of 637,000 in September 2000 to nearly 2 million in March 2003.<sup>25</sup>

19. The number of work permits issued by Israel declined sharply with the outbreak of the intifada. Only 32,000 permits had been issued by the end of 2002, compared with the figure of approximately 128,000 Palestinians working in Israel and Israeli settlements in September 2000. The proportion of women active in the labour market also continued to decline, falling to 11.6 per cent in the first quarter of 2003, from 13.9 per cent in the third quarter of 2000. The informal labour sector, where women were largely represented, had also been adversely affected by the economic crisis.<sup>26</sup>

20. According to the Humanitarian Plan of Action 2003 for the Occupied Palestinian Territories, compiled by the United Nations Technical Assessment Mission of October 2002, more than 200,000 people who depend on supplies brought in by water tankers were left without adequate water supply for long periods because of curfews and closures. Problems of access were compounded by the fact that a number of water systems (water pipes, pumps and wells) were destroyed and a sizeable number of wells and reservoirs in rural areas have been damaged, destroyed or made inaccessible because of the ongoing violence. A number of West Bank villages adjacent to Israeli settlements have suffered from recurring closures of the main valves on their water networks.<sup>27</sup>

21. The dramatic decline in the standard of living increased malnutrition and has resulted in a worsening of health conditions. According to the World Bank, real per capita food consumption had declined by 30 per cent in the past two years. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics has reported that approximately one in every four women and children under the age of five suffers from mild anaemia, while 15.3 per cent of children under five, and 6.1 per cent of women between the ages of 15 and 49, suffer from moderate anaemia.<sup>28</sup> An update of the nutritional assessment carried out by the World Bank in January 2003 found global acute protein-calorie malnutrition in 9.3 per cent of the children across the West Bank and Gaza (13.3 per cent in Gaza and 4.3 per cent in the West Bank).<sup>29</sup>

22. A joint WFP/FAO Food Security and Nutrition Assessment Mission fielded in April/May 2003 noted that the capacity of Palestinian households to cope was increasingly declining. The mission further indicated that among the negative coping mechanisms adopted by many affected households were reducing expenditures on health and education, resorting to cheaper and less nutritious foods, and eating only one meal per day. A vast majority of Palestinians had become dependent on food aid for their survival.<sup>30</sup>

23. According to UNICEF statistics for June 2003, 38 per cent of Palestinian mothers reported increased difficulties in gaining access to health services and 65 per cent reported that the quality of their food had deteriorated.<sup>31</sup> A sharp increase was observed in the number of births in ambulances or at home, causing distress and complications to mothers.<sup>32</sup> According to the Palestinian Ministry of Health, delays at checkpoints had resulted in 46 women delivering their babies while waiting for permission to pass through, and as a result, 24 women and 27 newborn babies had died.<sup>33</sup> The incidence of psychosocial trauma continued to climb, and it was also reported that 43 per cent of Palestinian women had requested psychosocial support.<sup>34</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

24. While the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories has made it difficult for international organizations to provide direct assistance to Palestinian women, the organizations of the United Nations system have continued to respond to their needs.

Economic activities

25. During the period 2002/03, UNRWA delivered economic assistance to Palestinian refugees through the provision of credit to microentrepreneurs. The Agency's microfinance and microenterprise programme granted 3,748 loans to women, valued at $1.75 million. During the reporting period, nearly 1,250 women received a total of four loans or more each from the Solidarity Group lending product programme. A prime engine of the programme's recovery was the women's lending product, through rising repayment rates that increased to 94 per cent in 2002, and had already reached 91 per cent during the first six months of 2003. The women's credit product remained the most resilient of all of the programme's credit products, and it was catering to an increasing number of women microentrepreneurs who had entered the informal economy as a result of increased household poverty and hardship. The UNRWA Solidarity Group lending product programme remained one of the few sources of credit for such women.

26. During the period under review, UNRWA assisted approximately 6.05 per cent of the poorest registered refugees (special hardship case families). Out of a total population of 4,108,461 Palestine refugees registered with UNRWA, 45.8 per cent were families headed by women. The Agency's special hardship assistance provided those families with a critical safety net in the form of food support and selective cash assistance. The Agency also promoted community participation for Palestine refugee women through 71 women's programme centres, with activities including occupational training programmes, kindergartens and nurseries. A total of 48,757 participants, mainly women and children, benefited from these services. Furthermore, the Agency promoted the self-reliance of Palestine refugee women through its poverty alleviation programme, which disbursed $82,533 in small loans to more than 76 women during the period under review, and through the Solidarity Group lending schemes, which assisted more than 95 women's support groups with a total of $180,470. Other self-support programmes, which provided part-grant/part-loan financing to help special hardship case families generate income, benefited over 20 women and their families, with a total amount of $63,023.

27. UNDP provided its assistance to Palestinian women through project activities targeting female-headed rural households. One project, entitled "Emergency response programme for social infrastructure development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory", was implemented in collaboration with the Ministry of Agriculture and aimed to achieve sustainable food security and income generation through investing in livestock. Another project, entitled "Emergency support to existing small income generation projects", aimed to provide financial and technical support to 30 small, women-run projects. As a result of the stagnation of the economy and the high unemployment rate of the male breadwinners, the small and unsustainable projects run by these women have come to be the only means for income generation for the household. UNDP also continued the implementation of two other projects: "Fund for women's initiatives in local communities" and "Support to the women-owned household economy" in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Through these projects, UNDP continued to provide technical and financial support as well as training for community-based women's organizations, as well as women business owners. These projects benefited 620 women and their families and communities.

28. UNCTAD collaborated with the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry of the Palestinian Authority and the Palestinian Agriculture Relief Committee to support the livelihoods of Palestinian farmers, including women, by assisting them in marketing their large surplus of olive oil.

29. The ILO Regional Office for Arab States has undertaken activities to provide assistance to Palestinian women, including through an interregional programme on capacity-building for gender equality, employment promotion and poverty eradication. The main objective of the programme is to formulate and implement gender-sensitive employment policies and programmes, aimed at eradicating poverty. ILO also reported that disruption created by the humanitarian crisis made it impossible to implement the action plan for gender mainstreaming in the Ministry of Labour that it had developed in 2000.

30. The World Bank effectively incorporated gender dimensions in its activities and actively participated in the Gender Task Force in the West Bank and Gaza. In response to emergency needs, the World Bank managed $25 million in bilateral donor funds for job-creation projects. Of this, a total of about $2.7 million was implemented through non-governmental organizations. One of the main selection criteria for receiving emergency grants was a project's ability to benefit women directly. The Bank supported a counselling centre for women in difficult circumstances, aimed at providing support, therapy, advocacy and vocational training services to Palestinian women subject to domestic violence.

31. In December 2002, the World Bank completed a beneficiary assessment report of the second Community Development Project. In accordance with that assessment, nearly 40 per cent of all schools rehabilitated under the project were girls' or co-educational schools. The Bank constructed a girls' orphanage residence, provided vocational training to women under the development grants and provided an integrated educational programme to women with children under the project on the development of the mothers' school.

32. ESCWA formed a special task force on the socio-economic rehabilitation of Palestinian people. A gender perspective has been mainstreamed into the formulation of planned projects and programmes. ESCWA provided technical assistance to producers of gender statistics in Palestine.

Humanitarian assistance

33. WFP sent several missions to the Occupied Palestinian Territory to assess the scale of the humanitarian crisis and suggested measures to prevent further deterioration of the situation. The United Nations Inter-Agency Technical Assessment Mission, led by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, visited the area in October 2002, following the assessment mission of the Personal Humanitarian Envoy of the Secretary-General of the United Nations in August 2002. WFP approved the expansion of its emergency operation for a period of one year at a total cost of $31 million, in order to specifically address the needs of 530,000 vulnerable non-refugees. In 2003, WFP began a supplementary feeding programme for 6,145 malnourished children and their families in Gaza and the southern West Bank. WFP also provided 11,190 metric tons of foodstuff to the International Committee of the Red Cross to assist 180,000 hardship cases in the rural areas of the West Bank. WFP encouraged women to receive their food entitlements directly at distribution sites to increase the effective utilization of food assistance at the household level. As a result of these efforts, over 55 per cent of food aid recipients in the Palestinian territories were women.

34. Between February and June 2003, FAO and WFP jointly undertook a comprehensive food security and nutrition assessment across all districts of the West Bank and Gaza. One key objective was to understand and document the conditions affecting the livelihood, food security and nutritional vulnerability of the population, men as well as women. The assessment examined, in particular, the food security and nutritional status of women and children. The assessment report is being finalized and will provide, inter alia, a series of recommendations for addressing the special needs of both women and men in the West Bank and Gaza.

35. FAO supported the Ministry of Agriculture of the Palestinian Authority, in collaboration with the UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (UNDP-PAPP), in the preparation of an agriculture revitalization programme (ARP) for the West Bank and Gaza Strip. The programme is an intermediate phase between emergency assistance and sustainable rehabilitation leading to longer-term agricultural development. It aims to improve rural livelihoods by first maintaining and then revitalizing agricultural activities in the West Bank and Gaza. FAO's support under the agriculture revitalization programme focused on livestock production, horticulture, rehabilitation of small-scale irrigation, marketing and capacity-building.

Education and training

36. The UNRWA education programme continued to be one of the primary means by which the Agency promoted the human resource development of female Palestine refugees. In the 2002/03 academic year, 490,949 pupils, of which 245,733 or 50.1 per cent were female, were enrolled in UNRWA preparatory, elementary and secondary schools. Of the Agency's 15,163 teachers, 48.4 per cent were female. Palestine refugee women accounted for 66.6 per cent of participants in the UNRWA pre- and in-service teacher training courses and for 33.3 per cent of its trainees in technical and semi-professional courses. Of the 56 continuing UNRWA scholarships in 2002/03, 48.2 per cent were held by women. During the same period, 90 Palestinian women in Lebanon benefited from a scholarship project addressed to women only and managed by UNRWA on behalf of a donor country. A separate scholarship programme, administered with the support of two international NGOs and the Cisco Learning Institute, provided training scholarships to 60 disadvantaged Palestinian refugees from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, 50 per cent of which were given to female refugees.

37. The Department of Education of UNRWA made special efforts to help Palestine refugee women acquire modern technological skills through a gender-specific project in collaboration with UNIFEM. The project emphasized equal access to information and communication technologies by Palestine refugee women and men, encouraged gender balance in recruitment and retention policies, built capacity to produce appropriate information content for Palestine refugee women and helped them to fulfil their socio-economic, reproductive and community participation roles. In a further effort to improve the capacity of Palestine refugee women, UNRWA continued its admission policy to its pre-service teacher training programme leading to a first-level university degree by assigning 50 per cent of the places to qualified Palestine refugee women, in order to promote gender balance among the faculty members. UNRWA also sought to enhance the capacities of Palestine refugee women through its own recruitment policy: women occupy 55.6 per cent of senior managerial posts in the UNRWA Department of Education.

38. UNICEF supported alternative education projects in areas suffering from strict closures to ensure the opportunity for children to continue learning. UNICEF also supported initiatives to keep children in school, such as the back-to-school campaign to ensure that 1 million Palestinian children could attend school and remain in school throughout the school year. Specific interventions focusing on current and potential girl dropouts were implemented in four villages in the Bethlehem district, where the highest rate of girl dropouts was reported. These interventions included life-skills-based education for 700 girls. In addition, UNICEF supported 48 awareness-raising sessions for parents to advocate for the importance of girls' education in strengthening the economy and in national development.

39. In an effort to support and empower women, WFP provided food assistance to poor women and adolescent girls as an incentive for them to attend education and training programmes. The programmes focused on literacy, food management and income-generating skills, such as harvesting of olives for commercialization and raising animals for household consumption and sale.

Health

40. In order to promote the health status of Palestinian refugee women, UNRWA provided maternal and child health care and family planning services as an integral part of its primary health-care programme. During 2002, more than 79,900 women received antenatal care, representing approximately 60 per cent of all expected deliveries among registered refugees. Approximately 21,000 new family-planning acceptors were enrolled in the programme and the total number of continuing users exceeded 90,000. UNRWA sustained full immunization coverage of women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases and supported school health services and iron supplementation for women throughout pregnancy and post-delivery. It also sustained health educational programmes on the prevention of tobacco use and of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases, which were implemented as multisectoral activities targeting school children and women. Attention was placed on improving access of women to quality care, information and services. Within the context of its family planning services, the health programme addressed such issues as early childbearing and its consequences for the health of women and children as a matter of high priority. The health programme sought to strengthen its gender-sensitive programming by obtaining, whenever possible, sex-disaggregated data, with the objective of reducing gender-based health disparities.

41. UNFPA devoted a significant proportion of its programme to ensuring women's access to appropriate and quality reproductive health care, especially emergency obstetric care and psychosocial counselling. The programme focused primarily on: the training of health professionals, including physicians, nurses and midwives in emergency obstetric care (EOC) at the community level; organization of a community campaign to disseminate information on the EOC training through the Union of Palestinian Medical Relief Committees, a Palestinian NGO; and continuation of delivery of essential drugs for family planning and reproductive health at a time when the Ministry of Health and NGO service providers were severely hampered by a lack of such supplies.

42. UNFPA also provided comprehensive support to women's health centres. Counselling services were organized at three women's health centres in El-Burej, Jabaliya and Hebron for traumatized women and their families. The women's health centres in Bureij and Jabaliya continued to provide quality reproductive health care to women in the most populated and underprivileged areas of the Gaza Strip, despite continued restricted access to the refugee camps. These centres, in collaboration with a number of local organizations, including the Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling (WCLAC), took a proactive role in the communities to curb the increasing level of violence against women. In 2003 WCLAC developed a manual on legal and psychosocial assistance in reproductive health and 15 health-care providers were trained.

43. WHO provided support for strengthening the capacity of the Ministry of Health to lead and coordinate the health sector. WHO participated in a health sector review which addressed, inter alia, issues affecting women. WHO also worked on the reorganization and upgrading of mental health services and reorienting its approach to the community level, so that more women might benefit. WHO participated in a number of thematic group discussions aimed at improving the situation of Palestinian women.

44. UNFPA, WHO and UNICEF developed an advocacy network to promote access to health care as well as to raise awareness on the precarious health situation, particularly for women in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Communication professionals from UNICEF, UNFPA, UNRWA, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and WHO meet regularly to coordinate their advocacy activities. UNFPA assisted the Ministry of Health in producing a documentary film on the adverse impact of the closures on access of women in labour to hospitals, and on the reproductive rights of Palestinian women.

Women's human rights including violence against women

45. Under a technical assistance project, OHCHR has supported the Palestinian Authority since 1996 to ensure that national laws are in compliance with international human rights standards and norms. This has had a positive impact on women who encounter gender-based discrimination and domestic injustices. OHCHR funded the Women's Unit of LAW, a human rights NGO which provides legal counselling to women facing gender-based discrimination and inequality. It also offers legal aid and representation before government bodies, institutions and courts of law for women engaged in litigation to redress violations of their human rights. The Women's Unit has undertaken research on the effect of Palestinian law on women's rights, with a view to formulating recommendations for consideration by the Palestinian Legislative Council. The adoption of these legal recommendations, as well as their implementation, is closely monitored by the Women's Unit. In addition, OHCHR organized a number of training courses in human rights for different target groups, such as lawyers, prison officials, women leaders, journalists, official staff of the Palestinian National Authority, prosecutors and health-care personnel. Of the 249 participants in these training courses, 65 were women. In Gaza, OHCHR organized a four-day intensive training course for women leaders, entitled "Women and Human Rights", with the aim of strengthening the capacity of women in the area of human rights.

Media and advocacy

46. The Department of Public Information held its annual training programme for Palestinian media practitioners, in which eight Palestinian broadcasters and journalists, including three women, participated. In March 2003, the Department revised and updated the publication entitled “The Question of Palestine and the United Nations”<sup>35</sup> in all United Nations official languages and widely disseminated it to all United Nations offices in the field. Chapter 9 of the booklet specifically addresses issues concerning Palestinian women. United Nations Radio provided extensive coverage on the various aspects of the situation in Palestine which impact on the lives of Palestinian women.

47. UNIFEM supports a project to strengthen strategic partnerships between the media and women’s organizations in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Within the context of this initiative, a media and women leaders network has been established and local media and women’s organizations have been trained in gender-sensitive reporting and campaigning. In addition, gender units were set up at 17 independent television stations.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

48. During the period under review, the living conditions of Palestinian women have drastically declined. The deteriorating economic conditions, due to the Israeli closure policies, have resulted in widespread unemployment, a decline in standards of living and an increase in poverty, while access to basic services such as education and health was severely curtailed. The humanitarian and socio-economic crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has reached unprecedented levels. The capacity of Palestinian women to cope with this new situation has been declining, and the number of women dependent on emergency assistance, particularly food assistance, has risen. Women have also become subject to increasing violence.

49. The status and living conditions of Palestinian women are linked to the achievement of a peaceful resolution of the conflict. There are important differences in how women and men respectively are affected by the socio-economic and political situation, which are apparent in such areas as basic social services, including education and health, economic opportunities and means of livelihood. These differences need to be taken into account in research, data collection, policy and strategy developments and implementation and monitoring of projects and programmes on the ground. It is also important that efforts be made to increase women’s full participation in decision-making processes at all levels. As the international community seeks ways to end the conflict, it is important that gender perspectives are highlighted and that women are fully involved in the conflict resolution and peace-building initiatives, as called for in the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, as well as in Security Council resolution 1325 (2000).

50. As a result of the deterioration of the humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the United Nations system faced the challenge of adopting a two-track strategy, handling both emergency humanitarian assistance to the rapidly growing socio-economic crisis and the continuation, whenever and however possible, of ongoing development programmes.<sup>36</sup> Despite the difficult working conditions, the entities of the United Nations system, especially the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, continued to provide assistance to Palestinian women through humanitarian assistance, as well as projects aimed at enhancing women's capacity to provide for themselves and their families, and to maintain women's access to education and health.

51. It is essential that United Nations entities continue to operate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps. As the conflict exacerbates existing hardships and creates new difficulties, continued assistance to Palestinian women, focused on food security, nutrition, psychosocial/trauma counselling, health, including reproductive health, education, human rights and economic empowerment, should be provided. Special attention should be given to the difficult situation faced by women where their responsibilities have expanded to include that of primary household provider or caregiver due to the death, injury, detention or unemployment of the male members of the family, and to increased poverty due to movement restrictions and closure and the construction of a separation wall.

52. While the reports by relevant bodies provided valuable information on the overall situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and increasingly referred to the particular situation of women, further opportunities should be sought to highlight fully the specific ways in which the crisis impacts on women as compared to men so that targeted actions can be taken to mitigate negative gender-specific impacts. The collection of data disaggregated by sex, which is currently insufficient, and specific studies on the impact of the crisis on women in particular areas, should be encouraged. In this regard, the linkage between the current crisis and the increase in domestic violence could be further explored. Efforts should be undertaken to explicitly identify and address gender perspectives in all international assistance programmes, in addition to implementing projects specifically targeting women. All reports on the overall situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory should include attention to the specific situation of women and girls in accordance with Security Council resolution 1325 (2000).

Notes

<sup>1</sup> Eileen Kuttab, "Palestinian women: situation analysis 1990-2003" (Women Studies Institute, Birzeit University, Palestine, November 2003).

<sup>2</sup> A/58/75-E/2003/21, Summary, p. 2.

<sup>3</sup> See A/58/311, paras. 24-75.

<sup>4</sup> E/CN.4/2003/30, para. 2.

<sup>5</sup> A/58/311, Summary, p. 2, and para. 33; A/58/75-E/2003/21, para. 3; the text of the road map is contained in S/2003/529, annex. The Quartet (composed of the United States of America, the United Nations, the European Union and the Russian Federation) formally presented its road map to the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority on 30 April 2003.

- <sup>6</sup> Information received 16 September 2003 from the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories (UNSCO), para. 2.
- <sup>7</sup> A/58/311, para. 71.
- <sup>8</sup> Ibid., para. 43.
- <sup>9</sup> UNSCO, op. cit., para. 4.
- <sup>10</sup> A/58/311, para. 59.
- <sup>11</sup> UNSCO, op. cit., para. 5.
- <sup>12</sup> Ibid., para. 4.
- <sup>13</sup> Ibid., para. 3.
- <sup>14</sup> A/58/311, para. 34.
- <sup>15</sup> Ibid., para. 53.
- <sup>16</sup> UNSCO, op. cit., para. 11.
- <sup>17</sup> A/58/88-E/2003/84, para. 8.
- <sup>18</sup> A/58/311, para. 59.
- <sup>19</sup> Ibid., para. 35.
- <sup>20</sup> Ibid., para. 35.
- <sup>21</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-eighth Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/58/35), para. 22.
- <sup>22</sup> The Impact of Israel's Separation Barrier on Affected West Bank Communities. Report of the Mission to the Humanitarian and Emergency Policy Group of the Local Aid Coordination Committee, May 2003, p. 3, para. 1.
- <sup>23</sup> A/58/311, para. 26.
- <sup>24</sup> Ibid.
- <sup>25</sup> A/58/88-E/2003/84, para. 9.
- <sup>26</sup> UNSCO, op. cit., para. 6.
- <sup>27</sup> E/CN.4/2003/30, para. 15.
- <sup>28</sup> A/58/88-E/2003/84, para. 8.
- <sup>29</sup> Twenty-Seven Months — Intifada, Closures and Palestinian Economic Crisis: An Assessment (World Bank, Washington, D.C., May 2003), para. 18.
- <sup>30</sup> A/58/311, para. 56.
- <sup>31</sup> Ibid., para. 61.
- <sup>32</sup> Ibid., para. 62.
- <sup>33</sup> A/58/75-E/2003/21, para. 51.
- <sup>34</sup> A/58/311, para. 63.
- <sup>35</sup> DPI/2276.
- <sup>36</sup> See A/58/75-E/2003/21.
-

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
10 December 2004

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women*Forty-ninth session

28 February-11 March 2005

Item 3 of the provisional agenda

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the special session of the General Assembly entitled*“Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”*Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women*Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between October 2003 and September 2004, in reference to Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/56 of 23 July 2004. It reviews the unfolding humanitarian and socio-economic crisis in the situation of women and provides an overview of the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system, in particular with regard to economic activities, humanitarian assistance, education and training, health, the human rights of women, and the media and advocacy. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2004/56 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-ninth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report, which covers the period from October 2003 to September 2004, reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied by Israel since 1967. The reports of those bodies and individuals made occasional references to the situation of women but did not provide in-depth analysis of the specific situation of women within the overall population during the reporting period. The Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences visited the Occupied Palestinian Territory in June 2004. However, the report on that visit was not available at the time the present report was prepared (see para. 38 below).

3. The report further reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO), the Department of Public Information, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the World Food Programme (WFP), the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the World Health Organization (WHO), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and the World Bank. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/56, the report also draws on information contained in the report prepared by ESCWA on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan (A/59/89).

4. The first part of the report provides a review of the second intifada (from 29 September 2000) and its specific impact on the situation of Palestinian women, as well as the political and socio-economic circumstances of the Palestinian community in general. The second part of the report provides information on how the United Nations system has continued to assist Palestinian women.

5. Taking into account that women tend to suffer disproportionately during times of political unrest and instability, the report stresses the need to mainstream gender perspectives in policies and programmes to ensure that the concerns and needs of both women and men are addressed.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

6. In the period under review, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People expressed grave concern over the devastating effects of the occupation on the lives of the most vulnerable members of Palestinian society, women and children.<sup>1</sup> The Committee noted that the hardship of daily life was felt most acutely by Palestinian women who carried the burden of responsibility within the household because of the death, imprisonment or unemployment of male members.<sup>2</sup> UNSCO reported that women also assumed the additional burden of responsibility as caregivers to the injured in the absence of adequate institutional services in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

7. It also reported that Palestinian women were among those who had died since the onset of the crisis. Between September 2000 and September 2004, more than 3,500 Palestinians had died, including approximately 650 children under the age of 18 and 250 women.

8. Over the past four years, the number of women detainees in prison increased. According to UNSCO, prior to the outbreak of the crisis, there were three Palestinian women prisoners. Since then, an additional 300 women have been arrested, of whom 103 remained in prison in September 2004. Furthermore, the death, imprisonment and unemployment of adult male members of the community increased poverty and social burdens that contributed to increased domestic violence and stress (A/59/89-E/2004/21, para. 58).

9. According to UNRWA, the social, economic and cultural context of women's health remained challenging during the period under review owing to the high birth rate of Palestine refugee women. In particular, malnutrition continued to have a major impact on the lives of Palestinian women and children. WHO reported that during a home visit programme conducted by the Ministry of Health, 69.7 per cent of 1,768 expectant women, within one month of delivery, were found to be anaemic. UNRWA indicated that in 2003 the anaemia rate of nursing mothers accessing its services was 15.3 per cent, and that the anaemia rate of pregnant women was 38.3 per cent. UNSCO reported that the nutritional health status of women and children was also affected by the internal closures. In particular, the closure policy impacted greatly on food security, which led to a decline in both the quantity and the quality of food of 73 per cent of the West Bank and Gaza Strip populations, with four out of 10 households identified as chronically insecure by FAO.

10. Human rights violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to destroy the fabric of Palestinian society (A/59/256, para. 6), including the rights to freedom of movement, to choose a residence, to an adequate standard of living including adequate food, clothing and housing, to education, to health and to life, all of which continued to drastically decline (A/59/381, paras. 30-86). Land confiscation and the destruction of cultivated fields and houses reached unprecedented levels. Families and communities were divided, farmers were denied access to their land, workers to their jobs, children and youth to schools, colleges and universities and women and children to basic health and social services (A/59/381, para. 30). With the continued demolition of houses and destruction of property, damage to public structures and properties reached an estimated US$ 1.2 billion.<sup>3</sup> In addition, Palestinian women in prison were reported to have been subjected to torture or inhuman and degrading treatment (A/59/256, para. 6).

11. Restrictions on the movement of goods and persons continued to exacerbate the humanitarian crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory by increasing unemployment and poverty, preventing health care and interrupting education (A/59/89-E/2004/21, para. 14). The ILO noted that mobility restrictions entailed different consequences for men and women. Regarding access to education, restrictions affect female teachers and pupils more than their male counterparts, owing to the difficulties and dangers they face travelling to and from schools. Fearing for their safety, parents may keep daughters from attending classes. Female teachers are more likely to stop going to work when they have to walk long distances in isolated areas to avoid checkpoints and settlers.<sup>4</sup>

12. UNFPA reported that access issues continued to be an important barrier to women's utilization of appropriate reproductive health care, including family planning and obstetric care. Soldiers at checkpoints prevented ambulances and individuals on their way to health-care facilities from reaching the nearest hospital (A/59/381, para. 79). UNSCO noted that medical personnel were unable to reach their place of work regularly and that distribution of medical supplies to rural areas was difficult. Delays have resulted in women delivering their babies while waiting to pass, which has led to maternal and infant deaths.<sup>5</sup>

13. The severe economic depression of the Palestinian economy since September 2000 continued unabated during the reporting period.<sup>6</sup> Reality of life in the occupied territories is one of economic strangulation, with consequent far-reaching social impacts.<sup>7</sup> The mild economic recovery reported in 2003 was short-lived, with trade flows remaining below pre-intifada levels.<sup>8</sup> The World Bank reported that Palestinian business owners and managers continued to report difficulties arising from internal closures that hampered their ability to receive necessary inputs and to market goods. The Bank indicated that in 2004 domestic employment had recovered to the extent that the number of Palestinians employed in the West Bank and Gaza surpassed pre-intifada levels. However, it was reported that the number of unemployed had increased, from 73,000 in the third quarter preceding the intifada in 2000, to 198,000 currently.<sup>9</sup> Low levels of employment resulted in high levels of poverty among Palestinians, particularly women. According to the World Bank, by mid-2004, 47 per cent of Palestinians lived in poverty, on less than $2.10 per day. Female-headed households display an incidence of poverty 1.3 times higher than households headed by men.<sup>10</sup> Community and family disapproval of women's work in the absence of male breadwinners are major obstacles to women seeking wage employment.<sup>11</sup>

14. In spite of high-level educational attainment, women remained marginalized in the labour market. The International Labour Organization reports that the generally positive correlation between female education and labour force participation was not applicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Women's labour force participation remains low, in spite of their high and successful secondary school enrolment. That observation was attributed to the high fertility rate among Palestinian women, relatively early marriage and large families. Those factors, coupled with the large numbers of male Palestinian prisoners, the high number of persons killed in conflict and the destruction of homes, placed increased pressure on the care economy, and specifically on women, the primary providers of care.<sup>12</sup>

15. In cases where women participate in the labour market, they are mostly located in the agriculture and service sectors. Women are deeply affected by movement restrictions and closures, which affect agricultural production.<sup>13</sup> The ILO observed that, by comparison with men, women are disadvantaged in terms of wages and social security benefits, and that there are unequal barriers for women entrepreneurs in terms of property and inheritance rights, access to credit, penal liability and the availability of childcare facilities. Households resorted to a variety of strategies to cope with the sharp fall in income, including reducing expenditure and consumption, postponing payment of bills, applying for credit, seeking family support, engaging in subsistence activities and other measures.<sup>14</sup> The ILO also found that coping strategies of households tend to fall disproportionately on women and to restrict women's options.<sup>15</sup>

16. UNSCO carried out field research in 30 West Bank rural communities in 2004 and found that women attempted to substitute for the loss of male income, even if that entailed travel and overnight stay outside the community. In addition, field research revealed that, although some women found work in textile workshops, the majority worked inside the community as unpaid family agricultural labourers. It was also found that women's entry into the labour force did not result in economic development, but, instead, added to existing domestic and childcare burdens.

17. According to UNICEF, there are significant gaps in the female literacy rate — only 87.4 per cent — compared with a 96.3 per cent male literacy rate. UNICEF reported that the gaps are most prominent among the older population. School enrolment rates at the basic, secondary school and post-secondary levels grew during the past decade and are roughly the same for boys and girls. Furthermore, enrolment was slightly higher for girls than boys at the first two levels. UNICEF also reported that a substantial number of males and females aged 10-24 years do not continue to secondary education. The main reason for boys and young men dropping out was attributed to lack of interest in education, which could be an indication that starting work is a higher priority for men and boys. On the other hand, the figures for girls show that nearly half (46.5 per cent) drop out because of marriage.<sup>16</sup>

18. Efforts were made to address discrimination against women and the concerns of Palestinian women through the newly established Ministry of Women's Affairs. Previously a sub-unit of the Ministry of Planning, the Ministry of Women's Affairs was mandated to reinforce the gender mainstreaming strategy that previously had been the major responsibility of focal points in various ministries. According to UNDP, a number of objectives have been identified to address the low participation of women in the labour force (only 11 per cent of women of employment age participate in the labour force) owing to low salaries, compared to those of men, and poverty among female-headed households. The objectives include upgrading governmental political commitment to include gender, democracy and human rights issues in the policies and plans of the various ministries and relevant legislation and regulations; linking lobbying and advocacy activities with the development of policies and laws; and building a network of links with women governmental institutions and non-governmental organizations and human rights organizations at the regional and international levels, and exchanging experience with them on the implementation and support of international conventions on women and human rights, in particular the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

Economic activities

19. The World Bank reported on a number of projects aimed at improving the situation of Palestinian people, including women. The 2005 higher education project aims at strengthening the capacity of the Ministry of Education and Higher Education and at providing support to higher education institutions to improve the management, quality and relevance of programmes. The objectives of the $80-million social safety net reform project are to protect and enhance the human capital of children in the poorest households and to strengthen the institutional capacity of the Ministry of Social Affairs to assist in the implementation of the special hardship case programmes. Under an improved targeting scheme, poor adult women living on their own because of separation, divorce or widowhood will receive cash assistance from the special hardship case programmes. Children suffering from malnutrition and women of childbearing age benefit from the second emergency services support project, which is supported by a Trust Fund grant and co-financed by five other donors in the amount of $40 million.

20. The World Bank also implemented the second Palestinian NGO project. A main selection criteria for receiving emergency grants is the project's ability to reach women as direct beneficiaries. Under the project, a counselling centre for women in difficult circumstances was designed with the objectives of providing support, therapy, advocacy and vocational training services to Palestinian women subject to domestic violence, and to build institutional capacity aimed at reducing the incidence of violence against Palestinian girls and women. The project is financed by the Government of Italy through the World Bank. The Gaza industrial estate project development objectives are to increase direct and indirect employment in Gaza and to contribute to the gross domestic product of Gaza by creating conditions conducive to private sector industrial investment, including appropriate physical infrastructure. The project has a well developed management information system and includes a breakdown of workers by sex, which is monitored and updated on a monthly basis. Although employment figures under the project are currently below expectations owing to the crisis, on average there are about 100 women employed by tenant firms representing approximately 18 per cent of total employment.

21. The ILO established a Palestinian fund for employment and social protection. The fund provides a strategic framework for mobilizing resources to improve the social conditions of the Palestinian people, who are suffering from both occupation and diminishing welfare. It also serves as a tool for the consolidation of all activities undertaken to generate employment and provide social protection, ranging from technical advice and capacity-building to direct financial assistance. The fund is expected to integrate a significant gender component and to apply a gender mainstreaming approach. In selecting projects, consideration will be given to activities that support the employment and social protection needs of Palestinian women and men workers. Project proposals will be evaluated to ensure attention to gender equality concerns.

22. UNDP initiated a number of projects aimed at women's economic empowerment. As part of its Emergency Response Division, the UNDP programme of assistance to the Palestinian people continued to work with the Ministry of Agriculture to execute a poverty alleviation project targeting female-headed rural households. The project aims at achieving sustainable food security and creating a source of income for rural women in the West Bank and Gaza Strip through investing in livestock. In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, 42 small agricultural income-generating projects for female-headed households have been established. Another project provides emergency support to existing small-income generation projects run by female-headed households. The project aims at providing financial and technical support to 30 small women-run projects that were affected as a result of the ongoing political crisis. As a result of economic stagnation and the high unemployment rate of male breadwinners, the small and unsustainable projects run by those women are the only means for income generation for the households. Support to those small projects aims to increase their sustainability and potential for generating income for the households.

23. UNRWA reported granting 4,498 loans valued at $2.47 million to women through its microfinance and microenterprise programme. The microcredit community support programme also issued more than $880,000 in loans to both low-income families and entrepreneurs, including women.

Humanitarian assistance

24. As follow-up to an FAO/WFP food security and nutrition assessment undertaken across all districts of the West Bank and Gaza Strip in 2003, FAO reported working on the establishment of a multisectoral integrated food insecurity and vulnerability information system. The objective is to facilitate stakeholders' access to comprehensive, up-to-date and user-friendly information on food security, nutrition and vulnerability. Institutional mechanisms and capacity for the collection, analysis and use of food security- and nutrition-related information disaggregated by sex will also be strengthened. The sex-disaggregated information will provide a basis for decision makers in the design, targeting and implementation of policies, strategies and interventions designed to protect and promote food security and improve the nutritional status of the entire population — men and women, boys and girls — throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

25. UNIFEM opened a programme office in Jerusalem in April 2004 under the auspices of the UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People. UNIFEM is actively involved in local United Nations coordination efforts, including the Consolidated Appeals Process for humanitarian aid to the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the United Nations inter-agency humanitarian advocacy group.

26. UNRWA continued to assist Palestine refugee women through its special hardship case programme. UNRWA reported that of the special hardship case families, 46 per cent were families headed by women. Under that programme, families are provided with a critical safety net in the form of food support and selective cash assistance. Community services are provided for women through 64 women's programme centres, which include occupational training programmes, kindergartens and nurseries. Over 90,000 refugees, mainly women and children, have benefited from those services.

27. WFP coordinated with local non-governmental organizations to implement the Supplementary Feeding Programme for 5,000 children and their families, which included two free medical days for mothers and children under the age of 12. A total of 217 women and children attended the free medical service.

Education and training

28. The UNICEF response in the education sector focused on ensuring that as many children as possible had the opportunity to continue learning, even if they cannot reach their schools. UNICEF supported alternative projects for children in areas experiencing strict closures, as well as initiatives to keep children in school, such as the “back to school” campaign, to ensure that a million Palestinian children could attend school by September 2003 and remain in school throughout the school year. UNICEF also supported the Ministry of Education and Higher Education in integrating basic life skills into the curricula of grades 4 and 9; the curricula of grades 5 and 10 were to be covered during 2004. Training in effective screening and treatment of psychosocial distress was provided to school counsellors, kindergarten teachers and social workers to assist them in supporting Palestinian women and children affected by ongoing violence. UNICEF has made concerted efforts to mainstream gender perspectives into all UNICEF programme communication. During 2003/04, specific programme communication materials targeting the girl child and women were developed, including on iron deficiency, anaemia and the importance of breastfeeding, a life-skills training manual, remedial education worksheets and anti-smoking campaigns for young people.

29. The ILO reported that three Palestinian women participated in a national training workshop organized by the ILO Regional Office for Arab States on the theme “Vocational training methods and training curricula for people with disabilities”, held in Amman in 2004 for 10 Palestinian rehabilitation workers. In 2004, a new training programme on the theme “Promotion of social dialogue: strengthening national social dialogue mechanisms” was initiated. The programme is aimed at fully involving women national machineries in all activities. The first course was held from 13 to 19 June 2004, with 15 Palestinian participants from the Palestinian Authority, the Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions and the Palestinian Chambers of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture. A Palestinian woman from a trade union participated in the course. A Palestinian woman representative from the newly established Ministry of Women’s Affairs of the Palestinian Authority also attended as an observer.

30. With the cooperation of the Centre for Arab Women Training and Research, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) organized a meeting of 16 representatives of key Palestinian women NGOs and institutions in Tunis in February 2004. The meeting aimed at identifying the strategic needs of Palestinian women in the social and human sciences, and to develop a plan by which UNESCO could contribute to meeting those needs. Outcomes of the Tunis meeting were a project proposal for the establishment of a specialized independent Palestinian women’s resource centre, which was prepared and submitted for consideration, as well as funding to various stakeholders. The objective of the centre would be to contribute to the development of research-based policies that promote gender equality and the human rights of Palestinian women by serving as a monitoring centre and clearing house on information related to women's issues in Palestine. It would, inter alia, conduct, collect and house research and documentation produced on the status and the condition of Palestinian women; analyse and disseminate information to policy makers and relevant partners; and facilitate training, networking and empowerment of women's organizations.

31. Taking into account the link between women's and girls' education and women's empowerment, UNDP supported the construction of a large number of girls' schools in rural communities where tradition does not allow girls to travel to a distant school, as well as the expansion of schools to allow increased enrolment of girls. Approximately seven schools for girls were constructed, expanded or rehabilitated with sanitary facilities. Assistance was also provided for the development of gender-sensitive educational curricula and teaching modules and for teacher training in their use. The objective is to foster appropriate gender perspectives among both boys and girls. A training manual on gender issues was developed and widely distributed to schools throughout the West Bank and Gaza.

32. To address the lack of education and skills of some women, WFP supported literacy-, health- and nutrition-skills training. Advanced specialized courses on the environment, farming, animal husbandry and other income-generating activities, such as handicrafts, home gardening and food processing, were provided.

33. In collaboration with UNIFEM, the UNRWA Department of Education continued to assist Palestine refugee women acquire modern technological skills through a gender project. The project stresses equal access to information and communication technologies by Palestine refugee women and men, encourages gender equality in recruitment and retention policies, builds capacity to produce relevant information content for Palestine refugee women and helps them fulfil their socio-economic, reproductive and community participation roles.

Health

34. UNFPA continued its emergency obstetric care programme. In particular, training was provided to health-care providers at the community level. For the period under review, UNFPA trained 168 physicians, nurses and midwives in community emergency obstetric care, bringing the total number to 268 providers since the inception of the emergency programme. In addition, 85 health-care providers were trained in how to deal with traumatized women. A mapping exercise of primary health-care facilities with reproductive health services was carried out and completed in October 2003. The exercise was completed in partnership with the largest service providers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory from Government, non-governmental organizations and UNRWA facilities. It was the first of its kind and will be key to improving service delivery in the area of reproductive health, especially for women.

35. As part of its regular programme activities, UNFPA also collaborated with a national NGO in producing a manual on psychosocial and legal counselling in reproductive health. The manual covers a number of difficult areas of reproductive health and rights, including rape, incest, domestic violence and psychological abuse. It also provides a legal guideline and framework for providers in dealing with women and their families, in order to promote empowerment and rehabilitation. It is the first of its kind in the Arab region and was produced in Arabic.

36. WHO addressed the issue of mental health in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially among women, who are greatly affected by the social stigma of mental illness. Women also continued to bear major responsibility for caring for family members while coping with their own ill health. As part of the implementation of the new mental health policy, three community mental health centres were opened and an anti-stigma campaign was launched to address the general public. The majority of psychologists and social workers working in the mental health system are women.

37. UNRWA continued to provide maternal and child health-care and family planning services as an integral part of its primary health-care services to Palestine refugee women. UNRWA supported full immunization coverage for women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases; iron supplementation for women throughout pregnancy and post delivery; and health education programmes aimed at preventing HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases. UNRWA sought to make its health programmes more gender-sensitive by obtaining, whenever possible, data disaggregated by sex, with the objective of reducing gender disparities in health care and health-care services.

Women's human rights, including the implications of violence against women

38. The Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences visited the Occupied Palestinian Territory on official mission from 13 to 18 June 2004. The purpose of the mission was to address the impact of the conflict and occupation on women, in particular the implications of violence against women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Special Rapporteur met with a number of Government officials, including the Minister of Women's Affairs and representatives of women's organizations. The conclusions of the Special Rapporteur will be presented to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-first session, in 2005.

39. In August 2004, the OHCHR Palestine office contributed to a workshop held in Ramallah for 15 high-ranking women from various Palestinian ministries, in cooperation with the Ministry of Women's Affairs. The workshop covered many issues, including international human rights mechanisms, such as the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, and women's rights.

40. OHCHR organized, under the component "Human rights education/awareness-building", a one-day seminar focusing on Palestinian women working in the development field, on the theme "Development and human rights". The seminar, held on 3 August 2004, in cooperation with the women's affairs centre located in the Gaza Strip, particularly addressed women working in the development field. Of the 24 trainees who participated in the seminar, 18 were women. The course aimed at strengthening the capacity of women working in the field of human rights and at providing them with the basic human rights instruments as tools to be used in their daily work. The seminar also succeeded in making linkages between development, human rights and the rights-based approach.

Advocacy and media

41. The Division for Palestinian Rights, Department of Political Affairs, continued in 2004 to work closely with civil society through international meetings and conferences, including to bring attention to the situation of Palestinian women. The civil society declaration, adopted by the United Nations Forum of Civil Society in Support of Middle East Peace in Cape Town, South Africa, in July 2004, acknowledged that Palestinian women bear the harshest burden of the occupation, and called on women's organizations in Africa to express solidarity with Palestinian women. The plan of action adopted at the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People, held at United Nations Headquarters in September 2004, specifically called for the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) mandating the full participation of women in all international peace and justice efforts regarding Palestinian rights. The Division also continued to include information on the situation of Palestinian women in its monthly monitoring publication Chronological Review of Events Relating to the Question of Palestine and a monthly bulletin, as well as in its documents collection in the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL), under the subject category "Women". A special web address has been created permitting external web sites to link on an ongoing basis to the UNISPAL subject category on Palestinian women.

42. The Department of Public Information continued its annual international media seminars on peace in the Middle East, bringing together current and former policy makers from the region as well as senior officials, international experts and representatives of the world media. Several Palestinian women journalists participated in the seminar. The revised and updated Department of Public Information publication, issued in the six official languages of the United Nations, was widely disseminated to all United Nations field offices. Chapter 9 of the booklet addresses various issues concerning Palestinian women, including social and economic progress. On the United Nations web site, the News Centre has covered a wide range of developments related to the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and its impact on Palestinian women.

43. United Nations radio reported extensively on issues related to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women. The vital role of women as peacemakers and builders of society in many regions of the world, including the Palestinian Occupied Territory, was highlighted as one of "Ten stories the world should hear more about", a new project launched by the Department in May 2004. The issue of Palestinian women is also addressed on the programme "Women" produced by United Nations Radio. From 10 November to 19 December 2003, the Department organized a training programme for a group of six Palestinian broadcasters and journalists, including four women, to strengthen their professional capacity as information media personnel. The United Nations Information Service at Geneva also promoted the question of Palestine, for example, by issuing a press release on 24 June 2004, in English and French, on the visit to the Occupied Palestinian Territory by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences.

Institutional arrangements

44. In June 2004, UNDP entered into an agreement with the newly established Ministry of Women's Affairs of the Palestinian Authority to support the development of a three-year action plan aimed at promoting gender-sensitive structures, programmes and policies. The plan will be carried out in consultation with women's groups, NGOs, ministries and experts. UNDP, in coordination with UNIFEM, assisted the Ministry of Women's Affairs in Palestine with the drafting of an interim work plan and strategic vision. In efforts to promote gender equality, including within the context of the Millennium Development Goals, the UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People has committed to providing the necessary human resource base to ensure the smooth operation of the Ministry of Women's Affairs. As a follow-up to the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, support was also provided for the establishment of women's units within ministries of the Palestinian Authority to advocate for gender-sensitive policies and promote the establishment of an inter-ministerial committee for the advancement of women.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

45. In the reporting period, the ongoing conflict in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had a significant negative effect on Palestinian women. Women were among those killed or wounded and/or who lost their spouses, children or family members. Furthermore, the declining economic conditions, caused by restrictions on movement, perpetuated massive unemployment, an increase in poverty and lack of access to health care, health-care services and education. Restriction of movement has also resulted in the death of pregnant women and infants. Furthermore, pressures of the ongoing conflict have led to increased domestic violence and psychological stress among women and children. In view of that increase, it is imperative that the newly established Ministry of Women's Affairs, in collaboration with NGOs, focus on the root causes and consequences of domestic violence in order to identify appropriate measures to combat the problem.

46. The organizations of the United Nations system have continued to make efforts to improve the conditions of Palestinian women. Many of the initiatives undertaken by the entities of the United Nations system have been aimed at long-term sustainable development for Palestinian people, including women. It is important that the United Nations entities continue to assist Palestinian women in coping with the socio-economic difficulties they face as a result of the conflict. Palestinian women continue to require assistance with income-generating projects aimed at poverty alleviation, education and training, access to health care and health-care services, and with ongoing advocacy initiatives aimed at combating violence against women and protecting their fundamental human rights. Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions should intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women. These targeted efforts should be accompanied by increased efforts to visibly address gender dimensions in all activities of support and assistance to the Palestinian people in the socio-economic and humanitarian fields.

47. While the reports by relevant bodies provided considerable information on the overall situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and made reference to women, limited information was provided on the specific situation of women and girls. The specific impacts of the crisis on women, as compared to men, should be highlighted so that targeted actions can be taken to mitigate gender-specific negative impacts. Gender perspectives should be more fully integrated into international assistance programmes through, inter alia, in-depth gender analysis and the collection of data disaggregated by sex. Gender perspectives should also be fully incorporated into all studies and reports undertaken by the United Nations on the Palestinian people in order to effectively assess the impact of the situation of Palestinian women.

48. Since the status and living conditions of Palestinian women are linked to achieving a peaceful resolution of the conflict, additional efforts need to be made by the international community to end the violent confrontations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In that regard, it is particularly important that women are fully involved in all conflict-resolution and peacebuilding initiatives to be undertaken in the region, in accordance with the Beijing Platform for Action and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000). It is also important that efforts be made to increase women's full participation in decision-making processes at all levels.

Notes

- <sup>1</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-ninth Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/59/35), para. 26.
- <sup>2</sup> Ibid.
- <sup>3</sup> Ibid., para. 25.
- <sup>4</sup> International Labour Organization, "The situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories", International Labour Conference, 92nd session, 2004 (ILO, 2004), para. 18.
- <sup>5</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-ninth Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/59/35), para. 26.
- <sup>6</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-ninth Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/59/13), para. 6.
- <sup>7</sup> International Labour Organization, "The situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories", International Labour Conference, 92nd session, 2004 (ILO, 2004).
- <sup>8</sup> World Bank, "Palestinian perceptions of their quality of life and of the current economic environment", West Bank and Gaza Update (2004).
- <sup>9</sup> World Bank, "Recent economic developments", West Bank and Gaza Update (2004).
- <sup>10</sup> International Labour Organization, "The situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories", International Labour Conference, 92nd session, 2004 (ILO, 2004), para. 90.
- <sup>11</sup> Ibid.
- <sup>12</sup> Ibid., para. 72.
- <sup>13</sup> Ibid., para. 79.
- <sup>14</sup> Ibid., para. 91.
- <sup>15</sup> Ibid.
- <sup>16</sup> Palestine Central Bureau of Statistics 2004 youth survey.

Economic and Social CouncilDistr.: General
7 December 2005

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women*Fiftieth session

27 February-10 March 2006

Item 3 of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the special session of the General Assembly entitled*“Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”*Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women***Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between October 2004 and September 2005, in reference to Economic and Social Council resolution 2005/43 of 26 July 2005. It reviews the situation of women and provides an overview of the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system, inter alia with regard to economic activities, humanitarian assistance, education and training, health, and the human rights of women. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2006/1.

** The submission of the present report was delayed due to the need for consultation with relevant departments.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2005/43, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fiftieth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from October 2004 to September 2005. The first part of the report reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied by Israel since 1967, and the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences.

3. The second part of the report reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Department of Political Affairs, the Department of Public Information, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), ESCWA, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the World Food Programme (WFP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the World Health Organization (WHO), the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), the United Nations Volunteers programme (UNV) and the World Bank.

4. The report also provides recommendations aimed at improving the situation of Palestinian women, including through the continued assistance of the United Nations system.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

5. Despite a period of relative calm from February to August 2005 which marked the evacuation of Israeli settlers from the Gaza strip,<sup>1</sup> the majority of Palestinian women and children continued to suffer the consequences of the conflict and restrictions of access (E/ICEF/2005/P/L.29, para. 34). Poverty and unemployment persist in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (E/CN.4/2005/29, para. 8) and human rights violations in the form of violence against women are pervasive (E/CN.4/2005/72/Add.4, p. 2). An increasing number of families have exhausted the means that enabled them to cope with the crisis over the past five years and face difficulties in meeting their basic needs. This negative trend is a major source of stress and anxiety for a population already weakened by years of violence, isolation, movement restrictions and severe economic decline. As a result, women and their families suffer chronic insecurity.<sup>2</sup>

6. The Palestine Human Development Report 2004<sup>3</sup> emphasized that development was not possible without women's participation. It highlighted the growing concern about the existing gap between women and men in terms of opportunities, choices and living conditions.<sup>4</sup> The report highlighted the limited participation of women in the official development process, the job market and in decision-making processes in public institutions.<sup>5</sup> The Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences attributed the increasing inequality of women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to a double system of subordination, that is occupation and patriarchy, which was sustained through multiple forms of direct and indirect violence inside and outside the home (E/CN.4/2005/72/Add.4, para. 47).

7. The Special Rapporteur reported that women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are killed or threatened with death for tarnishing family honour. Women's transgressions of socially expected behaviours, derived from prevailing patriarchal norms and standards, are believed to violate the "honour" of men and the family and legitimize violence against women as a disciplinary measure to maintain or restore family honour. Women accused of promiscuity may be imprisoned in their homes, subjected to verbal and physical violence, married to their violator or even murdered in the name of honour (Ibid., para. 56).

8. The patriarchal biases prevailing in the legal provisions and criminal justice system prevent women from accessing justice and escaping violence (Ibid., para. 60). The Personal Status laws that regulate women's rights and roles within the family in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are not unified. For example, Muslim women in the West Bank are subject to Jordanian law; those in the Gaza are subject to Egyptian law; and Christian Palestinians are subject to laws established by their respective churches (Ibid., para. 60 (a)).

9. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences welcomed the establishment of the Ministry of Women's Affairs in 2003 and reported that it was addressing violence against women as a cross-cutting issue in all of its programmes (Ibid., para. 62). The Ministry of Women's Affairs worked with the Ministry of the Interior to train police on women's rights and to create police stations that facilitate women's access. The Special Rapporteur noted that the Ministry has the potential to improve the situation of Palestinian women and promote and protect women's rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory if it receives the necessary resources and support (Ibid., para. 63). Non-governmental organizations conducted community educational workshops in accordance with international standards on women's rights and monitored the criminal justice system's response to victims of violence (Ibid., para. 67).

10. The Special Rapporteur noted that the occupation permeated all aspects of life and entailed violations of economic, social and cultural rights (Ibid., para. 13) and reported a noticeable regression in terms of women's rights and fundamental freedoms (Ibid., para. 66). The death, imprisonment or unemployment of many adult male members of the community, which affected all areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, increased poverty and social tensions that contribute to increased domestic violence (Ibid., para. 48).

11. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967 reported that the occupation and the wall violated women's rights (A/60/271, para. 43). Palestinian women were routinely harassed, intimidated and abused at checkpoints and gates and were humiliated in front of their families and subjected to sexual violence by soldiers and settlers (Ibid.).

12. The Special Rapporteur also reported that approximately 120 Palestinian women were in prison, 11 of whom were in administrative detention — that is, being held without charge or trial. A total of 22 of the female prisoners were married and 18 were mothers (Ibid., p. 42).<sup>6</sup> Women prisoners were subjected to gender-based violence while under investigation and detention (A/60/271, para. 43). The conditions in prisons raised concerns about women's health and well-being (Ibid.).

13. The Special Rapporteur on adequate housing emphasized on several occasions the disproportionate effects of house demolitions on women, children and the elderly (E/CN.4/2005/72/Add.4, para. 28). House demolitions and the destruction of natural resources increased the economic and psychological burden on Palestinian women, who remained primarily responsible for running households and caring for family members.<sup>7</sup> Extra hours spent at checkpoints added to the time burden faced by women.<sup>8</sup>

14. Restriction of movement through closures continued to play a defining role in the lives of most Palestinians.<sup>9</sup> Drawing on the 2005 Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics survey, ILO reported that 52.5 per cent of households cited the closure measures, 53.6 per cent cited military checkpoints and 16 per cent of households cited the wall as obstacles to accessing health services.<sup>10</sup> Some women had been forced to give birth at checkpoints after having been denied passage or while waiting to pass, which had led to maternal and infant deaths; others had not been able to reach medical facilities for pre- and post-natal care.<sup>11</sup> Information provided by UNRWA revealed that 15 pregnant women in 2004 and 8 in 2005 had experienced delays of 1 to 2.5 hours while being transported to hospital by ambulance (A/60/324, para. 6). The problem was more acute in rural areas, especially for women who lived in villages cut off by checkpoints from the cities where the hospitals were located (Ibid., para. 11).

15. At its thirty-third session in July 2005, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women reviewed the third periodic report of Israel (CEDAW/C/ISR/3) and expressed concern about the number of incidents at Israeli checkpoints which had had a negative impact on the rights of Palestinian women, including the right of access to health-care services for pregnant women. The Committee called upon Israel to ensure that the authorities at all checkpoints were instructed to ensure access to health care for pregnant women, while protecting the security of Israel (A/60/38, paras. 257-258).

16. UNWRA reported that the social, economic and cultural context of women's health remained challenging during the period under review, as the Palestine refugee population had one of the highest birth rates in the region. The Palestine Human Development Report expressed concern about the high fertility rates in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which were attributed to social custom and tradition, both of which encouraged large families and early marriage for girls.<sup>12</sup> The report observed that fertility rates in the Palestinian territories were among the highest in the world.<sup>13</sup> Approximately one third of Palestine refugee women marry before the age of 18, and an equal proportion of women of reproductive age suffer from iron deficiency anaemia. The preliminary results of a study conducted by UNRWA revealed that over 36 per cent of pregnant women and over 43 per cent of nursing mothers in the Gaza Strip were anaemic (A/60/65-E/2005/13, para. 53). ESCWA reported that food insecurity had adversely affected women's health (Ibid., para. 53). A home visit programme conducted by the Ministry of Health found that the nutritional health status of women and children was affected by internal closure measures.<sup>14</sup>

17. UNICEF reported that although the overall health service coverage had been stable, the utilization and quality of maternal and child health services continued to be jeopardized. While 98 per cent of births were attended by skilled health staff and 96 per cent of pregnant women benefited from antenatal care, prematurity and low birth weight, related to the health and nutritional status of the mother and the quality of maternal and newborn health services, accounted for 41 per cent of infant deaths. That percentage was close to 46 per cent in the Gaza Strip.<sup>15</sup>

18. UNICEF also reported that preventive and curative maternal and child health services and health promotion activities were disrupted by the current conflict, resulting in decreased essential care for women and children. Only 42 per cent of mothers who delivered in hospitals over the past five years had received health education on key maternal and infant health topics, such as breastfeeding, maternal nutrition and family planning. Neonatal mortality played a role in the stagnation or aggravation of the infant and under-five mortality rates among Palestinian children.

19. Women's access to decision-making remained limited.<sup>16</sup> The Palestine Human Development Report revealed that female representation in ministries, parties and community organizations was still very limited. An indication of the low levels of political participation of Palestinian women was demonstrated by the decreasing number of women in executive, legislative and local institutions. Female representation on the Palestinian National Council did not exceed 8 per cent, while the Legislative Council had only 5 women members out of a total of 88. Within the executive authority, the Cabinet included only 2 women ministers, while women represented only 12.5 per cent of the 250 directors general appointed in various ministries. In municipal and local councils, the percentage of women had never exceeded 1 per cent until the elections held in late 2004, when it rose to 17 per cent.<sup>17</sup>

20. For the first time in 28 years, positive developments were, however, noted in the first round of multiparty local elections held in December 2004 and January

2005. There was a record participation of women, both as candidates and as voters. As a result of legislation establishing quotas, there should be at least two women in each council.<sup>18</sup> According to the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, women's groups had called for quotas for women candidates in the elections — 30 per cent for local council elections and 20 per cent for the legislative council. ILO reported that there had been some debate around women's candidatures. However, a number of Palestinian organizations, in addition to the Ministry of Women's Affairs, have supported the idea.<sup>19</sup>

21. Poverty remained widespread in the occupied territories.<sup>20</sup> Approximately 11 per cent of all Palestinian families living below the poverty line in Palestine were headed by women, and the overall percentage of poor families headed by women was greater than that of poor families headed by men.<sup>21</sup> The Palestine Human Development Report observed that there was a close relationship between female poverty in Palestinian society and the nature of the male-dominated job market. Horizontal and vertical segregation between women and men had a negative effect on women, especially those living below the poverty line.<sup>22</sup>

22. The participation of women in the labour force remained low.<sup>23</sup> In the third quarter of 2004, the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics labour force survey reported the unemployment rate as 27.4 per cent for men and 23.1 per cent for women. ILO noted that the working patterns of women and men were highly differentiated in the occupied territories. More women than men were studying. However, only 1 woman in 10 of working age was employed.<sup>24</sup> With regard to wages, the hourly wages of women were above those of men in agriculture and in services but below those of men in manufacturing and in commerce, hotels and restaurants.<sup>25</sup>

23. ILO reported that one in three young persons aged 15-24 and over half of those aged 25-29 were in forced idleness, which reinforced the exceptional circumstances prevailing in the occupied territories.<sup>26</sup> ILO stated that the situation required urgent attention in the form of significant assistance in vocational training, business development and employment orientation specifically directed at young women and men. Young women and men also faced numerous constraints in mobility within the territories and in accessing employment in Israel or in the industrial estates.<sup>27</sup>

24. The proportion of women in part-time work was significantly higher than that of men: 40 per cent for women compared to 17 per cent for men. ILO noted that this might be a factor in the very moderate real wage increases registered in 2004 and might also explain why 27 per cent of workers earned less than the average wage and less than the minimum wage.<sup>28</sup> A number of work permits for business people had been issued, although utilization had been low. The photographic control of women and men workers at checkpoints through the use of customized screening machines was perceived by Palestinians as an example of indecent working conditions, a health hazard and a humiliation.<sup>29</sup>

25. For the period under review, the Ministry of Women's Affairs took measures to further the political, economic and social empowerment of women.<sup>30</sup> It established good working relations with other ministries and collaborated on gender mainstreaming initiatives. Efforts were made, for example, to mainstream gender perspectives in the social security policy, with the assistance of ILO. Examples of good practices were also disseminated in order to develop a gender-responsive budgeting process.<sup>31</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

Economic activities

26. The World Bank reported on an improved targeting scheme of the Social Safety Net Reform Project, which would enable poor adult women living on their own because of separation, divorce or widowhood to receive cash assistance from the special hardship case programme.

27. IFAD reported on phases I and II of its rehabilitation and development programme. IFAD mobilized $10 million towards phase II, aimed at restoring access to essential services and social and physical infrastructure in Gaza and the West Bank and providing immediate income through the provision of employment in infrastructure rehabilitation and expansion; and promoting opportunities for the target group to access resources needed to improve their income-earning opportunities. Specific initiatives targeting poor rural women were included in the programme, such as two community centres (in Azzoun and Jayyous villages), under the savings and credit associations which serve the financial and social needs of women in the area. The community centre for the Women's Rural Development Society was opened to provide training courses to meet the financial needs of women. In addition, a rural credit component, implemented in cooperation with the Arab Bank, continued to provide direct financing to rural women to set up and/or expand their small income-generation activities. Since the beginning of the project, a total of 340 women's income-generating activity loans were made, amounting to $950,300. The repayment rate for women's loans was reported by the Arab Bank as 96 per cent, as of 31 March 2005.

28. UNRWA continued its microcredit community support programme to promote the socio-economic status and self-reliance of the most vulnerable among the refugees, including women. The microcredit community support programme issued more than $1.87 million in loans to a mix of low-income families and small entrepreneurs, including women. Furthermore, UNRWA reported granting 4,719 loans valued at $2.93 million to women through its microfinance and micro-entrepreneurship programme.

29. UN-Habitat introduced a housing and income-generating programme for widows and underprivileged women in Hebron, with an initial funding of $6.2 million. The objectives of the project are to foster self-reliance by facilitating the transition from welfare to gainful employment, promoting the local economy and contributing to poverty alleviation through job creation. The initial phase of the project aimed at supporting 100 female-headed households in Hebron municipality through the provision of shelter and opportunities to engage in income-generating activities.

30. UNDP reported on the establishment of eight centres for the empowerment of community women. Within the framework of the community centres activation project, those centres were established in collaboration with UNIFEM and a Young Men's Christian Association women's training programme. The establishment of the centres (2 in the north of the West Bank and 6 in southern West Bank) have contributed to job creation and enhanced women's access to services and resources. In addition, UNDP, with support from the United States Agency for International Development, established a rural women's empowerment centre in the northern West Bank village of Shufa. Educational and economic empowerment programmes were initiated in partnership with the municipality and with the technical support of UNIFEM. In order to enhance girls' access to education, approximately eight schools for girls were constructed, extended or rehabilitated, including upgraded sanitary facilities, in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

31. Empowering Palestinian women and fostering their contribution to economic development was among the main objectives of the UNCTAD integrated capacity-building programme. The project for promoting the development of small- and medium-sized enterprises sought to foster individual entrepreneurial capabilities and build institutional capacity for establishing a dynamic private sector and internationally competitive small- and medium-sized enterprises. Women were encouraged to join the programme through targeted promotional activities, including seminars and print advertisements. Moreover, the project stipulated that at least 30 per cent of participants in the initial achievement motivation workshop, the Entrepreneurship Training Workshop, should be women. To date, the programme had attracted 17 women out of 61 entrepreneurs. They included promising women entrepreneurs, including the owners/managers of existing enterprises, and those who were willing to start their own businesses.

32. UNIDO activities in Palestine aimed at building the capacity of the Ministry of Industry and the Private Sector to promote and foster the sustainable development of the Palestinian industrial sector in terms of competitiveness, quality, productivity, export, partnership potential, contribution to the gross domestic product (GDP), as well as the creation of sustainable employment and income-generating opportunities. Those activities, directly or indirectly, benefited Palestinian women.

Humanitarian assistance

33. UNRWA provided essential educational, health, relief and social services to over 4 million registered Palestine refugees in the Agency's five areas of operations: Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The Agency's assistance to Palestine refugee women focused on education and technical training, delivery of women-focused health services, social service support and the provision of microfinance. UNRWA also provided emergency assistance to the Palestinian refugees living in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to respond to the urgent needs generated by the ongoing crisis. The emergency appeal programmes focused on food aid, emergency employment creation, repair and reconstruction of the conflict-damaged infrastructure in kind and cash assistance, and mobile health clinics. The Agency created 2,037,886 days of temporary work under its direct-hire programme and community-based infrastructure and construction projects to help beneficiaries maintain minimum levels of income and support their families. In the Gaza Strip, approximately 20 per cent of the beneficiaries of the direct-hire component were female heads of households, while in West Bank, due to the nature of the work, around 12 per cent of the beneficiaries were women.

34. Through its socio-economic unit, UNSCO continued to monitor social and humanitarian indicators relating specifically to women, such as access to health-care services, and the incidence of childbirth at roadblocks and checkpoints. This information has been shared for use in the reports of key partners, such as the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. UNSCO also undertook a comprehensive study of the impact of economic fragmentation on rural communities in the West Bank, highlighting the specific effect of closures on women.

35. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs coordinated the response of United Nations agencies and other humanitarian bodies in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Consolidated Appeals Process included four themes: fragmentation; impoverishment; acute crisis areas; and protection of civilians. Gender-based projects were integrated into the Consolidated Appeals Process and the Common Humanitarian Action Plan to address the impact of the humanitarian crisis on women.

36. UNHCR reported on programme activities that were designed to ensure the participation and empowerment of refugee women in decision-making. Of the 8,873 Palestinian refugees registered in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, approximately 4,000 were women. UNHCR assisted 2,274 refugees. Refugee women had access to material assistance, counselling and medical support through UNHCR implementing partners. Refugee women in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya continued to benefit from the job placement activities, microcredit project schemes and job-oriented and vocational training of UNHCR.

37. The WFP office in the Occupied Palestinian Territory achieved significant progress in advocating the role of Palestinian women in management and access to food assistance and participation in food-for-work and food-for-training activities, implemented in partnership with key organizations and ministries working closely with women. Some food-for-training courses included gender sensitization, introduction to HIV/AIDS awareness and women's human rights. Women were encouraged to personally receive their food entitlement or were authorized to designate another person to collect the rations on their behalf.

Education and training

38. The World Bank reported on a tertiary education project ($10 million) that aimed to strengthen the capacity of the Ministry of Education and Higher Education and to provide support to higher education institutions to improve their management and the quality and relevance of programmes. During the period under review, the Development Grant Facility supported the Centre of Arab Women for Training and Research in its regional research work on Arab women and decision-making, which includes a Palestinian national research team.

