199. La loi n° 4 de 1998 relative à la fonction publique, la loi n° 4 de 2005 portant modification de la loi de 1998, la circulaire d'application de la loi n° 4 de 1998, promulguée par le décret du Conseil des ministres n° 45 de 2005, et la circulaire révisée d'application de la loi n° 4 de 2005, promulguée par le décret du Conseil des ministres n° 15 de 2008, constituent les textes régissant le droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques au sens général. Ces textes organisent les relations de travail dans l'administration publique et définissent et organisent les divers aspects et domaines relatifs à ce droit : publicité, définition des parties, définition de la partie détentrice du droit de supervision administrative de la concrétisation et de l'application de ce droit, définition des droits et devoirs des fonctionnaires, mesures administratives et disciplinaires en cas de violation par le fonctionnaire de ses obligations professionnelles, et autres questions relatives à la fonction publique.

1. Procédure de nomination dans la fonction publique au niveau de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne

200. La loi palestinienne sur la fonction publique énonce une série de procédures que les autorités compétentes doivent respecter et appliquer pour les nominations à des postes de la fonction publique, procédures qui sont définies conformément à la loi comme suit :

- Annonce des postes vacants. L'article 19 de la loi sur la fonction publique impose aux services compétents d'annoncer les postes vacants dans les deux semaines qui suivent le moment où ils deviennent vacants, dans au moins deux quotidiens, en précisant dans l'annonce les caractéristiques et les exigences du poste;

- Nécessité d'organiser des concours. L'article 20 de la loi sur la fonction publique impose aux services compétents, pour les postes nécessitant l'organisation d'un concours de recrutement comportant des épreuves écrites et orales, d'annoncer l'organisation du concours, de publier les noms des candidats ayant réussi aux épreuves écrites puis les noms de ceux qui ont réussi à l'ensemble du concours et leur classement en fonction des notes obtenues;
- Nécessité de publier la liste des personnes admises à passer le concours dans au moins deux quotidiens, deux jours de suite, avec indication du lieu et de la date du concours;
- Obligation de procéder à la nomination après le concours conformément à l'article 22 de la loi sur la fonction publique. Le recrutement se fait dans l'ordre des résultats du concours et, en cas de notes égales, la priorité est accordée à celui qui a le plus de compétence et d'expérience. En cas d'égalité des niveaux de compétence et d'expérience, la priorité est accordée au plus âgé. Les personnes qui ne sont pas recrutées dans un délai d'un an à partir de l'annonce des résultats du concours perdent le bénéfice de celui-ci.

2. Conditions de nomination dans la fonction publique

201. L'article 24 de la loi sur la fonction publique dispose que le futur fonctionnaire doit remplir les conditions suivantes :

1. Être palestinien ou arabe;
2. Être âgé de plus de 18 ans;
3. Être exempt de maladies et de handicaps physiques ou mentaux incompatibles avec l'exercice des fonctions considérées;
4. Jouir de ses droits civils et ne pas être encore sous le coup d'une condamnation pour un crime ou délit constitutif d'atteinte à l'honneur et à la probité.

3. Période probatoire préalable à la nomination

202. L'article 30 de la loi sur la fonction publique habilite l'administration ou les services compétents à instaurer une période probatoire au cours de laquelle la performance du nouveau fonctionnaire est évaluée. Si cette évaluation est négative ou que l'intéressé ne convient pas pour le poste qu'il occupe, l'intéressé reçoit un préavis de licenciement deux semaines avant l'expiration de la période probatoire (un an). À l'inverse, si le nouveau fonctionnaire achève la période probatoire avec succès, le chef du service compétent prend une décision de confirmation du fonctionnaire dans son poste avec effet à sa date de prise de fonctions et cette décision est portée à l'attention du Conseil de la fonction publique.

203. En outre, l'article 36 de la circulaire d'application de la loi sur la fonction publique stipule que le supérieur hiérarchique direct du nouveau fonctionnaire est tenu d'établir pendant la période probatoire des rapports mensuels sur ce dernier à l'intention du chef de service compétent. Un mois avant l'expiration de la période probatoire, le supérieur hiérarchique direct est tenu d'établir à l'intention du chef du service compétent un rapport final récapitulatif des rapports antérieurs et précisant le degré d'adéquation du nouveau fonctionnaire au poste qu'il occupe. Le même article précise que l'évaluation de la performance du fonctionnaire pendant la période probatoire doit être fondée sur les compétences, la conduite, le sens du devoir, l'assiduité au travail, la moralité, la manière de travailler et les résultats au travail du fonctionnaire.

204. L'article 39 de la circulaire susmentionnée précise la marche à suivre au cas où le nouveau fonctionnaire ne donne pas satisfaction au cours de la période probatoire, à savoir que le chef du service dont il dépend est tenu de lui signifier par écrit, deux semaines avant l'achèvement de la période probatoire, qu'il est mis fin à ses services. L'article 40 de la même circulaire énonce l'obligation pour le chef du service dont dépend le nouveau fonctionnaire qui a donné satisfaction au cours de la période probatoire de confirmer celui-ci dans ses fonctions.

4. Sanctions et autres mesures disciplinaires applicables aux fonctionnaires

205. Tout fonctionnaire qui contrevient aux lois, règlements, instructions et décisions en vigueur dans la fonction publique est passible des sanctions disciplinaires suivantes en vertu de l'article 68 de la loi sur la fonction publique :

1. Avertissement;
2. Blâme;
3. Retenues sur salaire ne pouvant excéder 15 jours de traitement;
4. Refus d'augmentation périodique ou report de six mois maximum de cette augmentation;
5. Refus de promotion conformément à la loi;
6. Suspension avec demi-traitement pour une durée de six mois maximum;
7. Rétrogradation, préavis de licenciement, mise à la retraite, licenciement.

206. L'article 69 de la même loi dispose que l'administration ne peut sanctionner un fonctionnaire avant que celui-ci ne soit passé devant une commission d'enquête qui doit entendre sa défense, un procès-verbal de cette audition doit être établi et la décision prise doit être motivée.

C. Allégations de violation du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques commises par des entités publiques palestiniennes

207. Pour se faire une idée de la nature, de l'ampleur et de la teneur des violations dans ce domaine alléguées dans le rapport Goldstone, la Commission s'est adressée à toutes les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme palestiniennes qui, de l'avis de la Commission, s'occupent de ces violations, les surveillent et les vérifient en Cisjordanie, notamment Al-Haq, l'Organisation palestinienne de défense des droits de l'homme et le Centre de Jérusalem pour l'assistance juridique, afin qu'elles lui fournissent les renseignements qu'elles ont déjà réunis et vérifiés à propos des atteintes au droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques ou des violations de ce droit qui auraient été commises par des parties officielles palestiniennes, en sus des rapports, déclarations et interventions qu'elles ont déjà publiés sur le sujet.

208. La Commission a également interpellé les groupes parlementaires palestiniens, à savoir le groupe du Fatah, le Bloc de la réforme et du changement du Hamas, le groupe du Front populaire pour la libération de la Palestine, le Front démocratique et l'Initiative palestinienne, pour connaître leurs avis et points de vue sur ces allégations ainsi que les éléments dont ils disposent qui pourraient les étayer ou les contredire.

209. Les rapports que la Commission a reçus de ces organisations s'accordent sur la réalité d'un certain nombre de violations commises en Cisjordanie par des entités palestiniennes officielles – plus précisément le Conseil de la fonction publique et les directions et cabinets de divers ministères palestiniens –, que l'on peut récapituler comme suit :

a) Annulation de la nomination ou licenciement, par des entités palestiniennes officielles en Cisjordanie, de centaines d'enseignants et autres fonctionnaires pour cause d'appartenance à tel ou tel mouvement politique. Ainsi, le Ministère de l'éducation nationale, par exemple, a pris des centaines de mesures ayant pour effet d'interrompre les procédures de recrutement de certains enseignants, et ce sur la recommandation des services de sécurité palestiniens – Service de sécurité préventive et Service des renseignements généraux – qui ne souhaitaient pas que ces personnes fassent partie de la fonction publique;

b) Refus des autorités officielles palestiniennes de nommer tout nouveau fonctionnaire sans l'accord préalable des services de sécurité, ou en application de mesures dites officiellement de sécurité.

Ainsi, toute nomination, indépendamment de la nature et du rang du poste considéré, est désormais tributaire de l'analyse et de la vérification par les services de sécurité de l'appartenance politique du candidat, ainsi que de leur appréciation de l'opportunité politique de lui accorder ou refuser cette nomination.

D. Plaintes reçues par la Commission alléguant des violations du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques

210. La Commission a reçu des organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme et des groupes parlementaires palestiniens plus de 140 plaintes relatives à des licenciements de la fonction publique, ainsi que 61 plaintes émanant directement des intéressés²⁷.

211. Il ressort de l'examen par la Commission d'enquête du contenu de ces plaintes, ainsi que des réunions au cours desquelles la Commission a entendu les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme, les groupes parlementaires et les plaignants individuels²⁸, que les allégations faisant état de violations par des entités officielles du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques en Cisjordanie sont fondées.

²⁷ Toutes ces plaintes et la documentation y relative seront conservées par la Commission assorties d'annexes.

²⁸ La Commission a entendu les témoignages de 51 auteurs de plaintes concernant la fonction publique.

212. La Commission constate la réalité de la violation par les entités officielles palestiniennes en Cisjordanie du droit des Palestiniens d'occuper des fonctions publiques, comme elle constate que les décisions des services de sécurité en Cisjordanie relatives à l'annulation ou l'interruption des procédures de nomination dans la fonction publique sont motivées par des considérations et raisons diverses dont les plus importantes sont les suivantes :

1. Appartenance politique du fonctionnaire

213. Pour la Commission d'enquête, il ressort clairement de dizaines de plaintes et des réunions au cours desquelles elle a entendu les plaignants que la plupart des cas d'annulation de nomination visaient des personnes considérées comme appartenant au Mouvement de la résistance islamique ou proches de ce mouvement mais il s'agissait aussi dans certains cas de personnes considérées comme faisant partie du Jihad islamique.

214. La plupart des réunions organisées par la Commission pour entendre les plaignants ont confirmé l'existence d'un lien évident entre le licenciement de ces personnes et leur appartenance politique au Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas, qui était aussi la raison pour laquelle elles ont été ensuite interrogées, certaines d'entre elles ayant été licenciées après leur arrestation et leur placement en détention par les services de sécurité sous ce même motif.

215. À l'issue de son audition par la Commission, un plaignant a conclu en ces termes à propos de son licenciement : « [...] Le vingt et unième jour du mois de ramadan de 2008, j'ai été convoqué par le Service de sécurité préventive, qui m'a détenu pendant 10 jours avant de me libérer la veille de l'Aïd sans m'avoir signifié le moindre chef d'accusation. Par la suite, en novembre 2008, j'ai reçu ma lettre de licenciement [...] »²⁹

216. Un autre plaignant a déclaré devant la Commission : « [...] Le 31 décembre 2008, j'ai reçu une lettre m'annonçant qu'il était mis fin à mes services et m'enjoignant de restituer mon contrat. M'étant adressé au Directeur de l'enseignement général, celui-ci m'a dit n'être pour rien dans mon licenciement, qui avait été décidé directement par le Ministère. J'avais déjà été convoqué pour interrogatoire par le Service de sécurité préventive avant mon licenciement et on m'avait alors interrogé sur mon appartenance politique au mouvement Hamas et je suis convaincu que mon licenciement est lié à mon appartenance à ce mouvement [...] »³⁰

217. Un troisième plaignant a déclaré : « [...] Le 8 février 2009, j'ai reçu une lettre m'annonçant l'annulation de ma nomination et m'enjoignant de restituer mon contrat en raison de l'avis négatif des autorités compétentes mais je sais qu'il s'agit de la sécurité préventive et des renseignements généraux et j'ai appris que mon licenciement était motivé par mon appartenance au mouvement Hamas. J'avais déjà été arrêté et détenu pendant un mois pour mes opinions politiques. Professionnellement, j'ai fait l'objet d'une évaluation positive et mon licenciement

²⁹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/57.

³⁰ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/58.

s'explique par des raisons politiques et non professionnelles. Je pense que mon licenciement pour des raisons politiques est illégal [...] »³¹

218. Dans de nombreuses déclarations, le plaignant affirme que son licenciement s'expliquait par son soutien au Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas au cours de la campagne électorale de 2005, par son soutien aux listes du Hamas lors des deuxièmes élections au Conseil législatif palestinien ou par son soutien aux listes estudiantines rattachées au Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas lors des élections aux conseils estudiantins des universités de Cisjordanie.

219. Le récit suivant a été fait au cours d'une des auditions organisées par la Commission : « [...] Le 22 avril 2008, j'ai été nommé à titre permanent instituteur dans une école primaire de garçons de la localité de Hawra, relevant administrativement de l'académie de Naplouse-Sud [...] Le 17 décembre 2008, j'ai été surpris d'apprendre mon licenciement par une lettre du Ministère de l'éducation portant la référence FV40/937810406 m'informant qu'en raison du rejet par les autorités compétentes de mon affectation/nomination dans les effectifs du Ministère de l'éducation et de l'enseignement supérieur, j'étais tenu de restituer mon contrat [...] En me remettant un arrêté mettant fin à mes services, le Directeur de l'académie de Naplouse m'a indiqué qu'il fallait que je m'adresse aux services des renseignements généraux et de la sécurité préventive pour obtenir des éclaircissements sur les raisons pour lesquelles ils se sont opposés à ma nomination [...] En ce qui concerne les renseignements généraux, ils n'ont accepté de me recevoir qu'après qu'une de mes connaissances ait intercédé en ma faveur. Au siège des renseignements généraux de Naplouse, j'ai été reçu par un officier dont j'ignore le nom qui, après les vérifications d'usage, m'a expliqué que c'était parce que j'étais un électeur du Hamas et un partisan du Hamas. Après m'avoir demandé quelle était pour moi l'autorité légitime, il m'a dit que l'entretien était terminé, et il en est résulté que les renseignements généraux ont recommandé de ne pas confirmer ma nomination, la raison étant que j'étais un électeur du Hamas [...] »³²

220. Le récit suivant est tiré d'une autre audition organisée par la Commission : « [...] Après cela, je me suis adressé à l'académie de Naplouse, où on m'a conseillé de m'adresser aux services de sécurité. J'ai été convoqué par les Renseignements généraux trois mois environ après ma lettre de licenciement et mon interrogatoire a essentiellement tourné autour des élections législatives [...] »³³

221. Un autre plaignant a déclaré : « [...] Je suis allé voir les Renseignements généraux à Naplouse, qui m'ont dit qu'il n'y avait aucun problème. Je suis diplômé du Département de mathématiques de l'université An-Najah et ils m'ont demandé pour qui j'avais voté aux élections des conseils d'étudiants de cette université. J'ai dit que j'avais voté blanc. Ils m'ont également interrogé sur les élections législatives et j'ai dit que je m'étais abstenu [...] »³⁴

³¹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/68.

³² Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/50.

³³ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/51.

³⁴ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/52.

222. Un autre plaignant a également déclaré : « [...] Le 15 février 2009, j'ai été informé par la secrétaire de l'école qu'il fallait que je prenne contact avec l'académie d'Hébron-Nord. Je me suis rendu le jour même à l'académie où on m'a remis une lettre me signifiant que, sur la recommandation des autorités compétentes, il était mis fin à ma nomination. Le jour même également, je me suis rendu au Conseil général de la fonction publique et au Ministère de l'éducation, à Ramallah [...] Ils m'ont fait comprendre que je devais m'adresser aux services de sécurité. Je me suis adressé trois jours plus tard au Service de sécurité préventive, où on m'a déclaré qu'il n'y avait aucun problème [...] Je me suis alors adressé aux Renseignements généraux d'Hébron [...] où ils m'ont dit que selon des informations en leur possession, j'étais un militant actif du Hamas [...] En mars 2009, ils m'ont de nouveau interrogé sur des événements qui s'étaient produits à l'université d'Hébron à l'époque où j'y étais étudiant à l'Institut polytechnique, en insistant sur ma participation aux élections au conseil des étudiants [...] Ils m'ont également demandé ce que je pensais du Hamas et pour qui j'avais voté [...] »³⁵

223. Une autre personne entendue par la Commission a déclaré : « [...] Le 1^{er} novembre 2009, j'ai reçu mon arrêté de licenciement et lorsque je me suis adressé au ministère, ils m'ont demandé de m'adresser aux Renseignements généraux et à la Sécurité préventive. Lorsque je me suis adressé à la Direction des Renseignements généraux et à celle de la Sécurité préventive de Jenine [...] où j'ai été interrogé non pas sur mon appartenance politique mais sur le parti pour lequel j'avais voté et sur la sécession à Gaza. Je ne connais toujours pas les raisons de mon licenciement puisque je n'ai fait l'objet d'aucune accusation politique [...] Les services de sécurité m'ont accusé d'avoir travaillé avec le Hamas pendant les élections [...] »³⁶

2. Annulations de nomination pour cause de liens étroits avec le Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas

224. La Commission d'enquête a constaté que certaines personnes avaient fait l'objet de recommandations négatives de la part des services de sécurité, se traduisant par un refus de leur nomination, en raison de liens étroits qu'ils auraient avec le Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas.

225. Une enseignante entendue par la Commission a déclaré : « [...] Le 28 août 2006, j'ai été nommée à l'école secondaire du Carmel puis j'ai été transférée dans un autre établissement. J'ai travaillé trois années sans nomination à titre permanent et, le 14 mars 2009, j'ai reçu de l'académie d'Hébron-Sud une lettre me signifiant la fin de mon affectation et de mes services et m'enjoignant de restituer mon contrat [...] Je ne me suis pas adressée personnellement aux services de sécurité mais mon père l'a fait à ma place et il a été informé qu'un rapport défavorable avait été établi me concernant [...] Mon licenciement était motivé par des raisons politiques car mes notes professionnelles étaient bonnes et je n'avais fait l'objet d'aucun avertissement ou enquête. J'étais une bonne enseignante en éducation islamique et je crois que le problème tient en fait à mon mari, en prison dans l'État occupant pour cause d'appartenance au Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas. C'est pour ³⁵ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/60.

³⁶ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/61.

cela que j'ai été licenciée et non pour manque de compétence ou de professionnalisme [...] »³⁷

226. Une autre plaignante a déclaré : « [...] J'ai été licenciée le 9 septembre 2009 sans en avoir été informée, et je ne l'ai appris que lorsque ma remplaçante est arrivée. Lorsque je me suis adressée à l'académie d'Hébron-Sud, on m'a expliqué que j'avais été licenciée parce que les renseignements généraux et la sécurité préventive n'avaient pas recommandé ma nomination. Lorsque je me suis adressée à ces services, ils ont refusé de me recevoir mais m'ont fait savoir que mon licenciement était dû au fait que mon époux était détenu par la Sécurité préventive sous l'accusation d'appartenance au Hamas [...] Ils m'ont dit que si mon époux quittait le Hamas, ma nomination serait acceptée. On m'a donc clairement indiqué que mon licenciement était dû au fait que mon époux appartient au Hamas [...] »³⁸

227. Le récit suivant est tiré d'une autre audition organisée par la Commission : « [...] Aujourd'hui encore, je ne sais toujours pas pour quelle raison on a mis fin à mes services. Je me suis adressé à l'Organisation indépendante de défense des droits de l'homme (Cabinet des doléances), après avoir contacté l'Union des enseignants, qui m'a informé que la cause de mon licenciement était l'appartenance d'un de mes proches au Hamas [...] »³⁹

E. Opinion de la Commission sur les allégations de violation du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques en Cisjordanie

228. Partant des auditions qu'elle a organisées pour entendre les plaignants et les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme qui surveillent et vérifient les cas de violation par des entités officielles palestiniennes en Cisjordanie du droit des Palestiniens d'occuper des fonctions publiques, la Commission constate l'existence effective de violations par lesdites entités des dispositions de la Loi fondamentale et de la loi sur la fonction publique de 1998 telle que modifiée relatives au droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques, en ce qui concerne les questions et domaines suivants :

229. Le Ministère de l'éducation, en particulier, et les administrations en général, exigent l'accord des services de sécurité comme condition préalable à la nomination à des fonctions publiques. La Commission estime que cette mesure constitue un acte illégal, voire une violation flagrante par les administrations des dispositions de la Loi fondamentale et de la loi n° 4 de 1998 sur la fonction publique, dans la mesure où l'article 24 de cette dernière loi énonce de manière limitative les conditions exigées des candidats à la nomination, à savoir « être palestinien ou arabe, avoir atteint l'âge de 18 ans, jouir de ses droits civils et ne pas être encore sous le coup d'une condamnation pour un crime ou délit constitutif d'atteinte à l'honneur et à la probité ».

³⁷ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/52.

³⁸ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/56.

³⁹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote L-F/C-2010/57.

230. La loi et sa circulaire d'application énoncent en outre clairement l'obligation que le fonctionnaire qui est encore en période probatoire soit averti deux semaines avant l'achèvement de cette période – qui dure un an – qu'il est mis fin à ses services, ce qui n'a été fait ni par le Ministère de l'éducation et de l'enseignement supérieur ni par d'autres organismes gouvernementaux officiels.

231. En outre, l'annulation d'une nomination au cours de la période probatoire doit être fondée sur des considérations professionnelles relatives, comme indiqué dans la loi et la circulaire d'application, à la notation de la performance du fonctionnaire au cours de la période probatoire selon des principes et critères de compétence, de comportements professionnels, de performance, d'assiduité, de personnalité, de professionnalisme et de productivité. En revanche, il n'existe aucune condition ni aucun motif d'annulation d'une nomination qui confère aux services de sécurité et à leur analyse un quelconque rôle à cet égard.