39. Education programmes continued to be one of the primary means by which UNRWA promoted the development of girls and women. In the 2004/05 academic year, some 489,000 pupils, half of them girls, were enrolled in the Agency's elementary, preparatory and secondary schools. More than half of the Agency's teachers were women, as were 67 per cent of the 1,170 participants in pre-service teacher training courses. UNRWA administered 110 scholarships for Palestinian women in Lebanon and other scholarship projects for approximately 70 female refugees. The UNRWA Department of Education, in collaboration with UNIFEM, continued to assist Palestine refugee women in acquiring modern technological skills. The project emphasized equal access to information and communication technologies (ICT) by Palestine refugee women as well as men, encouraged gender equality in recruitment and retention policies, and built capacity to produce appropriate information content for Palestine refugee women to assist them to fulfil their socio-economic, reproductive and community roles. UNRWA also promoted community participation by and community services for Palestine refugee women through 65 women's programme centres. Activities included occupational training programmes, kindergartens and nurseries. Over 133,450 refugees, mainly women and children, benefited from these services.

40. UNICEF provided 40,000 children in areas affected by violence, deteriorating economic conditions and closures with remedial worksheets, school bags and stationary, as well as basic clothing. A total of 904 school-in-a-box kits were purchased, of which 375 were distributed to schools in Gaza. The rest were pre-positioned to the West Bank in order to provide emergency response in the districts of Nablus and Hebron. The kits assisted about 70,000 students to continue their education during closures. UNICEF also piloted the child-friendly school concept in 100 schools in Gaza and the West Bank. In addition to ensuring that physical school conditions were more child-friendly, especially for girls, the project trained approximately 850 schoolteachers on child-centred pedagogy and participatory school and classroom processes. The participation of adolescent girls in year-round sports programmes, including summer recreational activities, was realized. Out of a total of more than 6,000 adolescents, 3,250 females participated in weekly sports programmes aimed at relieving stress and the damaging effects of violence.

41. UNESCO provided policy and planning advice and other capacity-building assistance to the Ministry of Education and Higher Education. By supporting the provision of gender-responsive educational services, including guidance and counselling for school-age girls, teacher training and the production of learning materials, UNESCO focused on eliminating gender disparities in primary and secondary education in the Palestinian territories. In collaboration with UNIFEM and the Ministry of Women's Affairs, UNESCO developed training in the areas of vocational counselling and guidance for girls in grades 8 to 12; academic assistance; and workshops for parents to raise their awareness of the importance of education for girls.

42. The Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs reported that one of three trainees from the Palestinian Authority in the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority was a woman.

43. UNFPA organized training at the Ministry of Women's Affairs to improve mainstreaming of gender perspectives in the planning process and monitoring of progress through the development, testing and use of gender analysis tools, including for gender audits. Training was also provided for women newly elected to municipalities and focused on developing capacities for advocacy and mobilization of communities in local development, particularly women.

44. UN-Habitat supported a technical and vocational training centre for underprivileged women in the southern area of the Gaza Strip, with an initial funding of $2 million. There were previously only two such training centres for women in the northern and central areas of the Gaza Strip, and women's enrolment in vocational, industrial and commercial training schools and institutes was marginal. The proposed centre for the southern area of the Gaza Strip targeted women who were registered as hardship cases with the Ministry of Social Affairs. The project aimed at empowering women who were the poorest of the poor, without income, or who were socially marginalized as divorcees, widows and heads of households.

45. OHCHR organized training courses for different target groups, including Palestinian police forces and prison personnel, judges and workers in the development field, taking into consideration gender balance in the selection of participants and integrating women's issues into all training activities. Training curricula and programmes included sessions on women's rights. In addition, OHCHR worked closely with the Palestinian Ministry of Women's Affairs to carry out training sessions for Ministry staff.

Health

46. In order to address the challenges of high fertility rates and promote the health status of Palestine refugee women, UNRWA continued providing maternal and child health-care and reproductive health services as an integral part of its primary health care. A total of 85,737 women received antenatal care in five fields of operation of the Agency. In addition, 20,088 new women sought family planning guidance. The total number of continuing users was 104,803. UNRWA also sustained full immunization coverage of women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases. Those services were supported by school health services, the provision of iron supplements for women throughout pregnancy and post delivery, and health education programmes on the prevention of tobacco use and the prevention of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases.

47. WHO reported on a project to strengthen the nutrition department of the Ministry of Health and establish a national nutrition surveillance system. The project assisted the development of a nutrition department, improved the technical capacity of relevant personnel, developed nutrition-related policy documents and plans of action, and supported training and research on improving nutritional services, particularly for women and children. The project benefited women by strengthening nutrition surveillance systems and coordinating nutrition activities through thematic groups and nutrition service delivery, particularly for women.

48. UNFPA reported on a capacity-building programme to support the Ministry of Health that focused on improving the quality of services and expanding the scope of the reproductive health package to include early detection of the most common cancers among women (breast and cervical cancer), in addition to ante- and post-natal and family planning counselling, management of sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and reproductive tract infections, and health education. Guidelines and protocols for reproductive health services were developed for hospitals and primary health centres. Special attention was paid to the prevention of HIV/AIDS and STIs through the STIs/HIV/AIDS management/provider's manual and training of health providers. In addition, UNFPA designed a programme to train health providers, general practitioners, midwives, nurses and community health workers to reach 10,000 pregnant women and 50,000 people who reside in 100 selected localities. Moreover, a training workshop addressed different reproductive health issues, including gender-based violence, counselling skills, family planning and reproductive rights.

49. In preparation for the disengagement operations in the northern West Bank and Gaza Strip, UNICEF provided critical supplies for mothers and children in the form of emergency health kits, midwifery and obstetric kits, and family water kits, raised community awareness on appropriate hygiene practices and promoted breastfeeding. In areas where access to health facilities was difficult, support was provided to such facilities, together with the upgrade of the skills of health-care workers. UNICEF also provided vaccines and vaccine-related supplies to cover 100 per cent of Palestinian children and women of child-bearing age for the immunization services provided by the Ministry of Health, UNRWA and non-governmental organizations. UNICEF initiated a pilot project aimed at promoting awareness of HIV/AIDS among adolescent girls and boys.

50. The UNAIDS secretariat supported the participation of seven representatives from the Occupied Palestinian Territory national AIDS committee, medical relief committees and the Culture and Free Thought Association in the UNAIDS regional meeting on the theme “Women, girls and HIV/AIDS”, held in Amman in February 2005.

Women’s human rights, including violence against women

51. UNICEF equipped mothers with the basic skills to detect distress among their children and to respond to it, as well as to deal with their own stress. Groups of mothers were formed in the areas most affected by violence and movement restrictions, such as those in the proximity of settlements or the wall. Each group attended a series of 12 sessions, addressing issues such as child developmental stages, child rights, psychosocial well-being, and the negative impact of early marriage and domestic violence and abuse. More than 15,000 caregivers, the majority of whom were mothers, attended such sessions.

52. In support of the right to due process, UNICEF provided legal aid for girls as well as boys. UNICEF also set up a monitoring system which gathered data on, inter alia, charges, sentencing, pre-trial detention and age and geographic location. The situation of children in detention was monitored and legal aid was provided.

53. OHCHR continued to support the Palestinian National Authority through a project on the rule of law. The project had a positive impact on women’s rights by addressing specific problems of discrimination and domestic injustices, including by vetting national laws for adherence to international human rights standards and norms. The project also sought to empower women to know and claim their rights. On 3 March, OHCHR participated in a workshop organized by the Gaza Community Mental Health Programme and the Women’s Empowerment Programme on women’s political participation in Gaza City, involving activists from civil society and the governmental sector. It was also involved in a meeting in Gaza for approximately 70 women in a marginalized area of Gaza City organized by the Palestinian Working Women’s Society for Development, which focused on women’s rights, including women’s participation in political life, in the context of the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and other human rights instruments.

54. As part of efforts to implement Security Council resolution 1325 (2000), UNFPA provided support to Palestinian women to produce a lexicon for advocacy purposes. Such support was undertaken in a participatory manner, together with the Coalition Combating Violence against Women and other governmental institutions, to promote national consensus on terminology on major issues related to gender-based violence. The lexicon also promoted examples of best practices from each of the institutions. UNFPA, together with the Palestinian Initiative for the Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy, implemented advocacy activities on sensitizing legislators, decision-makers and community leaders on the negative effects of early marriage on the development of Palestinian society.

55. UNIFEM negotiated an agreement with the Ministry of Women's Affairs to initiate a national programme on women's rights, with focus on femicide.

Advocacy

56. In organizing international meetings and conferences for, and under the guidance of, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs has included items dealing with the situation of Palestinian women and ensured the participation of women's organizations and women representatives of other civil society organizations. The meetings focused on the legal aspects of the question of Palestine in light of the 2004 Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice on the legal consequences of the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>32</sup> The hardship caused by the wall for Palestinian women through limiting their access to places of work and worship, schools, hospitals and community services formed part of the deliberations. Renowned women lawyers, and women activists from civil society organizations working in the field of law, were among the panellists guiding the discussions.

57. The Department of Public Information carried out a special information programme on the question of Palestine, in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 59/30 of 1 December 2004, aimed at sensitizing public opinion. Working in close cooperation with the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs, and through it with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Department used a variety of means to inform the public and reach out to the media and civil society. The United Nations News Centre continued its coverage of developments related to the situation in the Occupied Territories and its effect on Palestinian women. Various United Nations activities, statements and documents related to the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women were also highlighted through a special "News Focus: Middle East" page featured on the United Nations News Centre. The Department of Public Information issued 18 press releases (9 each in French and English) dealing specifically with assistance to Palestinian women.

58. United Nations in Action series of UNTV featured a programme on microcredit schemes for Palestinian women, which highlighted the role of UNRWA.<sup>33</sup> In its daily news programmes and current affairs magazines for worldwide and regional dissemination, United Nations Radio covered, inter alia, the report of a round-table discussion with three Palestinian women representing non-governmental organizations to CEDAW held during its March 2005 session; the report on the struggle for equality of Palestinian women living in Israel 10 years after Beijing; the affirmation by CEDAW of the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to the situation in the occupied Palestinian territories according to a report introduced by Palestinian Women; the report introduced by the Arab Women in Israel to CEDAW on Israeli discrimination against Arab women in Israel; a report on a delegation of Palestinian Women who travelled to New York to participate in Beijing+10; and a report on cooperation between the Palestinian Ministry of Women Affairs and the World Bank.

59. ESCWA provided technical assistance to the Palestinian National Authority Ministry of Women's Affairs for building the capacities of its Advocacy, Media and Communications Department. Three training workshops were conducted for Ministry staff on addressing gender issues in plans and programmes of other ministries and to improve their use of data and statistics for lobbying and advocacy. The ESCWA Centre for Women developed an interactive website to include country profiles on Arab women, including Palestinian women. Those profiles are updated on a regular basis to reflect the latest developments in population dynamics, health, poverty, education, human rights, conflict, labour, political participation and leadership and the work of the national machinery and non-governmental organizations.

60. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs chaired the inter-agency advocacy group, which includes members of the key United Nations humanitarian agencies operating in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. During 2005, the Office initiated a group activity on the occasion of International Women's Day on 8 March. The inter-agency advocacy group published a press release entitled "Towards a more secure future: United Nations agencies operating in the Occupied Palestinian Territory call for action in improving the situation of Palestinian women". Signed by 10 agencies, the press release was sent to the local media and received good coverage.

61. The Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs updated its documents collection under the subject category "Women" in the Internet-based United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and electronic links to relevant websites outside UNISPAL. The special web address permitting external websites to link to the UNISPAL subject category on Palestinian women on an ongoing basis was also maintained.

62. In terms of its publications programme, the Division for Palestinian Rights included information on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, as available, in its monthly monitoring publications Chronological Review of Events Relating to the Question of Palestine and Monthly Bulletin, which review action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine, as well as other publications.

Institutional arrangements

63. UNDP supported the newly established Ministry of Women's Affairs in the development of a three-year strategic action plan whose central objective was the empowerment of and support to Palestinian women to actively participate in building and developing a democratic Palestinian state. Since June 2005, the gender mainstreaming capacity of the Ministry and newly created gender units of various line Ministries has been increased in order to provide decision makers with the needed skills and knowledge to operationalize their commitment to gender equality and women's rights.

64. The ESCWA Centre for Women sponsored technical assistance activities and advisory services on institution-building in the Ministry of Women's Affairs, concentrating on the formulation of the Ministry's strategy and policy document. Advisory services were also provided to enhance the technical cooperation programme of the poverty alleviation department of the Ministry. Capacity-building training workshops were organized and conducted for Ministry officials.

65. The Transfer of Knowledge Through Expatriate Nationals and the UNV programmes continued to support the ongoing efforts of UNDP, UNIFEM and the Ministry of Women's Affairs to ensure that gender issues were mainstreamed in all policies and reflected in all programmes. In this regard, UNV supported the institutionalization process within the newly established Ministry of Women's Affairs through the provision of gender training, an ICT unit and support to the development of a website for Palestinian women to meet and share experiences.

66. In response to a joint request from Palestinian and Israeli women leaders and activists, UNIFEM convened and facilitated a strategy and planning meeting from 26 to 28 July 2005 in Istanbul, Turkey. The purpose of the meeting was to develop and advance a plan to establish an international women's commission for a just and sustainable Israeli-Palestinian peace. The Commission was established in the context of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) and other international conventions and instruments that call upon States parties to ensure increased representation of women at all decision-making levels for the prevention, management and resolution of conflict. The Commission brought together Palestinian, Israeli and international women dedicated to end the Israeli occupation and bring about a just peace based on international law, human rights and equality. The Commission worked for an ongoing and comprehensive reconciliation in order to realize a mutually secure and sustainable peace and co-existence within the context of mainstream negotiations.

IV. Conclusion and recommendations

67. During the reporting period, the impact of the conflict continued to adversely affect women in all spheres of life. Women and their families lived in a permanent state of insecurity, tension and fear (E/CN.4/2005/72/Add.4, para. 74). They were negatively affected by the restrictions on movement, the deteriorating economic conditions, poverty and lack of access to health care and health services. Palestinian women continued to bear the combined burdens of occupation and patriarchy which have deepened their inequality and denied them the possibility for enjoyment of rights, fundamental freedoms and liberty (Ibid., para. 72).

68. The outcome document of the 2005 World Summit highlighted the importance of eliminating all forms of discrimination and violence against women and girls. The important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding was also highlighted. Member States reaffirmed their commitment to the full and effective implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security. In this regard, it is important that Palestinian women are fully involved in all conflict resolution and peacebuilding initiatives, including at decision-making levels. Taking into account that women tend to suffer disproportionately during times of political unrest and instability, there is a need to mainstream gender perspectives in policies and programmes to ensure that the contribution, priorities and needs of both women and men are addressed.

69. Entities of the United Nations have continued to make efforts to improve the situation of Palestinian women. Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions should intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women.

70. The Commission may wish to encourage entities of the United Nations system to increase the participation of women in all assistance activities in order to fully integrate women's priorities and needs in the development process, for example, through increasing women's involvement in poverty-reduction programmes.

71. The newly established Ministry of Women's Affairs has undertaken important initiatives to promote gender mainstreaming in all ministries. United Nations entities and other international organizations should continue to coordinate and collaborate to provide financial, advisory and technical assistance to the Ministry and to gender units in line ministries to ensure that gender perspectives are identified and addressed in policies and programmes in all policy areas.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> The contribution of UNICEF to the preparation of the present report.

<sup>2</sup> UNICEF input to the preparation of the report.

<sup>3</sup> The Palestine Human Development Report 2004 was prepared by the Birzeit University, Development Studies Programme, with support from the United Nations Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People and in association with the Ministry of Planning.

<sup>4</sup> See Palestine Human Development Report 2004.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid.

<sup>7</sup> International Labour Organization, "Report of the Director-General on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories" (Geneva, 2005) para. 31.

<sup>8</sup> Ibid.

<sup>9</sup> Ibid., para. 17.

<sup>10</sup> Ibid., para. 19.

<sup>11</sup> Ibid., para. 19.

<sup>12</sup> Palestine Human Development Report 2004.

<sup>13</sup> Ibid.

<sup>14</sup> International Labour Organization, op. cit., para. 20.

<sup>15</sup> UNICEF input to the preparation of the present report.

<sup>16</sup> See Palestine Human Development Report 2004.

<sup>17</sup> Ibid.

<sup>18</sup> International Labour Organization, op. cit., para. 10.

<sup>19</sup> Ibid., para. 10.

<sup>20</sup> Ibid., preface.

<sup>21</sup> See Palestine Human Development Report 2004.

<sup>22</sup> Ibid.

<sup>23</sup> Ibid.

<sup>24</sup> International Labour Organization, op. cit., para. 63.

<sup>25</sup> Ibid., para. 80.

<sup>26</sup> Ibid., preface.

<sup>27</sup> Ibid., preface.

<sup>28</sup> Ibid., para. 88.

<sup>29</sup> Ibid., para. 24.

<sup>30</sup> Ibid., para. 14.

<sup>31</sup> Ibid., para. 14.

<sup>32</sup> United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, United Nations Office at Geneva, 8 and 9 March 2005; United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Middle East Peace, UNESCO headquarters, Paris, 12 and 13 July 2005.

<sup>33</sup> The programme was aired on CNN International in January 2005.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
9 January 2007

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-first session

26 February-9 March 2007

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda**

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between October 2005 and September 2006, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2006/8 of 25 July 2006. It reviews the situation of Palestinian women and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system, inter alia, with regard to humanitarian assistance, economic activities, education and training, health and the human rights of women. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* Reissued for technical reasons.

** E/CN.6/2007/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2006/8 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out in the previous report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2006/4) and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-first session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from October 2005 to September 2006. The report reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967 and the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences.

3. The report also reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Department of Political Affairs, the Department of Public Information, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the World Food Programme (WFP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the World Health Organization (WHO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) and the World Bank.

4. The report provides recommendations on improving the situation of Palestinian women, including through the continued assistance of the United Nations system.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

5. The period under review was marked by several major developments. It was dominated by the Israeli disengagement from the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank and the election of new parliaments in both Israel and the Palestinian Authority, resulting in the subsequent nomination of new Governments.<sup>1</sup> After the election of Hamas in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the fiscal deficit widened as, inter alia, the Government of Israel began to withhold the payment of the taxes and duties collected on behalf of the Palestinian Authority.<sup>2</sup> Prospects for continued international financial support for the Palestinian Authority diminished, leading to a risk of contraction in the Palestinian economy.<sup>3</sup> The United States and the European Union announced a freeze on their assistance to the Palestinian Authority until it commits to the three principles spelled out by the Quartet on 30 January 2006, while maintaining direct assistance to the Palestinian people.<sup>4</sup>

6. In the Occupied Palestinian Territory, movement was limited as a result of checkpoints, curfews, closures and the separation barrier and its associated regime.<sup>5</sup> A climate of economic uncertainty and social hardship continued throughout 2005 and 2006, worsened by recurring violence, ongoing construction of the separation barrier, restrictions on movement, land confiscation, house demolitions, arrests and detentions by the Israeli authorities and intensification, from August onwards, of the fiscal crisis.<sup>6</sup>

7. Increased restrictions on free movement in and out of the Gaza Strip and within the West Bank left many women unable to access basic services.<sup>7</sup> Access by some villagers to nearby urban centres had improved temporarily when the number of closure obstacles decreased to 376 between February and August 2005.<sup>8</sup> The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 noted, however, that the number of checkpoints increased from 376 in August 2005 to over 500 in August 2006.<sup>9</sup> As a result, Palestinian women currently live under conditions of forced isolation and are often separated from their families and communities, which provide support, safety and solace.<sup>10</sup>

8. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the humanitarian situation continued to deteriorate in the Gaza Strip due to shortages of electricity and water, caused by the 28 June 2006 bombing by the Israeli Air Force of the Gaza power plant, and the continued sporadic opening of only some of Gaza's crossing points.<sup>11</sup> The substantial reduction of the electricity and fuel supply,

<sup>1</sup> A/61/80-E/2006/72, para. 75.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., para. 65.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., para. 8.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., para. 6.

<sup>5</sup> UNRWA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>6</sup> A/61/80-E/2006/72, para. 8.

<sup>7</sup> OCHA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>8</sup> A/61/67-E/2006/13, para. 24.

<sup>9</sup> A/HRC/2/5, p. 2.

<sup>10</sup> OCHA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>11</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs Occupied Palestinian Territory, Gaza Strip Situation Report, 12 July 2006, 12 p.m.

together with the disruption of water supplies, had a severe impact on the daily life of Palestinians who were without light at night and electricity to do their cooking.<sup>12</sup>

9. Women account for 49.4 per cent of the Palestinian population, a total of 1.86 million,<sup>13</sup> in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. While only 13.8 per cent of overall households in the refugee population were female-headed, such households accounted for 46 per cent of the special hardship families, illustrating the burden of poverty borne by women in the refugee population.<sup>14</sup> Special hardship assistance was provided to 386 families headed by widowed, divorced or abandoned women.<sup>15</sup>

10. According to the report of the Director-General of ILO on the situation of workers in the occupied Arab territories, four out of every 10 Palestinians in the territory were living in poverty on less than $2.10 a day. The absolute figure increased from 600,000 in 1999 to 1,600,000 in 2005.<sup>16</sup> The poverty rate was nearly 50 per cent in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with the Gaza Strip rate at approximately 70 per cent in May 2006.<sup>17</sup> Spiralling poverty rates owing to the ongoing conflict and humanitarian crisis had a disproportionate impact on Palestinian women and increased the vulnerability of youths and young women.<sup>18</sup>

11. The school enrolment ratio of girls as compared to that of boys is almost equal for primary and secondary education.<sup>19</sup> Gender stereotypes continued to exist in the school curricula.<sup>20</sup> The Palestinian Higher Education Statistics Report (2004) indicated that more female students (5,043) than male students (4,829) were enrolled in the science and technology fields. Although women accounted for approximately 50 per cent of information technology graduates between 2002 and 2005, only 3 per cent of them were employed in the field, compared to 67 per cent of male graduates.<sup>21</sup>

12. According to the 2006 report of the Secretary-General on assistance to the Palestinian people, continued closures within and between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank severely challenged the Palestinian health system's ability to function at appropriate levels.<sup>22</sup> WHO noted that the financial crisis threatened to undermine the delivery of health services that served the majority of the Palestinian population, including women.<sup>23</sup> UNICEF's Humanitarian Action Report 2006 also noted that

<sup>12</sup> A/HRC/2/5, para. 15.

<sup>13</sup> Focus 2005, Vol. 4, published by UNDP Communications Office, Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 45.

<sup>14</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixtieth Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/60/13), para. 120.

<sup>15</sup> Ibid.

<sup>16</sup> ILO (2006) report of the Director-General on the situation of workers in the occupied Arab territories, page iv.

<sup>17</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixty-first Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/61/35), para. 32.

<sup>18</sup> UNDP contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>19</sup> Ibid.

<sup>20</sup> UNFPA "Gender-based violence in Occupied Palestinian Territory", Women, Peace and Security Initiative, Technical Support Division, 2006.

<sup>21</sup> Focus 2005, Vol. 4, published by Communications Office of the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 19.

<sup>22</sup> A/61/80-E/2006/72, para. 53.

<sup>23</sup> WHO contribution to the report (2006).

basic equipment for maternal and newborn health was lacking in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>24</sup>

13. Food insecurity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was the result, in part, of the absence of purchasing power, as few people had sufficient money to cover their family's basic food needs.<sup>25</sup> The results of a study conducted by UNRWA revealed that, in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank respectively, 54.7 per cent and 34.3 per cent of children aged 6 to 36 months were anaemic, as were 40.2 per cent and 29.9 per cent of pregnant women and 45.7 per cent and 23 per cent of nursing mothers. Other micronutrient deficiencies of concern were subclinical vitamin A deficiency, rickets and iodine deficiency.<sup>26</sup>

14. The Palestine refugee population has one of the highest birth rates in the region, as approximately one third of Palestinian refugee women marry before the age of 18.<sup>27</sup> Approximately 39.4 per cent of the Palestinian refugee population is below 18 years of age and 24.6 per cent consists of women of reproductive age.<sup>28</sup> The total refugee fertility rates vary from 2.5 and 2.6 in the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon to 4.4 in the Gaza Strip.<sup>29</sup> As a result of increased literacy, generalized socio-economic hardship, increased public awareness of the need for child spacing and the widespread use of modern contraceptive methods, the historically high population growth rates of more than 3.5 per cent among the Palestinian refugees over the past two decades slowed to 2.5 per cent.<sup>30</sup> This trend, however, has been reversed in the Gaza Strip since the beginning of the humanitarian crisis in 2000.<sup>31</sup>

15. According to the 2004 labour force statistics of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, women accounted for 15.9 per cent of the total labour force in the West Bank and for 9.1 per cent in the Gaza Strip. The share in Jerusalem was the lowest in the West Bank, accounting for only 10.1 per cent.<sup>32</sup> Female employment rates have historically been low in the entire region; however, they have declined even further with the crisis.<sup>33</sup> Unemployment among the working female population stands at 19.6 per cent.<sup>34</sup> The closure and separation of the rest of the West Bank from East Jerusalem has limited the access of women from East Jerusalem to employment opportunities.<sup>35</sup>

<sup>24</sup> UNICEF Humanitarian Action Report 2006, p. 106.

<sup>25</sup> A/HRC/2/5, para. 32.

<sup>26</sup> A/61/67-E/2006/13, para. 55.

<sup>27</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixtieth Session, Supplement No. 13 (A/60/13), para. 67.

<sup>28</sup> Ibid.

<sup>29</sup> Ibid.

<sup>30</sup> Ibid.

<sup>31</sup> Ibid.

<sup>32</sup> Millennium Development Goals, Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2005 Progress Report, December 2005, p. 34.

<sup>33</sup> ILO (2006) report of the Director-General on the situation of workers in the occupied Arab territories, para. 79.

<sup>34</sup> Focus 2005, vol. 4, published by Communications Office of the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 45.

<sup>35</sup> Millennium Development Goals, Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2005 Progress Report, December 2005, p. 34.

16. Despite their low participation in the workforce, Palestinian women have traditionally played a major role in agricultural production.<sup>36</sup> Nearly 90 per cent of unpaid female family members are engaged in agricultural work.<sup>37</sup> With the loss of land to Israel, Palestinian women are affected by the loss of both a vital source of income and their role as economic producers.<sup>38</sup>

17. During the reporting period, the labour market of the Occupied Palestinian Territory was subject to persistent and unpredictable security restrictions on the movement of people and products.<sup>39</sup> Higher levels of conflict and closure also placed a greater economic and psychological burden on Palestinian women, who not only remained primarily responsible for running the household and caring for family members, but also increasingly engaged in informal employment or self-employment activities to supplement their household incomes.<sup>40</sup>

18. To compensate for lost household income, more Palestinian women were initiating various types of income-generating activities with the support of microcredit institutions.<sup>41</sup> Despite the difficult environment prevailing in the West Bank and Gaza, the number of women participating in savings and credit associations increased by 6 per cent, the savings mobilized increased by 24 per cent and the total amount of loans increased by 32 per cent.<sup>42</sup> The total number of women members in the savings and credit associations stood at 5,636 persons and their savings reached $1,471,524.<sup>43</sup> The total number of loans issued by the savings and credit associations reached 3,634 loans.<sup>44</sup> The savings and credit associations' loans provided employment opportunities to female and male members of the households and improved the overall income of the beneficiaries.<sup>45</sup>

19. Employment opportunities were limited for women,<sup>46</sup> as illustrated, for example, by the fact that Palestinian women accounted for 31.2 per cent of lawyers, 21.4 per cent of journalists and 11.7 per cent of doctors.<sup>47</sup> The female Palestinian labour force continued to be heavily concentrated in agriculture and services, whereas the male labour force is more evenly distributed across the main sectors.<sup>48</sup>

20. Palestinian women have limited access to decision-making. Only 9 per cent of judges and 12.2 per cent of prosecutors in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were women.<sup>49</sup> The Millennium Development Goals Report for the Occupied Palestinian

<sup>36</sup> A/61/67-E/2006/13, para. 73.

<sup>37</sup> World Bank (2006) "West Bank and Gaza, Economic Update and Potential Outlook", p. 24.

<sup>38</sup> A/61/67-E/2006/13, para. 73.

<sup>39</sup> ILO (2006) report of the Director-General on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories, preface.

<sup>40</sup> Ibid., para. 38.

<sup>41</sup> Ibid., para. 90.

<sup>42</sup> IFAD contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>43</sup> Ibid.

<sup>44</sup> Ibid.

<sup>45</sup> Ibid.

<sup>46</sup> ILO (2006) report of the Director-General on the situation of workers in the occupied Arab territories, para. 106.

<sup>47</sup> Focus 2005, Vol. 4, published by Communications Office of the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 45.

<sup>48</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics cited in World Bank (2006) "West Bank and Gaza, Education Sector Analysis", para. 123.

<sup>49</sup> Focus 2005, Vol. 4, published by Communications Office of the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 45.

Territories (2005) pointed out that the political participation of women in Palestinian society is low.<sup>50</sup> The proportion of seats held by women in the national parliament remained 5.7 per cent from 1995 to 2004.<sup>51</sup> At the level of local government, women's political participation in 2005 was higher, at 19.3 per cent in the West Bank and 17 per cent in the Gaza Strip.<sup>52</sup> By 2005, more than seven ministries had established gender units, including the Ministry of Agriculture and the Ministry of Local Government.<sup>53</sup>

21. Although the Palestinian Constitution promotes gender equality, this is not always reflected in the drafting or implementation of laws and legislation.<sup>54</sup> Palestinian women are subjected to discrimination under the laws governing marriage, divorce, the custody of children, inheritance and domestic violence.<sup>55</sup>

22. As reported by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967, the occupation and the separation barrier continued to violate Palestinian women's rights.<sup>56</sup> The Special Rapporteur noted that the barrier in Jerusalem, in particular, resulted in the separation of families, as husbands and wives may separate to allow the Jerusalem identity holder to retain his or her benefits.<sup>57</sup> Furthermore, an Israeli law on citizenship prohibited Palestinians who marry Israeli Arabs from living with their spouses in Israel.<sup>58</sup>

23. Continuous violence took an intolerable toll on the physical and psychological well-being of Palestinian women.<sup>59</sup> Every aspect of their daily lives was impacted by violence and restrictions on their freedom and dignity.<sup>60</sup>

24. A case study on gender-based violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, commissioned by UNFPA and presented to an international symposium in Brussels in June 2006,<sup>61</sup> suggested that gender-based violence was increasing as a result of the increased political tension and violence.<sup>62</sup> According to a report released by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics in February 2006 on domestic violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,<sup>63</sup> 61.7 per cent of married women had been exposed to psychological abuse, 23.3 per cent to physical abuse and 10.6 per cent to

<sup>50</sup> Millennium Development Goals, Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2005 Progress Report, December 2005, p. 32.

<sup>51</sup> Ibid., p. 34.

<sup>52</sup> Ibid., p. 34.

<sup>53</sup> Focus 2005, Vol. 4, published by Communications Office of the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 5.

<sup>54</sup> Millennium Development Goals, Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2005 Progress Report, December 2005, p. 34.

<sup>55</sup> UNFPA "Reassessing institutional support for Security Council resolution 1325, defining the UNFPA role and strengthening support for women affected by conflict" consultative meeting, Bucharest, 17-20 October 2005.

<sup>56</sup> E/CN.4/2006/29, para. 46.

<sup>57</sup> A/HRC/2/5, para. 63.

<sup>58</sup> Ibid.

<sup>59</sup> OCHA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>60</sup> Ibid.

<sup>61</sup> www.unfpa.org/emergencies/symposium06/index.htm (accessed on 4 October 2006).

<sup>62</sup> UNFPA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>63</sup> Palestinian National Authority, Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, press conference on the preliminary results of the Domestic Violence Survey (2005), February 2006, www.pcbs.gov.ps, cited in UNIFEM "Gender profile of the conflict in the Occupied Palestinian Territory".

sexual abuse. In addition, 63.6 per cent of unmarried women (18 years and over) were exposed to psychological abuse and 24.6 per cent to physical abuse.

25. Steps have been taken by the Palestinian Authority to address the issues identified in the report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences.<sup>64</sup> A quota law providing that women must make up 20 per cent of local councils was approved; legislative steps were taken to address crimes against women committed in the name of honour; the police and the judiciary were being trained on issues related to violence against women; and gender units were created in police departments. In addition, a ministerial committee was created to amend the penal code to provide better protection to women and provide shelters to the victims of violence.<sup>65</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

26. This section is based on information submitted by entities of the United Nations system for the preparation of this report. Nine areas of assistance have been identified: education and training; health; employment and entrepreneurship; participation; human rights, including the elimination of violence against women; humanitarian assistance; advocacy; media; and gender mainstreaming.

A. Education and training

27. UNRWA, IFAD and the World Bank provided assistance in the area of education. The UNRWA education programme is one of the chief means of contributing to the human development of girls and women. The Agency promoted occupational training programmes, kindergartens and nurseries, through 65 Women Programme Centres. Women Programme Centres in three camps of the West Bank provided refugee women with information technology training and assisted 73 Palestinian refugee women in obtaining high school diplomas. About half of the teachers and those enrolled in the UNRWA pre-teaching service courses were women. The IFAD three Village Community Multipurpose Centres were used to conduct training courses for women in various educational fields.

B. Health

28. Several United Nations entities reported on activities to improve access to health care for Palestinian women. WHO established a thematic group for women and child health, which coordinates project activities of different donors and implementing agencies, exchanges information, provides advice and recommends priorities for women and children's health. WHO also provided logistical support to the Ministry of Health, United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), UNDP and UNFPA as required.

29. UNRWA undertook multisectoral activities, including full immunization coverage of women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases. UNRWA also provided pre-conception folic acid, iron and folic acid supplementation for pregnant women throughout pregnancy, as well as health education programmes on the prevention of tobacco use, HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases. In addition, the UNRWA community mental health programme in the Gaza Strip provided essential psychosocial support for Palestinian refugees living in situations of protracted violence and armed conflict. To facilitate gender-sensitive programming, the UNRWA health programme provides sex-disaggregated data whenever possible. To reduce gender-based health disparities, UNRWA encourages gender balance in recruitment and retention policies in its health programme.

---

<sup>64</sup> E/CN.4/2006/61, para. 4.

<sup>65</sup> Ibid.

30. UNFPA provided technical assistance on population and development, HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections, especially among adolescents. UNFPA strengthened the integration of reproductive health care in 39 public health centres and two non-governmental organization clinics. Through its emergency obstetric programme, UNFPA continued to ensure safe delivery for women in isolated areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. In Bureij and Jabaliya, two innovative women's health centres continued to provide reproductive health care to women in two of the most populated and underprivileged areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

31. UNFPA also aided the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics and the Ministry of Health to identify indicators to measure the impact of the collapse of the health system on pregnant women, as well as on the overload of the maternity wards in central referral systems.

32. UNIFEM undertook activities to strengthen the institutional capacities of service providers in order to improve the quality of services, resources and information for women. Activities included gender training for the psychosocial teams employed by UNICEF in the Gaza Strip. Coordination meetings among counselling service providers were also set up. UNIFEM also worked on mobilizing and strengthening existing networks among non-governmental organizations to build capacity for better service provision for rural women. During the reporting period, 15 psychosocial counsellors and social workers provided psychosocial counselling interventions for over 1,000 women in the Gaza Strip.

33. UNV is implementing a project on solid waste management to improve the health and environmental conditions of residents of the town of Asira and four surrounding villages in the Nablus area. Women volunteers lead training sessions and organize and conduct visits to households to train other women on waste separation and proper modes of waste collection.

C. Employment

34. Assistance provided in the area of employment included training, research and the provision of jobs. UNRWA expanded the apprenticeship programme offered by seven Women's Programme Centres, to give 151 unemployed refugee women in Lebanon access to training and employment opportunities. As part of a larger research initiative, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process assessed the impact of the Israeli disengagement from Gaza on living conditions, with particular emphasis on women's participation in the labour market.

D. Entrepreneurship

35. Several United Nations entities provided loans, grants and training to enhance Palestinian women's entrepreneurship. Phase II of the IFAD Rehabilitation and Development Project continued to have a strong focus on women's economic empowerment, primarily through access to microfinance and entrepreneurial skills. IFAD noted that the activities for women entrepreneurs had shown a great degree of resilience, as evidenced by the safeguarding of their capital and the continued growth of the enterprises. The IFAD Business Service Centre in Gaza disbursed 228 loans (amounting to $579,800) to women entrepreneurs for animal and agricultural production and, to a lesser degree, for food processing and handicrafts. A similar business service centre was being established in Jericho.

36. As a part of phase II of the Rehabilitation and Development Programme, two community centres in Azzoun and Jayyous villages were officially opened to serve the financial and social needs of women in the area. The Palestinian Agriculture Relief Committees granted 12 women's regional savings and credit cooperatives interest-free loans. Ten women members of savings and credit associations participated in an exhibition during the olive harvest festival of Bethlehem, in which the complete cycle of production of income-generating projects was demonstrated, encouraging other women to consider establishing joint projects for marketing goods and obtaining group loans.

37. During the reporting period, UNRWA disbursed over 3,558 solidarity group loans to women microentrepreneurs in the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. UNRWA had a portfolio of over 12,980 loans in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with an outstanding portfolio of over $7.9 million, of which 23.4 per cent were held by women clients.

38. UNIFEM implemented projects in nine rural communities as part of the pilot phase II of the Sabaya programme, which focused on the economic security of women. Through this initiative, a total of 106 rural women procured equipment and machinery and acquired skills that helped them in the establishment of their enterprises. As a result, four income-generating enterprises were established, run and managed by the women themselves: an electronic bakery, a sewing factory, a day-care centre and a chicken farm. In April 2006, the Sabaya programme was expanded to include a total of 18 women centres in both the West Bank and Gaza Strip. A large cross-regional exhibition on the development and marketing of Palestinian women's handicrafts was organized, where products from some of the women's centres under the Sabaya programme were exhibited and contacts established with individuals, groups and organizations involved in the handicrafts sector, with a view to future cooperation.

39. UNCTAD established a Palestinian Shippers Council, chaired by a successful businesswoman. It actively promoted the recruitment of Palestinian women to the Council and encouraged women's participation in all Council activities.

40. Training activities to enhance Palestinian women's entrepreneurial capacities were provided by several entities. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) organized interactive training sessions for over 100 women as a means of upgrading their dairy processing skills. WFP provided Palestinian women with food for work and training activities, including the development of essential skills to reduce the gender gap in accessing education and training and thereby support women's contribution to household food security. WFP worked to ensure the equal participation of women and men in all WFP funded activities.

41. IFAD continued to provide capacity-building to the cooperatives of savings and credit associations: 1,250 women participated in 14 exchange visits to analyse the performance of the savings and credit associations and exchange knowledge and experience with other members.

42. The UNCTAD integrated capacity-building programme (Empretec) promoted the creation of sustainable support structures to help promising entrepreneurs build innovative and internationally competitive small and medium-sized enterprises. To date, Empretec has graduated 123 entrepreneurs, 16 per cent of whom were women.

E. Participation in decision-making

43. Several entities provided assistance to enhance the participation of Palestinian women in various sectors. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs maintained close links with women decision makers, including briefing newly appointed women ministers and government officials on developments in the humanitarian situation and how they affect women. During the local and legislative elections of December 2005 and January 2006, UNDP supported eight non-governmental organizations involved in voter education programmes to increase awareness of human rights, democratic participation and better integration of women in the democratic election process. With the support of UNDP, newly elected women members of local government were enabled to participate in training workshops on finance, management and law organized in eight districts in the West Bank.

44. At the local government level, UNIFEM supported the mobilization of over 140 rural women in 18 target locations. A women's committee and a coordinator were elected in each location to represent all the women of the communities. Workshops and periodic follow-up meetings to develop a needs assessment and workplan for each location have been instrumental in strengthening channels of communication between women and their local government representatives, in securing women's access to key infrastructure and in ensuring their involvement in decision-making on the best use of this infrastructure.

45. UNESCO organized the international symposium on the theme "Arab women between east and west" in June 2006, with the aim of building links between Arab and European women and promoting the participation of Arab women in economic, social and cultural development. The Symposium's side-event exhibition, "Creativity of Arab women", presented works of Palestinian female artists and craftswomen, and illustrated their role in perpetuating traditions.

46. The World Bank Development Grant Facility supported the Arab Gender and Development Network. Fifteen Palestinian members benefited from an exchange of gender equality information with other members of the Network as well as research and training. The regional research project on the theme "Arab women and decision-making", supported by the World Bank, included a Palestinian national research team.

F. Women's human rights and elimination of violence against women

47. Several United Nations entities provided assistance related to Palestinian women's human rights, including the elimination of violence against women. OHCHR followed developments in Palestinian legislation with regard to women's rights; worked with Palestinian civil society partners on the incorporation of international human rights standards into existing or draft Palestinian legislation; and held discussions with the Women and Child Department of the Palestinian Legislative Council, together with women members recently elected to the Council, focusing on the role and the rights of Palestinian women.

48. OHCHR, UNFPA and the World Bank provided assistance to address violence against women. OHCHR worked closely with the judicial reform support group in the area of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour, and informed the group about the cultural background and legal framework behind this phenomenon. In November 2005, OHCHR participated in an initial advocacy campaign launched by civil society organizations to address the issue of domestic violence and worked in partnership with the national human rights institution and civil society to promote human rights, including women's rights.

49. UNIFEM supported the development of a Palestinian Women's Bill of Rights, a joint project between the Ministry of Women's Affairs and the General Union of Palestinian Women, with substantive inputs from Palestinian human rights non-governmental organizations and women's non-governmental organizations.

50. UNFPA supported the development of the national action plan of the Forum of Non-Governmental Organizations Combating Violence against Women, which includes the use of training for advocacy and strategy development on reproductive health to ensure that the national legislation is in line with the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and awareness-raising campaigns on the national action plan. The World Bank supported the Counselling Centre for Women in Difficult Circumstances, which provides support, therapy and vocational training to, and advocacy services for, Palestinian women subject to domestic violence.

51. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, OHCHR, UNDP and UNRWA supported capacity-building on women's human rights and on the Convention. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia supported capacity-building for 61 government employees from various Palestinian ministries — including the Ministries of Women's Affairs; Social Affairs, Interior, Planning, Justice, Local Governance; Economy; Health; Education; Finance; Labour; Culture; Sports and Youth; and Agriculture — through four capacity-building training workshops on the Convention and on preparation of national reports, in accordance with the guidelines set by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

52. The OHCHR training courses for the staff of the Ministry of Women's Affairs provided an induction to United Nations human rights treaties and mechanisms, including reporting to treaty bodies, with a focus on the Convention. OHCHR also conducted training sessions on the Convention and the development of human rights concepts for representatives of Palestinian civil society, including various human rights organizations and non-governmental organizations. OHCHR continued to integrate women's issues into all training activities, including curricula, and to consider gender balance in the selection of participants.

53. UNDP supported the Ministry of Women's Affairs to provide capacity-building to gender units and staff in 15 line ministries on gender-responsive planning and research, and monitoring and reporting on implementation of the Convention.

54. With the support of UNRWA, the Women Programme Centres, which are pivotal in protecting the human rights of women and children, organized workshops, seminars and training on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child. In the Gaza Strip, over 19,000 women participated in awareness-raising workshops and in the Syrian Arab Republic, a large workshop was held on civil law and legal issues related to women.

G. Humanitarian assistance

55. Humanitarian assistance included provision of food, cash assistance, temporary work and access to health and other services. During the reporting period, UNRWA provided assistance to approximately 6 per cent of the Agency's poorest registered refugees (special hardship case families), 46 per cent of which were female-headed families. As part of its emergency programme, UNRWA distributed food to approximately 135,000 refugee families in the Gaza Strip and 75,000 others in the West Bank. During the reporting period, UNRWA created an estimated 1.8 million days of temporary work. Approximately 23 per cent of the beneficiaries of the Agency's emergency job creation scheme in the Gaza Strip were female heads of households. In the West Bank this figure was 17 per cent. WFP reported that at least 51 per cent of total hardship cases and institutional feeding beneficiaries assisted through the Ministry of Social Affairs were women.

56. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs supported UNIFEM, UNICEF and UNFPA in developing the Consolidated Appeal Process for several projects, including food security and capacity-building initiatives for marginalized women in 10 villages in the Occupied Palestinian Territory; reproductive health services; mobile psychosocial centres for women in the Gaza Strip; and psychosocial and reproductive health support to poor women in Gaza.

57. The World Bank, through its improved targeting scheme, under the Social Safety Net Reform Project, enabled poor adult women living on their own because of separation, divorce or widowhood, to receive cash assistance from the UNRWA Special Hardship Case Programme.

58. The socio-economic unit of the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process continued to monitor women's participation in the labour market and the effects of closure on their participation. Analysis from data collected each month was used in recommendations to donors and in a published study, "Economic fragmentation and adaptation in the rural West Bank".<sup>66</sup>

---

<sup>66</sup> Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process "Economic fragmentation and adaptation in the rural West Bank", October 2005.

H. Advocacy

59. Several United Nations entities carried out advocacy activities on the situation and rights of Palestinian women. OHCHR participated in various seminars and discussions addressing specific issues of concern on women's human rights, with the goal of highlighting how non-governmental organizations can use human rights mechanisms, especially Special Procedures. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs met with representatives of the Palestinian Women's Institutes, non-governmental organizations and decision makers, including the Ministry for Women's Affairs, and emphasized the role of advocacy for Palestinian women's human rights.

60. International meetings and conferences organized by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs included discussions of the situation of Palestinian women, with Palestinian women and representatives of civil society organizations as panellists. Participants at the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People in April 2006, the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Middle East Peace in June 2006 and the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People in September 2006 discussed, among other issues, the impact of the occupation on Palestinian women and children, the most vulnerable segment of the Palestinian society.

61. WFP collaborated with the Ministry of Agriculture to organize International Women's Day celebrations in March 2006. To mark International Women's Day in the Gaza Strip, OHCHR held a meeting with 50 refugee women, highlighting women's rights and participation in political life, and participated in activities that emphasized the challenges facing Palestinian women following the recent Palestinian Legislative Council elections.

62. UNESCO inaugurated the Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Centre on 18 January 2006. UNDP supported the second phase of the management of TAWASOL women's resource centres, which disseminate information on Palestinian women.

I. Media

63. During the reporting period, the Department of Public Information issued four press releases (two in French and two in English) related to Palestinian women. Through its UNifeed service, a daily satellite television newsfeed that reaches hundreds of broadcasters around the world, the Department distributed 12 stories related to the question of Palestine, some of which referred specifically to women and children. In its daily news programmes and current affairs magazines, distributed regionally and worldwide, the Department covered issues related to Palestinian women and children, in both official and non-official languages. The Department also organized an international media seminar on the theme "New challenges in the Middle East peace process and Israeli-Palestinian dialogue" (June 2006), in which two Palestinian women participated.

64. The United Nations Information Service at Geneva organized five press conferences during the reporting period on matters pertaining specifically to Palestinian women. The inter-agency public information and advocacy committee of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs published press statements providing the latest facts and figures relating to women.

65. Several entities provided assistance in film production activities related to Palestinian women. UNRWA produced the film “Mother Aysha”, which tells the story of a woman in the Gaza Strip who freed her family from economic difficulty by starting a small business with a loan from UNRWA. UNFPA produced a film on reproductive health services for adolescents, entitled “Strengthening emergency obstetric care in Palestine”, focusing on the work in reproductive health with refugees of the Jabaliya and Bureij Women’s Health Centres in the Gaza Strip. The UNESCO documentary film on women’s experiences, “On the road to dialogue”, demonstrates the potential of dialogue for increasing understanding through joint Israeli-Palestinian experiences. In connection with the first Palestinian women’s film festival, organized in August 2005 with support from UNESCO, the non-governmental organization Shashat set up a multimedia reference library in Ramallah on the subject of women’s cinema.

66. Assistance also included training in media and news production. In the Department of Public Information Training Programme for Palestinian Media Practitioners (November 2005), six of the 10 media participants were women. UNESCO designed and conducted a training course for 10 Palestinian women journalists on television journalism and television reporting (December 2005). As part of its Sabaya programme, UNIFEM conducted training in filming, photography and web design at one of the phase I centres, which benefited 10 rural women from five villages.

67. The Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Public Information have included information about Palestinian women in their websites. The Department of Political Affairs continued to update the documents collection under the subject category “women” in the Internet-based United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL), as well as electronic links to relevant web sites outside UNISPAL. The Department of Political Affairs continues to maintain a special web address (<http://domino.un.org/unispal.nsf/women>), which allows external websites to link to the UNISPAL subject category on Palestinian women. The Department of Public Information, through a special feature page, “News Focus: Middle East”, maintained easy access to a variety of source documents and information materials on the situation of, and assistance to, Palestinian women.

J. Gender mainstreaming

68. Several United Nations entities undertook activities to strengthen institutional capacities for gender mainstreaming. UNDP supported the Palestinian Ministry of Women’s Affairs to mainstream gender perspectives in major sectors through the establishment of gender units in 15 line ministries. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs continued to highlight the situation of Palestinian women in its reports using data disaggregated by sex and age and data on the number of women living below the poverty line, or in deep poverty.

69. UNFPA provided assistance for institutional capacity-building for gender mainstreaming through the development of a gender audit in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The audit provided a comprehensive review of the gaps preventing the effective implementation of gender equality and the empowerment of women in national planning and policy.

70. FAO carried out sensitization and training in gender analysis, including the training of trainers, to raise awareness of the importance of gender mainstreaming in the rehabilitation and reconstruction process, and of empowering existing women's associations to play a greater role in cooperative production and marketing. The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) reported that its post-conflict assessments will include sex-disaggregated data on a systematic basis.

71. To support the mainstreaming of gender perspectives in national planning processes, UNIFEM collaborated with the Ministry of Women's Affairs in drafting the chapter on promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women in the 2005 progress report on Millennium Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. UNIFEM also collaborated with the Ministry of Women's Affairs on the content of the gender equality section of the "country assessment lite" document (a simpler version of the Common Country Assessment exercise), in preparation for a future common United Nations Development Assistance Framework.

IV. Conclusion and recommendations

72. During the reporting period, the conflict and the widening fiscal deficit adversely affected women in all spheres of life. Increased restrictions on free movement in and out of the Gaza Strip and within the West Bank left many women unable to access the most basic services.<sup>67</sup> The reduction of electricity and fuel supply, together with the disruption of water supplies, had a severe impact on the daily life of Palestinians.<sup>68</sup> Female employment rates, which have been historically low in the entire region, declined even further with the crisis.<sup>69</sup> Unemployment among the working female population stands at 19.6 per cent.<sup>70</sup> Palestinian women were not only primarily responsible for running households but were also increasingly engaged in informal employment or self-employment activities to supplement their household incomes. The Millennium Development Goals Report for the Occupied Palestinian Territory (2005) pointed out that political participation of women in Palestinian society remained low.<sup>71</sup> Gender-based violence was reported to be widespread.<sup>72</sup> Steps were, however, taken by the Palestinian Authority to address the issues identified in the report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences.<sup>73</sup>

73. Entities of the United Nations system continued to make efforts to improve the situation of Palestinian women. WHO noted that the financial

---

<sup>67</sup> OCHA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>68</sup> A/HRC/2/5, para. 5.

<sup>69</sup> ILO, 2006, report of the Director-General on the situation of workers in the occupied Arab territories, para. 79.

<sup>70</sup> Focus 2005, Vol. 4, published by the Communications Office of the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to Palestinian People, p. 45.

<sup>71</sup> Millennium Development Goals, Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2005 Progress Report, December 2005, p. 32.

<sup>72</sup> UNFPA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>73</sup> E/CN.4/2006/61, para. 4.

crisis threatened to undermine the delivery of health services that served the majority of the Palestinian population, including women.<sup>74</sup>

74. The achievement of gender equality and empowerment of Palestinian women is dependant on a secure and lasting peace. Efforts should be made to ensure that conflict resolution, peacebuilding and reconciliation and reconstruction efforts fully incorporate gender perspectives and that women are involved in these activities, as called for in the Beijing Platform for Action, the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000).

75. The Ministerial Declaration adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its High-level Segment in July 2006 underlined the important contribution that employment generation can make to post-conflict reconstruction and development.<sup>75</sup> The creation of an enabling environment for gender equality and the empowerment of Palestinian women requires ending discrimination against Palestinian women in the labour market, through both legal and policy measures, including eliminating occupational segregation and gender wage gaps.

76. The Commission may wish to encourage Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant stakeholders to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women, to fully incorporate gender perspectives into all areas of support to the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to systematically assess the impact of these efforts.

---

<sup>74</sup> WHO contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>75</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixty-first Session, Supplement No 1 (A/61/1), para. 50.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
3 December 2007

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-second session

25 February-7 March 2008

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between October 2006 and September 2007, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2007/7. It reviews the situation of Palestinian women and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system, inter alia, with regard to humanitarian assistance, economic activities, education and training, health and the human rights of women. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2008/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2007/7 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out in the previous report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2007/4) and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-second session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from October 2006 to September 2007, and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, and the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967.

3. The report also reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Department of Political Affairs, the Department of Public Information, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the World Food Programme (WFP), the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the World Bank.

4. The social and economic situation of Palestinian women from 2000-2006 was highlighted in a report commissioned by the ESCWA Centre for Women (E/ESCWA/ECW/2007/Technical Paper.1), which was distributed to countries and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) during the fifty-first session of the Commission on the Status of Women. ESCWA also prepared the report entitled "Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people, including Palestinian women, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan", contained in the note by the Secretary-General (A/62/75-E/2007/13).

5. The present report provides recommendations on improving the situation of Palestinian women, including through the continued assistance of the United Nations system.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

6. During the period under review, the crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory deepened and continued to claim lives (A/62/82-E/2007/66, para. 77). The Israeli-Hizbullah conflict in Lebanon and its political fallout brought to a halt any Israeli attempts to implement a unilateral withdrawal from parts of the West Bank (ibid., para. 9). Settlement activity and construction of the barrier continued in the West Bank, as did Israeli incursions into population centres. Efforts to bring political progress through dialogue between President Abbas and Prime Minister Olmert have continued, under the auspices of the United States Secretary of State.

7. In addition, an intense round of intra-Palestinian violence in Gaza in December 2006 and January 2007 threatened to degenerate into civil war (ibid., para. 8). An agreement, reached on 8 February 2007 to end the factional violence, and the subsequent formation of the Palestinian Government of National Unity, calmed the situation, though clan feuds continued in Gaza where law and order are yet to be fully restored and the firing of rockets into Israel is yet to be halted (ibid.). The Government of National Unity came to an end in June 2007, when President Abbas dismissed Prime Minister Ismail Haniyeh and appointed a Government led by Salam Fayyad, which committed to the Quartet principles. With the formation of the Government, the European Union and the United States announced their intention to renew direct assistance to the Palestinian Authority.<sup>1</sup> The United Nations strongly advocated for all parties to adhere to their obligations under international humanitarian law regarding the use of force and the protection of civilians. Through the Quartet and other channels, the United Nations worked to facilitate the release of Palestinian customs and tax revenues through agreed mechanisms, and encouraged the international community to continue to assist Palestinians in need (A/62/82-E/2007/66, para. 10).

8. The conflict continued to have a serious detrimental effect on all Palestinian people. According to the report of the Director-General of the International Labour Organization on the situation of workers in the occupied Arab territories, living standards declined; poverty and unemployment increased; and social disintegration and political disarray intensified.<sup>2</sup> The report also indicated that the financial embargo imposed by the international community on the Palestinian Authority, the withholding of Palestinian revenues by Israel, the suspension by Western donors of their direct budget support, and the restrictions on mobility have led to the further deterioration of the situation as compared with the previous year.<sup>3</sup>

9. The ongoing conflict has resulted in a near collapse of the Palestinian economy, soaring unemployment and a sharp increase in poverty.<sup>4</sup> The World Bank

---

<sup>1</sup> Department of Public Information, News and Media Division, Press release of 5701st meeting (AM) of the Security Council, 20 June 2007 (SC/9053).

<sup>2</sup> ILO (2007). Report of the Director-General on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories, para. 7.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid.

<sup>4</sup> World Bank, Country Brief: Middle East and North Africa Region, West Bank and Gaza (September 2007).

reported that during the last two years, the collapse has accelerated, with gross domestic product contracting by nearly 9 per cent in 2006 and by 4.2 per cent in the first quarter of 2007. The long-standing fiscal crisis deepened further in 2006 as a result of Israel's withholding of Palestinian clearance revenues and the aid boycott, resulting in a deficit of over 1 billion United States dollars ($).<sup>4</sup>

10. Poverty and unemployment reached very high levels, with close to 66 per cent of all households in the Occupied Palestinian Territory living below the national poverty line and 24 per cent of the labour force unemployed.<sup>5</sup> The situation was particularly severe in Gaza, where 80 per cent of the population relied on United Nations food aid and 88 per cent lived below the official poverty line of $2.20 per day (ibid., para. 15). There are substantial gender differences in the labour market, and military occupation has tended to reinforce discrimination both directly and indirectly.<sup>6</sup> According to ILO calculations based on the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, in 2006 only 14.7 per cent of women were in employment, compared to 52.0 per cent of men. Most women were engaged in housekeeping (54.1 per cent) or studying (21.1 per cent).<sup>7</sup>

11. While 6 out of 10 young women in the 15 to 24 age group were engaged in studies, the investment was lost to Palestinian society as very few Palestinian women were in employment.<sup>8</sup> Only 4.5 per cent of young women were in employment in 2006, compared to 28.6 per cent of young men. Nearly one in three young women was engaged in housekeeping.<sup>7</sup>

12. The lives of Palestinian women continued to be at great risk as evidenced by the increasing number of women killed or injured.<sup>9</sup> Between 1 September 2006 and 31 August 2007, a total of 67 Palestinian women were killed as a result of the direct conflict or internal violence and 120 were injured throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. During the same period, direct conflict resulted in the killing of 2 Israeli women and the injury of 12 others.<sup>9</sup> As of June 2007, 118 Palestinian women, including minors, pregnant women and mothers, remained in Israeli prisons, detention facilities and camps.<sup>10</sup>

13. The right to freedom of movement has continued to be obstructed by more than 500 checkpoints, roadblocks, earth mounds and other types of obstacles. Movement is also curtailed by the permit system and the barrier (A/62/360, para. 24). During the period under review there has been a 43 per cent increase in the number of checkpoints and obstacles to movement in the West Bank (ibid., para. 38). Primarily owing to closures, delays at checkpoints and the barrier, close to 30 per cent of pregnant women in the West Bank had difficulties accessing antenatal care and safe delivery.<sup>11</sup> Both primary and secondary services have declined, especially as the large majority of delivery and newborn care services (80 per cent of the deliveries in six Health Ministry hospitals in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip) are unable to perform regular maintenance. Pregnant women with post-natal

<sup>5</sup> ILO, op. cit., para. 12.

<sup>6</sup> ILO, op. cit., para 87.

<sup>7</sup> ILO, op. cit., table 3.3.

<sup>8</sup> ILO, op. cit., para. 88.

<sup>9</sup> Contribution of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs to the report (2007).

<sup>10</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixty-second Session, Supplement No. 35 (A/62/35), para. 20.

<sup>11</sup> Ibid., para. 31.

complications may also be at greater risk when discharged too early from the hospital owing to lack of staff and space. Emergency obstetrics has become a priority (see A/62/75-E/2007/13, para. 49).

14. According to UNFPA, the Palestinian Authority Ministry of Health reported that since 2000, at least 68 pregnant Palestinian women gave birth at Israeli checkpoints. Additionally, 10 per cent of pregnant women spent two to four hours on the road before reaching a medical centre or a hospital, while 6 per cent spent more than four hours, when the normal travelling time before the intifada was 15 to 30 minutes. This hardship is estimated to have contributed to an 8.2 per cent increase in the number of home deliveries.<sup>12</sup> According to Palestinian Authority Ministry of Health statistics for 2006, there were an estimated 117,000 pregnant women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including some 18,000 who suffered from difficult pregnancy and birth owing to a lack of appropriate and timely antenatal, delivery and post-natal care. In fact, inadequate medical care during pregnancy was the third cause of mortality among Palestinian women of reproductive age, according to the Palestinian Authority Ministry of Health (see A/HRC/4/57, para. 12).

15. Owing to the closures and the barrier, many families are reluctant to let their daughters endure the degrading experience of waiting at checkpoints or barrier crossing points, to be searched or subjected to harassment by Israeli soldiers, or to have to walk long distances to avoid such experiences. Families are much more likely to pressure young women to drop out of school and not pursue higher levels of education (A/62/75-E/2007/13, para. 65).

16. The Special Committee noted that the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had not improved during the reporting period, and particularly in the Gaza Strip, it had deteriorated significantly (A/62/360, para. 23). It was reported to the Special Committee that one pregnant prisoner was made to sit handcuffed on a small chair, was blindfolded and hit on the face. Some female prisoners had given birth in prison while tied to their beds. The Special Committee was also told that one of the ways to force suspects to surrender to Israel forces was to threaten their spouses and sisters with rape (ibid., para. 64). According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the intensity of Israeli actions in the month of May in the Gaza Strip had dramatically affected the already undermined physical and psychological security of women and severely reduced their enjoyment of basic human rights. In the central Gaza Strip, women were forced to cease all activities at a centre for women during the month of May owing to the threat of shelling in the area, as well as inter-factional violence. The increased level of violence among Palestinian factions had been an aggravating factor, contributing to the further collapse of women's protection.<sup>13</sup>

17. A 2005/2006 survey, published in 2007, carried out by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics found that violence against women, especially domestic violence, was one of the problems faced by households in the Western and Arab societies. Approximately two thirds of ever-married women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory stated that they had been subjected to psychological violence and almost one quarter had been subjected to physical violence from their husband. Among unmarried women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, more than one half stated that they had been subjected to psychological violence and a quarter of them to physical violence.<sup>14</sup> The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported an increase in the number of deaths for so-called immoral behaviour, including honour killings by families. In 2007 there were 11 cases of honour killings of women reported in the Gaza Strip.<sup>15</sup>

<sup>12</sup> UNFPA news feature, "Checkpoints compound the risks of childbirth for Palestinian women" (15 May 2007), available from <http://www.unfpa.org/news/news.cfm?ID=972>.

<sup>13</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, The Humanitarian Monitor: Occupied Palestinian Territory, No. 13 (May 2007), p. 7.

18. The right to education in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to be seriously affected by the occupation. UNRWA reported that the dropout rate was very high, graduation rates were low and female education was generally on the decline. It attributed the collapse of Gaza's education system and education standards to the cumulative effects of the occupation, closures, poverty and violence (A/62/360, para. 58). According to UNICEF, primary school enrolment rates for girls fell from a peak of 98 per cent in 2000/2001 to 92.1 per cent in 2005/2006. For boys, the decline was from 95.8 per cent to 90.5 per cent. A huge gap exists between the proportion of girls completing primary school (94.5 per cent) and those enrolling in secondary school (76.4 per cent).<sup>16</sup> Attendance at rural girls' schools declines even further at each education level (A/62/75-E/2007/13, para. 66).

19. UNICEF indicated that young Palestinian girls had few opportunities for development, recreation and participation, and that there were few safe spaces for young girls to congregate. Most of the 300 youth clubs across the Occupied Palestinian Territory lacked funding and were poorly managed and equipped.<sup>17</sup> Furthermore, UNICEF noted that the adolescence of many young women has been compromised by household demands, or pressures to marry early as the median age at first marriages for women was 18 years.<sup>16</sup>

20. Food insecurity disproportionately affects women and children. A study conducted by UNRWA in September 2006 revealed that 57.5 per cent of children from 6 to 36 months and 44.9 per cent of pregnant women in the Gaza Strip were anaemic.<sup>18</sup> Of children under 5 years of age, 22 per cent were vitamin A-deficient; 20 per cent showed signs of iodine deficiency (32 per cent in the West Bank and 3 per cent in the Gaza Strip); and 4.1 per cent in the Gaza Strip suffered from clinical vitamin D-deficiency (rickets). The increased incidence of non-communicable diseases, such as diabetes mellitus, cardiovascular diseases and cancer, represents an epidemiological shift that imposes additional burdens on the scarce human and financial resources (A/62/75-E/2007/13, para. 51). The 60th World Health Assembly expressed concern about the health crisis and rising levels of food insecurity and demanded improvement in the living and medical conditions of Palestinian detainees, including of women and children.<sup>19</sup>

---

<sup>14</sup> Palestinian National Authority, Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Violence against women in Palestinian society (Domestic Violence Survey 2005/2006).

<sup>15</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, OCHA Special Focus: Israeli-Palestinian Fatalities Since 2000 — Key Trends (August 2007), p. 5.

<sup>16</sup> UNICEF contribution to the report (2007).

<sup>17</sup> UNICEF Humanitarian Action Report 2007 (29 January 2007), excerpts.

<sup>18</sup> UNRWA contribution to the report (2006).

<sup>19</sup> Resolution WHA.60.2 entitled "Health conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan."

21. Women continued to outlive men. According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, in 2006 the life expectancy for men was 71.7 years compared to 73.2 years for women. In the West Bank, life expectancy was reported as 71.9 years for men and 73.6 years for women, and 71.4 years for men and 72.5 for women in the Gaza Strip.<sup>20</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

22. The present section focuses on the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system. Nine areas of support have been identified: education and training; information and communications technology; health; employment and entrepreneurship; women's human rights; violence against women; humanitarian assistance; advocacy and information; and gender mainstreaming.

A. Education and training

23. Several United Nations entities focused on initiatives to improve the access of women and girls to education and training opportunities. During the 2006/2007 academic year, approximately 500,000 students, half of them girls, were enrolled in UNRWA elementary, preparatory and secondary schools. Young women constituted 75 per cent of the beneficiaries of small scholarship projects undertaken by UNRWA.

24. Efforts were made to enhance access to education, including through construction and/or rehabilitation of community buildings for schools, school feeding projects and provision of school supplies. Within the framework of the Integrated Community Development Project ($15 million), the World Bank supported schools for girls, construction/rehabilitation of community buildings, and rehabilitation of kindergartens. UNIFEM partnered with WFP in a pilot phase of a West Bank school feeding project to provide over 13,000 schoolchildren with healthy midday snacks, which were produced in centres employing over 225 disadvantaged women. Approximately 100,000 schoolchildren in severely affected areas, half of them girls, were provided with school bags and stationery by UNICEF.

25. To enhance the quality of education, training was provided for 75 principals of girls' schools, 150 female school teachers, 2,000 newly appointed teachers and 120 new supervisors. Some 190 librarians in the West Bank were also supported.

26. An initiative was undertaken to empower girls through educational television programmes. The UNESCO Global Alliance for Cultural Diversity and the Spanish Agency for International Cooperation are developing a public-private partnership with Sesame Workshop, the non-profit educational organization behind Sesame Street, to produce the latest season of Shara'a Simsim, the Palestinian version of its internationally renowned educational television series. The season 2007-2008 focuses on promoting girls' education and gender equality.

27. To increase access to alternative spaces for learning and recreation, including those in rural areas, UNICEF supported learning centres. In 2007, some 68,200 adolescents, 51 per cent of them girls, participated in learning and recreational activities and many thousands more used the computer, library, sports and music facilities. The learning centres enabled adolescent girls, especially those living in rural areas, to participate in sports competitions for the first time.

---

<sup>20</sup> Palestinian National Authority, Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Demographic and Socioeconomic Status of the Palestinian People at the end of 2006 (December 2006).