232. En conséquence, le fait de mettre fin aux services d'une personne pendant la période probatoire plus d'une année après sa nomination sur la base d'une demande des services de sécurité constitue de la part des organismes officiels un non-respect des dispositions de la loi, et le refus de nommer ou de confirmer l'intéressé dans ses fonctions à partir de critères non prévus dans la loi et dans sa circulaire d'application constitue un abus de pouvoir.

233. Voulant s'assurer des fondements juridiques de cette mesure – qui consiste pour les organismes officiels à exiger du fonctionnaire qu'il obtienne l'accord des services de sécurité avant de procéder à sa nomination –, la Commission a été informée par le Conseil général de la fonction publique que cette mesure avait été adoptée dans la fonction publique en vertu d'une lettre officielle datée du 9 septembre 2007, adressée au président dudit Conseil par le Secrétaire général (de l'époque) du Conseil des ministres, demandant au Conseil général de la fonction publique de considérer que la vérification par les services de sécurité fait partie de la procédure de nomination et faisant obligation au Conseil d'entrer en relation avec les services de sécurité pour l'application de cette mesure.

234. La lettre du Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres se réfère certes à une décision que ce dernier aurait prise à sa 18^e séance hebdomadaire, le 13 septembre 2007, faisant de la vérification par les services de sécurité un élément de la procédure de nomination, mais la Commission n'a pas pu obtenir concrètement le texte de cette décision et le Secrétaire général actuel du Conseil des ministres l'a informée qu'à ladite 18^e séance hebdomadaire tenue le 13 septembre 2007, le Conseil des ministres avait considéré que l'application des mesures de contrôle de sécurité était l'une des conditions requises pour la nomination des fonctionnaires en application de la loi sur la fonction publique modifiée en vigueur⁴⁰.

235. La Commission estime que ces licenciements et ces annulations de nomination de fonctionnaires n'étaient pas motivés par des raisons professionnelles ou des critères relatifs à l'occupation de fonction publique et que cette mesure s'explique assurément par des facteurs liés à l'appartenance politique des fonctionnaires ou en fonction d'une orientation politique, ce qui fait de cette mesure un acte discriminatoire au sens de la Convention contre la discrimination en matière d'emploi et de profession que la Conférence générale de l'Organisation internationale du Travail a adoptée à sa quarante-deuxième session, le 25 juin 1958, et qui est entrée en vigueur le 15 juin 1960. Cette convention, dans son article 1, définit la discrimination comme suit :

⁴⁰ Le texte de ces lettres figure à l'annexe 17 au présent rapport.

1. Aux fins de la présente Convention, le terme « discrimination » comprend :

a) Toute distinction, exclusion ou préférence fondée sur la race, la couleur, le sexe, la religion, l'opinion politique, l'ascendance nationale ou l'origine sociale, qui a pour effet de détruire ou d'altérer l'égalité de chances ou de traitement en matière d'emploi ou de profession;

b) Toute autre distinction, exclusion ou préférence ayant pour effet de détruire ou d'altérer l'égalité de chances ou de traitement en matière d'emploi ou de profession, qui pourra être spécifiée par le Membre intéressé après consultation des organisations représentatives d'employeurs et de travailleurs, s'il en existe, et d'autres organismes appropriés.

236. En outre, dans l'Observation générale n° 25 que le Comité des droits de l'homme a adoptée à sa cinquante-septième session (1996) à propos de la participation à la gestion des affaires publiques et du droit de vote, on peut lire ce qui suit : « [...] pour garantir l'accès à ces charges publiques dans des conditions générales d'égalité, les critères et les procédures de nomination, de promotion, de suspension et de révocation doivent être objectifs et raisonnables ».

237. Ce texte aborde également la question de l'accès aux fonctions publiques sur un pied d'égalité et sur la base du mérite et la question de la sécurité de l'emploi, à l'abri « [...] de toute immixtion ou de toute pression d'ordre politique. Il est particulièrement important de veiller à ce qu'aucune discrimination ne soit exercée contre ces personnes dans l'exercice des droits que leur reconnaît l'alinéa c) de l'article 25, pour l'un quelconque des motifs visés au paragraphe 1 de l'article 2 ».

238. Dans l'Observation générale n° 18 adoptée par le Comité des droits de l'homme à sa trente-septième session (1989) et relative à la non-discrimination, on peut lire ce qui suit : « [...] La non-discrimination est un principe fondamental et général en matière de protection des droits de l'homme, au même titre que l'égalité devant la loi et l'égale protection de la loi. Ainsi, conformément au paragraphe 1 de l'article 2 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, les États parties sont tenus de respecter et de garantir à tous les individus se trouvant sur leur territoire et relevant de leur compétence les droits reconnus dans le Pacte, sans distinction aucune, notamment de race, de couleur, de sexe, de langue, de religion, d'opinion politique ou de toute autre opinion, d'origine nationale ou sociale, de fortune, de naissance ou de toute autre situation. Conformément à l'article 26, toutes les personnes sont égales devant la loi et ont droit à une égale protection de la loi, et, de plus, la loi doit interdire toute discrimination et garantir à toutes les personnes une protection égale et efficace contre toute discrimination, notamment de race, de couleur, de sexe, de langue, de religion, d'opinion politique et de toute autre opinion, d'origine nationale ou sociale, de fortune, de naissance ou de toute autre situation ». De même, l'article 25 prévoit la participation égale de tous les citoyens aux affaires publiques sans aucune des discriminations visées à l'article 2.

239. Le Comité « considère que le terme discrimination, tel qu'il est utilisé dans le Pacte, doit être compris comme s'entendant de toute distinction, exclusion, restriction ou préférence fondée notamment sur la race, la couleur, le sexe, la langue, la religion, les opinions politiques ou autres, l'origine nationale ou sociale, la fortune, la naissance ou toute autre situation, et ayant pour effet ou pour but de compromettre ou de détruire la reconnaissance, la jouissance ou l'exercice par tous, dans des conditions d'égalité, de l'ensemble des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales [...] ».

240. En conséquence, la Commission d'enquête indépendante estime que le licenciement de fonctionnaires en raison de leur appartenance politique ou la suspension du droit d'accéder aux fonctions publiques pour cette même raison constitue une discrimination et une distinction entre fonctionnaires fondées sur l'appartenance politique, ce qui contrevient aux dispositions de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne, dont l'article 9 est libellé comme suit : « Les Palestiniens sont égaux devant la loi et devant les tribunaux sans distinction fondée sur la race, le sexe, la couleur, la religion, l'opinion politique ou le handicap ».

241. La Commission d'enquête estime que l'annulation de la nomination de fonctionnaires au motif qu'ils ont voté pour tel ou tel groupe politique constitue une violation flagrante du droit de toute personne de participer à la vie politique prévu et consacré dans la Loi fondamentale palestinienne, dont l'article 26 stipule que « les Palestiniens ont le droit de participer, individuellement et collectivement, à la vie politique et ils jouissent en particulier des droits suivants :

1. Constituer des partis politiques ou y adhérer, conformément à la loi;
2. Constituer des syndicats, des associations, des unions, des ligues, des clubs et autres organisations populaires conformément à la loi;
3. Voter et être candidat aux élections destinées à désigner des représentants élus au suffrage universel conformément à la loi;
4. Occuper des fonctions et postes publics conformément au principe de l'égalité des chances;
5. Organiser des réunions privées sans présence policière et des réunions, cortèges et rassemblements publics dans les limites fixées par la loi.

242. La Commission estime que c'est au Conseil des ministres qu'il incombe, en vertu de l'article 69 de la Loi fondamentale révisée de 2003, de suivre l'application des lois, de veiller au respect de leurs dispositions, de prendre les mesures voulues à cet effet et d'intervenir pour mettre fin à l'application des mesures de contrôle de sécurité en raison de leur contradiction avec les dispositions de la Loi fondamentale, qui stipule expressément que les Palestiniens ont le droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques, ainsi qu'avec la loi sur la fonction publique, qui est exempte de mesures de cet ordre.

243. La Commission estime que pour remédier aux violations des droits et des libertés fondamentales des citoyens résultant de l'application des mesures de contrôle de sécurité, il faut que le Conseil des ministres palestinien abroge toutes les décisions d'annulation de la nomination de fonctionnaires, de réintégrer dans leurs fonctions tous ceux qui ont été lésés par ces décisions et de les indemniser du préjudice subi conformément à l'article 32 de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne, qui dispose que « toute atteinte à l'une quelconque des libertés individuelles, au respect de la vie privée et autres droits et libertés publiques garantis par la Loi fondamentale ou par le Code pénal est imprescriptible au civil comme au pénal et l'Autorité nationale garantit l'indemnisation de quiconque en a été victime ».

244. Il ressort clairement des rapports que la Commission d'enquête a reçus et des auditions qu'elle a organisées que des dizaines de fonctionnaires ont vu leur nomination annulée plus d'une année après leur prise de fonctions, ce qui constitue, de l'avis de la Commission, une violation manifeste par les organes administratifs de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne des dispositions de la loi sur la fonction publique et de ses circulaires d'application.

245. L'article 30 de la loi susmentionnée accorde à l'administration ou autre organe gouvernemental dont dépend le nouveau fonctionnaire le droit d'instaurer une période probatoire d'un an lui permettant d'évaluer la performance de ce dernier. Si cette évaluation est négative ou si le nouveau fonctionnaire ne correspond pas au poste auquel il a été affecté, l'intéressé est avisé deux semaines avant l'expiration de la période probatoire (qui dure un an) qu'il sera mis fin à ses services. Si, au contraire, le fonctionnaire donne satisfaction au cours de la période probatoire, c'est-à-dire sans avoir reçu d'observation négative, le chef du service gouvernemental compétent est tenu d'engager la procédure nécessaire pour le confirmer dans ses fonctions.

246. La Commission estime donc que tous les fonctionnaires qui ont accompli la période probatoire d'une année ont le droit d'être confirmés dans leurs fonctions conformément à la loi. La Commission estime en outre que le fait d'avoir mis fin à leurs services en arguant de leur situation antérieure constitue un licenciement abusif de la fonction publique.

F. Violations par l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques

247. Le mandat de la Commission concernant le droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques est certes limité à l'enquête sur cet aspect en Cisjordanie, c'est-à-dire dans les zones relevant de l'autorité et de l'administration de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne mais la Commission estime important d'évoquer aussi les violations du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques et les atteintes à ce droit de la part de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza.

Nominations liées à l'appartenance politique

248. La plupart – sinon la totalité – des nominations à des fonctions publiques dans la bande de Gaza s'effectuent sur la base de l'appartenance politique de l'intéressé. Si l'on suspecte que ce dernier appartient au Fatah ou à une entité relevant de ce mouvement ou présumée telle, il perd toute possibilité d'obtenir le poste considéré.

249. Les services de sécurité de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza jouent un rôle analogue à celui des services de sécurité opérant en Cisjordanie pour ce qui est des enquêtes et autres mesures de contrôle de sécurité appliquées aux candidats à la nomination à des fonctions publiques ainsi que pour surveiller et décider qui doit être autorisé à occuper de telles fonctions. Ces services disposent également du pouvoir d'intervenir pour interrompre ou annuler les nominations ou licencier les fonctionnaires.

250. L'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza utilise des voies détournées pour écarter les fonctionnaires qui ne relèvent pas de sa mouvance, parce que, comme chacun sait, l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie continue de prendre en charge et de rémunérer les fonctionnaires qui se trouvent dans la bande de Gaza, sous réserve qu'ils s'abstiennent de se rendre à leur poste si celui-ci relève d'une structure dirigée par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

251. Arguant du fait que ces fonctionnaires ne se présentent pas à leur poste, l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza procède à leur licenciement en invoquant les dispositions des articles 90 et 100 de la loi sur la fonction publique. L'article 90 dispose que :

1. Le fonctionnaire perd son poste s'il s'absente sans autorisation ni motif valable pendant plus de 15 jours successifs;
2. Cette période d'absence est rémunérée à taux plein ou non en fonction des exigences de la situation.

252. L'article 100 est libellé comme suit :

Les services du fonctionnaire prennent fin avec la perte de son poste dans l'une ou l'autre des deux cas de figure suivants :

- a) Absentéisme visé à l'article 90 de la présente loi;
- b) Absence sans autorisation ni motif valable pendant plus de 30 jours non successifs par an, auquel cas les services du fonctionnaire prennent fin à la date du trentième jour d'absence, sous réserve que le fonctionnaire ait été averti par écrit au bout de 15 jours d'absence.

253. C'est sur cette base que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza a écarté des milliers de fonctionnaires et les a remplacés par des personnes membres ou politiquement proches du Hamas. Ainsi, la fonction publique dans les territoires palestiniens est désormais politisée au plein sens du terme, ce qui n'est pas sans conséquences préjudiciables aussi bien pour la fonction publique en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza que pour toute une série de questions dont les plus importantes sont les suivantes :

- Fidélité du fonctionnaire à un parti politique et non à sa fonction et aux exigences de son travail;
- Utilisation par le fonctionnaire du statut que lui confère son parti, qui le protège de tout questionnement ou observation s'il ne se montre pas à la hauteur des exigences de sa fonction;
- Lien entre les services fournis par le fonctionnaire et son orientation partisane, qui peut l'amener à refuser de fournir des services aux membres présumés d'entités rejetées par son parti.

254. Le droit au travail représente incontestablement l'un des piliers les plus importants sur lesquels repose l'ensemble des droits économiques, sociaux et culturels établis par les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme. Plus encore, ce droit constitue le pilier et le fondement juridique et matériel de l'exercice effectif de tous les autres droits et libertés économiques, sociaux et culturels ainsi que des droits civils et politiques.

255. Les droits de l'homme et les libertés fondamentales, dans leurs différentes composantes, s'interpénètrent et se complètent les uns les autres au point qu'il est impossible de prendre chacun d'entre eux isolément. Il est donc vain de respecter certains droits et de donner aux individus les moyens de les exercer tout en abandonnant ou rejetant d'autres droits. Les droits civils et politiques n'ont ni sens ni valeur si les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels font défaut, et il en va de même pour les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, dont l'exercice est impossible en l'absence des droits civils et politiques.

256. Les droits et libertés des individus, dans leurs différents aspects et domaines, sont complémentaires. Ou bien ils sont conférés à l'individu dans leur ensemble, et on peut alors dire que ces droits existent réellement, ou bien ils sont amputés, divisés et séparés en droits et libertés admis et droits et libertés niés et l'on peut alors dire objectivement que ces droits n'existent pas, vu l'absence de réalité et de valeur de la partie de ces droits et libertés qui est admise*.

257. L'indépendance et la complémentarité des droits de l'homme ne sont pas circonscrites aux domaines et principes de ces droits, elles valent aussi pour chacune des branches du droit relatif aux droits de l'homme. Chacune de ces branches est en effet composée d'une série cohérente de droits qui en relèvent et l'abandon ou la disparition de certains de ces droits entraîne sans conteste l'abandon et la disparition des autres. En matière de droits économiques et sociaux, la disparition ou la négation du droit des individus au travail signifie la disparition et la négation de tous les autres droits reconnus à l'individu dans ce domaine pour cause de disparition de leur raison d'être. Quelles peuvent être la réalité et la valeur de droits tels que celui de constituer des syndicats, le droit de grève, le droit à l'égalité devant la loi, le droit à l'égalité des salaires et des prestations, etc., lorsque disparaissent leur fondement et leur raison d'être, à savoir le droit au travail.

258. Il en va de même pour les droits civils dont l'un des éléments et piliers de leur existence les plus importants est le droit à la vie et à la sécurité de la personne. L'abandon ou le non-respect de ce droit entraîne la négation et l'abandon de tous les autres droits pour cause de disparition de leur valeur et de leur raison d'être. Ceci vaut pour le droit à l'éducation, dont tous les droits qui en dépendent n'ont aucun sens en cas de négation du droit à l'égalité et à la non-discrimination, du droit à la liberté d'expression et d'opinion, du droit à un traitement humain et autres droits.

259. En conséquence, la Commission estime que le fait de priver certains citoyens du droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques signifie non seulement la négation du droit de ces personnes à un travail et à un revenu mais également l'abandon et la disparition de leurs autres droits tels que le droit à la sécurité sociale, le droit à un logement approprié, le droit aux soins de santé, le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille, le droit à un niveau de vie suffisant, le droit à la dignité, le droit à l'éducation et autres droits. Une personne qui perd la source de ses revenus se retrouve dans une situation difficile qui l'amène à renoncer malgré elle à bon nombre de droits dont l'exercice et la jouissance ne sont guère favorisés par la perte de revenus.

* L'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, dans sa résolution 32/130 de 1977, a réaffirmé en ces termes l'unicité et la complémentarité des droits de l'homme :

- « a) Tous les droits de l'homme et toutes les libertés fondamentales sont indivisibles et interdépendants : une attention égale et une considération urgente devront être accordées à la réalisation, la promotion et la protection tant des droits civils et politiques que des droits économiques, sociaux et culturels;
- b) La jouissance complète des droits civils et politiques est impossible sans celle des droits économiques, sociaux et culturels [...] ».

Cette idée a été réaffirmée en ces termes dans la Déclaration sur le droit au développement que l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies a adoptée par sa résolution 41/128 de 1986 : « Tous les droits de l'homme et toutes les libertés fondamentales sont indivisibles et interdépendants : la réalisation, la promotion et la protection des droits civils, politiques, économiques, sociaux et culturels doivent bénéficier d'une attention égale et être envisagées avec une égale urgence ».

VI. Violations de la liberté de la presse en Cisjordanie

A. La liberté de la presse dans la législation nationale et dans les conventions internationales

260. La Loi fondamentale palestinienne telle qu'amendée en 2003, réaffirme dans plusieurs de ses articles, le droit à la liberté d'opinion, la liberté d'expression et la liberté de la presse. C'est ainsi que l'article 19 de cette loi stipule que :

Nul ne peut toucher à la liberté d'opinion et que chaque être humain a le droit d'exprimer et de diffuser son opinion, par la parole, par l'écrit et par d'autres moyens d'expression y compris artistique, en tenant compte des dispositions de la loi.

261. En outre, l'article 27 de la même loi contient les dispositions suivantes :

1. Chacun a le droit de créer des journaux et d'autres médias; ce droit est garanti par la Loi fondamentale et les sources de financement de ces médias sont soumises au contrôle prévu par la loi.

2. La liberté des médias audiovisuels et écrits, la liberté d'impression, de publication, de distribution et de diffusion de même que la liberté des personnes qui travaillent dans le secteur des médias, sont toutes garanties par la Loi fondamentale palestinienne et par d'autres lois connexes.

3. Il est interdit de censurer les médias, de leur adresser des avertissements, d'en suspendre les activités, de les exproprier, de les supprimer, ou de leur imposer des restrictions, à moins que ces mesures ne soient conformes à la loi et prises en vertu d'une décision judiciaire.

262. La loi n°9 de 1995 sur l'imprimerie et les publications traitent à différents égards de la liberté de la presse. C'est ainsi qu'à son article 2, il est stipulé que :

Les secteurs de la presse et de l'imprimerie sont libres, que la liberté d'opinion est garantie à chaque Palestinien lequel peut exprimer librement son opinion tant oralement que par écrit ou par des moyens d'expression et d'information comme la photographie ou le dessin.

263. L'article 3 de la même loi dispose que :

Les journalistes peuvent exercer librement leur profession qui consiste à présenter des nouvelles, des informations et des commentaires, à contribuer à la diffusion de la pensée, de la culture et des sciences, dans les limites autorisées par la loi et dans le cadre de la préservation des libertés, des droits et des obligations publiques ainsi que du respect de la vie privée d'autrui et de son inviolabilité.

264. En outre, l'article 4 de la même loi stipule que :

La liberté de la presse inclut notamment les éléments suivants :

a) Porter à la connaissance des citoyens les faits, les idées, les tendances et les informations relevées à l'échelle tant locale, qu'arabe, islamique ou internationale;

b) Donner aux citoyens la possibilité d'exprimer leur opinion;

c) Recueillir auprès des sources diverses, des informations, des nouvelles et des statistiques susceptibles d'intéresser les Palestiniens, analyser ces données, les publier, les faire circuler et les commenter dans les limites autorisées par la loi;

d) Garantir le droit qu'ont les organes et les agences de presse, les rédacteurs en chef et les journalistes de tenir secrètes les sources auprès desquelles ils obtiennent leurs nouvelles et leurs informations, à moins que les tribunaux n'en décident autrement, pour connaître d'affaires pénales, protéger la sécurité de l'État, empêcher la commission d'un crime ou obtenir justice;

e) Les citoyens, les partis politiques, les institutions culturelles et sociales et les syndicats ont tous le droit de présenter, par la voie de publications, leurs opinions et leurs idées ainsi que les résultats qu'ils ont obtenus dans leurs domaines d'activité respectifs.

265. À l'article 6 de la loi n° 9 de 1995, il est stipulé que :

Les autorités officielles doivent s'employer à faciliter la tâche des journalistes et des chercheurs en avisant ces derniers de leurs programmes et projets.

266. L'article 7 de la même loi dispose que les journalistes et la presse doivent s'abstenir de publier tout ce qui pourrait porter atteinte à l'ordre public, stipulant notamment ceci :

a) La presse doit s'abstenir de publier tout élément susceptible de contrevenir aux principes de la liberté, de la responsabilité nationale, des droits de l'homme et du respect de la vérité et considérer la liberté de pensée, d'opinion, d'expression et de diffusion comme un droit, aussi bien pour les citoyens que pour elle;

b) Les publications périodiques destinées aux enfants et aux adolescents ne doivent contenir aucune image ni récit ou information contraires à la morale ainsi qu'aux valeurs et traditions palestiniennes.

267. L'article 8 de la loi susmentionnée définit les obligations incombant à la presse ainsi que les règles déontologiques de la profession de journaliste, réaffirmant que les journalistes et tous ceux qui travaillent dans le secteur de la presse, sont tenus de se conformer strictement à la déontologie de leur profession et en particulier aux principes ci-après :

a) Respecter les droits et les libertés constitutionnelles des personnes et ne pas s'ingérer dans leur vie privée;

b) Présenter l'information de façon objective, complète et équilibrée;

c) Faire montre de précision, d'intégrité et d'objectivité, lorsqu'il s'agit de commenter des nouvelles et des événements;

d) S'abstenir de publier toute information susceptible d'attiser la violence, le fanatisme et la haine ou d'inciter au racisme et au confessionnalisme;

e) Ne pas exploiter l'information à des fins de publicité, dans le but de promouvoir un produit commercial ou d'en diminuer la valeur.

268. Pour ce qui concerne les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme, l'article 18 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme stipule que :

Toute personne a droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion; ce droit implique la liberté de changer de religion ou de conviction ainsi que la liberté de manifester sa religion ou sa conviction seule ou en commun, tant en public qu'en privé, par l'enseignement, les pratiques, le culte et l'accomplissement des rites.

269. En outre l'article 19 de la Déclaration et l'article 19 du Pacte internationale relatif aux droits civils et politiques disposent que :

Tout individu a droit à la liberté d'opinion et d'expression, ce qui implique le droit de ne pas être inquiété pour ses opinions et celui de chercher, de recevoir et de répandre, sans considérations de frontières, les informations et les idées par quelque moyen d'expression que ce soit.

270. Par ailleurs, l'article 19 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques contient notamment les dispositions ci-après :

1. Nul ne peut être inquiété pour ses opinions.
2. Toute personne a droit à la liberté d'expression : ce droit comprend la liberté de rechercher, de recevoir et de répandre des informations et des idées de toute espèce, sans considération de frontières, sous une forme orale, écrite, imprimée ou artistique, ou par tout autre moyen de son choix.
3. L'exercice des libertés prévues au paragraphe 2 du présent article comporte des devoirs spéciaux et des responsabilités spéciales. Il peut en conséquence être soumis à certaines restrictions qui doivent toutefois être expressément fixées par la loi et qui sont nécessaires :
 - a) Au respect des droits ou de la réputation d'autrui;
 - b) À la sauvegarde de la sécurité nationale, de l'ordre public, de la santé ou de la moralité publiques.

271. Par ailleurs, à l'article II de la Déclaration sur les principes fondamentaux concernant la contribution des organes d'information au renforcement de la paix et de la compréhension internationale, à la promotion des droits de l'homme et à la lutte contre le racisme, l'apartheid et l'incitation à la guerre que la Conférence générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour l'éducation, la science et la culture (UNESCO) a publiée à sa vingtième session, en novembre 1978, dispose que :

1. L'exercice de la liberté d'opinion, de la liberté d'expression et de la liberté de l'information, reconnu comme partie intégrante des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, est un facteur essentiel du renforcement de la paix et de la compréhension internationale.
2. L'accès du public à l'information doit être garanti par la diversité des sources et des moyens d'information dont il dispose, permettant ainsi à chacun de s'assurer de l'exactitude des faits et de fonder objectivement son opinion sur les événements. À cette fin, les journalistes doivent avoir la liberté d'informer et les plus grandes facilités possibles d'accès à l'information. De même, il importe que les organes d'information répondent aux préoccupations des peuples et des individus, favorisant ainsi la participation du public à l'élaboration de l'information.

3. En vue du renforcement de la paix et de la compréhension internationale, de la promotion des droits de l'homme et de la lutte contre le racisme, l'apartheid et l'incitation à la guerre, les organes d'information, partout dans le monde, en raison du rôle qui est le leur, contribuent à promouvoir les droits de l'homme, notamment en faisant entendre la voix des peuples opprimés qui luttent contre le colonialisme, le néocolonialisme, l'occupation étrangère et toutes formes de discrimination raciale et d'oppression et qui ne peuvent s'exprimer sur leur propre territoire.

4. Pour que les organes d'information soient à même de promouvoir dans leurs activités les principes de la présente Déclaration, il est indispensable que les journalistes et autres agents des organes d'information, dans leur propre pays ou à l'étranger, jouissent d'une protection qui leur garantisse les meilleures conditions pour exercer leur profession.

272. L'article III de la même déclaration stipule que :

1. Les organes d'information ont une contribution importante à apporter au renforcement de la paix et de la compréhension internationale et dans la lutte contre le racisme, l'apartheid et l'incitation à la guerre, ainsi que dans la lutte contre la guerre d'agression, le racisme et l'apartheid ainsi que contre les autres violations des droits de l'homme qui sont, entre autres, le résultat des préjugés et de l'ignorance.

2. Les moyens d'information contribuent, par la diffusion de l'information relative aux idéaux, aspirations, cultures et exigences des peuples, à éliminer l'ignorance et l'incompréhension entre les peuples, à sensibiliser les citoyens d'un pays aux exigences et aux aspirations des autres, à assurer le respect des droits et de la dignité de toutes les nations, de tous les peuples et de tous les individus, sans distinction de race, de sexe, de langue, de religion ou de nationalité, et à attirer l'attention sur les grands maux qui affligent l'humanité, tels que la misère, la malnutrition et la maladie. Ce faisant, ils favorisent l'élaboration par les États des politiques les plus aptes à réduire les tensions internationales et à régler de façon pacifique et équitable les différends internationaux.

B. Violations de la liberté de la presse censées avoir été commises par les autorités officielles palestiniennes

273. Pour se faire une idée de la nature, de l'ampleur et de la teneur des violations dont fait état le rapport Goldstone, la Commission a pris contact avec toutes les instances palestiniennes s'occupant des droits de l'homme dont elle pensait qu'elles s'intéressaient aux violations commises en Cisjordanie, et en assuraient la surveillance et la documentation afin qu'elles lui communiquent les éléments d'informations qu'elles avaient pu recueillir et corroborer, concernant les atteintes à la liberté de la presse ou les violations de ce droit imputables aux autorités officielles palestiniennes dans le territoire palestinien.

274. Tous les rapports émanant des instances qui veillent au respect de la liberté de la presse ainsi qu'à l'exercice par les Palestiniens de leur droit à la liberté d'opinion et d'expression, de même que toutes les données publiées par ces instances et toutes leurs interventions, montrent que plusieurs violations de la liberté de la presse ont été commises en Cisjordanie, et en particulier que :

a) Des journalistes ont été arrêtés, détenus et interrogés par les services de sécurité palestiniens, en raison de leur appartenance politique ou pour des reportages qui ont été publiés dans presse écrite ou diffusée par les médias audiovisuels⁴¹;

b) Certains de ces journalistes ont été torturés et soumis à des traitements humiliants et dégradants, lors de leur détention ou de leur arrestation par les services de sécurité palestiniens qui n'ont nullement tenu compte des dispositions du Code de procédure pénale n° 3 de 2001 stipulant que les personnes arrêtées doivent être déférées devant le Procureur général civil ou devant une juridiction régulière et que la durée de leur garde à vue ne doit pas dépasser 24 heures;

c) Les services de sécurité ont interdit et entravé d'exercer leur profession, et ce pour des raisons liées à l'appartenance politique de tel ou tel journaliste ou pour leur interdire d'enquêter sur des sujets auxquels les service de sécurité ne voulaient pas que l'on s'intéresse ou de publier le résultat de ces enquêtes;

d) Les services de sécurité ont saisi des outils de travail, des appareils et du matériel de presse, qu'ils ont confisqués pour pouvoir en examiner le contenu ou priver les journalistes des moyens nécessaires à l'exercice de leur métier.

C. Plaintes reçues par la Commission d'enquête au sujet des violations de la liberté de la presse qui auraient été commises en Cisjordanie

275. Se fondant sur les plaintes qu'elle a recueillies, sur les auditions durant lesquelles elle a entendu des journalistes décrire les pratiques contraires à la loi dont ils auraient été victimes en Cisjordanie ainsi que les rapports du Centre palestinien pour le développement et la liberté des médias (MADA) et d'organismes qui s'occupent des droits de l'homme, notamment le Centre palestinien pour les droits de l'homme à Gaza, la Commission indépendante chargée des droits de l'homme et la Fondation Samir Kassir, la Commission a abouti à la conclusion selon laquelle les institutions chargées de veiller à l'application des lois avaient violé la liberté de la presse et fait fi des règles et des garanties prévues par la loi en ce qui concerne l'arrestation et la détention de journalistes. Les principales violations dont la Commission d'enquête a pu établir l'existence à l'issue des auditions de journalistes auxquelles elle a procédé, sont sans doute les suivantes :

- Arrestation et emprisonnement par les services de sécurité, de journalistes dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions;
- Tortures et mauvais traitements infligés aux journalistes emprisonnés;
- Agression de journalistes et entrave à l'exercice de leur profession;
- Confiscation d'outils de travail et de matériel;
- Menaces dirigées contre les journalistes et mesures visant à les terroriser;

⁴¹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote S-40/2010.

- Pressions exercées sur les journalistes en vue de les contraindre à collaborer avec les services de sécurité;
- Refus des instances compétentes d'appliquer les décisions des tribunaux leur ordonnant de remettre en liberté les journalistes qu'elles maintiennent en détention⁴².

276. En attestation des violations susmentionnées, on a reproduit ci-après certaines des dépositions que la Commission a recueillies lors des auditions qu'elle a tenues avec les journalistes qui s'étaient plaints d'abus et de violations qu'ils affirmaient avoir subis aux mains des services de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

277. Au nombre des violations de ce type dont la Commission a pu confirmer l'existence, on citera l'arrestation du journaliste Moustapha Ali Abdullah Sabri qui a été arrêté successivement par tous les services de sécurité – le Service des renseignements généraux, les Services de la sécurité préventive et les Services de renseignement militaire –, dans l'exercice de ses fonctions. Dans la déclaration qu'il a faite à la Commission lors de l'audition qui s'est tenue le 8 mai 2010, M. Sabri a déclaré ceci : « Le 14 août 2007, j'ai été arrêté par le Service des renseignements généraux de la ville de Qalqilya, après avoir reçu une convocation téléphonique. Le service susmentionné m'a maintenu en détention pendant cinq jours durant lesquels il m'a interrogé sur mon travail de journaliste. Durant ces interrogatoires, j'ai été torturé, enchaîné et soumis à toutes sortes de traitements durs et humiliants, et en particulier incarcéré pendant toute la durée de ma détention dans une cellule de 1,80 mètre de long et de 90 centimètres de large. J'ai été libéré au bout de cinq jours, après avoir signé un document dans lequel je m'engageais à respecter les lois de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne [...] Le 5 mai 2008, j'ai de nouveau été arrêté par le Service des renseignements généraux de Qalqilya qui m'a gardé en prison pendant trois jours durant lesquels aucune question ne m'a été posée. Le 29 juillet 2008, j'ai de nouveau été convoqué par les services susmentionnés qui m'ont reproché d'avoir publié dans la presse un compte rendu des traitements humiliants qu'ils m'avaient infligés et m'ont maintenu en détention pendant 14 jours avant de me déférer devant le tribunal militaire en m'accusant d'avoir agressé un de leurs officiers, en l'occurrence l'officier que, lors d'un de mes nombreux séjours en prison, j'avais poussé après qu'il m'eut giflé. Je suis resté emprisonné jusqu'au 11 septembre 2008, date à laquelle la police militaire m'a remis en liberté en vertu d'une décision de la Haute Cour de justice palestinienne ordonnant que je sois libéré le même jour. À peine avais-je franchi la porte du siège de la police militaire qu'un groupe d'agents des renseignements généraux s'est emparé de moi et m'a conduit au siège de ce service où j'ai été détenu jusqu'au 19 septembre 2008 [...] Le 21 avril 2009, un groupe d'agents de la sécurité préventive de la ville de Qalqilya m'a arrêté. Cette fois-là, ma maison a été perquisitionnée et mes archives de presse confisquées. Quinze jours après mon arrestation, j'ai dû être transporté à l'hôpital de la ville, suite à l'élévation de ma tension et mon taux de glycémie. Je suis resté hospitalisé pendant deux jours. Avant cela, j'avais été roué de coups, torturé et enchaîné. Quarante-trois jours après mon arrestation, j'ai été transféré au siège de la sécurité préventive de la ville de Ramallah où les conditions étaient bien pires dans la mesure où j'ai dû rester allongé pendant 18 jours, les yeux bandés, les mains ligotées et enchaîné à la fenêtre ou à la porte. Un médecin qui, lors d'une visite, m'a trouvé ainsi enchaîné, a demandé mon transfert à l'hôpital de Ramallah où, après avoir été secouru, j'ai été reconduit à la prison. Le 15 juillet 2009, la Haute Cour palestinienne a ordonné ma remise en liberté. Néanmoins, le Service de la sécurité préventive n'a pas immédiatement donné suite à cette décision et a attendu encore 10 jours pour me libérer [...] »⁴³

⁴² Ces violations figurent dans le chapitre sur les arrestations et la torture en Cisjordanie.

278. Dans un autre témoignage relatant l'arrestation, la détention et l'interrogatoire par les services de sécurité palestiniens de journalistes dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, un de ces journalistes a déclaré à la Commission d'enquête que le 11 novembre 2007, alors qu'il achevait de filmer un entretien avec l'épouse du Président du Conseil législatif emprisonné par les forces d'occupation israéliennes, au domicile ce dernier dans la ville d'Hébron, des agents de la sécurité préventive l'ont arrêté lui et son collègue, de façon humiliante, alors qu'ils sortaient de la demeure où l'interview avait eu lieu, et les ont conduits à leur siège à Hébron, où ils leur ont confisqué la bande son de l'interview et les ont interrogés sur la nature de leur travail à la chaîne Al-Aqsa, ont confisqué leur matériel cinématographique et les ont maintenus pendant 20 jours en détention avant de les libérer sous caution.

279. En septembre 2008, le même journaliste a été arrêté par les services de renseignement généraux de la ville de Bethléem puis emprisonné pendant 15 jours au motif qu'il travaillait pour la chaîne satellite Al-Aqsa. En juillet 2009, il a été emprisonné par le Service de la sécurité de la ville de Bethléem, après avoir été convoqué à son siège. Selon les déclarations qu'il a faites devant la Commission d'enquête, durant sa détention, il aurait été enchaîné et fouetté et fait l'objet d'autres sévices et traitements humiliants avant d'être remis en liberté un mois après son arrestation.

280. Dans sa déposition, il a notamment affirmé ceci : « Ils m'ont fait entrer directement dans la cellule sans me poser de questions. Puis ils m'ont enchaîné, m'ont bandé les yeux et ont commencé à me frapper à tour de rôle à l'aide d'un tuyau, et ce, à sept reprises. J'ai crié que j'étais journaliste et qu'ils ne pouvaient me traiter de cette façon. Ils ont recommencé à me frapper sur le visage. Réagissant à ces sévices, je me suis dégagé de mes liens et j'ai arraché la cagoule qui me recouvrait la tête. C'est alors que l'individu qui me frappait s'est jeté sur le côté et a appelé un officier. À ce moment-là, j'ai aperçu une quinzaine de personnes enchaînées en train d'être torturées. Après l'arrivée de l'officier, ils m'ont jeté à terre et battu. J'ai continué de crier jusqu'à ce que le Directeur chargé de l'enquête arrive. Ce dernier m'a à son tour frappé au visage puis m'a ordonné de ne pas discuter et de garder le silence avant de me ligoter et de m'enchaîner de nouveau [...] »⁴⁴

281. Par la suite, le même journaliste a été arrêté le 9 septembre par les services de renseignement militaire qui l'ont emprisonné pendant 15 jours. En outre, en janvier 2010, les services de renseignements généraux l'ont arrêté dans l'exercice de sa profession et l'ont maintenu en détention pendant 10 jours.

282. Lors d'une autre audition, tenue au siège de la Commission le 4 mai 2010, le journaliste Saïd Khoueïri, a déclaré que, le 24 janvier 2009, le Service de la sécurité préventive de la ville de Naplouse l'a arrêté après l'avoir convoqué par téléphone.

⁴³ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote S/D-4/2010.

⁴⁴ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote S/D-5/2010.

283. M. Khoueiri a aussi affirmé qu'après son arrestation, il avait été soumis à des interrogatoires visant essentiellement à recueillir des informations d'ordre privé et d'ordre professionnel en rapport avec son travail de journaliste et les fonctions qu'il exerçait au sein de la chaîne Al-Aqsa, ainsi que sur les liens qu'il entretenait avec la chaîne satellite Al Qods. Le jour suivant son arrestation, il a été transféré à la prison d'Al Juneid à Naplouse où il a dû subir là aussi plusieurs interrogatoires visant à obtenir le même type de renseignements que ceux dont il est fait état ci-dessus, puis il a été libéré le 1^{er} mars 2009. Il a en outre déclaré qu'il avait été emprisonné dans une cellule où les conditions d'hygiène étaient si déplorables qu'elles avaient nécessité son hospitalisation. Il a ajouté qu'on lui avait proposé de clore le dossier de son arrestation, en échange de renseignements sur ses relations avec le Hamas et avec la chaîne de télévision par satellite ainsi que sur les liens entre la chaîne satellite Al Qods et le Hamas. Il a aussi affirmé qu'il avait le sentiment d'être surveillé en permanence par les services de sécurité palestiniens⁴⁵.

284. Le 29 mars 2009, des agents des renseignements généraux de la localité de Deir Istia, dans la province de Salfit, ont arrêté le journaliste Saïd Khoueiri ainsi que les deux équipes de la chaîne satellite Al Qods et de l'agence de presse Ramtan, qui étaient en train d'interviewer la population locale. Les personnes arrêtées ont été conduites au siège des renseignements généraux de Salfit où elles ont été interrogées sur la nature des reportages qu'elles effectuaient à Deir Istia.

285. Lors d'une audition tenue le 4 mai 2010, M. Qays Omar Darwish Omar, journaliste habitant le village de Siniria, dans la province de Qalqilya, dans le nord de la Cisjordanie, et travaillant comme correspondant du journal jordanien Al Haqiqa Al Dawliya et le site Web Islamonline, a déclaré que le 21 février 2009, il avait été convoqué par écrit au siège de la sécurité préventive de la ville de Cannes où il s'était présenté le lendemain, 22 février 2009, pour ensuite être arrêté et emprisonné pendant trois jours durant lesquels il a été interrogé sur des sujets en rapport avec la nature de son travail de journaliste.

286. Le 22 juin 2009, le Service de la sécurité préventive de la Cisjordanie a arrêté le journaliste Qays Omar Darwish Omar à son domicile, qui se trouve dans le village de Siniria (province de Qalqilya), dans le nord de la Cisjordanie. M. Qays est demeuré emprisonné pendant 88 jours durant lesquels il a été torturé, fouetté, frappé au visage et enchaîné pendant de longues périodes, a subi des humiliations et fait l'objet de mauvais traitements et de pressions psychologiques telles que la privation de sommeil.

287. Lors de son audition, M. Qays a affirmé que, durant son interrogatoire, il avait été interrogé sur les liens qu'il entretenait avec le Hamas durant ses études universitaires ainsi que sur son travail de journaliste et il lui a été demandé de coopérer avec la sécurité préventive en lui fournissant le nom des habitants de son village membres du Hamas. M. Qays a aussi ajouté que, depuis son arrestation, il était en proie à la frayeur et craignait en permanence d'être maltraité⁴⁶.

288. Durant son audition, un journaliste, qui a réclamé l'anonymat, a déclaré que le 5 mars 2008, la sécurité préventive l'a arrêté dans la ville de Naplouse et il a été ⁴⁵ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote S/D-3/2010.

⁴⁶ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote S/D-2/2010.

maintenu en détention pendant 78 jours durant lesquels il a été interrogé sur la nature de son travail de journaliste. Bien qu'il n'ait été victime d'aucune forme de torture physique, il a subi des tortures psychologiques lorsque ses geôliers l'ont placé en isolement pendant 40 jours.

D. Avis de la Commission concernant les violations alléguées de la liberté de la presse

289. Les auditions durant lesquelles elle a recueilli les témoignages des plaignants et des institutions chargées des droits de l'homme qui s'occupent de la liberté de la presse donnent à penser à la Commission que les autorités officielles palestiniennes ont bel et bien outrepassé et violé les dispositions relatives à la liberté de la presse, de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne telle que modifiée en 2003, de la loi n° 9 de 1995 sur l'impression et la publication et du Code de procédure pénale n° 3 de 2001.

290. En effet, il est apparu à la Commission d'enquête que toutes les arrestations de journalistes portées à sa connaissance lors des auditions sont imputables aux services de sécurité relevant de l'Autorité palestinienne en Cisjordanie qui ont agi à des fins politiques. En effet, ces journalistes ont été arrêtés à cause de leur appartenance ou de leurs opinions politiques et non pas parce qu'ils s'étaient livrés à une activité ou à un acte contraire aux règles d'exercice de leur profession et à la liberté de la presse, qui aurait pu nécessiter leur interrogatoire.