28. Training programmes for women were provided in a wide range of areas, including leadership development, human rights and financial management. In the West Bank, Palestinian women benefited from the WFP Food-for-Work and training activities that focused on skills development, knowledge transfer and enhancement of the productive capacity of women. Women constituted 50 per cent of the village committee members involved in the selection of activities. The International Training Centre of ILO continued a project on “Social and civil dialogue for reconstruction and reconciliation” and provided training to Palestinian participants, 38 per cent of whom were female employees of governmental, employers’ and workers’ organizations as well as national and international organizations. ILO also organized several training workshops for women in trade unions to facilitate their participation in union activities, including election to leadership positions.

29. Activities were undertaken to enhance the capacity of women in financial management. UNIFEM provided training in management, including financial management, leadership and bookkeeping. UNDP organized trainings and workshops on finance, management and law in eight districts in the West Bank to enhance the capacities of newly elected mayors and female members of government. UNIFEM provided on-the-job training to women volunteers and administrative committee members of the Sabaya centres in the West Bank and Gaza Strip,

30. A number of training opportunities were also provided to rural women. In the rural areas of the West Bank, UNIFEM provided academic counselling for women and academic support classes for girls. Eighteen community centres established by UNDP are used as women’s centres for capacity development of rural women, legal counselling and income generation. UNIFEM also supported a food security and capacity-building initiative in the Gaza Strip, benefiting 50 women in rural areas by providing them with training and start-up costs for small-scale production projects.

B. Information and communication technology

31. Efforts were made to increase women’s equal access to and benefits from information and communication technologies. The UNRWA Department of Education continued to emphasize, inter alia, equal access of Palestinian refugee women to information and communications technologies, encourage gender equality in recruitment and retention policies and build capacity to produce appropriate information content. The World Bank financed the establishment of five multi-purpose community telecentres that provided safe access by women and girls to information and communications services and technologies through the use of female-friendly office hours, discount offers for female members, a comfortable visiting environment, and a regular focus on female non-formal education opportunities.

32. Through the Sabaya Programme, UNIFEM supported an electronic discussion among rural women aimed at building their capacity to use the Internet as a form of communication and expression, and as a means of collecting and processing data and information relevant to their needs. The use of information technology serves to overcome movement restrictions imposed upon women by military occupation and by societal customs.

33. UNESCO reported that 28 female journalists and media professionals from Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, and the Palestinian Authority participated in a training workshop on the topic "Use of ICT in media for female journalists", held in Jordan in August 2007. The workshop included, inter alia, an analysis of current media vehicles for women, the way in which the media is addressing women's needs and gender equality issues.

C. Health

34. During the reporting period, United Nations entities focused on increasing women's access to reproductive health services, psychological counselling, health education and disease prevention programmes, immunizations, and provision of safe water and sanitary facilities. UNFPA provided a range of activities geared towards maintaining the integrity of the health system. Among these were: support to the delivery of reproductive health services through the procurement of reproductive health commodities and equipment for primary health centres and maternity wards; delivery of fuel for the referral system; the transfer of emergency obstetric cases and women with genital cancers; and procurement of generators for eight health centres in Gaza after the destruction of the electrical power grid in Gaza. UNRWA sought to strengthen gender-sensitive health programming by obtaining, where possible, sex-disaggregated data and encouraging gender equality in recruitment and retention policies.

35. Family planning and antenatal care was provided by a number of entities. Approximately 90,000 women received antenatal care in the five fields of UNRWA operations. More than 20,000 women sought family planning guidance for the first time and more than 110,000 women benefited from the service. About 100,000 pregnant women and nursing mothers benefited from the UNRWA food aid programme; up to 95,000 women with diabetes and/or hypertension received care in UNRWA non-communicable disease clinics; and 45,000 women were assisted with admission to hospitals. UNFPA also focused on projects that respond to the needs of youth, including young women's needs emerging from the crisis.

36. Various entities also provided psychosocial counselling to women. For example, UNFPA, in cooperation with the Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education, implemented a new project with an innovative approach in the field of psychosocial counselling. The UNRWA Community Mental Health Programme in the Gaza Strip provided essential psychosocial support for Palestinian refugees living in situations of protracted violence and armed conflict. UNIFEM provided psychosocial counselling through specialized lectures, group counselling sessions, one-to-one consultations and information dissemination, with over 1,000 women as direct beneficiaries. UNIFEM also set up mobile psychosocial teams that conducted group sessions, individual therapy, home-delivered psychotherapy sessions, life skills trainings and health counselling services, directly benefiting over 2,500 Palestinian women.

37. Health education and training programmes, including on HIV/AIDS, were provided. UNIFEM conducted a specialized training for female school counsellors on sexuality, health and sexual violence with a focus on, inter alia, girls' education, including awareness-raising sessions on sexual violence. Sexual health education sessions for university students and youth, aimed at raising their awareness of HIV/AIDS and the vulnerability of women, were also supported. Health education programmes on the prevention of tobacco use, HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases were promoted by UNRWA.

38. Another important area of support from United Nations entities was vaccination programmes. UNRWA continued to offer women and children full immunization coverage against vaccine-preventable diseases. UNICEF supported the Ministry of Health in Gaza in producing vaccination record cards for approximately 140,000 infants and pregnant women, procuring emergency primary health-care kits, including obstetrics, midwifery, first aid, and baby and family hygiene kits. UNICEF also provided tetanus vaccines for 75,000 women of reproductive age, and promoted breastfeeding and appropriate child feeding practices.

39. Taking into account that women and girls have the major responsibility for collecting water for household use and often lack decent sanitation facilities, UNICEF focused on extending access to safe water and decent sanitation facilities in order to improve the situation of women and girls, including at school. UNICEF provided daily drinking water to 343 schools and 32 health facilities across Gaza, and is constructing or rehabilitating sanitation facilities at 52 schools and 8 clinics. In addition to constructing wells and water networks, UNICEF distributed 450 water tanks to rural families, and 6 mobile water tanks to Gaza municipalities.

D. Employment and entrepreneurship

40. Entities initiated or continued training for job placement, created employment opportunities and supported projects aimed at income generation and entrepreneurship. Joint initiatives, including research projects, were also undertaken by United Nations entities. ILO supported the project “Job placement for graduates of vocational programmes”, which aims to stimulate employment and income generation opportunities for 140 unemployed new graduates from Palestinian industrial/vocational schools and Ministry of Labour vocational training centres. The participation of women was 26 per cent in Gaza and 38 per cent in the West Bank, and 55 per cent of the total trainees received permanent jobs.

41. The Occupied Palestinian Territory was included in the ILO-led regional programme “Gender equality and workers’ rights in the informal economies of the Arab States” (2006-2008), a joint initiative of the ILO Regional Office for the Arab States, the Centre for Arab Women Training and Research, the International Development Research Centre and the Arab Gulf Programme for United Nations Development Organizations. The two-year initiative consists of three interlinked components: research, training, and policy advocacy. During the research phase, two regional background papers on statistics and social protection and five country case studies (Egypt, Lebanon, Tunisia, Yemen and the Occupied Palestinian Territory), were produced and discussed during a research workshop held in Tunis in April 2007. Three Palestinian researchers developed a country case study that focuses on extending social protection to workers in the informal economy from gender equality and workers’ rights perspectives. Currently the project is entering the training phase, which will culminate in a regional training on social protection and statistics in the informal economy. The third component on policy advocacy will focus on specific policy briefs and round tables addressing policymakers and think tanks.

42. The International Labour Organization committed $1 million for the establishment of the Palestinian Fund for Employment and Social Protection. The Fund serves as the institutional framework for resource mobilization and for social and economic development in three core programme areas: community infrastructure, enterprise and human resources. In August 2007, the ILO Regional Office for the Arab States fielded a multidisciplinary mission to the Occupied Palestinian Territory to formulate technical cooperation strategies aimed at poverty reduction and the promotion of decent and productive employment for Palestinians, with special emphasis on youth and women.

43. Initiatives, including joint initiatives, were undertaken with a view to building the capacity of key stakeholders in fostering women's entrepreneurship. The Empretec programme of UNCTAD and ILO aims to support the development of small and medium-size enterprises, through building institutional capacity for establishing a dynamic private sector and internationally competitive enterprises. Of the 123 trainees who graduated, 16 per cent were women, representing leading industries and services across the West Bank. A round-table meeting for the Chairmen and Senior Executives of the Federation of Palestinian Chambers of Commerce and Industry and its 14 member chambers in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, supported by ILO, aimed to improve the role of employers' organizations in employment creation, particularly through the promotion of small and medium enterprises, with a special focus on strengthening and empowering women's entrepreneurship.

44. As women microentrepreneurs are among the poorest members of communities, credit to these women constitutes a fundamental source of capital that enables them to meet the basic needs of their families. During the reporting period, UNRWA disbursed over 38,000 solidarity group loans, valued at over $25 million, to women microentrepreneurs in the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. The Agency also provided over 5,500 consumer loans, worth over $3.2 million, to working-class families in the Gaza Strip with no access to bank loans. In June 2006, UNRWA had a portfolio of more than 13,600 loans in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, valued at over $9.6 million, 20 per cent of which were held by women clients.

45. With a view to enhancing the role of Palestinian women in the improvement of national food security and the agricultural industry, FAO supported the continuation of the project "Support to household food security and income generation through bio-intensive backyard agricultural production and cottage industry activities for women in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip", started in 2006. To date, some 180 women have participated in intensive training in food preservation and processing, with a focus on market orientation. Fifty women were selected for the intensive "backyard production" component that includes grey-water recycling facilities to overcome limited water supply.

46. United Nations entities reported on efforts to create work for women, including through programmes and projects at the community level. UNRWA created an estimated 1.8 million days of temporary work under its direct-hire programme and community-based infrastructure and construction projects to help beneficiaries to maintain minimum levels of income and support their families. In the Gaza Strip and West Bank, 17 per cent of the beneficiaries were female heads of household. In 2006, UNESCO submitted to the Islamic Development Bank, a $2.8 million programme focused on generating job opportunities for young women and men, through revitalizing cultural heritage sites of old cities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Through various programmes and projects implemented during the reporting period, UNIFEM created employment opportunities for over 300 women, mostly from rural areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

47. The importance of including women in economic decision-making was highlighted by UNCTAD, which reported on the election, in 2007, of a leading Palestinian businesswoman to the Board that oversees a project entitled "Establishment of the Palestinian Shippers Council (PSC)", launched at the beginning of 2006, with the aim of protecting the interests of the Palestinian shipping community of exporters and importers. It was noted that women currently represent 40 per cent of the PSC management team.

48. In April 2007, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process led a joint United Nations system agency evaluation of socio-economic needs in the Jordan Valley, in particular those of women. Through the evaluation, priority areas of intervention were identified that would increase the economic participation of women in their communities. It is envisaged that a joint United Nations programme, coordinated by the Office, will follow towards the end of 2007.

E. Women's human rights

49. Several United Nations entities undertook initiatives focused on protecting and promoting the human rights of Palestinian women and girls, including through advocacy, training, seminars, support to the fulfilment of reporting obligations and preparation of action plans. OHCHR-Palestine, along with various representatives of Palestinian civil society, continued developing advocacy strategies to encourage the incorporation of international human rights standards into the Palestinian legislation and policy, with a special focus on women's rights. In 2007, OHCHR-Palestine conducted advocacy activities with the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry for Women and Children, on the issue of justice sector reform, emphasizing the need for enhancing women's access to justice and other social support mechanisms. OHCHR-Palestine participated in seminars and discussions addressing specific issues relating to women's rights. The work of relevant United Nations human rights mechanisms and the ways in which NGOs can effectively use such mechanisms, especially Special Procedures, to advance the rights of women were highlighted.

50. During the period under review, significant support was provided to capacity-building on women's human rights. OHCHR-Palestine conducted several trainings on women's human rights. Eight training courses were organized in the West Bank and Gaza Strip for representatives of Palestinian civil society, including human rights organizations and other NGOs. Gender balance was taken into account in the selection of participants and gender perspectives were integrated in the development of the curricula, objectives and goals and monitoring and evaluation. An intensive training of trainers course for Palestinian human rights defenders and activists from human rights organizations was organized. Workshops and training courses were also organized on women's rights and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, targeting representatives of Palestinian human rights organizations. In May 2007, OHCHR-Palestine conducted two courses specifically for female participants in the West Bank and Gaza City to educate women's groups on United Nations Special Procedures and the United Nations treaty bodies and submission of communications. Training on gender equality and women's human rights was delivered by UNIFEM to male and female youth members of the "Youth Rights Monitor" project's Palestinian Legislative Council Monitoring Committee and of the project's Media Committee.

51. In close cooperation with OHCHR, UNESCO actively participated in the implementation of the World Programme for Human Rights Education Plan of Action for 2005-2007 in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The two entities will collaborate on the first stages of this project aimed at promoting human rights, peace, democratic citizenship, intercultural understanding and human rights education. The initial stage of the project, which analyses the current situation of human rights education in the Palestinian school system, was completed in late 2006.

52. As part of its capacity-building and awareness-raising campaign on women's human rights and violence against women in the Gaza Strip, UNIFEM provided legal counselling and legal literacy services to more than 1,500 women in marginalized areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. As executing agency for the United Nations Democracy Fund "Youth Rights Monitor" project, UNIFEM has taken a gender-sensitive approach to monitoring youth rights and in advocacy through the local media.

53. OHCHR-Palestine engaged closely with Palestinian women's organizations in coordinating a unified alternative report for the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and participated in various seminars and discussions addressing specific issues related to women's rights, highlighting the work of relevant United Nations human rights mechanisms and how NGOs can effectively use such mechanisms to advance the rights of women.

F. Violence against women

54. The issue of violence against women was taken up by a range of United Nations entities, in collaboration with some Palestinian NGOs. For example, OHCHR-Palestine, UNFPA, WHO and Al-Muntada (Palestinian Non-Governmental Organizations against Domestic Violence) organized a series of activities across the Occupied Palestinian Territory in commemoration of the International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women. These activities included a countrywide media campaign from 25 November to 10 December 2006. Ten workshops, facilitated by Al-Muntada, were held at various locations throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Each workshop focused on gender-based violence and the psychological and social health of women as affected by the current political, social and economic situation confronting the Palestinian society. An advocacy plan was subsequently developed for civil society organizations to ensure that the recommendations would be acted upon. OHCHR-Palestine continued to follow developments in relation to domestic violence against women, including through participation in the initial advocacy campaign launched by civil society organizations to address the issue. The campaign concluded with the drafting of a plan of action that was formally launched by the Ministry of Women's Affairs in November 2006.

55. UNESCO produced and published a fact sheet on violence against women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which was distributed in December 2006 during the National Campaign on the Elimination of Violence against Women.

G. Humanitarian assistance

56. United Nations entities continued to provide humanitarian assistance to Palestinian women living in refugee camps and disadvantaged villages. Activities included providing food, monetary assistance, creating an environment conducive for learning and providing extracurricular activities.

57. UNRWA provided special assistance to over 1 million refugees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 45 per cent of whom were female heads of households. The Agency's special hardship assistance provided the poorest families with a critical safety net in the form of food support, selective cash assistance and preferential access to the Agency's vocational training centres, where pupils could learn skills to help to lift their families out of poverty.

58. UNESCO continued its participation in the project "Isolated and disenfranchised communities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory", funded by the Trust Fund for Human Security. The project aims to address the most urgent needs of Palestinian people living in 14 disadvantaged villages and 2 refugee camps, including through enhancing their learning environment and implementing extracurricular activities, promoting intangible and oral heritage, with special attention to cultural projects with potential for employment generation, and producing informative radio programmes, talk shows and documentaries.

H. Advocacy and information

59. Several United Nations entities carried out advocacy activities, including through meetings, conferences, establishment of databases and research. Entities also collected, analysed and disseminated information on the situation of Palestinian women.

60. The Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs organized seminars and conferences that included a focus on the situation of Palestinian women. For example, the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, held in Doha in February 2007, as one of its sub-themes, addressed the plight of the most vulnerable segments of the Palestinian society, including women. The United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, held in Brussels in August 2007, devoted one of its workshops to the topic of the empowerment of women and the role of women's organizations in promoting Israeli-Palestinian peace. The Division also held an annual consultative meeting with civil society organizations, including women representatives. Eighty women's organizations are currently accredited to the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People. In addition, the Department of Public Information, in cooperation with the Government of Japan and the United Nations University, organized an international media seminar entitled “Re-engaging the Israelis and the Palestinians in the search for a comprehensive and lasting political settlement”, in Tokyo in June 2007.

61. Several actors were instrumental in organizing activities to mark International Women’s Day in 2007. WFP, CHF International (formerly known as the Cooperative Housing Foundation), the Ministry of Agriculture in coordination with UNFPA, the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights and the Gaza Community Mental Health Programme organized a commemoration of International Women’s Day in Gaza in 2007. Activities focused on raising awareness on the theme “Ending impunity for violence against women”. In the West Bank, WFP-Occupied Palestinian Territory, in partnership with CHF International and the local committees, organized a celebration of International Women’s Day, including the opening of two exhibitions, of Food for Training products produced by women beneficiaries of the WFP Food for Training programme.

62. Research and documentation, including through databases, on the situation of Palestinian women were supported by a number of United Nations entities. Through its Palestinian Women’s Research and Documentation Centre, UNESCO commissioned, collected, analysed and disseminated research on gender equality and the human rights of women. The Centre developed online databases, produced publications, organized training courses and targeted seminars to ministries, NGOs, students and researchers. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs gathered information and documents on emerging gender issues through field networks and in collaboration with other humanitarian and development actors to inform its gender advocacy on women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Division for Palestinian Rights continued to update and expand the documents collection on Palestinian women in the Internet-based United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL). In addition, the UNESCO Palestinian Women’s Research and Documentation Centre published a documentary study entitled “Deferent roles of Palestinian women in the thirties and the forties: the political participation of Palestinian women”. The two editions were launched on 12 October 2006.

63. In order to raise awareness about the situation of Palestinian women in rural areas, UNIFEM continued to support the development of a database used by the Sabaya women’s centres to gather and update information on resources and services accessible to women within rural communities. During 2007, UNIFEM analysed data gathered from the 18 areas of implementation of its Sabaya Programme and developed relevant indicators on rural women. These indicators serve as a crucial tool for raising awareness about rural women’s needs among decision makers and service providers.

64. Film was also used as an advocacy tool to bring attention to the situation of women in the region. UNIFEM supported the production of an advocacy short documentary film, entitled Maria’s Grotto on the issue of femicide in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, filmed in the West Bank by the Palestinian filmmaker Buthina Khouri. The screenings of the film Divorce — the Iranian Way, in 18 rural communities through the Sabaya centres were also supported by UNIFEM. Over 660 women attended these film screenings and participated in the ensuing discussion sessions on women’s rights.

65. The Department of Public Information reported a special information programme on the “Question of Palestine”, aimed at sensitizing public opinion on this issue. The English Unit of United Nations Radio filed 10 news stories and 5 feature stories on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including on the situation of Palestinian women. The Arabic Unit of United Nations Radio covered the situation of, and assistance to, Palestinian women through news, features and in its weekly programme on women. Through a special feature page, entitled “News Focus: Middle East”, the Department maintains easy access to information materials on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, including two web-only articles entitled “A difficult future for the Gaza Strip”, by Jonas Hagen, dated 25 January 2007, and “Gaza border closures accompanied by fears of humanitarian crisis”, by Sana Aftab Khan, dated 2 August 2007.

66. The Department of Public Information drew attention to the situation of Palestinian women through its publications, press conferences and briefings and seminars. In addition to the UN Chronicle magazine (issue 1, 2007), its monthly compilation entitled “Chronological review of events relating to the question of Palestine”, and the bimonthly newsletter NGO Action News, the Department of Public Information also reported that the United Nations Information Service in Geneva organized three press conferences and biweekly briefings on matters pertaining to Palestinian women: the commemoration of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, and the visit of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to the Occupied Palestinian Territory in November 2006.

I. Gender mainstreaming

67. A number of United Nations entities initiated activities to strengthen gender mainstreaming in policies and programmes, including at the country level. The UNDP “In-house gender mainstreaming capacity development” initiative aims to institutionalize gender mainstreaming in programmes and operational activities of the UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People. UNDP also promoted the incorporation of gender perspectives into the development strategy of a participatory rural development and planning project from its inception. FAO supported a project on “Mainstreaming gender dimensions into water resources development and management in the Mediterranean region (GEWAMED)”, coordinated by the Mediterranean Agronomic Institute of Bari and financed by the European Commission. The project was designed to build a national and regional shared knowledge base on gender equality issues, policies and related actions; to enhance dialogue among the countries of the Mediterranean region; and to contribute to the adoption of national gender-oriented policies and other related instruments. FAO, IFAD and the Gender and Water Alliance are members of the Consultation and Advisory Gender Committee of the project.

68. Other entities adopted policies and employed specialists to advance gender mainstreaming. UNRWA adopted a Policy for Gender Equality to achieve gender mainstreaming in operations and service delivery. The Agency’s assistance to Palestinian refugee women focuses on meeting their human development needs in the areas of education and technical training, female-focused basic health care, and the provision of microfinance.

69. The Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, requested the deployment of a Gender Adviser to support the work of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in preparing an analysis of the main gender inequality issues and concerns on the ground. The Gender Adviser would also identify gaps in the current programmes/activities, assess the quality and effectiveness of the existing gender equality programmes in the different sectors' humanitarian response, and identify strategies to overcome any deficiencies.

70. During 2006-2007, the ESCWA Centre for Women provided technical cooperation and advisory services to the Palestinian Ministry for Women's Affairs on gender mainstreaming and strategic planning.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

71. During the period under review, the crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory deepened. The conflict and intra-Palestinian violence continued to have a detrimental effect on all Palestinian people. The international financial embargo, the withholding of Palestinian revenues by Israel and the suspension of direct budget support from donors have led to a further deterioration of the situation.

72. The situation of Palestinian women was directly affected by increased poverty and unemployment and the decline in living standards and food security. The movement of women and girls was restricted by closures, checkpoints and roadblocks, as well as the permit system, which limited their access to health-care services, employment and schools. Close to 30 per cent of pregnant women in the West Bank had difficulties accessing antenatal care and safe delivery. Both primary and secondary services have declined. Continuing declines in the education system were marked by high dropout rates, a wide gap between girls completing primary school and those enrolling in secondary school, and low graduation rates. Violence against women, especially domestic violence, remained a widespread problem.

73. In its resolution 61/143, the General Assembly highlighted violence against women as both a human rights violation and a constraint to development and called for accelerated efforts to eradicate such violence. In the agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-first session, the Commission called for the elimination of discrimination and violence against the girl child. Enhanced efforts are needed to eliminate all forms of violence against Palestinian women and girls and to protect and promote their human rights, including through systematic and effective utilization of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

74. Improving the situation of and enhancing the impact of assistance to Palestinian women is linked to the achievement of a secure and lasting peace. Renewed efforts need to be made by the international community to seek an end to the violent confrontations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and a peaceful resolution of the conflict. Women should be fully involved in conflict resolution and peacebuilding initiatives to be undertaken in the region, in accordance with the Beijing Platform for Action and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security.

75. United Nations entities should continue to operate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps. Assistance focused on the empowerment of women, particularly in areas such as education, health, social welfare, employment and economic development, should be strengthened. Enhanced efforts should also be made to increase women's full participation in decision-making processes at all levels.

76. A gender perspective should be fully integrated into international assistance programmes, through, inter alia, gender analysis and the collection of sex-disaggregated data. All studies and reports undertaken by the United Nations on the situation of the Palestinian people should incorporate specific attention to gender perspectives. Governments, academic institutions, international organizations, and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, should be encouraged to collaborate on qualitative and quantitative action-oriented research on the situation of Palestinian women and girls.

77. Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant stakeholders should intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women and systematically assess and report on the impact of those efforts.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
1 December 2008

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-third session

2-13 March 2009

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between October 2007 and September 2008, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2008/11. It reviews the situation of Palestinian women and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system with regard to, inter alia, education and training; health; employment and entrepreneurship; women’s human rights; violence against women; and humanitarian assistance. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2009/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2008/11 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, in order to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out in the previous report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2008/6), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-third session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from October 2007 to September 2008 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, and the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People.

3. The report also reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and the World Food Programme (WFP).

4. The following United Nations entities contributed their input to the present report through the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), UNDP, UNESCO, UNFPA, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), UNICEF, the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), WFP, and the World Health Organization (WHO).

5. The report concludes with recommendations on improving the situation of Palestinian women, including through the continued assistance of the United Nations system.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

6. During the reporting period, new hope for the achievement of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine emerged, with the launch of the Annapolis process and regular bilateral negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians. The Quartet, the League of Arab States, several Arab countries, as well as Turkey, contributed to regional efforts to advance peace (see A/63/368-S/2008/612, paras. 6-9).

7. The situation on the ground in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, remained difficult and hampered political efforts to achieve the vision of two States living side by side in peace and security. In the Gaza Strip, in particular, prolonged violence and a deepening humanitarian crisis prevailed (ibid., para. 5). Despite the efforts to bring about peace, deaths and injuries resulting from the occupation and the internal conflict increased during 2007 and continued to rise in the first months of 2008.<sup>1</sup> In 2007, some 412 Palestinians were killed, including 10 women. Approximately 345 people were killed between the beginning of 2008 and 21 April 2008, 89 per cent of them in the Gaza Strip, including 31 women and 80 children.<sup>2</sup>

8. Within the framework of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security, peacebuilding efforts by Palestinian organizations continued despite the difficult political circumstances. Civil society organizations, such as The Palestinian Initiative for the Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy (MIFTAH) focused efforts on linking the political and social agendas of the Palestinian women's movement at the grass-roots level. In addition, the International Women's Commission for a Just and Sustainable Palestinian-Israeli Peace engaged in policy dialogue at the international and national levels, to increase women's participation in peace negotiations. The Commission included 20 Palestinian women leaders, working within governmental and non-governmental Palestinian organizations.<sup>3</sup>

9. Internal conflict in the Occupied Palestinian Territory compounded existing hardships. After the Hamas takeover of Gaza, additional restrictions on the movement of goods and people into the Gaza Strip, led to deteriorating conditions and shortages of basic commodities, including food, electricity and fuel. Increased restrictions on the operations of humanitarian agencies hindered the delivery of humanitarian aid in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank (see A/63/74-E/2008/13, summary).

10. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories expressed serious concern about the continuing deterioration of the human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (see A/63/273, paras. 114-118). In particular, the Committee noted that isolation of the Gaza Strip had the most dramatic impact on women and children (ibid., para. 45).

11. The right to freedom of movement continued to be obstructed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In January 2008, the Human Rights Council expressed grave concern about "the continued closures of and within the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the restriction of the freedom of movement of people and goods, including the repeated closure of the crossing points of the Gaza Strip, which created an extremely precarious humanitarian situation for the civilian population

---

<sup>1</sup> World Health Organization, Health conditions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan: report of the Secretariat (A/61/INF.DOC./4), annex, para. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., para. 13.

<sup>3</sup> Department of Political Affairs contribution to the report (2008).

and impaired the economic and social rights of the Palestinian people".<sup>4</sup> In September 2008, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported 630 obstacles blocking Palestinian movement, including 93 staffed checkpoints and 537 unstaffed obstacles in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.<sup>5</sup>

12. The conflict continued to negatively impact the Palestinian economy as restrictions were tightened in the West Bank and Gaza's primary border crossings remained closed, thus constraining development projects.<sup>6</sup> The International Monetary Fund reported that the macroeconomic environment had been less favourable than envisaged, unemployment and poverty remained high, especially in Gaza, and real incomes in the West Bank and Gaza were reduced by the sharp rise in inflation.<sup>6</sup> The World Bank noted that as the Palestinian economy declined, the Occupied Palestinian Territory was steadily becoming more aid dependent.<sup>7</sup>

13. Based on the Palestinian Expenditure and Consumption Survey for 2007, about 79 per cent of households in Gaza and 46 per cent in the West Bank lived below the poverty line.<sup>8</sup> In 2008, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs found that previously self-reliant families progressively were falling into poverty owing to the deteriorating Palestinian livelihoods.<sup>9</sup> In fact, nearly two thirds (62.5 per cent) of female-headed households live in poverty.<sup>10</sup> To cope with poverty and food insecurity, many parents reduced their food intake to allow their children to eat.<sup>11</sup>

14. Poverty and the global rise in food prices greatly affect Palestinian living conditions.<sup>7</sup> Owing to inadequate income and employment, 80 per cent of households in Gaza (1.3 million people), and 33 per cent in the West Bank (0.7 million people), are dependent on international food assistance.<sup>12</sup> A joint FAO/WFP/UNRWA rapid survey on food security found that despite humanitarian aid, food insecurity was on the rise and almost two thirds of household income was spent on food only.<sup>13</sup> Moreover, the study found that women and children continued to be disproportionately affected by food insecurity. Food insecurity was found in households where the percentage of female residents was 50 per cent or higher.<sup>11</sup> This was explained by unequal employment rates between men and women with almost equal education levels, and the lack of integration of women in the formal labour market.<sup>11</sup>

<sup>4</sup> See Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixty-third Session, Supplement No. 53 (A/63/53), chap. II.A, resolution 7/18, para. 3 (f).

<sup>5</sup> OCHA Closure Update: Main Findings and Analysis (30 April-11 September 2008), September 2008.

<sup>6</sup> International Monetary Fund, "Macroeconomic and Fiscal Framework for the West Bank and Gaza: Second Review of Progress", 22 September 2008.

<sup>7</sup> World Bank, "Palestinian Economic Prospects: Aid, Access and Reform", September 2008.

<sup>8</sup> UNRWA, "Prolonged Crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: Socio-economic Developments in 2007", 2008, chap. VI.

<sup>9</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, The Humanitarian Monitor — Occupied Palestinian Territory, No. 25 (May 2008).

<sup>10</sup> UNFPA Occupied Palestinian Territory Consolidated Appeals Process 2008.

<sup>11</sup> United Nations country team Occupied Palestinian Territory contribution to the report (2008).

<sup>12</sup> International Labour Organization, Report of the Director-General, on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories, 2008.

<sup>13</sup> World Food Programme, Food Security and Market Monitoring Report, No. 19 (July 2008).

15. During the period under review, the employment and labour situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to deteriorate. ILO reported a much degraded employment and labour situation owing to continuing impediments to the movement of persons and goods in the West Bank and in East Jerusalem. Only one in three persons of working age was employed; enterprises were either closing or operating well below their capacity and new investments were deferred.<sup>12</sup>

16. Women were more likely not to participate in the labour force than men. For the second quarter (April-June 2008), the labour participation rate of women was 16.0 per cent compared to 66.3 per cent for men.<sup>14</sup> Some 64.4 per cent of men with 13 or more years of schooling participated in the labour force, compared to 42.1 per cent of women with the same number of years of schooling.<sup>14</sup> For young women aged 15 to 19, the participation rate was 2.1 per cent compared to 25.4 per cent for young men of the same age group.<sup>15</sup>

17. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics reported that for the second quarter of 2008 (April-June), the percentage of women in agriculture, fishing and forestry was higher than that of men — 30.7 per cent of women and 11.0 per cent of men.<sup>16</sup> An ILO study found that 60 per cent of female workers and only 16 per cent of male workers were located in the informal economy.<sup>17</sup> The high percentage of women in informal employment was attributed to the lack of an adequate and affordable social infrastructure and services that placed the burden of caring for the young, elderly, and the sick on women, thus limiting their employment options and steering them into informal work arrangements often performed from home.<sup>17</sup>

18. Movement restrictions negatively affected women's health. In the period under review, 69 pregnant women were forced to give birth at Israeli military checkpoints. Thirty-nine babies and five women died as a result.<sup>18</sup> Since childbirth facilities are located in urban-based hospitals, some pregnant women moved to the homes of relatives living in towns a few weeks before the expected delivery (see A/HRC/7/44, para. 7 (d) and (e)). The attendance rate for newly pregnant women at maternal and child health-care clinics decreased from 4.8 visits per pregnant woman in 2005 to 3.7 visits per pregnant woman in 2006.<sup>19</sup> The Ministry of Health collaborated with international agencies, including UNICEF, to secure vaccines for newborn babies, children and mothers.<sup>20</sup>

19. WHO reported that the health conditions of female prisoners in general were extremely difficult and poor.<sup>21</sup> At the end of July 2008, it was reported that 77 Palestinian female security prisoners were held in Israeli prisons and detention centres.<sup>22</sup> Approximately 25 per cent of Palestinian female prisoners suffered from

<sup>14</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Labour Force Survey (April-June 2008) Round (Q2/2008), 15 September 2008, table 6.

<sup>15</sup> Ibid., table 8.

<sup>16</sup> Palestinian Authority: Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics: Labour Force Survey (April-June 2008).

<sup>17</sup> International Labour Organization, Unprotected Employment in the West Bank and Gaza Strip: A Gender Equality and Workers' Rights Perspective, Beirut, 2008, Executive Summary.

<sup>18</sup> World Health Organization, 2008, op. cit., para. 16.

<sup>19</sup> World Health Organization, 2008, op. cit., para. 61.

<sup>20</sup> Ibid, para. 63.

<sup>21</sup> Ibid., para. 12.

<sup>22</sup> Mandela Institute for Human Rights, referenced in the UNIFEM executed project "Protection of Female Prisoners and Detainees in Israeli Prisons and Detention Centers", as cited in United Nations country team contribution to the report (2008).

treatable illnesses, including excessive weight loss, general weakness, anaemia and iron deficiency owing to poor quality food and the lack of essential nutrients.<sup>23</sup> In addition, they were exposed to harsh treatment from male and female prison officers, with no regard for their condition or their special needs in pregnancy.<sup>21</sup>

20. Recent assessments of the psychosocial well-being of the Palestinian population showed that severe stress and other mental health problems had increased. The prolonged tension, lack of physical security, mobility restrictions and limited educational and leisure opportunities were identified as some of the causes of psychological strain for many Palestinians, especially women, children and adolescents.<sup>10</sup>

21. Incidents of violence against women, including domestic violence, continued during the period under review. Results of a UNFPA survey and a UNRWA qualitative study associated the increase of domestic violence rates with the rising political violence in 2007.<sup>11</sup> The UNRWA study also indicated that rates of domestic violence had risen since the commencement of the second intifada in September 2000, with men using women as outlets for their anger, frustration and powerlessness.<sup>11</sup> UNFPA found that the majority of married (61.7 per cent) and unmarried (53.3 per cent) women were exposed to psychological violence.<sup>10</sup> Poverty, low education levels, lack of decision-making power, violent childhoods, conflict in the community, drug abuse and lack of access to divorce were all viewed by refugee women as causes of domestic violence. A link was also made between little or no income in female-headed households and domestic and gender-based violence.<sup>11</sup>

22. The right to education continued to be seriously affected by the occupation.<sup>11</sup> Although girls outnumbered boys in primary and secondary enrolment for the academic year 2007/2008 (548,781 women versus 548,314 men), the female dropout rate continued to surpass the male dropout rate at the secondary level — 3.8 per cent versus 3 per cent.<sup>24</sup> The school dropouts were attributed to early marriage, the economic situation and travel restrictions.<sup>11</sup> In the period under review, UNICEF also reported that young Palestinian girls continued to have few opportunities for development, recreation and participation. There were few safe spaces for them to go, and most of the 300 youth clubs across the Occupied Palestinian Territory lacked funding and were poorly managed and equipped. UNICEF also indicated that adolescence was often compromised by household demands and early marriage of young women and girls.<sup>25</sup>

23. The percentage of women in decision-making remained low. According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, women accounted for 12.6 per cent of the members of the Legislative Council; 7.4 per cent of ambassadors; 11.2 per cent of judges; and 12.1 per cent of general prosecutors.<sup>26</sup>

---

<sup>23</sup> Fact sheet “Medical neglect of Palestinian Women in Israeli prisons”, published by Addameer Prisoners Support and Human Rights Association, Mandela Institute for Human Rights and Palestinian Counseling Center, June 2008, within the Protection of Palestinian Female Prisoners and Detainees in Israeli Prisons and Detention Centers project, available at: http://www.aseerat.ps/files/FactsheetJune2008\_-\_Neglect.pdf (in United Nations country team contribution).

<sup>24</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “Palestine in Figures 2007”, May 2008, p. 23.

<sup>25</sup> UNICEF contribution to the report (2008).

<sup>26</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, press release, 6 March 2008.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

24. The following section focuses on the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system. Based on contributions from United Nations entities, eight areas of support were identified: education and training; health; employment and entrepreneurship; women's human rights; violence against women; humanitarian assistance; advocacy and information; and interagency coordination efforts, including gender mainstreaming.

A. Education and training

25. Several United Nations entities reported on initiatives to improve the access of women and girls to quality education opportunities and a gender-sensitive curriculum. During the 2006/2007 academic year, 241,183 girls (50.1 per cent of pupils) were enrolled in UNRWA elementary, preparatory and secondary schools. Girls constituted 69.8 per cent of students benefiting from the UNRWA-administered scholarships. UNDP provided remedial literacy and English and computer training to 3,925 female dropout students.

26. As part of the United Nations Girls' Education Initiative (UNGEI) framework and in collaboration with UNICEF, UNIFEM and UNFPA, UNESCO commissioned a study on "Scaling up" girls' education in 2007. As a follow-up to the study, a Vocational Guidance and Counselling System was established within the Palestinian education system, supported by UNESCO. UNICEF worked with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education to, inter alia, provide math and science teaching kits to disadvantaged schools to improve the teaching and learning process in classrooms. UNICEF also supported the finalization of the five-year education plan aimed at providing equal and quality educational opportunities for girls and boys. Six young women were employed by UNIFEM to offer academic guidance to young girls in schools. UNFPA supported the Ministry of Education's efforts to increase access to gender-sensitive life-skills based sexual and reproductive health education in secondary schools.

27. Construction and/or rehabilitation of community buildings for schools and the provision of school supplies were reported by United Nations entities as key steps to support girls' access to education. For example, UNDP supported the construction of classrooms, libraries and laboratories in 16 schools, including all-girls schools. It supported the construction of three kindergartens that were managed by women's centres or local councils, and created six permanent jobs for women as teachers and administrators. UNICEF worked with the Palestinian Water Authority and the Coastal Municipal Water Utility to provide water to 120 schools, construct 10 sanitary units at Farabi Girls Primary School, and raise awareness on personal hygiene and environmental sanitation in schools and selected vulnerable communities.

28. Training programmes for women were provided in a wide range of areas related to vocational and professional development. UNRWA reported that 2,109 girls received technical and vocational training (36.3 per cent of total students). Some 53 per cent of the Agency's more than 18,000 teaching staff were women. Professional training opportunities were offered to 445 of the teaching staff, 49 per cent of whom were women. Through its Small and Microenterprise Training Programme, customized for the needs of microentrepreneurs and small business owners in Gaza, the Agency offered 563 courses for more than 11,907 participants, 20 per cent of them women. UNESCO and the Ministry of Culture trained 25 Palestinian women in traditional arts and crafts. Within the UNESCO Architectural Competition for the Design of Public Spaces and Urban Facilities in the Old City of Nablus, 16 young women architects were assigned to professionals to develop their design concepts into executive designs. Four junior women architects benefited from “learning by doing” training associated with the Bethlehem Area Conservation and Management Plan.

29. Training programmes were also promoted as a means to enhance women’s leadership and increase their access to and benefits from information and communication technologies. For example, in 2007, UNESCO supported the project “Giving women a voice” to build capacity and campaigning skills of 20 young women community leaders in Hebron and the southern rural area of the West Bank. In 2008, UNESCO also supported the project “Women taking the lead”, in cooperation with the Arabic Media Internet Network, which provided a training and career development programme for 15 women journalists and 30 media managers in Gaza and West Bank.

30. In Gaza, UNDP established centres aimed at providing equal access to social and economic services for women and their families. In addition to developing women’s skills, the centres also offered women safe meeting and working spaces and informal psychosocial support. Some 219 training courses, seminars or workshops were held on an annual basis in the centres; 65 women benefited from permanent jobs created by the centres.

B. Health

31. Several United Nations entities reported on activities to promote equal access to health care for Palestinian women. WHO facilitated health coordination meetings with health-care providers at district level, to formulate solutions to women’s and girls’ needs for preventive health services, including mammography tests. WHO collaborated with UNFPA in providing medicines and equipment for health services targeted to women of childbearing age.

32. In collaboration with the Ministry of Health and the Palestinian Red Crescent Society, UNICEF provided 452 first aid kits, 13 emergency health kits, 10 midwifery kits, 16 obstetric surgical kits and 60 resuscitation kits to the Ministry of Health and the Palestinian Red Crescent Society.

33. UNRWA offered full immunization coverage of women against vaccine-preventable diseases. UNICEF supported the Ministry of Health with the procurement of vaccines and related supplies for more than 100,000 women of childbearing age.

34. With support from UNIFEM, permits were obtained for 28 external doctors to enter prisons and examine female prisoners in need of specialized medical care.

35. Family planning and antenatal care were given priority by a number of entities to ensure safe deliveries for women in isolated areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Approximately 90,000 women received antenatal care in the five fields of UNRWA operation. More than 24,000 new female patients sought guidance on family planning. WHO provided the Ministry of Health with recommendations aimed at improving pregnant women's access to health facilities. UNFPA supported 39 public clinics aimed at strengthening the integration of reproductive health services in primary health care, and promoted attention to gender-based violence in counselling services offered in primary health-care facilities. Qualified staff, including physicians, nurses and midwives, were retrained by UNFPA as obstetric care emergency staff in the West Bank and Gaza.

36. Various entities also provided psychosocial counselling to women. The UNRWA Community Mental Health Programme in the West Bank and Gaza Strip provided psychosocial support to 6,321 Palestinian refugee women. Four UNFPA-supported women's health centres provided clinical, psychosocial, legal advice, outreach, physiotherapy, gymnastics and health education services to women living in underprivileged areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. UNIFEM continued to provide rural women in marginalized areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip with legal and psychosocial group counselling sessions, one-on-one consultations and specialized treatment for mental health problems. During the period under review, UNIFEM trained 115 women leaders as community resource persons on mental health issues. One-on-one psychosocial consultation/counselling was provided to 150 women, and an additional 1,200 women benefited from group psychological counselling sessions.

37. UNDP organized workshops and provided psychosocial support to 500 women. Five women were employed to conduct counselling services and train other women on conflict resolution, self-confidence and communication skills. UNDP also conducted health-awareness sessions and provided free medical consultations for 6,270 women, and psychological and legal-awareness sessions for 12,620 women to help them to cope with stress. In partnership with UNIFEM, UNICEF reinforced its crisis intervention teams in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, to increase their ability to deal more effectively with women needing psychosocial assistance.

38. Gender-sensitive health education and training programmes, including on HIV/AIDS, was provided. UNRWA promoted health education programmes on HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, including for its entire staff.

39. WHO supported the Ministry of Health in establishing and operating thematic groups on reproductive health, nutrition and mental health, to facilitate and coordinate activities of care providers, providing advice, recommending priorities and exchanging information.

C. Employment and entrepreneurship

40. United Nations entities reported on efforts to create work for women to promote self-reliance and restore livelihoods that would contribute to longer-term food security. WFP prepared a package of job creation, income-generation, vocational training and livelihood support to assist poor farmers, unemployed workers and vulnerable women. Priority was given to female-headed households which comprise 33.6 per cent (2,850) of the beneficiaries assisted in the West Bank and 50.6 per cent (82,560) in Gaza.

41. Thirty per cent of the beneficiaries of the UNRWA Job Creation Programme, operating in the West Bank and Gaza, were women. Within this Programme, UNRWA/Gaza Field Office developed a maternity policy that enabled pregnant contract holders to enjoy 42 days of unpaid maternity leave without losing their jobs. A gender-sensitive monitoring mechanism was created to ensure a decent work environment for women, including through the UNRWA Breastfeeding Policy.

42. Several United Nations entities provided grants and training to enhance Palestinian women's entrepreneurship. UNDP offered training to 18 low-income women in two women's centres in Jabalia and Nuseirat. Some 24 women benefited from the construction of the Jenin Vocational Training Centre and its courses on fashion design, computer and secretarial skills. In the Gaza Strip, UNDP trained 1,043 poor housewives on recycling household waste and manufacturing home decorations; conducted income-generation projects for five women organizations; and trained 30 women on starting and managing their own businesses. The UNDP programme also trained 60 women on civic education. In the West Bank, UNIFEM trained 250 poor women on managerial and technical skills to process local surplus of fruits and vegetables into healthy marketable products.

43. The ILO Regional Office in Beirut, together with the Palestinian firm Riyadh Consulting and Training, prepared a paper entitled "Situation and institutional assessment of business women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory", which assessed the level of involvement of women in private sector institutions. In March 2008, ILO conducted a regional training of trainers on "Gender and entrepreneurship together", attended by four Palestinian representatives of non-governmental organizations (NGOs), business women associations and training centres, with the objective of assisting ILO partner organizations to promote enterprise development among poor women.

44. UNRWA and IFAD reported microcredit schemes for women as critical to poverty reduction and women's economic empowerment. UNRWA disbursed over 2,030 new group loans valued at almost US$ 900,000 to women microentrepreneurs in the Gaza Strip. Through its direct and indirect lending schemes, the Agency extended 1,950 microcredit loans to Palestine refugees, 81 per cent of whom were women.

45. FAO completed the women's empowerment project on "Support to household food security and income generation through biointensive backyard agricultural production and cottage industry in the West Bank and Gaza Strip", which targets East Jerusalem, Hebron, Jenin and Gaza. Beehives and rabbits were distributed to 500 women for income generation and household consumption. FAO promoted a national exhibition for women's associations in Ramallah, which allowed them to market their crafts and their agricultural and food products. The FAO Junior Farmer Field and Life Schools scheme was also launched to build livelihood and entrepreneurship skills of youth, including young women. The project liaises with 16 NGOs throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

46. UNCTAD reported on its two-year project (2006-2008) titled "Establishment of the Palestinian Shippers Council", which represents and protects the interests of Palestinian shippers and exporters. UNCTAD emphasized that the Council, which is chaired by a businesswoman, is committed to recruiting female members and encourages their full participation in all Council activities.

D. Women's human rights

47. United Nations entities reported advocacy and awareness-raising campaigns on the human rights of women and girls. On the International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women in 2007, OHCHR implemented a three-day campaign in the West Bank aimed at promoting the protection of the rights of Palestinian women. UNDP conducted an awareness-raising campaign on violence against women, offered courses for 1,200 women and men on women's rights and trained 20 female lawyers on women's rights advocacy for women victims exposed to violence.

48. During the period under review, significant support was provided to capacity-building on women's human rights. OHCHR, in cooperation with the Palestinian Working Women Society for Development, organized an event for 30 men and women that focused on the challenges faced by women in the enjoyment of their human rights, best practices on legal investigations on violence against women and girls and ways to access the United Nations mechanisms for the protection of women's rights. UNIFEM supported the production of a gender-sensitive academic counselling manual and the provision of legal literacy sessions to nearly 1,500 women about the Palestinian legal system. A regional workshop for judges and parliamentarians on the implementation of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women was co-organized by the ESCWA Centre for Women and the United Nations Division for the Advancement of Women in Jordan in October 2007. Three Palestinian women attended the training, one member of the Palestinian Legislative Council and two judges.

49. Through its project "Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Centre" in Ramallah, UNESCO supported the development of the human and institutional capacities of governmental and non-governmental organizations related to women's rights. UNESCO and the Centre for Women's Legal Research and Consulting in the Gaza Strip, started collecting stories of discrimination against women to contribute to the UNIFEM initiative entitled "The CEDAW Stories". Seventy stories had been collected up to August 2008. UNESCO also commissioned a paper entitled "Listening to girls' stories: girls' education in conflict"; and produced a fact sheet on Palestinian women and education. The Centre for Women's Legal Research and Consulting conducted several trainings targeted at Government and NGOs. A total of 28 staff members from the legal department of the Palestinian Authority were also trained on analysing laws from a gender perspective. Qualitative and quantitative research methods were taught from a gender perspective to 42 trainees from departments in the Palestinian Authority by the Centre.

50. UNFPA collaborated with the Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling, a Jerusalem-based Palestinian NGO, in the development of a manual for service providers on a gender-sensitive approach to psychosocial and legal counselling. The UNRWA Gaza Field Office launched the wide-reaching empowerment initiative, "Equality in action", focusing on achieving equality with regard to status, options and opportunities for women and men across the Gaza Strip. Through its 65 women's programme centres, the Agency supported evening classes and continued learning for 2,345 women, awareness sessions on women's rights for 11,952 women and youth-related activities for 19,529 girls. UNIFEM organized activities and workshops, including on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in 80 community centres in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

51. United Nations entities reported on efforts to promote the rights of young women. UNICEF Jordan promoted awareness-raising activities targeted at parents and community members on the rights of adolescents, particularly those of girls. These activities led to an increase in the participation of girls in developmental and learning activities in women's programme centres. UNIFEM continued supporting the Youth Rights Monitor project, implemented by a local NGO specialized on media and youth. A group of 98 youth role-model-activists (50 females and 48 males) was formed to promote awareness on rights and responsibilities among their peers and younger beneficiaries.

52. Women with special needs were also the focus of various initiatives promoted by United Nations entities. For example, OHCHR, in partnership with the Stars of Hope Society for Empowerment of Women with Disability, organized a high-level event entitled "Try the wheelchair", to sensitize participants about the reality of Palestinian women living with disabilities. In Rafah Governorate, UNDP established a special club for hearing-impaired women and men and provided activities for approximately 200 members, including art, handcraft and sports.

E. Violence against women

53. United Nations entities continued to address violence against women as a serious violation of the human rights of women. For example, in December 2007, a one-week study tour for 14 representatives of local Palestinian NGOs from the West Bank was hosted by OHCHR in Geneva, to enhance the interaction of NGOs with the United Nations human rights mechanisms and to design strategies to combat violence against women. A national conference on combating gender-based violence was organized by UNFPA and the Ministry of Women's Affairs. In the Occupied Palestinian Territory, field research on forced prostitution and women's trafficking was supported by UNIFEM and implemented by a local NGO. UNIFEM upgraded two toll-free help lines in Gaza and one in the West Bank for female victims of violence. More than 9,300 women received counselling and awareness-raising through this initiative.

54. United Nations entities undertook several initiatives aimed at training women to protect themselves from violence and enhancing the institutional capacity of NGO partners to prevent violence and support victims. For example, UNFPA and its NGO partners created community-based initiatives that enable women to protect themselves from gender-based violence. The Fund also helped to build the capacity of local institutions to integrate women's protection within the package of psychological support offered for women at risk; and promoted the collaboration of two NGOs in the West Bank and one in the Gaza Strip, to strengthen their awareness-raising capacity at the community level on violence against women.

55. Entities from the United Nations reported efforts to build alliances with strategic governmental organizations, as well as civic and civil society actors, to prevent violence against women. For example, UNFPA worked with civil society and faith-based organizations on the promotion of women's rights and the elimination of harmful practices, including female genital mutilation. In 2008, UNFPA and the Ministry of Social Affairs started a project to strengthen vocational training for young women and to enhance the capacity of Ministry staff in the area of protection against and prevention of gender-based violence.

56. UNFPA also worked with national partners in their implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security, through the creation of community-based initiatives that empower women to protect themselves from gender-based violence. These initiatives also helped to build the capacity of NGOs to improve services, particularly psychosocial support. UNIFEM continued its support of the International Women's Commission for a Just and Sustainable Palestinian-Israeli Peace.<sup>3</sup>

F. Humanitarian assistance

57. United Nations entities continued to provide humanitarian assistance to Palestinian women living in refugee camps and disadvantaged villages. For example, UNRWA assisted the poorest registered refugees, mostly families headed by women. The Agency's special hardship assistance provided the families with a safety net that included food support, cash assistance, and preferential access to the Agency's vocational training centres.

58. Food security was addressed as a priority in several initiatives undertaken by United Nations entities. School feeding in the most insecure areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip aimed at encouraging parents to keep children in school and provided employment opportunities to the community. The WFP Food for Training Programme implemented in the West Bank targeted 9,200 women and focused on home gardening, handicrafts, food processing, animal raising, agriculture and beekeeping. Some 8,400 women benefited from life-skills training on health and nutrition. Through a cash-for-work scheme, the Programme also introduced school feeding to preschool and primary school children in the most food-insecure areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. It provided part of the food commodities and salaries for 2,000 women in local bakeries and women's centres. The UNRWA food aid programme benefited 112,256 pregnant women and nursing mothers and 56,587 women were assisted with admission to hospitals. In the Gaza Strip, UNIFEM piloted a school feeding initiative benefiting 450 children in kindergartens in the Nuseirat refugee camp, involving 12 women workers. In Jordan, UNICEF assisted Palestinian refugee women with access to neonatal care and nutrition support.

59. The WFP institutional feeding programme also supported women residing in institutions such as orphanages, hospitals and homes for the elderly. Beneficiaries of the programme included 2,400 women in Gaza and 5,100 women in the West Bank. Under the Protracted Relief and Recovery Operation, launched in September 2007, WFP and the Ministry of Social Affairs worked to cover the food needs of destitute people, in particular widows, divorced and separated women, and elderly single women. Some 57 per cent (15,000) of the beneficiaries in the West Bank and 55 per cent (47,000) in Gaza were women.

60. United Nations entities reported initiatives to contribute to adequate housing. For example, UNRWA assisted 265 female-headed households with shelter reconstruction or rehabilitation; 11 per cent of refugees participating in infrastructural self-help projects were women. The Saudi Committee for the Palestinian People Relief pledged $6.3 million to UN-Habitat for the project on "Establishment of a housing and income-generating programme for poor women in Hebron, West Bank". The project includes the construction of 100 housing units and the establishment of small-scale income-generating activities targeted to poor women and their families.

G. Advocacy and information

61. Several United Nations entities collected, analysed and disseminated information on the situation of Palestinian women and advocated for women's empowerment and gender equality. For example, WHO continued to collect information on the health implications of restricted mobility for women.

62. Media resources were used as advocacy tools to bring attention to the situation of women in the region. For example, through its publications programme, the Division for the Palestinian Rights within the Department of Political Affairs included information on the situation of Palestinian women in its monthly compilation entitled "Chronological review of events relating to the question of Palestine", and the bimonthly newsletter "NGO Action News". UNFPA published a study entitled "Women in crisis and cultural preservation".

63. On the occasion of the "16 Days of Activism against Gender Violence Campaign 2007" (25 November-10 December 2007), UNFPA promoted actions to combat violence against women through posters, workshops, and television and radio spots, initiating a platform for discussion among a number of different actors. UNIFEM produced billboards and reserved radio time to advocate for women's rights. It also conducted advocacy and media campaigns on the conditions of women in prisons and detention centres. UNIFEM also screened a documentary entitled Maria's Grotto, on crimes committed in the name of honour, for over 600 women. In consultation with OHCHR, UNIFEM produced a DVD, Women Capable of Making a Difference, in Arabic with English subtitles, which sheds light on the situation of women in the Gaza Strip.

64. Initiatives on research and documentation on the situation of Palestinian women were supported by a number of United Nations entities. Under the guidance of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs, addressed the issue of Palestinian women in discussions at international meetings and conferences. The ILO Regional Office produced the study, Unprotected Employment in the West Bank and Gaza Strip: A Gender Equality and Workers' Rights Perspective, which was published in Arabic and English. The case study was presented during a Regional Expert Group Meeting on gender equality and workers' rights in the informal economies of Arab States, held in Tunis in July 2008.

65. The Advocacy and Research Unit of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs increased efforts to collect sex-disaggregated data in its Protection of Civilians database and increasingly paid attention to gender equality issues in its publications Humanitarian Monitor and Protection of Civilians Weekly Report.

H. Gender mainstreaming

66. Joint programming by United Nations entities is being promoted to enhance coordinated support to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including on gender mainstreaming initiatives. For example, the Department of Political Affairs reported that the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process oversaw six United Nations agencies' joint submission to the UNDP-Spain Millennium Development Global Achievement Fund in close collaboration with the Palestinian Authority. The United Nations country team reported that under the Fund, UNESCO, UNIFEM, UNDP and FAO also developed a three-year joint programme on "Culture and development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory" and UNIFEM provided technical support to ensure that a gender perspective was incorporated in the programme document.

67. UNDP took the initiative to build internal staff capacity on gender mainstreaming in order to provide effective support to Palestinian women. For example, training was provided to more than 40 operational and programme staff in the UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (PAPP), including on gender sensitization, gender analysis, and gender sensitive indicators in programmes. A UNDP/PAPP gender strategy was drafted. In August 2008, a senior Social Development and Gender Adviser was hired to offer technical support to UNDP/PAPP and other United Nations entities, NGOs and governmental partners.

68. In June 2008, UNIFEM conducted two training sessions on gender mainstreaming. The first was targeted at key programme staff from United Nations entities, including those participating in the joint Millennium Development Goals programmes, and the Ministry of Planning and Ministry of Women's Affairs. The second involved heads of agencies in discussions on gender mainstreaming within the context of the United Nations country team Performance Indicators for Gender Equality. UNIFEM and FAO conducted a one-day sector-specific gender workshop on "Mainstreaming gender in agricultural issues", to discuss the meaning and importance of integrating gender perspective into planning, implementation and monitoring of food security-related projects.

69. Other entities adopted policies and employed specialists to advance the gender mainstreaming strategy. UNFPA partnered with civil society organizations to build their capacity in advocating for gender mainstreaming in the health sector and planning and budgeting processes. In November 2007, the ESCWA Centre for Women and UNIFEM organized a joint regional workshop on gender-responsive budgeting in Amman, which aimed at highlighting the importance of gender-responsive budgeting for incorporating gender perspectives into policies, programmes and projects. Two representatives from the national machinery on women of the Palestinian Authority attended the training.

70. Other United Nations entities adopted training as key for capacity-building for gender mainstreaming. ILO sponsored an official of the Ministry of Women's Affairs to participate in an intensive training course on participatory gender auditing in the ILO Training Centre in Turin, Italy, in May 2008, which resulted in the Ministry working on a strategy for implementing participatory gender audits within institutions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In September 2007, the ESCWA Centre for Women conducted an expert group meeting for the enhancement of the work of national machineries for mainstreaming gender perspectives into policies, programmes and projects.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

71. During the period under review, efforts continued at the national, regional and international levels to bring about a peaceful settlement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including through bilateral negotiations. Despite these efforts, the crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued with negative social and economic impacts on the Palestinian people, including on women and girls.

72. The situation of Palestinian women was directly affected by continued poverty and unemployment and the decline in living standards and food security. The movement of women and girls continued to be restricted by closures, checkpoints and roadblocks, which limited their access to health-care services, employment and education. Pregnant women had difficulties accessing health services for antenatal care and safe delivery. Movement restrictions also contributed to school dropout rates among girls. Incidents of violence against women, including domestic violence, also continued during the period under review.

73. Improving the situation of and enhancing the impact of assistance to Palestinian women is linked to the achievement of a secure and lasting peace. Renewed efforts need to be taken by all relevant actors at the international, regional and national levels, including measures to ensure that women participate fully in all conflict resolution and peacebuilding in the region, in accordance with the Beijing Platform for Action and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security.

74. United Nations entities should continue to provide assistance to women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and refugee camps, particularly in areas such as education, health, social welfare, employment and economic development. Enhanced efforts should also be made to increase women's full participation in decision-making processes at all levels and ensure their economic empowerment.

75. A gender perspective should be fully integrated into all international assistance programmes, through, inter alia, gender analysis, the collection of sex-disaggregated data and the use of gender-responsive budgeting processes. All studies and reports undertaken by the United Nations on the situation of the Palestinian people should incorporate specific attention to gender equality perspectives. Governments, international organizations, civil society, including non-governmental organizations, and academic institutions, should be encouraged to collaborate on qualitative and quantitative action-oriented research on the situation of Palestinian women and girls.

76. Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant stakeholders should intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women and girls and systematically assess and report on the impact of those efforts.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
16 December 2009

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-fourth session

1-12 March 2010

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women for the period from October 2008 to September 2009, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/14. It reviews the situation of Palestinian women and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system with regard to, inter alia, education and training; health; employment and entrepreneurship; women’s human rights; violence against women; and humanitarian assistance. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2010/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2009/14 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council, concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation in order to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2009/5), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fourth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from October 2008 to September 2009 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations bodies or individuals that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Such bodies and individuals include the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, and the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People.

3. The report also reflects information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, ESCWA, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO).

4. The following United Nations entities contributed to the present report through the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: FAO, ILO, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), UNDP, UNESCO, UNFPA, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), UNICEF, the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), UNRWA, WFP and WHO.

5. The report provides recommendations on improving the situation of Palestinian women, including through the continued assistance of the United Nations system.

II. Situation of Palestinian women

6. The importance of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine continued to be emphasized during diplomatic developments and events during the reporting period. The discontinuation of Israeli-Palestinian negotiations undertaken within the framework of the Annapolis process, a destructive conflict in Gaza and a deepening internal divide despite efforts towards Palestinian unity characterized the reporting period. Recent months, however, have witnessed renewed efforts by the international community to achieve the vision of two States living side by side in peace and security (see A/64/351-S/2009/464, para. 5).

7. During the Israeli military operation Cast Lead in December 2008 and January 2009, intense fighting, high numbers of civilian casualties and extensive damage to the civilian infrastructure in Gaza were witnessed (ibid., para. 9). While figures from different sources vary, an estimated 1,300 Palestinians lost their lives and 5,300 were injured in the conflict, and 14 Israelis were killed and more than 530 injured. A majority of the casualties were reportedly civilians, particularly among Palestinians (ibid., para. 13).

8. According to estimates by United Nations agencies, the three-week conflict in Gaza led to the destruction of 3,700 houses and 2 health-care centres and resulted in damage to 48,700 houses, 15 hospitals, 41 health-care centres and 273 schools (ibid., para. 14). A survey of 2,020 households conducted in March 2009,<sup>1</sup> revealed that 40 per cent of women wanting pre- or post-natal care during operation Cast Lead were prevented from access to such care by the security situation.<sup>2</sup> The survey findings noted that a considerable proportion of the Gaza population reported symptoms of distress weeks after Israel had withdrawn its troops and discontinued the operation. A survey on the psychosocial consequences for women<sup>3</sup> showed that they continued to experience extreme fear, even after a truce had been declared and the hostilities had ended.

9. On 6 February 2009, at its forty-third session, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women expressed deep concern about the military engagement, which resulted in heavy civilian casualties and a humanitarian crisis in Gaza. The Committee noted with deep concern that the human rights of women and children, in particular those relating to peace and security, free movement, livelihood and health, had been seriously violated. The Committee urged the parties to the conflict to involve women in the decision-making process on the promotion and maintenance of peace and security at all levels in accordance with Security Council resolution 1325 (2000).

---

<sup>1</sup> Fafo Institute for Applied International Studies, Norway (2009): information from a household sample survey on "Life on the Gaza Strip six weeks after the armed conflict" (December 2008-January 2009), conducted with support from UNFPA and cited in the contributions of UNFPA and the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>2</sup> Contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>3</sup> Culture and Free Thought Association (2009); information from a survey, commissioned by UNFPA on the "Gaza Crisis: psychosocial consequences for women", conducted by the Association, which is a non-governmental organization partner of UNFPA in Gaza, and cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

10. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the continuation of the blockade that was imposed by Israel in June 2007 has triggered a protracted crisis with humanitarian consequences. The living conditions of women and men in Gaza deteriorated as a result of the erosion of livelihoods and the gradual decline of infrastructure, including basic services for health, water and sanitation, and education.<sup>4</sup>

11. Although restrictions of movement affect both women and men, concerns over possible harassment at checkpoints have curtailed women's movement, reducing their access to education, economic participation and social inclusion. This had a particularly negative impact on the access of women heads of household to employment opportunities.<sup>2</sup> A World Bank study noted that the high transaction and financial costs of transport as a result of unpredictable and often protracted waiting times had a disproportionate impact on women.<sup>5</sup> Recent measures by the Government of Israel to ease restrictions in certain places in the West Bank are expected to have a significant impact on the freedom of movement and economic development of the Palestinians, if these measures are sustained and expanded (A/64/351-S/2009/464, para. 26).

12. House demolitions resulting from the requirement for building permits by the Israeli authorities in East Jerusalem and in some parts of the West Bank have continued in the past year. A total of 51,000 people in Gaza were internally displaced and are now living in makeshift shelters that provide minimal protection. Others fled to the homes of friends and relatives.<sup>6</sup> The negative impacts on families who are displaced include the significant deterioration of social and financial conditions, including long-term trauma, family separation, disruption of family life and education, as well as increased poverty.<sup>4</sup> Women are particularly affected by the displacement and the lack of security.

13. According to the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (A/64/339), women are particularly affected by the occupation and Israeli settlement policy. During its field mission to Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, the Committee was presented with a number of cases illustrating that Palestinian women, as a result of fear of harassment at checkpoints or by settlers, increasingly felt unable to provide for their families or were afraid to move outside the boundaries of their communities.

14. The ongoing conflict continued to have a negative impact on the economic environment. In 2008, the consumer price index rose by 9.89 per cent on average in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and by 13.98 per cent in Gaza. At the same time, the average rise in food prices in the two areas was more than 17 per cent and 21 per cent, respectively. In early 2009, the rate of price increases slowed down, but prices remained <sup>4</sup> Contribution of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs to the present report.

---

<sup>5</sup> World Bank, "Towards enhancing women's mobility in the West Bank", West Bank and Gaza Update (July 2009).

<sup>6</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Field Update from the Humanitarian Coordinator, 9 February 2009, and the Gaza Flash Appeal, 2 February 2009; Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, press release 6/2009 of 12 March 2009, cited in A/HRC/10/20, Report of the Special Rapporteur on the Situation of Human Rights in the Palestinian Territories Occupied since 1967, Richard Falk.

high.<sup>7</sup> Despite increases in the import of goods into Gaza since the military operation ended, the level of imports still remains at less than one fifth of what the volume was prior to the imposition of the comprehensive closure regime in May 2007, and imports are mainly food and sanitation items (A/64/351-S/2009/464, para. 16).

15. According to the most recent estimates, the poverty rate among households headed by women was 61.2 per cent, compared with 56.9 per cent for households headed by men in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 2007. The poverty rate among female-headed households with seven or more children was 79.7 per cent, compared with 68.6 per cent for households with five or six children (A/64/77-E/2009/13).