291. Aussi la Commission considère-t-elle comme illégal le fait d'arrêter et d'emprisonner des journalistes en raison de leur appartenance ou de leurs opinions politiques dans la mesure où ce type de pratiques contrevient de manière flagrante aux dispositions de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne qui, à son article 19, dispose que les Palestiniens sont égaux devant la loi et la justice et qu'ils ne peuvent faire l'objet d'une discrimination fondée sur l'origine ethnique, le sexe, la couleur, la religion, leur opinion politique ou le handicap. En outre, à l'article 19 de la même loi, il est stipulé que nul ne peut porter atteinte à la liberté d'opinion que chaque être humain a le droit d'exprimer et de diffuser librement ses opinions, par la parole et par l'écrit ou par d'autres moyens d'expression ou formes artistiques en tenant compte des dispositions de la loi. L'article 27 de la même loi garantit la liberté des médias écrits et audiovisuels, la liberté d'impression, de publication, de distribution et de diffusion, ainsi que la liberté de ceux qui travaillent dans les médias.

292. Les services de sécurité ont arrêté à tour de rôle un même journaliste qui, à peine remis en liberté par l'un d'entre eux, était aussitôt emprisonné par un autre. Ces pratiques montrent, d'une part, qu'il n'y a pas de coordination effective entre ces différents services et, de l'autre, que ceux-ci ne se respectent pas mutuellement, décidant d'arrêter un journaliste qui vient d'être relâché par un de leurs pairs. La Commission d'enquête estime aussi que ce type de mesure accroît les pressions qui s'exercent sur les journalistes et les territoires encore plus, en leur donnant le sentiment d'être constamment poursuivis, ce qui influe sur leurs opinions et les incite à exercer leur métier de manière conforme, aux desiderata et aux orientations des instances officielles.

293. L'impunité dont jouissent ceux qui portent atteinte aux droits de l'homme et aux libertés ainsi qu'à l'immunité des journalistes et à la règle qui interdit de les poursuivre et de leur faire subir des interrogatoires dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, la Commission estime que le fait que les auteurs de violations des droits et des libertés de la personne humaine que consacre la Loi fondamentale palestinienne ne soient pas réellement tenus de rendre compte de leurs actes incite certains d'entre eux à passer outre aux dispositions de la législation nationale qui offrent des garanties, une protection ou une immunité aux journalistes.

294. Il est apparu à la Commission d'enquête que le syndicat des journalistes palestiniens qui n'a rien fait pour protéger les journalistes, empêcher qu'ils ne soient poursuivis ou soumis à des interrogatoires dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, a failli à son rôle en négligeant de défendre ses membres.

295. La Commission d'enquête estime que le fait de déférer un journaliste devant les tribunaux militaires, le Procureur général militaire, ou d'arrêter et de détenir un journaliste en vertu d'un mandat d'arrêt délivré par le Procureur général militaire ou par une instance relevant d'une juridiction militaire, non seulement contrevient aux dispositions de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne telle que modifiée en 2003 et du Code de procédure pénale n° 3 de 2001, mais constitue aussi une violation flagrante de la loi sur l'impression et la publication dont les dispositions en général, et l'article 42 en particulier, stipulent que le Procureur général civil et les juridictions régulières compétentes sont les seuls habilités à enquêter sur les journalistes ayant manqué à leurs obligations professionnelles et enfreint les règles déontologiques de leur profession, et à interroger ces derniers.

E. Violations des libertés de la presse dans la bande de Gaza

296. Bien qu'elle ne soit pas habilitée, en vertu du rapport Goldstone, à enquêter sur les violations de la liberté de la presse survenues dans la bande de Gaza, la Commission d'enquête a jugé bon d'aborder cette question importante, à savoir celle des violations de la liberté de la presse qu'elle a relevées et dont elle a établi l'existence dans la bande de Gaza. Si elle a agi ainsi, c'est parce qu'elle était convaincue que ces violations méritent d'être signalées et qu'il est indispensable que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza intervienne pour protéger, préserver et garantir l'immunité des journalistes travaillant dans cette partie du monde.

297. On trouvera ci-après le détail de certaines des violations de la liberté de la presse dont la Commission d'enquête a pu établir l'existence dans la bande de Gaza.

298. Le 19 mars 2009, M. Sakhr Medhat Abu Aoun, correspondant de l'Agence France-Presse s'est rendu au siège de la Sécurité interne, un organe de sécurité relevant du Ministère de l'intérieur de l'autorité de fait à Gaza, où il a été interrogé sur son travail de journaliste. Ceux qui ont procédé à son interrogatoire l'ont accusé d'avoir insulté le mouvement du Hamas, l'ont interrogé sur la nature des activités qu'il menait au sein du syndicat des journalistes ainsi que des liens qu'il entretenait avec la Fédération internationale des journalistes et l'Union des journalistes arabes, et ont obtenu de lui qu'il leur communique son adresse électronique et son mot de passe.

299. Le 29 novembre 2008, des agents de police de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza ont arrêté M. Alaa Salameh, un journaliste habitant la ville de Rafah et travaillant comme correspondant de la station locale Al Qods, alors que celui-ci franchissait le point de passage de Rafah pour rentrer chez lui, après avoir fini de couvrir de récents événements en rapport avec le voyage d'habitants de la bande de Gaza effectuant leur pèlerinage à la Mecque. Après avoir contraint M. Salameh à monter dans une jeep, les policiers lui ont bandé les yeux et l'ont conduit vers un endroit inconnu, en le rouant de coups pendant toute la durée du trajet.

300. Le 10 juin 2009, M. Mohammad Zouhdi Al Mashharawi, correspondant à Gaza, de la chaîne de télévision par satellite Al Qods, a été agressé par des éléments de la sécurité, alors qu'il couvrait la visite qu'une délégation internationale dirigée par la Cheikha Hessa bint Khalifa bin Ahmed Al-Thani, Rapporteur spécial des Nations Unies sur le handicap, effectuait à l'hôpital Al Shifa.

301. Le 12 août 2009, deux éléments de la garde du site militaire d'Al Ansar qui relève de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza ont arrêté les membres d'une équipe de la chaîne satellite al Ittijah, qui travaillaient sur la route principale conduisant au site. Les deux agents de sécurité ont obligé les membres de l'équipe, à savoir le correspondant de la chaîne, le journaliste Mazen Al Balbissi, le cameraman Guevara Al Safadi et l'assistant cameraman Abdul Rahman Zaqqout, à entrer à l'intérieur du site où l'un des agents a confisqué puis détruit le film que l'équipe venait de tourner.

302. Le 14 août 2009, le Ministère de l'intérieur de l'autorité de fait a interdit aux journalistes et à tous les médias de couvrir les événements qui se déroulaient alors dans la ville de Rafah, dans le sud de la bande de Gaza, et qui opposaient des agents des services de sécurité et des éléments armés appartenant aux brigades du martyr Ezzeddine Al Kassam à des éléments armés du groupe « Guerriers de Dieu » conduit par le cheikh Abdul Latif Moussa. Ces affrontements ont causé la mort de 28 personnes dont le cheikh Moussa, et fait des dizaines de blessés. Le Ministère de l'information de l'autorité de fait a publié le 18 août 2009 un communiqué de presse dans lequel il affirmait que l'interdiction faite aux médias de filmer les événements de Rafah avait pour but de protéger la vie des journalistes et de ménager les sentiments et la sensibilité de la population.

303. Le 31 août 2009, des membres des services de sécurité intérieure ont arrêté M. Ibrahim Mohammad Qatan et M. Ahmad Ghabayin, respectivement correspondant et photographe de l'Agence de presse Maan, qui travaillaient dans le quartier Al Namssaoui, à l'ouest de la ville de Khan Younis où ils effectuaient un reportage sur les projets de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) dont les activités avaient été paralysées par le blocus. Ces deux personnes ont été arrêtées par trois agents de sécurité qui leur ont ordonné de se rendre à bord de leur propre voiture, au quartier général des services de sécurité. Une fois parvenus, ils ont été interpellés par un des officiers qui leur a demandé leur carte de presse et les a interrogés sur la nature de leur travail et des liens qu'ils entretenaient avec la chaîne de télévision de Palestine.

304. Le 10 octobre 2009, M. Ayman Mohaammad Al Cheikh Salameh, correspondant de la chaîne satellite Al Qods, a été sauvagement frappé par un policier, alors qu'il se trouvait dans le quartier Al Amal, à l'ouest de la ville de Khan Younis, dans le sud de la bande de Gaza, où il recueillait des informations concernant la campagne de lutte contre les infractions menée par la municipalité de la ville en collaboration avec la police. Après son agression, M. Salameh a été conduit à l'hôpital Nasser.

VII. Atteintes à la liberté d'association en Cisjordanie

305. La Loi fondamentale palestinienne amendée de 2003 reconnaît aux Palestiniens le droit de s'associer librement et de participer à la vie politique. L'article 26 énonce :

Les Palestiniens ont le droit de participer à la vie politique, à titre individuel ou collectif, et peuvent notamment exercer les droits suivants :

1. Constituer des partis politiques et y adhérer, conformément à la loi;
2. Constituer des syndicats, des corporations, des fédérations, des associations, des clubs et des institutions populaires conformément à la loi;
3. Voter ou se porter candidat aux élections des représentants au suffrage public conformément à la loi;
4. Accéder, sur la base de l'égalité des chances, à des postes dans la fonction publique;
5. Tenir des réunions privées sans la présence d'agents de police, ainsi que des réunions publiques, des rassemblements et des cortèges, dans les limites prescrites par la loi.

306. La loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile palestiniennes n°1 de 2000 dispose que les Palestiniens ont le droit légitime de créer et d'établir des associations et organisations de la société civile pour exercer des activités diverses. Son article 1 prévoit ce qui suit : « Les Palestiniens ont le droit d'exercer librement des activités sociales, culturelles, techniques et scientifiques et de constituer des associations et organisations civiles, dans le respect des dispositions de la présente loi ».

307. Pour ce qui des modalités de constitution des associations, les législations palestiniennes ont été harmonisées avec les dispositions et principes du droit international des droits de l'homme, notamment de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, qui reconnaissent explicitement le droit de s'associer librement avec d'autres dans le cadre des libertés publiques et des droits fondamentaux que les États sont tenus de garantir pour chacun.

308. Ce droit qui est confirmé et garanti dans l'article 20 de la Déclaration, qui stipule que « toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques ». Il est également confirmé à l'article 22 du Pacte, qui dispose que « toute personne a le droit de s'associer librement avec d'autres, y compris le droit de constituer des syndicats et d'y adhérer pour la protection de ses intérêts ».

309. Du fait que le droit de constituer des associations fait partie des droits et libertés publiques consacrés par la Loi fondamentale, il en est venu à accéder au rang – et à être entendu au sens – de libertés publiques, autrement dit il appartient à la catégorie de droits qui poussent les États à agir et intervenir de manière constructive pour les réglementer, reconnaître explicitement leur existence juridique et faire en sorte que tous les membres de la société puissent les exercer effectivement sans distinction ni discrimination.

310. Le fait que ce droit ait été hissé au rang de liberté publique impose plusieurs obligations aux États dont les plus importantes sont le devoir d'intervenir efficacement pour réglementer ces libertés et légiférer dans ce domaine, de façon à garantir que chacun puisse en jouir et les exercer.

311. Parmi les obligations les plus importantes qu'impose à l'Autorité nationale palestinienne la liberté d'association est l'obligation de s'abstenir de tout acte ou activité susceptible de restreindre ou d'entraver l'exercice effectif par la personne de ce droit ou d'y déroger de manière indue et sans justification sur le plan juridique. Ces obligations comportent également le devoir de s'abstenir d'influencer des personnes ou de les empêcher d'exercer librement ce droit.

A. Organes de l'Autorité nationale compétents en matière d'enregistrement des associations et de surveillance de leurs activités

312. Conformément aux dispositions de la loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile, l'enregistrement et la surveillance des activités des associations et des organisations de la société civile dans les territoires palestiniens sont du ressort de deux organes publics, à savoir le Ministère de l'intérieur et le ministère compétent.

1. Ministère palestinien de l'intérieur

313. Le Ministère palestinien de l'intérieur est habilité à enregistrer les associations caritatives et les organisations de la société civile et à les reconnaître comme des personnes morales, après avoir reçu des entités concernées une demande d'enregistrement conformes aux conditions fixées par la loi à savoir :

a) La présentation au service compétent du Ministère palestinien de l'intérieur d'une demande par écrit de l'enregistrement de l'association, accompagnées de trois exemplaires des statuts.

Cette condition est précisée et soulignée au premier paragraphe de l'article 4 de la loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile, qui dispose que les membres fondateurs doivent soumettre par écrit au service compétent du Ministère de l'intérieur une demande qui remplit toutes les conditions, signée par au moins trois des membres fondateurs, qui sont habilités à enregistrer l'association ou l'organisation et à signer en son nom. La demande doit être accompagnée de trois exemplaires des statuts de l'association, signés par les membres du comité fondateur;

b) L'intégration des informations suivantes dans les statuts de l'association ou de l'organisation, en application de l'article 5 de la loi :

1. Le nom de l'association ou de l'organisation, son siège social et son objet;
2. Ses ressources financières et leur utilisation;
3. Les différentes catégories de membres, les conditions d'adhésion et de radiation et le montant des cotisations;
4. La structure de l'association ou de l'organisation, les modalités de modification des statuts, ou encore de fusion et d'unification;
5. Les modalités de convocation d'une assemblée générale;

6. Les moyens de contrôle financier;

7. Les règles régissant la dissolution d'une association ou d'une organisation et la dévolution des biens de l'organisation en cas de dissolution;

c) La décision du Ministère de l'intérieur concernant l'enregistrement de l'association.

314. Lorsque les membres fondateurs font une demande d'enregistrement conformément aux conditions prévues par la loi, le Ministère de l'intérieur doit se prononcer sur l'enregistrement de l'association ou de l'organisation dans un délai de deux mois après la date de réception de la demande. Au cas où le Ministère ne prend aucune décision dans les deux mois qui suivent la date de réception de la demande, l'association ou l'organisation est réputée enregistrée au regard de l'article 4 de la loi.

315. Le paragraphe 4 du même article dispose également qu'au cas où le Ministère de l'intérieur décide de rejeter la demande d'enregistrement, les membres fondateurs de l'association ont le droit de contester cette décision auprès d'un tribunal compétent, à savoir la Haute Cour palestinienne, dans un délai de 30 jours suivant la notification du rejet.

a) Loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile

316. D'après la loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile, les compétences du Ministère de l'intérieur dans ce domaine se limitent à ce qui suit :

- Enregistrer les associations et les organisations de la société civile qui remplissent les conditions requises;
- Procéder à la vérification des comptes de l'association, conformément à l'article 6 de la loi. Le ministère compétent est tenu au regard de la loi d'adresser une lettre d'autorisation au Ministre de l'intérieur, lui demandant de procéder à l'audit financier de l'association pour déterminer si ses fonds ont été utilisés à bon escient, conformément aux dispositions de la loi et aux statuts de l'association ou de l'organisation;
- Obtenir des déclarations sur les modifications concernant l'emplacement des locaux, les statuts, l'objet de l'association ou de l'organisation ou tout remaniement total ou partiel de son conseil d'administration, conformément à l'article 12 de la loi;
- Former des comités provisoires pour gérer l'association, comme précisé à l'article 22 de la loi, qui autorise le Ministre de l'intérieur à désigner un comité provisoire parmi les membres de l'assemblée générale de l'association ou de l'organisation, pour faire office de conseil d'administration pendant un mois; et convoquer une assemblée générale au cours de la même période pour élire un nouveau conseil d'administration.

317. S'agissant de la désignation des comités provisoires, la compétence du Ministre de l'intérieur est limitée et ne peut s'exercer que dans l'un des deux cas suivants :

- Démission de l'ensemble des membres du conseil d'administration de l'association ou de l'organisation;

- Démission de certains des membres du conseil d'administration de l'association ou de l'organisation et incapacité des autres membres du conseil de constituer un comité provisoire, auquel cas le Ministre convoque l'assemblée générale de l'association dans un délai d'un mois à compter de la date des démissions aux fins d'élire un nouveau conseil d'administration.

b) Annulation de l'enregistrement de l'association et dissolution de la personnalité morale

318. La loi susmentionnée confère au Ministère de l'intérieur le pouvoir d'annuler l'enregistrement d'une association et de dissoudre sa personnalité morale si cette dernière n'a pas effectivement entamé ses activités dans un délai d'un an à partir de la date d'enregistrement, sauf cas de force majeure.

c) Dissolution d'une association et de sa personnalité morale

319. Sur la base de l'article 37 de la loi précitée, le Ministre de l'intérieur peut prendre la décision de dissoudre une association ou une organisation si cette dernière contrevient délibérément et fondamentalement à ses propres statuts, en violation des dispositions fondamentales de la loi l'association ou l'organisation doit obligatoirement inscrire dans ses statuts au moment de son enregistrement et qui sont l'élément essentiel qui fonde la décision du Ministère de l'enregistrer et de l'accréditer.

320. Par conséquent, toute transgression ou violation par l'association ou l'organisation des dispositions fondamentales visées à l'article 5 de la loi confère au Ministère de l'intérieur le pouvoir de dissoudre celle-ci.

321. Pour éviter l'arbitraire dans l'exercice du pouvoir exécutif, la loi exige du Ministère qu'il envoie un avertissement par écrit à l'association ou l'organisation concernant la nature de la violation qu'elle aurait commise par rapport à ses statuts avant de prendre une décision sur sa dissolution. La loi oblige également le Ministère à accorder à l'association un délai de grâce de trois mois pendant lequel elle peut remédier à la situation et rétablir le statu quo.

322. Si l'association ou l'organisation tient compte de l'avertissement et remédie à la situation qui a entraîné une violation de ses statuts, l'avertissement peut être considéré non avenu auquel cas il n'y a pas lieu de dissoudre l'association et l'organisation ou de lui retirer sa personnalité morale.

323. Pour veiller à ce que le Ministère de l'intérieur n'utilise pas ses pouvoirs ou compétences de manière arbitraire, l'article 38 de la loi confirme le droit de l'association ou de l'organisation qui s'estime lésée par la décision de dissolution du Ministère de se pourvoir en cassation, auquel cas elle peut poursuivre ses activités en attendant la décision finale.

2. Ministère compétent

324. Le ministère compétent est celui dont les compétences recouvrent le mieux les activités essentielles de l'association et son objet tel qu'il est défini dans ses statuts. Par exemple, les ministères compétents dans le cas des associations actives dans le domaine de la santé ou celles soucieuses de favoriser l'enseignement, d'éliminer l'analphabétisme et de former les enseignants sont respectivement le Ministère de la santé et le Ministère de l'éducation.

325. Conformément à la loi susmentionnée, le ministère compétent est l'organe qui a les compétences nécessaires pour surveiller l'activité des associations et veiller à ce qu'elles s'acquittent de leurs obligations, respectent leurs statuts internes ainsi que les dispositions de la loi relative aux associations.

B. Les droits des associations au regard de la loi palestinienne relative aux associations

326. Le corpus juridique régissant les activités des associations en territoire palestinien comprend la loi relative aux associations et aux organisations de la société civile n° 1 de 2000 et la décision du Conseil des ministres n° 9 de 2003 qui a adopté le texte d'application de la loi précitée.

327. Cette loi comprend neuf sections et 45 articles qui abordent diverses questions juridiques liées aux associations et organisations, notamment la nature du lien juridique avec le pouvoir exécutif.

328. Le texte d'application, qui compte 70 articles, comporte des dispositions qui éclairent la lettre et l'esprit de la loi, ainsi que les procédures et formalités administratives relatives à l'enregistrement et au fonctionnement de ces associations.

329. On peut résumer les droits et obligations liés à l'enregistrement et au fonctionnement des associations comme suit :

1. Une association a le droit de se faire enregistrer si les conditions sont réunies à cet effet. Au regard de cette loi, toute association a le droit de se faire enregistrer si elle satisfait aux conditions requises;
2. Les associations ont le droit d'avoir des sections et de mettre en œuvre des projets générateurs de revenus. L'article 15 dispose que « les associations et organisations ont le droit d'organiser des activités et d'établir des projets générateurs de revenus à condition que ces derniers servent à financer des activités d'intérêt public. Les associations et les organisations ont le droit de créer des sections à l'intérieur de la Palestine »;
3. Les autorités ne peuvent pas s'immiscer dans la constitution des assemblées générales ou dans les modalités de convocation et de tenue des réunions. L'article 46 du texte d'application de la loi souligne que l'association est gérée par son conseil d'administration, conformément aux statuts internes, étant entendu que ces derniers doivent être conformes à la loi. Chaque association est dotée d'un conseil d'administration et d'une assemblée générale. Aucun organe public ne peut intervenir dans la conduite des réunions, des élections et des activités de l'association ou les influencer;
4. Aucune association ne peut faire l'objet d'une dissolution sans en être préalablement informée ou sans avoir obtenu un délai de grâce de trois mois pour mettre de l'ordre dans ses affaires;
5. Les biens d'une association ne sont saisis et ses locaux ne sont fermés ou perquisitionnés que sur ordre d'une autorité juridique compétente, conformément à l'article 41 de la loi relative aux associations, qui interdit la saisie des biens d'une association ou d'une organisation, la fermeture de ses locaux ou la perquisition de son siège, de ses locaux ou de ses sections, en l'absence d'une décision de l'organe judiciaire compétent;

6. Les associations ont le droit de modifier leurs statuts ou leur objet à condition d'en d'informer le service ou le ministère compétent dans un délai d'un mois après la date de modification. L'article 45 du texte d'application dispose que les membres fondateurs d'une association ont le droit d'établir librement ses statuts, sans ingérence aucune de la part d'un organe public;

7. Une association a un droit de recours en justice. Pour protéger les associations et les organisations de tout abus de pouvoir de la part de l'exécutif, la loi relative aux associations dispose qu'une association ou organisation qui fait l'objet d'une décision de dissolution émanant du Ministère ou de révocation de son certificat d'enregistrement a le droit de faire appel de ladite décision auprès de l'organe judiciaire compétent, à savoir la Haute Cour. L'article 38 de la même loi stipule que si le Ministère décide de révoquer le certificat d'enregistrement d'une association ou d'une organisation, les raisons doivent en être précisées par écrit. L'association ou l'organisation a le droit de contester la décision devant un tribunal compétent.