16. Over half of the Palestinian population of working age is between 15 and 29 years of age. Those who have the possibility to complete secondary education face limited job prospects. Over half of those in the 15 to 29 age group do not have access to education or employment.<sup>8</sup> In the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the rate of participation in the labour force for young women is estimated to be below 13.6 per cent, compared with 54 per cent for young men, for the first quarter of 2009.<sup>9</sup>

17. During the reporting period, the rates of women's participation in the labour force remained low at 15.4 per cent (16.5 per cent in the West Bank and 13.5 per cent in Gaza), compared with a participation rate for men of 66.9 per cent (68.5 per cent in the West Bank and 63.8 per cent in Gaza).<sup>9</sup> The majority of women in the labour force have little or no education, and their low participation rates can be attributed to sociocultural restrictions, high fertility rates, and a general low level of employment caused by the various constraints imposed by the ongoing occupation on the economy.<sup>2</sup> Women who are employed are concentrated in the farming, forestry, hunting and fishing sectors (34.8 per cent), followed by education (32.5 per cent) and health services (7.2 per cent).<sup>9</sup>

18. While there has been a continuing increase in the number of married women in the labour force over the past seven years, unmarried women comprise the majority of the female labour force. According to research conducted jointly by the Birzeit Women's Studies Institute and the World Bank, higher education is a major factor for employment among both married and unmarried women. During the reporting period, the probability that a woman would join the labour market increased 18 times if she had a high school degree and a full 37 times if she had a postgraduate degree.<sup>10</sup>

19. Nearly 90 per cent of women in the informal economy work in the agricultural sector.<sup>11</sup> According to FAO, women farmers face dwindling household incomes due to high input prices, and have to buy food at higher prices. Most small-holder

<sup>7</sup> International Labour Organization, report of the Director-General to the International Labour Conference at its 98th session, appendix on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories, para. 91.

<sup>8</sup> International Labour Organization, op. cit., preface.

<sup>9</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Labour Force Survey (January-March 2009) Round (Q1/2009).

<sup>10</sup> Women's Studies Institute/World Bank (June 2009), "The impact of Israeli mobility restrictions and violence on gender in Palestinian society 2000-2007".

<sup>11</sup> World Health Organization, report by the secretariat on the health conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan dated 7 May 2009 (A/62/24, annex, para. 5).

farmers also face obstacles in marketing their agricultural products owing to the inundation of Israeli imports into the Palestinian economy and the restrictions of movement and access to goods. Families in some areas face additional vulnerabilities owing to drought and the high price of tanked water. As a result of the loss of grazing lands owing to settlement expansion, the barrier and closed military zones, herding communities are particularly afflicted with high fodder prices.<sup>2</sup>

20. According to a World Bank assessment of restrictions on Palestinian water sector development, women surveyed in a small village in the West Bank in 2008-2009 complained about poor water quality. The proximity of many wells to sewage sources led to water-related health problems and increased work in treating water for household use.<sup>12</sup>

21. A total of 40.4 per cent of 3,767,126 Palestinians currently live with food insecurity.<sup>13</sup> The 2009 socio-economic and food security survey report on the West Bank found that 31 per cent of female-headed households were food insecure, compared with 24 per cent of male-headed households.<sup>14</sup> In the West Bank, the food insecurity prevalence among households with more than 50 per cent women is 29 per cent, compared with the 25 per cent West Bank average.<sup>2</sup> According to the World Bank, Palestinian families are forced to reduce their consumption and change their diets because of higher food prices.<sup>12</sup> Preliminary findings from a survey conducted in Gaza in May and June 2009 showed that 68 per cent of female-headed households were food insecure, compared with 60 per cent of male-headed households. Food insecurity in Gaza was estimated to have increased by 4 per cent from May 2008.<sup>2</sup> The survey also revealed that a higher number of women and girls in a household increases the likelihood of food insecurity in the household.

22. The rise in food insecurity and poverty in Gaza has resulted in an increased burden on women.<sup>2</sup> In the event of the death, disability or unemployment of the husband, women become the main breadwinners for the family. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported an increased number of single-parent households. Older women, women with disabilities, women heads of household and displaced women and girls faced continued hardship as a result of the ongoing blockade of Gaza.<sup>4</sup> Approximately 20 per cent of households claim that boys' needs are prioritized when there is a food shortage at home, while the least likely household members to receive priority during a food shortage are the elderly.<sup>2</sup>

23. Education is undermined as a result of the blockade, with the delivery of essential educational materials being delayed or denied entry at crossing points. Most educational facilities have not been repaired owing to the lack of building materials. Many schools are running on double shifts to accommodate the large number of students.<sup>15</sup>

---

<sup>12</sup> World Bank (2009), Assessment of restrictions on Palestinian water sector development, Middle East and North Africa Region, Sustainable Development, Washington, D.C.

<sup>13</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Consolidated Appeals Process 2010 (forthcoming).

<sup>14</sup> FAO, Socio-Economic and Food Security Survey Report on the West Bank, carried out jointly by FAO, WFP and the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, August 2009.

<sup>15</sup> Gisha Legal Centre for Freedom of Movement, "Obstacle course: students denied exit from Gaza, July 2009, cited in the contribution of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs to the report.

24. In the 2008/09 academic year, a total of 239,188 girls, 49.92 per cent of pupils, were enrolled in UNRWA elementary, preparatory and secondary schools. The drop-out rate for girls was 0.97 per cent, and 66.8 per cent of the students benefiting from UNRWA administered scholarships were girls.<sup>16</sup>

25. According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, in 2008, 9.1 per cent of women 15 years and older were illiterate, compared with only 2.9 per cent of men.<sup>17</sup>

26. Recent data on education indicate that women constituted 45.2 per cent of those who had completed two years or more of higher education; 54 per cent of students at local universities; 57 per cent of students at university colleges; and 37 per cent at community colleges in 2007.<sup>18</sup> Tertiary students have limited postgraduate study options within Gaza and face great difficulties in arranging to study abroad at the postgraduate level.<sup>15</sup> This has hindered progress in improving girls' and women's education, thus limiting their potential to assume leadership positions at all levels.<sup>4</sup> Even though women accounted for 58 per cent of graduates from local universities, they represented only 16.6 per cent of academic teaching staff at universities.<sup>18</sup>

27. UNICEF reported that adolescent Palestinian girls continued to have limited opportunities for development, recreation and participation, with few safe spaces available to them. Youth clubs across the Occupied Palestinian Territory had insufficient funding and were poorly equipped and managed. Adolescent girls' opportunities were often compromised by the burden of unpaid domestic work or pressure to marry early.<sup>2</sup>

28. The closure regime, including the barrier, checkpoints, closures and earth mounds, restricts Palestinian women's access to adequate prenatal, natal and post-natal medical care.<sup>19</sup> During the operation Cast Lead, maternal and child health services at primary health-care centres were disrupted. Despite the critical conditions, maternity assistance for normal deliveries continued to be provided, as was specialized health care for obstetric and neonatal complications. In many cases, however, such services were provided in improvised settings within health facilities whose maternity wards and operating theatres had been transformed into trauma units. Findings from a UNFPA assessment in February 2009 suggest that there was a 31 per cent increase in the number in miscarriages at four hospitals surveyed and a 50 per cent increase in neonatal mortality at one of the hospitals in Gaza City.<sup>20</sup>

29. The sixty-second World Health Assembly expressed deep concern at the serious implications for pregnant women and patients arising from the restriction of movement imposed by Israel on the movement of Palestinian ambulances and medical personnel, and demanded that Israel, the occupying power, improve the

<sup>16</sup> Contribution of UNRWA to the present report.

<sup>17</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "On the Eve of International Population Day", 11 July 2009.

<sup>18</sup> Contribution of ESCWA to the present report.

<sup>19</sup> See A/HRC/10/35, report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the issue of Palestinian pregnant women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints.

<sup>20</sup> See UNFPA, Gaza crisis: impact on reproductive health and obstetric care, February 2009, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

living and medical conditions of Palestinian detainees, in particular children and women patients.<sup>21</sup>

30. A UNIFEM study<sup>22</sup> highlighted a high prevalence of domestic violence and violence against children, with displaced women being identified at increased risk of gender-based violence.<sup>23</sup> Although precise figures of violent crimes committed against women, including so-called “honour killings”, are not available, organizations that provide protection services for victims of violence continued to report such cases in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. During the period from January to August 2009, at least 10 women were reported to have been killed as a consequence of so-called “honour” crimes.<sup>24</sup> Perpetrators enjoy relative impunity for those crimes and are often sentenced to less than three years of imprisonment and serve about two years of the sentence.

31. According to the UNIFEM study,<sup>22</sup> domestic violence was cited as the primary safety problem facing women and girls, while public and political violence was the main safety and security problem facing men and boys. The highest reported rise in domestic violence against women was among households displaced by the conflict and in the southern Gaza Strip, which also had the highest reporting of increased domestic violence against children. The study further highlighted that violence against men was more likely to be treated as a public crime, while violence against women was often treated as a private family problem. Men were 10 times more likely to report the crime to the police than women. Limited legal and public mechanisms were available to men and women victims of social and political violence in Gaza, and there was distrust of the available mechanisms.

32. The Palestinian Authority has taken measures to increase women’s participation in all aspects of public and political life.<sup>22</sup> However, women are rarely present in decision-making positions in peace negotiations, either at the national or international level. As a result of the quota established in 2004, women’s political participation increased to 12.7 per cent in the Legislative Council and to 18 per cent in the local and municipal councils.<sup>25</sup>

33. According to the Palestinian Authority, women comprised 37 per cent of the employees in the Government sector and 15 per cent of senior employees in Government departments. Out of 15 ministers 5 are women, and they constitute 4.3 per cent of deputy ministers, 5.4 per cent of ambassadors, 10 per cent of judges and 16.9 per cent of lawyers.<sup>2</sup>

34. The Palestinian Authority endorsed the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women on 9 March 2009. It is expected that gender equality legislation will be prepared to ensure the implementation of the Convention.<sup>25</sup> In June 2009, the Palestinian Authority, through its Council of Ministers, issued a decision requesting all governmental departments to prepare gender-sensitive annual budgets.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>21</sup> See WHA62/2009/REC/1, World Health Organization, Report of the Sixty-Second World Health Assembly, Geneva.

<sup>22</sup> UNIFEM, Voicing the Needs of Women and Men in Gaza: Beyond the Aftermath of the 23-Day Israeli Military Operations (2009).

<sup>23</sup> The study was based on a household survey of 1,100 adult men and women conducted across the Gaza Strip in the first week of March 2009.

<sup>24</sup> Al Mezan Centre for Human Rights, member of the World Organization against Torture SOS-Torture Network, August 2009, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>25</sup> Contribution of the Palestinian Authority to the Beijing+15 review.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

35. The present section focuses on the assistance provided to Palestinian women by entities of the United Nations system. Based on contributions from United Nations entities, seven areas of support were identified: education and training; health; employment and entrepreneurship; women's human rights; violence against women; humanitarian assistance; and gender mainstreaming.

A. Education and training

36. Women's and girls' access to education and the availability of career guidance, training and recreational opportunities are key elements to their economic empowerment and well-being. UNICEF and UNESCO supported the Ministries of Education and Higher Education and the Ministry of Labour, as well as non-governmental organizations within the Occupied Palestinian Territory, to enhance access to and quality of girls' education and to provide career guidance. UNICEF increased the number of centres in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that provide adolescent-friendly services and education to girls from 69 in 2008 to 133 in 2009. In total, around 60,000 adolescent girls and boys have participated in activities and services provided at those centres, with girls' participation reaching 53 per cent. UNESCO proposed policy options for the development of a comprehensive and holistic career guidance system, based on its report entitled "Career Guidance in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: Mapping the Field and Ways Forward".

37. Evidence has shown that girls' access to education may be dependent on the available infrastructure. WHO constructed sanitary units and instituted hygiene campaigns at 20 girls schools in the West Bank for about 9,000 students. UNIFEM and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education created a "healthy canteen" pilot project in 61 different schools throughout the West Bank that provided healthy snacks, with the aim of improving the health and nutritional status of schoolchildren.

38. Technical and vocational education remains a critical factor in women's access to the labour market. Training programmes for women were provided in a wide range of areas related to vocational and professional development. The UNRWA Department of Education continued to assist Palestinian refugees in acquiring professional skills. During the reporting period, a total of 2,670 girls benefited from the UNRWA Technical and Vocational Education and Training programme. UN-Habitat, through its Special Human Settlements Programme for the Palestinian People, is in the process of establishing a technical and vocational training centre in Hebron for underprivileged women.

B. Health

39. United Nations entities supported improved access to health services, including reproductive health, psychological counselling, health education and prevention programmes. WHO monitored restrictions that prevent women from accessing health services outside the Gaza Strip. Information was collected on women who were denied the right to leave Gaza and related deaths. According to

WHO, 51 women and girls died during the period from October 2007 and August 2009 while waiting to receive medical treatment that was only available outside Gaza. WHO assisted UNFPA in providing clearances for medicines and equipment in order to provide services for women of childbearing age.

40. Several United Nations entities provided capacity-building on improving the provision of health care. WHO provided technical support to the Palestinian Red Crescent Society Maternity Hospital and the Makassed Hospital, the largest specialized hospitals providing obstetric care for Palestinian women. UNFPA targeted all Ministry of Health maternity workers in a capacity-building programme.

41. The provision of reproductive and maternal health care was supported by United Nations entities. During the reporting period, UNRWA provided antenatal care to approximately 102,000 pregnant women, post-natal care to more than 89,000 women and family planning services to about 133,000 clients in five fields of operation. UNICEF supported the Ministry of Health through providing essential equipment for newborns and basic obstetric equipment for 4,000 high-risk newborns and 7,500 pregnant women in 13 neonatal units. In partnership with non-governmental organizations working on health issues, UNFPA supplied 20 remote communities in the West Bank with basic reproductive health and obstetric care as well as health education programmes. Over a six-month period, UNICEF provided micronutrients and fortified biscuits for 80,000 children and 40,000 pregnant women.

42. A number of United Nations entities provided psychosocial counselling to women. WHO introduced a community approach to improving the situation of mental health workers, their clients and the family members of the mentally ill. The UNRWA Community Mental Health Programme in the West Bank and Gaza Strip offered essential psychosocial support for Palestine refugees, including women and girls. Psychosocial support was provided by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs through individual and group counselling to family members of female prisoners held in Israeli jails and to former prisoners in support of their reintegration in the society.

43. Disease prevention through immunizations, mammograms and healthy lifestyle guides was the focus of a number of United Nations entities. UNRWA continued to provide full immunization coverage of women and children against vaccine-preventable diseases, provided pre-conception folic acid, and iron and folic acid supplements for women throughout pregnancy. Health education programmes on the prevention of tobacco use and the prevention of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases were established. UNFPA supported four women's health centres, which provided clinical, psychosocial and legal support, physiotherapy and health education to women living in the most populated and underprivileged areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. WHO and WFP instituted programmes to improve nutritional and health behaviours.

C. Employment and entrepreneurship

44. Access to job opportunities supports women's self-reliance and ensures their livelihoods. In August 2009, UNESCO, UNIFEM, UNDP and FAO began implementation of the joint programme on "Culture and Development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory", a three-year programme which promotes institutional development through policies and practices for safeguarding cultural heritage, and socio-economic development through ecotourism and arts and crafts. To improve women's access to opportunities in the labour market, UNRWA recruited women as teachers, doctors, nurses, physiotherapists, field workers, administrative staff, site engineers, school cleaners and agricultural labourers. In collaboration with Palestinian non-governmental organizations, skills training was provided to more than 10,000 women in areas such as computer literacy, hairdressing, sewing, traditional Palestinian handicrafts and embroidery. Through its emergency job creation programme, UNRWA continued to offer short-term employment opportunities to families without a breadwinner in a range of skilled, unskilled and professional positions. UN-Habitat completed the design and initial documents for a project for a housing and income-generating programme for poor women in Hebron, which aims to improve the living conditions of poor women and their families through the construction of 100 housing units and the establishment of small-scale enterprise activities for generating income in Hebron.

45. Credit to women microentrepreneurs constitutes a fundamental source of capital that enables them to meet the needs of their families for food, clothing, health care and education. Several United Nations entities provided grants and training to enhance Palestinian women's entrepreneurship. IFAD provided assistance to Palestinian women through credit and savings schemes in its Rehabilitation and Development Project Phase II, benefiting 8,200 households. The Deprived Families Economic Empowerment Programme of UNDP focused on capacity-building and economic empowerment by supporting 2,210 poor entrepreneurs to develop their own business enterprises. Nearly half of those entrepreneurs are women who did not qualify for commercial loans. By July 2009, the UNRWA Microfinance and Microenterprise Programme had made loans to small-scale enterprises in Gaza and the West Bank, to women in Gaza through a solidarity group lending product, to microenterprises in Gaza and the West Bank and to workers and low-paid professionals. The UNRWA Small and Microenterprise Training Programme provided short-term training customized for the needs of microentrepreneurs and small business owners in the Gaza Strip. During the reporting period, more than 618 courses and 18 workshops were conducted for over 13,453 participants, almost 20 per cent of whom were women.

46. Efforts were made to enhance the role of Palestinian women in the improvement of national food security and agricultural production. UNDP organized tailored vocational training and business courses for women and provided women with assets such as livestock, home gardens and greenhouses to produce goods for their own consumption or for sale on the local market. Agricultural projects supported by FAO targeted women in income-generating and capacity-building activities through backyard production and home gardening, mainly in areas affected by drought or conflict and/or in Bedouin communities. A total of 650 female-headed households currently receive assistance in Nablus, Dorah, Tulkarem and Gaza. The WFP Food For Training and Food For Work programmes involved 14,376 women (49 per cent of beneficiaries) in home gardening, handicrafts, food processing, animal raising, beekeeping, agricultural awareness, soap making, and embroidery in the West Bank. UNDP supported the Palestinian Agricultural Relief Committees to provide economic assistance to more than 5,000 members of a women's cooperative in the West Bank. The initiative is now run in 132 locations in the West Bank and Gaza.

47. A 2008/09 School Snacks project run by WFP focused on the empowerment and capacity-building of women, with approximately 140 of them receiving cash for work and monthly rations of wheat flour for the production of snacks. UNIFEM piloted a school feeding initiative with the Nusseirat Women's Programme Centre targeting 450 children in kindergartens in the Nusseirat refugee camp.

48. ILO participated in the review of the Palestinian National Development Plan to promote a longer-term perspective on achieving decent work and social justice for both women and men.

49. Efforts were made to increase women's equal access to and knowledge of communications and information technologies. UNESCO implemented a two-year project on Strengthening Palestinian Participatory Democracy and Public Dialogue, financed by the United Nations Democracy Fund, which aimed to increase women's participation in democratic decision-making, public debate and media through strengthening the outreach and advocacy capacities of women's organizations and women journalists.

D. Women's human rights

50. Capacity-building efforts also focused on the promotion of women's rights. In December 2008, OHCHR, in cooperation with the Palestinian Authority's Independent Commission for Human Rights, organized a training course on "Rights of women and juveniles in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice". The activity targeted 14 Palestinian prosecutors from the West Bank, focusing on the role of prosecutors in the protection of women's and juveniles' rights in the process of administration of justice. In the Gaza Strip, OHCHR provided training to a group of female lawyers on protecting human rights as part of its training-of-trainers programme. The training aimed at developing human rights expertise and training capacities. OHCHR conducted a workshop on basic human rights and the rights of people with disabilities in the Gaza Strip for a group of mothers of children with disabilities. During the reporting period, OHCHR held several meetings with Palestinian institutions on the issue of so-called "honour killings".

51. A number of awareness-raising campaigns on the human rights of women and girls were organized by United Nations entities. OHCHR, ESCWA and UNRWA conducted training sessions and workshops on awareness-raising on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. ESCWA held its second regional workshop on implementation of the Convention for parliamentarians in Beirut in November 2008. On the occasion of International Women's Day 2009, OHCHR organized an event for 24 representatives of local women's rights non-governmental organizations in the West Bank, addressing the United Nations protection mechanisms and women's rights in international law and under Palestinian legislation. The discussion focused on the main causes of violence against women and the role of men in protecting women's rights.

52. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs conducted advocacy and media campaigns to raise the awareness of the general public, key individuals and organizations at the international level of the conditions of female prisoners in Israeli prisons and detention centres. UNIFEM provided legal and social support to Palestinian female prisoners and detainees in Israeli prisons. In particular, prisoners whose family members were unable to visit them have received monthly visits from lawyers. Two support groups for released female prisoners were established in the West Bank. A three-day summer camp was held for former prisoners and for relatives and children of current and former prisoners. In the Gaza Strip, a training course on “Oral history documentation skills” targeting former female prisoners was conducted with the goal to collect stories about their imprisonment.

53. In an effort to engage youth, UNIFEM continued to support the Youth Rights Monitor project, implemented by a local non-governmental organization, is specialized in media and youth. The project, targeting young people between the ages of 14 and 25, institutionalizes the participation of Palestinian youth in national public policy dialogue and debate, with a special focus on the rights of youth, including women’s rights.

54. UNRWA partnered with 103 Palestinian community-based organizations, including 65 women’s programme centres, to develop capacity for the implementation of social services for vulnerable people, including women. Programmes focused on increasing women’s economic self-reliance; expanding women’s role in managing community-based organizations; and promoting refugee women’s knowledge of human rights.

55. In support of the sixtieth anniversary of UNRWA, the Department of Public Information assisted with the translation and printing of public information materials on issues affecting the women refugee population. More than 300,000 visitors to United Nations Headquarters saw the exhibit on the theme “The Palestinians — 60 years of struggle and enduring hope”, which was on display from November 2008 to January 2009 and portrayed Palestinian life, including several dozen images of women and their daily life, under occupation.

E. Violence against women

56. Within the framework of the Secretary-General’s multi-year campaign on the theme “UNite to End Violence against Women”, UNIFEM led the Combating Violence Against Women festival in Ramallah during the annual campaign, “16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence”, which took place from 25 November to 10 December 2009. The event was supported by eight United Nations entities, the Ministries of Women’s Affairs, Social Affairs and the Interior as well as Al Muntada, a coalition of 15 local non-governmental organizations committed to ending violence against women. The festival highlighted the collaborative work performed by United Nations entities, local non-governmental organizations and the Ministries to end violence against women, with a focus on youth groups.

57. Several United Nations entities were instrumental in increasing services to survivors of domestic violence. UNIFEM supported the upgrading of an existing toll-free helpline for women and children victims of violence. The helpline expanded its working hours, provided a social worker in the Gaza Strip to directly follow up with people requesting help and provided funding for a physician to respond to medical queries. UNFPA, in cooperation with the Nablus, Jenin and Jericho municipalities, continued to provide psychosocial counselling to women and worked with local non-governmental organizations to improve measures for women to access services that address gender-based violence. The UNRWA Gaza and West Bank field offices continued to hold individual and group counselling sessions for victims of gender-based violence who are in need of therapeutic services through the Community Mental Health Programme. During the reporting period, 6,321 women benefited from counselling through the programme.

58. UNIFEM worked with the Ministry of Interior to strengthen the Palestinian institutional capacity to combat violence against women through developing guidelines and procedures for security forces, including police officers assigned to Family Protection Units. Through a local non-governmental organization, UNIFEM supported two intensive training courses targeting 40 security force members (men and women) from the West Bank as part of efforts to promote community responses to working with survivors of gender-based violence.

59. In partnership with the Ministry of Social Affairs, UNIFEM continued to work with the Mehwar Centre, an anti-violence institution in the Occupied Palestinian Territory that provides multiple services to survivors of gender-based violence. This pilot institution works with the community on prevention of violence and the protection and empowerment of women and children victims. It lobbies for the adoption of relevant national policies and laws. During the reporting period, the Mehwar Centre sheltered 62 women and 8 child victims of violence. Four new cases per month, on average, were received. The Centre provided a variety of services, including counselling, psychological support, legal advice and representation, and, in coordination with other local organizations, health care, vocational training, and educational and job opportunities.

60. United Nations entities participated in advocacy activities and efforts to raise awareness about violence against women. UNIFEM promoted an event to increase the sensitivity and the commitment of youth to decreasing incidences of domestic violence through the medium of hip hop music. UNRWA organized awareness-raising sessions on the theme “Women and men united to end violence against women and girls”. The sessions were attended by 782 members of the community and 213 staff and addressed topics such as sex education, equality of men and women in the family, and violence against women and children.

F. Humanitarian assistance

61. A number of United Nations entities responded to the destructive military conflict of December 2008 and January 2009 with emergency assistance, in addition to their ongoing humanitarian assistance. In January 2009, WFP launched an emergency operation to provide assistance to households headed by women, widows, and divorced or separated women, among other vulnerable groups. Female-headed households comprised approximately half of the total beneficiaries assisted by WFP in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. UNRWA sheltered more than 50,000 persons in 50 of its schools across Gaza, where they received food, water, blankets, mattresses, hygiene kits and medical care from the Agency and from local and international non-governmental organizations. UNHCR provided non-food items for 3,200 families (around 18,000 persons) to be distributed by UNRWA to the population in Gaza. UNDP disbursed $20 million through its emergency cash assistance programme to people who had suffered partial or total damage to personal property during the offensive, 952 of which beneficiaries (7 per cent) were women.

62. In the West Bank, United Nations entities continued to provide emergency assistance programmes, including food aid, to around 70,000 refugee families during 2009. UNHCR supplied non-food items, such as plastic sheeting, sanitary napkins, diapers, blankets and logistical equipment.

63. In August 2009, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs issued its Special Focus report detailing the humanitarian impact of two years of blockade on the Gaza Strip, including a section on the effects of operation Cast Lead on women in Gaza. Based on a large-scale public opinion survey of 1,815 households in Gaza, a UNDP report entitled “Inside Gaza: attitudes and perceptions of the Gaza Strip residents in the aftermath of the Israeli military operations” (March 2009) provides data disaggregated by sex on the impact of the crisis on women and men.

64. In accordance with Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security, the Inter-Agency Gender Task Force of the United Nations country team, led by UNIFEM and the Gender Standby Capacity Project Adviser, issued the report entitled, “Voicing the needs of women and men in Gaza: beyond the 23-day Israeli military operation” in April 2009. Based on a gender needs assessment, the report provided information on gender equality issues addressed in humanitarian/early recovery assistance, during and after the Israeli military operation.

65. UNIFEM and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs developed a guidebook for the humanitarian sector in Gaza that provides standards for the integration of gender equality issues from the outset of complex emergencies. The guidebook aims to enable humanitarian service providers to reach their target audience with the maximum positive effect while minimizing exacerbation or inadvertent exposure to risk.

G. Gender mainstreaming

66. A number of United Nations entities initiated activities to strengthen gender mainstreaming in policies and programmes. In 2008, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and UNIFEM jointly deployed a Gender Standby Capacity Project Adviser to provide technical support on gender mainstreaming within humanitarian action, in particular with regard to five sectors: water and sanitation; health; protection; job creation; and cash assistance. As a result, the 2009 Consolidated Appeals Process projects showed an increase in commitment and technical capacity from individual United Nations agencies and members of an umbrella organization of international NGOs regarding the incorporation of gender equality perspectives into programmes. In addition, the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Task Force strengthened its terms of reference and its participation in sector coordination. The visibility of gender issues increased in sectoral responses.

67. In May 2009, UNIFEM, UNDP, UNESCO, UNFPA, UNRWA and ILO began implementation of a joint programme under the Millennium Development Goals Achievement Fund on “Gender equality and women’s empowerment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory”. This three-year joint programme promotes Palestinian women’s social, economic and political empowerment and aims to reduce gender-based violence, increase the representation of women in decision-making bodies, increase the adoption of policies and laws on gender equality issues in decision-making bodies, and enhance opportunities for women’s economic empowerment.

68. ESCWA provided technical cooperation and advisory services to the Palestinian Ministry for Women's Affairs on gender mainstreaming and strategic planning. Institutions of the Palestinian Authority participated in meetings and workshops aimed at building the capacity of Palestinian national mechanisms for gender equality.

69. ILO and UNDP contributed to the development of the Palestinian National Early Recovery and Reconstruction Plan for Gaza (2009-2010), prepared by the Palestinian Authority. This report highlighted that women and men in Gaza do not face challenges in the same way but have different capacities and access to support systems through which to manage situations of stress.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

70. During the period under review, despite some positive developments, the overall humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to deteriorate in most areas. The rise in food insecurity and poverty has resulted in an increased burden on women to maintain household food security. The continued closures, checkpoints and roadblocks limited the access of Palestinian women and girls to health-care services, education and employment. Pregnant women had difficulties accessing health services for antenatal care and safe delivery.

71. Improving the situation of and enhancing the impact of assistance to Palestinian women is linked to the achievement of a secure and lasting peace. Renewed efforts need to be made by the international community to seek an end to the violent confrontations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and a peaceful resolution to the conflict. Women should be fully involved in the conflict resolution and peacebuilding initiatives to be undertaken in the region, in accordance with the Beijing Platform for Action and Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008), 1888 (2009) and 1889 (2009) on women, peace and security.

72. United Nations entities should continue to provide assistance to women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and refugee camps, particularly in areas such as education, health, social welfare, employment and women's economic empowerment. Attention should be paid, however, to ensure that assistance programmes and projects do not inadvertently reinforce conventional divisions of labour according to gender and gender stereotypes. Enhanced efforts should be made to achieve women's full participation in political and economic decision-making processes at all levels. Concrete actions are needed to increase the participation of Palestinian women, in particular young women, in the labour force. Attention should be given to increasing access by Palestinian women to safe and affordable means of transport.

73. Food security should be made a high priority. Strong, comprehensive measures, including safety nets, are needed to ensure that women have access to safe, adequate, nutritious and affordable food, and to increase the access by women small-holder farmers to technologies, credit and markets.

74. Enhanced efforts are needed to eliminate all forms of violence against Palestinian women and girls and to protect and promote their human rights, including through the systematic and effective implementation of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Incidents of discrimination and violence against women and girls, including so-called “honour killings”, should be strongly condemned. Perpetrators of all forms of violence against women should be prosecuted, and any climate of impunity surrounding such offences should be eliminated. Renewed efforts by all relevant actors are needed at the international, regional and national levels to prevent sexual violence against women, in accordance with relevant Security Council resolutions.

75. A gender perspective should be fully integrated into international assistance programmes, through, inter alia, gender analysis and the collection of sex-disaggregated data. All studies and reports undertaken by the United Nations, including the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, and the Special Rapporteur on the Situation of Human Rights in the Palestinian Territories Occupied since 1967, should systematically incorporate information on the situation of women and girls.

76. Governments, academic institutions, international organizations and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, should be encouraged to collaborate on qualitative and quantitative action-oriented research on the situation of women and girls.

77. Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant stakeholders should intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women and girls and systematically assess and report on the impact of those efforts.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
10 December 2010

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-fifth session

22 February-4 March 2011

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: implementation of strategic objectives and action in critical areas of concern, and further actions and initiatives

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between 1 September 2009 and 30 September 2010, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2010/6. It reviews the situation of Palestinian women and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional arrangements. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2011/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2010/6 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation in order to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2010/4), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fifth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 September 2009 to 30 September 2010 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations entities or individual experts that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including ESCWA, the United Nations country team for the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process. In this regard, the United Nations country team has coordinated contributions to the report by the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO); the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM, now part of UN-Women), the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. The reporting period was characterized by efforts to resume negotiations between the parties on all permanent status issues, a volatile situation on the ground throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the deepening divide between Gaza and the West Bank (see A/65/35, para. 4). Systematic engagement by the United States of America and other members of the Quartet with the Israeli and Palestinian leaderships and other stakeholders in the region led to the resumption of direct talks between Israel and the Palestinians on 2 September 2010. That had been preceded by several rounds of proximity talks assisted by the United States. The League of Arab States also engaged actively within the framework of the Arab Peace Initiative, including meetings with the Quartet (ibid., para. 5).

5. The consequences of years of occupation and conflict and multiple political and economic crises in 2009, particularly in Gaza where the Israeli military operation “Cast Lead” undermined social services, infrastructure and homes, continued to be felt.<sup>1</sup> While initial estimates indicate that economic growth accelerated in 2009 and real growth in the West Bank and Gaza was about 6.7 per cent, conditions in the Gaza Strip remained difficult.<sup>2</sup> Changes in Israeli policy regarding entry of material — from a “positive” list of goods allowed into Gaza to a “negative” list of items that would be prohibited or restricted from entry — brought some relief to the population, but remained insufficient to address the full range of socio-economic needs.<sup>3</sup>

6. The expansion of Israeli settlements continued in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem (see A/65/35, para. 5). A total of 230 cases of house demolitions and evictions were documented through August 2010 in East Jerusalem and “Area C”.<sup>3</sup> As of July 2010, approximately 61 per cent of the barrier had been completed. In contradiction to the 9 July 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, the barrier continues to deviate significantly from the 1967 Green Line into Occupied Palestinian Territory in the West Bank. When completed, approximately 85 per cent of the barrier will run inside the West Bank (see A/65/35, para. 34). Free movement in the West Bank continued to be obstructed by Israel even though the number of checkpoints was reduced (ibid., para. 7) during the reporting period, contributing to greater freedom of movement between Palestinian urban centres, East Jerusalem excluded.<sup>3</sup> As at the end of August 2010, there were some 500 closure obstacles throughout the West Bank<sup>4</sup> (compared with 618 in August 2009; see A/65/380, para. 19), where there were continued restrictions preventing Palestinians from using key roads and accessing East Jerusalem as well as other areas isolated by the barrier. Furthermore, there was no improvement regarding access of Palestinians to farming and grazing areas, as well as water resources, located in Area C.<sup>3</sup> The humanitarian needs were becoming more acute due to inadequate water quality. In East Jerusalem and the West Bank water sources were closed off to establish settlements and military zones.<sup>1</sup> Due to its high salinity, 80 per cent of the water supply in Gaza is not fit for human consumption.<sup>1</sup>

7. The divide among major Palestinian factions continued to affect the lives of ordinary Palestinians, especially in Gaza, and prevented Palestinians from uniting in support of the Palestinian Authority (see A/65/35, para. 8). The Gaza Strip remained under the de facto control of Hamas (see A/65/380, para. 26).

8. Although the political situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, related both to the Israeli occupation and to the divide among major Palestinian factions, affects all individuals, women and girls are affected in distinct ways.

9. At the end of 2009, formal labour force participation of women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was among the lowest levels globally: 15.2 per cent

---

<sup>1</sup> UNICEF, Humanitarian Action Report 2010.

<sup>2</sup> World Bank, Brief on West Bank and Gaza (March 2010).

<sup>3</sup> Contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>4</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, The Humanitarian Monitor (August 2010).

in the West Bank, down from 15.8 per cent in the first two quarters of 2009,<sup>5</sup> and 9.1 per cent in the Gaza strip.<sup>6</sup> According to a study conducted by UNESCO and the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics on market factors that discourage women from joining the labour market, some 60 per cent of women in the formal labour force are employed in education, textiles, clerical work, farming and agriculture. ESCWA reports that the Palestinian National Authority and UNRWA continued to be the two main employers of women.

10. While no legal barriers prevent women from entering into businesses or economic-related contracts, engaging in autonomous economic activity has meant increased mobility for some women. Most must carefully navigate social norms in order to avoid family conflict since women must often obtain the permission of brothers and husbands to work.<sup>7</sup> Few women occupy high-level positions, and wage gaps between women and men persist. Men are given priority in hiring processes, and young women wait four times as long as young men to find work.<sup>7</sup>

11. A survey conducted by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics suggests that the majority of women who are out of the labour force are mostly young (15-34 years of age) married women without children. Some 45 per cent of these women have given up seeking employment (31 per cent in the West Bank and 63 per cent in the Gaza Strip) due to previous unsuccessful job search.<sup>8</sup> However, in the absence of male income security, following high levels of unemployment among men (38.6 per cent in May 2010),<sup>3</sup> additional burdens have been placed on women to earn an income in order to meet the basic needs of their families.

12. Many women, in particular middle-aged women and women with low levels of education, turn to a range of informal activities, from petty trading in Gaza, to grocery shopkeeping, sewing, agriculture and livestock production. Many informal activities have benefited from microcredit schemes introduced by aid agencies, however, with mixed results. In some cases, women borrowed money to support their husbands' economic activities, and in other cases they were constrained by the strict repayment policies of the lender. Lack of raw materials or goods mobility, in combination with a massive decline in people's purchasing power, has imposed challenges on those projects and their success.<sup>7</sup>

13. Imposed movement restrictions and the lack of a means of transport constituted crucial barriers to employment for women. According to case studies conducted in the West Bank and Gaza, public transport covers more than 70 per cent of the transport needs of women.<sup>9</sup> However, the combination of movement restriction and gender stereotypes, schedules that do not meet women's needs and public (verbal or physical) harassments have resulted in restricted access to transport for women. Additionally, a lack of fare integration has led to higher

<sup>5</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Labour Force Survey (October-December 2009): Round (Q4/2009)", cited in the contribution received from the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>6</sup> UNDP Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, "MDG attainment in the Palestinian context" (2010).

<sup>7</sup> World Bank, Brief on checkpoints and barriers (2010).

<sup>8</sup> According to a Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics study cited in the contribution received from the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>9</sup> World Bank, "Gender and transport in MENA: case studies from West Bank, Gaza and Yemen", MENA Knowledge and Learning Quick Notes Series, No. 21, March 2010.

transport costs for women (approximately 15 to 20 per cent higher than for men) and for poor people living at the outskirts of towns since they are forced to take multiple means of transportation to reach their destinations.<sup>9</sup>

14. High unemployment levels among women do not only impose economic hardship on women but also tend to lead to high levels of food insecurity. Other factors include large families, higher proportions of women and children and low levels of education. As a result, food insecurity affects 61 per cent of Gaza Strip households and 25 per cent of West Bank households, with higher rates of food insecurity among female-headed households than male-headed households in both the Gaza Strip (68 and 60 per cent) and the West Bank (27 and 22 per cent), respectively. Age is an important factor in the level of food insecurity among female-headed households since older women are less likely to find employment than younger ones. For example, the average age of women heads of food-insecure households is 62 and 56 years in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, respectively.<sup>10</sup>

15. Access to education, training and recreational activities remained critical for the economic empowerment and well-being of women. Available data show that while the overall quality of education available to women is variable, access to and participation in education by women is increasing.<sup>11</sup> The Occupied Palestinian Territory ranked in the medium range (76 out of 128) of the Education for All Development Index,<sup>12</sup> and the enrolment rate and performance of girls has improved. In the 2009/2010 academic year, girls represented 47.9 per cent of the total student population in UNRWA-run schools in the Gaza Strip and 57.5 per cent in the West Bank.<sup>13</sup> Approximately 62 per cent of all teachers in basic education were women.<sup>3</sup> The ongoing conflict, insecurity and movement restrictions, however, continued to pose serious challenges to women's and girls' access to education, training and recreational activities.

16. Gender stereotypes continued to constrain women's access to education and training and have an impact on the choice of education and training courses with concentrations of females and males in distinct fields of study. Curricula, especially in secondary schools, contributed to the portrayal of stereotypical roles for women and men.<sup>3</sup> Girls are also encouraged by their parents to pursue education paths that are in line with their perceived future roles as mothers and caregivers.<sup>3</sup> Dropout rates were higher for boys at the primary level (1.3 per cent, compared with 0.5 per cent for girls), and higher for girls at the secondary level (3.8 per cent, compared with 3.0 per cent for boys).<sup>11</sup> Concerns remained regarding the linkage between the rate of girl dropouts at the secondary level of education and at early marriage.<sup>3</sup>

17. Illiteracy remained a serious obstacle hindering women's economic and political empowerment. While only 1 per cent of youth (15-24 years) was illiterate, illiteracy among adults was much higher, with 75.6 per cent of all illiterate adults

<sup>10</sup> Socio-economic and food security survey conducted by FAO/WFP on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, cited in the contribution received from the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>11</sup> ESCWA, "Social and economic situation of Palestinian women: 2006-2009" (E/ESCWA/ECW/2009/Technical Paper.1) (May 2009).

<sup>12</sup> The Education for All Development Index provides a composite measure of progress, encompassing access, equity and quality; see UNESCO Education for All Global Monitoring Report: Reaching the Marginalized (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2010).

<sup>13</sup> UNRWA, "UNRWA in figures" as of 1 January 2010.

being women.<sup>14</sup> Illiteracy rates among food-insecure heads of households were notably high, with 64 per cent in the West Bank and 34 per cent in the Gaza Strip.<sup>10</sup>

18. Health conditions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are closely linked to the socio-economic consequences of the occupation. Acute and chronic forms of malnutrition continued to pose major problems, in particular in the Gaza Strip. Post-traumatic stress and other psychological and behavioural disorders are an emerging health priority.<sup>15</sup>

19. Significant concerns persisted with regard to maternal and child health due to mobility constraints and insufficient infrastructure. Many pregnant women were unable to reach UNRWA health centres on time because of movement restrictions.<sup>15</sup> According to UNIFEM, difficulties in accessing medical facilities were more acute for rural women, given the number of checkpoints between villages and the lack of hospitals in rural areas (see A/HRC/13/68/Rev.1, para. 10).

20. Due to a shortage of delivery beds, inadequate conditions and space in delivery rooms, and inadequate basic facilities, most women were being discharged one to two hours after normal delivery.<sup>3</sup> While the United Nations does not maintain a specific monitoring mechanism on the issue of Palestinian women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints, no births at checkpoints have been reported by the Palestinian Authority and Israel since January 2009 (see A/HRC/13/68/Rev.1, paras. 7-9).

21. The political and economic conditions affected women's and girls' health and nutrition, particularly in the Gaza Strip. Food insecurity contributed to micronutrient deficiency and high levels of anaemia in infants and pregnant women.<sup>16</sup> In herding communities in Area C, stunting reached up to 38 per cent of children aged 6 to 17 months. Of the surveyed girls, 7.8 per cent suffered from acute malnutrition, compared with 4.8 per cent of boys; 16.7 per cent girls compared with 14.1 per cent boys were acutely underweight.<sup>17</sup> The prevalence of anaemia increased among 9-12-month old infants, from 49 per cent in 2008 to 57 per cent in 2009.<sup>18</sup>

22. Mental health issues affected women both as primary caregivers and as patients. In families with mentally ill members, women bore the brunt of the care. Women made up the majority of professional mental health providers who worked often under substandard conditions.<sup>18</sup> Some 30 per cent of children screened at UNRWA schools were reported to have mental health problems (A/HRC/12/48, para. 1282). Several reports emphasized that poverty and movement constraints left women unable to care for their children and relatives leading to anxiety, panic attacks, disturbed sleep and eating patterns, and depression (A/HRC/12/48, para. 1280).<sup>19</sup>

<sup>14</sup> UNESCO, Global Education Digest 2010: Comparing Education Statistics Across the World (Montreal, Canada, UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2010). Available from http://www.uis.unesco.org/template/pdf/ged/2010/GED\_2010\_EN.pdf.

<sup>15</sup> WHO, "Health conditions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including east Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan" (Sixty-third World Health Assembly (A63/INF.DOC./6), 2010).

<sup>16</sup> UNICEF, "Humanitarian action 2010: mid-year review: Occupied Palestinian Territory".

<sup>17</sup> "Food security and nutrition survey of herding communities in Area C", joint UNRWA/UNICEF/WFP household survey, April 2010.

<sup>18</sup> Ministry of Health, nutrition surveillance system (2009).

<sup>19</sup> See also UNIFEM, Voicing the Needs of Women and Men in Gaza: Beyond the Aftermath of the 23-Day Israeli Military Operations (2009).

23. Palestinian women continued to be exposed to different forms of violence, including those related to the ongoing Israeli occupation and factional tensions, as well as domestic violence, so-called “honour” killings and trafficking. During the reporting period, out of a total of 68 Palestinians killed by Israeli forces and settlers one was a woman, and among 215 injured persons 90 were women.<sup>20</sup> Fear of Israeli violence, as well as the Palestinian factional conflict, is a daily source of stress and insecurity for the entire population.<sup>21</sup>

24. Data on violence against women remains scarce. Women and girls are reluctant to resort to women’s and human rights organizations, the police and courts for a number of reasons, including the lack of awareness of the availability of assistance mechanisms and the strong stigma attached to reporting abuse. According to non-governmental organizations, forensic clinic data confirmed 499 cases of rape; 13 women had been killed in so-called “honour” killings in 2009 (nine in the West Bank and four in Gaza); and 126 women had left their homes due to sexual harassment, rape or physical abuse by a family member.<sup>22</sup>

25. The current legal framework in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is a significant obstacle to gender equality.<sup>21</sup> While the Palestinian Basic Law, which is the main source of legislation, establishes that Palestinians shall be equal before the law and the judiciary without distinction based upon sex,<sup>23</sup> gender-based discrimination persists in law in a range of areas, including the penal code and laws on marriage, divorce, custody of children and inheritance. For example, in the West Bank, the law provides for a reduced sentence with respect to an offence in a “state of great fury”.<sup>24</sup> Laws in force in both the West Bank<sup>25</sup> and the Gaza Strip<sup>26</sup> relieve rapists who marry their victim of any criminal responsibility. None of the existing laws cover marital rape.<sup>21</sup> In addition, weaknesses in the judicial systems have led to an increase in the use of customary law, at times to the detriment of women’s rights.<sup>21</sup>

26. A draft national strategy to combat violence against women has been developed, but not yet finalized. It promotes a legal framework and institutional mechanisms to protect women from violence and also promotes improved social protection and health services for women victims of violence. In the field of law enforcement, the Palestinian Cabinet requested in February 2010 that the President suspend legal provisions on “family honour”.<sup>3</sup>

27. There is growing support among Palestinians for women’s rights and gender equality. A UNDP survey revealed that Palestinian attitudes towards women’s rights

<sup>20</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians” database, 1 October 2009-24 August 2010, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>21</sup> UNDP, “MDG attainment in the Palestinian context” (see footnote 6).

<sup>22</sup> Numbers and figures presented by the Al-Muntada Coalition of Palestinian non-governmental organizations at the violence against women workshop, January 2010; cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>23</sup> Article 9 of the Amended Basic Law (promulgated 18 March 2003), published in the Palestine Official Gazette Special issue No. 2 (19 March 2003).

<sup>24</sup> Jordanian Penal Code No. 16 (1960), article 98, cited in UNDP, “MDG attainment in the Palestinian context”.

<sup>25</sup> Jordanian Penal Code No. 16 (1960), article 308, cited in UNDP, “MDG attainment in the Palestinian context”.

<sup>26</sup> Egyptian Penal Law No. 58 (1936), article 291, “MDG attainment in the Palestinian context”.

exhibited strong support for a revision of the legal code in order to boost women's equality: 70-80 per cent of survey respondents stated that women should be equal to men before the court, the law, at home and at work.<sup>27</sup> Based on a joint study by UNESCO and the Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Center of the Palestinian Legislative Council, Palestinian political representatives are gradually recognizing their responsibility for gender equality issues and starting to take actions towards the advancement of women.<sup>28</sup> In addition, a regional initiative between the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Jordan, Lebanon and Egypt, and non-governmental organizations in February 2010 discussed amendments of the Personal Law (marriage age, child custody, legal status for women, shared budget and divorce).<sup>3</sup>

28. Palestinian women participate in both formal and informal realms of political life. In 2009, women represented 20 per cent of the ministers of the Palestinian Authority.<sup>29</sup> Women's informal participation in political parties has been significant, at least in terms of visibility and effectiveness, if not in terms of numbers. With the factional split and the freeze of the Palestinian Legislative Council in 2006, efforts to promote women's political participation drastically decreased, including with regard to women's active role in peacebuilding and negotiation. Though women were in leadership roles within the Palestinian Authority and the de facto authority, they were often excluded from strategic meetings and decision-making processes, absent from the internal political reconciliation process<sup>30</sup> and did not participate in permanent status negotiations.<sup>31</sup>

29. A cornerstone of Palestinian social, economic and political activity has been the multifaceted volunteer work done by women's associations, which have not only organized to promote peace and political change but also implemented practical projects targeted to support communities to meet their daily needs. These associations have undertaken diverse work, including establishing nursery schools and kindergartens in an attempt to facilitate women's integration into the public sphere and to improve parenting practices and childcare; offering legal advice; challenging patriarchal assumptions about women's capacities and rights including through popular education campaigns; organizing protests and building strategic partnerships with Israeli women in the peace movement.<sup>32</sup> According to data made available by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, representation by

<sup>27</sup> UNDP, "Palestinian perception toward the human security situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory".

<sup>28</sup> UNESCO/Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Center, descriptive report on the main survey regarding knowledge, perceptions and practices of Palestinian Legislative Council members towards gender (June 2010), cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>29</sup> Contribution of ESCWA to the present report.

<sup>30</sup> United Nations, UNIFEM and UNDP, Women Count for Peace: the 2010 Open Days on Women, Peace and Security (September 2010).

<sup>31</sup> ESCWA, joint study on the theme "Status of Arab women: means to strengthen the role of women in conflict resolution and peacebuilding" (December 2009).

<sup>32</sup> See Manal A. Jamal, "Gender and human security: Palestine revisited", Working Paper Series, No. 08-09 (Dubai, Dubai School of Government, 2008); Cynthia Cockburn, From Where We Stand: War, Women's Activism and Feminist Analysis (London, Zed Books, 2007), cited in the UNDP publication Human Development Report 2009/10: Investing in Human Security for a Future State (2010).

Palestinian women in decision-making positions such as boards of trustees and board members of non-governmental organizations was approximately 30 per cent.

30. According to information made available by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics in April 2010, 34 women were held by Israel in detention centres and prisons, where they were reportedly deprived of medical treatment (see A/65/35, para. 35). As of August 2010 there were 23 Palestinian women held in Palestinian prisons in the West Bank where access to basic material needs and respect for the rule of law were limited.<sup>33</sup> The gendered effects of detention are manifold given women's and men's different roles and responsibilities in dealing with the effects of imprisonment of family members. Women shoulder the responsibility of maintaining households and raising children when male family members are detained.<sup>34</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

31. The overall environment of occupation and conflict, movement restrictions and violence continued to be cross-cutting issues that permeated every aspect of Palestinian women's lives. Despite some positive developments, the overall humanitarian needs in parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained acute. Limits to women's movement affect their access to health care, education and socio-economic opportunities and their ability to participate in decision-making processes as well as their caregiving and domestic work.

32. Such conditions have to be considered in terms of the assistance provided to Palestinian women by United Nations entities. Section III sets out six key areas: education and training, health, economic empowerment and livelihoods, violence against women, power and decision-making and institutional arrangements.

A. Education and training

33. United Nations entities continued to develop and implement a range of initiatives to improve access of women and girls to education, training and recreational activities, including provision of scholarships for universities and vocational education and training to strengthen women's participation in the economy and labour force. In 2009/2010, through the UNRWA Department of Education, 533 female students benefited from technical and vocational education and training at the Ramallah Women Training Centre and 357 benefited in the Gaza Strip. UNRWA promoted women's rights and gender equality as universal human rights values through its human rights curricula for grades 1 to 9. UNIFEM offered educational services at community-based women's centres in remote areas of the West Bank and provided 100 young girls and women in the localities of Auja and Fasayel in the Jordan Valley with literacy classes, computer training and English language courses.

<sup>33</sup> UNIFEM project on protection of Palestinian female prisoners and detainees in Palestinian prisons, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>34</sup> Institute of Women's Studies, Birzeit University, "The impact of Israeli mobility restrictions and violence on gender relations in Palestinian society: 2000-2007", cited in the UNDP publication Human Development Report 2009/10: Investing in Human Security for a Future State (2010).

34. The United Nations Children's Fund supported 4,000 female students with life skills education, such as conflict management and team skills, and provided recreational activities for 300 low-performing schools, targeting more than 11,000 female students in grades 2 to 6. Through its 100 adolescent-friendly centres, UNICEF offered educational and recreational activities to more than 20,000 young women. During the reporting period a total of 12,931 women accessed the UNRWA project on social and recreational spaces for women and girls in the Gaza Strip, where they engaged in discussion forums in and classes in such areas as the arts, sports, skills-building, computers and literacy. UNRWA ran its fourth Summer Games programme, providing over 250,000 children in the Gaza Strip with sports and arts activities, raising awareness within the community of the importance of physical exercise for girls and providing girls with spaces (e.g., swimming) they are not ordinarily able to access.<sup>3</sup> On two occasions, facilities of the Summer Games were attacked by armed and masked men, but UNRWA ensured the successful continuation of the Games.

B. Health

35. UNRWA continued to be the main comprehensive primary health-care provider for Palestinian refugees and continued to promote a comprehensive life cycle approach to health with a strong focus on primary health care and prevention. A number of United Nations entities supported improved access to health services in the area of reproductive health.

36. Building on a pilot project aimed at improving the quality of maternal and newborn health in two hospitals in the Gaza Strip in 2010, WHO expanded the project activities to another six hospitals in the Gaza Strip. An estimated 24,000 mothers have benefited from the project activities since the launch of the pilot phase in April 2009. The project managed to increase the mother's stay at the hospital from one hour to up to six hours. Medical checkups were performed for mothers and newborns, early initiation of breastfeeding was encouraged, and basic health education messages were provided for both the health of mothers and newborns.

37. In terms of direct services, UNICEF delivered micronutrient supplementation to more than 50,000 pregnant women and 55,000 children. UNRWA delivered food aid to 7,838 pregnant women and nursing mothers. Maternal health-care services were provided to refugees in 20 primary health-care centres across the Gaza Strip. Additionally, family planning services were provided to about 23,141 clients.

38. The United Nations Children's Fund, WHO and UNFPA worked on improving infrastructure, processes and skills among maternal care providers, in direct cooperation with the Ministry of Health. With the support of UNICEF, the Ministry developed a reproductive health handbook and equipped six neonatal units targeting 10,000 high-risk newborns.<sup>3</sup> Female health workers were trained on the integrated management of childhood illnesses as well as on breastfeeding practices and nutrition protocols for severe acute malnutrition. Activities were also undertaken to raise women's awareness of breast cancer and to promote self-examination. From March to July 2010, over 6,000 women were screened for breast cancer. In that context, WHO presented the first Palestinian 3-D animated movie based on a true story about Fatenah, a breast cancer survivor. More than 200 training sessions were held for more than 3,000 doctors and nurses (three quarters of whom were women).

In order to break the professional isolation of Gaza Strip health professionals, WHO supported training for doctors and nurses in modern practices in maternal and neonatal health care in cooperation with the Al Makased Hospital in East Jerusalem. In cooperation with the Directorate of Hospitals, UNFPA organized training in emergency obstetric care protocols for all Ministry of Health maternity workers in the West Bank and in two maternity wards in Gaza (see A/65/77-E/2010/56, para. 37). UNFPA also continued to provide equipment, medications, and supplies to isolated communities.

39. In regard to other areas of health, UNFPA provided clinical and psychosocial services and health education to 30,000 women in the most underprivileged areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip through support provided to four women's health centres. The UNRWA community mental health programme in the West Bank included group, individual and peer-to-peer counselling. A total of 37,668 beneficiaries (of which 71 per cent were women and girls) participated in group activities, and 109,612 beneficiaries (of which 61 per cent were women and girls) in individual counselling from January to September 2010. UNICEF provided psychosocial support to more than 16,000 women and 10,000 girls. The work of UNDP on HIV/AIDS continued under the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

40. Assistance by United Nations entities concentrated on covering basic livelihood needs and job creation and on enhancing women's access to entrepreneurship, particularly in rural areas and agriculture. UNRWA and FAO focused on households with female or no breadwinners. Female-headed households accounted for approximately 50 per cent of beneficiaries of the WFP Social Hardship Cases General Food Distribution programme. In addition, WFP provided daily supplementary food items to 63,312 and 92,454 students in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, respectively. In the West Bank, WFP worked with women's centres that prepared the school snacks in exchange for cash and WFP food baskets.

41. As one of the largest employers in the area, UNRWA employed more than 10,000 staff members in its operations across the Gaza Strip. In addition, 35 per cent of all beneficiaries of the UNRWA emergency job creation programme were women, who were trained in embroidery, recycling and honey production, and who were recruited as skilled and unskilled labourers. UNIFEM and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education carried out the second phase of the women community-based school canteen project, which provided healthy school snacks. It targeted 230 schools and involved 28 women's organizations in 12 districts. The programme highlights the economic contributions of women and women's centres, while improving the health of schoolchildren.

42. To enhance women's economic opportunities, support was also directed towards women's entrepreneurship and access to credit. During the reporting period, the UNRWA Microfinance and Microenterprise Department in the Gaza Strip disbursed 1,126 loans to female entrepreneurs (out of a total of 3,080 loans). Women received more loans than men in the agricultural and industrial sectors, and represented more than one third of participants (585 out of 1,609) in microenterprise trainings. UNRWA also provided 12 grants to women to enable them to begin income-generating projects.

43. The Millennium Development Goals Achievement Fund Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment in the Palestinian Occupied Territory (MDG-F)<sup>35</sup> launched a gender equality employment strategy. A series of measures were implemented, including three needs assessments for vocational education centres and women cooperatives, and the training of 27 women leaders and 15 gender audit certified trainers. A training workshop on gender and international labour standards was held, focusing on gender equality in the workplace.

44. A number of programmes implemented during the reporting period specifically addressed the role of Palestinian women in agriculture. For example, FAO focused on boosting fruit and vegetable cultivation and on improving water management and income-generation for female-headed households. Livelihood skills for youth were enhanced through the FAO Junior Farmer Field and Life Schools project, which were implemented in 26 schools throughout the West Bank and Gaza, benefiting 1,200 girls and boys by teaching both agricultural and life skills (see A/65/77-E/2010/56, para. 51). UNIFEM provided rural women with business counselling/training to enable them to better manage their own small income-generating projects.

D. Violence against women

45. With assistance from United Nations entities, 50 social workers of the Ministry of Social Affairs were trained in ways to combat violence against women, an existing helpline was upgraded and a coalition of women's and human rights organizations was established (Amal Coalition to Combat Violence against Women in the Gaza Strip). Additionally, staff of the Palestinian Legislative Council were trained on the collection and analysis of data of violence against women.

46. As a result of a conference on so-called "honour" crimes organized by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in March 2010, a task force was established comprising representatives from the Palestinian Authority, United Nations entities and civil society organizations. The task force is to address the issue throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Within the framework of the global campaign entitled "16 Days of Activism against Gender Violence", and as part of the campaign of the Secretary-General entitled "UNiTe to End Violence against Women", UNIFEM organized in Ramallah in December 2009 the second festival to combat violence against women, which was attended by more than 800 people and supported by 10 United Nations agencies. In that context, MDG-F organized the joint campaign entitled "Women and Men are a Nation: Together to End Violence against Women" in the Gaza Strip, which included a festival, radio spots, a mural painting and a study day.

47. With regard to assistance for survivors, UNIFEM continued to support the Mehwar Centre in Bethlehem, a multi-purpose service structure addressing violence against women in a holistic way. During the reporting period, a total of 93 cases of “at-risk” women, women survivors of domestic violence and 17 children were sheltered and received psychosocial, legal, health, vocational and socio-educational counselling. UNFPA continued to provide outreach psychosocial support through trained social workers in Nablus, Jenin and Jericho municipalities (ibid., para. 50).

<sup>35</sup> UNIFEM, UNDP, UNESCO, UNFPA, UNRWA and ILO established the joint Millennium Development Goals Achievement Fund (MDG-F) Joint Programme, "Gender equality and women's empowerment in the Palestinian Occupied Territory". Unless otherwise indicated in the present report, "MDG-F" refers to that programme.

48. Implementation of a UNFPA project continued in five selected areas of the West Bank, enhancing the capacity of 20 staff of the Ministry of Social Affairs in the area of violence against women. In a separate initiative under MDG-F, UNFPA provided training to 120 rural women on such issues as gender equality and gender-based violence, facilitating 1,400 regional awareness sessions. UNRWA organized a gender-based violence-training for the staff of Women’s Programme Centres, educated 360 teachers on early marriage and conducted separate group discussions for women, men, girls and families from April to September 2010 serving 1,000 participants. A workshop organized by UNRWA, on the theme “Community of practice in building referral systems for women victims of violence”, brought together best practice examples in this area.

49. With the support of the Palestinian non-governmental organization Sawa, UNIFEM issued a report entitled “Trafficking and forced prostitution of Palestinian women and girls: forms of modern day slavery”, the first of its kind on the issue of trafficking and forced prostitution of Palestinian women and girls.

E. Power and decision-making

50. The tenth anniversary of the adoption of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security provided an opportunity to highlight the importance of the participation of Palestinian women in decision-making. The United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process emphasized the importance of women’s involvement in peace negotiations, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding efforts in an op-ed article in the Israeli and Palestinian press and delivered a speech to a committee of the Israeli Knesset. As part of the “Global open day for women, peace and security”, held in the context of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000), the United Nations Special Coordinator Office for the Middle East Peace Process, UNIFEM and UNFPA met with a number of women peace activists in the Gaza Strip to discuss women’s concerns regarding peace and security within the context of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Participants identified four key priorities of Palestinian women, namely: supporting women’s political participation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory; addressing the increase in domestic violence and all forms of violence against women; supporting the economic empowerment of women; and raising awareness of the humanitarian impact of the occupation and blockade on women and girls.<sup>36</sup> The outcomes of the event were communicated to the Security Council in October 2010.

51. With support of the Government of Spain, UNIFEM and the International Women’s Commission for a Just and Sustainable Israeli-Palestinian Peace hosted a conference on advancing women’s leadership for sustainable peace in the Palestinian-Israeli conflict and worldwide, in Madrid on 1 and 2 June 2010.

<sup>36</sup> United Nations, UNIFEM and UNDP (see footnote 30).

52. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia provided training for the Ministry of Women's Affairs on how to draft a national action plan for the implementation of resolution 1325 (2000) and launched its biennial flagship publication Status of Arab Women: Means to Strengthen the Role of Women in Conflict Resolution and Peacebuilding, which addressed the situation of Palestinian women and changes within traditional gender roles as women have taken on new responsibilities within their families and communities.

53. To strengthen institutional development in the area of women's rights, members of the Palestinian Legislative Council participated in two workshops organized by ESCWA and other partners on the roles of parliamentarians in the implementation of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

F. Institutional arrangements

54. Several initiatives were undertaken to support institutional development by the Palestinian Authority and by United Nations entities. These included mainstreaming gender perspectives in cross-sectoral as well as sector-specific plans and programmes in agriculture, justice, culture and humanitarian assistance. Activities focused on capacity-building, awareness-raising and tracking the use of resources.

55. In March 2010, the Palestinian Cabinet endorsed the cross-sectoral national gender strategy within the framework of the Palestinian Development Plan for 2011-2013. The gender strategy, developed by the Ministry of Women's Affairs, focuses on the gaps and challenges in all sectors and proposes interventions through the collective action of various Palestinian Authority ministries, women's organizations and civil society organizations.

56. The United Nations Development Fund for Women assisted the Ministry of Women's Affairs and the Ministry of Planning and Administrative Development in elaborating the national gender strategy and action plan, as well as in developing national gender indicators related to the strategy's priority policy areas.

57. In the agricultural sector, UNIFEM with the cooperation of FAO assisted the Ministry of Women's Affairs and the Ministry of Agriculture to undertake a gender analysis of the agriculture sector strategy, within the framework of the Palestinian Development Plan. FAO continued to work actively with the Ministry of Agriculture and Ministry of Women's Affairs to strengthen responses to the needs of women in agriculture, and involved stakeholders in the dissemination of good practices.

58. United Nations entities supported Palestinian authorities in strengthening capacity on gender mainstreaming. UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People facilitated a forum among Palestinian Authority ministries, United Nations entities and civil society organizations to discuss gender justice, the promotion of international conventions and instruments on gender equality, and relevant legislation applicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Ministries of Women's Affairs and of Labour participated in a training workshop organized by ESCWA on mainstreaming gender in the plans and programmes of the Ministry of Labour. The Ministry of Women's Affairs participated in an expert group meeting on the revision of guidelines to increase the effectiveness of national women's machineries in the ESCWA region.

59. In the area of culture, the Ministry of Women's Affairs and UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, in coordination with programme partners of the Millennium Development Goals Achievement Fund programme on culture and development, organized a workshop on gender mainstreaming and culture to train staff members from several ministries on concepts related to culture and gender mainstreaming, and ways to use such concepts in the development of gender-sensitive cultural policies.

60. In order to track the use of resources to promote gender equality and the empowerment of women, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs supported the roll-out of a gender marker — a tool that measures whether or not the design of a humanitarian project ensures and advances gender equality — in the 2011 consolidated appeals process. Through the process, all clusters of humanitarian response received specific guidance on how to mainstream gender equality within sectors. Preliminary data suggested that compared with the baseline of the 2010 consolidated appeals process, there was a significant increase in gender-responsive projects in the 2011 process. Under the leadership of UNSCO, several meetings were held with members of the donor community to ensure harmonization in development aid effectiveness and meeting commitments on gender equality. In that regard, United Nations entities in partnership with relevant line ministries took initiatives that would allow for tracking of internal and external resource allocations for gender equality priorities and women's needs at the local level.

61. Efforts were also under way to mainstream gender perspectives within the work of United Nations entities. The UNRWA gender action plan mainstreams gender into each of the agency's programme areas. In 2010, UNRWA developed a new approach to the development, design and location of community and public facilities in Gaza, incorporating gender dimensions.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

62. During the period under review, the overall humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained challenging. Despite improvements in education for women, there was little positive evidence of their social, economic and legal empowerment. The continued closures, checkpoints and roadblocks limited the access of Palestinian women and girls to health-care services, employment and other opportunities. The recent relaxation of movement restrictions should be continued.

63. Efforts continued at the national, regional and international levels to bring about a just and lasting negotiated agreement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including through direct negotiations. The tenth anniversary of the adoption of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) highlighted the need for more systematic efforts by all parties to ensure women's full participation in conflict resolution and peacebuilding initiatives in the region, including in the permanent status negotiations.

64. United Nations entities should continue to provide assistance to women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and refugee camps, particularly in areas such as education, health and employment. Special efforts should be made to support the Palestinian Development Plan for 2011-2013, including its cross-sectoral national gender strategy. Enhanced efforts should be made to achieve women's full participation in decision-making processes at all levels, including in the political and economic spheres.

65. In order to support women's and girls' economic and political empowerment and well-being, increased attention and continued support is needed to improve access to quality education and training that translate into employment opportunities. Strengthened efforts are needed to address stereotypical attitudes that have an impact upon educational and training choices, including through revisions of school curricula and textbooks, and through targeted efforts to combat harmful practices such as early marriage, which may contribute to girls dropping out of school.

66. When supporting employment for women, attention should be paid to ensure that assistance programmes and projects do not reinforce traditional gender divisions of labour, which limit job opportunities for both women and men. Concrete actions are required to increase the participation of Palestinian women, in particular young women, in the labour force. Assistance provided by United Nations entities should not only focus on expanding women's labour force participation into non-traditional sectors but also assist women in better seizing the full benefits and profits from their economic activities. The issue of women's economic empowerment needs to address engagement by women in the full range of activities involved in bringing a good or service to the final consumer, in order to enable them to reach beyond the local market to national and international markets. United Nations partners need to systematically address the bottlenecks preventing women's advancement in those areas, including women's lack of access to productive resources and opportunities; women's limited access to effective transportation of goods; and lack of capacity, resulting from limited education and training opportunities.

67. In order to facilitate the mobility of Palestinian women for personal or employment-related reasons, attention should also be given to increasing their access to safe and affordable means of transport, including public transport to semi-urban and rural areas. The public transportation system could be reviewed and analysed in order to ensure that schedules and connections are supportive of both women's and men's transport needs.

68. Food security continued to be a high priority. Access of women and men to employment often contributes to successful strategies to address food insecurity. Strong, comprehensive measures, including safety nets, employment and/or other income-generating activities are therefore needed to ensure that women have access to safe, adequate, nutritious and affordable food, and to increase the access to technologies, credit and markets by women smallholder farmers.

69. Enhanced efforts are needed to eliminate all forms of violence against Palestinian women and girls. In addition to establishing provisions for penalizing and punishing perpetrators, legal frameworks on violence against women should mandate support for victims and survivors, prevention measures and training for relevant officials. Ending impunity for violence against women requires awareness-raising, training for law enforcement officials and gender-sensitive procedures and processes. The Palestinian authorities and United Nations entities should collaborate to provide support and services for women and girl victims and survivors of violence. The legal framework needs to be harmonized with the provisions of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, and measures for its effective implementation need to be implemented.

70. The Palestinian Authority and some United Nations entities have taken measures to mainstream gender perspectives into their work, including through gender-sensitive strategies and programmes. Further efforts are needed to fully integrate a gender perspective into all international assistance programmes through gender analysis, the collection of sex-disaggregated data and the use of gender-responsive budgeting processes. Additional coordinated efforts are needed to assess the impact of assistance and the extent to which it addresses and matches women's needs. Member States, entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant stakeholders should intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to benefit Palestinian women and girls and should systematically assess and report on the impact of those efforts.

71. Some progress has been made in recent years in addressing gender equality and the empowerment of women in United Nations studies and reports on the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Such publications should systematically focus specific attention on gender equality perspectives and incorporate information on the situation of women and girls, including in reports by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, and the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, as well as in other relevant reports of the Secretary-General.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
9 December 2011

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-sixth session

27 February-9 March 2012

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report summarizes the situation of Palestinian women between 1 September 2010 and 30 September 2011, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2011/18, and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2012/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2011/18 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2011/6), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-sixth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 September 2010 to 30 September 2011 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations entities or individual experts that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including ESCWA, the United Nations country team for the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process. The United Nations country team has coordinated contributions to the report by the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/ Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the United Nations Office for Project Services, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. During the reporting period, little progress was made in the efforts to reach a negotiated agreement between Israel and the Palestinians on all core issues which would end the conflict and the occupation that began in 1967. Progress was hampered by continuing low levels of confidence between the parties and in the political process. Direct peace talks began on 2 September 2010 but stalled the following month and have not resumed since. International efforts, in particular through the Middle East Quartet, have continued to encourage the parties to overcome the current obstacles and resume direct bilateral negotiations without preconditions, expecting them to come forward with comprehensive proposals on security and territory. The Secretary-General has called upon both parties to refrain from provocation and to work with the Quartet towards serious proposals on borders and security in the context of a shared commitment to resume direct negotiations that would lead to an agreement on all final status issues.

5. Amid these developments, the Palestinian Authority continued its efforts to strengthen the State institutions of a future Palestinian State and resumed its efforts towards reuniting the West Bank and Gaza. However, little progress was accomplished in implementing the reconciliation accord of 4 May 2011 between the Palestinian factions, and the internal Palestinian divide continued to restrict the ability of the Palestinian Authority to extend its State-building work to Gaza (see A/66/80-E/2011/111, para. 10).

6. At the beginning of the sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly, in 2011 the Palestinian leadership applied for full membership in the United Nations and called upon Member States to recognize a Palestinian State within the 1967 borderlines. The Government of Israel expressed its strong opposition to such Palestinian action (see A/66/367-S/2011/585, para. 13). At the time of the drafting of the present report, the Palestinian application for United Nations membership was before the Security Council. While women have played important roles in promoting peace in the region, few women have been directly involved in the negotiations since the start of the conflict and have also largely remained absent from official discussions on statehood and related actions in the United Nations.<sup>1</sup>

7. On the ground, the overall socio-economic, political and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained challenging and continued to adversely affect the situation of Palestinian women. In Gaza, Israel's June 2010 policy decision to ease the closure and further measures taken since brought some limited relief to the population. However, owing to the pivotal nature of the remaining restrictions and the magnitude of the existing challenges, overall, these measures remained ineffective in achieving a genuine improvement in the humanitarian situation.<sup>2</sup> The population of the Gaza Strip remained severely affected by sporadic upsurges of violent conflict between armed Palestinian militants and the Israel Defense Forces, in addition to the continuing closures that penetrate every aspect of socio-economic life. It is estimated that approximately 20,000 girls and boys remain displaced in the aftermath of the 2009 military operation on Gaza, while 80 per cent of households have at least one member suffering from psychosocial symptoms.<sup>1</sup> The West Bank continues to face a protracted crisis resulting from the ongoing confiscation and annexation of Palestinian land, settlement construction, demolitions of houses and livelihood structures, forced evictions, the revocation of residency rights and obstructed access to land, markets and essential services.<sup>1</sup>

8. During the reporting period, there was an increase in settlement construction, house demolition and evictions of Palestinian families. A total of 544 structures in Area C of the West Bank and East Jerusalem were demolished, marking a significant increase from the previous year. Among the structures demolished were 180 residences, resulting in over 980 people displaced, including approximately 525 children. Overall a total of 14,636 people have been affected by the demolitions. Palestinian construction is effectively prohibited in some 70 per cent of

<sup>1</sup> Contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>2</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Special Focus: Easing the Blockade: Assessing the Humanitarian Impact on the Population of the Gaza Strip (March 2011).

Area C, in areas that have been confiscated for use by Israeli settlements or the Israel Defense Forces. In the remaining 30 per cent of Area C where Palestinian construction is not prohibited, there are a range of other restrictions that greatly reduce the possibility of obtaining a building permit. As a result, Palestinians needing to build in Area C are often left with no other choice than to build without a permit and risk the demolition of their structures.<sup>3</sup>

9. Palestinian women continued to be victims of violence resulting from the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Reports indicate that there was an increase in the indiscriminate firing of rockets, mortars and other munitions on Israel by Hamas and other militant groups as well as in the frequency of Israeli strikes in Gaza, resulting in civilian deaths and injuries (see A/66/80-E/2011/111, para. 13). According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Israeli forces killed three Palestinian women, two in the Gaza Strip and another in the West Bank, and injured 151 others, including 17 in the Gaza Strip and 134 in the West Bank, where there were also 23 women injured by Israeli settlers. In the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, women sustained injuries, mainly during weekly demonstrations against actions by the Israeli military, clashes between Palestinians and Israeli forces in East Jerusalem and in search-and-arrest operations.<sup>1</sup> This marks an increase in casualties and injuries of women compared to last year during which one Palestinian woman was killed in Gaza (none in the West Bank) and another 86 were injured by Israeli forces and 13 others were injured by Israeli settlers.<sup>4</sup>

10. In the Gaza Strip, OHCHR received information on the increasing intervention by the de facto authorities in the restriction of civil rights and freedoms, including the right to peaceful assembly, and further restrictions on the access to leisure places, including the closure of some of them, under the pretext of mixing of the sexes and non-compliance with the Islamic customs. On 15 and 16 March 2011, two demonstrations in favour of national unity took place in Gaza City. De facto security forces forcibly dispersed the demonstrations, reportedly beating the participants. Over 50 women were beaten by the security forces, including 8 girls, who were briefly detained, beaten with sticks and verbally insulted by approximately 10 security personnel in civilian clothes and police uniforms.<sup>5</sup>

11. As of May 2011, there were still 29 Palestinian women<sup>6</sup> held in detention and prison by the Government of Israel outside the Occupied Palestinian Territory in violation of international humanitarian law obligations. The overall living conditions of Palestinian women in Israeli prisons were reported as unchanged. The conditions in penal institutions in which women were detained, including the poor quality of food, limited fresh air and sunlight, dirty overcrowded cells, were said to contribute to the weakening of the physical and psychological condition of women. Released women prisoners continue to face reintegration problems.<sup>1</sup>

12. Poverty, unemployment and food insecurity rates have remained high. In Gaza, the unemployment rates were at 47.8 per cent for women and 36.2 per cent for

---

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., Special Focus: Displacement and insecurity in Area C of the West Bank (August 2011).

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., Protection of Civilians: Casualties Database, 1 September 2010-1 August 2011.

<sup>5</sup> OHCHR closely monitored the demonstration.

<sup>6</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, The Monthly Humanitarian Monitor (June 2011).

men.<sup>7</sup> In the period from November 2010 to April 2011, export volumes reached only 5 per cent of the pre-June 2007 levels and no exports have been transferred out of Gaza since May 2011.<sup>8</sup> The exhaustion of commercial opportunities and subsequent devastation of the Gazan economy has meant that many households have lost their incomes, and it is estimated that 38 per cent of Gazans are living in poverty and that 75 per cent of Gazan households are dependent on humanitarian assistance.<sup>9</sup> In the West Bank, the total poverty rate is 18 per cent, of which 9 per cent are considered deeply poor.<sup>10</sup> There is a decrease in real wages by 6.4 per cent, comparing the first half of 2009 to the first half of 2010,<sup>11</sup> while the purchasing power decreased, as the inflation rate increased by 2.98 per cent between the average prices of July 2010 versus July 2011.<sup>12</sup>

13. Even if there was a slight improvement in overall food security, 2010 estimates show that 36 per cent of female-headed households and 33 per cent of male-headed households in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were food insecure. Most of these are chronically food insecure. In the Gaza Strip, the prevalence of food insecurity among both female- and male-headed households was higher, at 48 and 52 per cent, respectively. However, in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, households with a higher number of female adult members are more likely to be food insecure, owing to limited access to job opportunities and lower salaries for women. Overall, female-headed households typically have a lower food consumption score, with 38 per cent having a poor or borderline dietary intake compared to 28 per cent among male-headed households.<sup>13</sup>

14. A significant number of Palestinian women were outside of the formal labour force, engaged in unpaid domestic work, or were working within the informal sector. It is estimated that 38.3 per cent of women working in the informal sector in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are unpaid family members, compared to 9.2 per cent of men.<sup>14</sup> Recent research by UN-Women on the Gaza Strip shows that women

<sup>7</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Labour Force Survey, 2011", Ramallah, 2011, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>8</sup> WFP, World Food Programme, Occupied Palestinian Territory Situation Report, May-June 2011, available from www.ildf.ps/documentsShow.aspx?ATT\_ID=4251.

<sup>9</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Fact sheet, humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip (July 2011).

<sup>10</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Poverty and living conditions in the Palestinian Territory, 2009-2010", Ramallah, 2010, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>11</sup> UNRWA, "West Bank labour market: a briefing on the first-half 2010".

<sup>12</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Monthly consumer price index numbers by major groups for the months of January-December 2010 and per cent changes from January-December 2009", available from www.pcbs.gov.ps/Portals/\_pcbs/cpi/dd634faf-669e-448b-a96a-3a64cb824f9a.htm; and "Monthly consumer price index numbers by major groups of expenditure for the months of January-July 2011 and per cent changes from December 2010", available from www.pcbs.gov.ps/Portals/\_pcbs/cpi/9013200f-427b-464c-a3fe-462ae224a527.htm, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>13</sup> FAO, WFP and the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "2010 Socio-economic and food security survey, West Bank and Gaza Strip, Occupied Palestinian Territory" (2010).

<sup>14</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Informal sector and informal employment survey, October-December 2008: main findings", Ramallah, 2011, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

play critical roles in securing their households' livelihoods after a decline in income of the male breadwinner. However, the economic burden of the protracted crisis tends to impoverish women even more. Women's contributions to sustain the family's livelihood, such as heavy work on the family's agricultural holdings and liquidating personal assets, such as gold or inherited land, have not strengthened women's status in the community, but have contributed instead to their marginalization.<sup>15</sup> Women's entrepreneurship continues to be constrained by the lack of access to local and international markets. Rural women, especially younger women, of which many live in Area C, face a number of obstacles owing to their isolation and lack of mobility.<sup>16</sup> According to FAO, in 2010, the work of an estimated 40 per cent of rural Palestinian women of working age (15-64 years) was unpaid and unaccounted for in national accounts.<sup>17</sup>

15. Women's health remains another area of concern. The persistence of disease and illness is exacerbated, both directly and indirectly, by persistent obstacles to Palestinian movement, including checkpoints and access to health and other services, such as water and sanitation. The impact of the occupation and the overall insecure situation have contributed to psychological trauma and increased stress among women, men and children. The poor quality of water continues to cause problems of parasites, diarrhoea and skin diseases and it is estimated that over 90 per cent of water in Gaza is unfit for human consumption owing to increased levels of chlorides and nitrates.<sup>18</sup> In the West Bank, over 113 communities, including more than 150,000 women, are not connected to water networks, while those that are connected face frequent severe water shortages owing to depleted springs and wells.<sup>1</sup> In Gaza, hospitals and clinics continue to be affected by severe shortages in medical supplies, power cuts, delays in shipments, overcrowding and insufficient doctor-patient time.<sup>1</sup>

16. Few official health statistics are sex-disaggregated and most are limited to basic morbidity and mortality figures, reproductive health indicators and cancer statistics. According to WHO, chronic diseases such as cardiovascular and cerebrovascular diseases and cancer, with only slight differences between males and females, were the main causes of death, with breast cancer being the leading cause of cancer morbidity among women. Fertility rates in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip, remain high, resulting in the need and demand for related health-care services. Micronutrient deficiencies in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continue to be a major concern, with high rates of anaemia among pregnant women and children. Results of the 2010 Family Survey indicated that more than one quarter of pregnant women were anaemic (26.7 per cent of pregnant women aged 15-49: 39.1 per cent in the Gaza Strip and 15.4 per cent in the West Bank).<sup>19</sup> Access to proper and timely health care can enhance early detection and treatment of disease and improve mother and child health. For example, the

<sup>15</sup> UN-Women, "Who answers to Gazan women? An economic security and rights research" (2011).

<sup>16</sup> Contribution of ESCWA to the present report.

<sup>17</sup> FAO, Palestinian Women's Associations and Agricultural Value Chains, Rural Employment, Case Studies Series # 2 (Rome, 2010).

<sup>18</sup> UNRWA, "Promoting long and healthy lives in Gaza" (2011), available from www.unrwa.org/userfiles/2011031723858.pdf.

<sup>19</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Family Survey", Ramallah, 2010, cited in the contribution of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

identified causes of maternal and infant deaths suggest that many of them could have been prevented by more effective antenatal, childbirth and early postnatal health care.<sup>20</sup>

17. Although the overall quality of education available to women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remains variable, access to and participation in education by women and girls has continued to increase. At present, the Occupied Palestinian Territory ranks in the medium range (76 out of 128) of the Education for all Development Index.<sup>21</sup> During the 2010/11 academic year, girls represented 51 per cent of the total student population. In the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, 31,352 girls (58.2 per cent) and 105,015 girls (48 per cent), respectively were enrolled in UNRWA elementary and preparatory education. However, many challenges remain. In the Gaza Strip, the limited reconstruction of schools damaged in 2009 continues to prevent thousands of boys and girls from accessing basic education. According to UNICEF, overcrowded schools operate on a double-shift basis, stretching their capacity to its limits. The number of adolescents (both boys and girls) falling below their grade level and dropping out of school is on the rise, and only 75 per cent of students continue into secondary school.<sup>1</sup>

18. In Area C, according to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 18 schools had outstanding demolition orders in August 2011, as a result of the lack of building permits.<sup>22</sup> Access to education is further hampered by Israeli settler violence as well as by restrictions on Palestinian access and movement. An additional factor for remote communities is the high cost of transport to educational facilities. Some families living in isolated locations pay up to NIS 100 per child per month on school transport. Families with several children of schooling age are often forced to choose only one or two, frequently boys, to complete their education, while the others are withdrawn from the system after the primary years. Such factors have led to high dropout rates, particularly among girls.<sup>3</sup> In East Jerusalem, a shortage of over 1,000 classrooms leaves approximately 12,000 children out of the education system. According to UNICEF, many schools in the West Bank suffer from water shortages and lack separate or suitable toilets for girls and boys, a situation that is usually affecting school attendance for girls, especially in secondary school. Progress made with regard to girls' and women's access to and participation in education has not necessarily translated into decent employment opportunities for women. For those with higher education, women's unemployment is significantly higher than men's. In 2011, 39.2 per cent of women with 13 or more years of education were unemployed, compared to 13.1 per cent for men.<sup>23</sup>

19. Although women have played numerous roles within the Palestinian political system and served in key decision-making positions, their formal participation and representation in decision-making, including in governance and legislative bodies, has overall been limited. In the current Government, women represent 20 per cent of

<sup>20</sup> WHO, Health conditions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, report by the Secretariat (A/64/27) of 16 May 2011.

<sup>21</sup> UNESCO, Education For All Global Monitoring Report: The hidden crisis: Armed conflict and education (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2011).

<sup>22</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Fact Sheet on Area C of the West Bank, July 2011.

<sup>23</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Labour Force Survey, April-June 2011", Ramallah, 2011. Press release available from www.pcbs.gov.ps/Portals/\_pcbs/PressRelease/LabourForce\_q2e.pdf.

the ministers and 6 per cent of the deputy ministers and they account for 12.9 per cent of the Palestinian Legislative Council. Within all ministries, women comprise 30.6 per cent of the staff. In the ministries of women's affairs and of social affairs, women are the majority, comprising 68.1 per cent and 56 per cent of all staff, respectively. Additionally, women account for 11 per cent of all judges, 12 per cent of all prosecutors, and 11 per cent of all lawyers.<sup>24</sup> In 2010, the first Palestinian woman governor was appointed to serve as Governor of the Ramallah and al-Bireh Governorate. Despite many shared concerns and priorities, the political situation and the split between political factions has contributed to divisions among women and made coordination more challenging, including in terms of formulating common positions by women's groups from the West Bank and Gaza in issues related to the State-building process. On the ground, however, women's organizations have continued to support women and girls from all walks of life, including by providing direct services and empowering women through livelihoods projects; serving as charitable organizations, providing training to the police and security forces to be more sensitive to survivors of violence; and undertaking research and advocating for women's rights and legal reform.<sup>16</sup>

20. The disadvantaged situation of Palestinian women has been exacerbated by weak rule of law and gender-based discrimination that remains embedded in legislation, regulations and policies. The situation is further complicated by the existence of two legal systems in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank and the lack of access to legal protection for Palestinian women in East Jerusalem. In addition, the prevailing gender stereotypes and norms continue to limit women's freedom of movement, access to employment, health care and education and the exercise of other human rights.<sup>1</sup>

21. High levels of poverty, unemployment and related frustration have contributed to an increase in tension, and ultimately violence, within families. According to data collected by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, the level of domestic violence against women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is high.<sup>25</sup> At present, there is no specific law on domestic violence in place, and there continues to be a critical lack of systems capable of preventing violence, protecting victims and prosecuting perpetrators. In addition, the fear of stigma, social exclusion and retribution, including in the form of more harm, risk of divorce and separation from children, prevent many women from speaking out about abuse.<sup>1</sup>

22. Some positive steps have been taken. On 11 January 2011, the Palestinian Cabinet endorsed the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019). The strategy, which includes inputs from a range of sources, including women's organizations, civil society, community organizations, the private sector, ministries and women refugees, takes a cross-sector approach, recognizing violence against women as a development issue affecting the social, economic and political systems of Palestinian society. Efforts have also been made to address crimes against women committed under the guise of so-called "family honour", which still continue to occur. On 15 May 2011, in response to one such case in the Hebron area,

---

<sup>24</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Women and men in Palestine, 2010" (2011). Ramallah cited in the contribution by the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

<sup>25</sup> Contributions of ESCWA and of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the present report.

the Palestinian Authority President signed a presidential decree removing provisions within the Penal Code that provided for leniency with regard to murder in the name of “family honour”, which will come into effect once it is published in the Palestinian Official Gazette.<sup>1</sup>

23. The Palestinian Cabinet, together with the Ministry of Planning and Administrative Development, tasked the Ministry of Women’s Affairs to develop a cross-sectoral national gender strategy for the period 2011-2013, with the purpose of placing gender equality and women’s empowerment at the core of the 2011-2013 Palestinian National Plan. The three-year Strategy,<sup>26</sup> which was endorsed by the Council of Ministers in January 2011, highlights multiple challenges Palestinian women face and serves as a reference for developing gender-responsive policies that would positively influence the socio-economic and political conditions of both women and men.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

24. The political and socio-economic insecurity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continues to have a severe humanitarian impact. Despite some recent macroeconomic improvements, the humanitarian, economic and development needs remain significant. The needs and related priorities, including of women and girls, are reflected in several documents, including the Consolidated Appeals Process for 2011, which set out a strategy budgeted at $575 million, the UNRWA medium-term strategy for 2010-2011, which was estimated at $675 million, excluding emergency relief interventions, and the Palestinian National Development Plan 2011-2013, which outlined priority development needs worth $4.161 billion (see A/66/80-E/2011/111, para. 3). The inclusion of a gender marker in the Consolidated Appeals Process for 2011 and the deployment of an Inter-Agency Standing Committee Gender Standby Capacity Adviser during its development period resulted in significantly higher levels of information related to gender equality in project documents than in the Consolidated Appeals Process for 2010.<sup>1</sup>

25. The present section provides information on efforts made by the United Nations system, in cooperation with the Palestinian Authority, donors and civil society, to address the needs and priorities of women and girls. It provides information on assistance provided in six key areas: education and training, health, economic empowerment and livelihoods, rule of law and violence against women, power and decision-making and institutional development.

A. Education and training

26. United Nations entities continued to implement a wide range of initiatives to improve the access of women and girls to quality education and training. These actions include the provision of free basic education, transportation to and from school, scholarships, vocational and literacy training, as well as measures to support a better transition from education and training to women’s economic empowerment and job opportunities. In the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, Palestinian girls continued to benefit from basic education provided free of charge by UNRWA with strong achievements in terms of gender parity and girls' performance. A total of 24 female students benefited from UNRWA-administered scholarships for universities in the West Bank and 755 female students benefited from technical and vocational training at the Ramallah Women's Training Centre. The UNRWA Gender Initiative provided adult literacy training in Arabic and English to 7,925 women and information technology training to 1,773 women in the Gaza Strip. It also provided mobile literacy support to reach women living in remote areas. Increased efforts were taken to provide graduates of the Gender Initiative with the necessary skills and experience to enter the job market. In the Gaza Strip, the UNRWA relief and social services programme offered work experience and skills training to 1,092 women through women's programme centres, where vocational trainings in areas such as sewing, hairdressing, handicrafts, and information technology literacy were taught.

<sup>26</sup> Available from www.unwomen.org/wp-content/uploads/2011/05/UN-Women-oPt-Booklet-Palestinian-Gender-Strategy-2011-en.pdf.

27. UNICEF increased learning opportunities for at least 100 girls in remote communities in Area C through the rehabilitation of school classrooms. In addition, UNICEF offered after-school learning and recreational activities in adolescent-friendly centres to 6,000 adolescent girls in marginalized areas in the West Bank (including East Jerusalem) and the Gaza Strip. OHCHR, together with UNICEF, the Education and Protection clusters and with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education worked to improve girls' access to education by providing school transportation for isolated Bedouin communities in the Bethlehem and Hebron governorates, thus reducing the dropout rate and allowing the safe access of female students to education.

B. Health

28. The United Nations system continued to provide a wide range of health services to Palestinian women and girls. In its effort to increase access to health care across the West Bank, UNRWA established five mobile clinics, which provided regular preventative and curative health care for 13,000 Palestinian patients facing restrictions on their mobility, 66 per cent of whom were women and children. UNFPA continued to support two multi-purpose women's health centres providing a holistic range of services, including clinical services, legal advice, counselling services on gender-based violence, psychosocial support, physiotherapy, gymnastics, and health education to 20,000 female beneficiaries living in heavily populated and underprivileged areas in Gaza (Jabalia, Bureij) and the West Bank (Hebron).

29. UNRWA, WHO and UNICEF implemented various measures aiming at improving maternal and child health. In the West Bank, UNRWA provided antenatal care to 7,893 pregnant women, post-natal care to 5,593 women and family planning services to 23,731 women during the first two quarters of 2011. In the same period 9,453 women were referred to hospitals where they received advanced treatment. In the Gaza Strip, the number of pregnant women receiving antenatal care reached 24,750 and all 8,187 deliveries over the first half of 2011 received post-natal care. Pregnant women and nursing mothers living in isolated rural communities in the Gaza Strip, including Bedouins, benefited from home medical visits provided by UNRWA. Following the expansion of a WHO project to ensure quality maternal and newborn health in the six hospitals in the Gaza Strip, the rate of early discharge for mothers was reduced, thereby improving post-natal care and reducing risk to women and newborn babies. Additionally, WHO has begun piloting a programme to increase the midwifery capacity among health-care professionals. To address rising micronutrient deficiencies among women and children, UNICEF launched the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative to promote infant feeding practices among mothers. Additionally, UNICEF is supporting a national micronutrient survey to accurately monitor the micronutritional status of women and children.

30. A range of psychosocial services were also provided. For example, from October 2010 to June 2011, a total of 29,281 beneficiaries, of whom 62 per cent were female and 37 per cent below the age of 18, received counselling through the UNRWA community mental health programme. Over that same period, 86,937 refugees, of whom 58 per cent were female and 50 per cent were below the age of 18, benefited from community-based group activities and awareness sessions in the area of mental health. In December 2010, WHO held a workshop on the topic “Child and maternal mental health in the Gaza Strip”, which brought together local academics and mental health professionals to address ways of integrating mental health into existing services, with a particular focus on the impact of military attacks on the mental health of women and children. Each month, approximately 2,000 girls and 1,000 mothers benefited from protection and psychosocial services in 20 family centres supported by UNICEF across the Gaza Strip, aimed at strengthening their coping skills. In addition, group and individual counselling benefited hundreds of children and their caregivers in affected communities in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

31. UNICEF provided approximately 28,000 girls in 40 primary schools in the Gaza Strip with improved access to safe drinking water through water tankers. The rehabilitation of water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH) facilities in 27 schools is expected to improve access to safe water and sanitation for roughly 14,000 girls and 550 female teachers. The continued rehabilitation of water networks in the south of the West Bank resulted in 3,000 women and girls and their families having access to safe drinking water through water networks for the first time.

32. Within the framework of a five-year HIV joint programme implemented in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, UN-Women presented the research on the topic “Exploring dynamics and vulnerabilities of HIV transmission among sex workers in the Palestinian context” at the High-Level Meeting of the General Assembly on AIDS, held in New York in June 2011.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

33. Socio-economic indicators confirm the continuing need to invest in economic empowerment, livelihood and food security. Assistance by United Nations entities in this area includes different forms of financial assistance, capacity-building, emergency job creation as well as direct food assistance. Female-headed households continued to be a specific target group for many entities.

34. UNRWA remains one of the main employers of women, particularly in the extremely limited labour market of the Gaza Strip. In addition, UNRWA offers women short-term employment opportunities through its emergency job-creation programme. Between 1 September 2010 and 31 July 2011, a total of 17,424 women in the West Bank received work through the programme. Tools, materials and equipment, such as sewing machines, fabrics and thread for the production of embroidery items were provided to participating women's centres all over the West Bank. In the Gaza Strip, as of mid-August 2011, women held 6,840 out of a total of 24,317 positions created through the programme. Through the "women-run school canteens" project, funded by Norway and in partnership with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education, UN-Women has been able to continue to provide women's centres with a sustainable income. By preparing the meals for the school canteens, 26 women's centres have become financially independent, are providing an income for the women working with them and are also providing healthy meals to the schoolchildren.

35. To provide short-term poverty alleviation, UNRWA continued its efforts to offer relief to special hardship cases in the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, including through cash assistance. A high number of the beneficiaries were female. In addition, UNRWA provided emergency cash assistance for shelter repair to female-headed households in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. UNRWA also implemented various measures to support longer-term livelihood strategies, including through the provision of financial services. From 1 September 2010 to 31 July 2011, 14 per cent of the loans in the West Bank were given to women clients. During the same period in Gaza, UNRWA disbursed a total of 1,071 business loans to female beneficiaries, amounting to $1,379,700 and a total of 167 non-business loans valued at $574,100 to support the housing and consumer needs of female-headed households. With a special emphasis on women-headed households, UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People strengthened activities under the Deprived Families Economic Empowerment Programme, which works to improve the living conditions and economically empower the most deprived Palestinian families, through accessing a package of financial and non-financial services. It is estimated that 1,400 women benefit from the 35 per cent of projects run by women under the Programme.

36. ILO, UNDP, UNESCO and UN-Women provided various forms of capacity-building, technical and other support to promote the economic empowerment of women. ILO, in cooperation with the Union of Cooperative Associations for Savings and Credit, provided members of 40 women-only cooperatives across the West Bank with grants, training and technical assistance. ILO also piloted a capacity-building programme targeting over 200 Palestinian women microentrepreneurs to introduce and showcase the ILO Gender and Entrepreneurship Together (GET Ahead) training methodology. In addition to enhancing employment opportunities for women, this ILO initiative served the broader purpose of building the capacities of business development service institutions to provide gender-responsive services. Through the Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, run by the Millennium Development Goals Fund, UNESCO, UNDP and UN-Women have supported initiatives such as the community-based production and marketing of arts and crafts by women artisans and women's involvement in ecotourism.

37. FAO has continued its work to improve food and economic security through projects targeting female-headed households. Activities include home gardens, livestock units, aquaculture, food processing, marketing, improving water management and support to women associations. Approximately one third of FAO beneficiaries in the West Bank and Gaza Strip are women. Women and food-insecure female-headed households are a primary target group of the FAO three-year

Plan of Action (2011-2013) for the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Female-headed households are also an explicit target group for WFP in both the West Bank and Gaza Strip and are prioritized throughout all food distribution programmes. Some 35,651 women had a ration card from WFP in the reporting period. In most cases, they are also targeted by complementary interventions such as cash assistance. Food assistance provided by UNRWA reached 10,244 female-headed households in the West Bank and 7,650 in the Gaza Strip.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

38. During the reporting period, United Nations entities continued to promote women's access to justice and implement a range of measures to address violence against women. Through its Rule of Law and Access to Justice Programme, UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People supported civil society organizations providing Palestinian women with legal aid and assistance, including in divorce cases, and, in conjunction with the Palestinian Bar Association, supported the establishment of a network of female lawyers. Additionally, women going through divorce benefited from a financial assistance programme administered through the Palestinian Maintenance Fund. UNRWA provided legal advice and support to 3,341 women through legal advice bureaux based in women's programme centres. A range of awareness-raising classes on cultural, health and social issues were also provided at these centres. OHCHR undertook many activities to promote women's rights in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, including public information and awareness-raising activities and training on relevant standards of international human rights law and international human rights procedures for staff of women's rights organizations.

39. The United Nations Office for Projects Services designed and constructed a gender-sensitive prison and detention facility in the West Bank, allowing female inmates full movement and use of facilities, while providing privacy and separation from male prisoners. This marked significant progress in the care and rehabilitation of female inmates in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. UN-Women provided a full support package of regular weekly social, psychological and legal assistance to women inmates in the three Palestinian reform and rehabilitation centres, which included primary need goods to female inmates with newborn babies. In conjunction with the Independent Commission for Human Rights, UN-Women helped to ensure the reporting of violations against female inmates, improved monitoring of inmate conditions and the filing of complaints or requests for actions to the relevant authorities.

40. On behalf of several donors and the Ministry of the Interior, the United Nations Office for Projects Services also implemented the expansion of a police training centre in the West Bank, which has resulted in a comprehensive and modern training facility for almost 600 cadets, including both male and female students. Special consideration has been given to the gender perspective in all new buildings, with a particular emphasis on dormitory buildings, the learning centre and the gymnasium to ensure the equal participation and education of female cadets.

41. Various entities, including OHCHR, UNESCO, UNFPA, UNRWA and UN-Women, continued to implement various initiatives to raise awareness and enhance capacity among practitioners to prevent and respond to violence against women. UNFPA developed guidance and provided training to social workers and health-care providers on ways of responding to the needs of victims of violence and implemented awareness-raising initiatives targeted at groups such as rural women and religious leaders. UNRWA organized capacity-building workshops for their health-care staff to help them to identify and address cases of domestic violence in their health centres. Capacity-building workshops on the prevention of domestic violence were also held for community members in refugee camps and for community-based organizations. UN-Women supported a public awareness campaign that included daily radio features, and awareness-raising workshops reaching 2,051 people in the Gaza Strip. Within the framework of the “16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence” global campaign, United Nations entities supported the organization of festivals to combat violence against women in Ramallah and in the Gaza Strip, attracting more than 600 and 700 people, respectively.

42. A range of initiatives aimed to increase the access to services for women and girls survivors of violence. For example, acting under the umbrella of the Ministry of Social Affairs, UN-Women continued to support the Mehwar Centre in Bethlehem, the first multiservice centre providing shelter, psychosocial counselling, health, legal aid and empowerment opportunities. Building on this experience, a new multi-purpose centre — the Hayat Centre — was established in the Gaza Strip. UN-Women also continued to support the Sawa Helpline for survivors of violence against women. UNRWA established family and child protection committees in nine refugee camps in the West Bank to bring community representatives, leaders and organizations together with the UNRWA health, education and social services departments to lead the implementation of a comprehensive multisectoral approach to combating violence against women. Efforts are also under way to develop referral systems for women victims of violence. UNRWA established five one-stop centres providing health services, legal advice and psychosocial counselling to survivors of violence and UNRWA frontline staff are being trained to refer and counsel survivors of violence. UNFPA continued to support three community-based coalitions that provide psychosocial counselling and help in establishing various community-based initiatives focusing on women’s empowerment.

43. A number of entities provided institutional support to efforts to address violence against women, including domestic violence. This included support by UN-Women to the development of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019) and support by UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People and UNFPA to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics to implement the 2011 Palestinian Domestic Violence Survey, which will provide key baseline information for policy, planning and tracking of progress in addressing domestic violence. UNESCO organized a series of training workshops for approximately 400 women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including parliamentarians, on analysing data and statistics on violence against women, which resulted in the development of an action plan by participants linked to the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019). ILO contracted the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics and the Birzeit University Institute of Women’s Studies to jointly conduct a study on the gender dimensions of violence in the world of work.

E. Power and decision-making

44. A number of United Nations entities implemented activities such as workshops, trainings and awareness-raising initiatives to promote women's participation in decision-making and leadership. UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People organized a two-day workshop in July 2011 to support dialogue on the kind of State that would best deliver to women, which linked together women from all over the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The aim of the workshop was to give Palestinian women a space to voice their concerns and opinions on a future Palestinian State, to learn from experiences of women in State-building efforts in other transitional societies, and to propose approaches that women could take in the coming months to ensure that their opinions are reflected in public debates. In the Gaza Strip, UNDP provided training in leadership, empowerment and entrepreneurship to 52 women leaders of the administrative committees of community-based organizations. UN-Women, in partnership with the Women's Affairs Technical Committee, organized awareness-raising activities on women's political participation and leadership for 1,136 participants representing a cross-section of civil society groups.

F. Institutional development

45. A number of United Nations entities, including ILO, FAO, UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, UNESCO, UNFPA and UN-Women have continued to support various ministries, such as the Ministries of Women's Affairs, Agriculture, Social Affairs, Labour, Culture and Youth and Sports, to mainstream gender perspectives into their areas of work and improve the monitoring of progress in promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women, including through sector-specific technical support, the secondment of gender equality experts in ministries and efforts to improve capacities for gender-based analysis and data collection. As part of the roll out of the implementation of the Cross-Sectoral National Gender Strategy for 2011-2013, UN-Women supported the Ministry of Women's Affairs in the organization of its first ever international donor meeting with the aim of seeking support for the implementation of the three-year strategy.

46. ILO organized rounds of training and extensive participatory gender audits, after which the creation of a national audit team was announced by the Ministry of Women's Affairs. The team will continue to work through action plans, developed in consultation between ILO and its tripartite constituents, thereby effectively addressing the gender gaps detected in the audits.

47. ILO also assisted in the establishment of a national women's employment committee. The committee, which was endorsed by the Minister of Labour on 24 March 2011, will assist the Ministry of Labour and social partners in implementing specific measures to promote women's employment and their protection in the workplace. In July 2011, ILO met with the Minister of Labour to follow up on a study entitled "Review of labour laws to promote women's labour force: a legal analysis and recommendations for promoting gender equality", conducted in 2010 in consultation with the Ministry of Labour and the national women's employment committee. The study puts forward suggestions for future revisions of the Palestinian Labour Law.

48. Both UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People and UNFPA supported enhanced attention to gender equality and youth priorities and the engagement of young women in decision-making. UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People worked closely with the Ministry of Youth and Sports and local civil society organizations to support the drafting of the Palestinian Youth Sector Strategy 2011-2013 Document, including by ensuring the active participation of young women and men from the West Bank (including East Jerusalem) and the Gaza Strip in the process.

49. The UNESCO Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Centre provided training to women leaders of organizations in developing indicators to measure organizational effectiveness and supported the Ministries of Women's Affairs and Culture in the development of gender-sensitive indicators. In addition, 21 participants from the gender units of different ministries were provided training in gender issues as well as management, planning, advocacy, monitoring and evaluation.

50. Initiatives targeted at the United Nations system were also implemented. For example, the UNRWA Gaza Women's Committee has provided services and training to women employees to improve their day-to-day work life and assist them in exploring future opportunities to develop themselves professionally. UN-Women continued to provide technical assistance and gender training to other United Nations entities working in the Occupied Palestinian Territory on ways to mainstream gender equality perspectives at all stages of programming and policy formation.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

51. The overall political, humanitarian, security and socio-economic situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained challenging. The stalled peace process, escalation in tensions between the parties, increased settlement activity, the internal Palestinian divide and continued outbreaks of violence are causes of serious concern. Improving the situation of Palestinian women remains closely linked to efforts to find lasting peace. It is critical to ensure Palestinian women's full and equal participation in conflict-resolution and mediation efforts as well as in the statehood dialogue, so that they, along with men, shape the future direction of their society in accordance with the global commitments set out in instruments such as the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008), 1888 (2009), 1889 (2009) and 1960 (2010).

52. During the reporting period, United Nations entities continued to assist Palestinian women and girls in a multitude of ways, including by providing education and health, improving access to safe water, creating employment opportunities, including emergency employment, supporting their longer-term livelihood and economic empowerment through financial and other measures, such as training and capacity-building, and by improving food security. Female-headed households continued to be a main target group for many entities. The United Nations system has also assisted in efforts to strengthen institutional and policy development and the rule of law and, in particular, to improve the prevention and response to violence against women. Access to basic services, however, is still inadequate for all Palestinians, in particular women and girls, and high levels of unemployment, poverty and insecurity persist. Continued support and increased investment across all these areas remain a critical need.

53. Over the past year, important achievements have been made in policy development. The launch of the Cross-Sectoral National Gender Strategy for 2011-2013 and the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019) and the initial steps taken to implement them are encouraging. These strategies serve as important tools to address the urgent needs and priorities of women and girls, to tackle gender-based discrimination in law and in practice, to prevent all forms of violence against women, including domestic violence, and to protect women and girls from such violence. Promising work was also undertaken to bring more attention to gender equality issues in the development of the 2011-2013 Palestinian Youth Sector Strategy Document and in discussions regarding revisions of the Palestinian Labour Law. The effective implementation of these strategies requires sustained political commitment, technical support and financial resources.

54. Socio-economic indicators reveal that there is a serious need to continue to invest in women's economic empowerment, livelihood and food security. Women's economic empowerment is a necessity for women's political empowerment but also for the overall development and growth of the Palestinian economy and society. The Palestinian Authority, United Nations entities and other stakeholders should continue to develop and implement measures in support of women's access to and control over resources, training and the creation of employment opportunities for women.

55. Enhanced efforts should be taken to systematically incorporate information on the situation of women and girls in studies, reports and briefings by the United Nations system and by independent experts related to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and this information should also be brought to the attention of the relevant intergovernmental bodies. It is also essential to continue efforts to strengthen the capacity of the United Nations system to incorporate gender equality perspectives into the planning and implementation of assistance programmes to ensure that the different needs, priorities, capacities and contributions of women, men, boys and girls are fully recognized and addressed and the entities continue to provide targeted assistance to women and girls.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
18 December 2012

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-seventh session

4-15 March 2013

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda**

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report, submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2012/25, highlights the situation of Palestinian women between 1 October 2011 and 30 September 2012 and provides an overview of the assistance provided by entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* Reissued for technical reasons on 27 February 2013.

** E/CN.6/2013/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2012/25 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2012/6) and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-seventh session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 October 2011 to 30 September 2012 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from United Nations entities and individual experts that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including ESCWA, the United Nations country team for the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process. The United Nations country team has coordinated the contributions to the report of the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (UNDP/PAPP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO), the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. During the reporting period, the political, social and economic conditions on the ground remained challenging. While these conditions have an impact on all Palestinians, women and girls experience them differently because of gender-based inequalities and discrimination. Despite efforts by the United Nations, the Quartet and individual Member States to provide facilitation and some initial diplomatic progress in early 2012, peace negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians remained at an impasse, with confidence in the political process eroding. The continuation of the political and geographical divide between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank and limited progress in reconciliation, ongoing Israeli occupation of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and closure of the Gaza Strip, continued to give rise to a difficult social and economic situation for Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. At the same time, the Palestinians' State-building programme progressed further, increasing both the depth and the breadth of institutional readiness for Statehood. The sustainability of these achievements, however, whether in the economic or the security fields, is at increased risk. The growing tension and escalation in violence are of grave concern. The United Nations and Quartet partners have, as outlined in recent reports by the Secretary-General, continuously urged both sides to avoid provocations which would be detrimental to the prospects of peace (see A/67/84-E/2012/68 and A/67/364-S/2012/701).

5. Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continue to face serious obstacles to freedom of movement and access. Inadequate zoning and planning on the part of Israeli authorities, residency policies and practices,<sup>1</sup> expropriations of buildings and allocation of land, the barrier, checkpoints, the permit and access regime, and bureaucratic constraints constitute a multifaceted system which impeded movement into the Gaza Strip, between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, within the West Bank, and into East Jerusalem from the remainder of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The barrier and the restrictions have a gender-specific impact and continue to present particular risks for expectant mothers, such as lack of access to specialized maternal care for high-risk births. The restrictions have a significant impact on overall economic development and on the capacity of local and international organizations to provide humanitarian and other assistance.<sup>2</sup>

6. Continued settlement activity has resulted in the forced eviction and displacement of Palestinians, causing direct physical insecurity, disruption of livelihoods and basic services, a decreased standard of living and increasing dependence on humanitarian aid. As outlined in recent reports by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the impact on women's and families' psychosocial well-being can be devastating.<sup>3</sup>

7. Tensions, violent incidents and attacks linked to the conflict and the occupation continued throughout the reporting period, resulting in civilian deaths and injury. There was a reported increase in settler-related violence in the West Bank. Israel faced increased indiscriminate firing of rockets, mortars and other munitions from Gaza, which spiked during several dangerous rounds of escalation. Gazans suffered from militant activity as well as operations of the Israeli Defence Forces (IDF), which conducted an increased number of air strikes (see A/67/84-E/2012/68 and E/67/364-S/2012/701). According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs,<sup>4</sup> in the West Bank 5 Palestinian civilians (4 men and 1 boy) were killed and 2,372 injured (including 1,986 men, 75 women, 288 boys and

<sup>1</sup> United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs occupied Palestinian territory, "The humanitarian impact of the Barrier", fact sheet (July 2012).

<sup>2</sup> United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs occupied Palestinian territory, "Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2011" (May 2012).

<sup>3</sup> See, for example, United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs occupied Palestinian territory, "Demolitions and forced displacement in the Occupied West Bank" (January 2012); and "Settlements in Palestinian residential areas in East Jerusalem" (April 2012).

<sup>4</sup> Figures cover the period from 1 October 2011 to 30 September 2012; data collected by the United Nations.

16 girls) by IDF, while 112 men, 21 women and 40 children were injured by settlers. Forty Israeli settlers (36 men, 1 woman, 2 boys and 1 girl) were injured by Palestinians. In the Gaza Strip, 11 Palestinian civilians (7 men, 1 woman and 3 boys) were killed and 153 injured (including 84 men, 25 women, 33 boys and 3 girls) during Israeli air strikes. Twelve Israeli civilians (11 men and 1 woman) were injured by Palestinian rockets launched into southern Israel. According to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, available information indicates that violent acts by members of IDF or by settlers are rarely subject to independent or impartial investigations and that violations are often perpetrated with impunity.

8. Women in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip remained vulnerable to arbitrary restrictions on their right to freedom of expression and assembly. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights reports that women continued to be exposed to violence and danger during peaceful demonstrations, where, on separate occasions, both Israeli and Palestinian Authority security forces (in the West Bank), as well as the de facto authorities (in the Gaza Strip), used excessive force in policing the demonstrations.

9. As of 31 August 2012, 6 women were held in Israeli prisons outside of the Occupied Palestinian Territory in contravention of international law, representing a decrease, from 29 women, during the previous reporting period. However, reports indicate that Palestinian women continue to live in poor conditions in these prisons and face reintegration problems upon release owing to lack of social support.<sup>5</sup>

10. The reporting period saw an increase in gross domestic product (GDP) figures, lower inflation and better employment indicators. Yet, poverty and unemployment rates remained high, particularly in the Gaza Strip. The poverty level was 25.8 per cent in 2011, ranging from 17.8 per cent in the West Bank to 38.8 per cent in Gaza.<sup>6</sup> Palestinian women living in refugee camps tend to be the most vulnerable to poverty.<sup>7</sup> A report recently released by the United Nations country team concluded that the continued restrictions on imports to and exports from the Gaza Strip substantially impacted the prospects for economic development and growth.<sup>8</sup> An estimated 80 per cent of the population was dependent on humanitarian assistance.<sup>9</sup>

11. Some 1.3 million Palestinians were living in food insecurity in 2011. In a joint assessment on socioeconomic and food security in the West Bank and Gaza Strip carried out by FAO, UNRWA, WFP and the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics,<sup>10</sup> the food insecurity levels among female-headed households in the West

<sup>5</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>6</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Levels of living and poverty in the Palestinian territory, 2011".

<sup>7</sup> Contribution of ESCWA to the present report.

<sup>8</sup> United Nations country team, "Gaza in 2020: a liveable place?" (Jerusalem, Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO), August 2012).

<sup>9</sup> United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs occupied Palestinian territory, "Five years of blockade: the humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip", fact sheet (June 2012).

<sup>10</sup> FAO, UNRWA, WFP and Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Socio-economic and food security survey: West Bank and Gaza Strip, occupied Palestinian territory — 2011" (May 2012). Available from www.wfp.org/content/occupied-palestinian-territory-socio-economic-and-food-security-survey-may-2012 (accessed November 2012).

Bank were found to be 7 per cent higher than among male-headed households. In Gaza, 44 per cent of all households were food-insecure, compared with 17 per cent in the West Bank. Food insecurity levels among female-headed households in area C of the West Bank had reached 39 per cent.<sup>11</sup>

12. Available data show that women's unemployment rates during the second quarter of 2012 remained high, at 47.2 per cent in the Gaza Strip and 21.4 per cent in the West Bank. Women's participation rates in the labour force stood only at 14.9 per cent (compared with 65.9 per cent for males) in Gaza and at 18.6 per cent (compared with 71.5 per cent for males) in the West Bank. The majority of formally employed Palestinian women worked in part-time positions, in fields such as education and teaching, clerical work and services. Refugee women are more affected by unemployment than non-refugee women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>12</sup> Real public sector wages showed significant disparities between men and women, the average daily wages earned by women amounting to only 84 per cent of those earned by men in 2011.<sup>13</sup> The absence of a social security law has resulted in discrimination against women and workers with family responsibilities.<sup>14</sup> According to an ILO gender legal review, Palestinian society still perceives women's presence in the labour market as a threat to men's work opportunities, and as being more expensive to the employer than the presence of men, because of the perceived high costs of their employment owing to marital status and maternity leave.<sup>15</sup>

13. Women's health continued to be an area of concern, with women in vulnerable communities having limited access to essential health care. Restrictions on movement and on access continued to impede access to health care, more particularly for women in area C,<sup>16</sup> in the seam zone<sup>17</sup> and in the Gaza Strip. In the West Bank, according to the consolidated appeals process 2012, about 186 communities (approximately 151,000 women and girls) had limited access to essential health care, while 249 communities (279,000 women and girls) had no adequate access to emergency care. Micronutrient deficiencies remain a concern, with high levels of anaemia, as well as vitamin A and D deficiencies, recorded for girls, boys and pregnant women. Anaemia levels were at 57 per cent among children 9 to 12 months of age, and 26.8 per cent among pregnant women. An estimated 45 per cent of pregnant women in the Gaza Strip suffered from anaemia. Other prevalent disorders during pregnancy included hypertension, diabetes and

<sup>11</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>12</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Labour force survey: second quarter" (2012).

<sup>13</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Performance of the Palestinian Economy, 2011".

<sup>14</sup> ILO, "Review of labour laws to promote women's labour force participation: a legal analysis and recommendations for promoting gender equality" (Geneva, 2011).

<sup>15</sup> ILO, MDG Achievement Fund, "Mainstreaming gender equality concerns in Palestinian cooperatives", policy brief No. 10.

<sup>16</sup> Area C is the portion of the West Bank under full Israeli civil and security control and covers over 60 per cent of the West Bank.

<sup>17</sup> The "seam zone" is the closed area between the Green Line and the separation barrier in which about 11,000 Palestinians currently reside. See United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs occupied Palestinian territory, "West Bank movement and access update" (September 2012).

psychological problems.<sup>18</sup> In 2011, the Ministry of Health reported that the maternal mortality ratio was 28/100,000 live births in the OPT and total fertility rates were 4.9 for the Gaza Strip and 3.8 for the West Bank.<sup>19</sup> The main cause of morbidity among Palestinians is chronic non-communicable disorders, while diabetes had an incidence rate of 154.4 per 100,000 in the West Bank in 2011. Ministry of Health statistics for the West Bank show that breast cancer was the most common malignant disease for women (11.8 per cent).<sup>20</sup>

14. The situation in relation to water and sanitation remains critical, especially in Gaza, where 90 per cent of water from the aquifer is not safe for drinking without treatment. Availability of clean water is thus limited, with average consumption of 70-90 litres a day, below the global WHO standard of 100 litres per day.<sup>21</sup> According to UNICEF, about 83 per cent of the population in the Gaza Strip is dependent upon private water vendors for their supplies of drinking water. This water risks being polluted by the time it reaches the consumer, owing to an absence of regulation, and puts a financial strain on the most vulnerable families. In the West Bank, lack of adequate water has placed over 50,000 people in 151 communities in a vulnerable position. Eleven out of the 19 refugee camps in the West Bank have official sewerage networks that are connected to municipal main sewerage systems. The lack of sewerage systems in the remaining camps has affected Palestinian refugees negatively, and is linked with issues such as clean water and underground water contamination as well as water-borne diseases. As a result of the lack of safe drinking water and sanitation services, the health of women and children in particular is being adversely affected. In addition, water shortages and sanitation problems cause particularly acute problems for women, insofar as managing with low water supplies imposes heavier domestic work burdens and confronting a higher incidence of water-borne diseases among family members entails heavier care responsibilities; moreover, these problems produce additional strains on household income. UNICEF reports that inadequacies in water and sanitation facilities in schools have led to poor hygiene among children in a large number of government schools. Lack of adequate and separate toilets for boys and girls (in mixed schools) has affected learning achievements.<sup>22</sup>

15. Education indicators for enrolment showed significant progress. The net enrolment rate for basic education is 92 per cent, with more girls enrolled (95 per cent) than boys (90 per cent).<sup>23</sup> Female students constitute about 50.2 per cent of children enrolled, increasing from 49.4 per cent in basic education to 54.1 per cent in secondary education and to 57 per cent in higher education.<sup>24</sup> In the Gaza Strip, over 450,000 children, half of them girls, were attending schools during the 2010/11 academic year.<sup>25</sup> Still, the education system is characterized by inequitable access and an overall decline in the quality of education. Access to basic education is

<sup>18</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>19</sup> Ministry of Health, "Annual report" (2011).

<sup>20</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>21</sup> "Gaza in 2020: a liveable place?".

<sup>22</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>23</sup> Ministry of Education, "Annual report" (2011).

<sup>24</sup> Ibid.

<sup>25</sup> "Gaza in 2020: a liveable place?".

affected by high school fees and the significant costs of transportation throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with many families in East Jerusalem having to send their children to private schools owing to limited space in public schools. In the West Bank, threat of harassment by Israeli settlers and Israeli security forces on the way to school, and fear of harm and humiliation at checkpoints, create stress and fear among children and their families.<sup>26</sup> According to UNICEF, in the Gaza Strip, over 5,000 girls began the 2011/12 school year attending classes in tents, caravans or tin shacks with minimal protection from the heat. The fuel shortage in the Gaza Strip, which intensified in February 2012, resulted in scheduled blackouts for 6-18 hours per day and random unscheduled cuts,<sup>27</sup> and has had an impact on the functioning of schools. With regard to the Gaza Strip, literacy rates were positive, with a 96 per cent literacy rate according to official figures (93 per cent for women and 98 per cent for men).<sup>28</sup> As noted during the last reporting period, advances in the educational levels of girls at secondary school and university levels are yet to be translated into gains in the labour market: women's unemployment rates remain significantly higher than men's among women with 13 or more years of education.<sup>29</sup>

16. While women have continued to participate in a range of roles in political life and hold various positions within the Palestinian political system and institutions, they remain underrepresented in decision-making bodies. Women constitute 21 per cent of the total number of current ministers (five ministers) and 6.3 per cent of deputy ministers. As of 2010, women constituted 13.2 per cent of the Palestinian Legislative Council and 18 per cent of local councils.<sup>30</sup> These results were linked to the implementation of a quota system in the Palestinian Legislative Council and local councils. In the justice sector, women account for 11 per cent of all judges, 5 per cent of prosecutors and 15 per cent of all lawyers.<sup>31</sup> There is one female governor for the West Bank (Ramallah). The Palestinian Authority employs about 88,500 staff, of whom 41.1 per cent are women, with 36.5 per cent of ministry staff being women. However, women tend to remain at the lower levels of decision-making.<sup>32</sup> According to UNRWA, in refugee camps, women also tend to be underrepresented at the level of camp governance. Women's organizations and coalitions continued to raise awareness and advocate on women's rights, on gender equality and on combating violence against women. However, movement restrictions and the divide between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, continue to contribute to difficulties in coordinating between the different groups.<sup>33</sup>

<sup>26</sup> UNICEF, "My right to education", fact sheet (September 2012).

<sup>27</sup> United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs occupied Palestinian territory, "The humanitarian impact of Gaza's electricity and fuel crisis" (March 2012).

<sup>28</sup> "Gaza in 2020, a liveable place?"

<sup>29</sup> Contribution of ESCWA to the present report.

<sup>30</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>31</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Women and Men in Palestine: issues and statistics, 2010" (2010).

<sup>32</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Women and Men in Palestine: issues and statistics, 2011" (December 2011).

<sup>33</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

17. The Occupied Palestinian Territory continues to be characterized by differing legal frameworks and a weak rule of law. The existing legal frameworks in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip contain laws that are outdated and discriminate against women, particularly in matters of divorce, custody of children, inheritance and violence against women. Little progress in legal reform was observed during the reporting period, as the Palestinian Legislative Council has not been convened since 2007. A UNDP study in the West Bank shows that women face significant challenges to accessing justice, including a lack of legal literacy, a lack of legal assistance, and the insensitivity of justice and security institutions to their needs.<sup>34</sup>

18. A 2011 Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics survey throughout the West Bank and the Gaza Strip found that approximately 37 per cent of married Palestinian women had experienced physical or sexual violence by their husbands in the past 12 months.<sup>35</sup> Of these, 58.6 per cent reported experiencing psychological violence, 55.1 per cent economic deprivation, 54.8 per cent forced social isolation, 23.5 per cent physical violence and 11.8 per cent sexual violence.<sup>36</sup> In response to this violence, 30.2 per cent sought refuge with family, while 65.3 per cent kept silent. Only 0.7 per cent of those women who had experienced violence sought refuge in shelters. With regard to children, 51 per cent of those surveyed reported having been exposed to violence inside the household by at least one member of the household. Of these, 69 per cent were exposed to psychological violence by their parents and 34.4 per cent to physical violence. According to police family protection unit annual records, the units had received more than 2,500 reports of family violence and handled a total of 1,755 complaints in 2011.<sup>37</sup>

19. The informal justice system continues to deal with matters traditionally considered private issues, even those that are considered crimes by the Penal Code, such as, inter alia, femicide, so-called honour crimes and violence against women and children. According to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, partner non-governmental organizations documented four cases of honour killings in the Gaza Strip during the reporting period, and eight cases in the West Bank since 1 January 2012. In 2011, the President signed a presidential decree that amended articles of the Penal Code by removing provisions for leniency with regard to murder in the name of so-called family honour. The presidential decree has still not been published in the official gazette and is therefore not effective.<sup>38</sup>

20. During the reporting period, the Palestinian Authority and civil society partners undertook a number of steps additional to those reported in the last reporting period to address violence against women. Following a rise in reported violent attacks against women in the West Bank, the Palestinian Authority announced the formation of a committee to study personal status laws to protect women. Police family protection units mandated to deal with cases of domestic

---

<sup>34</sup> UNDP, "Public perceptions of Palestinian justice and security institutions" (December 2011).

<sup>35</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Violence survey in Palestinian communities" (December 2011).

<sup>36</sup> The survey sampled 5,811 households in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 2011.

<sup>37</sup> UN-Women, "Policing for women's security and justice in the occupied Palestinian territory: A comprehensive background analysis, and recommendations for strengthening the Palestinian Civil Police and Family Protection Unit" (forthcoming in 2012).

<sup>38</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

violence in the West Bank were further strengthened, and an additional unit was inaugurated in Jericho, bringing the total number in operation to eight.<sup>39</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

21. The present section provides information on efforts made by the United Nations system, in cooperation with the Palestinian Authority, donors and civil society, to address the specific needs and priorities of women and girls. It contains updates on assistance provided in the following areas: education and training, health, economic empowerment and livelihoods, rule of law and violence against women, power and decision-making and institutional development. Many initiatives were implemented through the United Nations Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Empowerment of Women and the Joint Programme on Culture and Development, funded by the Millennium Development Goals Achievement Fund (MDG-F). The first seeks specifically to promote Palestinian women's social, economic and political empowerment and reduce gender-based violence by encouraging their political voice, increasing their opportunities to obtain decent and productive work, and improving their access to protection and justice.

A. Education and training

22. United Nations organizations continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote women's and girls' access to education and training. In the 2011/12 academic year, 30,657 girls were enrolled in elementary and preparatory education in UNRWA schools in the West Bank (58.2 per cent of students), and 104,983 girls in the Gaza Strip (48.2 per cent of students). In the West Bank, 48 female students benefited from UNRWA administered scholarships for universities and 1,074 female students benefited from technical and vocational training (22 technical specializations and 4 trade specializations), as well as career counselling. An estimated 64 per cent of the 2011 female student graduates (out of a total of 376) from UNRWA vocational training centres found work within one year. In the West Bank, ILO partnered with the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) and UNRWA in developing the technical and vocational training (TVET) module "Women gain employment skills in photography". Trained in entrepreneurial and technical skills, 17 women from the photography course graduated successfully. In the Gaza Strip, ILO, in partnership with the Islamic University of Gaza, initiated a project for skills development of women engineers in the construction sector in Gaza. This project was based on the "Construction skills deficit in Gaza" assessment which identified a gap between demand and supply, in addition to the fact that most women engineers in the construction sector were unemployed owing to social acceptance-related factors. Thirty-six women engineers successfully graduated and completed the on-the-job training placements. The Palestinian contractors union offered 10 women engineers a full-time paid job after the completion of the programme. The FAO "Junior farmer field and life schools project", implemented in 22 schools in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, provided training to 330 girls and 22 teachers in vocational agricultural skills.

---

<sup>39</sup> Contribution to the present report of the United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

23. UNICEF supported the rehabilitation of 23 schools, including the construction of 10 new classrooms. During the reporting period, more than 40,000 children (50 per cent of them girls) received learning materials, and protective access to learning was improved for 5,400 children (2,700 girls), including through provision of school vehicles. Opportunities for safe play and learning benefited 550 students (50 per cent of them girls) in East Jerusalem and 3,500 children (1,700 of them girls) in the Gaza Strip. After-school activities in adolescent-friendly services centres reached 6,514 adolescents (3,252 girls) in 56 such centres (15 in the Gaza Strip and 41 in the West Bank, including 10 in East Jerusalem), with active learning, recreational activities and life skills-based education, creative thinking, active research, social initiatives, forum theatre skills and peers education support. To promote access to quality education for all Palestinian children, nine United Nations organizations supported the Ministry of Education in developing an education package designed to improve capacities on early childhood development and promote inclusive and child-friendly education. Activities linked to the package have been piloted in 46 schools (32 in the West Bank and 14 in the Gaza Strip).

B. Health

24. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to facilitate access to health care for women living in isolated and marginalized communities. Through six mobile health clinics, UNRWA provided outreach of primary preventive and curative health care to 58 communities that lack health services and have access difficulties, and where many women and children face a threat of violence or harassment because of the current security situation. In addition, UNRWA health centres in the West Bank treated over 20,000 female patients for diabetes and/or hypertension. UNFPA rehabilitated and equipped 6 maternity hospitals and 14 primary health-care centres in the Gaza Strip, carried out capacity development efforts targeting health-care providers in primary and secondary health-care settings, and conducted outreach to 40 isolated communities in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, helping them to access key reproductive health services in isolated areas affected by the separation barrier, settlements and checkpoints. To improve access of women in vulnerable communities to an essential package of health services, UNICEF procured small-scale medical equipment for the functioning of mobile clinics in area C; supported essential-care outreach services to 28 Bedouin communities in the Jordan Valley; and procured essential drugs in the Gaza Strip.

25. UNRWA, UNFPA, UNICEF and WHO continued to provide a range of services targeting maternal and child health. From September 2011 to July 2012, the UNRWA West Bank Health Department provided antenatal care to 12,699 women, postnatal care to 10,065 women and family planning services to about 24,611 clients in the West Bank. Some 15,970 women were also referred to hospitals and assisted with hospitalization. A total of 1,570 women were newly enrolled in pre-conception care and 320 men were involved in accompanying their wives to pre-conception care counselling and for family planning in the West Bank. In the Gaza Strip, during the reporting period, there were 10,332 new acceptors of family planning and 6,027 women who were accessing pre-conception care at UNRWA clinics. In the Gaza Strip, the number of pregnant women under antenatal care was 32,181, with 94 per cent participating in four or more antenatal care visits. Postnatal care was provided to 36,330 women (100 per cent for all deliveries during the reporting period). UNFPA contributed to the development and implementation of behaviour-change communication campaigns and activities within Palestinian communities addressing reproductive health issues. As part of the humanitarian response in the Gaza Strip, practitioners from primary health-care centres were trained on providing safe delivery within the clinic or at the community level. UNICEF also trained 15 midwives on providing care to mothers and newborns. A total of 912 mothers and their newborns were visited at least once from January to May 2012 with 2.0 per cent of newborns and 2.2 per cent of mothers referred to health centres for additional examinations and care. UNICEF procured micronutrient supplements for the benefit of about 210,000 children and 110,000 women. UNICEF continued to support the implementation of the Baby-friendly Hospital Initiative in nine hospitals (six in the West Bank and three in the Gaza Strip). UNICEF support to World Breastfeeding Week celebrations involved working closely with religious counsellors to enhance advocacy initiatives for young mothers. In addition, the community component of the programme targeted all mothers of childbearing age in the Gaza Strip. The programme upgraded skills of midwives and gynaecologists (more than 50 were sent for training in East Jerusalem), improved health information and supervision systems in maternity units and promoted safe childbirth practices in Gaza communities through health workers and women's organizations.

26. United Nations entities also continued to provide a range of psychosocial services. UNICEF provided direct psychosocial support to 12,512 children (at least 6,000 girls) and about 11,000 caregivers (91 per cent of them female) in the Gaza Strip. UNICEF support to the child protection networks continued with three additional networks established in the West Bank. In the Gaza Strip, 14 girls and 11 boys were referred by child protection networks for specialized services and case management; in the West Bank, 98 girls and 62 boys were referred. Psychosocial counselling was offered in 21 UNRWA health centres and 15 relief and social services offices across the Gaza Strip. During the reporting period, 6,407 women accessed counselling services, the majority in UNRWA health centres.

27. During the reporting period, UNICEF supported a range of initiatives with regard to water, sanitation and hygiene. This included the extension of water networks in underserved communities in the south West Bank, benefiting 300 families, and the installation of household water filters, allowing 300 vulnerable families in the Gaza Strip to access adequate water for drinking and domestic purposes. UNICEF is also working on improving household-level water storage capacity and safe sanitation facilities in area C of the West Bank and in the buffer zone<sup>40</sup> of the Gaza Strip. To minimize groundwater pollution and sewage flooding in Rafah, UNICEF supported wastewater network improvement, benefiting 1,161 women and girls with adequate sanitation. In addition, UNICEF continued to support the construction or rehabilitation of water, sanitation and hygiene facilities in 68 schools (29 in the West Bank and 39 in Gaza), benefiting 48,896 students (22,117 girls) with access to safe and adequate water and sanitation. UNICEF also supported water tanking to 151 schools in Gaza for February-June 2012, thereby providing safe drinking water to 70,000 students (37,237 girls), at 0.7-1 litre per day per student.

---

<sup>40</sup> The buffer zone is the zone inside Palestinian territory along the northern and eastern border of the Gaza Strip with Israel, to which Israel restricts access, citing security concerns.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

28. Microfinance support continued to be a source of short-term poverty alleviation in the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, with women representing a high number of beneficiaries. From September 2011 to July 2012, the UNRWA Microfinance Department provided 3,439 loans (34 per cent of total loans), amounting to $3.5 million, to Palestinian refugee and non-refugee women in the West Bank. In parallel, 171 individual loans, amounting to a total of $102,600, were provided to poor and vulnerable Palestinian refugee women through the relief and social services programme community managed fund. In the Gaza Strip, the UNRWA Microfinance Department disbursed 3,567 loans valued at $5.7 million. Women received 1,325 loans (37 per cent of the total) and $1.48 million (26 per cent) in business and non-business loans to enhance entrepreneurship and access to credit.

29. UNRWA has continued to provide relief to special hardship cases, including providing grants to 18 income-generating projects across 15 community-based organizations in the refugee camps in the West Bank. This contributed to the employment of 42 women, training of 339 women and volunteer opportunities for 77 women. In the Gaza Strip, the programme has provided grants to 10 income-generating projects established at women's programme centres and community-based rehabilitation centres, employing 86 women in microenterprises such as sewing, food, embroidery and hairdressing. In the West Bank, the UNRWA humanitarian job creation programme offered short-term employment opportunities to 10,560 Palestinian refugee women (42 per cent of total beneficiaries). The humanitarian job creation programme provided a monthly cash-for-work subsidy of $420 to female beneficiaries, and procured and distributed tools, materials and equipment to 30 women's centres.