C. Violations présumées par les autorités palestiniennes de la liberté de s'associer librement

330. Pour comprendre l'étendue et la nature des violations présumées de la liberté de s'associer librement, citées dans le Rapport Goldstone, la Commission a contacté toutes les institutions de défense des droits de l'homme palestiniennes qui surveillent ces violations et recueillent des informations à cet égard en Cisjordanie, telles que Al-Haq, la Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l'homme, le Réseau des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes et le Centre d'assistance juridique et des droits de l'homme Al Qods. Elle a demandé à ces institutions de lui faire part, par écrit, des violations commises par les autorités palestiniennes du droit des Palestiniens de constituer des associations caritatives et des organisations de la société civile.

331. Les rapports communiqués par ces institutions à la Commission s'accordent pour dire que de nombreuses violations du droit de s'associer librement ont été commises par les autorités en Cisjordanie, notamment par le Ministère de l'intérieur et les services de sécurité. Sur la base des rapports et des déclarations reçues, on peut les résumer comme suit :

1. Constitution de comités provisoires et désignation de personnes externes à l'association pour gérer ces organisations à la place des conseils d'administration élus par les membres. D'après le rapport de la Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l'homme, 11 comités provisoires ont été désignés en 2009 par le Ministère palestinien de l'intérieur pour remplacer les conseils élus en Cisjordanie⁴⁷;
2. Non-exécution des décisions de la Haute Cour annulant les ordres des autorités concernant la désignation des comités provisoires de direction;

⁴⁷ État des associations sous l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en 2009 : rapport de la Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l'homme, Rapport spécial n° 68, p. 13.

3. Interdiction faite par les services de sécurité palestiniens aux associations d'exercer leurs activités et menace d'arrêter les membres des conseils d'administration qui refusent d'obtempérer;
4. Perquisitions effectuées par les services de sécurité palestiniens au siège des associations et saisie de leurs documents et de leur matériel;
5. Fermeture des sections des associations et interdiction d'exercer des activités;
6. Obligation pour les associations de soumettre des rapports administratifs et financiers au Ministère de l'intérieur;
7. Obligation d'obtenir l'accord préalable du Ministère de l'intérieur pour l'ouverture de comptes bancaires;
8. Obligation faite par le Ministère de l'intérieur aux membres fondateurs d'obtenir au préalable l'approbation des services de sécurité pour enregistrer leur association.

D. Plaintes reçues par la Commission au sujet des violations présumées de la liberté de s'associer librement

332. La Commission a reçu cinq plaintes d'atteintes au droit de s'associer librement, qui auraient été commises par le Ministère de l'intérieur⁴⁸. Après les avoir examinées, étudié les documents présentés à l'appui, entendu les plaignants (respectivement les 4 et 8 mai 2010) et tenu des audiences pour les représentants des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme compétentes⁴⁹, elle a estimé disposer des éléments de preuve suffisants pour appuyer les allégations de violations du droit de s'associer librement commises par les autorités en Cisjordanie. Les témoignages qui ont été entendus au cours des audiences tenues par la Commission en Cisjordanie ont confirmé que les autorités avaient commis les violations suivantes.

333. Des comités provisoires avaient été désignés pour gérer certaines associations à la place des conseils d'administration élus par les membres. Bon nombre d'institutions de défense des droits de l'homme interrogées par la Commission ont confirmé que cette violation s'était bien produite⁵⁰. Cela a été également confirmé par le témoignage du Président du Conseil de la société caritative islamique pour les orphelins du village de Yatta dans le gouvernorat d'Hébron. Il a témoigné que bien que son association n'ait reçu aucun avertissement du Ministère de l'intérieur au sujet d'une violation ou d'une procédure illégale de sa part, il a reçu le 19 août 2008, à son grand étonnement, la visite d'un groupe de personnes au siège de son association, dont un représentant du Ministère de l'intérieur et un représentant des services de sécurité préventive et de la police. Ils lui ont présenté un ordre portant le numéro 110 de 2008 émanant du Ministère, l'informant que des personnes externes à l'association seraient désignées au sein d'un comité de direction provisoire pour gérer la société à la place du conseil d'administration élu, qui serait ainsi dissous, en vertu du même ordre. Ils ont emporté les clefs des locaux de la société. Par la suite, les membres du Conseil d'administration qui avait été dissous ont fait appel de l'ordre du Ministère de l'intérieur auprès de la Haute Cour palestinienne, qui a décidé le 24 juin 2009 de le révoquer. Mais à la date où le plaignant a été entendu par la Commission, le Ministère n'avait toujours pas appliqué cette décision⁵¹.

⁴⁸ Ces plaintes ont été entendues et recueillies par la Commission et sont énumérées sur une liste qui figure en pièce jointe.

⁴⁹ La Commission a entendu au cours des audiences qui se sont déroulées les 20, 25 et 26 mai 2010 des déclarations des représentants des institutions compétentes, notamment d'Al-Haq, la Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l'homme, du Réseau des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes et du Centre d'assistance juridique Al-Qods.

⁵⁰ Ces déclarations et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous les cotes j/D-35/2010 et j/D-37/2010.

334. La Commission a confirmé que les services de sécurité avaient fermé certaines associations, les avaient empêchées d'exercer leurs activités et menacé d'arrêter les membres des conseils d'administration s'ils ne respectaient pas les ordres d'interdiction.

335. Le président d'une association a déclaré que le 29 mai 2008, une unité des renseignements généraux avait fermé le siège de son association et saisi des documents et du matériel. Les services de sécurité préventive avaient également fermé l'atelier d'un tailleur rattaché à l'association et l'avaient vidé de son contenu.

336. D'après cette même déclaration, l'ordre de fermeture venait du siège des renseignements généraux à Ramallah, en date du 28 mai 2008, et avait été exécuté le lendemain. Une unité des renseignements généraux avait fait une descente dans les bureaux de l'association, saisi des biens et des documents et avait informé ses membres que l'association était désormais interdite de toute activités et que tout membre du conseil d'administration qui tenterait de se rendre dans les locaux serait arrêté.

337. Lorsque le président de cette association s'est rendu au Ministère de la culture pour s'enquérir de l'ordre de fermeture, il a appris que son association, qui était munie d'une licence, pouvait poursuivre ses activités, mais que le Ministère ne pouvait pas garantir la sécurité de ses membres. Il a également appris d'un fonctionnaire qui s'occupait du dossier qu'aucun ordre de fermeture n'avait été donné par le Ministère au sujet de son association et que le contentieux venait des forces de sécurité. Ce fonctionnaire a conseillé au président de l'association de régler directement le problème avec les services de sécurité. À la date où le président a été entendu, son association était toujours fermée. Les services de renseignements généraux avaient confisqué ses meubles qui, d'après son président, avaient été transférés dans les bureaux des services des renseignements généraux à Salfit⁵².

338. D'autres témoins ont déclaré que le siège de l'association avait fait l'objet d'une descente, que ses documents avaient été saisis, qu'elle avait été interdite d'activités et que ses membres étaient régulièrement convoqués pour interrogatoire par les services des renseignements militaires et de la sécurité préventive. L'association n'avait reçu aucune notification officielle par écrit au sujet d'une fermeture ou d'une cessation de ses activités et n'en avait été informée que verbalement. À la date de l'audience, elle n'avait toujours pas pu rouvrir son siège ou reprendre ses activités⁵³.

⁵¹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote j/D-27/2010.

⁵² Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote j/D-30/2010.

⁵³ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote j/D-28/2010. Le même incident est évoqué dans la déclaration et documentation y relative conservées par la Commission sous la cote j/D-29/2010.

339. Certains des représentants d'institutions qui ont été entendus par la Commission ont également rapporté que des agents du Ministère de l'intérieur étaient intervenus de manière flagrante dans les activités et réunions des associations et avaient insisté pour assister aux élections internes, les superviser ou les surveiller, et en faire avaliser les résultats par le Ministère⁵⁴.

E. Conclusions de la Commission sur les violations présumées en Cisjordanie de la liberté de s'associer librement

340. Après les dépositions des plaignants et des représentants des organisations des droits de l'homme au cours des audiences sur les violations de la liberté de s'associer librement, après l'entrevue officielle avec le Directeur général des relations publiques et des affaires des ONG au Ministère de l'intérieur⁵⁵, après la tenue d'une réunion entre le Président de la Commission et le Ministre de l'intérieur et après l'examen du rapport présenté par le Ministère de l'intérieur de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne sur les obligations du Ministère s'agissant des recommandations du rapport Goldstone⁵⁶, la Commission estime qu'il y a réellement eu des violations de la liberté de s'associer librement et que les autorités palestiniennes ont violé les dispositions de la loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile et son texte d'application, comme suit :

341. Les ordres émanant du Ministère de l'intérieur sur la désignation de comités préparatoires provisoires au sein de certaines associations n'étaient pas compatibles avec les dispositions de la loi, d'autant que les comités en question étaient constitués de membres externes aux associations et n'étaient pas provisoires, au sens qu'ils n'avaient pas été créés pour une durée d'un mois, délai prévu pour la tenue de nouvelles élections au sein des conseils d'administration des associations, ce qui représente donc une violation du paragraphe 2 de l'article 22 de la loi relative aux associations caritatives et aux organisations de la société civile n° 1 de 2000, qui autorise le Ministre de l'intérieur à désigner un comité provisoire parmi les membres de l'assemblée générale de l'association ou de l'organisation, pour faire office de conseil d'administration pendant un mois; et convoquer une assemblée générale au cours de la même période pour élire un nouveau conseil d'administration.

342. Dans le rapport présenté à la Commission, le Ministère de l'intérieur a reconnu explicitement avoir désigné 20 comités provisoires au sein des associations en 2009, mais la Commission n'a pas pu déterminer dans quelle mesure ces informations étaient fondées.

343. Alors que les sièges de certaines associations avaient été fermés, les services de sécurité ont enfreint les dispositions de la loi, notamment l'article 41, qui interdit la saisie des fonds d'une association ou d'une organisation, sa fermeture ou la perquisition de ses locaux principaux ou secondaires en l'absence d'une décision de l'autorité judiciaire compétente. L'absence de décisions de la part d'une autorité judiciaire compétente au sujet des fermetures, perquisitions et saisies les rend nulles et non avenues, du fait qu'elles étaient manifestement contraires à la loi.

⁵⁴ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote j/D-35/2010.

⁵⁵ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote j/D-31/2010.

344. L'ingérence du Ministère de l'intérieur dans la tenue des réunions de l'association est illégale et constitue une violation du texte d'application de la loi, qui interdit explicitement aux autorités toute immixtion dans la conduite des réunions, des élections et des activités d'une association et toute tentative de les influencer.

345. Le fait d'obliger les membres fondateurs d'une association à obtenir l'autorisation préalable des services de sécurité est une violation des dispositions de la loi et de son texte d'application. Ni la loi ni son texte d'application n'imposent cette exigence pour enregistrer une association. La Commission considère en outre que cette imposition est une violation flagrante du droit des Palestiniens de s'associer librement, un droit garanti par la Loi fondamentale palestinienne amendée de 2003. Il faut donc mettre fin à cette pratique.

346. La demande formulée par le Ministère de l'intérieur d'obtenir les rapports administratifs et financiers annuels constitue également une violation des dispositions de l'article 13 de la loi relative aux associations caritatives, qui définit clairement l'organe public doté des compétences exclusives pour exiger la soumission de ces rapports en tant que « ministère compétent ». Le fait que le Ministère de l'intérieur fasse cette demande est une violation des dispositions de la loi.

347. La Commission a pris note à cet égard de l'article 49 du texte d'application de la loi, qui dispose que les associations doivent soumettre leurs rapports financiers et administratifs au bureau d'enregistrement du Ministère de l'intérieur. Cela constitue une violation flagrante des dispositions de la loi. Cette disposition doit être abandonnée ou amendée pour être conforme à la loi.

348. Pour que les Palestiniens jouissent effectivement du droit de s'associer librement, le Ministère de l'intérieur doit remédier à la situation en mettant fin à toutes les pratiques, mesures ou activités qui outrepassent ses compétences, en vertu de la loi relative aux associations caritatives et à son texte d'application.

VIII. Violation de la liberté de réunion pacifique en Cisjordanie

A. La liberté de réunion pacifique dans les textes législatifs palestiniens

349. L'article 26 de la Loi fondamentale amendée en 2003 énonce que « les Palestiniens jouissent du droit de participer à la vie politique à titre individuel et collectivement et en particulier des droits indiqués ci-après :

1. Constituer des partis politiques et y adhérer conformément à la loi;
2. Constituer des syndicats, des associations, des unions, des amicales, des clubs et des fondations populaires conformément à la loi;
3. Voter et présenter leur candidature lors des élections pour le choix de représentants à la majorité absolue conformément à la loi;
4. Accéder à des fonctions et à des postes publics selon le principe de l'égalité des chances;

⁵⁶ Le rapport a été présenté à la Commission le 20 avril 2010.

5. Tenir des réunions privées sans la présence de membres de la police et tenir des réunions publiques, des processions et des rassemblements dans le respect de la loi.

350. Par ailleurs, la loi palestinienne n° 12 (1998) relative aux réunions publiques, à son article 2, affirme le droit des citoyens de tenir librement des réunions publiques, des colloques et des défilés, et l'interdiction de porter atteinte à cette liberté ou de la limiter, si ce n'est en application des dispositions énoncées dans la loi, telles qu'indiquées ci-après :

- Les organisateurs d'une réunion doivent notifier par écrit le préfet ou le chef de la police au moins 48 heures à l'avance de la tenue de la réunion;
- Les organisateurs de la réunion, qui doivent être au moins trois, doivent signer la notification en précisant le lieu, l'heure et la date de la réunion et son objet;
- Le préfet ou le chef de la police doit établir un règlement fixant la durée ou le parcours de la réunion dans le but d'organiser le mouvement des participants, à condition que les organisateurs reçoivent ce règlement par écrit au plus tard 24 heures après réception de la notification.

351. Les textes législatifs palestiniens s'accordent, s'agissant de la façon dont ils traitent de la liberté de réunion, avec les dispositions et les principes du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme, plus précisément la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, dont les dispositions énoncent expressément le droit de réunion, dans le cadre des lois et libertés fondamentales que les États doivent garantir aux individus.

352. L'article 20 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme affirme et garantit cette liberté, énonçant que « Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques ». De même, l'article 22 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques affirme que « Toute personne a le droit de s'associer librement avec d'autres, y compris le droit de constituer des syndicats et d'y adhérer pour la protection de ses intérêts. »

B. Les violations de la liberté de réunion pacifique qu'auraient commises les autorités officielles palestiniennes

353. La Commission, en s'efforçant de se faire une idée de la nature et du volume des violations alléguées dans le rapport Goldstone, a contacté toutes les organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme pour savoir si elles avaient remarqué, observé et attesté ces violations en Cisjordanie, afin qu'elles fournissent à la Commission ce qui avait été recueilli par ces institutions concernant les abus ou les violations commis par les autorités officielles palestiniennes à l'encontre de la liberté de réunion pacifique des Palestiniens.

354. Les rapports des associations reçus par la Commission font état de violations par les autorités officielles palestiniennes, plus précisément le Ministère de l'intérieur et les services de sécurité au niveau de la Cisjordanie, concernant la liberté de réunion pacifique, comme précisé ci-après.

355. Le 28 décembre 2008, les services de sécurité de Al-Khalil ont attaqué les participants à une marche de solidarité avec la bande de Gaza après l'agression israélienne. La marche a commencé à midi le lundi 28 décembre 2008 devant le siège de la Croix-Rouge, avec la participation de toutes les autorités nationales et musulmanes, un certain nombre de manifestants ont brandi le drapeau du mouvement Hamas, ce qui a conduit les services de sécurité à intervenir, des membres de ceux-ci ont tiré en l'air, après que des manifestants eurent lancé des pierres sur la force de sécurité; un certain nombre de personnes ont été blessées ayant été attaquées par les membres des services de sécurité, notamment : l'ancien ministre du Gouvernement d'unité nationale Issa Khayri al-Jaabari et le dénommé Nabil Issa al-Jaabari.

356. Le vendredi 2 janvier 2009, le mouvement Hamas a organisé une marche de solidarité avec la bande de Gaza en réponse à l'agression israélienne contre celle-ci. La marche devait s'élancer après la prière du vendredi depuis la mosquée d'Al-Husayn bin Ali à Al-Khalil. Dès la sortie des prieurs de la mosquée à l'issue de la prière du vendredi, une unité de police militaire est intervenue et a empêché le cortège d'avancer vers la rue principale. Entre-temps, les participants ont lancé des pierres sur la police et les forces de sécurité, faisant plus de 10 blessés parmi ceux-ci. Un certain nombre de participants ont aussi été blessés à coups de bâton par les forces de sécurité qui s'efforçaient de disperser le cortège. De nombreux coups de feu ont été tirés en l'air sans faire de blessés.

357. Le 2 janvier 2009, les familles des personnes détenues par l'Autorité palestinienne dans le district d'Al-Khalil ont organisé une manifestation de masse devant le barrage militaire qui se trouve au nord du centre administratif d'Al-Khalil, vers 11 h 15 du matin. Les manifestants brandissaient des pancartes exigeant la libération de leurs proches détenus par les services de sécurité. À ce moment-là, une unité militaire composée de différents services de sécurité est apparue et une unité militaire féminine a été appelée, les manifestants ont été dispersés à coups de bâton et des gaz ont été envoyés sur eux, un grand nombre d'entre eux ont souffert de suffocation et de coups, et la dénommée Lama Khater a été arrêtée.

358. Le 2 janvier 2009, les forces nationales et islamistes de la ville de Ramallah ont organisé une manifestation pacifique de soutien aux familles de la bande de Gaza en protestation contre l'agression israélienne contre Gaza. Pendant le défilé, un certain nombre de manifestants des deux sexes ont brandi des drapeaux du mouvement Hamas, et durant la manifestation les forces de sécurité palestiniennes sont intervenues; elles ont recouru à la force pour la disperser, blessant un certain nombre de manifestants et arrêtant une vingtaine de personnes.

359. Le 5 janvier 2009, l'association des étudiants de l'université de Bir Zeit a organisé une manifestation pacifique qui est partie du campus universitaire vers le carrefour d'Attara, où se trouve un barrage militaire des forces d'occupation. Lorsqu'au moins 400 étudiants sont arrivés au milieu de la ville de Bir Zeit, les forces de sécurité palestiniennes ont essayé de les empêcher de se rendre au barrage israélien, ce qui a provoqué des affrontements entre les manifestants et les forces de sécurité qui ont recouru à la force pour disperser ce rassemblement, blessant au moins 50 étudiants.

360. Le fait que la Commission n'a reçu qu'une plainte concernant la liberté de réunion, du dénommé Issa al-Jaabari, qui s'est excusé de ne pouvoir assister à la réunion, et vu que les déclarations des représentants des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme qu'elle a entendus ont fait état de comportements et de violations de la part de membres des forces de sécurité, durant des réunions pacifiques, cela a matériellement empêché la Commission de se faire une opinion certaine à l'égard de la nature des violations portant atteinte à cette liberté. Malgré cela, la Commission considère qu'il est nécessaire d'affirmer que :

- Les autorités officielles palestiniennes doivent respecter la liberté de réunion et permettre aux particuliers d'exercer cette liberté conformément aux règlements et aux procédures opérationnelles que prévoit la loi;
- Les autorités officielles palestiniennes et les membres des services de sécurité doivent coopérer avec la réunion pacifique, du fait qu'il s'agit d'un droit et d'une liberté fondamentale, et les services de sécurité doivent intervenir pour protéger les participants, faciliter leur mouvement et non l'entraver ou l'empêcher;
- Le déni de ce droit par les autorités officielles ou l'entrave par celles-ci de son exercice en recourant à des mesures illégales constitue un abus et une violation de la liberté de réunion pacifique;
- Bien que les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme aient allégué que les services de sécurité avaient commis des abus durant des réunions pacifiques, les autorités officielles n'ont pas effectué des enquêtes effectives sur ces allégations, ce qui montre qu'elles ne sont pas désireuses de donner suite aux rapports, déclarations et observations des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme sur les abus commis.

IX. Emprisonnement et torture dans la bande de Gaza

361. Le territoire palestinien, depuis que le Mouvement de la résistance islamique, le Hamas, a pris par la force le contrôle de la bande de Gaza le 14 juin 2007, est sous le contrôle et l'administration de ce mouvement et des forces et factions armées qui en relèvent, plus précisément les brigades Izz al-Din al-Qassam, dont le rôle est clairement apparu durant les premiers mois où le Hamas s'est efforcé d'imposer et d'assurer son contrôle sur la bande de Gaza. Les brigades ont assumé un rôle clair sur le plan de la sécurité, au point de devenir la force principale chargée de faire exécuter les lois, effectuant les arrestations, les enquêtes, les poursuites, les interrogations et administrant durant cette période une série de centres d'internement et de détention.