30. Since the start of the United Nations Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Empowerment of Women three years ago, ILO and UNRWA have provided various forms of capacity-building and income-generating projects for women. ILO provided members of 43 women-only cooperatives with grants, training and technical assistance, and piloted a capacity-building programme focused on business management and marketing skills, targeting 300 Palestinian women microentrepreneurs across the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. ILO also assisted in the formation of the National Women's Economic Council, with the mandate to formulate and adopt a conceptual policy framework through which to reinforce the economic participation of women, end discrimination and inequality, provide support to the Ministry of Labour and influence national policies so as to increase opportunities for women.

31. FAO, WFP and UN-Women continued interventions to enhance women's economic empowerment and food security. FAO provided agriculture inputs and training on food processing, marketing and bookkeeping to women associations in rural areas, benefiting 2,000 women-headed households in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in 2011. WFP provided assistance through food distribution and voucher programmes, which reached 245,101 women. Female-headed households in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip were targeted, receiving, in most cases, complementary interventions including cash assistance. During the reporting period, UN-Women supported 32 women's centres running canteens that became financially independent and provided meals for 22,572 children. The programme generated employment opportunities for 110 women, many of whom were working for the first time in their lives.

32. Through the Gaza gender initiative, UNRWA implemented the young women leaders programme aiming to close the skills gap between the labour market and the educated labour force, through ensuring that young women graduates develop skills required by the labour market. During the reporting period, the programme reached 723 female graduates. As part of the same initiative, UNRWA ran an empowerment programme for female-headed households, offering targeted skills-building related to financial literacy, household management and microbusiness. Three hundred female heads of household benefited from the programme.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

33. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives designed to improve women's access to justice and enhance capacity to prevent and respond to violence against women. The UNDP Rule of Law programme supported about 10 organizations that provide legal aid to women by representing them in cases involving family law and other matters such as labour rights, gender-based violence and family reunification before the sharia courts, in both the West Bank (including East Jerusalem) and the Gaza Strip. The programme supported 275 women with legal representation and provided legal advice to 1,519 women and psychosocial support services to 444 women. In addition, 5,710 women participated in legal awareness-raising workshops. Gender-related training was provided to 240 female lawyers and 110 female law students. In the Gaza Strip, 3,645 women received legal advice and psychosocial assistance through legal aid units and from psychosocial counsellors working in the women's programme centres supported by UNRWA. UN-Women supported the formation of a group of specialized lawyers, under the auspices of the Palestinian Bar Association, to provide legal aid and representation to women victims of violence. The development of a capacity development programme designed to train lawyers specializing in defending women victims of violence was supported as well. UN-Women also provided technical assistance to the Independent Commission for Human Rights in developing a database for monitoring women's access to justice.

34. UN-Women supported the Palestinian Civil Police in developing the first strategy and action plan, standard operating procedures, job descriptions and minimum standard guidelines for family protection units, as well as a capacity development programme for its staff. UN-Women also supported the development of a media campaign to inform the public of the Palestinian Authority's commitment to ending domestic violence and promoted strengthening of coordination between prosecutors and specialized police in dealing with cases of women victims of violence.

35. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Office for Project Services and UN-Women continued to implement initiatives in support of the strengthening of the management of the Palestinian penitentiary system and the rehabilitation of inmates in reform and rehabilitation centres administered by the Palestinian Authority. UN-Women supported the establishment and implementation of rehabilitation programmes for female inmates in these centres (with a monthly range of 30 female inmates), providing them with legal aid and representation services.

36. During the reporting period, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime supported the implementation of a four-year project entitled “Forensic human resource and governance development assistance for the Palestinian Authority”, which aims to ensure that sexual and family violence cases are investigated and prosecuted with the necessary sensitivity by law enforcement and the judiciary. It also aims to guarantee that there are sufficient numbers of knowledgeable, skilled and competent female specialist forensic physicians, doctors, nurses and forensic scientists for the anticipated enhanced capability in clinical forensic services as applied to crimes, sexual assault, child abuse and domestic violence.

37. A number of entities, including UN-Women, UNRWA, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and UNFPA, supported various activities aimed at raising awareness on violence against women. Advocacy and public education initiatives included festivals to combat violence against women in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, a public event organized by women victims of violence to enable them to speak about their experiences and training for different stakeholders. Between December 2011 and June 2012, UNRWA delivered basic and specialized training for staff, community-based organizations and community representatives on identification, intervention and referral in respect of gender-based violence cases, violence against women, family protection and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.<sup>41</sup> The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights continued to engage in awareness-raising activities regarding women’s rights, and to work closely with women’s rights organizations to strengthen their capacity in utilizing international human rights procedures.

38. United Nations entities continued to support the development and expansion of services targeted at women survivors of violence. UN-Women continued to support the Mehwar Centre, the first multi-service centre in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which throughout the reporting period sheltered an average of 20 women on any given day and continued to provide a range of social and legal services, as well as to economically empower women and to reintegrate them in society. UN-Women, in collaboration with UNDP, also continued to support the Hayat multipurpose centre for the empowerment of women and families, in the Gaza Strip, at which 30 women benefited from psychological, social and legal services during the period. In the West Bank, UNRWA developed an internal referral mechanism for survivors of gender-based violence in nine refugee camps and is currently expanding the mechanism to an additional seven camps, one village and one city in the north of the West Bank. In the Gaza Strip, the gender-based violence referral system, established to provide coordinated responses to gender-based violence across its service programmes in the health, social services and mental health sectors, was further expanded to include 18 one-stop centres. During the reporting period, 651 cases of gender-based violence were detected and referred through the new system, with the majority of victims and survivors having been subjected to physical violence and emotional abuse perpetrated by their husband. A comprehensive and confidential gender-based violence information management system was also designed and launched. Building on initiatives reported in the last reporting period, entities such as UN-Women, UNDP, UNFPA, UNICEF, UNESCO and ILO continued to support Palestinian institutions in building capacity to prevent and respond to violence against women, including through the implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019) and efforts to improve data collection and analysis in this area.

---

<sup>41</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1249, No. 20378.

E. Power and decision-making

39. During 2012, UNDP supported the Palestinian Initiative for the Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy designed to enhance the capacities of 40 young Palestinian women leaders across the Occupied Palestinian Territory and strengthen their networks. As a result, 85 per cent of the trainees participated as observers in monitoring the local elections held in October 2012. In addition, four participants ran for elections in the list of their political party. UN-Women, in partnership with the Women's Affairs Technical Committee, provided training and awareness-raising on women's political participation and leadership to over 1,300 women and men, including local council members and youth. Through this programme, two local councils revised their strategies and workplans to ensure that gender was mainstreamed and the reactivation of the national committee for women's political participation was achieved. The Women's Affairs Technical Committee reported that over 20 women had submitted applications for membership in the General Union of Palestinian Women.

F. Institutional development

40. As part of the Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Empowerment of Women, UNDP advanced gender awareness and expertise among civil servants working at the local governance units and at different community levels, undertaking capacity development interventions in partnership with Birzeit University. Some 370 public servants (38 per cent of them women) were equipped with the knowledge and tools needed to integrate gender in district development planning and gender-sensitive budgeting.

41. UNDP and UN-Women signed an agreement with the Ministry of Women's Affairs to establish a monitoring and evaluation unit and to conduct a capacity-building development plan for its staff. This unit complements other existing monitoring and evaluation units at the Ministry of Planning, the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics and other line institutions in respect of monitoring gender equality and the implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women and the Cross-Sectoral National Gender Strategy.

42. UNDP seconded a gender expert to the Ministry of Justice, who assisted the Ministry in establishing a gender justice unit. The gender expert worked with the Ministry to develop a gender action plan based on relevant national strategies. The strengthening of this gender unit is currently being supported by the United Nations Office for Project Services at the technical and operational levels through the Sharaka project.

43. During the reporting period, a number of ministries made progress in mainstreaming gender in their policies, programmes and strategies. The Ministry of Agriculture amended its recruitment policy to ensure that 25 per cent of all newly recruited staff at middle and senior management levels are women. The Ministry of Culture mainstreamed gender into the culture sector strategy and documented promising practices for integrating gender into achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. The Ministry of Education adopted the school canteens scheme as a national business model for women. The Ministry of the Interior/Palestinian civil police reform and rehabilitation centres recognized the right of women inmates to work during detention and approved economic empowerment opportunities for women inmates. In addition, the Ministry of Social Affairs oversaw the Mehwar Centre and increased the quality and number of employment opportunities for women living in the shelter.

44. ILO supported the Palestinian Authority in establishing a national minimum wage to protect low-wage workers and help marginalized and vulnerable groups, provided technical assistance with respect to the review of labour and employment-related legislation, and undertook a gender legal review in collaboration with the National Women's Employment Committee. A range of amendments, primarily to the labour law of 2000, were proposed based on the review. ILO also provided technical assistance in the development of an integrated social security system, and continued to provide training and technical assistance on the conduct of gender audits to ministries and other institutions.

45. UNFPA assisted the Ministry of Health in developing a national programme for family planning services and the national reproductive health strategy for the years 2013-2016. UNFPA also assisted in the development of curricula focusing on gender-based violence-related issues, and conducted capacity-building initiatives focused on religious and community leaders. UNFPA supported the Ministry of Social Affairs in producing a life skills curriculum for the use of counsellors dealing with marginalized young girls and boys. WHO conducted training workshops for Ministry of Health staff to develop capacity to undertake analysis and address the differential impact of health policies on women and men.

46. UNESCO continued to support the Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Centre in advancing gender equality and women's empowerment through capacity-building, research, advocacy and documentation activities. The UNESCO capacity development programme helped various community-based and non-governmental and governmental organizations to run programmes, conduct research and analyse policies from a gender perspective, and communicate effectively in respect of the issues affecting the situation and status of Palestinian women. UNESCO also implemented a coaching programme for gender units in line ministries.

47. As in the previous reporting period, a number of initiatives were also undertaken to enhance gender mainstreaming within the United Nations system. UN-Women recently completed a gender review of the medium-term response plan 2011-2013<sup>42</sup> with the purpose of setting clear outcomes, outputs and indicators which would contribute to and measure progress in terms of gender equality. UN-Women also undertook pilot gender mainstreaming efforts with UNRWA and FAO. UN-Women engaged with FAO, in a full assessment of their operations and programmes, whose recommendations are now being applied by the FAO office. The

---

<sup>42</sup> The medium-term response plan of the United Nations country team is a strategic planning tool aimed at structuring the joint work of the United Nations organizations operating in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs continued to implement a budget gender marker and directed efforts in particular towards integrating sex-disaggregated data and analysis in the 2012 consolidated appeals process.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

48. The continued lack of progress in the peace process, growing tensions and an escalation in violence and related displacement during the reporting period are of great concern. Restrictive residency, planning and zoning, and movement policies, together with continued settlement expansion, and the closure of the Gaza Strip have created a challenging humanitarian situation impacting negatively on the lives of many Palestinian women and their families. While there has been progress on some development indicators, the volatility of the context renders progress fragile and prone to regression. High levels of unemployment, poverty and insecurity persist and many Palestinian women and girls still face significant obstacles in accessing basic services such as education, health, water and sanitation. Insecurity and poverty can exacerbate gender-based discrimination and abuse, and this has been experienced by Palestinian women in the form of elevated levels of violence in the public and private spheres, as well as discrimination in the workplace.

49. Operating in a volatile and complex environment, United Nations organizations continued to respond to such challenges and carried out extensive activities to address the needs of women and girls. There were notable achievements in policy and institutional development during 2011 and 2012. Initial steps to implement the Cross-Sectoral National Gender Strategy for 2011-2013 and the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019) have been encouraging. The effective implementation of these strategies, however, requires sustained political commitment, technical support and financial resources. Over the reporting period, the Palestinian Authority continued to take steps to address violence against women, including through strengthening police family protection units, taking more institutional ownership of shelters, and announcing the formation of a committee to study personal status laws to protect women. It is critical to build on, support and expand such initiatives.

50. The United Nations Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Empowerment of Women and the Joint Programme on Culture and Development provided the opportunity for United Nations organizations and national and local partners to work in partnership and enhance national ownership mechanisms. It is highly recommended that the United Nations system build on the achievements of these Programmes and work towards the continued implementation of joint programmes in partnership with national and local partners.

51. Improving the situation of Palestinian women remains inextricably linked to efforts to achieve lasting peace and women's ability to participate in decision-making processes related to peace and security. Efforts to involve both Palestinian and Israeli women in a revitalized peace process need to be enhanced and supported in accordance with the spirit of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000). Mechanisms for enhancing accountability and monitoring progress in the implementation of that resolution and related commitments on women and peace and security should be established.

52. In view of recent political changes in the region and Arab women's growing participation in political life and decision-making processes, it is important to continue to promote and support the right of Palestinian women to effective political participation and leadership. Special attention should be given to on-the-job coaching for women newly elected to office. Support for women at the various stages of electoral processes should be provided and strategic partnerships with significant stakeholders — political parties, the media, State institutions and the civil society — should be further developed.

53. It is critical to continue to collect and analyse sex- and age-disaggregated data on a range of issues impacting the lives of Palestinians and to ensure that this information is incorporated systematically in reports and briefings by the United Nations system to relevant intergovernmental bodies.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
19 December 2013

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-eighth session

10-21 March 2014

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report, submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2013/17, highlights the situation of Palestinian women between 1 October 2012 and 30 September 2013 and provides an overview of the assistance provided by the entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2014/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2013/17 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem. The Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2013/6), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-eighth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 October 2012 to 30 September 2013 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from the United Nations entities and individual experts that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the State of Palestine. In accordance with the report of the Secretary-General on the status of Palestine in the United Nations dated 8 March 2013 (A/67/738), the designation “State of Palestine” is now used in all documents of the United Nations, notwithstanding the use in parallel of the term used in previous reports, “Occupied Palestinian Territory”.

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including ESCWA. The United Nations country team coordinated the contributions to the present report from the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People (UNDP/PAPP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO), the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO). It complements other reports on the living and socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people (see A/68/76-E/2013/65, A/68/77-E/2013/13, A/67/13).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. On 29 November 2012, the General Assembly, in its resolution 67/19, accorded the State of Palestine the status of non-member Observer State in the United Nations. On the same day, the Secretary-General stated that the vote underlined the urgency of a resumption of meaningful negotiations to ensure that an independent, sovereign, democratic, contiguous and viable State of Palestine lives side by side with a secure State of Israel. Efforts to achieve a peaceful comprehensive settlement on all final status issues intensified during the reporting period. Under the auspices of the United States, direct Israeli-Palestinian negotiations resumed on 29 July 2013, and a number of meetings have been held since in Israel and Palestine. The United Nations Secretary-General travelled to the region — Jordan, Palestine and Israel — on 15 and 16 August to extend United Nations support and his appreciation for the courageous decision of both leaders to resume negotiations. The position of the Secretary-General remains that direct negotiations are the only credible way towards the long-overdue two-State solution. Prospects for peace were renewed against a tense situation on the ground, and all parties are called upon to sustain an environment conducive for forward movement in the peace process.

5. In Gaza and southern Israel, a dangerous escalation of violence occurred in November 2012, which triggered serious concerns with regard to the respect by all parties for international humanitarian and human rights law in their conduct of the hostilities.<sup>1</sup> The Secretary-General visited Egypt, Israel, Jordan and the Occupied Palestinian Territory during the hostilities and engaged in an intense diplomatic effort that culminated in the announcement of a ceasefire agreement welcomed by the Security Council which called for a reciprocal cessation of hostilities. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, eight days of fighting resulted in an estimated 174 Palestinians killed, including 101 civilians (55 men, 13 women, 25 boys and 8 girls), and some 1,046 Palestinians were reportedly injured, including 446 children and 105 women, while 6 Israelis, including 4 civilians, were reported killed by Palestinian rocket fire and 239 Israelis were injured, the vast majority of them civilians, from indiscriminate firing of rockets, mortars and other projectiles from Gaza. In the West Bank, during the period covered in the present report, 19 Palestinian civilians (15 men, 1 woman and 3 boys) were killed — almost quadruple the number of the previous year — and 4,156 were injured (2,811 men, 87 women, 1,238 boys and 20 girls) by Israeli Security Forces — a significant increase from 2,372 civilians injured during the previous reporting period. During the current reporting period, 156 Palestinians (105 men, 12 women, 33 boys and 6 girls) were injured by settlers, while 76 Israeli settlers (61 men, 10 women and 5 boys) were injured by Palestinians. In the Gaza Strip (excluding during the Operation Pillar of Defence), an additional 17 Palestinian civilians (11 men, 1 woman and 5 boys) were killed and 227 were injured (167 men, 13 women, 46 boys and 1 girl) by Israeli Security Forces.

6. The impact of the protracted crisis continues to have a devastating effect on the psychosocial well-being of women and families. The living conditions of women vary depending on sociocultural factors and the differential status that applies to Palestinian women and men in different areas<sup>2</sup> and related obstacles to movement and access. As at September 2013, 1.6 million Palestinians in the Gaza Strip remained effectively isolated from the rest of the West Bank, including East

---

<sup>1</sup> United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs Occupied Palestinian Territory, "Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2012" (May 2013).

<sup>2</sup> Following the 1993 Oslo Accords and the 1995 interim Agreements between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the West Bank was divided into three zones, Areas A, B and C. Extensive responsibility was delegated by Israel to the Palestinian Authority in Areas A and B. Area C remained under full authority of Israel.

Jerusalem, by the continuing closure by Israel. Access to East Jerusalem has remained limited for Palestinian residents in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Physical and administrative restrictions continue to impede access to some of the most vulnerable communities in Area C, and particularly those in the seam zones and the firing zones.<sup>1</sup>

7. Food insecurity remains a significant challenge as result of the continued closure of the Gaza Strip, restrictions on access in the West Bank and related high rates of poverty, and continued increases in food prices and threats to livelihoods.<sup>3</sup> According to the 2012 Socioeconomic and Food Security Survey, food insecurity levels rose by seven percentage points overall from the previous year, reaching 57 per cent in Gaza and 14 per cent in the West Bank. Female-headed households receive the highest level of assistance in the occupied Palestinian territory. In 2012, they received a monthly average of $131 in assistance compared with $78 for male-headed households. The targeted assistance was successful in lowering the percentage of food-insecure households, from 54 to 36 per cent for female-headed households and from 37 to 33 per cent for male-headed households.<sup>4</sup> To achieve further reductions in poverty and improve food security, it will be necessary to achieve sustainable and inclusive economic growth and to create jobs. This will require further easing of movement and access restrictions that currently hinder economic development and private sector activity (see A/68/76-E/2013/65).

8. Despite the adoption of a range of policies over the past few years demonstrating a clear commitment to women's economic empowerment, in practice women have not become full participants in the labour market. Instead, labour market indicators suggest that women are facing increasing challenges. The significant educational gains made by women have not been translated into gains in the labour market, reflecting a great loss of economic potential, and unemployment has increased. In 10 years' time, women's overall unemployment rate has almost doubled, from 17 per cent in 2002 to 32.9 per cent in 2012, while for men the rate has decreased from 33.5 to 20.5 per cent over the same time period. Young women below 25 years of age are particularly affected by the lack of jobs, with an overall unemployment rate of 62.2 per cent, compared with 34.5 per cent of young men. In Gaza, the unemployment rate for young women reached an unprecedented 88.1 per cent in 2012 compared with 48.8 per cent for young men.<sup>5</sup>

9. Discrimination in the workplace is still common. The average daily wage for women represented 86.8 per cent of that for men in 2012.<sup>6</sup> Most women in formal employment work in the public sector, in health and education. Outside of the public sector, women have few prospects of earning a living wage. For instance, women employed in childcare are paid as little as $100 per month. Women are being pushed progressively into the informal economy, into unpaid and family jobs in the agricultural sector, domestic work and a broad range of cleaning jobs. According to ILO, many women lack control of revenues generated. In addition, a recent study

---

<sup>3</sup> FAO, UNRWA, WFP and Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Socioeconomic and food security survey 2012: West Bank and Gaza Strip" (August 2013) (available from: <http://www.wfp.org/content/state-palestine-socio-economic-food-security-survey-2012-august-2013> (accessed November 2013)).

<sup>4</sup> Ibid.

<sup>5</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Labour force survey annual report" (2012).

<sup>6</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, factsheet issued on the occasion of International Women's Day, 8 March 2013.

shows that 29 per cent of women aged 25-29 were subject to harassment in the workplace with little or no access to any complaint mechanism.<sup>7</sup> Women tend to be less present in workers' unions and less aware of their rights than men.<sup>8</sup> The Palestinian Authority adopted a minimum wage in October 2012,<sup>9</sup> but it is unclear how the agreement will be enforced across the territory and in sectors employing mostly women, such as the childcare and textile sectors. There is still no unified social security law. According to ILO, continued efforts are needed to find the means to provide income security and combat poverty and social exclusion.

10. Concerns highlighted in last year's report linked to access to health care and shortages of drugs and medical disposables remain. In the Gaza Strip, drug shortages currently stand at 29 per cent, while there is a 52 per cent shortage in medical disposables.<sup>10</sup> Measures taken to improve access to maternal and reproductive health care are contributing to a declining trend with regard to maternal mortality. Data from the Palestinian Ministry of Health indicate a decline from 38:100,000 live births in 2009 to 23.7:100,000 (19.6 in Gaza and 27.5 in the West Bank) in 2012.<sup>11</sup> Out of married women aged 15-49, 94 per cent reported receiving at least four visits from qualified health-care personnel during their last pregnancy. At the same time, a review by UNFPA found a high prevalence of near-miss cases<sup>12</sup> and obstetric complications, with severe outcomes in 4.5 cases per 1,000 deliveries. According to WHO, the barrier and restrictions to movement and access continue to present particular risks for expectant mothers, such as lack of access to specialized maternal care for high-risk births. In terms of the overall disease profile, the incidence of non-communicable diseases, such as diabetes, is increasing among Palestinians.<sup>13</sup> Cancer and heart disease are among the leading causes of mortality in Palestine.

11. The water, sanitation and hygiene situation remains critical. In Gaza, less than 10 per cent of available groundwater resources are suitable for drinking purposes. In the West Bank, over 1 million people continue to access less than 60 litres per capita per day of water. Following the escalation of violence in Gaza in November 2012, damage to the water, sanitation and hygiene infrastructure disrupted water supply and caused sewage to flood into the street, with the potential for polluting water resources and generating public health concerns.<sup>10</sup> Similar concerns have arisen regarding the impact of the energy crisis developing in Gaza. While Gaza faces structural power supply challenges, the situation has deteriorated as affordable fuel has become scarce following the shutdown by Egypt of illegal smuggling tunnels into Gaza. This has affected operations of the Gaza power plant, which was

<sup>7</sup> International Labour Organization, "The situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories" (2011), p. 3, available from www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---ed\_norm/---relconf/documents/meetingdocument/wcms\_181071.pdf.

<sup>8</sup> ILO, 2013, Palestine General Federation of Trade Union Survey.

<sup>9</sup> In October 2012, the Council of Ministers adopted a minimum wage of NIS1,450 monthly, NIS65 daily and NIS8.50 hourly, which took effect on 1 January 2013.

<sup>10</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Consolidated Appeal Process, Mid-year review (2013).

<sup>11</sup> See Ministry of Health, Health Annual Report Palestine 2012. Most recent global estimates for the West Bank and Gaza (2010) show a ratio of 64:100,000 live births, but also confirm a decline over time (see: WHO, UNICEF, UNFPA and World Bank estimates. Trends in maternal mortality: 1990 to 2010, Geneva (2012)).

<sup>12</sup> A near-miss case is defined as a severe life-threatening obstetric complication that required an urgent medical intervention in order to prevent the mother from dying.

<sup>13</sup> Palestinian Ministry of Health, Health Annual Report, Palestine 2012.

producing 25 per cent of the total electricity available in Gaza. Rolling blackouts are a daily occurrence, severely debilitating economic activity in the Strip and the functioning of basic services, including health, water and sanitation, with serious implications for the lives of Gazans, including many women.

12. While education indicators for enrolment continued to show significant progress, challenges linked to access and quality of education remain. The occupied Palestinian territory has reached parity in primary education (grades 1-10), and girls outnumber boys in secondary (grades 11-12) and higher education. The net enrolment rate for primary education is 93.4 per cent, with slightly more girls enrolled (94.4 per cent) than boys (92.2 per cent). In secondary education, the disparity is greater, where boys' net enrolment rate is only at 59.1 per cent, while at 74.7 per cent for girls.<sup>14</sup> It is noteworthy, that in private schools the ratio of girls to boys in primary education drops to 0.7 (while 1.02 for the whole of the occupied Palestinian territory).<sup>15</sup> In both Gaza and the West Bank, girls outperform their male counterparts in UNRWA schools.<sup>16</sup> A study conducted by the Agency found that families see education as the only tool to ensure a better future for girls, while education for boys is not seen as the only option owing to the fact that boys enjoy easier access to the labour market compared with girls.<sup>17</sup> Data from UNRWA shows that female students in the Gaza and West Bank are enrolling less in vocational training than male students. Disabled children, especially girls and children from Gaza, have less access to education (in Gaza, 29 per cent of disabled girls and 19 per cent of boys did not have access to formal education).<sup>18</sup>

13. Improvements in enrolment have, however, been coupled with an overall decline in the quality of education owing to the outbursts of violence, the closure of Gaza and other factors. According to UNRWA, continuous population growth and insufficient infrastructure stretches school capacity to its limits, with overcrowding putting pressure on diminishing resources and taking a toll on the quality of education delivered — 10,000 additional students joined UNRWA schools in the scholastic year 2011/12 and 8,000 in 2012/13 as well as in 2013/14. In Gaza, 89 per cent of the Agency's 245 schools operate on a double shift basis, resulting in shorter academic hours and a high number of students per classroom. The average classroom size in the 2012/13 scholastic year comprised 38 students. In addition, the shortage of schools means there is little opportunity for children to engage in organized recreational or creative pursuits during the regular school year. UNRWA is nonetheless planning to open 13 new school buildings in the first semester and 8 additional schools for the second semester. Access to schools for children living in the access restricted areas can be dangerous, and classes are often disrupted. The anxiety associated with attending school in those areas has taken a toll on students, with teachers reporting signs of psychosocial distress.<sup>19</sup> According to the Education Cluster of the humanitarian country team, in the West Bank, threat of harassment by

<sup>14</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Annual Report. Palestine Children — Issues and Statistics. Child Statistics Series (No. 15) (2013), Ramallah.

<sup>15</sup> Palestinian Ministry of Education and Higher Education, Educational Statistical Yearbook 2012/2013.

<sup>16</sup> UNRWA, Results of 2012 Independent Tests UNRWA Schools by Gender, West Bank.

<sup>17</sup> UNRWA, 2013, West Bank Survey on the drop-out rate of boys in school (forthcoming).

<sup>18</sup> Diakonia/NAD, 2011, Access to formal education for people with disabilities.

<sup>19</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, factsheet: Access Restricted Areas in the Gaza Strip (July 2013), available from: http://www.ochaopt.org/documents/ocha\_opt\_gaza\_ara\_factsheet\_july\_2013\_english.pdf.

Israeli settlers and Israeli security forces on the way to school and fear of harm and humiliation at checkpoints create stress and fear among children and their families. At least 6,000 children in the West Bank cross through one or more checkpoints to reach their schools every day.

14. As a consequence of the November 2013 escalation of hostilities, at least 142 government school buildings in Gaza sustained damage, ranging from light to complete damage. This resulted in the disruption of schooling and an unsafe learning environment for at least 123,641 children (at least 50 per cent girls). According to UNICEF, the escalation of conflict had a devastating impact on the psychosocial well-being of children and adolescents in Gaza.<sup>20</sup> As observed by UNMAS, as a trend, every escalation of hostilities is followed by a spike in civilian casualties caused by explosive hazards left by both sides to the conflict. While explosive remnants of war in the streets and public places are dealt with quickly by the police, other hazards are encountered in private spaces, rubble and the access restricted areas. An emerging issue of concern is the number of children injured as a result of small arms and other weapons that are stored or made within homes. During the period covered by the present report, there were 30 victims (3 killed, 27 injured), of which 23 were children (5 girls and 18 boys).

15. Illiteracy rates among individuals aged 15 years or older in the occupied Palestinian territory fell in the period 1997-2012 from 13.9 per cent to 4.1 per cent. The illiteracy rate varies considerably between the sexes: 1.8 per cent for males compared with 6.4 per cent for females. Female illiteracy rates were highest in rural localities (8.6 per cent), followed by refugee camps (6.3 per cent) and urban localities (6.1 per cent).<sup>21</sup>

16. While women have continued to participate in a range of roles in political life, they remain underrepresented in decision-making bodies. As of September 2013, women held only 3 out of a total of 24 ministerial level posts in the Palestinian Government — a drop from 21 to 12.5 per cent since the last report. UNDP reports that in Gaza, there is only one female minister, who is the Minister of Women's Affairs. Women have fewer opportunities to reach higher positions in the public sector and in the general administration of the Government. At the end of 2012, women held 47 per cent of the lower-level positions in the administration and 22 per cent of director's seats, but only 11 per cent were at the level of general director.<sup>22</sup> There has been some progress in the justice sector. Women now account for 15 per cent of judges, 19.5 per cent of prosecutors and 32.5 per cent of lawyers.<sup>23</sup> Some positive developments were also noted in the local elections held in the West Bank in October 2012, such as the introduction of an all-women party list in Hebron and Safa and the enacting of a 2010 manifesto from political parties to increase the quota of women on lists from 20 per cent to 30 per cent. As such, the women's movement has demonstrated its ability to channel its demands and raise women's voices for participation. In the 2012 local elections, the number of seats held by women increased moderately from 18 to 21.4 per cent (1,205 out of 5,629 seats).<sup>24</sup>

<sup>20</sup> State of Palestine Inter-cluster Rapid Assessment and the Psychosocial Rapid Assessment done after the escalation of conflict in November 2012 in Gaza.

<sup>21</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, available from <http://pcbs.gov.ps/site/512/default.aspx?tabID=512&lang=en&ItemID=890&mid=3171&wvversion=Staging> (accessed November 2013).

<sup>22</sup> Data from 2012 from the Palestinian General Personnel Council.

<sup>23</sup> Data from 2012 from the Palestinian Bar Association's Women's Lawyer's Network.

<sup>24</sup> Data from the Central Election Commission, 2013.

Such quantitative gains must be backed up by sufficient technical support to women in elected and appointed posts. According to UN-Women, as of September 2013, no women were participating on the Palestinian side in the resumed Israeli-Palestinian peace talks. Women have also not been present in the internal reconciliation committees set up to find a solution to the internal political divide. This is a reflection of a low level of political participation and representation of women across the board.

17. The Palestinian Legislative Council was not functional during the reporting period and, as such, there continued to be a hold on the passing of new laws or amending existing ones through democratic means, including those that are deemed discriminatory towards women and in contradiction to human rights, within the legal framework provided by the basic law of Palestine.

18. Since December 2012, human rights organizations and analysts in Gaza have noticed a negative development in Gaza regarding personal freedoms of the population, particularly in terms of imposing and enforcing conservative codes of conduct, and imposing separation of sexes in public. Further to the decision by Al-Aqsa University to impose a conservative dress code on female students and the cancellation of the UNRWA marathon after Hamas banned the participation of women, the de facto authorities in Gaza are now engaging in a “morality” campaign against young men citing “indecent” or “inappropriate” hairstyles and clothing (generally referred to as “westernized”), arresting young men and shaving their heads.

19. Violence against women remains a serious concern. According to the Independent Commission of Human Rights and civil society partners, 24 women were killed in the name of so-called “honour” between January and August 2013, in a significant deterioration over 2012 when 12 women were killed over the whole year. According to UNDP and UN-Women, the number of cases is most likely underreported. Studies suggest that overcrowding, especially owing to the housing situation in Gaza and East Jerusalem, exacerbates violence within households.<sup>25</sup>

20. A study by UN-Women<sup>26</sup> shows that access to justice, especially for women who are victims of violence, is a difficult and long process. The weakening of already inadequate protection mechanisms combined with the closure and restrictions on movement have made it more difficult and often impossible for women and girls who are at risk of being harmed or killed by family members to escape and seek justice and help. Although communities and families are often the source of discrimination and violence, female victims of violence first approach their communities or families for help. When this approach fails, only some will go to external service providers, such as the police or providers of social and health services. This may expose them to various levels of critique, rejection and marginalization. Such calls for help are in some cases not acted upon or become too burdensome for the victims, creating a spiral of violence. Owing to movement and access restrictions in Area C, checkpoints and the Barrier, women in isolated areas do not have access to formal juridical institutions, having as only recourse the informal justice system, which does not afford the same rights to women, men, boys and girls.<sup>27</sup> In addition, social and health services are restricted from establishing a permanent physical presence in Area C, which limits opportunities for women to report to health posts for medical check-ups and documentation of injuries related to gender-based violence.<sup>28</sup> Although the overall number of female inmates in corrections and rehabilitation centres is low, their stories highlight the multiple layers of discrimination, violence and abuse perpetrated against women in Palestine, as well as failures of and gaps in the protection and justice systems.<sup>26</sup>

---

<sup>25</sup> Norwegian Refugee Council, Overview of the Housing Situation in the Gaza Strip (March 2013), and OCHA, Easing the blockade: Assessing the humanitarian impact on the population of the Gaza Strip (March 2011).

<sup>26</sup> UN-Women, Study on access to justice for women (forthcoming, 2013).

21. The Palestinian Authority continued to take noteworthy steps to strengthen capacity to prevent and respond to different forms of violence against women. The Ministry of Women's Affairs signed memorandums of understanding with six key line ministries for the operationalization of the national strategy to combat violence against women. The Ministry also finalized a national regulation for the establishment of women's protection centres detailing the supervisory and monitoring system within shelters. The Palestinian Civil Police launched a strategy for family protection units in June 2013 that provides a framework for addressing the rights of victims of violence in accordance with international standards. Sustained efforts are needed to improve and expand services and access to justice for victims, taking into account the context and reality on the ground.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

22. The present section provides information on efforts made by the United Nations system, in cooperation with the Palestinian Authority, donors and civil society, to address the specific needs and priorities of women and girls. It contains updates on assistance provided in the following areas: education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development.

A. Education and training

23. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote women's and girls' access to education and training and support the Palestinian Ministry of Education and Higher Education to improve the learning environment, for example, through the Education for All package for inclusive and child-friendly education and early childhood development. The package is currently being piloted in 47 schools and, for the first time, preschool classrooms were opened in some of the schools.<sup>29</sup> WFP maintained the provision of food assistance (date bars and milk) in schools, reaching 88,834 children (49 per cent girls). UNRWA continued to provide primary and secondary education in Gaza to 222,000 students (48.6 per cent girls) and primary education to 51,695 students in the West Bank (58 per cent girls). UNRWA also continued efforts to narrow the gender gap in academic achievements, where girls currently outperform boys, while simultaneously increasing the pass rate of both girls and boys. As a result, the gap in academic achievement has narrowed significantly, from 25 per cent in 2009/10 to 9.4 per cent in 2012/13. UNICEF supported the rehabilitation of 98 schools in Gaza, securing safer learning environments for more than 87,945 children (40,915 girls). In addition, as a response to the escalation of violence in November 2012, 29,000 children (50 per cent girls) received learning materials, and 3,317 children (1,037 girls) and 249 teachers benefited from improved and protected access to learning environments. To improve the quality of education, UNICEF trained 1,600 teachers in the most marginalized areas on active learning modules developed by the Palestinian Ministry of Education.

<sup>27</sup> Ibid.

<sup>28</sup> Kvinna till Kvinna, 2013, Inequalities facing women living in Area C of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, West Bank.

<sup>29</sup> The initiative, which is coordinated by UNESCO, is supported by UNDP, UNFPA, UNICEF, UNRWA, UNSCO, WFP and WHO.

24. UNICEF, in partnership with non-governmental organizations, continued to implement after-school activities in adolescent-friendly service centres. During the reporting period, at least 10,000 adolescents (50 per cent girls) benefitted from creative learning, life skills, recreational activities and health awareness sessions. UNRWA provided technical training to 515 women in Gaza. One of its centres provides special courses in entrepreneurship and communication. In the West Bank, UNRWA continued its tertiary education programmes. Of these, the trade and the technical vocation training programmes were attended by 1,217 students (603 female), and the teacher pre-service training programme was attended by 642 students (424 female). The UNRWA education programme in the West Bank also provided 38 merit-based scholarships to young underprivileged refugees, the majority of whom (87 per cent) were young women. In 2013, UNESCO in partnership with a local radio station, trained five female journalists to produce and present news in a gender-sensitive manner as part of their integrated approach to promote the training of female journalists and the equal presence of women's and men's issues across all types of media.

B. Health

25. The United Nations continued efforts to improve the access to and quality of health services, including maternal and reproductive health care. UNRWA provided a range of basic health-care services to refugees in the West Bank and Gaza, including antenatal care services. A total of 11,356 female and 7,976 male refugees were referred to external secondary and tertiary health-care services. In addition, 3,247 women and 2,290 men received care at the UNRWA-run Qalqilya Hospital. In Gaza, 60.6 per cent of visits to the health centres run by the Agency were made by women. During the second quarter of 2013, a total of 24,942 refugee women benefited from the Agency's family planning services in the West Bank, while in Gaza, 61,208 women benefited from such services in the month of August 2013. In addition, 9,265 women accessed preconception care. During the reporting period, there were 39,001 newly registered pregnancies. Of all pregnant women registered, 93.3 per cent attended four or more antenatal care visits.

26. UNFPA supported the implementation of the national obstetric care protocol through the training of 316 health providers and the establishment of hospital committees to audit near-miss cases in Gaza and the West Bank. Furthermore, they provided home visits for 2,625 pregnant women as well as postnatal care for 1,664 women in the West Bank and Gaza. Through outreach activities, UNFPA reached around 8,470 women, as well as 1,884 adolescent females and 975 males, improving their understanding of issues such as reproductive health, early marriage and healthy lifestyles. In addition, in August 2013, UNFPA supported the launch of the Youth

Peer Education Network, which is a network of young Palestinian men and women who are committed to promote healthy lifestyles among youth and raise awareness of sexual and reproductive health and HIV/AIDS. A total of 97 female and 57 male school counsellors were trained on the adolescent health guidance book in Jenin, Ramallah, Bethlehem and Hebron.

27. In Gaza, UNRWA provided postnatal care in follow-up to all 35,590 deliveries during the reporting period. Through the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative, UNICEF reached 26,000 pregnant women and 36,000 lactating mothers in 9 hospitals and 45 health facilities in the West Bank and 14,720 in 3 hospitals in Gaza with counselling sessions on exclusive breastfeeding. Mothers and newborn children at risk were reached through at-home follow-up, and the rate of 78 per cent of mothers who were exclusively breastfeeding was maintained after the third visit. WHO conducted awareness-raising activities on safe childbirth and postnatal care, training 769 health professionals on the process of care for mothers and newborns in the hospital.

28. UNICEF scaled up its psychosocial programmes implemented in Gaza reaching a total of 149,894 children and adolescents (50 per cent girls), 17,986 caregivers (of whom 65 per cent women) and 852 professionals (45 per cent women) all focused on helping children to increase their resilience and coping mechanisms especially in times of crisis.

29. UNICEF also supported a range of initiatives related to water, sanitation and hygiene. This included support for rehabilitation and construction of water, sanitation and hygiene facilities in 30 schools in the West Bank and 51 in Gaza, benefiting 45,930 students (20,292 girls), as well as water tankering to 34 schools in the West Bank and 81 in Gaza providing safe drinking water to 65,815 students (34,664 girls).

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

30. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote women's economic empowerment and improve food security and livelihoods. Several activities were targeted at building the capacity of cooperatives and entrepreneurs. In 2012, ILO provided support to the Ministry of Labour in the development of a cooperative assessment tool for advisory support services and counselling to cooperatives on enterprise management and governance issues. Training workshops and coaching activities were provided to cooperative extension workers on how to undertake feasibility studies and assess the business plans and performance of newly established cooperatives. ILO also provided direct support to six women's cooperatives. UNDP trained women entrepreneurs and provided technical assistance and support to 28 women's cooperatives to enhance the competitive advantage of their products, and at the same time enhance their business, networking, marketing and advocacy skills. UNRWA implemented a training programme targeting women entrepreneurs from refugee camps across the West Bank. Of all graduates, a total of 30 women accessed loans to start or develop small enterprises. UN-Women continued to build on previous work aimed at providing poor and rural women with the proper tools and mechanisms for the establishment of small, sustainable businesses through local women's community-based organizations and scaling up the women-run school canteens project in all the schools in the West Bank.

31. UN-Women, UNESCO and UNDP built and/or rehabilitated 9 women's centres in Gaza and the West Bank. Of those structures, some are made of traditional mud brick, where UNESCO trained 40 women in the technique of earthen architecture. The women's centres will bring a range of services to approximately 50,000 women in isolated areas.<sup>30</sup> A business plan has been developed for three of the centres to ensure sustainability, and 39 board members of the centres were trained to adequately manage them.

32. FAO, WFP and UNRWA continued interventions aimed at improving food security. FAO provided agriculture inputs such as on small animal husbandry, beehives and home gardens, and provided training on processing of food, management and marketing, benefiting close to 3,000 female-headed households in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in 2012. Forty women's associations participated in several exhibitions conducted in the West Bank and Gaza for the marketing of processed food products. WFP provided assistance through food distribution and conditional voucher programmes, which reached 310,148 female beneficiaries. WFP also started to implement a training component for eligible food-insecure Palestinian women which aims to improve their knowledge base, capacity and skills, thereby establishing a solid foundation for economic empowerment. During the third quarter of 2013, UNRWA supported a total of 36,264 special hardship cases<sup>31</sup> in the West Bank through the provision of food assistance. Of those refugees, 23,281 were female and 12,983 male, with 5,833 families (50.6 per cent) headed by females. In Gaza, the Social Safety Net Programme of UNRWA provided basic food supplies and cash subsidies<sup>32</sup> to 401,765 women (48 per cent of the total) from among the most vulnerable Palestinian refugees.<sup>33</sup> A total of 21,310 families are female-headed households, most of whom are extremely poor.

33. Microfinance support continued to be a source of short-term poverty alleviation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. UNDP, as of December 2012, had provided support to 2,453 female-headed households (66 per cent of the total households supported) to be enrolled in the microfinance component of an employment and training programme. In the West Bank, the UNRWA microfinance programme provided 35 per cent of loans to women (out of a total of 10,067) amounting to 27 per cent of the total value of loans ($13.7 million). In Gaza, the same programme provided 39 per cent of loans to women (out of a total of 1,382), also amounting to 27 per cent of the total value of loans ($1.48 million).

34. Through the Gaza gender initiative, UNRWA reached a total of 1,108 female graduates through its Young Women Leaders Programme. The programme seeks to ensure that young female graduates are developing the skills required by the labour market by offering training and courses in areas such as advanced information technology, English language, management and administration, and leadership. It

---

<sup>30</sup> Part of those activities are undertaken in the framework of the United Nations Human Security Trust Fund (a joint programme with FAO, UN-Women, UNESCO, UNSCO and UNRWA).

<sup>31</sup> They are identified on the basis of belonging to one or more vulnerability categories, such as female-headed households or households with one or more members with a disability.

<sup>32</sup> Owing to funding constraints, the cash subsidies of the programme were cut in April 2013.

<sup>33</sup> The numbers in Gaza seem inflated relative to numbers in the West Bank because they include both regular cash and food assistance as well as emergency assistance.

also offers life-skills and self-development coaching and includes a work placement scheme to enhance employability.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

35. Building on lessons learned and good practices previously reported, United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives designed to improve women's access to justice and enhance the capacity of institutions and personnel to prevent and respond to violence against women. Priority was placed on the implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence Against Women 2011-2019.

36. UN-Women continued to support the institutionalization of the Family Protection Units in the Palestinian Civil Police, which in 2012 handled 2,849 cases of family violence. UN-Women also continued to support the Corrections and Rehabilitation Centres Department to implement the United Nations minimum standard rules in relation to the rehabilitation component for women inmates in all four Corrections and Rehabilitation Centres in the West Bank where women are held. With the supervision of social workers, weekly training and exercise sessions were provided to an average of 30 women at any given time, and through the support of UN-Women to the Palestinian Bar Association, 20 women inmates were provided with biweekly lawyers' visits and representation in court. UNDP continued to support the Gender Unit of the Civilian Police, including in the development of a diploma programme on gender-responsive policing targeting mid- and high-level officers. UNDP also contributed to the establishment of a Coordination Committee to support and help harmonize strategies of gender units across security institutions. UNOPS supported a project aimed at improving the response by the Office of the Attorney General and Public Prosecution to gender-specific human rights violations. UNODC continued to implement a multi-year programme aimed at building the capacity and skills of forensics services and related personnel to investigate gender-based crimes and provide support for victims of sexual and family violence.

37. Efforts were made to expand and improve women's access to legal protection and services, as well as services specifically targeted at survivors of violence. From 2011 to June 2013, UNDP provided legal aid services to a total of 43,609 women in Gaza and the West Bank, tripling the number of women who were provided with legal representation in courts and almost doubling the number provided with legal information and advice. UN-Women continued to support the Mehwar Centre, which between 2008 and 2012 has sheltered 286 women and 79 child victims of violence and provided a range of services, including: social and legal services for women in the shelter; social counselling for family members; skills development; economic empowerment opportunities; support during the reintegration phase; and conducted outreach activities in the community. UN-Women, through the Millennium Development Goal programme, also continued to provide support to the Hayat multipurpose centre in Gaza City for the protection of victims of violence. Through the gender-based violence referral system established by UNRWA in all its field operations, 414 cases were reported (75 per cent female) in the West Bank, the majority of which received individual counselling from the UNRWA Health Programme's psychosocial counsellors. In Gaza, 384 survivors of gender-based violence were detected through the system.

38. UNFPA and OHCHR continued to support and build the capacity of community-based organizations and coalitions working in the West Bank and Gaza on the prevention of gender-based violence, the promotion of gender equality and the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000). This included training by OHCHR on monitoring and reporting on human rights violations against women and support from UNFPA for publications documenting an organization's experience in monitoring implementation of resolution 1325 (2000). Thirteen cases of violations of women's human rights were reported by UNFPA partner organizations.

39. A range of activities were implemented to raise awareness and trigger action to end violence and discrimination against women. In Gaza, the Agency's gender-based violence awareness-raising programmes reached 346 adult women and 275 men as well as 285 youth. Concepts related to gender, human rights and violence were covered in training and discussion groups, including how to deal with violence within the home and how to build healthy and equal relationships. In the West Bank, UNFPA conducted several prevention activities focused on gender-based violence through awareness-raising sessions, media and advocacy activities, and training of community leaders, religious leaders and preachers, including staff at the Ministries of Women's Affairs, Social Affairs, Religious Affairs and Health. UNFPA also trained 75 health providers on gender-based violence identification and clinical management at the hospital, emergency, and primary health care and clinic levels. ILO supported the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics to develop research on violence at work.

E. Power and decision-making

40. United Nations entities continued to work towards strengthening women's participation and representation in decision-making and their engagement in public life. UNDP supported the Palestinian Initiative for the Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy, which is designed to enhance the capacities of young Palestinian women leaders across the occupied Palestinian territory. In 2013, 181 women received training on topics such as leadership and communication skills, advocacy, public speaking, human rights and project management. In addition, 453 women were targeted through an awareness campaign related to the Constitution.

41. In October 2012, UN-Women in partnership with UNDP and UNSCO facilitated a meeting between members of the Palestinian women's movement and the United Nations Deputy Special Coordinator. Participants discussed the need for time-bound plans to increase the participation of Palestinian women in decision-making processes and the establishment of a more permanent channel of communication between the Palestinian women's movement and representatives of UNSCO. In follow-up, UN-Women supported the organization of a two-day conference in December 2012 on the theme "Towards achievement of equality: women's political participation for the achievement of social development". The objective of the conference, which brought together over 700 participants, was to provide a platform for the Palestinian women's movement to establish a unified position and identify common priorities in terms of the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women and peace and security and beyond.

42. UNFPA trained 20 women of the Wisal Coalition in Gaza on Palestinian law and women's rights to empower them to: act as community leaders; play an active role in family conflict resolution; and raise awareness about gender equality issues and human rights. UNFPA also trained over 40 youth leaders in the West Bank on communication and social media, gender equality and gender-based violence.

F. Institutional development

43. UN-Women continued to provide technical assistance to the Ministry of Women's Affairs and the Ministry of Planning, including support for the review of the Cross-Sectoral National Gender Strategy 2011-2013 and the development of the new strategy for 2014-2016. UN-Women supported the ministries to develop a gender-responsive planning and budgeting approach for the Government and to integrate gender equality priorities in sectoral strategies and plans of line ministries. UNFPA trained staff of the Ministry of Women's Affairs on the newly defined national indicators for youth and gender that were developed in cooperation with the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics for the national monitoring system. At present, the Ministry of Women's Affairs heads the National Committee for Gender-responsive Budgeting which was established in July 2012 and is tasked to advance the Gender-responsive Budgeting approach in national plans and budgets and build such capacities in target ministries. In addition, the Ministry of Women's Affairs is a member of the Local Aid Coordination Structure, the official coordination forum among the Palestinian Government, civil society and international partners. Despite growing responsibilities, the budget of the Ministry of Women's Affairs remains limited. The annual budget for 2012 was 6,272,000 NIS, 0.5 per cent of the national budget.<sup>34</sup>

44. Assistance was also provided for the institutional development of other ministries and bodies. UNDP continued to support the gender mainstreaming efforts of the Ministry of Justice. In 2013, the Ministry established a Juvenile Justice Unit, properly staffed its Gender Unit, trained all staff on gender equality, integrated gender and juvenile justice concerns into the workplans of all of its departments and developed an internal gender strategy. UNESCO continued to support the Palestinian Women's Documentation and Research Centre in advancing gender equality and women's empowerment through capacity-building, research, advocacy and documentation activities. The last phase of the project, starting in 2013, will be transitional in order to create a financially and intellectually autonomous structure. ILO assisted the National Committee for Women's Employment in developing their three-year strategic plan to advocate for gender-sensitive policies, legislation, capacity-building interventions, economic empowerment, social security for women workers and a healthy work environment. UNICEF continued to support the Ministry of Social Affairs to strengthen the national child protection system so that girls and young women are afforded greater protection from violence, abuse and exploitation. One of the results is the Amended Child Law that came into force in December 2012, which clearly defines the roles and responsibilities of duty bearers and sets enforcement mechanisms for implementation of its provisions.

45. Notably, during the reporting period the United Nations country team developed the first ever United Nations Development Assistance Framework for

---

<sup>34</sup> Ministry of Finance, Annual Budget of the Government of Palestine 2012.

Palestine. UN-Women, as the coordinator of the United Nations Gender Task Force, ensured its alignment with national gender equality concerns. While promoting gender equality mainstreaming throughout all United Nations programming, the United Nations Development Assistance Framework also identified specific objectives on gender equality. The framework will be implemented in harmony with the National Development Plan of Palestine 2014-2016.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

46. During the reporting period, prospects for peace were renewed through the resumption of direct negotiations. This occurred against the backdrop of a tense situation on the ground. The outbursts of violence and growing insecurity which have occurred since the previous report to the Commission are of great concern. The Secretary-General has called upon all parties to sustain an environment conducive for the peace process to move forward.

47. Many observations from previous reports still stand. Restrictions on movement and access, increased settlement expansion and settler violence, demolitions of Palestinian infrastructure and displacement, the fragmentation of the Territory and the closure of the Gaza Strip continue to have a negative impact on the lives of Palestinian women and their families. Progress on development indicators has remained slow owing to the volatility of the context, which renders progress fragile and prone to regression, including as it relates to women's rights.

48. High levels of unemployment and poverty persist, and many Palestinian women and girls still face significant obstacles in accessing basic services, health care, justice institutions, water and sanitation, and economic opportunities. Signs of increased food insecurity levels, declining quality in education and the growing challenges faced by women in the labour market are all issues demanding greater attention in the coming year. The critical situation with regard to water, sanitation and hygiene as well as energy, in particular in Gaza, are other serious concerns that must be addressed with urgency by all relevant stakeholders.

49. Violence against women remains a serious concern. As noted in previous reports and as was evident during the reporting period, insecurity and poverty can exacerbate gender-based discrimination and abuse, including in the workplace, and lead to elevated levels of violence against women in both the public and private spheres. Stronger efforts are needed by all actors to prevent all forms of violence and address obstacles and challenges to women's access to justice and services.

50. The United Nations system should use the development of the first United Nations Development Assistance Framework for Palestine and the new Palestinian National Development Plan to improve harmonization and efficiency among all development actors. This includes the initiation of new joint programmes building on the results and good practices created by the joint programmes on gender equality and empowerment of women funded under the Millennium Development Goal Achievement Fund that ended in April 2013.

51. The United Nations system and the donor community should use the current momentum to support the Palestinian Authority to build on the positive steps taken at the policy and institutional levels to address violence against women and promote gender equality and women's empowerment. In particular, further political commitment, technical and financial support will be required for the effective implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence Against Women (2011-2019) and the National Gender Strategy (2014-2016). Technical and financial support must be provided to the Ministry of Women's Affairs and women's civil society organizations.

52. More determined action is needed by all actors to increase women's participation and representation at all levels of decision-making and to support women in elected and appointed posts. With the renewed peace talks, efforts to engage both Palestinian and Israeli women in the related processes need to be enhanced and supported in accordance with Security Council resolutions 1325 \(2000\) and 2122 \(2013\). Mechanisms for enhancing accountability and monitoring progress in the implementation of these and related commitments on women, peace and security should be established. The recent experience of UN-Women in building the capacity of women leaders in different regions in negotiation and mediation skills could be applied.

53. Dialogue during the reporting period between women's civil society organizations and senior representatives of the United Nations entities proved rewarding and informative for those involved. This should be transformed into a regular practice.

54. While progress has been made in improving systems for data collection and analysis, it is critical to continue to build capacity to collect and analyse sex- and age-disaggregated data on the full range of issues that have an impact on the lives of Palestinians and to ensure that this information is used to inform programming and is incorporated systematically into all reports and briefings by the United Nations system to relevant intergovernmental bodies.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
19 December 2014

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Fifty-ninth session

9-20 March 2015

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report, submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2014/1, highlights the situation of Palestinian women for the period from 1 October 2013 to 30 September 2014, and provides an overview of the assistance provided by the entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2015/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2014/1 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and the critical socioeconomic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip. The Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2014/6), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-ninth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 October 2013 to 30 September 2014 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from the United Nations entities and individual experts that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the State of Palestine.<sup>1</sup>

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women, including ESCWA. The present report includes contributions from the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO), the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO). It complements other reports on the living and socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people (see A/69/84-E/2014/75, A/69/371-S/2014/650, A/69/81-E/2014/13 and A/69/13).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. During the reporting period renewed efforts were made to resume direct final status negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians under the auspices of the United States. Despite an intensified direct engagement between the parties for a period of nine months starting in July 2013, an agreement failed to emerge and talks

---

<sup>1</sup> In accordance with the report of the Secretary-General on the status of Palestine in the United Nations dated 8 March 2013 (A/67/738), the designation "State of Palestine" is now used in all documents of the United Nations, notwithstanding the use in parallel of the term used in previous reports, "Occupied Palestinian Territory".

have been suspended since the end of April 2014. Israeli settlement announcements accompanying each tranche of agreed release of Palestinian prisoners complicated negotiation efforts. At the end of March 2014, Israel did not release the fourth tranche of prisoners, citing lack of political progress within the peace talks, and the State of Palestine moved to accede to 15 international treaties and conventions, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which have since come into effect. Following a reconciliation agreement between Fatah and Hamas on 23 April 2014, a Government of National Consensus was formed on 2 June 2014 in accordance with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) commitments and the positions of the Quartet and Arab Peace Initiative.<sup>2</sup>

5. The situation in the West Bank deteriorated with a rise in violence and several disturbing developments, including the abduction and killing of three Israeli teenagers followed by the abduction and killing of a Palestinian teenager, continued settlement expansion, settler violence, land expropriation, the demolition of Palestinian houses and a high number of arrests of Palestinians, including Hamas affiliates, and confrontations between Palestinians and Israeli forces and settlers. During this period of heightened tensions, rocket fire at Israel from militants in the Gaza Strip increased. Israel responded mostly with airstrikes. The security situation began to dramatically unravel on 7 July after Hamas, for the first time in 20 months and following the arrest of hundreds of its members in the West Bank, claimed responsibility for firing a barrage of rockets towards Israel. On 8 July, Israel launched “Operation Protective Edge”, with the stated goal of stopping rocket attacks and destroying Hamas’ capability to conduct operations against Israel, including by destroying tunnels. On 26 August, an open-ended ceasefire brokered by Egypt went into effect and has largely held since.

6. The 51-day conflict — the third major one in six years — left an unprecedented level of loss of life and destruction. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, over 2,100 Palestinians, including 1,475 civilians (709 men, 260 women and 506 children) were killed. Additionally, over 11,100 Palestinians, including 3,374 children, 2,088 women and 410 elderly were injured.<sup>3</sup> Sixty-six Israeli soldiers and six civilians, including a child and a foreign national, were killed and 250 Israeli civilians and 450 soldiers were injured. In Gaza, an estimated 18,000 houses were destroyed or severely damaged, as were 111 UNRWA installations and critical infrastructure, including Gaza’s only power plant. At the peak of the conflict, more than 500,000 people were internally displaced with around 293,000 of those taking shelter in UNRWA schools, 100,000 people lost their homes and continue to be displaced.

7. On 23 July 2014, the Human Rights Council adopted resolution S-21/1, in which it decided to establish an independent international commission of inquiry to investigate all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, particularly in the occupied Gaza Strip, in the context of the military operations conducted since 13 June 2014, and to report to the Council at its twenty-eighth session in March 2015. A technical gender expert deployed by UN-Women is supporting the investigations.

---

<sup>2</sup> The Quartet asked that all members of future Palestinian Governments be committed to non-violence, the recognition of Israel and acceptance of previous agreements and obligations, including the road map.

<sup>3</sup> Data from the Palestinian Ministry of Health.

8. The conflict has had a devastating impact on women and their families, further increasing vulnerability and insecurity. As the primary caregivers in Gaza, women are faced with acute challenges in coping with the large number of families with members killed or injured, the long-term impact of damaged infrastructure and reduced services. Displacement proved especially difficult for women and girls with reports of sexual harassment and gender-based violence in shelters, limited privacy, compromised dignity and reduced access to hygiene.<sup>4</sup> Psychosocial distress levels, already high among the Gaza population, have worsened significantly as a result of the conflict and will require specialized support, specifically for children and women.<sup>4</sup> Female-headed families, including new widows, are a priority group in need of protection and support.

9. In the West Bank, tensions and violent clashes between Palestinians, Israeli security forces and settlers resulted in a marked increase in civilian deaths and injury during the reporting period compared with the previous year. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs,<sup>5</sup> in the West Bank, 44 Palestinian civilians (34 men and 10 boys) were killed and 4,611 were injured (3,497 men, 92 women, 970 boys and 52 girls) by the Israeli Defense Forces, while 145 Palestinians (99 men, 10 women, 30 boys and 6 girls) were injured by Israeli settlers. Seventy-eight Israeli settlers (58 men, 8 women, 8 boys and 4 girls) were injured by Palestinians.

10. The ongoing Israeli occupation of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the closure of the Gaza Strip, continued to affect the social and economic situation of Palestinians in the occupied Palestinian territory. The living conditions of women vary depending on sociocultural factors and the differential status that applies to Palestinian women and men in different areas<sup>6</sup> and related obstacles to movement and access. As at September 2014, some 1.8 million Palestinians in the Gaza Strip remained effectively isolated from the rest of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, by the continuing closure by Israel. Access to East Jerusalem has remained limited for Palestinian residents from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Physical and administrative restrictions continue to impede humanitarian access to some of the most vulnerable communities in Area C, and particularly those in the firing zone and those located behind the Barrier.

11. Food insecurity levels in the West Bank and Gaza Strip remained high at 33 per cent (57 per cent in Gaza Strip and 19 per cent in the West Bank),<sup>7</sup> as a result of the continued closure of the Gaza Strip, restrictions on access in the West Bank and related high rates of poverty and continued increases in food prices and threats to livelihoods. Since food insecurity is defined in the Palestinian context as the lack <sup>4</sup> Gaza Crisis Appeal, September 2014 Update (available from: http://www.ochaopt.org/documents/Gaza\_Crisis\_Appeal\_9\_September.pdf (accessed September 2014).

---

<sup>5</sup> Figures cover the period 1 October 2013 to 30 August 2014.

<sup>6</sup> Following the 1993 Oslo Accords and the 1995 interim Agreements between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the West Bank was divided into three zones, Areas A, B and C. Extensive responsibility was delegated by Israel to the Palestinian Authority in Areas A and B. Area C remained under full authority of Israel.

<sup>7</sup> FAO, UNRWA, WFP and Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Socioeconomic and food security survey 2013: West Bank and Gaza Strip" (unpublished information).

of economic access to food, trends of food insecurity are driven by economic performance. The situation in the West Bank worsened compared to last year, when food insecurity stood at 14 per cent.

12. Female-headed households account for only 9.8 per cent of all families in occupied Palestinian territory (8.3 per cent in the Gaza Strip and 10.5 per cent in the West Bank). Latest available data<sup>7</sup> indicate that 26 per cent of female-headed households in the West Bank are food insecure compared to 18 per cent of the male-headed households. In the Gaza Strip the situation is the reverse, as a result of external assistance targeting female-headed households. Food insecurity among those households is 51 per cent, compared to 58 per cent among male-headed households. In Gaza, food insecurity is estimated to have increased as a result of the recent conflict and the high levels of displacement, the inability of the population to access their livelihoods, especially agriculture, and increased unemployment rates. This is expected to contribute to a deterioration of the nutritional status of women and children.<sup>8</sup>

13. Women continue to face significant challenges in the labour market. The labour force participation rate among women remained low at 16 per cent (compared to 65.8 per cent for men) in Gaza and 18 per cent (compared to 71.3 per cent for men) in the West Bank. Available data shows that women's unemployment rates remained high during the reporting period at 61 per cent in Gaza and 26 per cent in the West Bank.<sup>9</sup> Young women are particularly affected by youth unemployment, with an overall unemployment rate of 64.7 per cent, compared with 36.9 per cent of young men. In Gaza, the situation is particularly dire with unemployment rates of 86.3 per cent for young women and 51.8 per cent for young men.<sup>9</sup> Discrimination within the workplace continued to persist, as evidenced through disparities in wages. The average daily wage for women represented 81.1 per cent of that for men in 2013,<sup>10</sup> demonstrating an increase of the wage gap of 5.7 percentage points compared to 2012.

14. Concerns related to limited access to essential health care and shortages of drugs and medical disposables remain, with increased concerns in Gaza. The current crisis has left health-care centres damaged, without adequate medical equipment and stock, and health-care providers unable to properly attend to the needs of women and girls requiring sexual and reproductive health services. As a result of the destruction to homes and the shelter crisis, it is expected that about 3,000 displaced pregnant women will continue to suffer from lack of access to basic services and special dietary and vitamin supplements.<sup>4</sup> During the crisis, more than 45,000 pregnant women were deprived of access to basic reproductive health services, and around 5,000 deliveries took place in extremely poor conditions.<sup>4</sup>

15. The water and energy situation remains critical. Gaza's only aquifer will become unusable as early as 2016, with the damage irreversible by 2020; 95 per cent of water from the aquifer is unfit for human consumption. For drinking, people either purchase desalinated water from tankers or depend on small desalination units at home.<sup>11</sup> Prior to the conflict, the precarious energy supply only met approximately 46 per cent of the estimated demand. With the destruction of public infrastructure including the only power plant and water facilities during the recent conflict, the functioning of basic services, including water and sanitation were severely debilitated and present serious implications for the public health of the population, including women.

<sup>8</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Gaza Initial Rapid Assessment" (27 August 2014).

<sup>9</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, 2014. Labour Force Survey: (April-Jun, 2014) Round (Q2/2014), Press Report on the Labour Force Survey Results, Ramallah-Palestine.

<sup>10</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics. "Labour force survey annual report." (2013).

16. In terms of education, the situation showed mixed results. According to the latest data from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics,<sup>12</sup> the adjusted net enrolment rate in primary education in Palestine was 92.74 per cent in 2012, with a gender parity index of 0.99. In the case of lower secondary education the enrolment rate was 83.6 per cent and the index 1.06 with girls slightly outnumbering boys. For upper secondary education the rate was 71.55 and the index 1.24 in favour of girls. Improvements in enrolment have, however, been coupled with an overall decline in the quantity and quality of education as a result of violence, the closure of Gaza and restrictions on movement. Additionally, the significant gains made by women in education over time have not been translated into progress in women's participation in the labour market. Continuous population growth and insufficient infrastructure stretched school capacities to its limits, negatively affecting the quality of education delivered. Prior to the crisis, Gaza faced a shortage of almost 200 schools and two-thirds of schools were operating on a double shift basis. The hostilities are expected to magnify the shortage of classrooms as roughly 258 schools (including at least 75 UNRWA schools) sustained damage and some schools are completely destroyed.<sup>4</sup> In the West Bank, threat of harassment by Israeli settlers and Israeli security forces on the way to school and fear of harm and humiliation at checkpoints continue to create stress and fear among children and their families.

17. While women have continued to participate in a range of roles in the political realm, they remain underrepresented in formal decision-making bodies and processes. As at September 2014, women held 3 out of 17 ministerial level posts (16.6 per cent) in the new Palestinian Government of National Consensus — an increase from 12.5 per cent in the previous Government, but a drop from 21 per cent of the last Government of May 2012. In the justice sector, women only account for 15 per cent of judges, 16 per cent of prosecutors and 21 per cent of lawyers, with some drops registered from the previous year when figures were 15, 19.5 and 32.5 respectively. Women hold about 41 per cent of public sector employment and tend to remain at lower positions of decision-making.<sup>13</sup>

18. The occupied Palestinian territory continued to be characterized by a weak rule of law. Many barriers to women's access to justice, especially for women victims of violence, remain, hampering opportunities for women to seek redress.<sup>14</sup> The existing legal frameworks contain laws that are outdated and discriminate against women, particularly in matters of divorce and child custody. Women and girl victims of violence continue to face a combination of challenges preventing them from accessing available security and justice services, ranging from difficult physical access to security and judicial institutions, in particular those residing in

---

<sup>11</sup> http://www.unicef.org/oPt/Outcome\_document\_on\_Water\_and\_Energy\_in\_Gaza\_-\_16\_May\_2014.pdf.

<sup>12</sup> <http://data.uis.unesco.org/#>.

<sup>13</sup> Data from 2012 from the Palestinian General Personnel Council.

<sup>14</sup> UN-Women, "Women's Access to Justice — Access Denied." (December, 2014).

Area C, to stigmatization of and pressures from families and communities on women who seek justice. Even in cases where women manage to access justice services, they often face service providers who lack professional knowledge in dealing specifically with women and girl victims of violence and who continue to interpret outdated laws pertaining to the Penal Code and personal status law in a way that infringes on women's rights.