362. Le territoire palestinien, après ces événements, c'est-à-dire la prise par la force par le mouvement Hamas, des rênes du pouvoir sur la bande de Gaza, est gouverné et dirigé par deux régimes, étant donné que le régime officiel palestinien représenté par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne et ses institutions officielles et appareil de sécurité a continué à gouverner et administrer la Cisjordanie, c'est-à-dire ce que l'on appelle la Palestine dans les districts du nord, tandis que la bande de Gaza ou ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler les districts méridionaux est soumise à l'administration et au contrôle du Mouvement de la résistance islamique, le Hamas, et aux forces et factions qui lui sont subordonnées sur les plans militaire et organisationnel.

363. La majorité des changements intervenus sur la terre palestinienne depuis que le Mouvement de la résistance islamique, le Hamas, s'est emparé du pouvoir dans la bande de Gaza ont conduit à un recul du respect et de l'application ordonnée des droits et des libertés, à cause de l'ensemble des atteintes et des violations commises par chacune des deux parties durant cette période.

364. Nombre de lois et de libertés ont été soumises à des restrictions et à des attaques des deux parties; ainsi, le droit à la vie, la liberté d'expression et d'opinion, le droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques, le droit de constituer des associations, le droit de réunion pacifique, le droit à la protection de sa vie privée, le droit de tout individu à la liberté et à la sécurité de sa personne, nul ne peut être placé en détention ou être privé de sa liberté de façon arbitraire, nul ne sera l'objet d'immixtions arbitraires ou illégales dans sa vie privée, sa famille, son domicile ou sa correspondance, ni d'atteintes illégales à son honneur et à sa réputation, le droit de recevoir et de répandre des informations, la liberté du journalisme, ainsi que d'autres droits qui ont été souvent violés et attaqués par les deux parties, sous prétexte de conditions anormales que connaît le pays ou du fait que la sécurité exige ces procédures pour préserver l'ordre public dans les zones que chacune des parties contrôle.

365. Les faits et l'ensemble des décisions prises au niveau de la bande de Gaza vont plus loin que la conduite des affaires intérieures. En effet, concrètement, la situation est plus proche de la constitution d'un nouveau régime de gouvernement indépendant dans la bande de Gaza, ce que confirment de nombreuses données, notamment :

- Le refus de l'autorité qui prévaut dans la bande de Gaza de se soumettre aux décisions et aux ordres du président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne et aux textes administratifs qui lui sont liés;
- L'arrêt par les institutions militaires et de sécurité de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne de leurs activités dans la bande de Gaza et le transfert de leurs pouvoirs aux entités relevant du Hamas, à la force exécutive et aux forces de sécurité intérieure constituées l'une après l'autre et à une nouvelle administration au lendemain de la prise du pouvoir militaire par le Hamas dans la bande de Gaza;
- L'occupation de tous les bâtiments des militaires et forces de sécurité relevant de l'Autorité palestinienne et l'utilisation de ceux-ci pour héberger les brigades al-Qassam;
- Constitution d'une nouvelle direction de la police palestinienne et rupture des liens existant entre celle-ci et la direction officielle se trouvant en Cisjordanie;
- Remplacement des principaux fonctionnaires par des protégés du Hamas, reconfiguration du secteur de la fonction publique, de ses institutions et de ses structures selon les desiderata et les orientations du Mouvement;
- Création d'une nouvelle instance avec la création d'une cour suprême, qui remplace celle se trouvant en Cisjordanie au niveau de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne, et attribution à cette nouvelle cour de l'administration et de la conduite de la justice et de la supervision des nominations et promotions et des autres activités touchant à l'administration et à la conduite de l'appareil judiciaire dans la bande de Gaza, remplacement des juges siégeant dans les tribunaux de la bande de Gaza par de nouveaux juges appartenant au Hamas, et nomination du Président de la Cour suprême à Gaza, étant donné que le Mouvement a une justice indépendante de l'autorité judiciaire qui jouit de la légitimité légale;
- Suspension du Procureur général palestinien de ses fonctions, celui-ci ayant abusé de son autorité dans l'exercice de ses fonctions en constituant notamment un parquet dépendant du Hamas.

A. Les services chargés de la préservation de la sécurité dans la bande de Gaza 366. Après la prise du pouvoir par la force par le Mouvement de la résistance islamique, le Hamas, celui-ci a contrôlé les sièges des services de sécurité, en particulier les services des renseignements généraux et de la sécurité préventive, et a créé un nouveau service baptisé « appareil de sécurité intérieure », auquel a été confiée la tâche de faire appliquer le droit dans la bande de Gaza. Cet appareil, qui relève du Ministère de l'intérieur au plan de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza, est composé d'éléments des brigades al-Qassam et de partisans du Hamas et de membres de la force exécutive⁵⁷ qui a été intégrée dans l'appareil de sécurité intérieure après la création de celui-ci. Cette force comprend aussi ceux qui souhaitent continuer leur travail parmi les membres des services de sécurité et de la police qui existaient avant la prise du pouvoir par le Hamas dans la bande de Gaza, à condition que les relations avec l'autorité en Cisjordanie soient coupées avant la poursuite du travail avec la nouvelle autorité.

367. Le service de sécurité intérieure se fait aider pour appliquer la loi, comme il ressort clairement des événements survenus dans la bande de Gaza, d'éléments appartenant au Hamas, plus précisément aux brigades Izz al-Din al-Qassam, qui ⁵⁷ Le Ministre de l'intérieur palestinien a décidé le 20 avril 2006 de créer une nouvelle force de sécurité relevant directement de lui, baptisée « force exécutive », en vue de l'aider à s'acquitter de ses fonctions s'agissant de faire face à la situation chaotique et de rétablir la sécurité et l'ordre public. La constitution de cette force a déclenché une crise profonde au niveau des relations entre la présidence et le Gouvernement à cause du refus du Président palestinien d'adopter cette force et de la promulgation par celui-ci d'un décret présidentiel qui refuse franchement de reconnaître cette force et de coopérer avec elle.

Le texte du décret présidentiel est le suivant : décret n° 28 de 2006 :

Le Président du Comité exécutif de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine
Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne
Chef suprême des forces palestiniennes, Ayant examiné la Loi fondamentale amendée en 2003, ainsi que ses amendements, et la loi de 2005 relative au service dans les forces de sécurité, En vertu des pouvoirs qui me sont dévolus et dans l'intérêt général, J'ai décrété ce qui suit :

Article 1

Annulation de la décision du Ministre de l'intérieur publiée le 20 avril 2006 relative à la création de nouvelles forces de sécurité à partir de factions de la résistance armée et relevant directement de lui parce qu'elle contredit l'article 3 de la loi de 2005 relative au service dans les forces de sécurité, qui énonce que toute création de force se fera dans le cadre de l'une des trois forces stipulées.

Article 2

Annulation de la décision du Ministre de l'intérieur publiée le 20 avril 2006 relative à la promotion et à la nomination d'officiers, car il n'est pas compétent pour promouvoir et nommer conformément aux dispositions des articles 19 et 20 de la loi de 2005 relative au service dans les forces de sécurité, qui énonce que la Commission des officiers est compétente en la matière et que ses décisions ne prennent effet qu'après approbation du Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne.

Article 3

Il est demandé à tous les commandants, officiers et sous-officiers et à tous ceux affiliés aux services de sécurité de ne pas donner suite aux décisions mentionnées aux articles 1 et 2 et de les considérer nulles et non avenues.

Tous les services compétents, doivent appliquer le décret à compter de la date de sa parution et de sa publication au Journal officiel.

sont considérées comme la principale aile militaire du Hamas, recourant dans certains cas à leur assistance, en particulier lorsque la sécurité et la stabilité de l'autorité sont menacées.

368. Le service de sécurité intérieure dans la bande de Gaza exerce un mandat dans le domaine :

- Du maintien de l'ordre et de la sécurité et de la protection des personnes, des biens et des actifs;
- De la prévention des crimes et des activités visant à les découvrir, à les suivre et à attraper leurs auteurs et à les traduire en justice;
- De l'administration des prisons et de la garde des prisonniers;
- De l'application des lois, règlements et ordres et de l'assistance fournie aux autorités publiques et à ses agents conformément à la loi;
- De la surveillance et de l'organisation de la circulation sur les routes;
- De la supervision des réunions et défilés publics sur les voies et dans les lieux publics.

B. Les textes législatifs qui régissent les attributions et les activités des personnes chargées d'appliquer la loi dans la bande de Gaza

369. L'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza a continué à appliquer les textes législatifs en vigueur dans la bande de Gaza avant la séparation. Continuent ainsi d'être appliquées la loi n° 8 de 2005 relative au service dans les forces de sécurité, en tant que loi régissant les activités, les fonctions et les devoirs des forces de sécurité en poste dans la bande de Gaza. De même se poursuit l'application de la loi n° 6 de 1998 concernant les centres de redressement et de réinsertion, de la loi n° 12 de 1998 relative aux réunions publiques, de la loi n° 3 de 2001 relative aux procédures pénales, du Code pénal révolutionnaire de 1979 de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine, ainsi que du Code criminel du mandat britannique n° 74 de 1936 et de ses amendements.

370. Lors du deuxième semestre de 2008, les membres du bloc Réforme et changement protégé par le Hamas au Conseil législatif de la bande de Gaza ont publié une loi baptisée Code de procédure pénale militaire de 2008, qui a été appliquée par la suite par les tribunaux militaires de la bande de Gaza.

C. Règles de détention et d'arrestation devant être respectées au niveau de la bande de Gaza conformément aux textes législatifs en vigueur et aux instruments internationaux soumises aux mêmes règles et prescriptions que celles établies et affirmées par le Code de procédure pénale palestinien.

371. Étant donné la poursuite de l'application par l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza des dispositions de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne et du Code de procédure pénale palestinien n° 3 de 2001, de la loi relative aux centres de redressement et de réhabilitation, de la loi relative au service dans les forces de sécurité, toutes les procédures d'incarcération, d'arrestation et de capture qu'appliquent les éléments des forces de sécurité chargées d'exécuter la loi dans la bande de Gaza sont

372. Pour cela, il faut que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza respecte l'ensemble des règles et prescriptions établies par la Loi fondamentale et le Code de procédure pénale, et plus précisément⁵⁸ :

- Nul ne peut être soumis à la contrainte ou à la torture, et les accusés et les autres personnes privées de leur liberté doivent être bien traités;
- Nul ne peut être arrêté ou incarcéré sans un ordre de la partie compétente;
- Les officiers de la police judiciaire doivent écouter aussitôt ce que dit la personne arrêtée, et si celle-ci n'est pas libérée avec une excuse, elle doit être déférée dans les 24 heures devant le procureur compétent;
- Il est interdit de pénétrer dans les logements et d'y perquisitionner sans mandat du procureur ou en sa présence, en s'appuyant sur une accusation visant une personne qui réside dans le logement devant être perquisitionné pour avoir commis une infraction ou un délit ou avoir participé à sa commission, ou parce qu'il existe de fortes présomptions qu'elle détient des objets liés à l'infraction;
- Seul le procureur a le pouvoir d'enquêter, car seul le parquet est chargé d'enquêter sur les infractions et de s'en occuper. En vertu de l'article 99 du Code de procédure pénale, le procureur doit constater le corps de l'accusé avant son interrogation et enregistrer toutes les blessures apparentes et leur origine;
- Le droit d'être assisté d'un conseil durant l'interrogatoire;
- Le procureur, lors de l'arrestation de l'accusé, après son interrogatoire, doit prendre soin de faire prolonger la détention par le tribunal compétent en application de la loi;
- L'agent chargé de l'arrestation doit immédiatement remettre la personne arrêtée au poste de police, car le responsable du poste de police qui a reçu la personne arrêtée sans mandat d'amener se charge immédiatement d'enquêter sur les raisons de l'arrestation. La personne arrêtée ne peut en aucun cas être gardée plus de 24 heures et le procureur en est informé immédiatement;
- Tout homme ne peut être arrêté ou emprisonné que dans un centre de redressement et de réinsertion (les prisons) et dans les lieux d'arrestation spécialisés prévus par la loi. Il n'est pas possible à un agent de tout centre d'y accepter quelqu'un sans un ordre signé par l'autorité compétente et il ne peut l'y garder au-delà de la durée fixée en la matière;
- Si une personne arrêtée est libérée sous caution, le responsable de l'arrestation et le directeur du centre de redressement et de réinsertion (la prison) doivent relâcher le détenu ou le prisonnier [nazîl] jusqu'à ce qu'il soit incarcéré ou arrêté pour autre chose;
- Les centres de redressement et de réinsertion doivent être inspectés, les textes énonçant que les procureurs et les présidents des tribunaux de première instance et des cours d'appel doivent inspecter les centres de redressement et de réinsertion (les prisons) et les lieux de détention qui se trouvent dans leurs locaux afin de s'assurer qu'il ne s'y trouve personne détenu illégalement, et qu'ils doivent étudier les dossiers du centre et les mandats d'amener et d'arrêt et les photographier, et entrer en contact avec les détenus et écouter toute plainte que ceux-ci formulent, et les directeurs et agents des centres doivent leur fournir toute assistance nécessaire pour obtenir les informations qu'ils demandent.

⁵⁸ Nous avons traité de ces garanties et règles dans la section consacrée aux arrestations et à la torture en Cisjordanie, et nous nous y référons seulement ici, afin d'éviter des répétitions.

373. Les règles établies par les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme, plus précisément celles qui ont été énoncées dans la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et la Convention contre la torture et autres peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants, s'appliquent aux procédures d'arrestation, de détention et d'incarcération en vigueur dans la bande de Gaza.

374. La Commission considère que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza est soumise à l'obligation de respecter ces règles et directives pour un certain nombre de raisons, dont les plus importantes sont les suivantes :

- La Loi fondamentale palestinienne réaffirme la majorité de ces règlements et par conséquent nombre de ces garanties et directives ont une valeur juridique contraignante, faisant partie des textes législatifs nationaux en vigueur, ce qui oblige l'autorité qui prévaut dans la bande de Gaza à les respecter et à les appliquer;
- Les principes énoncés dans ces instruments sont des principes juridiques catégoriques, en particulier ceux qui ont trait au droit à la vie et au respect de la personne, à l'interdiction de la torture et autres peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants, ce qui signifie qu'ils s'appliquent à toutes les parties de droit international de tous les pays et aux autres parties, y compris à l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza, qui ne peut faire valoir qu'elle n'est pas partie à ces conventions ou qu'elle n'a pas encore déclaré qu'elle s'y conforme;
- L'Organisation de libération de la Palestine a déclaré que conformément à la déclaration d'indépendance en tant que document constitutionnel elle respectait sincèrement la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, ce qui signifie le caractère obligatoire de cette déclaration pour les Palestiniens, dont le Hamas, qui a participé aux élections législatives conformément à la législation interne et aux dispositions de la Loi fondamentale et de l'Accord d'Oslo et à la Déclaration de principes qu'a signée l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine avec la partie israélienne.

375. Le Hamas ayant pris le pouvoir dans la bande de Gaza et exerçant son autorité effective fondée sur la force, ce qui se passe au niveau de la bande de Gaza selon l'opinion de la Commission relève du droit international des conflits armés internes et des dispositions du deuxième Protocole de Genève de 1977 aux quatre Conventions de Genève, dont l'article I est libellé comme suit :

1. Le présent Protocole, qui développe et complète l'article 3 commun aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 sans modifier ses conditions d'application actuelles, s'applique à tous les conflits armés qui ne sont pas couverts par l'article premier du Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux (Protocole I), et qui se déroulent sur le territoire d'une Haute Partie contractante entre ses forces armées et des forces armées dissidentes ou des groupes armés organisés qui, sous la conduite d'un commandement responsable, exercent sur une partie de son territoire un contrôle tel qu'il leur permette de mener des opérations militaires continues et concertées et d'appliquer le présent Protocole.

2. Le présent Protocole ne s'applique pas aux situations de tensions internes, de troubles intérieurs, comme les émeutes, les actes isolés et sporadiques de violence et autres actes analogues, qui ne sont pas considérés comme des conflits armés.

376. En conséquence, la Commission considère que le Hamas, ayant pris le contrôle et le pouvoir par la force et exerçant une domination effective sur la bande de Gaza, doit, outre les instruments internationaux susmentionnés, respecter et assurer les garanties énoncées dans le deuxième Protocole concernant la protection des civils durant les conflits armés non internationaux, qui font partie de la coutume internationale contraignante.

377. En vertu des dispositions de l'article 4 du Protocole :

1. Toutes les personnes qui ne participent pas directement ou ne participent plus aux hostilités, qu'elles soient ou non privées de liberté, ont droit au respect de leur personne, de leur honneur, de leurs convictions et de leurs pratiques religieuses. Elles seront en toutes circonstances traitées avec humanité, sans aucune distinction de caractère défavorable. Il est interdit d'ordonner qu'il n'y ait pas de survivants.

2. Sans préjudice du caractère général des dispositions qui précèdent, sont et demeurent prohibés en tout temps et en tout lieu à l'égard des personnes visées au paragraphe 1 :

a) Les atteintes portées à la vie, à la santé et au bien-être physique ou mental des personnes, en particulier le meurtre, de même que les traitements cruels tels que la torture, les mutilations ou toutes formes de peines corporelles;

b) Les punitions collectives;

c) La prise d'otages;

d) Les actes de terrorisme;

e) Les atteintes à la dignité de la personne, notamment les traitements humiliants et dégradants, le viol, la contrainte à la prostitution et tout attentat à la pudeur;

f) L'esclavage et la traite des esclaves sous toutes leurs formes;

g) Le pillage;

h) La menace de commettre les actes précités.

3. Les enfants recevront les soins et l'aide dont ils ont besoin et, notamment :

a) Ils devront recevoir une éducation, y compris une éducation religieuse et morale, telle que la désirent leurs parents ou, en l'absence de parents, les personnes qui en ont la garde;

b) Toutes les mesures appropriées seront prises pour faciliter le regroupement des familles momentanément séparées;

c) Les enfants de moins de 15 ans ne devront pas être recrutés dans les forces ou groupes armés, ni autorisés à prendre part aux hostilités;

d) La protection spéciale prévue par le présent article pour les enfants de moins de 15 ans leur restera applicable s'ils prennent directement part aux hostilités en dépit des dispositions de l'alinéa c) et sont capturés;

e) Des mesures seront prises, si nécessaire et, chaque fois que ce sera possible, avec le consentement des parents ou des personnes qui en ont la garde à titre principal en vertu de la loi ou de la coutume, pour évacuer temporairement les enfants du secteur où des hostilités ont lieu vers un secteur plus sûr du pays, et pour les faire accompagner par des personnes responsables de leur sécurité et de leur bien-être.

378. Outre l'article précédent, le Hamas doit observer et respecter les garanties énoncées à l'article 6 du Protocole, qui se lisent comme suit :

2. Aucune condamnation ne sera prononcée ni aucune peine exécutée à l'encontre d'une personne reconnue coupable d'une infraction sans un jugement préalable rendu par un tribunal offrant les garanties essentielles d'indépendance et d'impartialité. En particulier :

a) La procédure disposera que le prévenu doit être informé sans délai des détails de l'infraction qui lui est imputée et assurera au prévenu avant et pendant son procès tous les droits et moyens nécessaires à sa défense;

b) Nul ne peut être condamné pour une infraction si ce n'est sur la base d'une responsabilité pénale individuelle;

c) Nul ne peut être condamné pour des actions ou omissions qui ne constituaient pas un acte délictueux d'après le droit national ou international au moment où elles ont été commises. De même, il ne peut être infligé aucune peine plus forte que celle qui était applicable au moment où l'infraction a été commise. Si postérieurement à cette infraction la loi prévoit l'application d'une peine plus légère, le délinquant doit en bénéficier;

d) Toute personne accusée d'une infraction est présumée innocente jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie;

e) Toute personne accusée d'une infraction a le droit d'être jugée en sa présence;

f) Nul ne peut être forcé de témoigner contre lui-même ou de s'avouer coupable.

3. Toute personne condamnée sera informée, au moment de sa condamnation, de ses droits de recours judiciaires et autres, ainsi que des délais dans lesquels ils doivent être exercés.

4. La peine de mort ne sera pas prononcée contre les personnes âgées de moins de 18 ans au moment de l'infraction et elle ne sera pas exécutée contre les femmes enceintes et les mères d'enfants en bas âge.

D. Violations des droits de l'homme commises par les services de sécurité palestiniens durant les arrestations et les détentions

379. La Commission, en s'efforçant de se faire une idée de la nature et du volume des violations alléguées dans le rapport Goldstone, a contacté toutes les organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme pour savoir si elles avaient remarqué, observé et attesté ces violations dans la bande de Gaza et en Cisjordanie, telles que le Centre palestinien des droits de l'homme, le Centre Al-Mizan et l'organisation al-Damir dans la bande de Gaza, ainsi que les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme œuvrant en Cisjordanie qui suivent et observent la situation relative aux droits de l'homme dans la bande de Gaza, telles que Al-Haqq, al-Damir, l'association indépendante pour les droits de l'homme Diwan al-Mazalim, le Centre Al-Qods pour l'assistance juridique, afin qu'elles fournissent à la Commission tout ce qu'elles ont recueilli et documenté, en plus des rapports, déclarations et interventions qui ont été publiés à ce sujet.

380. Tous les rapports et témoignages concordent avec les informations que la Commission a reçues de ces organisations concernant les violations commises par les responsables de l'application des lois au niveau de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza, lors d'arrestations, de détention et d'incarcérations. Ces rapports et informations ont en effet indiqué la commission par les services de sécurité dans la bande de Gaza d'un ensemble de violations lorsqu'ils suivaient les procédures d'arrestation, de détention et d'enquête, qui peuvent être résumées comme suit :

1. Ces incarcérations sont liées à la situation politique palestinienne, étant donné qu'elles visent dans la bande de Gaza les personnes qui appartiennent au Mouvement de libération nationale palestinien Fatah ou les personnes proches et les partisans de ce mouvement;
2. Non-respect par les responsables de l'exécution de la loi appartenant aux services de sécurité dans la bande de Gaza, dans la plupart des cas d'arrestation et d'incarcération, des règles juridiques en vigueur qui doivent être respectées lors d'une arrestation ou d'une incarcération;
3. Mauvais traitements et recours à la brutalité lors des incarcérations;
4. La personne arrêtée n'est pas déférée au parquet dans les délais fixés par la loi, dans le Code de procédure pénale palestinien;
5. Des civils arrêtés sont déférés devant des juges militaires;
6. Des personnes arrêtées sont soumises à la torture ou à d'autres peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants, comme moyens d'extorquer des aveux concernant ce dont elles sont accusées ou autre chose.

E. Les plaintes que la Commission a reçues concernant les violations commises durant la détention sont les suivantes

381. La Commission a reçu des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme palestiniennes, de groupes parlementaires, de familles de détenus, et de détenus ayant été libérés un ensemble de plaintes relatives aux violations des droits de l'homme commises par les responsables de l'application des lois et par les services de sécurité palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza lors de l'arrestation et de la détention, et elle a recueilli directement 11 plaintes personnelles d'individus se trouvant dans la bande de Gaza⁵⁹.

382. La Commission d'enquête s'est fait une idée claire en passant en revue et en étudiant le contenu de ces plaintes et des pièces jointes à celles-ci d'éléments qui corroborent la véracité des allégations relatives aux violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales commises par les responsables de l'application des lois dans la bande de Gaza lors des arrestations et détentions. Ont été recueillies également les déclarations des personnes que la Commission avait entendues dans la bande de Gaza au moyen d'une vidéoconférence⁶⁰ sur le fait que les services chargés de la détention et de l'incarcération dans la bande de Gaza avaient commis les violations suivantes :

383. Les forces de sécurité intérieure ne s'identifient pas et ils sont voilés lorsqu'ils procèdent à des descentes, des fouilles et des arrestations.

384. Ce comportement s'explique par les déclarations de la majorité des personnes qui ont comparu devant la Commission lors des auditions qu'elle a tenues pour entendre les plaignants, que ce soit lors de celles consacrées à la détention et à la torture ou à celles ayant trait aux opérations d'assassinat. Ainsi, un des témoins a déclaré : « J'ai été arrêté le 12 février 2009, ayant été enlevé devant ma maison par des hommes de la sécurité intérieure qui étaient masqués, armés de revolvers. Ils m'ont emmené dans une jeep Magnum de couleur verte, un véhicule militaire [...] »⁶¹

385. De même, un autre a déclaré : « le jour du cessez-le-feu après la guerre contre Gaza, six jeunes voilés ont attaqué un supermarché appartenant à mon frère et ont enlevé celui-ci et ont détruit le magasin. Un quart d'heure plus tard, ils sont arrivés à la maison où mon frère et moi habitons [...] »⁶²

386. Extrait d'un autre témoignage : « Une douzaine d'hommes voilés en civil se sont présentés à mon domicile, je n'y étais pas, mon père les a reçus, qui leur a dit que j'étais sorti. Il a envoyé mon frère, je suis arrivé au domicile, ils m'ont dit que

⁵⁹ Toutes ces plaintes ont été recueillies par la Commission et leur liste est jointe au présent rapport.

⁶⁰ La Commission a écouté les déclarations de 11 personnes faisant état de plaintes relatives à la détention.

⁶¹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-1/2010.

⁶² Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-2/2010.

c'est moi qu'ils voulaient, et lorsque mon père leur a demandé de s'identifier, ils ont montré des cartes d'identité de la sécurité intérieure [...] »⁶³

387. Extrait d'un autre témoignage : « Il était à peu près une heure du matin, on a frappé à la porte de façon anormale, je suis sorti et j'ai demandé qui frappait à la porte, on m'a répondu "c'est la police, ouvrez la porte", et lorsque j'ai ouvert la porte, quatre hommes voilés sont entrés, leurs yeux étaient visibles, ils étaient armés de kalachnikovs, l'un d'eux avait un revolver, je leur ai demandé ce qu'ils voulaient, ils m'ont répondu qu'ils voulaient fouiller la maison [...] »⁶⁴

388. Des personnes ont été détenues dans des lieux autres que ceux prévus par la loi, par exemple dans une mosquée, alors que d'autres ont été retenues et interrogées dans des hôpitaux, des maisons et d'autres endroits inconnus.

389. Un des témoins a déclaré : « Le 17 janvier 2009, des éléments de la sécurité intérieure sont venus à ma maison munis d'un mandat de perquisition de la sécurité intérieure [...] ils ont fouillé la maison [...] et après la perquisition, ils m'ont emmené avec eux. Ils ont dit à ma femme : Nous le ramènerons dans une demie heure. J'ai vu que la maison était entourée de plus de 20 personnes, certains en uniforme militaire, d'autre en civil, tous dissimulés sous des foulards noirs [...]. Un homme m'a emmené, me demandant si je savais avec qui j'étais, j'ai répondu "la sécurité intérieure". Ils m'ont emmené à un endroit appelé Ali Ibrahim Wadi. Avant mon arrivée, ils ont recouvert ma tête d'une cagoule et l'interrogatoire a commencé. Ils m'ont accusé d'être un agent de l'autorité de Ramallah, d'être un espion de l'organisation Al-Qassam et de transmettre des rapports à l'Autorité, en me frappant tous de tous les côtés »⁶⁵.

390. Extrait d'un autre témoignage : « Ils m'ont dit Hamada, nous avons besoin de toi pendant cinq minutes. Lorsque mon père a demandé leur identité, ils ont montré leurs cartes de la sécurité intérieure. Ils m'ont emmené à pied jusqu'au chemin du projet, et là, sur le chemin, ils ont relevé mon blouson sur ma tête et m'ont emmené jusqu'à une maison abandonnée, je ne sais pas à qui elle appartient. Ils m'ont dit tu as cinq minutes pour avouer les armes que tu as. Ils ont commencé à me frapper au visage et à me fouetter les jambes, ils ont continué ainsi pendant 30 à 45 minutes sans s'arrêter, puis ils m'ont conduit dehors et m'ont dit que j'étais assigné à résidence pendant trois mois »⁶⁶.

391. Tous les services de sécurité, qu'ils soient ou non légalement autorisés à procéder à des arrestations, n'ont pas respecté le Code de procédure pénale palestinien, qui prévoit qu'aucun mandat d'amener ne peut être exécuté sans ordonnance d'un tribunal. Or, selon les informations obtenues par la Commission, aucune ordonnance n'avait été délivrée par les services juridiques compétents, ce dans tous les cas visés lors des auditions de la Commission, les personnes ont été arrêtées et conduites au siège de la sécurité par la force, ou bien convoquées par

⁶³ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-3/2010.

⁶⁴ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-6/2010.

⁶⁵ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-4/2010.

⁶⁶ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-3/2010.

téléphone à un entretien avec le service de sécurité, où elles ont été arrêtées et placées en détention.

392. Les services de sécurité dans la bande de Gaza n'ont pas présenté une ordonnance de tribunal lorsqu'elles sont entrées dans de nombreuses maisons et les ont fouillées, comme cela est exigé, ce qui constitue une violation flagrante de l'inviolabilité de ces domiciles.

393. Ces services ont contrevenu aux dispositions juridiques régissant la durée de la garde à vue. Comme nous l'avons mentionné plus haut, les lois palestiniennes pertinentes autorisent un service compétent à arrêter et retenir une personne pendant 24 heures. Après cette période, la personne arrêtée doit être immédiatement libérée ou transférée au parquet ou au tribunal compétent afin qu'il se prononce sur son statut.

394. Dans la majorité des cas d'arrestation que la Commission a corroborés, elle a trouvé que les services de sécurité ne respectaient pas ces délais ni les dispositions juridiques, nombre de personnes restant détenues plus longtemps que prévu par la loi et aucun des détenus n'étant déféré devant le parquet ou le tribunal compétent.

395. Violences, mauvais traitements, coups et comportements dégradants lors de la détention. Dans de nombreux cas, les services de sécurité de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza ont traité les prisonniers de façon dégradante, et ils ont eu recours à la force et à la violence. Comme il ressort des déclarations des personnes arrêtées ou de leur famille obtenues par la Commission concernant les arrestations, les services de sécurité palestiniens, de manière générale, ne respectent pas les règles et les normes relatives aux arrestations, en particulier celles concernant la façon appropriée de traiter les personnes arrêtées en s'abstenant de les battre, de les humilier ou de recourir à la violence.

396. Un des témoins a déclaré : « Le 18 janvier 2009, à 21 heures, deux policiers se sont présentés à mon domicile, et ont dit que le chef de la police voulait me voir. Je suis parti avec eux pour aller au commissariat de police, mais j'ai vu qu'ils me conduisaient en fait au siège du Croissant-Rouge à Khan Younis. Avant d'y arriver, ils m'ont dit que le commissariat avait déménagé. Ils m'ont ensuite conduit dans un autre lieu, les nouveaux logements du quartier Al-Amal. Dix minutes plus tard, un groupe d'hommes dont le visage était dissimulé sous un foulard m'ont emmené à une trentaine de mètres des logements. Des hommes ainsi masqués, une quinzaine, se sont mis à me matraquer, sans me parler ni m'accuser de quoi que ce soit. Après m'avoir ainsi battu pendant une demi-heure, ils ont fait venir une ambulance du Croissant-Rouge, qui m'a conduit ainsi qu'une autre personne qui avait été battue, à l'hôpital Nasser. »⁶⁷

397. Extrait d'un autre témoignage : « [...] après la guerre et l'attaque israélienne de janvier 2009, ma maison à Izbet Abd Rabbo, à Jabaliya-Est, a été détruite par les Israéliens. Ils se sont installés dans une partie de la maison. J'étais dans la maison avec ma femme, mon fils handicapé âgé de 25 ans et mes autres enfants. À la fin de la guerre, lorsque la Croix-Rouge m'a laissé sortir, j'ai quitté la maison et suis resté avec mes beaux-parents à Cheikh Radouane. Comme je n'avais pas pu prendre des vêtements pour moi et ma famille, j'en ai emprunté à des volontaires dans le quartier de Cheikh Radouane. Ces vêtements étaient élimés, ce qui me donnait une allure

⁶⁷ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-7/2010.

suspecte, différente des locaux. Quatre individus en civil qui ont refusé de s'identifier m'ont abordé. Ils étaient munis de téléphones portables et accompagnés d'un taxi de la marque Skoda. Ils m'ont bandé les yeux et m'ont conduit dans un endroit inconnu, où ils m'ont interrogé pendant cinq jours. Pendant ce temps, ils m'ont accusé de plusieurs choses, notamment de collaborer avec Ramallah et Israël, au motif que mon téléphone portable comprenait des numéros à Umm al-Fahem, Abu Dhabi et Ramallah. J'ai rejeté toutes les accusations durant l'interrogatoire. Un seul type d'aliment m'était apporté; je demeurais les mains attachées et les yeux bandés, ce qui est de la torture. De plus, mes pieds étaient attachés toute la journée sauf durant les repas, et je pouvais aller aux toilettes une fois par jour. La pire des tortures était qu'aucun des membres de ma famille ne savait où j'étais. Toutefois, je n'ai pas été injurié ni frappé, torturé ou traité d'une autre manière humiliante. Le plus surprenant a été d'être libéré après cinq jours et de les entendre s'excuser [...] »⁶⁸

398. La torture entraînant la mort. Il ressort de l'ensemble des déclarations que la Commission a entendues que nombre de personnes ont été soumises à des violences, des tortures ou des comportements humiliants en vue de faire pression sur elles afin d'obtenir des informations ou des aveux concernant leurs actes ou propos ou ceux de tiers.

399. Ces déclarations montrent clairement que les services de sécurité dans la bande de Gaza ont eu recours à des méthodes extrêmement brutales pour obtenir des détenus des informations et des aveux, ce qui a provoqué la mort de nombreux détenus, dont Jamil Nasr. La mère de la victime, Nuha Issa Assaf, du quartier al-Daraj, à Gaza, a fait la déclaration suivante : « Mon fils avait moins de 20 ans. Il travaillait dans les tunnels. Ils l'ont emprisonné le 9 mars 2009. Nous avons un voisin qui s'appelle Muhammad Isam Abu Thurayya; ceux qui l'ont emprisonné étaient les autorités judiciaires enquêtant sur le vol de 130 000 shekels à Muhammad. Ils ont accusé d'autres personnes en sus de mon fils, et ont emmené celui-ci au "café Abou Moussa", un centre de torture dans le quartier al-Daraj. Les enquêteurs l'ont torturé et l'ont fait avouer, en utilisant toutes sortes de tortures. Il a passé quatre jours entre leurs mains. Durant tout ce temps, il a été torturé et privé de manger et de boire. Le 12 mars 2009, il a été transféré au commissariat de police d'Al-Touffah. Mon fils était en très mauvais état. Nous sommes allés lui rendre visite au commissariat de police le vendredi. Ils nous ont laissés le voir pendant 10 minutes. Chaque fois que je le regardais, il cachait son visage d'une main. Il nous a dit qu'il vomissait ce qu'il mangeait et qu'il y avait du sang dans son urine. Nous avons demandé au policier qui était avec lui de le faire conduire à l'hôpital. Mon mari a menacé de demander l'aide de la Croix-Rouge, alors il a appelé un dénommé Abou Ahmad et ils l'ont transporté sous escorte à l'hôpital Al-Shifa à Gaza, où il a été admis dans le service des soins intensifs. Il perdait connaissance; l'hôpital a effectué une dialyse pour cause d'insuffisance rénale. Il est resté ainsi pendant 12 jours, puis il est mort malgré les efforts faits pour le ressusciter. C'est arrivé le lundi à 2 heures du matin. Ils ont pratiqué une autopsie sur ordre du parquet, sans notre consentement. Nous avons obtenu un rapport médical, que je fournirai à la Commission, qui déclare que la cause du décès est la torture [...] »

⁶⁸ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote t-ayn-ghayn-9/2010.

F. Opinion de la Commission concernant les procédures d'arrestation et de détention dans la bande de Gaza

400. Il ressort des cas de détention dans la bande de Gaza que la Commission a corroborés que souvent les responsables de l'application des lois ne respectent pas ou violent les règles et garanties applicables lors de détentions ou d'emprisonnement. Sur la base des auditions qu'elle a tenues et des rapports et informations fournis par les organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme, les points les plus importants sont les suivants :

401. Sur la base des auditions que la Commission a tenues et des rapports et des documents qu'elle a obtenus, elle considère que les services de sécurité de l'autorité de fait de la bande de Gaza arrêtaient des sympathisants du Fatah et d'autres personnes en réaction au désaccord politique entre le Fatah et le Hamas. La majorité de ces arrestations sont motivées par des considérations d'ordre politique et sont donc arbitraires et illégales.

402. Il ressort clairement de l'ensemble des plaintes et des auditions que la Commission a tenues que la majorité des plaintes faisant état de mauvais traitements et de violence impliquaient le service de sécurité intérieure dans la bande de Gaza.

403. Il est clair que le Parquet de la bande de Gaza fait preuve de négligence en assumant le rôle que lui confie la loi, étant donné qu'il incombe aux magistrats du Parquet, en vertu de l'article 126 du Code de procédure pénale palestinien, d'inspecter les centres de redressement et de réinsertion (les prisons) et les lieux de garde à vue placés sous sa juridiction pour s'assurer qu'il ne s'y trouve aucun prisonnier détenu illégalement. Ils doivent aussi vérifier les dossiers de ces centres et les mandats d'amener et d'arrêt, les photocopier et contacter tous détenus et prisonniers et écouter toutes les plaintes qui pourraient leur être présentées. De plus, les directeurs et gardes doivent leur fournir toute assistance nécessaire pour obtenir les informations qu'ils souhaitent.

404. En conséquence, il incombait au Parquet de l'autorité de fait de la bande de Gaza non seulement d'intervenir pour empêcher toute arrestation ou détention hors du cadre des centres de redressement et de réinsertion, mais aussi de mettre en mouvement l'action publique à l'encontre de toute personne qui ne respecte pas ces conditions en tant qu'auteur d'une infraction. Il a été établi également que le Parquet n'est pas intervenu comme il aurait dû le faire pour empêcher les membres du service de sécurité et d'autres groupes armés d'usurper les prérogatives des services qui, en vertu de la loi, ont le statut de police judiciaire. Ces pratiques sont courantes.

405. Il est manifeste que les atteintes à la dignité de la personne, y compris les mauvais traitements durant la détention, les coups, les injures, l'humiliation et la soumission des personnes arrêtées à la torture ou à des pressions physiques ou psychologiques en vue d'obtenir des informations ou des aveux n'étaient pas des cas isolés imputables à un comportement individuel dans les centres de détention et d'interrogation de la sécurité intérieure. Ces pratiques se retrouvent dans tous les cas d'arrestation et de détention qui ont été étayés ou pour lesquels la Commission a entendu des témoignages, ce qui indique qu'elles ne se sont pas limitées à une personne ou à un lieu particulier, mais qu'il s'agit bien d'une pratique généralisée pour gérer les détenus, conduire les interrogatoires et obtenir des aveux. Le service de sécurité intérieure a ainsi violé les dispositions de l'article 13 de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne, qui affirme que personne ne sera soumis à des contraintes ou à la torture et que les accusés et les autres personnes privées de leur liberté seront convenablement traités.

406. Les services chargés de l'application des lois dans la bande de Gaza ont recouru à de nombreuses formes et méthodes de torture, dont les suivantes :

- Coups donnés avec la main, les pieds et des matraques;
- Détenu roué de coups par plusieurs personnes à la fois;
- Flagellation au moyen d'un tuyau d'arrosage;
- Le shabah consiste à attacher les mains du prisonnier derrière son dos et de les relever en les attachant à une porte, une fenêtre ou tout autre objet, de sorte que la personne soumise à cette forme de torture reste pratiquement suspendue en l'air pendant une période variable pouvant durer plusieurs jours, avec quelques courts moments de répit;
- Menaces et intimidation;
- Détention dans de très petites cellules mesurant d'environ 1 mètre de large et 2 ou 3 mètres de long;
- Coups de bâton sur la plante des pieds du détenu, dont les pieds sont attachés et soulevés, battus à l'aide d'un bâton ou d'une matraque pendant des périodes de durée variable, puis que l'on oblige à marcher pour faire disparaître les caillots de sang dus aux coups.

407. Le manque de supervision effective des prisons a contribué à la généralisation de la torture. Il est apparu à la Commission d'enquête que les parties à qui incombait cette supervision en vertu de la loi ne s'acquittaient pas de leur obligation.

408. La Commission considère que le fait que l'on ne demande pas sérieusement aux agents auteurs d'un crime de torture ou aux membres des services de sécurité qui contreviennent aux règles et aux normes applicables à la détention et aux dispositions pertinentes en vigueur du Code pénal de rendre des comptes a encouragé à généraliser ces infractions.

409. Pour cette raison, la Commission considère que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza doit s'acquitter de ses responsabilités en tenant responsables et en poursuivant tous ceux qui enfreignent la loi s'agissant d'arrestations arbitraires et illégales et du crime de torture et de toutes autres formes de mauvais traitements et d'atteinte à la dignité de la personne.

X. Violations du droit à la vie dans la bande de Gaza

410. La Loi fondamentale palestinienne révisée de 2003 n'accorde pas au droit à la vie la même attention qu'à tous les autres droits et libertés fondamentales énoncés et consacrés dans son chapitre II, précisément consacré aux droits et aux libertés fondamentales, ce qui constitue à notre avis une lacune est l'un des défauts dont pâtit l'ensemble de cette loi, parce que le droit à la vie est une source essentielle de tous les autres droits de l'homme et que sa négation revient donc à priver de réalité et de valeur tous les autres droits.

411. Le droit à la vie et à la sécurité de la personne est un droit essentiel à tout être humain, auquel il ne peut être porté atteinte en aucune circonstance, y compris dans les situations exceptionnelles et extraordinaires dans lesquelles une société où un pays peuvent se trouver.

412. Le droit à la vie est consacré dans les instruments constitutifs du droit international, notamment la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, dont l'article 3 affirme que « Tout individu a droit à la vie, à la liberté et à la sûreté de sa personne. » Le droit de tout individu à la vie est également réaffirmé dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, dont l'article 6 stipule que « le droit à la vie est inhérent à la personne humaine. Ce droit doit être protégé par la loi. Nul ne peut être arbitrairement privé de la vie [...] ».

413. Le Comité des droits de l'homme a expliqué, dans l'Observation générale n° 16 qu'il a adoptée à sa 378^e séance, tenue le 27 juillet 1982, que le droit à la vie visé au paragraphe 1 de l'article 6 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques est le premier des droits, celui auquel il ne peut être porté atteinte même en situation d'état d'urgence et qui constitue le socle sur lequel reposent tous les autres droits de l'homme.