19. The informal justice system continues to deal with matters traditionally considered private issues, including so-called honour crimes and domestic violence. According to the civil society partners, 19 cases of femicide were reported for the period of January to September 2014, compared to 28 cases for the whole year of 2013. However, the number of cases is most likely underreported. During the reporting period, no cases of so-called honour crimes were reported to OHCHR in Gaza. This is likely a result of the social and cultural context and a lack of willingness to report such incidents openly. According to OHCHR, new trends have emerged in femicide cases or the killing of women as a result of family disputes or crime. Studies suggest that overcrowding, especially owing to the housing situation in Gaza and East Jerusalem, exacerbates violence within households.<sup>15</sup>

20. The Palestinian Government continued to take noteworthy steps to strengthen capacity to prevent and respond to different forms of violence against women. In May 2014, the President issued a presidential decree that amended articles of the Penal Code by removing provisions for leniency with regard to murder in the name of so-called family honour. The Palestinian Cabinet approved the National Referral System for Women Victims of Violence (Takamol) in 2014. While the Family Protection from Violence law was provisionally accepted, it is still under discussion with regard to its legislative applicability with the Palestinian Basic Law. The Office of the Attorney-General appointed 15 trained prosecutors to investigate violence against women cases. Sustained efforts are, however, needed to improve and expand services and access to justice for all victims and survivors of gender-based violence and to review, revise and strengthen relevant laws.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

21. The United Nations continued its efforts to respond to the range of development and humanitarian challenges. Priorities for the United Nations support to the Palestinian people are outlined in a set of key documents, including the United Nations Development Assistance Framework for the State of Palestine 2014-2016, which is aligned with the Palestinian National Development Plan 2014-2016, and the 2014 Strategic Response Plan for the occupied Palestinian territory which outlines the humanitarian programming. This section updates on assistance provided by the United Nations system, in cooperation with the Palestinian Authority, donors and civil society, to address the specific needs and priorities of women and girls in the following areas: education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development.

<sup>15</sup> Norwegian Refugee Council, Overview of the Housing Situation in the Gaza Strip (March 2013), and Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Easing the blockade: Assessing the humanitarian impact on the population of the Gaza Strip (March, 2011).

A. Education and training

22. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote women's and girls' access to education and training and improve learning environments. In the 2013/14 academic school year 29,518 girls (59 per cent of all students) were enrolled in elementary and preparatory education in UNRWA schools in the West Bank and 111,825 girls in the Gaza Strip (48 per cent of all students); 630 female students were enrolled in technical and vocational training programmes (55 per cent of total) and 427 female students (63 per cent of total) were enrolled in a teacher training degree programme administered by UNRWA. In addition, UNRWA granted 36 scholarships to young refugees, of which 30 were granted to young women who excelled academically but would otherwise be unable to afford tertiary education in fields such as business administration, sciences, engineering finance and accounting. Through its Al-Fakhoora Dynamic Futures Programme in Gaza, UNDP provided academic scholarships for 324 students (180 female) and supported their economic empowerment opportunities in the form of paid internship to facilitate the transition to the labour market.

23. To promote access to quality education for all Palestinian children, nine United Nations organizations<sup>16</sup> coordinated by UNESCO continued their support to the Ministry of Education and Higher Education in piloting an educational package designed to improve capacities on early childhood development and promote inclusive and child-friendly education regardless of gender, disabilities, backgrounds and circumstances. A major achievement has been the opening of Grade 0 (one year of pre-school) classrooms in 30 public schools in the West Bank and 14 in Gaza aiming to improve the development and learning of more than 1,000 children (50 per cent girls). Forty-four Early Childhood Development teachers (all female) have been trained in these pilot schools, along with Grade 1 teachers to facilitate the transition to primary education. In addition, training and awareness sessions on inclusive education in Gaza reached 603 university students (369 female) and 825 teachers (518 female).

24. In the West Bank, UNICEF and partners supported safe access to schools, providing protective accompaniment to schoolchildren at 14 Israeli military checkpoints and gates for safer commutes to school. This has benefitted 3,568 children (29 per cent girls) and 304 teachers. In Gaza, UNICEF, with the Ministry of Education and partners, supported the reopening of schools to ensure that 230,000 schoolchildren (52 per cent girls) return to school after the hostilities, including support for the cleaning and disinfection of 27 Government schools that were used as collective shelters during the conflict, as well as training about 12,000 schoolteachers and administrators on psychosocial support, a policy of non-violence in schools and identification of traumatized children and referrals. Along with partners, UNICEF implemented after-school activities that benefitted 14,000 adolescents (50 per cent girls) with creative learning, life skills and recreational activities. The gender-sensitive after-school activities aimed to increase leadership skills and the participation of girls.

25. Food assistance continued to play an important role in improving learning environments. WFP reached 140,014 children (50 per cent girls) through its food assistance in schools in the West Bank and Gaza. UN-Women maintained the

---

<sup>16</sup> FAO, UNDP, UNFPA, UNESCO, UNICEF, UNRWA, UNSCO, WFP and WHO.

“Women-Run School Canteens” programme in the West Bank providing access to healthy and nutritious food for 123,809 schoolchildren (50 per cent girls). Through extracurricular activities, the programme also raised awareness of schoolchildren, teachers, staff and parents on the effects of good nutrition on health.

26. UNESCO continued to support the training of 83 young female journalists on the use of social media and gender-sensitive reporting. In addition, specialized workshops were organized on women journalists’ rights, media ethics and the role of women journalists in promoting reconciliation. Psychosocial counselling is being provided to 30 female journalists from Gaza and the West Bank.

B. Health

27. The United Nations continued to build on good practice and results reported in the previous year to improve the access to and quality of health services, including maternal and reproductive health care. UNRWA remained a major provider of basic health-care services in the West Bank and Gaza, operating a range of care facilities, as well as mobile clinic teams and employing over 2,000 staff. From October 2013 to June 2014, UNRWA provided antenatal care to over 30,000 Palestine refugee women in the West Bank, which is more than double the number of women served last year. A total of 11,258 Palestine refugee women (68.6 per cent) were referred to secondary or tertiary care.

28. UNFPA continued to support a national programme of family planning and advanced the coverage of its services within Ministry of Health clinics and through civil society organizations. UNFPA also maintained support for a maternal mortality surveillance programme. In addition, UNFPA supported the integration of gender-based violence services into the national health system to detect, treat and refer survivors of gender-based violence and 1,200 health service providers were trained on gender-based violence response. During the hostilities in Gaza, UNFPA supported five maternities in Gaza with medical supplies and essential drugs and reached 4,000 displaced women with dignity kits, reproductive health services and psychosocial support. In addition, UNFPA reached 120,000 displaced young people with recreational activities and psychosocial support.

29. United Nations entities continued to provide a range of psychosocial services and support initiatives to improve the quality of mental health services. The UNRWA Emergency Community Mental Health Programme paid particular attention to Bedouin Palestine refugee children and women living in Area C and the Seam Zone in the provision of counselling and psychosocial support. During the reporting period, 2,735 women and girls (56 per cent) participated in psychosocial group activities. UNRWA also implemented community awareness and behavioural change programmes, including community-based family protection services integrated in the primary health-care centres, to address gender-based violence, child protection and sexual and reproductive health rights. Through the Family and Child Protection Programme, UNRWA aims to protect vulnerable groups in Palestine refugee camps, children, youth, women, the elderly and people with special needs from all forms of abuse, neglect and discrimination. Through WHO support, 117 mental health professionals (42 per cent female) received specialized training in child and adolescent mental health, family therapy that addressed gender-based violence, recovery, and cognitive behavioural therapy.

30. In response to the escalation of violence in Gaza, UNICEF provided drugs and medical consumable items for use in pediatric hospitals and primary health centres in the Gaza Strip benefiting at least 30,000 children (50 per cent girls). In addition, UNICEF-led awareness-raising activities on communicable diseases that reached 3,998 women (47 per cent of the total), 2,935 children (50 per cent girls). More than 23,475 lactating mothers in Gaza benefited from breastfeeding counselling, including 6,202 women during the conflict in Gaza.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

31. Within its development programming, United Nations entities continued to prioritize initiatives to promote women's economic empowerment and improve food security and livelihoods.

32. Microfinance support remained a source of short-term poverty alleviation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. In the West Bank, the UNRWA Microfinance Programme provided 2,776 loans to Palestinian refugee women (36 per cent of total loans) amounting to $3 million (28 per cent of total loans). To promote the economic empowerment of women, UNRWA introduced a microfinance programme that targets women only with home-based income generating projects or activities.

33. UNDP, through its Productive Families and Economic Empowerment Programme, provided support to nearly 4,000 women entrepreneurs and female-headed households in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to secure sustainable income and employment. As a result, 37 per cent of the targeted beneficiary families were lifted out of poverty and 79 per cent improved their average monthly income by 64 per cent. Moreover, UNDP interventions contributed to creating more than 5,000 paid and sustainable new job opportunities for women leading to a substantive increase in family incomes. Female entrepreneurs and business owners' access to regional and international markets was improved. Through the Deprived Families Economic Empowerment Programme, UNDP supported comprehensive training and grant schemes, including business development services, in support of the empowerment of poor households, including female-headed households. UNDP also supported the establishment of a national committee to review trade agreements and cooperation frameworks.

34. UNESCO and partners rehabilitated buildings in four Palestinian villages to be used as centres for women's associations. These centres will provide services for around 150 women. Through women's engagement in community activities, UNESCO raised awareness of cultural heritage preservation and its role as a tool for socioeconomic development mainly through cultural tourism. UN-Habitat implemented a housing and income-generating project for underprivileged women in Hebron city where 100 housing units were developed. A technical and vocational training centre for marginalized women has also been established where small-scale economic activities and cooperatives were initiated.

35. Various initiatives sought to build women's skills and capacity to produce and market various products. UN-Women provided training for a total of 70 women beneficiaries in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip on designing and producing quality marketable Palestinian handicrafts and products. Additionally, two training manuals were developed; one on the marketing of women-produced cultural products and the other on gender-sensitive agro-biodiversity. Supported by FAO and UNDP, the national first initiative, aimed to promote and market high quality cultural and agricultural products of 28 women's associations locally and globally.

36. UNCTAD implemented a project entitled "Capacity development for facilitating Palestinian trade", which aimed to increase the representation of women in the Palestinian Shipper's Council staff (three out of seven employees are women) and the Council Board of Directors (two out of 13 Board members are women) as part of capacity development initiatives for facilitating Palestinian trade. The project reached approximately 220 women. It also supported 173 women through workshops and trainings on the trade and supply chain management.

37. ILO continued to support the promotion and development of women-only cooperatives. Over the past two years, ILO has been providing technical support to the General Directorate of Cooperatives at the Ministry of Labour. More recently, ILO worked closely with the Directorate in identifying new non-traditional economic sectors for cooperative development for women and building the capacity of cooperative counsellors at the Ministry of Labour to provide better advisory services and counselling to women-only cooperatives.

38. UN-Women continued to strengthen sustainability and financial autonomy of community-based women centres and secure greater livelihood and economic security for women in marginalized communities through the Women-run School Canteen Programme, which is now well-established across all 13 governorates of the West Bank. As at September 2014, 53 community-based organizations were involved in the programme, of which 18 centres were making profits and had almost achieved financial independence. The programme created part-time employment opportunities and a secure monthly income for around 625 women.

39. FAO, WFP, UNDP and UNRWA continued interventions aimed at improving food security, with a particular focus on women. FAO aimed to increase income generation, stabilize agricultural capacities and improve food security for vulnerable households in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, providing agriculture inputs such as small animal husbandry to more than 1,160 women. WFP contributed to women's empowerment through its nutrition awareness activities in the Gaza Strip. The trainings, which reached 1,000 women, aim to raise awareness on the nutritional impacts of food and support women's key role in guaranteeing food security for the entire household and their role in the management of food resources and meal preparation. Strengthened informal women's networks were created as a by-product of the trainings supporting women's resilience by providing a peer support group beyond close relatives.

40. UNDP contributed to enhancing women's access to resources and food security through the development of irrigation systems and water resources in the West Bank; 2,820 women benefited from upgrades in the land irrigation network, which effectively resulted in a marked increase of cultivated land of water storage. UNRWA supported 2,761 refugee households that joined the UNRWA food voucher programme, of which 8,543 (49 per cent of the total) were female beneficiaries. UNRWA also supported the Cash-for-Work Programme, with 3,665 (48 per cent of total) female beneficiaries, and provided cash-for-work opportunities.

41. During the Gaza hostilities, UNRWA and WFP undertook an exceptional food distribution scheme, providing food assistance to families that usually do not receive food assistance from WFP, reaching an estimated 620,000 beneficiaries, of which 305,014 were female.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

42. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives designed to improve women's access to justice and enhance the capacity of institutions and personnel to prevent and respond to violence against women. Priority for activities continued to be placed on supporting the implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019).

43. The UNDP Access to Justice and Rule of Law Programme supported the establishment of gender units across the justice and security sectors and the promotion of gender-sensitive laws and policies. More specifically, as part of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women, it developed the capacity of the Gender Legislative Committee to review and improve draft laws, bylaws and amendments from a gender perspective. Through Birzeit University, an accredited diploma programme was provided for senior Palestinian Civil Police on public administration and gender mainstreaming. It also supported the establishment of a security sector gender taskforce under the auspice of the Ministry of the Interior comprised of seven Palestinian security agencies, which adopted recommendations to institutionalize and mainstream a gender perspective into all policies, plans and programmes. The Security Sector Gender Task Force fed into the development of the Security Sector Strategic Plan (2014-2016), which presents concrete steps to strengthen and develop tools and policies to incorporate gender into the security establishment.

44. Through this programme, UNDP provided legal aid services, including legal representation, counselling and information, to almost 22,000 women in 2013, in particular with regard to family breakdown issues and disputes frequently linked to family violence, including applications by women for divorce, separation, custody, maintenance and, alimony and inheritance issues. UNDP also supported a study on public perceptions of family law reform in collaboration with the Birzeit University Institute of Women's Studies, to help inform future family law reform efforts. In Gaza, the Awn Network of civil society legal aid providers established a gender justice council to provide legal aid services to female inmates and to campaign on legal policy issues in support of women's human rights. One such successful campaign resulted in a decision of the de facto authorities to remove the stigmatized labelling of women as "divorcees" from identification cards. In the West Bank, support provided to the Palestinian Maintenance Fund to develop institutional relations with other government bodies enabled the Fund to increase its retrieval rate and provide reliable monthly alimony payments to more of the most marginalized women and children in the West Bank.

45. A number of United Nations entities supported activities aimed at raising the awareness of violence against women, as well as expanding support services. During the reporting period, 311 UNRWA staff members and nearly 1,000 community group members were trained on gender-based violence, women's rights and sexual and reproductive health and rights in the West Bank. From October 2013 to June 2014, 166 (87 per cent women and girls) gender-based violence survivors were identified and accessed services, including counselling. In response to the Gaza crisis, UNRWA focused its attention on the protection of women and girls in the context of the unprecedented number of internally displaced persons in its temporary shelters. This included providing 24-hour services for victims of any forms of violence, sensitizing shelter staff and organizing awareness-raising campaigns for men and women about the risks of sexual and gender-based violence, in addition to establishing multipurpose rooms designated for women and adolescent girls in shelters. In 2014, OHCHR carried out three seminars with local leaders focusing on women's human rights in three different locations of the Gaza Strip and urged them to uphold the rights of women in their communities. In May and June 2014 OHCHR, in collaboration with the Gaza Bar Association and the NGO partners, organized full-day workshops for Gaza lawyers on human rights principles, including sessions on gender-based violence.

46. Based on the results of the 2012 Gender Based Violence Survey,<sup>17</sup> ILO has partnered with Birzeit University in the West Bank to promote a more gender-sensitive university environment. In June 2014, ILO conducted a training-of-trainers for the staff of the Institute of Women's Studies at Birzeit University on the participatory gender audit methodology with the aim of increasing the role of the Institute in advocating for equal opportunities and treatment of women in the university while also developing capacities to identify and intervene on issues related to gender-based unfair treatment in the workplace.

47. UNFPA is currently supporting the establishment of a mechanism to collect data on gender-based violence, and the development of a national referral system to strengthen multisectoral services and support to gender-based violence survivors in cooperation with the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Women's Affairs, the Palestinian Civil Police and the Ministry of Justice.

48. Through its Strengthening Women's Access to Justice Programme, UN-Women built the capacity of a core group of lawyers in the area of prosecution on violence against women. The Palestinian Attorney-General appointed 15 specialized lawyers (9 men and 6 women) to provide legal aid and representation to women victims of violence, in addition to the development of standard operating procedures for the prosecution of cases involving violence against women. UN-Women continued to provide technical support to the Palestinian Bar Association, where a specialized training on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and international standards of handling and litigating violence against women was organized for about 20 lawyers. The lawyers, through the Palestinian Bar Association, continued to legally support cases of violence against women for female inmates inside the correction and rehabilitation centres and sheltered women. Furthermore, UN-Women provided training for Palestinian Civil Police officers within the Family Protection Unit to build their capacity on standard operating procedures for responding to violence against women with a view to safeguarding rights and due process.

49. UNODC continued to support and strengthen the capacity of the Palestinian Ministries of Justice and the Interior and the Palestinian Civilian Police to manage, administer, deliver and expand forensic services in accordance with international standards, including with regard to the investigation of gender-based violence cases.

---

<sup>17</sup> International Labour Organization, Gender-based Violence in the Workplace: An overview from the occupied Palestinian territory-Policy Brief (2012).

Seven Palestinian doctors, undergoing a four-year specialized training programme in forensic medicine in Amman, completed their first year of training. A “best practice” manual on sexual and gender-based violence examination for forensic practitioners and criminal justice system stakeholders was developed, together with a training programme in forensic nursing, and a forensic laboratory facility was established.

50. In the second half of 2014, UNDP and UN-Women commenced implementation of a new comprehensive joint rule of law, justice and security programme in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip seeking to systemize gender interventions across all rule of law components and develop dedicated and specialized gender capacities to deal with cases of violence against women.

E. Power and decision-making

51. During the reporting period, UN-Women supported the creation of a national women’s political participation caucus, which functions as an advocacy and lobbying body to support women’s political participation and access to decision-making spheres. The caucus group is comprised of 100 PLO political party representatives, women’s advocates, youth advocates and civil society organizations representatives in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The caucus members received trainings on gender concepts, the Palestinian women’s bill of rights, the personal status law, the Penal Code, the Labour Law, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and Security Council resolution 1325 (2000). Since its establishment,<sup>18</sup> the caucus has conducted a review of political parties’ bylaws from a gender perspective. At the local level, UN-Women supported the creation of 10 committees in rural areas of the West Bank to advocate for the participation of women in political and public life. UN-Women also supported the establishment of the Constitution Shadow Committee, comprised of 24 young women and five young men seeking to influence the ongoing Palestinian constitution-making process in favour of a gender-sensitive Constitution.

52. UNDP continued to support the Palestinian Initiative for Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy, which is designed to enhance the capacities of 50 young Palestinian female leaders across the occupied Palestinian territory, including strengthening their networks and lobbying skills for formulation of gender-responsive policies and regulations to increase women’s political participation and representation.

F. Institutional development

53. UN-Women continued to provide technical assistance and institutional support to the Ministry of Women’s Affairs, including in the follow-up to the Cross Sectoral National Gender Strategy (2014-2016), which was endorsed by the Cabinet in April 2014, and in the review of the Palestinian National Development Plan 2014-2016 and related sectoral strategies, including the labour sector strategy the local governance sector strategy, and the education sector strategy (2014-2016), from a gender perspective. In partnership with ILO, UN-Women supported the National Committee for Women’s Employment in developing its 2015-2017 Action Plan, which focuses on increasing women's participation in the labour force and protecting their rights, with a special focus on the agriculture and the information technology sectors. As part of its Financing for Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment programme, UN-Women laid the ground for developing the capacity of national stakeholders in gender responsive budgeting and gender responsive planning. Technical support to line ministries continued on gender responsive planning, with more than 91 Government officials members trained during the latest government planning cycle for 2014-2016. UN-Women also supported the development of the Gender Charter for the Local Aid Coordination Structure, with the aim of developing a common vision and values with respect to dealing with gender issues within the aid coordination structure. ESCWA, in collaboration with the Ministry of Women's Affairs, carried out a set of workshops to enhance the skills of relevant national staff on gender-related issues.

---

<sup>18</sup> Established in the last quarter of 2013.

54. Following a series of consultations with its tripartite constituents in 2013, ILO developed a Decent Work Programme for the period 2013-2016 that addresses key deficits in the labour market and promotes workers' rights. The Programme supports entrepreneurship and skills development for male and female youth, as well as cooperatives' development. ILO also conducted a labour review that draws on the earlier gender legal review undertaken by the National Committee for Women's Employment, and a rapid assessment of the labour inspection system carried out previously by ILO. The findings of the review, including on barriers to women's participation in the labour market, were incorporated into a policy paper with clear recommendations including a maternity benefit in the social security law currently being developed and a provision in the Palestinian Labour Law for defining and preventing harassment in the workplace.

55. UNDP supported the Ministry of Social Affairs to integrate women's economic empowerment into the National Social Protection Strategy. The Palestine Trade Center, through UNDP support, integrated gender perspectives into its results-based management system, administrative and personnel manual, the financial manual and the newly developed Code of Ethics and launched a database on women-owned businesses.

56. During the reporting period, WHO conducted five capacity development workshops in the area of social determinants of health for 100 Ministry of Health mid-level managers from various regions in the West Bank, introducing concepts and methods for analysing and addressing social determinants of women's and men's health.

57. United Nations entities undertook various initiatives to assess and ensure that the different needs of women and girls are taken into account in humanitarian action. UN-Women and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs organized workshops with women's organizations in Gaza to identify avenues and opportunities for their participation in humanitarian coordination mechanisms. The workshops brought the knowledge and experiences of women's organizations to address gaps in the humanitarian response in the 2015 cycle and beyond, notably, validating the analysis carried out by a Humanitarian Gender Adviser on gender-specific priorities to be reflected in the 2015 humanitarian appeals process. To inform the humanitarian response, UN-Women completed field research on the situation of women and girls in the Access Restricted Area in the Gaza Strip, analysing the impact of border conflict on women's and girls' protection, livelihood and access to services within the framework of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000).

58. UNESCO, through the Palestinian Women's Research and Documentation Centre, supported the strengthening of capacities related to policy-oriented research on gender equality: 48 professionals (40 female and 8 male) from governmental, semi-governmental and non-governmental research and gender departments have completed a 96-hour capacity development programme. UNESCO also organized additional training sessions on gender-sensitive planning for 22 members of the Gender Advisory Committee of the Palestinian Authority's Security Sector.

59. ESCWA is supporting the development of a national Gender Statistics Framework for Palestine with gender-sensitive and sex-disaggregated indicators that will constitute a tool for policymakers to monitor progress against global and national commitments on gender equality and the empowerment of women.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

60. The reporting period was marked by a series of alarming developments, including a steep escalation of tension and violence between Gaza and Israel and a suspension of the direct final status negotiations. The large military operation launched by the Israeli army from 8 July to 26 August 2014 in the Gaza Strip resulted in a humanitarian emergency with an unprecedented scale of destruction, devastation and displacement, which further heightened vulnerability and instability. Women, girls, boys and men are affected differently by the crisis and greater involvement of all groups in the design and planning of humanitarian recovery and relief programmes needs to be undertaken. It is essential to ensure women's participation across all programming. In addition, male and female youth, who constitute the majority of the Gaza population, need to be given a voice in identifying their particular needs and priorities within relief and recovery planning and implementation.

61. Many observations from previous reports still stand. Restrictions on movement and access, increased settlement expansion and settler violence, demolitions of Palestinian infrastructure and displacement, the fragmentation of the territory and the closure of the occupied Palestinian territory, particularly the Gaza Strip, continue to have a negative gender differentiated impact on the lives of Palestinian women and their families. The volatility of the context poses formidable obstacles to development in the State of Palestine. As the report shows, progress on development indicators remains fragile and prone to regression, including as it relates to women's rights. The significant operational challenges on the work on the United Nations and its partners pose serious barriers to addressing both immediate and longer-term needs.

62. High levels of unemployment and poverty persist, and many Palestinian women and girls still face significant obstacles in accessing basic services, health care, psychosocial support, water and sanitation, justice institutions and economic opportunities. Signs of increased food insecurity levels, compromised quality of educational environments and services and the growing challenges faced by women in the labour market are all issues demanding greater attention and a more gender-sensitive response in the coming year. The critical situations with regard to water, sanitation and hygiene, as well as energy, in particular in Gaza following the recent conflict, are other major concerns that must be addressed with urgency by all relevant stakeholders.

63. Despite stronger normative frameworks in place, violence against women remains a serious concern. Sustained efforts and investments are needed to improve and expand services and access to justice for victims. As noted in previous reports and as was evident during the reporting period, insecurity and poverty can exacerbate gender-based discrimination and abuse, including in the workplace, and lead to elevated levels of violence against women in both the public and private spheres. The prevention of all forms of violence and discrimination against women and girls must be at the forefront of efforts in the coming year.

64. Efforts made by the State of Palestine with the support of the United Nations to strengthen policy and implementation frameworks and build institutional capacity to address violence against women and promote gender equality and women's empowerment over the past two years are laudable. These include the development and endorsement of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019) and the Cross Sectoral National Gender Strategy (2014-2016), as well as the inclusion of commitments to gender equality in the United Nations Development Assistance Framework for Palestine and the new Palestinian National Development Plan. Strong political commitment at the highest levels and across line ministries, in addition to technical and financial support to the Ministry of Women's Affairs and women's civil society organizations, will be required for their effective implementation. The accession to international treaties and conventions, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, brings new obligations requiring effective accountability and monitoring systems. The United Nations stands ready to assist in the implementation and monitoring of these obligations.

65. Progress has been made in improving systems for gender-sensitive data collection and analysis. Still, continued support is needed to further build capacity to collect and analyse sex- and age-disaggregated data on the full range of issues that have an impact on the lives of Palestinians. As stressed in previous reports, such analysis and data must form an integral part of all policymaking, planning and programming initiatives and inform reporting and briefings by the United Nations system to relevant intergovernmental bodies.

66. The United Nations will continue working towards the realization of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East. The engagement of Palestinian and Israeli women in the peace process and talks must be supported in accordance with Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000) and 2122 (2013) on women, peace and security. Building on promising initiatives under way that are supported by UN-Women, UNDP and others, stronger action is needed by all actors to increase women's participation and leadership at all levels of decision-making and to support women in elected and appointed posts. The good practice of direct dialogue between women's civil society organizations and senior representatives of the United Nations entities should be maintained.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
22 December 2015

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Sixtieth session

14-24 March 2016

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report, submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2015/13, highlights the situation of Palestinian women for the period from 1 October 2014 to 30 September 2015 and provides an overview of the assistance provided by the entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2016/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2015/13 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation and about the critical socioeconomic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip. The Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2015/5), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixtieth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 October 2014 to 30 September 2015 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women based on information from the United Nations entities and individual experts that monitor the situation of Palestinians in the State of Palestine.<sup>1</sup>

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women. The present report includes contributions from the following United Nations entities: ESCWA, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the International Trade Centre (ITC), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO). It complements other reports on the living and socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people (see A/70/76-E/2015/57, A/70/354-S/2015/677, A/70/82-E/2015/13 and A/70/13), as well as the report of the independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1 (A/HRC/29/52).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

4. The reporting period began shortly after an open-ended ceasefire was agreed on 26 August 2014 between Israel and Palestinian militant groups, ending the 51-day conflict in Gaza, which had left an unprecedented level of destruction and despair in the Gaza Strip and exacerbated an already dire humanitarian situation. At the donor conference held on 12 October 2014, in Cairo, the international community pledged $3.5 billion for the reconstruction needs of Gaza. As at 31 August 2015, only 35 per cent of pledges targeting the reconstruction needs of Gaza had been fulfilled.<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> In accordance with the report of the Secretary-General on the status of Palestine in the United Nations dated 8 March 2013 (A/67/738), the designation "State of Palestine" is now used in all documents of the United Nations, notwithstanding the use in parallel of the term used in previous reports, "Occupied Palestinian Territory".

5. The United Nations brokered an agreement between the Government of Israel and the Government of Palestine to facilitate the entry of dual-use material, such as aggregate, steel bar and cement, into Gaza for the reconstruction of housing, water networks and schools, among other major infrastructure projects. The temporary Gaza Reconstruction Mechanism has, to date, enabled over 96,000 families to procure construction materials for repairing their homes. In addition, almost 2,300 families of the 19,000 whose homes had been severely or completely destroyed have been cleared to purchase material through the mechanism.<sup>3</sup> However, the scale of reconstruction remains far short of satisfying the tremendous need in Gaza.

6. Challenges remain with respect to the two-State solution and meaningful negotiations. Nevertheless, over the last three months of the reporting period, the Middle East Quartet envoys (representing the European Union, the United Nations, the Russian Federation and the United States of America) have held active and direct consultations with Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, the League of Arab States, the Gulf Cooperation Council and key international partners on how to preserve the two-State solution and whether conditions can be established for the parties to return to meaningful negotiations.

7. The eight-year long closure of the Gaza Strip has had a devastating effect on Palestinians living in Gaza. Challenges affecting women, in particular, include the prevalence of gender-based violence and limited access to water, housing, land and property, employment opportunities, higher education and health care, including prenatal and neonatal health care.<sup>4</sup> Psychosocial distress levels, which were already high among the Gaza population, have worsened significantly as a result of the conflict and will require specialized support, specifically for children, adolescent girls and women.

8. Refugee camps in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are among the most densely populated urban environments in the world and the conditions in these camps have deteriorated over decades, in both the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. Specifically for women and girls, this overcrowding limits their mobility, privacy and access to recreational spaces. Overcrowded living conditions and a lack of privacy cause psychological distress among camp residents and strain family and social relations. Residents frequently note that gender-based violence, including domestic violence, is a manifestation of such stress, combined with the strain caused by the unstable political and security situation and discriminatory gender stereotypes and norms.<sup>4</sup>

9. The Israeli Government has come under increasing pressure from settler groups to resume the planning and tendering of settlements, which have been in a

---

<sup>2</sup> World Bank, "Reconstructing Gaza: Donor Pledges" (September 2015), available at: www.worldbank.org/en/programs/rebuilding-gaza-donor-pledges#1.

<sup>3</sup> Data available at: <http://grm.report/#/>.

<sup>4</sup> UNFPA and The Culture and Free Thought Association, "Protection in the Windward: Conditions and Rights of Internally Displaced Girls and Women during the Latest Israeli Military Operation on the Gaza Strip" (October 2014).

lull since the fall of 2014. In July 2015, following the demolition of two buildings in the settlement of Beit El, the Government announced the construction of 300 new residential units there, as well as around 500 more in East Jerusalem settlements. In addition, a spike in demolitions of Palestinian villages in Area C of the West Bank<sup>5</sup> was recorded in August. The Israeli authorities continued to promote plans for the relocation of Palestinian Bedouin communities in Area C, which if implemented, may result in their forcible transfer.

10. The reporting period was marked by lower levels of violence than the previous period, resulting in fewer civilian deaths and injuries, although there was an increase in casualties among Israeli civilians. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, in the West Bank, between October 2014 and September 2015, 31 Palestinians (23 men, 1 woman and 7 boys) were killed and 3,248 Palestinians (2,544 men, 64 women, 621 boys and 19 girls) were injured by the Israel Defense Forces, while four Palestinians (two men, one woman and one child) were killed and 98 Palestinians (65 men, 9 women, 17 boys and 7 girls) were injured by Israeli settlers. Eight Israelis (four men, two women, one boy and one girl), mostly settlers, were killed by Palestinians, and another 127 Israelis (97 men, 17 women, 8 boys and 5 girls) were injured in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Another five Israeli men and two Palestinian men were also killed in one incident in West Jerusalem. In the Gaza Strip, four Palestinians were killed (three men and one boy), and 96 Palestinians were injured (80 men and 16 boys).<sup>6</sup>

11. During the reporting period, there was a decline in the total registered number of search operations, fatalities, injuries and arrests and detentions in the refugee camps in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Boys and young men are more likely than women and girls to be subject to violence during operations of the Israeli security forces, as well as during arrest and detention.<sup>7</sup> However, women in detention face gender-specific challenges, including inadequate access to medical care, risks associated with pregnancy and giving birth in prison, and sexual harassment. After their release from detention, women are particularly vulnerable to stigma and marginalization from their communities.<sup>8</sup>

12. Between October 2014 and July 2015, UNRWA provided emergency support to 766 families in the West Bank whose homes had been demolished or damaged by the Israeli security forces in the context of law enforcement and search operations.<sup>9</sup> Of the families affected, 214 (34 per cent) were female-headed households. With regard to the demolition of homes, of the 41 families that had their homes

<sup>5</sup> Following the 1993 Oslo Accords and the 1995 interim Agreements between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the West Bank was divided into three zones, Areas A, B and C. Extensive responsibility was delegated by Israel to the Palestinian Authority in Areas A and B. Area C remained under full authority of Israel.

<sup>6</sup> According to the Protection of Civilians database of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

<sup>7</sup> There were 499 search operations during the reporting period, compared to 680 search operations in the previous reporting period; 7 fatalities in the reporting period compared to 15 fatalities in the previous; 288 injuries in the reporting period compared to 716 in the previous; and 479 detentions in the reporting period compared to 560 in the previous. Input from the West Bank Field Office of UNRWA to the present report.

<sup>8</sup> UN-Women, "Access Denied: Palestinian Women's Access to Justice in the West Bank of the Occupied Palestinian Territory: Where are women? Where is women's accessibility to "justice"? Are there possibilities for justice in the context of military occupation?" (UN-Women office in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2014).

<sup>9</sup> Input from the West Bank Field Office of UNRWA to the present report.

demolished, 13 were female-headed households. Of those 41 affected families, 12 women were referred to the women's programme run by UNRWA and 23 women were referred to the mental health support programme.

13. Several factors continue to present significant barriers to freedom of movement and access to livelihoods for Palestinians, with differing impacts on women and men: the ongoing Israeli occupation of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the closure of the Gaza Strip and the differential status that applies to Palestinian women and men in different areas. The population of 1.8 million Palestinians in the Gaza Strip remains effectively isolated from the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, by the continuing closure of Gaza by Israel. In addition, access to East Jerusalem remains limited for Palestinian residents from the remainder of the West Bank. Physical and administrative restrictions continue to impede humanitarian access to some of the most vulnerable communities in Area C, particularly those in the firing zones and those located behind the separation barrier. However, regulations for the movement of Palestinians from the West Bank to Israel were relaxed during the reporting period, and the number of permits issued for Palestinians employed in Israel reached 60,150.<sup>10</sup>

14. According to data collected by UN-Women and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, it is estimated that around 700 women were widowed as a result of the conflict in Gaza in 2014. Female-headed households in Gaza face particular challenges in accessing humanitarian assistance and inherited assets, owing to social restrictions. As primary caregivers, they also disproportionately experience the long-term impact of damaged infrastructure and reduced services, including on health-care, education and social protection services. The traditional division of roles between women and men in Gaza renders many newly widowed women unprepared to deal with challenges outside the home. Due to the lack of economic opportunities for women, few widows are able to provide for their families when the male head-of-household dies. Widowed women are frequently incorporated, along with their children, into the households of their parents or in-laws. In both cases, male kin and in-laws can block their direct access to benefits or entitlements, and women have no guarantees for control over any benefits or entitlements they receive.

15. The Palestinian labour force grew by 8.6 per cent in 2014, to reach over 1.25 million.<sup>11</sup> Although the female labour force participation rate grew from 17.3 per cent in 2013 to 19.4 per cent in 2014, it remains extremely low by both global and regional standards. The gender gap in labour force participation is significant, at 71.5 per cent for men, compared to 19.4 per cent for women. The most common areas for women's employment are the services sector (where 57 per cent of working women are employed) and "unskilled" agriculture work (20 per cent of working women),<sup>12</sup> both of which are highly susceptible to outside economic pressures. In addition, there is a gender gap in the median daily wage in the West

---

<sup>10</sup> Information provided by the Gisha Legal Center for Freedom of Movement, 2015.

<sup>11</sup> International Labour Organization, "The situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories", appendix, para. 33 (2014).

<sup>12</sup> Ibid., para. 35. The remainder of women are employed in commerce, restaurants and hotels (10.3 per cent of women); manufacturing, mining and quarrying (9.8 per cent of women); transport, storage and communication (1.3 per cent of women); and construction (0.7 per cent of women).

Bank and Gaza Strip; in 2014, women's median daily wage was only 76 per cent that of men.<sup>13</sup>

16. Access to essential health care remains limited, and shortages of drugs and medical disposables are frequent in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The recent conflict in and continued closure of Gaza has left health-care centres damaged, without adequate medical equipment and stock. In particular, the conflict in Gaza in 2014 resulted in a serious deterioration of family planning services, which has affected the health-care system's capacity to provide women with safe and reliable reproductive health services.<sup>14</sup> According to UNFPA, the maternal mortality ratio for 2014 for the State of Palestine was 30.97 per 100,000 live births, but UN-Women and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs have warned that this ratio is now at risk of increase owing to the inaccessibility of reproductive health care in Gaza.<sup>14</sup>

17. Access to safe, sufficient and affordable water also continues to pose a challenge for Palestinians in Gaza and the West Bank, which affects women and girls in particular. In Gaza, the damage to water and wastewater networks caused by the conflict in 2014 has further exacerbated the situation. The unreliability and shortage of electricity and fuel further hamper the pumping and distribution of water to the population, as electricity is essential for the functioning of water pumps that extract and distribute water to households. Over 70 per cent of households in Gaza receive between 6 and 8 hours of piped water once every 2 to 4 days, and large areas of Gaza experience 12 to 16 hours of electricity blackouts every day.<sup>14</sup> In the West Bank, even though 96 per cent of the total Palestinian population is connected to water networks, reliability and quality remain serious issues of concern.<sup>15</sup> According to UNICEF, Palestinian communities in Area C of the West Bank are the worst affected by water scarcity, where roughly half the population is estimated to be without a water network connection, and the Palestinian Government has limited ability to provide access to water.

18. Limited household access to water and electricity has significant implications for women's and girls' burden of care, health, time spent collecting resources and ability to generate income in Gaza and the West Bank, given the strict division of labour between women and men within households. Water and sanitation issues also affect girls' enrolment and protection needs in schools. Prior to the 2014 conflict, a total of 300,000 students throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory had poor water, sanitation and hygiene facilities at school. Assessments conducted after the conflict indicated that at least 189 public schools were damaged, 26 of which were seriously damaged, and 83 out of 155 UNRWA school buildings incurred damage, although 90 per cent of those schools were repaired by the end of the reporting period.

19. The net enrolment rate for pre-primary education in the State of Palestine in 2013 was 40.6, with a gender parity index of 0.99. The adjusted net enrolment rate for primary education in the same year was 92.36, with a gender parity index of 1.01. In secondary education, the net enrolment rate was 80.35, with a gender

---

<sup>13</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, press release dated 5 March 2015, available from http://pcbs.gov.ps/portals/\_pcbs/PressRelease/WomenDy2015E.pdf.

<sup>14</sup> UN-Women and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Needs of women and girls in humanitarian action in Gaza — Gender alert for the 2016 response plan" (August 2015).

<sup>15</sup> Palestinian Water Authority, "Annual Water Status Report" (2014).

parity index of 1.09.<sup>16</sup> High rates of educational enrolment do not necessarily mean high completion rates, nor do they capture concerns about the quality of education. Boys are more likely to drop out at both the secondary and tertiary levels; nevertheless, girls' higher educational achievements have not translated into improved employment experience.

20. While women have continued to participate in a range of roles in the political realm, they remain underrepresented in formal decision-making bodies and processes. As of September 2015, women held 3 of 17 ministerial level posts (16.6 per cent) in the new Palestinian Government of national consensus, the same number and percentage as in the previous reporting period. During the reporting period, the Palestinian Central Council of the Palestinian Liberation Organization announced that it would adopt a 30 per cent quota for women's representation in State of Palestine institutions, in response to advocacy and lobbying by the General Union of Palestinian Women.

21. In June 2015, the Ministry of Women's Affairs produced a national strategy on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security, with support from UNFPA and UN-Women. The strategy has a particular focus on preventing and protecting women from violations of their human rights in relation to domestic, workplace and community-based violence, and improving gender equality and women's participation in education, the labour market and decision-making.

22. The rule of law remains a significant issue across the State of Palestine. Palestinian women face specific challenges in accessing justice as a result of laws that discriminate on the basis of sex (notably in respect to inheritance and other personal status issues); women's limited knowledge of their rights and procedures; economic dependency; and social pressures and stigma.<sup>8</sup> Even in cases where women manage to access justice services, they often face service providers who lack professional knowledge in dealing specifically with women and girl victims of violence, and who continue to interpret outdated laws pertaining to the Penal Code and personal status law in ways that infringe on women's human rights. The result is a high level of underreporting of gender-based violence and attrition of those cases that are brought forward. Further, when women access the justice system and obtain judgements in their favour, a lack of enforcement means that justice remains out of reach.

23. Gender-based violence continues to be a key protection concern for women in the State of Palestine, and the situation is particularly acute in the Gaza Strip. A 2011 survey showed that 51 per cent of women in Gaza had been victims of gender-based violence.<sup>17</sup> A rapid assessment by UNFPA conducted after the 2014 conflict revealed that the protracted crisis and related displacement, lack of privacy and lack of basic services had exacerbated people's sense of vulnerability, leading to violence against women.<sup>18</sup> Case studies as part of a 2015 situation analysis by UNFPA

<sup>16</sup> Data available from <http://data.uis.unesco.org/#>.

<sup>17</sup> For the State of Palestine, 37 per cent of women had been victims of gender-based violence. Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, survey on violence in Palestinian society (2011).

<sup>18</sup> UNFPA, WHO and the Palestinian Ministry of Health, "Victims in the shadows: Gaza post-crisis reproductive health assessment" (October 2014); UNFPA and The Culture and Free Thought Association, "Protection in the Windward: Conditions and Rights of Internally Displaced Girls and Women during the Latest Israeli Military Operation on the Gaza Strip" (October 2014), p. 9.

indicate that economic hardship, following the 2014 conflict in Gaza, has driven families to marry off their daughters early in order to improve the economic situation of the family. The rate of child marriage is higher in Gaza than in the West Bank; 28.6 per cent of women in the Gaza Strip aged 20-49 were married before the age of 18, compared to 21.4 per cent in the West Bank.<sup>19</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

24. An update on assistance provided by the United Nations system, coordinated by the United Nations country team, in cooperation with the State of Palestine, donors and civil society, to address the specific needs and priorities of women and girls in the following areas: education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development, is given in paragraphs 29-65 below. United Nations support to the Palestinian people is guided by key documents, including the United Nations Development Assistance Framework for the State of Palestine 2014-2016 (aligned with the Palestinian National Development Plan 2014-2016), and the 2015 strategic response plan for humanitarian programming. The information presented below is based on the contributions from United Nations entities to the present report, compiled by the United Nations country team.

A. Education and training

25. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote women's and girls' access to education and training and improve learning environments. During the academic year 2014-2015, UNRWA ran 252 schools in Gaza and 97 in the West Bank, with 290,977 pupils enrolled as at October 2014, of whom 53.4 per cent were girls. Gender equality and a quality education for boys and girls are at the centre of education reform by UNRWA, and special attention has been given, at UNRWA schools, to increasing awareness of gender-based violence. In addition to basic education, UNRWA provides technical and vocational education training. During the reporting period, 1,695 students, of whom 35.3 per cent were female, participated in such trainings. The Ramallah Women's Training Centre, with support from UNRWA, offers a co-educational technical vocational programme and female-only trade courses.

26. In order to ensure safer commutes to and from school, UNICEF and civil society partners provided protective accompaniment to schoolchildren at 14 military checkpoints and gates in the West Bank. This benefited 1,461 girls and 2,873 boys, as well as 333 teachers, 80 per cent of whom were women, throughout the 2014-2015 school year.

27. UNESCO continued to support the training of 265 young women journalists on gender-sensitive reporting, as well as with psychosocial counselling workshops and specialized training on social media.

28. Through the use of the participatory gender audit methodology developed by ILO, the Women's Studies Institute at Birzeit University has carried out a series of assessments, followed by awareness-raising initiatives among university students and staff, with the aim of introducing more gender-sensitive policies and procedures and creating an educational environment free from gender-based violence. In order to further promote gender equality, ILO provided technical support to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics for conducting a survey on pay equity that focuses on discrimination patterns in the education sector in the West Bank and Gaza.

<sup>19</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, UNICEF and UNFPA, "Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2014: Key Findings" (December 2014).

B. Health

29. The United Nations continued its efforts to build on good practice and results reported in the previous reporting period so as to improve the access to and quality of health-care services, including maternal and reproductive health care. UNRWA remained the major provider of basic health-care services for Palestinian refugees in the West Bank and Gaza, operating a range of care facilities and mobile clinic teams. The total number of medical consultations between October 2014 and September 2015 stood at 4,055,248 in Gaza, where 60 per cent of the patients were female, and 1,304,219 in the West Bank, where 59 per cent were female. Maternal and child health continues to be an essential element of UNRWA assistance. As part of that effort, there is a need to raise awareness of the importance of engaging men in the family planning process.

30. UNICEF has also continued to support the Ministry of Health and partners to provide lifesaving postnatal care. A total of 32 per cent of women with high-risk pregnancies in Gaza (5,500 women) benefited from postnatal home visits by skilled midwives and nurses in the first half of 2015. In addition, 26,000 women were counselled on nutrition and breastfeeding practices, and four hospitals and one maternity home in the West Bank were certified as “baby friendly”. With more than 100,000 people still displaced in Gaza, UNFPA supported mobile clinic services, reaching 7,000 displaced women with reproductive health-care services and education. Similar outreach activities provide for isolated West Bank communities in locations affected by the separation barrier and settler violence. UNFPA has also partnered with the Ministry of Health to empower midwives through specialized courses on delivery and neonatal care. In addition, WHO, through the Palestinian National Institute of Public Health, developed a mammogram registry information system and a harmonized reproductive health registry to improve data quality and to reduce maternal and infant mortality by facilitating the introduction of reproductive health registries for better governance, targeting, health surveillance and accountability of public health initiatives in reproductive health.

31. The community mental health programme run by UNRWA pays particular attention to the needs of refugee children and women in the provision of counselling and psychosocial support, and works through a number of channels, including health centres, community-based organizations and schools. During the reporting period, the community mental health programme provided counselling for 2,247 women in Gaza through UNRWA health centres. WHO also worked with primary and secondary health-care workers to provide mental health services of higher quality. A total of 117 mental health professionals (68 men and 49 women) received specialized training in child and adolescent mental health; family therapy, which addresses gender-based violence; and cognitive behavioural therapy. Training was delivered in 19 community mental health centres, 13 in the West Bank and 6 in Gaza, and in two psychiatric hospitals, one in the West Bank and one in Gaza.

32. WFP supported interactive training sessions for women in Gaza, on diet, hygiene, cooking, purchasing healthy food on a budget and caring for infants. Starting in November 2014, the husbands of women who had attended the training were also targeted through selected sessions, combining nutrition elements and psychosocial support. The training programme aimed to increase mutual understanding of women's empowerment and gender equality issues. The sessions, requested by women trainees, encouraged dialogue within communities and households, and promoted women's roles as agents of change. These interactive trainings also strengthened informal women's networks, facilitating their interaction outside the home and providing a peer support group beyond close relatives.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

33. Within their development programming, United Nations entities continued to prioritize initiatives to promote women's economic empowerment and improve food security and livelihoods.

34. Women's access to housing is key to their enjoyment of other human rights. During the reporting period, UNRWA introduced a policy in Gaza that requires both the head of household and their spouse(s) to sign a joint undertaking, indicating a joint right to benefit. Prior to this practice, the head of household was the only required signatory for the housing units.

35. During the reporting period, 872,199 people benefited from food assistance under the emergency and social safety net assistance programmes run by UNRWA. Women represent 49.9 per cent of the cases, and around 22,715 of the families assisted were female-headed households. UNRWA recently reformed its poverty assessment system, as applied in Gaza, to include new categories, for women who are particularly vulnerable and who were not previously eligible for assistance owing to a requirement that they be registered under a husband's or father's name. The new categories include women in polygamous marriages, widows, divorced women and abandoned women, who can now apply for independent assessment and to receive food assistance from UNRWA directly. Similarly, in its social safety net assistance programme, WFP uses assessment criteria that include female-headed households as a vulnerable category. A gender perspective is mainstreamed through WFP activities by placing food distribution centres in areas close to households headed by women and issuing vouchers and food ration cards in women's names, when possible.

36. The job creation programme run by UNRWA in Gaza employed 23,490 persons, of whom 26 per cent female, for between 3 and 12 months each. The bulk of jobs offered by the programme were for unskilled labour (66.6 per cent). However, the programme faces challenges in finding culturally acceptable jobs for women as a result of social and cultural barriers. Currently, the majority of unskilled jobs for women are found in the agriculture sector (60 per cent of all beneficiaries in this sector are female).

37. As part of efforts to harness the economic potential of Palestinian women, UNDP provided support to women entrepreneurs in Gaza and the West Bank.

Through the provision of business development services, assets and access to solidarity and risk-sharing finance, 215 women entrepreneurs were able to start their own businesses, creating employment for at least 400 people. In addition, through its economic empowerment programme for deprived families, UNDP supported the creation of 1,420 micro-businesses, run by vulnerable households, 35 per cent of which are female-headed households. Families who were previously dependent on cash assistance from the Ministry of Social Affairs have begun a journey out of poverty through running their own microprojects.

38. UNCTAD worked with the Palestinian Shippers Council to forge partnerships with the Palestinian Business Women Forum, provide its members with training and promote their active participation in the Shippers Council. Approximately 70 women members of the Forum were trained on the trade facilitation supply chain and participated in study tours to Europe and in the region to gain a better technical understanding of trade. The International Trade Centre provided training to Palestinian women-owned small and medium enterprises on the development of business plans and marketing.

39. FAO established two retail shops in the northern and southern West Bank to market agricultural products from more than 15 women's cooperatives. More than half of those received tools and equipment to enhance their production quality and capacity. More than 100 female farmers were supported through the construction of infrastructure for water collection or land rehabilitation. In Gaza, FAO supported 93 female-headed households with a package of agricultural tools, equipment and livestock. During the reporting period, FAO conducted several business trainings for 90 women members of six women's cooperatives, two of which are in the Gaza Strip. Each cooperative was also supported in establishing an effective finance and credit management system and links with reliable loan service providers, which enhanced women's capacity to manage loans.

40. UN-Women continued its implementation of the school canteen project, run by women. During the reporting period, nine additional community-based organizations were supported in managing and running sustainable businesses and providing work opportunities for women, bringing the total number of partner organizations in the project to 62. Of the 62, 36 have now reached financial independence and 18 are generating profit. A total of 72 additional women were employed during the reporting period, increasing the total number of women employees, through the different phases of the project, to 761. The women involved with the community-based organizations benefit from school canteen management training, financial management training, communication skills training and food processing training. The additional organizations were also provided with financial support to enable them to run and manage 28 new school canteens, bringing the total number of school canteens managed by women's community-based organizations to 337, in schools throughout the West Bank.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

41. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives designed to improve women's access to justice and enhance the capacity of institutions and personnel to prevent and respond to violence against women. The priority continued to be supporting the implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women (2011-2019).

42. Under their joint programme on the theme of “Strengthening the rule of law: justice and security for the Palestinian people”, UNDP and UN-Women provided support to justice and security institutions in mainstreaming a gender perspective in policies and procedures, including in the area of law-making. The Ministry of Justice and the High Judicial Council were supported in the development of gender-sensitive planning, monitoring and evaluation systems. The Gender Legislative Committee of the Ministry of Justice reviewed the Family Protection Law and provided recommendations to the Council of Ministers. As part of the programme’s efforts to develop specialized justice and security services for women and girls, 16 specialized prosecutors received follow-up coaching on investigating violence against women. Moreover, 19 senior officers from the Palestinian Civil Police concluded an accredited professional diploma course in public administration and gender, delivered by Birzeit University in partnership with the programme.

43. Women and girls continue to be the largest beneficiary group of legal aid services provided through the rule of law programme run by UNDP and UN-Women. Between January and June 2015, 3,657 women and girls, representing 55 per cent of all beneficiaries, benefited from legal advice, mediation and legal representation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. In Gaza, women continue to constitute the vast majority of beneficiaries of legal services (75 per cent). As a result of the support provided through the programme, at least 20 legal verdicts were issued in early 2015 in favour of women receiving representation in sharia courts.

44. In Gaza, UNDP and UN-Women continued to support the work of the Awn Access to Justice Network, a network of civil society legal aid providers hosted by the Palestinian Bar Association. Eighteen mobile and fixed legal aid clinics provided legal assistance in cases related to land and property rights, as well as on a range of issues relating to family and personal status. Through community legal information sessions, more than 13,801 beneficiaries, 81 per cent of them female, were made aware of the rights and the services available to assist them.

45. In December 2014, UN-Women launched an in-depth research study on Palestinian women’s access to justice in the occupied West Bank.<sup>20</sup> The study discusses the ordeals faced by women victims of violence living in Area C, which comprises roughly 60 per cent of the West Bank and remains under the full civil and security control of Israel and the Israeli army. Without a formal justice system to turn to for the protection of their rights, these women are denied redress for discriminatory and patriarchal practices within their own communities. During the reporting period, ESCWA produced a study on access to justice for women and girls in the Arab region, covering aspects from the ratification to the implementation of international instruments, which focuses on access to justice, including for Palestinian women and girls under occupation.

46. A number of United Nations entities conducted awareness-raising activities regarding gender-based violence, with different target populations. ESCWA developed a toolkit to combat gender-based violence in the Arab region, which aims to ensure that service providers in Palestine have the necessary tools and methodological guidelines to protect victims of violence and ensure their physical and mental well-being. UNRWA, through its gender initiative, worked with community-based organizations in Gaza to hold trainings and seminars on ending violence against women. UNESCO partnered with Theatre Day Productions in Gaza to support women community leaders in raising public awareness against violence through storytelling of women's experiences of gender-based violence in the community. UNPFA trained men and boys, as well as religious leaders, on issues relating to reproductive health and gender-based violence. UNFPA also increased media attention surrounding the issue by supporting the development of a documentary film about gender-based violence and violations of inheritance law, as well as a documentary telling women's stories after the Gaza conflict.

---

<sup>20</sup> UN-Women, “Access Denied: Palestinian Women’s Access to Justice in the West Bank of the Occupied Palestinian Territory” (UN-Women office in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 2014).

47. A number of entities also supported services for women victims of violence. UN-Women has provided support to shelters for victims in the West Bank to begin the process of standardizing their procedures. WFP has also supported shelters by providing them with food assistance, reaching more than 80 women in four shelters. UNFPA trained 3,000 health-care providers in hospitals and primary health-care clinics to detect and respond to cases of gender-based violence. During the reporting period, UNFPA distributed 2,300 hygiene kits, which address a critical protection concern and core aspect of preserving dignity. The hygiene kits also included solar panels and flashlights, which may help mitigate the risk of gender-based violence for displaced women and adolescent girls in the caravans and shelters in the Gaza Strip.

48. UNODC continued to strengthen the capacity of the Palestinian ministries of justice and the interior and the Palestinian Civil Police to manage, administer, deliver and expand forensic services in accordance with international standards, including with regard to the investigation of cases of gender-based violence. Seven Palestinian doctors have received specialized training in collecting forensic evidence of sexual and gender-based violence. UNODC also launched two manuals for Palestinian forensic practitioners on specialized forensic medicine topics, including sexual and gender-based violence, which will help enable survivors to access high-quality health and forensic interventions, and will assist the Government of Palestine in the investigation and prosecution of such offences.

49. UN-Women and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs collaborated closely to ensure that a gender perspective was mainstreamed in humanitarian coordination and response. Through the technical expertise of a humanitarian gender adviser, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and UN-Women, in coordination with UNFPA, developed a joint action plan to ensure accountability for gender equality and gender-based violence in humanitarian programming. The plan seeks to improve the availability and quality of data and analysis on gender-specific humanitarian needs, to develop the capacity of humanitarian actors for gender-responsive programming and to support women's organizations participating in humanitarian processes and responses.

E. Power and decision-making

50. During the reporting period, UN-Women continued to support the newly established women's political participation caucus group, which reviewed the by-laws and internal policies of nine political parties and presented conclusions to leaders of political parties, at a conference organized in December 2014. The result of the conference was a commitment by those leaders to follow up on the findings and recommendations of the group.

51. UN-Women continued to develop the capacity of media professionals to advocate and lobby for women's participation in politics and the decision-making process. Ten media professionals (four men and six women) in the West Bank and 12 media professionals (seven women and five men) in Gaza were trained on gender-sensitive media coverage and delivering key messages on women's issues.

52. Civil society involvement is critical for effective implementation of and reporting under the provisions of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. UN-Women supported a coalition of non-governmental organizations from Gaza and the West Bank to prepare the first shadow report from the State of Palestine to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, which complements the official government report, before the Committee's deliberations. UN-Women also trained 35 women's rights activists from a number of civil society organizations on international human rights frameworks and the shadow report drafting process.

53. Additionally, UN-Women continued its support to the newly established local committees in Gaza, which are made up of representatives from civil society and are responsible for monitoring local governance, by providing them with training on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) and tools for advocacy. Similar local committees were also established, in 10 local councils, in three governorates of the West Bank. UN-Women continued its support to the shadow constitutional committee, comprised of young women and men, who drafted a gender-sensitive shadow constitution presented to national decision makers in December 2014, and also promoted a public advocacy campaign.

54. Through its national unity and social cohesion programme, UNDP supported a conference in June 2015 that gathered women's organizations and female politicians. The conference, which took place simultaneously in Ramallah and Gaza, with over 1,600 participants, was a forum for women of different political affiliations, religious and regional groupings to discuss joint strategies, speak out for peace and reconciliation, and review the factors that prevent women from engaging actively in the reconciliation processes.

55. UNICEF supported over 27,000 adolescents, of whom 54 per cent were girls, in receiving structured training, including leadership skills for girls to promote their participation in decision-making and community life. WFP also worked to empower women in decision-making processes by promoting a principle of 50 per cent representation of women on food management committees. In 2014-2015, up to 30 per cent of the members of local food management committees were women. Through its young women leaders programme, the gender initiative of UNRWA engaged recent female graduates in leadership training, to increase their readiness for active participation in their communities and the labour market.

56. UNESCO developed an online library and database to collect research and data on gender in Palestine.<sup>21</sup> The website includes an online calendar, which aims to coordinate and manage the different gender-related activities of national and international stakeholders. The website also functions as a research network for academic and civil society organizations to promote innovative research topics and circulate new publications on gender equality in Palestine. UNESCO also supported an in-depth study, following the 2014 conflict in Gaza, entitled “Women’s and men’s voices”, which is currently being finalized and will examine the impact of the conflict on gender relations.

F. Institutional development

57. During the reporting period, OHCHR supported the State of Palestine in building capacity to implement and follow up on its human rights treaty commitments utilizing a multisectoral, harmonized human rights reporting and implementation approach, which seeks to ensure that a focus on gender-based discrimination is integrated into the processes of the seven human rights treaties to which the State of Palestine has acceded. OHCHR mobilized the United Nations country team to engage and coordinate treaty-reporting efforts, jointly conducting a number of workshops for government representatives on specific human rights. OHCHR also organized three trainings for Palestinian women’s organizations, presenting methods for monitoring and documenting women’s human rights violations, and facilitated one workshop for women’s human rights defenders on the compatibility of Palestinian laws with provisions of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. In Gaza, OHCHR implemented four trainings on human rights and gender-based violence and one workshop on women’s right to life, for female lawyers and women’s organizations.

58. ESCWA provided technical assistance and advisory services to the State of Palestine, including through the organization of two workshops on gender, change management and local development to strengthen the capacity of local government officials to mainstream gender equality principles at the community level. ESCWA also provided technical assistance to the Ministry of Women’s Affairs, in reviewing and developing the existing organizational structure, mandate and resources to advance the achievement of gender equality.

59. Through the multiple indicator cluster survey, UNICEF continued to strengthen the capacity of the Government to manage, monitor and conduct research and analysis on issues relating to children’s rights, gender equality, social protection and inclusion. The 2014 survey results provide a wealth of disaggregated data on the situation of women and children in the State of Palestine.

60. UN-Women continued its support to the Ministry of Finance on gender-responsive budgeting by providing an analysis of the public management financial system from a gender perspective and presenting recommendations for improving the effectiveness of the system. UN-Women also provided technical training on gender-sensitive monitoring and evaluation to 30 staff members from gender units in different line ministries. Those staff members now have the skills to integrate a gender perspective into the sectoral strategies of line ministries and ensure planning processes at the national level are responsive to the needs of Palestinian women. The training was followed by a meeting of ministers and deputy ministers to discuss the roles and responsibilities of the gender units in line ministries and how to effectively mainstream a gender perspective in national plans, policies and budgets. As a result, some of the gender units' focal points have been included in the planning and budgeting teams in line ministries, while other ministries have established gender units or institutionalized the current gender units in the formal organizational structure.

---

<sup>21</sup> Database available from www.pwrdc.ps and www.unesco.org/ramallah.

61. UN-Women supported the establishment of the gender marker reporting tool to track the extent of gender mainstreaming in the financial support provided by international donors to the Palestinian Authority. The gender marker was launched jointly by UN-Women and the Ministry of Planning and Administrative Development, and has been integrated into project tracking since July 2015. It will enable the Government to track financial allocations to priority areas and identify gaps. In turn, this will support an evidence-based dialogue with donors on the importance of financial allocations to gender equality issues.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

62. The reporting period was marked by the intensification of the humanitarian impact of the 2014 conflict and the slow pace of the recovery effort in Gaza. Women and girls in Gaza continued to experience displacement, loss of livelihood, limited access to basic services, restrictions on the movement of people and goods in and out of Gaza, and the continuous threat of violence, including gender-based violence. In the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, settlement expansion and settler violence, the demolition of homes and livelihood structures, and restrictions on the freedom of movement persisted. Those violations have high costs for all Palestinian women, and in particular, for women in Bedouin communities faced with demolition orders, women working in agriculture, women living in communities targeted by settler violence, and girls whose access to education is impeded by violence. Efforts should be intensified to protect women from all forms of violence and reconstruction efforts in Gaza should be expedited. A gender perspective should be central to the relief and recovery work of the United Nations system and gender equality programming should be adequately financed.

63. Insecurity and poverty have continued to exacerbate gender-based discrimination and gender inequality in the State of Palestine, leading to elevated levels of violence against women and girls. In support of the Government of Palestine's efforts to combat gender-based violence, the United Nations has worked to improve women's access to justice in relation to gender-based violence, through initiatives for strengthening the rule of law. United Nations entities should further deepen their efforts to support survivors of gender-based violence, developing a comprehensive approach that ensures access to the full range of quality essential multisectoral services. Taking into account the comparative advantages and expertise of individual entities across the United Nations system, such a holistic approach should include ensuring access to quality health care, psychosocial counselling, legal services and material and financial assistance. Further, United Nations entities should continue to work with all key actors and groups to prevent gender-based violence, including with men and boys, to address the root causes, risk factors and structural issues that lead to violence. The Government of Palestine should also be supported in developing normative frameworks in line with international standards and defining national standards on ending violence against women.

64. Limited economic opportunities exist for Palestinian women and a major gender gap persists in labour market participation. High unemployment rates, especially among young women, are particularly worrisome. The existing vulnerability in the two main sectors where women find employment, the services sector and agriculture, compounded by increased care burdens owing to a lack of access to water, energy and markets, all contribute to women's deteriorating economic situation. Assistance should aim to increase women's access to decent work, including in non-traditional sectors, and address women's economic vulnerability resulting from the concentration of their employment in informal and unpaid work.

65. The lack of access to justice for Palestinian women and girls remains a grave concern, with outdated and discriminatory laws, social restrictions, a lack of physical access to judicial institutions and the fragmentation of territory all posing challenges. United Nations entities should provide assistance to governance mechanisms that seek to modernize and harmonize legislation on gender equality and women's human rights. Assistance to transitional security and justice sectors, as well as informal justice mechanisms, should build the capacity of those sectors to apply women's human rights standards throughout the justice system, on the basis of the State of Palestine's accession to seven core human rights treaties.

66. Many of the recommendations put forward in previous reports regarding improvements in the areas of education, health and political participation for Palestinian women and girls have not yet been fully implemented and continue to require sustained effort. In particular, renewed efforts should be made to ensure that Palestinian women play a leading role in reconciliation efforts. All relevant actors must insist on women's participation in negotiations and contribute to providing an enabling environment for Palestinian women to express their views and form coalitions across political factions. Support to Palestinian women's non-governmental organizations should be a central aspect of the United Nations system's gender equality and women's empowerment agenda.

67. Data disaggregated by sex and age and gender-sensitive analysis are essential to all efforts to advance the situation of women and girls in Palestine. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics and a number of United Nations entities have made improvements to systems for gender-sensitive collection and analysis of data and are able to collect disaggregated data of quality on a range of issues. However, data gaps remain as regards women's economic roles, their access to property rights and gender-based violence. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics will conduct a census in 2017, which provides an important opportunity to address some of those gaps. Additional specialized surveys, including on sexual violence, employment and time-use, and enhanced registration and reporting mechanisms are necessary to improve the quality and availability of data and its analysis.

68. The United Nations will continue working towards the realization of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East. Improving the situation of Palestinian women remains inextricably linked to such efforts. The development by the Government of Palestine of a national strategy on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) makes an important contribution in this regard, highlighting a national commitment to women's empowerment and the protection of women's human rights. The adoption of Security Council resolution 2242 (2015) on women, peace and security reiterates the importance of such national plans and calls for adequate resourcing for their implementation. In this regard, United Nations system entities should continue to support national efforts to deliver on the Palestinian national strategy on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000), and all other efforts to achieve commitments to women, peace and security in the State of Palestine.

---

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
19 December 2016

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Sixty-first session

13-24 March 2017

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report, submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2016/4, highlights the situation of Palestinian women for the period from 1 October 2015 to 30 September 2016, and provides an overview of the assistance provided by the entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2017/1.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2016/4 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations. The Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2016/6), and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixty-first session a report, on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution.

2. The present report covers the period from 1 October 2015 to 30 September 2016 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women on the basis of information from the United Nations entities in the State of Palestine.

3. Unless indicated otherwise, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women. It includes contributions from the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO). It also includes information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA).

4. The present report complements other reports on the living and socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people (see A/71/87-E/2016/67, A/71/359-S/2016/732, A/71/86-E/2016/13 and A/71/13).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

5. The reporting period witnessed substantial efforts by the international community to advance peace and to preserve the two-State solution. The Middle East Quartet Principals met on 23 October 2015 in Vienna and called for significant steps to be taken by the parties, consistent with the transition contemplated by prior agreements, in order to restore confidence and hope in the viability of a negotiated two-State solution that resolves the final status issues, including that of Jerusalem, and ends the occupation that began in 1967. In accordance with its decision on 12 February 2016, the Quartet issued a report in July<sup>1</sup> outlining three negative trends imperilling the viability of the two-State solution: violence against civilians and the incitement that fuels it; the Israeli policy of expanding settlements, the taking of land for exclusive Israeli use and denying Palestinian development; and the situation in Gaza, marked by the lack of Palestinian unity, continued militant activity and a dire humanitarian crisis, augmented by a restrictive closure regime. It offered recommendations for creating the conditions for an eventual return to meaningful negotiations, and called on the parties to take action independently, in line with their commitments under previous agreements, that can realistically contribute to progress towards establishing a two-State reality on the ground.

6. Meanwhile, on 17 May 2016, the President of Egypt, Abdel Fattah al-Sisi, called on Israeli, Palestinian and Arab leaders to take historic steps for peace, expressing the readiness of Egypt to contribute to these endeavours and to help facilitate intra-Palestinian reconciliation. On 3 June, France hosted a Ministerial meeting at which participants from 28 delegations reaffirmed support for a two-State solution and discussed ways in which the international community could contribute to this goal, including by providing incentives. In follow-up, France expressed its intention of convening an international conference, now planned for early 2017. The possibility of a direct meeting between the parties has also been advanced by other key international stakeholders.

7. The rates of settlement planning and construction rose during the reporting period. The first three quarters of 2016 saw a 25 per cent increase in construction starts over the equivalent period in 2015, owing to a spike during the second quarter of 2016 registering the highest quarterly rate in three years. The classification of new “state land” in the Jordan Valley, the approval of several plans in settlements and a surge in demolitions of Palestinian structures in Area C of the West Bank during the first quarter also appear to reflect a systematic policy to expand Israeli presence and limit Palestinian development in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem. Since 1 April, settlement plans have been advanced for at least 2,400 units in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Israel also advanced the so-called retroactive “legalization” of outposts, and, since July, Members of Knesset have resumed efforts to promote a bill aimed at legalizing settlement units built on privately owned Palestinian land.

8. The absence of Palestinian reconciliation impedes efforts to achieve a negotiated solution. In reconciliation talks between Fatah, Hamas and other Palestinian factions, which were hosted by Qatar in 2016, as well as efforts by Egypt and other regional stakeholders, no consensus has been reached on achieving genuine Palestinian unity on the basis of non-violence, democracy and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) Principles — crucial for reuniting the West Bank and Gaza under a single, democratic and legitimate Palestinian authority. The parties remain divided on two main issues: the formation of a national unity Government based on PLO principles, and the organization of parliamentary and presidential elections. Municipal council elections, which were originally set for 8 October 2016, with the participation of nearly all major Palestinian factions, were to be the first simultaneous elections in Gaza and the West Bank since 2006. However, on 4 October, the Palestinian Government decided to postpone local elections until further notice. That decision followed the suspension on 8 September of election preparations by the High Court in Ramallah.

---

<sup>1</sup> S/2016/595, annex.

9. The reporting period saw a sharp increase in violence, in the last quarter of 2015, in East Jerusalem, with protests, clashes and individual attacks by Palestinians on Israeli civilians and security personnel spreading to the other parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including to the access restricted areas in Gaza, and Israel. Palestinians continued to be subjected to threats to their lives, physical safety and liberty from conflict-related violence and from policies and practices related to the Israeli occupation, including settler violence. In the last quarter of 2015, the highest number of casualties among West Bank Palestinians and among Israelis since 2005 was recorded. The violence began to wane in early 2016, owing in large part to effective efforts by the Palestinian National Security Forces, who successfully thwarted attacks, seized weapons and arrested suspected extremists. Continued security coordination between both sides was also key to reducing violence. There nevertheless remains a growing concern that ongoing settlement activity, incitement to violence, cases of excessive use of force by Israel and the absence of genuine Palestinian unity may lead to a renewed escalation.

10. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, from 1 October 2015 to 30 September 2016, 235 Palestinians (168 men, 14 women, 48 boys and 5 girls) were killed and over 16,556 (82 per cent men, 1 per cent women, 19 per cent boys and 1 per cent girls) were injured, mainly by the Israel Defense Forces or by settlers to some extent across the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel. Many of the Palestinians were killed while carrying out, or reportedly carrying out, knife, gun or car-ramming attacks. A total of 32 Israelis (25 men, 6 women and 1 girl), most of whom were members of the Israel Defense Forces, were killed by Palestinians, and more than 341 others were injured.

11. Among the main concerns relating to the increase in violence were Palestinian attacks on Israelis and the response of Israeli security forces, including possible instances of excessive use of force and extrajudicial killings. These concerns were compounded by the chronic lack of accountability and effective remedy for the killing of Palestinians. For example, from October 2015 to June 2016, the Israeli authorities opened a total of 24 criminal investigations into incidents resulting in the death or injury of Palestinians in the West Bank and Israel, including the highly controversial apparent extrajudicial killing on 24 March 2016 of a reported assailant who was incapacitated. Of these investigations, one has led to the indictment and prosecution of a soldier.

12. The Palestinian Government launched an investigation into the apparent extrajudicial execution while in police custody by Palestinian security forces on 23 August 2016 of a Nablus man who was suspected of involvement in the previous killing of two security personnel. Questions remain regarding accountability for such acts.

13. UNICEF reported a concerning number of incidents of grave violations against children documented in 2015 and 2016. From October 2015 to September 2016, 3,205 incidents were documented, affecting 61,667 children. This included the killings of 57 children (56 Palestinian children — 7 girls and 49 boys — and 1 Israeli girl) and injury of 2,384 children (2,271 Palestinian boys and 113 girls, and 7 Israeli boys and 2 girls). In addition, 448 attacks on schools were documented.

14. As at August 2016, an estimated 11,700 Gazan families (almost 60,000 people) — of which about 10 per cent are female-headed households — remained displaced and are living with host families, in rented apartments, in prefabricated units, or in the rubble of their previous homes.<sup>2</sup> The root causes of the conflict remained unaddressed as the land, air and sea closures of Gaza entered their eleventh year. Accountability for victims remains unaddressed and, as local non-governmental organizations and legal aid providers report, access to justice mechanisms remains severely limited.<sup>3</sup> The Israeli authorities received complaints relating to approximately 360 incidents, which led to the opening of 31 criminal investigations and indictments in a single instance of looting.

15. A fragile ceasefire in Gaza continues to hold. The beginning of May saw the most serious escalation of violence between Israel and Hamas since the 2014 conflict, with the discovery by Israel of two tunnels and, as a response, nine incursions to destroy them. Militants fired some 45 mortars and rockets at Israel and the Israel Defense Forces conducted 13 airstrikes: one woman was killed and several other Palestinians were injured during the exchanges. On 21 August, two rockets were fired from Gaza, without causing injury or damage. Israeli forces responded with some 60 missiles and shells to various locations in Gaza, directed at Hamas bases and those of other militants. Five people were reported injured during the operation. These incidents highlight the fragility of the security dynamics in Gaza and the need for all sides to vigorously uphold the ceasefire.

16. The reporting period also saw a massive surge in demolitions by the Israeli authorities of Palestinian property in the West Bank, primarily in Area C and East Jerusalem, citing a lack of building permits. Such permits are almost impossible to obtain owing to the seemingly discriminatory and unlawful planning regime applied in those areas. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, from 1 October 2015 to 30 September 2016, the authorities demolished or confiscated 971 Palestinian-owned structures, displacing over 1,500 people and affecting the livelihoods of more than 6,500 people.

17. Several factors continue to present significant barriers to freedom of movement and access to livelihoods for Palestinians, with differing impacts on women and men. The population of 1.9 million Palestinians in Gaza remains effectively isolated from the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, by the continued closure of Gaza by Israel and the highly infrequent opening of the Rafah crossing between Egypt and Gaza. Access to East Jerusalem remains limited for Palestinian residents from the remainder of the West Bank. Physical and administrative restrictions continue to impede humanitarian access to some of the most vulnerable communities in Area C, particularly those in the firing zones and those located behind the barrier.

18. According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, the Palestinian labour force reached 1.3 million in 2015, 3.5 per cent higher than in 2014. With a concurrent 3.4 per cent increase in the population aged 15 and above, the labour force participation rate remained unchanged at 45.8 per cent (71.9 per cent for men, 19.1 per cent for women). The labour force participation of women remains extremely low by global as well as by regional standards, despite high levels of educational attainment on the part of Palestinian women, resulting in a substantial loss of economic potential. The overall rate of unemployment eased slightly, from 27 per cent in 2014 to 25.9 per cent in 2015 (336,300 people), owing to improvement in male employment. The unemployment rate for women increased only slightly, to 39.2 per cent (from 38.55 per cent, as recorded in 2014). In Gaza, women's unemployment rose to a staggering 60 per cent. A gender wage gap persisted, with the average daily wage for Palestinian women reaching NIS 81.9, compared with NIS 108 for men.<sup>4</sup> The unemployment rate for youth aged 20-24 years stood high in 2015, at 36.5 per cent,<sup>5</sup> and rose further, to 42.6 per cent, in 2016.<sup>6</sup>

---

<sup>2</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Gaza: two years since the 2014 hostilities (August 2016).

<sup>3</sup> See, for example, Al Mezan Centre for Human Rights, “Update: no reparations in Israel for Palestinians: how Israel’s amendment No. 8 leaves no room for recourse, Gaza, December 2015” (24 February 2016), available from <http://mezan.org/en/post/20954>.

19. Women's access to health services was monitored and analysed in 2015 and 2016 through analysis by WHO of permit data disaggregated by sex for patients seeking access out of Gaza and the West Bank to medical facilities in East Jerusalem and elsewhere. Health access through the Erez checkpoint declined sharply in 2016, as the approval rates in the first seven months of the year decreased to 74.8 per cent for females and to 66.2 per cent for males, the lowest rates recorded since 2009. This signified a 12 per cent drop in approval rates for both female and male patients, as compared with a similar period in 2015.<sup>7</sup> According to data provided by the Coordination Office of the Ministry of Health in Gaza, in 2015, 25 per cent of patients requested for Israeli security interviews in the context of permit applications were female. In 2016, the percentage of females rose to 33 per cent.

20. The adolescent birth rate (the fertility rate for women aged 15-19) remained concerning, at 48 per 1,000 (35 per 1,000 in the West Bank and 66 per 1,000 in Gaza). Among women aged 20-24, 22 per cent had had at least one live birth before age 18 (25 per cent in Gaza and 20 per cent in the West Bank).

21. Lack of access to safe, sufficient and affordable water remains of critical concern. In Gaza, only 10 per cent of households have access to clean drinking water.<sup>8</sup> It is estimated that at least 96 per cent of the water from the coastal aquifer in Gaza is unfit for human consumption.<sup>9</sup> In the West Bank, 97 per cent of households have access to clean drinking water;<sup>10</sup> however the quantity of water

<sup>4</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Labour Force Survey (2016b) and consumer price index data (2016e).

<sup>5</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Labour Force Survey, press release, 25 February 2016.

<sup>6</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Labour Force survey, press release, 8 August 2016.

<sup>7</sup> See www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/documents/WHO\_monthly\_Gaza\_access\_report-July\_2016-\_final.pdf?ua=1.

<sup>8</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Palestinian multiple indicator cluster survey 2014" (2015).

<sup>9</sup> WHO, "Report of a field assessment of health conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory, 22 March to 1 April 2015" (2016).

<sup>10</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Palestinian Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2014 (2015).

supply remained insufficient.<sup>11</sup> Around 70 per cent of the Palestinian communities located entirely or mostly in Area C are not connected to a water network and the Government of Palestine has limited ability to provide access to water. The average domestic consumption rate among Palestinians is approximately 40 litres per capita per day in Area C: well below the WHO minimum recommendation of 100 litres per capita per day.<sup>12</sup> Owing to the inadequate quality and quantity of the water available, these communities are forced to buy water at unaffordable rates<sup>13</sup> and Palestinians spend an average of 8 per cent of their monthly expenditure on purchasing water.

22. According to FAO, food insecurity levels among Palestinian households remained high during the reporting period, at 27 per cent (46 per cent in Gaza and 17 per cent in the West Bank).<sup>14</sup> Food insecurity in the Palestinian context is defined as the lack of economic access to food. In the West Bank, the prevalence of food insecurity among female-headed households is 10 percentage points higher than among male-headed households (25 per cent, compared with 15 per cent), while it is 3 percentage points higher for female-headed households in Gaza.<sup>15</sup>

23. Access to early learning opportunities in Palestine is low, with a 57.3 per cent enrolment rate in preschool education (57.7 per cent for boys and 56.9 per cent for girls). Levels of enrolment in basic education are higher: 95 per cent for girls and 93 per cent for boys. However, the net enrolment rate in secondary school is concerning, especially for boys: 59 per cent for boys and 77 per cent for girls in 2015.<sup>16</sup> Anecdotal evidence suggests that girls and children with disabilities are more prone to dropping out of school in areas where they feel unsafe in and on the way to school, such as in military zones and around checkpoints and settlements.

24. Rule of law remains a significant issue across the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Palestinian women face specific challenges in accessing justice as a result of laws that discriminate on the basis of sex, notably with respect to inheritance, child custody and other personal status issues; women's limited knowledge of their rights and procedures; economic dependency; and social pressures and stigma. Even in cases where women manage to access justice services, they often face service providers who lack professional knowledge in dealing specifically with women and girl victims of violence, and who continue to interpret outdated laws pertaining to the Penal Code and personal status law in ways that infringe women's human rights. The State of Palestine has demonstrated its commitment to address women's access to justice through accession to seven human rights treaties, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which was endorsed without reservations.

<sup>11</sup> Consumption per person is 71 litres per day, as compared with the WHO recommendation of 100 litres per person per day — source: “WHO, Report of a field assessment of health conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory, 22 March to 1 April 2015 (2016).

<sup>12</sup> EWASH, Thirsting for Justice (January 2016).

<sup>13</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “2016 Humanitarian Needs Overview” (2015) p. 8.

<sup>14</sup> FAO, UNRWA, WFP and Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “Socioeconomic and food security survey 2014: West Bank and Gaza Strip” (unpublished information).

<sup>15</sup> Palestine Food Security Sector and Palestine Central Bureau of Statistics, Socioeconomic and food security survey 2014 (May 2016).

<sup>16</sup> Ministry of Education and Higher Education, Baseline M&E report 2015 (2016).

25. In the State of Palestine, women and girls continue to experience multiple types of violence at home and in their communities, including structural violence in the form of discriminatory laws and traditional practices, and physical, economic and psychological violence from family members and intimate partners. Psychosocial violence continues to be the most reported type of violence in Gaza (55 per cent), while in the West Bank psychosocial violence comprise 30 per cent of reported cases, and cases of physical violence comprise another 30 per cent of reported cases. Overall, in 78.5 per cent of cases, the perpetrator was a spouse, parent or sibling, with spouses alone making up 67 per cent of all cases. In 84.3 per cent of cases where a woman was killed, the perpetrator was a family member. While domestic violence constitutes the most prevalent form of violence against women, it should be noted that merely 1.4 per cent of domestic violence cases reach the courts, with 57.6 per cent of women stating that social customs prevent them from filing a complaint.<sup>17</sup> There is also a severe lack of shelters and a social support system, which makes addressing violence against women particularly challenging.<sup>18</sup>

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

26. The United Nations continued its efforts to respond to a range of development and humanitarian challenges. Priorities for United Nations support to the Palestinian people are outlined in a set of key documents, including the United Nations Development Assistance Framework 2014-2016 for the State of Palestine, which is aligned with the Palestinian National Development Plan 2014-2016, and the 2016 Humanitarian Response Plan, which outlines the humanitarian programming. An update on assistance provided by the United Nations system, in cooperation with the Government of Palestine, donors and civil society, to address the specific needs and priorities of women and girls in the following areas: education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development, is given in paragraphs 27-63 below.

A. Education and training

27. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote women's and girls' access to education and training and improve learning environments. During the academic year 2015-2016, UNRWA operated 349 schools (252 in Gaza and 96 in the West Bank), serving over 290,400 students. In Gaza, 127,490 girls were enrolled in UNRWA schools (48.5 per cent of the student population), with an annual student increase of approximately 8,000 students. In the West Bank, 28,771 girls (58.8 per cent of the total) were enrolled in UNRWA schools. In addition to basic education, UNRWA continued to offer technical and vocational education training. During the reporting period, 540 girls (32 per cent of all students) in Gaza, and 567 girls (82 per cent of total) in the West Bank participated in such training.

---

<sup>17</sup> "UN-Women, Impact stories on ending violence against women — specialized prosecution", 2016, available from: <http://palestine.unwomen.org/en/digital-library/publications/2016/10/spp#sthash.Fry1yfEu.dpuf>.

<sup>18</sup> UNRWA GBV referral system — first quarter of 2016.

28. In the West Bank, UNICEF and partners provided protective accompaniment presence to school children for safer commutes to school in locations with Israeli military presence and settlers. This benefited 4,667 children (1,670 girls and 2,997 boys) and 333 teachers (180 female and 153 male).

29. UNESCO and partners continued to promote early childhood education by conducting awareness-raising sessions on inclusive and child-friendly education for 980 mothers and training 120 female teachers. School principals and supervisors participated in the project training on inclusive education, action research and child-led activities, benefiting 17,810 female students in 49 schools in the West Bank and Gaza.

30. In East Jerusalem, UNDP in collaboration with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education (MoEHE) provided quality education and counselling services to nearly 8,500 female students in private schools.

31. In Gaza, UNDP has responded to the needs of girls in schools that were damaged during the 2014 conflict. The recovery process has considered and responded to girls' needs on the basis of the principles of building back better and child friendly schools. This includes the adaptation of the school premises, primarily with regard to water and sanitation facilities, to make them accessible to girls with special needs. The rehabilitation and reconstruction of 32 partially damaged educational institutions (12 public schools, 13 private schools and 7 universities/colleges) benefited 37,222 students (19,445 of whom were female).

32. ILO and partners supported 50 unemployed female university graduates from low-income households with skill-building training, followed by three-month temporary job placements in the private sector or community-based organizations. Around 25-30 per cent of the graduates found paid work and the majority indicated that their participation in the programme had increased their hope of finding longer-term employment. In partnership with the Islamic University of Gaza, ILO delivered furniture design training to 20 young female architects experiencing difficulty in finding employment in the architecture sector. Some 15 women architects were trained in basic business concepts, management and entrepreneurship skills and 18 female furniture design trainees received subsidized on-the-job training in furniture manufacturing small and medium enterprises in Gaza.

33. In Gaza, UNRWA enhanced the leadership skills of young women by providing female university graduates with skills that better meet the labour market needs. During the reporting period, 391 women and 34 men participated in the programme. Moreover, 724 young female graduates accessed job placement opportunities in civil society and the private sector.

B. Health

34. The United Nations continued to build upon good practices and results reported in the previous reporting period to improve the access to and the quality of health-care services. UNRWA remained the major provider of primary health-care services for Palestine refugees, operating 21 health centres in Gaza and 42 in the West Bank. Palestine refugees, who constitute over 70 per cent of the population in Gaza, continued to rely on UNRWA for primary health care. In Gaza, the total number of medical consultations from October 2015 to June 2016 stood at 2,870,183, of which 60 per cent were for women, and 904,058 in the West Bank, where 59 per cent were for women.

35. Maternal and child health care continues to be an essential component of assistance. UNRWA provided assistance to 32,625 newly registered pregnant women, 218,661 women who were receiving antenatal care and 28,303 women who were receiving postnatal care services. A total of 94.8 per cent of all pregnant women paid at least four visits to UNRWA health centres during their pregnancies. UNICEF supported the Ministry of Health and partner non-governmental organizations to reach and support a total of 3,532 “high-risk” women and their newborns under the postnatal home visiting programme in Gaza. Over 30,000 women have been reached with nutrition counselling and health education sessions. UNDP supported the rehabilitation of Al-Shifa and Al-Tahrir maternity hospitals, which served 16,000 women in Gaza City and Khan Younis during 2016. UNFPA supported the operation of mobile clinics in 12 communities in Gaza, with 3,681 women, including 1,654 pregnant women, benefiting from mobile clinic services.

36. UNRWA health clinics provided adolescent and adult women refugees with preventive and curative services, including screening for breast cancer and reproductive health-related services. UNDP in partnership with Augusta Victoria Hospital in East Jerusalem launched a mobile mammography clinic initiative, while in Gaza, UNRWA launched a project to raise awareness of breast cancer. Through UNRWA health centres, 68,382 women were screened for breast cancer and 4,438 were referred for mammograms and scans.

37. UNDP upgraded specialized departments in three East Jerusalem hospitals, thereby allowing more than 6,500 women annually to benefit from improved conditions during the reporting period. It also supported tertiary treatment for vulnerable cardiac patients, including women in Gaza, through the rehabilitation of a floor of the Palestine Red Crescent Society and the construction of two operation rooms for cardiac care.

38. In the first half of 2016, 6,166 women and girls benefited from water network repairs and water tankering supported by UNICEF, while 10,500 women and girls benefited from improved sanitation services. Some 9,000 households in Gaza received e-vouchers for hygiene items and another 14,400 households were provided with sanitation and hygiene items.

39. United Nations entities continued to provide psychosocial support to women and girls across the Occupied Palestinian Territory. UN-Women provided group and individual psychosocial counselling to 1,800 women and girls displaced during the escalation of hostilities in 2014. Through the psychosocial counselling programme, 56 gender-based violence cases were referred to other service providers for further follow-up. In the West Bank, in 21 locations, UNRWA engaged family and child protection committees, which are composed of community-based organization representatives, UNRWA staff, community leaders and the popular refugee committees, to reach more than 6,300 women and girls with support group discussions and awareness-raising events. With UNICEF support, the Ministry of Social Development and other partners reached 32,417 children (of whom 49 per cent were girls) with psychosocial support services, and 7,987 children (of whom 51 per cent were girls) with community-based child protection services, including in response to gender-based violence.

40. UN-Women provided physiotherapy, conducted by four women physiotherapists, to 16 women with disabilities and also provided necessary medical equipment. Some 30 women with disabilities received psychosocial and legal counselling in Gaza.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

41. Within their development programming, United Nations entities continued to prioritize initiatives to promote women's economic empowerment and improve food security and livelihoods.

42. During the reporting period, UN-Women provided technical assistance to 45 women-led micro, small and medium-sized enterprises and 547 beneficiaries to enhance the competitiveness and marketability of their products locally, regionally and internationally through a comprehensive capacity-building, on-the-job coaching programme. Financial assistance was provided for 34 women-led micro, small and medium-sized enterprises.

43. In a joint initiative by ILO and UN-Women, a participatory gender audit was conducted for two major Palestinian companies to enhance social responsibility and encourage a transformational change towards gender-responsive working environments.

44. FAO conducted several training sessions on marketing and bookkeeping for 90 women members of six women's cooperatives, to establish an effective finance and credit management system and links with reliable loan service providers. The training and workshops enhanced the women's capacity to manage loans. A total of 59 women from 10 women's cooperatives in the West Bank benefited from training focused on quality control, quality assurance and the application of local and international standards for food processing products.

45. The UNRWA job creation programme employed 17,063 refugees (of whom 26.4 per cent were female). The bulk of jobs (78.9 per cent) offered by the programme require unskilled labour; however, owing to social and cultural barriers, the programme faces challenges in finding culturally acceptable jobs for unskilled women. In the West Bank, the cash-for-work programme employed women as clerks, cleaners, guards, administrative assistants and tutors, among other roles. Over the reporting period, 8,124 labourers participated in the cash-for-work programme, of whom 41.2 per cent were female.

46. In Gaza, the enhanced UNRWA poverty assessment system makes it possible for vulnerable categories of women, such as women in polygamous marriages, widows, divorced women and women living in a state of separation from their husbands, to apply for an independent poverty assessment and receive food assistance from UNRWA separately from the male head of household. During the reporting period, 3,324 women applied for an assessment. Of the 2,082 cases already visited, 68.3 per cent qualified for assistance.

47. In the West Bank, UNRWA used a poverty-based targeting strategy for its social safety net programme that ranks households according to a variety of poverty-related elements. Of 7,613 households, 34 per cent are female-headed households and 55.3 per cent of beneficiaries are women. Priority interventions include essential food requirements, emergency cash intervention, referrals and in-house counselling.

48. Through general food distributions and vouchers, WFP ensured increased food consumption and dietary diversity for 294,818 female beneficiaries, 50 per cent of all beneficiaries. WFP food vouchers empower beneficiaries in managing household needs as they give them the freedom to choose which food commodities they want to buy. Women make the decisions on the use of the vouchers in 87 per cent of cases.

49. As part of reconstruction efforts in Gaza, UNDP provided transitional shelter cash assistance for 1,154 non-refugee families whose homes were damaged during the 2014 escalation of hostilities, with priority given to female-headed households, which comprise 10.7 per cent of the households in Gaza. In East Jerusalem, 150 Palestinian female-headed households benefited directly from improved living conditions through the rehabilitation of 250 homes.

50. ILO implemented a response programme in 2015 to train 50 women sheep breeders on management of sheep farms, life skills, financial and marketing literacy, cooperative work and business group formation. In the West Bank, FAO supported 85 women farmers with the construction of rainwater collection cisterns and facilitated land rehabilitation for five women farmers. In Gaza, FAO supported 65 female-headed households with vegetable and protein production units and rehabilitated 48 damaged animal shelters. In response to shocks, including unusual seasonal weather conditions in the West Bank, 71 women herders received drought-tolerant seeds to enhance their capacity to produce fodder for their animals. Some 30 animal shelters belonging to women herders were rehabilitated and FAO supported 240 women herders in the West Bank and Gaza by providing plastic sheeting for the winterization of animal shelters in preparation for cold weather conditions.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

51. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives designed to improve women's access to justice and enhance the capacity of institutions and personnel to prevent and respond to violence against women.

52. From January to June 2016, through the joint UNDP and UN-Women Rule of Law programme, in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, 5,248 women received free legal aid and 1,778 received legal rights awareness training. In Gaza, 2,025 women received legal aid and 6,569 received legal rights awareness training. In Gaza, OHCHR conducted training on gender-based violence and the right to life for women's organizations and female traditional community leaders. During the reporting period, and particularly in the context of the aftermath of the 2014 conflict, 2,749 internally displaced persons, including 123 sexual and gender-based violence survivors, received legal assistance through 10 legal aid clinics and 3 additional mobile aid clinics.

53. Through humanitarian response interventions implemented by United Nations entities and non-governmental organizations, 2,564 survivors of gender-based violence (including 107 men) accessed legal services; 2,645 survivors (2,521 women, 124 men) received psychosocial support services; and 19,904 people (17,094 women, 2,810 men) attended gender-based violence awareness-raising sessions or received information on related services. UNRWA continued to operate a gender-based violence referral system in Gaza and the West Bank providing services for Palestinian refugees. During the reporting period, 2,138 gender-based violence cases were identified in Gaza, 92.8 per cent of them against women. A total of 7,129 psychosocial counselling sessions were accessed by gender-based violence survivors and 994 women received legal counselling. In the West Bank, 309 women and girl survivors received support through the community mental health programme, through the mother-to-mother groups and through medical and school counsellors. A total of 11 cases of child marriage were identified through the gender-based violence referral system.

54. During the reporting period, UN-Women worked to improve the quality of services provided to women victims and survivors of gender-based violence in Gaza, with a special focus on internally displaced women. UN-Women interventions reached more than 5,736 beneficiaries (5,194 women and 542 men) with awareness-raising sessions on gender-based violence and related services. UN-Women and civil society partners, mainly the Al-Hayat Centre, the Arab Women's Forum and Wifaq Association, provided more than 131 women victims of gender-based violence with case management support. The Hayat Centre also supported vulnerable and at-risk groups such as women in conflict with the law (17 women) and children of divorced couples (20 children) with case management and reintegration services. UNFPA provided training for 800 service providers in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip on gender-based violence "detection", response and referral, utilizing the guidelines developed and the Palestinian national referral system. UNFPA supported the establishment of a "one-stop" centre in Jabalia in Gaza, as a pilot phase to serve as a safe space for gender-based violence survivors.

55. UNICEF and UNFPA further supported the development of standard operating procedures for gender-based violence and child protection case management and referral in Gaza. Some 160 Ministry of Social Development social workers, 61 Ministry of Education and Higher Education school counsellors and 38 Ministry of Health medical staff received orientation on the standard operating procedures, detection of gender-based violence and referrals.

56. UNODC continued to strengthen the capacity of the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Interior and the Palestinian Civil Police to manage, administer, deliver and expand forensic medicine and forensic science services in accordance with international standards, including with regard to the investigation of cases of gender-based violence. Seven Palestinian doctors continued their specialized training programme in forensic medicine, including the forensic examination of victims of sexual and gender-based violence. UNODC also conducted awareness workshops on gender-based violence and child abuse recognition and response for forensic medicine practitioners, the High Judicial Council, UNRWA refugee camp clinics, local non-governmental organizations and line ministries related to the national referral system for gender-based violence service providers in the State of Palestine.

E. Power and decision-making

57. During the reporting period, UN-Women enhanced women's political participation and leadership by providing technical assistance to 20 female local council members. Of these women, aged 25-45 years, 15 became active members in their councils and villages, voicing women's priorities and needs at local council meetings. In addition, UNDP established and institutionalized local economic development units in five medium-sized municipalities in Gaza, in which women have been assigned as specialists and focal points.

58. In UNRWA schools, 1,964 female students from 132 girls' elementary and preparatory schools participated in the school parliament programme. Female students discussed and engaged peers on a number of issues relating to gender equality, such as reproductive health and early marriage. In the West Bank, UNRWA conducted awareness-raising activities for 435 participants from local communities on Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\) on women, peace and security.

59. In 2016, UNICEF and local partners reached 6,747 disadvantaged adolescents (48.5 per cent of whom were female) from vulnerable communities with life skills programmes. Nearly 80 per cent of adolescent girls and boys from UNICEF-supported life skills projects are involved in and leading community initiatives. These projects equipped girls with important leadership skills for their participation in decision-making and community life.

F. Institutional development

60. During the reporting period, OHCHR continued to support the State of Palestine in strengthening its capacity to implement and report under the seven human rights treaties to which it has acceded, while addressing gender-based discrimination as a cross-cutting issue. OHCHR support included technical assistance through training and bilateral discussions with line ministries on treaty provisions, general comments and reporting guidelines. UN-Women and OHCHR supported the State of Palestine and the Independent Commission for Human Rights with technical assistance and resources to hold a national consultation on the draft State party report under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. About 140 representatives of civil society organizations from both the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip attended the consultation. OHCHR and UN-Women also conducted a training for civil society organizations in Gaza and the West Bank on their role in the human rights treaty reporting and implementation process, which included technical discussions on using national consultations and shadow reporting to advocate for and promote women's human rights.

61. With support from ILO and in consultation with tripartite constituents, the social security law for private sector workers and their family members was adopted, and signed by the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, on 7 March 2016. The law includes maternity protection insurance, which will support increased women's labour force participation and encourage employers to employ more women, by transferring the financial burden of covering maternity leave benefit from the employer to the social security fund.

62. In August 2016, the Ministry of Women's Affairs launched the national action plan on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000). Developed by the High National Committee for the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) and supported by UN-Women and ESCWA, among others, the plan establishes a comprehensive action framework in support of the efforts of the Palestinian Government, civil society and women's organizations to make the participation of women and the inclusion of their perspectives and needs in peace, security and humanitarian processes a reality.

63. Under the joint rule of law programme, UNDP and UN-Women provided support to justice and security institutions to mainstream a gender perspective in policies and procedures, including in the area of legislative drafting. The Palestinian Civil Police were supported in developing the first police gender strategy in the Arab region; the Council of Ministers held a series of national consultations for the finalization of the Family Protection Bill, which addresses domestic violence; and the Attorney General formalized a unit of Specialized Prosecutors for Protection of Family from Violence and appointed 19 specialized prosecutors, who receive continuing support from the joint programme. The joint programme provided technical support to the Ministry of Social Development, Ministry of Justice and Ministry of Interior for the review and development of the social protection, justice and security sector strategies as well as technical support to the State of Palestine in the reporting process to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women. It also supported the Palestinian Civil Police in the refurbishment of one of its buildings to become a centre for women and girls victims of violence.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

64. In the Occupied Palestinian Territory, fragmentation of the territory, lack of Palestinian unity, restrictions on access and movement, increased settlement expansion and violence and the closure of Gaza continued to impact negatively on the situation of Palestinian women. In Gaza, the humanitarian situation remains dire. The slow pace of recovery from the 2014 conflict is concerning and has exacerbated many of the protection concerns and challenges faced by women and girls described in previous reports. These include increased psychosocial stress, high unemployment rates, lack of livelihood opportunities, food insecurity, limited access to basic services, poor access to water, sanitation and energy, high rates of violence against women and lack of access to justice. In the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the surge in demolitions of Palestinian homes and livelihood structures during the reporting period and the associated displacement aggravated existing protection concerns. Restrictions on the freedom of movement continued to impact negatively on women's and girls' access to basic services, education and livelihood opportunities.

65. The rule of law remains a significant issue across the State of Palestine, with women and girls continuing to face significant challenges in accessing justice, including as a result of laws that discriminate on the basis of sex. More effort is needed to bring legislative frameworks into alignment with international human rights instruments such as the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. The preparation of the Palestine State Party report to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women presents an important milestone in support of increased accountability of national systems with regard to women's human rights and gender equality, and in identifying and addressing discrimination against women, both in law and in practice. Areas where legislative reform must clearly be undertaken in order to achieve substantive equality include: adopting the Family Protection Bill, which protects women from domestic violence; revising the personal status law to align with obligations under the Convention related to equality in inheritance, divorce and child custody, among other issues; and revising the penal code to remove all references to mitigating circumstances in sentencing for family-related killings (so called "honour killings") and to introduce sentences for different types of sexual and gender-based violence.

66. To advance the realization of women's human rights, continued technical support should be provided to Palestinian actors to fully engage with human rights treaty bodies and other relevant processes, including the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the Human Rights Council and its special procedures, the International Court of Justice and the International Criminal Court.<sup>19</sup> Technical support should be provided to women's organizations to facilitate their participation in human rights processes and to ensure stronger collaboration between women's organizations and mainstream human rights organizations in engaging with the Human Rights Council.

67. Violence against women remains a serious protection concern in the State of Palestine and the situation is particularly acute in Gaza. In support of the implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Women, the United Nations should build on efforts under way and continue to implement initiatives to improve women's access to justice and enhance the capacity of institutions and personnel to prevent and respond to violence against women. United Nations entities together with all key actors should support the implementation of a coordinated holistic, multisectoral approach to respond to violence against women and ensure availability of health care, psychosocial and legal assistance and counselling and economic empowerment, in line with the recommendations of the midterm review of the National Strategy.

68. United Nations system entities should increase prevention efforts, including initiatives aimed at mitigating the impact of the occupation and conflict on the increasing vulnerability and exposure of women and girls to violence, including settler violence, displacement, home demolitions and restrictions on movement.

69. Improving women's economic security and rights is key to supporting women's empowerment and protection at large. Policies aimed at expanding

---

<sup>19</sup> In the context of the preliminary examination into the situation of Palestine, the Office of the Prosecutor has called upon interested parties to submit information on violations of women's rights in respect of crimes within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court.

local production and creating jobs should support women's local production quality standards to enhance their potential to compete locally. Exploring opportunities for women's engagement in new economic sectors such as the information technology, manufacturing and tourism sectors would maximize opportunities for women's economic participation. As a further means of guiding young students and graduates away from an overcrowded professional sector, career counselling and technical and vocational education training services should be provided to enhance the attractiveness of technical careers. This should be coupled with making labour market information and job search mechanisms available to disadvantaged and marginalized female youth. In Gaza, given women's limited participation and economic opportunities to date, more attention must be paid to strengthening their participation in and opportunities generated by post-conflict recovery and reconstruction efforts.

70. Prospects of national and local elections continue to be a great challenge and women remain underrepresented in decision-making bodies at various levels of public life, the peace processes and national reconciliation efforts. It is therefore crucial to support long-term sustainable mechanisms to enhance the political representation and leadership of Palestinian women in a way that would set women's issues high on the national agenda. Consciousness of political rights and the building of transformative communities are significant conditions for creating an enabling environment that can influence the direction of politics and development in favour of women.

71. The United Nations continues to support the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East. The promotion of women's human rights and empowerment remains essential to these efforts. The national action plan on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\) on women, peace and security, launched by the State of Palestine in 2016, establishes a comprehensive action framework for making the participation of women and the inclusion of their perspectives and needs in peace, security and humanitarian processes a reality. The United Nations should support the implementation and monitoring of the national action plan and, in addition, utilize the opportunities presented by Security Council resolution 2242 \(2015\) for bringing violations of human rights and humanitarian law experienced by Palestinian women to the attention of the Security Council, including through the briefings of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process.

72. The overall increase in politically motivated violence during the reporting period is concerning, further threatening the prospects of peace. Finding a political solution to the conflict remains essential.

Economic and Social Council

Distr.: General
5 January 2018

Original: English

---

Commission on the Status of Women

Sixty-second session

12–23 March 2018

Item 3 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”: gender mainstreaming, situations and programmatic matters

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

Report of the Secretary-General**

Summary

The present report, submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2017/10, highlights the situation of Palestinian women for the period from 1 October 2016 to 30 September 2017, and provides an overview of the assistance provided by the entities of the United Nations system with regard to education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The report concludes with recommendations for consideration by the Commission on the Status of Women.

---

* E/CN.6/2018/1.

** The submission of the report was delayed in order to complete consultations among all relevant offices.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution 2017/10 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations. The Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out by the Secretary-General in his previous report on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2017/6), and submit a report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its sixty-second session on the progress made in the implementation of the resolution. The present report covers the period from 1 October 2016 to 30 September 2017 and reviews the situation of Palestinian women on the basis of information from the United Nations entities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

2. Unless otherwise indicated, the report is based on contributions and information submitted by entities of the United Nations system that provide assistance to Palestinian women. It includes contributions from the following United Nations entities: the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Health Organization (WHO). It also reflects information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA). The report builds on previous annual reports on this topic and complements other reports on the living and socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people (see A/72/87-E/2017/67, A/72/368-S/2017/741, A/72/90-E/2017/71 and A/72/13).

II. Situation of Palestinian women

3. This section highlights political developments during the reporting period. The volatile political, socioeconomic and humanitarian situation described below has a profound impact on all Palestinians. Analysis and an understanding of the gender-specific aspects of the situation are essential for effective responses to security, development and humanitarian needs. As further detailed in section III below, the impact of the crisis on the everyday lives and the future of women, young women and girls is immense and compounded by prevailing discrimination in law and in practice.

4. During the reporting period, the international community continued efforts to preserve the possibility of a two-State solution and promote an enabling environment for final status negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians. On 23 December 2016, the Security Council adopted its resolution 2334 \(2016\), in which the Council reaffirmed that the establishment of settlements by Israel in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, has no legal validity, constitutes a flagrant violation under international law and remains a major obstacle to the achievement of the two-State solution. The Council reiterated concerns regarding the continued construction and expansion of settlements, violence against civilians, including acts of terror, and acts of provocation and destruction. The Council also underlined that it will not recognize any changes to the 4 June 1967 lines, including with regard to Jerusalem, other than those agreed by the parties through negotiations.

5. On 15 January 2017, at a conference hosted by France, participants from 70 countries reaffirmed their commitment to a negotiated two-State solution as the only way to achieve a just, lasting and comprehensive resolution of the conflict and enduring peace (see S/2017/50). Participants expressed their readiness to contribute to arrangements to ensure the sustainability of a negotiated peace agreement. During the reporting period, and as detailed in the report of the Secretary-General on a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine (A/72/368-S/2017/741), the Russian Federation, Arab leaders under the 2002 Arab Peace Initiative and the United States of America undertook efforts to restart negotiations and advance peace. For the first time in 2017, the Middle East Quartet convened in Jerusalem, on 13 July, at the envoy level to discuss efforts to advance peace in the Middle East as well as the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Gaza. The parties reached limited agreements and understandings covering electricity, water, communication and postal services.

6. There was an upward trend in settlement activities, and rates of demolitions of Palestinian-owned structures remained high during the reporting period. On 6 February 2017, following the order issued by the Israeli High Court of Justice for the evacuation and demolition of the illegal settlement outpost of Amona, the Knesset adopted the “regularization bill”, which effectively authorizes the appropriation of privately owned Palestinian land in the West Bank.<sup>1</sup> The law was adopted despite objections by the Attorney General of Israel that it is unconstitutional and in violation of international law (see A/72/87-E/2017/67, para. 7). Since the beginning of the reporting period, plans for more than 12,000 housing units have been advanced, approved or tendered in Area C and in East Jerusalem, more than double the total for 2016. One such plan is for a new settlement deep inside the West Bank, which would further obstruct the establishment of a contiguous Palestinian State in any future peace agreement. Several petitions against the law are currently being considered by the Israeli High Court of Justice, and its implementation has been halted until the Court rules on its legality.

7. The reporting period was also marked by regular clashes between Israeli security forces and Palestinian demonstrators in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. During April and May, protests escalated in support of a hunger strike by Palestinians imprisoned in Israel, and, in July, events in and around the Aqsa Mosque in the Old City of Jerusalem led to several weeks of widespread unrest in East Jerusalem and elsewhere in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Following a deadly attack on two Israeli police officers at one of the entrances to the Aqsa Mosque on 14 July, tensions around the holy site and in East Jerusalem quickly escalated as Palestinians and Muslim religious authorities rejected Israeli measures taken in response to the attack; Palestinian worshippers refused to enter the compound. Clashes between protesters and police after Friday prayers on 21 July resulted in the killing of three Palestinians. Later that night, a Palestinian man entered a house in the Israeli settlement of Halamish and stabbed to death three members of an Israeli family

---

<sup>1</sup> Following the signing of the 1993 Oslo Accords and the 1995 interim agreements between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the West Bank was divided into three zones, Areas A, B and C. Extensive responsibility was delegated by Israel to the Palestinian Authority in Areas A and B. Area C remained under full authority of Israel.

before he was shot and detained. At the height of the unrest, the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, announced a halt to all contact with the Israeli authorities, including for security coordination. Following regional and international mediation efforts, Israel removed all of the security measures and equipment that it had installed at the entrances to the Aqsa Mosque, and by 28 July Muslim religious leaders in East Jerusalem had called on worshippers to resume prayers inside the compound, thereby reducing tensions. Contact and security coordination between Israeli and Palestinian authorities have since been resumed.

8. During the reporting period, the ongoing Palestinian political divide continued to widen the chasm between Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, impeded efforts to achieve a negotiated solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and worsened the already dire humanitarian situation for Palestinians living in Gaza and the West Bank. In a manifestation of this political division, Palestinians in Gaza were unable to participate in municipal elections. The elections, which were held on 13 May 2017, were limited to the West Bank (excluding East Jerusalem). In Gaza, following the election by Hamas of a new leadership and the formation of an “administrative committee” in March 2017 to run governmental affairs in Gaza, the Palestinian Authority took a number of measures to stop subsidizing the de facto authorities in Gaza. This included making cuts related to salaries and allowances, stipends for former prisoners and electricity supply, as well as compelling Palestinian Authority employees in the Gaza Strip to take early retirement. For its part, Hamas arrested Fatah members, banned Fatah political activities in public and prevented Fatah senior officials from leaving Gaza. Hamas also appointed local judicial personnel and executed six alleged collaborators with Israel without seeking approval from President Abbas, as required under Palestinian law. The Palestinian Authority has consistently made three demands to Hamas aimed at resolving the current standoff: to dissolve the Administrative Committee; to allow the Government of national consensus, led by Prime Minister Rami Hamdallah, to work in Gaza; and to hold general elections. On 17 September 2017, as a result of mediation efforts by Egypt, Hamas agreed to those demands, thereby raising hopes for an end to the Palestinian divide.

9. During the reporting period, the humanitarian situation in Gaza worsened owing to several factors, including the ongoing impact of the hostilities in July and August 2014, the closure of Gaza, the internal Palestinian divide and a long-standing electricity crisis affecting 2 million people in Gaza. The impact of the hostilities in 2014 continues to shape the current political, social and humanitarian context and, three years on, an estimated 25,500 people remain internally displaced. In mid-April 2017, the sole power plant in Gaza, which provided about a third of its electricity, was forced to shut down following the failure by the Palestinian Authority and Hamas to resolve a dispute over the payment of taxes on fuel. In May, the supply was reduced by 30 per cent after the Palestinian Authority had informed the Israeli Electricity Company that it would no longer pay in full for the electricity supplied to Gaza through Israel. As a result, Gaza receives only 4 to 6 hours of electricity a day, down from 8 to 12 hours before April, which has had a particularly grave impact on the delivery of essential health, water, and sanitation services.<sup>2</sup> The lack of power has also had a severe impact on sewage treatment. The raw sewage being poured into the sea is polluting the coastline and constitutes an unfolding environmental disaster. As women and girls bear the majority of household responsibilities in Palestinian society, they are disproportionately affected by the current impact of the electricity crisis.

---

<sup>2</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “2017 Gaza crisis: urgent funding appeal”, July 2017. Available from <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/2017-gaza-crisis-urgent-funding-appeal>.

III. Assistance to Palestinian women

10. This section further outlines the gender dimensions of the situation of Palestinian women and details the United Nations efforts to respond to and deliver assistance amid complex humanitarian challenges. It provides updated information on the assistance provided by the United Nations system, in cooperation with the Government of the State of Palestine, donors and civil society, to address the specific needs and priorities of women, young women and girls in the following areas: education and training; health; economic empowerment and livelihoods; the rule of law and violence against women; power and decision-making; and institutional development. The volatile context and the constrained funding environment continue to pose operational challenges for the delivery of assistance and have an impact on the sustainability of the progress achieved.

11. Current priorities for the provision of United Nations support to the Palestinian people are outlined in a set of key documents, including the United Nations Development Assistance Framework 2018–2022 for the State of Palestine, which is aligned with the Palestinian National Policy Agenda (2017–2022), the Cross-Sectoral National Gender Strategy 2017–2022 and the 2017 Humanitarian Response Plan, which outlines humanitarian needs and responses. In addition, the humanitarian community issued an emergency appeal to address the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Gaza.

A. Education and training

12. Young women, young men, boys and girls continue to face distinct and gender-specific challenges in accessing education throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Lack of safe public spaces and routes to school for young women and girls, the risk for young men and boys of confrontations and involvement in clashes with security forces or demonstrations, and social and cultural norms within families and communities continue to have a negative impact and sometimes make safe and accessible education unavailable for young people and children. Young women and girls often have limited access to educational opportunities that are available or provided as a priority to young men and boys. Many young women and girls are often kept at home owing to a lack of safe public spaces, as well as to sociocultural norms.

13. Grave violations of children's rights continue at staggering levels. As reported by UNICEF, from October 2016 to September 2017, 4,107 incidents were documented, affecting 39,762 children. This included the killing of 19 Palestinian children (3 girls and 16 boys) and the injury of 570 children (32 Palestinian girls, 530 Palestinian boys, 1 Israeli girl and 7 Israeli boys). In addition, 283 incidents relating to access to education were documented. According to the latest data received from the Israel Prison Service on children in military detention, a total of 318 children (including 10 girls) were being held in detention at the end of June 2017. Children continue to be detained across the West Bank and East Jerusalem for security-related offences and through administrative detention (see A/72/361-S/2017/821).

14. United Nations entities continued to implement a range of initiatives to promote access for women, young women and girls to education and training and to improve learning environments. During the academic year 2016/17, UNRWA operated 96 schools in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and 267 in Gaza, serving more than 310,000 students, of whom half (49.9 per cent) are female. In addition to basic education, UNRWA continued to offer technical and vocational education and training. During the reporting period, 578 girls in Gaza (33.6 per cent of all students) and 587 girls in the West Bank (58 per cent of all students) participated in such training. UNESCO provided training to 3,646 female students to improve their management, language, life and research skills across 10 community libraries established by the agency in the West Bank and Gaza. The Right to Higher Education Advocacy Campaign was implemented in four of those community libraries, which addressed the right of women to enrol in higher education institutions.

15. UNRWA, through its education and community mental health programmes, also supported teachers and school counsellors, along with students and their families, to provide counselling and address gender-based discrimination and the underlying causes of school drop-out rates. To address the limited access of adolescents and young people to safe public spaces, UNICEF provided vulnerable adolescents with capacity-building on core life skills through its entrepreneurial and civic engagement programmes. Young people have applied the skills gained in those youth-led initiatives, which has enabled them to voice issues of concern to them and take an active role within their communities, as agents of positive change. The United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) and UN-Women also began the implementation of a joint programme to support women and youth leadership in post-conflict recovery through the use of digital technologies to establish safe, accessible and gender-responsive public spaces in Gaza.

16. In the West Bank, UNICEF and partners continued to address the important need for safety in public spaces by providing schoolchildren with protection to and from school in locations where the Israeli military and settlers are present. This programme benefited approximately 8,000 children (43.75 per cent of whom were girls) and 400 teachers (75 per cent of whom were women). UNDP, through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to provide education support to girls in Area C of the West Bank through mobile science and computer laboratory services in remote areas, which benefited 400 girls. A total of 220 girls benefited from the installation of a solar system to generate clean energy for schools and to relieve the schools of some of their operating costs.

B. Health

17. Women and girls have the right to health and the right to receive non-discriminatory health-care services that are not only accessible and affordable, but also of good quality. Significant challenges in the provision and accessibility of health-care services remain throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, leaving many Palestinians deprived of those rights. Palestinian women face major and distinct barriers to access to adequate health care. Accessing care can often result in an unmanageable financial burden, including travel costs, the direct costs of care, associated costs of childcare and loss of income, when women need to travel to facilities far from their homes.

18. The public health system in Gaza remains overstretched as a result of ever-increasing demand, frequent power cuts and a lack of financial and medical resources owing to facility closures and the internal Palestinian political divide. Palestine refugees, who make up some 70 per cent of the population in Gaza, are increasingly unable to pay fees at the facilities of the Ministry of Health, and it is even harder to pay at private clinics. The population relies heavily on UNRWA for primary health-care services. Demand for UNRWA health-care services has also increased owing to the decline of the health-care services provided by the Ministry of Health and the chronic shortage of medicines and medical supplies at the Ministry's central pharmacy.

19. The maternal mortality ratio in the Occupied Palestinian Territory stands at 25 (20 in the West Bank and 31 in Gaza) per 100,000 live births, according to the Ministry of Health.<sup>3</sup> Yet, challenges still remain in maintaining the low maternal mortality rates and preventing avoidable deaths, such as: limited access to basic health-care services for women and children; limited early detection of developmental delays and disabilities in children; lack of quality of care as a result of overcrowding in hospitals; lack of adequate equipment and supplies; and the early discharge of mothers after birth.

20. Lack of mobility, travel restrictions and the denial of travel authorizations also have an impact on the ability of Palestinians to seek, afford and receive the health care that they need. During the reporting period, the acceptance rate for patients from the West Bank who had applied to the Israeli authorities for permits to exit the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained relatively stable, at 80 per cent.<sup>4</sup> However, there was a significant overall decline in the acceptance rates for permits to exit Gaza for health-care purposes. In September 2017, the acceptance rate was 55 per cent.<sup>5</sup> During the reporting period, 12,698 female patients submitted requests for travel permits to exit the Gaza Strip through the Erez checkpoint for specialized medical treatment in other Palestinian medical facilities, hospitals in the West Bank and East Jerusalem and, to a lesser extent, Israeli hospitals. Of these requests, 6,986 (55 per cent) were approved, 286 (2 per cent) were denied and 5,426 (43 per cent) received delayed responses after the time of the patients' hospital appointments. The approval rate for applications from female patients was higher than that for male patients: from January 2017 to August 2017, 57.2 per cent of applications from women were approved, compared with 49.7 per cent for men. At least 164 female patients were asked to appear for an Israeli security interrogation as a precondition for consideration of their application in 2017.

21. While all residents of the Gaza Strip are exempt from health-care service fees under the presidential decision of 26 June 2007, patients who require a medical referral outside the Strip have been affected by procedural delays since mid-May 2017, with a decline in the number of referrals and a slowing of the process of issuing financial coverage documents for Gaza by the relevant authorities in Ramallah. In August 2017, 1,297 referral documents were issued for Gaza patients. This is 40 per cent lower than the monthly average in the first quarter of 2017 (2,149) and 34 per cent lower than the corresponding month of 2016.

22. In response, the United Nations continued its efforts to improve health-care services. UNRWA remained a major provider of primary health-care services for Palestine refugees, operating 22 health centres in Gaza and 42 in the West Bank. In Gaza, between October 2016 and July 2017, 1,893,030 medical consultations were conducted for Palestinian refugees, of which 60 per cent were for women. In the West

<sup>3</sup> State of Palestine, Ministry of Health, "National Health Strategy 2014–2016".

<sup>4</sup> During the reporting period, WHO monitored and analysed women's access to health-care services through an examination of permit data, disaggregated by sex, for patients seeking access to medical facilities outside Gaza and the West Bank, in East Jerusalem and elsewhere.

<sup>5</sup> WHO, "Health access for referral patients from the Gaza Strip", monthly report, September 2017.

Bank, including East Jerusalem, 503,545 medical consultations were provided, of which 61 per cent were for women. UNRWA also provided medical services through its emergency mobile clinics to approximately 26,050 women residing in various localities in Area C.

23. Maternal and child health care continued to be an essential component of assistance. In Gaza, UNRWA provided assistance to 36,750 newly registered pregnant women, antenatal care to 245,436 women and postnatal care to 32,558 women. More than 98 per cent of all pregnant women paid at least four visits to an UNRWA health centre during their pregnancy. To reduce neonatal mortality and introduce safe and evidence-based practices to save lives at birth, WHO supported the introduction of the early essential newborn care package in Gaza, making the Occupied Palestinian Territory the first place in the Eastern Mediterranean region to implement the package. Some 34,100 women and newborns have benefited from these services in the hospitals of the Ministry of Health. In addition, with support from WHO, the Palestinian National Institute of Public Health implemented a maternal and child health electronic registry, a customized interactive checklist that facilitates data collection and utilization to guide evidence-based interventions to improve the quality of service. The electronic registry was implemented in 77 primary health-care clinics in five districts in the West Bank. To address the limited access to good-quality newborn care services in Area C of the West Bank, UNICEF provided the Ministry of Health with three mobile clinics that will serve 10,000 children and their caregivers. A package of essential basic health-care services, including the provision of medication for acute diseases, and maternal and child health-care services are provided to these communities on a weekly basis. UN-Women trained approximately 1,108 women from 23 localities near the Bethlehem and Hebron Governorates on sexual and reproductive health and issues relating to sexual and gender-based violence.

24. Through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, UNDP continued to provide health-care services in East Jerusalem to female-headed households that lack formal health insurance. Through the Programme, 5,065 female patients were covered by the three Palestinian hospitals in East Jerusalem. UN-Women provided support to community-based organizations and women's organizations to strengthen their participation in humanitarian assistance. In Area C, some 30 women, including women with disabilities, benefited from counselling, legal and psychosocial services. In Gaza, some 50 women with disabilities received training to enhance their physical and psychological preparedness for emergencies.

C. Economic empowerment and livelihoods

25. Women, including young women, continue to face serious challenges linked to economic empowerment and insecurity. In Gaza, the electricity crisis and its effects, described above, significantly disrupt daily life and have a disproportionate impact on women and girls, who bear most of the household responsibilities in Palestinian society. The heavy care responsibilities and limited access to water and electricity reduce women's ability to engage in income-generating activities or to allocate time to their own needs.

26. There have been no improvements in the rates of food insecurity among Palestinian households since the issuance of the previous report. According to FAO, food insecurity affects 46 per cent of Palestinian households in the Gaza Strip and 17 per cent of Palestinian households in the West Bank. In the West Bank, the prevalence of food insecurity among female-headed households is 10 percentage points higher than among male-headed households, while it is 3 percentage points higher in the Gaza Strip. When disaggregated by sex, the prevalence of food insecurity should be considered alongside the information available on the assistance received by households. The average value of the total support received by female-headed households is 30 per cent greater than that received by male-headed households.

27. The rate of labour-force participation for Palestinian women remains among the lowest in the region, at 19.1 per cent.<sup>6</sup> While female participation in the labour market has increased over the past few years, unemployment rates are higher among women than men. In the second quarter of 2017, the unemployment rate among women rose to a staggering 71.5 per cent in Gaza and reached 36.2 per cent in the West Bank.<sup>7</sup> The gender wage gap also persisted, with the average daily wage for Palestinian women reaching 83 new Israeli shekels (NIS), compared with NIS 114 for men.<sup>8</sup> The unemployment rate for youth aged 20–24 years continued to rise, reaching 46.3 per cent in the second quarter of 2017, with unemployment rates of 38.3 per cent among young men and 72.7 per cent among young women.<sup>9</sup> While Palestinian female jobseekers generally have relatively high levels of education in comparison with their male counterparts and with women in other developing countries, those qualifications, as previously reported, have not translated into higher levels of employment. Against this backdrop, United Nations entities continued to prioritize initiatives promoting women’s economic empowerment, improving food security and livelihoods in their programming.

28. UN-Women, FAO and the International Trade Centre (ITC) supported the functioning of a “one-stop shop” in Ramallah as a comprehensive hub of services to improve access to economic opportunities for micro-, small and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs) run by Palestinian women. The one-stop shop provided a range of services to women entrepreneurs and start-ups, including services linked to business development, capacity development, trade facilitation, access to capital or finance and production support. FAO continued to provide training and coaching to enhance the capacity of its two retail shops in the northern and southern West Bank, which market agricultural products from more than 15 women’s cooperatives and two women’s associations, with a total of almost 700 members. Moreover, FAO provided direct support to 20 women’s cooperatives in successfully registering the trademarks of their products, and 15 women’s cooperatives received specialized training on marketing. UN-Women provided technical assistance to 43 women-led MSMEs in the West Bank and Gaza and financial assistance to 34 women-led MSMEs. Of the 43 targeted MSMEs, 35 reported having increased their sales turnover since the beginning of the programme in 2015, by an average of 42.8 per cent.

29. Through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, UNDP supported the establishment of 174 women-led MSMEs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In addition, 640 women were employed through job placement activities, 225 women received capacity development packages to support their economic <sup>6</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “International Women’s Day 2017”, press release, 7 March 2017.

<sup>7</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “Results of the labour force survey second-quarter (April–June 2017) round”, press release, 7 August 2017.

<sup>8</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “International Women’s Day 2017”.

<sup>9</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “Results of the labour force survey second-quarter (April–June 2017) round”.

endeavours and 35 women were supported in accessing external markets related to food processing, textiles, and light industries. According to a UNDP assessment, more than 85 per cent of the women interviewed declared that the capacity development interventions had enhanced their competencies and the success of their projects. Approximately 80 per cent of the women reported an improvement in their bargaining power within the family and improved relationships in their community. Moreover, women reported positive changes in their mobility, access to the market and ability to sell products.

30. The Microfinance Department of UNRWA disbursed 1,693 loans, valued at $1,883,180, to women (44 per cent of the total number of loans), with the Women's Household Credit being the most common loan type. Most loans are for livelihood activities and to support the resilience of these women and their families. The microfinance programme is aimed at overcoming barriers related to access to financing by setting lower requirements than the formal banking system and regularly updating its product portfolio.

31. The UNRWA job creation programme employed 16,323 refugees, of whom 24.4 per cent were women. Most jobs offered by the programme require unskilled labour; however, owing to social and cultural barriers, the programme continues to face challenges in finding culturally acceptable jobs for unskilled women. Through a community outreach programme, which includes training and job placement, the UNRWA Gender Initiative is aimed at increasing opportunities for young women. During the reporting period, 817 young female graduates of the Young Women Leaders Programme<sup>10</sup> were provided with professional skills training and 235 benefited from a three-month work placement in the private sector or civil society organizations. Approximately 25 per cent of graduates were able to secure employment after completing the training and work placement.

32. United Nations entities continued to provide social safety nets to women in vulnerable situations. To support women's livelihoods in sustainable agriculture and enhance their resilience, FAO supported 16 women farmers in the West Bank through the establishment of rainwater collection cisterns and 12 women herders through the rehabilitation of community cisterns for livestock use, and facilitated land rehabilitation for five women farmers. UNDP provided economic assistance to 22 female-headed households awaiting family reunification in East Jerusalem. The assistance enables family members, especially women, to acquire income-generating skills while waiting for reunification. UNRWA continued to implement a social safety net programme, which benefited 2,558 female-headed households in Gaza (34 per cent of the total number of households targeted) and 2,558 female-headed households in the West Bank (34 per cent of the total number of households).

33. Through general food distribution and vouchers, WFP ensured increased food consumption and dietary diversity for 490,000 beneficiaries, of whom 242,500 were women. To raise awareness on healthful and appropriate nutritional practices, WFP conducted 24 sessions on nutrition, with training benefiting 2,953 food-insecure women and 991 food-insecure men who were beneficiaries of the WFP voucher programme in Gaza. WFP food vouchers empower beneficiaries and allow them to manage the needs of their household, as they have the freedom to choose their food commodities. Based on WFP monitoring, women make 92 per cent of decisions on the use of the voucher and the types of food commodities to redeem; by comparison, 4 per cent of decisions are made by men only and 4 per cent are joint decisions.

---

<sup>10</sup> Participants in the Young Women Leaders Programme have completed university degrees.

34. ILO continued to promote entrepreneurship education in partnership with the Ministry of Labour and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education, while mainstreaming a gender perspective and empowering female youth and women. ILO supported cooperatives by providing training to women's business groups, paying special attention to the integration of women into existing cooperatives and the creation of new women-only cooperatives and cooperative management. In Gaza, ILO supported capacity-building and business plan development for existing cooperatives, including the Gaza Saving and Credit Cooperative, which comprises 1,470 female members and seeks to empower women through the provision of financial capital. FAO trained 60 female employees of the Ministries of Agriculture, National Economy and Health on animal health and food safety to enhance government capacity to implement sanitary and phytosanitary measures. With the support of FAO, four women also enrolled in a new programme for a master's degree in biotechnology and rural development.

D. Rule of law and violence against women

35. Structural inequalities, poverty and discrimination have a significant impact on the access of women and girls to justice and security. Despite the existence of laws condemning violence against women, the limited jurisdiction of the Palestinian authorities limits enforcement in some areas. Palestinian women experience high levels of gender-based violence, are subject, directly and indirectly, to political and social violence and have limited access to water and electricity, housing, land and property, employment opportunities, higher education and health care, including prenatal and neonatal health care.<sup>11</sup> Psychosocial distress levels, which were already high among the Gaza population, have worsened significantly as a result of the conflict and will continue to require specialized support, specifically for children, adolescent girls and women.

36. Efforts to meet the obligation to prevent violence against women in Area C and East Jerusalem are severely constrained by the inability of the Palestinian authorities to access the populations. The political divide between the de facto authority in Gaza and the Palestinian Authority also hinders the application of the law. Palestinian women continue to face specific challenges in accessing justice, including laws that discriminate on the basis of sex, notably with respect to inheritance, child custody and other personal status issues; women's limited knowledge of their human rights and related procedures; economic dependency; and social pressures and stigma.

37. Gender-based violence in all its forms, including sexual violence, intimate-partner violence and forced marriage, remains a major protection and health concern. In Gaza, poverty and the absence of economic opportunities contribute to violence against women.<sup>12</sup> Pervasive impunity for violence against women means that perpetrators of violence rarely, if ever, face legal, criminal or social penalties. Moreover, violence against women in the context of marriage is not considered a crime in civil law, and salient family law in Gaza and dominant social norms prioritize the preservation of a marriage over the rights of victims. Survey findings demonstrate the high value placed on “honour”, with 47 per cent of men and 38 per cent of women believing that women and girls deserve punishment from their families when “honour” is perceived to have been breached. Thirty-five per cent of men and 22 per cent of women also indicated that “honour” killings should not be punished by law.<sup>13</sup> In addition, one third of men and one quarter of women surveyed believed that some violence against women can be justified, and the majority of men and women believed that women should tolerate such violence. Owing in part to such beliefs, only 0.7 per cent of survivors seek help as a result of the lack of confidential and compassionate services and fear of stigma and reprisal.<sup>14</sup> Efforts to address such attitudinal beliefs are needed, alongside efforts to strengthen the rule of law, legal protection and women’s access to justice.

<sup>11</sup> UNFPA and the Culture and Free Thought Association, "Protection in the windward: conditions and rights of internally displaced girls and women during the latest Israeli military operation on the Gaza Strip", October 2014.

<sup>12</sup> UN-Women, "Navigating through shattered paths: NGO service providers and women survivors of gender-based violence — an assessment of GBV services in Gaza", research paper, September 2017.

38. The joint UNDP and UN-Women programme on the rule of law supported the Government in strengthening the legal framework by improving the capacity of the justice and security institutions to mainstream a gender perspective into structures and services. A one-stop centre for women victims of violence was opened in Ramallah in 2017. The Civil Police Gender Strategy was launched in February 2017, which is the first gender strategy developed by a police force in the Arab States region. In October 2016, the number of specialized prosecutors dealing with family protection cases increased to 26, compared with 15 in the first quarter of 2014, when the first specialized prosecutors were identified. The partnership between UN-Women and the High Judicial Council was strengthened, and the Chief Justice announced the intention of the court under the Council’s jurisdiction to ensure the provision of specialized expertise relating to violence against women in cases across all levels of courts. The Chief Justice also announced an increase in the number of judges working on cases of violence against women from 12 in October 2016 to 29 in May 2017. From October 2016 to April 2017, approximately 13,000 women and 1,100 girls in the West Bank received legal support, including representation, advice, mediation, awareness-raising and training.

39. During the reporting period, UNFPA and partners identified 12,606 cases of gender-based violence. Of these, more than 10,000 cases resulted in one or more types of psychosocial, health and legal assistance. The United Nations and its partners established three local referral pathways, which include coalitions of 77 providers of health, psychosocial, legal and shelter services. In addition, 17,802 women and men at the community level, in both the West Bank and Gaza, participated in awareness-raising sessions on gender-based violence.

40. In Gaza, UNICEF, along with the Ministry of Social Development and other partners, provided psychosocial support services to 4,965 children (52 per cent of whom were girls) and child protection services to 5,986 children (47 per cent of whom were girls). In addition, 27 girls and 76 women in need of psychosocial support were identified through situation monitoring and referred to appropriate services. In Gaza, 82 girls and 62 women with disabilities were identified and referred for support, while 51 older women and 14 women victims of gender-based violence were identified and referred for support through the disability and gender-based violence working groups.

<sup>13</sup> Shereen El Feki, Gary Barker and Brian Heilman, eds., Understanding Masculinities: Results from the International Men and Gender Equality Survey (IMAGES) — Middle East and North Africa (Egypt, Lebanon, Morocco and Palestine) (Cairo and Washington, D.C., UN-Women and Promundo, 2017).

<sup>14</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “Violence survey in the Palestinian Territory, 2011”, March 2012.

41. UNFPA and its partners established two new safe spaces for women and girls, in compliance with the National Referral System for Women Victims of Violence, in Qalqilyah city and in the old city of Hebron in the West Bank, while continuing to support, operate and develop the active safe space in Jabaliya camp in Gaza. The implementing partners of UNFPA conducted 365 outreach sessions on protection from and prevention of gender-based violence, reaching 6,457 community members, and provided 900 dignity kits for survivors of gender-based violence.