414. Pour se faire une idée de la nature, de l'ampleur et de la teneur des violations alléguées dans le rapport Goldstone en ce qui concerne les atteintes à la vie des personnes, la Commission a pris contact avec toutes les organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme qui suivent, recensent et vérifient ces violations dans la bande de Gaza et en Cisjordanie, notamment le Centre palestinien des droits de l'homme, le Centre « Mizan » et l'organisation « Conscience », dans la bande de Gaza, et les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme de Cisjordanie qui suivent la situation des droits de l'homme dans la bande de Gaza, notamment l'organisation « Al-Haq », l'organisation « Conscience » et l'Organisation indépendante de défense des droits de l'homme (Cabinet des doléances), afin que toutes ces organisations lui fournissent les informations qu'elles ont pu réunir et vérifier, ainsi que les rapports, déclarations et interventions qu'elles ont pu publier à ce sujet.

415. Tous les rapports, témoignages et déclarations que la Commission a reçus de ces institutions s'accordent sur un point, à savoir que des dizaines d'assassinats ont été commis dans la bande de Gaza. Ainsi, l'Organisation indépendante de défense des droits de l'homme, dans son rapport de 2009, fait état de 22 exécutions extrajudiciaires, auxquelles il faut ajouter 23 meurtres commis dans des circonstances plus troubles⁶⁹. L'organisation Al-Haq fait quant à elle état de 33 meurtres commis au cours des quatre premiers mois de 2009⁷⁰.

416. Il ressort des résultats du travail de suivi et de vérification effectué par ces organisations que les atteintes au droit à la vie dans la bande de Gaza prennent diverses formes, dont les suivantes :

- Les assassinats purs et simples et les exécutions extrajudiciaires commis par des entités chargées de l'application des lois ou par des groupes armés relevant de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza et dont sont victimes des personnes accusées de faits précis ou condamnées par des tribunaux militaires ou civils;

⁶⁹ Rapport annuel de l'Organisation indépendante de défense des droits de l'homme pour 2009, p. 68 et suivantes.

⁷⁰ Rapport spécial contenant les noms des victimes de meurtre présenté à la Commission d'enquête par l'organisation Al-Haq.

- La liquidation physique de personnes arrêtées puis interrogées par les services de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza.

A. Plaintes recueillies par la Commission et faisant état de violations du droit à la vie 417. La Commission a reçu des organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme, des groupes parlementaires et des proches de victimes un ensemble de plaintes faisant état de violations du droit à la vie dans la bande de Gaza qui auraient été commises par les services de sécurité relevant de l'autorité de fait ou par des groupes appartenant au Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas dans la bande de Gaza.

418. Ayant étudié la teneur de ces plaintes et entendu les proches des victimes au cours des auditions qu'elle a organisées⁷¹, la Commission a constaté l'existence d'éléments corroborant la véracité des allégations relatives à la violation du droit à la vie par les services de sécurité relevant de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza. Les déclarations des habitants de la bande de Gaza que la Commission a pu entendre par vidéoconférence⁷² confirment que les services de sécurité de la bande de Gaza et des membres des Brigades Izzdine Al-Qassam et d'autres groupes armés relevant de l'autorité de fait à Gaza ont commis des violations du droit à la vie.

B. Avis de la Commission sur les violations du droit à la vie

419. Ayant analysé les résultats des auditions qu'elle a organisées pour entendre les proches des victimes d'exécutions extrajudiciaires, la Commission estime que les entités chargées de l'application des lois dans la bande de Gaza ont procédé à des exécutions extrajudiciaires, à grande échelle, au cours de l'agression israélienne contre Gaza.

420. Par exécution extrajudiciaire, on entend « l'exécution, par des forces armées, des agents officiels ou des groupes soutenus par des agences gouvernementales, d'opposants politiques ou de personnes soupçonnées d'avoir commis des infractions ». Ces exécutions ne sont précédées d'aucune procédure judiciaire. La notion d'exécution extrajudiciaire comprend aussi les actes d'extermination, par des exécutions à motifs politiques ou des meurtres à motifs religieux ou idéologiques.

421. Il ressort clairement de l'examen des cas de meurtre dont ont été victimes de nombreuses personnes dans la bande de Gaza que la notion d'exécution extrajudiciaire s'applique à ces meurtres.

1. Les meurtres de personnes détenues par les services de sécurité relevant de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza

422. La réalité de ces faits est confirmée par de nombreux témoignages recueillis par la Commission. Ainsi, le père d'une victime a déclaré : « [...] Akram a été tué pendant l'agression israélienne sur Gaza [...] On nous a demandé de nous rendre à l'hôpital Al-Shafa de Gaza, où j'ai reconnu le corps d'Akram à la morgue. Il avait reçu six balles à la poitrine et à la tête. Je n'ai pas vu qui lui avait tiré dessus mais il était détenu dans la prison du Sérail à Gaza. Il avait été condamné à mort avant la prise de pouvoir du Hamas [...] »⁷³

⁷¹ La Commission a organisé 17 auditions à l'intention de proches de victimes de meurtre.

⁷² La Commission a entendu les témoignages de 11 personnes dont les plaintes avaient trait à des meurtres.

423. Le père d'une autre victime a déclaré : « [...] le 26 mars 2003, mon fils a été arrêté par les autorités, au motif qu'il aurait commis des meurtres. Il a été effectivement jugé et condamné à mort la même année, pour trois meurtres [...] il a été jugé par le tribunal civil de première instance de Gaza et était détenu à la prison du Sérail en attendant son exécution. Ce jugement a été cassé par la cour d'appel, qui n'avait pas encore publié son jugement. Lors de l'agression sur Gaza, le 28 décembre 2008, le bâtiment du Sérail a été bombardé par les Israéliens et à l'issue de ce bombardement, mon fils est sorti avec d'autres prisonniers et il est rentré à la maison. Quelques jours après, il s'est rendu dans le secteur de Rafah, où il a été arrêté par les forces de sécurité intérieure le 20 janvier 2009 puis exécuté le lendemain, en même temps que le dénommé Saïd Zaghl. Sa dépouille mortelle a été transportée à l'hôpital Al-Shafa [...] Il a été tué d'une seule balle tirée derrière l'oreille et le médecin légiste qui a procédé à l'autopsie a indiqué que la balle qui l'avait tué s'était logée dans son cerveau. Ni le médecin légiste ni le ministère public n'ont accepté de nous délivrer un certificat précisant les causes du décès [...] »⁷⁴

2. Les meurtres de personnes accusées par les autorités de fait dans la bande de Gaza

424. De nombreux témoignages recueillis par la Commission, tels ceux reproduits ci-dessous, corroborent la réalité des meurtres de personnes jugées suspectes par l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza.

425. La veuve d'une victime a déclaré : « [...] Mon mari a été arrêté un an et demi environ avant la guerre, sous l'accusation d'espionnage au profit d'Israël. Il a avoué sous la torture et est resté en prison. Lorsque la guerre contre Gaza a éclaté, il était toujours dans la prison du Sérail. Quand cette prison a été bombardée par les Israéliens, il a été blessé à l'épaule et à la jambe par l'effondrement d'un mur, ce qui a provoqué une hémorragie. Il a été transporté à l'hôpital et, pendant qu'il recevait les premiers secours, trois individus en tenue militaire ont tiré sur lui en visant la tête. L'hôpital était plein de monde et cela s'est passé au vu des policiers qui se trouvaient là. Nous étions à l'accueil de l'hôpital et nous avons entendu les coups de feu. Je me suis dirigée vers les lieux et je l'ai trouvé allongé sur le lit avec une balle en plein front et une autre sous le nez [...] Les auteurs des coups de feu étaient à visage découvert, mais je ne sais pas à quelle faction ils appartenaient [...] »⁷⁵

426. La veuve d'une autre victime a fait le récit suivant : « [...] Un inconnu a téléphoné à mon beau-frère pour lui dire d'aller voir où le corps de son frère avait été jeté. Nous sommes sortis à sa recherche et on nous a dit qu'il y avait un corps à l'hôpital Al-Shafa. À la morgue de l'hôpital, nous avons trouvé le corps de mon mari qui portait les traces de trois balles, à la tête, à la poitrine et au ventre [...] »

⁷³ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/21.

⁷⁴ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/18.

⁷⁵ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/20.

Avant cela, le 29 janvier 2009, j'avais parlé à mon mari au téléphone et il m'avait dit qu'il était en lieu sûr et entre de bonnes mains. Mon mari avait été accusé d'avoir commis un crime mais le tribunal l'avait innocenté en 2008. Le 22 octobre 2008, on l'avait remis en prison. M'étant adressée au Bureau juridique du Sérail, ils m'ont dit qu'ils soupçonnaient mon mari d'être un agent d'Israël. Quatre mois après, j'ai pu rendre visite à mon mari et ils m'ont dit qu'il était un agent d'Israël [...] La justice militaire m'a convoquée et interrogée, avant d'ajouter que mon mari avait des ennemis qui l'avaient tué. Je suis personnellement convaincue que c'est la sécurité intérieure qui l'a tué [...] »⁷⁶

427. L'auteur d'un autre témoignage recueilli par la Commission a déclaré : « [...] Il devait être présenté au tribunal et n'avait encore fait l'objet d'aucune décision de justice. Lorsque le Hamas a pris le pouvoir à Gaza après le coup d'État, il a été innocenté et libéré. Il a été présenté à la télévision en tant que victime d'une injustice et est restée à la maison pendant huit mois. Puis une autre personne qui avait été arrêtée a impliqué mon fils, qui a été arrêté et remis en prison. Puis vint l'agression contre Gaza, au cours de laquelle la prison du Sérail a été bombardée par Israël. Mon fils est alors sorti avec d'autres et est rentré à la maison, avant d'aller à Khan Ypounes chez son grand-père. Arafat Aboureïch et un groupe d'hommes masqués l'ont sorti de chez son grand-père et ont commencé à le tabasser en pleine rue [...] Ils l'ont ensuite emmené en un lieu désert où ils l'ont tué, et ce au vu et au su de tout le monde [...] »⁷⁷

428. Un autre témoignage déroulait le récit suivant : « [...] Mon mari, âgé de 40 ans, a été arrêté le 25 juillet 2008 au motif qu'il aurait été membre du Fatah. Pendant sa détention, il a été torturé et il m'a décrit les différentes méthodes de torture qu'on lui faisait subir. Puis je suis restée trois mois sans nouvelles de lui. Pendant la guerre contre Gaza, des détenus ont été libérés, dont mon mari, qui était détenu à la prison du Sérail à Gaza sans avoir été jugé [...] Mon mari est accusé de complicité dans les explosions qui s'étaient produites à Gaza. Ils l'ont sorti du Sérail et l'ont tué dans le secteur dit du « Tunnel ». Il a été tué de deux balles, une de chaque côté de la tête. J'ai vu mon mari lorsque des personnes m'ont appelée de l'hôpital pour que je vienne prendre sa dépouille. Nous l'avons trouvée à la morgue et aujourd'hui encore je ne sais pas qui l'a tué et je n'ai rien entendu à ce sujet. Le jour où il avait été libéré de prison, des agents de la sécurité intérieure lui ont tiré dans les jambes et il est arrivé à la maison en perdant du sang. J'ai fait venir un médecin qui l'a soigné et a constaté que les os n'étaient pas touchés. Il a continué de se soigner à la maison pendant au moins 20 jours. Des hommes masqués venaient parfois la nuit et terrorisaient les habitants. Je le cachais pendant leur passage mais une fois, des hommes masqués, en civil et armés de pistolets, dont je ne sais ni qui ils étaient ni où ils sont repartis, ont emmené mon mari aux alentours de minuit [...] Ils lui ont tiré dessus à 4 heures du matin. Les hommes masqués étaient venus dans un véhicule militaire. Je suis convaincue que ceux qui ont tué mon mari font partie de la sécurité intérieure. Mon mari était un citoyen ordinaire dont le seul tort était d'appartenir au Fatah [...] »⁷⁸

⁷⁶ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/22.

⁷⁷ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/19.

⁷⁸ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/14.

429. Dans un autre témoignage, on peut lire : « Le jeudi 29 janvier 2009, à 1 heure du matin, alors que mon mari, mes enfants et moi-même dormions, on a frappé à la porte de notre domicile. Mon mari, paix à son âme, s'est levé et a ouvert la porte, se trouvant nez à nez avec un groupe de plus d'une quinzaine d'hommes masqués. Il a tenté de refermer la porte après leur avoir demandé qui ils étaient, ce à quoi ils avaient répondu qu'ils faisaient partie des services de sécurité [...] Il a ensuite cessé de résister et a ouvert la porte. Ils sont tous rentrés dans la maison [...] Puis ils ont emmené mon mari vers une destination inconnue. Au matin, je suis allée au poste de police où j'ai déposé plainte [...] Le 22 février 2009, vers midi, le neveu maternel de mon mari est venu me voir et m'a informée que quelqu'un avait vu mon mari à l'hôpital Kamal Adouan [...] Son corps portait les traces des tortures qu'il avait subies, de même que l'impact d'une balle qui avait pénétré son crâne [...] »⁷⁹

430. En outre, il ressort de l'examen par la Commission des listes de victimes pour le premier trimestre 2009⁸⁰ que 17 civils et autres personnes, jugés suspects ou détenus par les services de sécurité de la bande de Gaza, ont été tués.

3. Meurtre de personnes que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza considérait comme des adversaires politiques

431. Dans une déclaration recueillie par la Commission, il est dit ce qui suit : « [...] Le mardi 27 mars 2009, un groupe d'individus armés et masqués, venus à bord de trois Jeeps militaires, ont frappé à la porte de mon domicile. Mon époux est arrivé le premier derrière la porte et leur a demandé qui ils étaient. Ils lui ont répondu qu'ils voulaient voir Oussama. Je suis alors sortie et leur ai demandé qui ils étaient et ils m'ont répondu qu'ils étaient de la sécurité intérieure. Je leur ai demandé un mandat du Procureur pour pouvoir leur remettre mon fils. Ils ont refusé et m'ont répété qu'ils étaient de la sécurité intérieure en me montrant leurs cartes. Je leur ai répondu que mon fils ne sortirait pas de la maison même s'ils la détruisaient à coups de missiles, afin de me donner le temps de contacter mon cousin qui est un responsable du Hamas [...] Mon cousin est arrivé et m'a demandé ce qui se passait. Je lui ai répondu qu'il était responsable de cette organisation et que mon fils Oussama serait donc sous sa responsabilité. Il m'a répondu que rien n'était reproché à Oussama et celui-ci est donc sorti et est monté sur l'une des Jeeps. Nous avons appris le lendemain qu'il avait été emmené à la mosquée Bilal bin Rabah, dans le quartier des Oliviers, il était pieds et poings liés sous la garde d'une seule personne non armée. Il a demandé au garde de lui ôter ses liens pour qu'il puisse aller aux toilettes. Il a alors bousculé le garde et s'est enfui en courant. Les deux autres gardes l'ont poursuivi en le sommant de s'arrêter et ont tiré sur lui à trois reprises, la troisième balle l'atteignant à l'épaule. Il a continué de courir en perdant du sang jusqu'à un local commercial. Pendant ce temps la police est arrivée sur les lieux et l'a emmené à l'hôpital Al-Shafa. À l'hôpital, un médecin qui le connaissait est venu et l'a emmené dans la section des opérations chirurgicales. Les médecins ont rassuré les proches d'Oussama et ont emmené celui-ci dans la salle des soins ambulatoires. Les hommes de la sécurité intérieure sont alors arrivés par la section de radiologie en empruntant l'escalier réservé aux médecins et l'ont emmené sur son lit vers l'escalier et, selon le certificat médical qui est encore en ma possession, l'ont

⁷⁹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/13.

⁸⁰ La Commission a obtenu cette liste auprès de l'organisation Al-Haq.

étranglé, la strangulation étant la cause de décès indiquée dans le certificat [...] Ils l'ont ensuite abandonné là, non sans avoir au préalable demandé à un employé de l'hôpital de s'assurer qu'il était bien mort [...] La raison de l'interpellation de mon fils est qu'il était un membre important du Fatah et, en 2006, il avait été séquestré pendant trois jours [...] J'ajouterai que vers 11 heures du soir, une personne est venue me voir pour s'excuser de la mort d'Oussama et me demander de ne pas parler aux médias, en échange de quoi mon fils serait considéré comme un martyr. Il s'agit d'une personne bien connue, responsable du Département militaire dénommé Ahmed Atallah [...] J'ai refusé mais ils m'ont envoyé cinq hommes armés et masqués qui m'ont menacée de représailles si je parlais à la télévision [...] Après mon passage sur les télévisions satellitaires, le porte-parole du Hamas, Ihab al-Ghassin, a déclaré au nom de ce mouvement que la mort de mon fils était imputable à une vengeance familiale et qu'une enquête était en cours, propos qui ont été réitérés ensuite par Tahar al-Nounou [...] »⁸¹

C. Les exécutions extrajudiciaires dans la bande de Gaza au regard du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme

1. Les obligations en matière de lutte contre les exécutions extrajudiciaires

432. Le document du Conseil économique et social relatif aux garanties destinées à protéger les droits des personnes condamnées à la peine capitale, adopté en vertu de la résolution 1984/50 du Conseil en date du 25 mai 1984, réaffirme la nécessité pour les États de respecter et d'appliquer toute une série de garanties juridiques relatives à la peine capitale. Cette résolution stipule en effet que « [...] la peine capitale ne peut être exécutée que lorsque la culpabilité de la personne accusée d'un crime repose sur des preuves claires et convaincantes ne laissant place à aucune autre interprétation des faits.

4. La peine capitale ne peut être exécutée que lorsque la culpabilité de la personne accusée d'un crime repose sur des preuves claires et convaincantes ne laissant place à aucune autre interprétation des faits.

5. La peine capitale ne peut être exécutée qu'en vertu d'un jugement final rendu par un tribunal compétent après une procédure juridique offrant toutes les garanties possibles pour assurer un procès équitable, garanties égales au moins à celles énoncées à l'article 14 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, y compris le droit de toute personne suspectée ou accusée d'un crime passible de la peine de mort de bénéficier d'une assistance judiciaire appropriée à tous les stades de la procédure.

6. Toute personne condamnée à mort a le droit de faire appel à une juridiction supérieure, et des mesures devraient être prises pour que ces appels soient obligatoires.

7. Toute personne condamnée à mort a le droit de se pourvoir en grâce ou de présenter une pétition en commutation de peine; la grâce ou la commutation de peine peut être accordée dans tous les cas de condamnation à mort.

⁸¹ Cette déclaration et la documentation y relative sont conservées par la Commission sous la cote M-G 2010/23.

8. La peine capitale ne sera pas exécutée pendant une procédure d'appel ou toute autre procédure de recours ou autre pourvoi en vue d'obtenir une grâce ou une commutation de peine.

9. Lorsque la peine capitale est appliquée, elle est exécutée de manière à causer le minimum de souffrances possibles [...].

433. Comme on peut le voir, ces principes et dispositions énoncent toute une série de garanties qui doivent être prévues et assurées au bénéfice de l'accusé afin que celui-ci puisse se défendre et faire face aux violations et à l'arbitraire dont ses droits peuvent souffrir.

434. En se référant aux sources et aux dispositions du droit international général, on peut dire que ces sources et dispositions interdisent systématiquement et définitivement aux autorités, que celles-ci soient civiles et régissent des territoires ou États indépendants ou qu'elles soient militaires et régissent des territoires occupés, de procéder à des liquidations physiques, des meurtres délibérés et des exécutions arbitraires et extrajudiciaires, quels que soient les prétextes ou les causes de ces pratiques, c'est-à-dire qu'elles aient pour objet de sanctionner des actes ou des pratiques déterminés ou que leur objet relève des représailles, de la vengeance ou d'une volonté de dissuader et terroriser la population.

435. Par ailleurs, les Principes relatifs à la prévention efficace des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires et sommaires et aux moyens d'enquêter efficacement sur ces exécutions, que le Conseil économique et social a adoptés par sa résolution du 24 mai 1989, stipulent que : « [...] 1. Les exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires et sommaires seront interdites par la législation nationale et les gouvernements feront en sorte que de telles exécutions soient considérées comme des délits punissables en vertu de leur droit pénal et frappées de peines appropriées tenant compte de la gravité du délit. Des circonstances exceptionnelles, notamment l'état de guerre ou la menace de guerre, l'instabilité politique à l'intérieur du pays ou toute autre situation d'urgence publique, ne pourront être invoquées comme justification de ces exécutions [...] »

436. L'article 2 des Principes précise que, afin « [...] d'empêcher les exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires et sommaires, les pouvoirs publics exerceront un contrôle rigoureux, notamment en veillant strictement au respect de la voie hiérarchique, sur tous les fonctionnaires responsables de l'arrestation, de la détention provisoire et de l'emprisonnement, ainsi que sur tous les fonctionnaires autorisés par la loi à employer la force et à utiliser les armes à feu [...] ».

437. Les Principes énoncent également toute une série d'autres principes, dont les suivants :

- Les pouvoirs publics veilleront à ce que les personnes privées de liberté soient détenues dans des lieux de détention reconnus officiellement comme tels et à ce que des renseignements précis sur leur arrestation et le lieu où elles se trouvent, y compris sur leur transfert, soient immédiatement communiqués à leur famille et à leur avocat ou à d'autres personnes de confiance;
- Des inspecteurs qualifiés, y compris du personnel médical ou une autorité indépendante équivalente, procéderont régulièrement à des inspections sur les lieux de détention et seront habilités à procéder à des inspections inopinées, de leur propre initiative, avec toutes garanties d'indépendance dans l'exercice de cette fonction. Ces inspecteurs auront accès sans aucune restriction à toutes les personnes détenues ainsi qu'à toutes les pièces de leur dossier;

- Les gouvernements s'appliqueront à empêcher les exécutions extralégales, arbitraires et sommaires, en prenant diverses mesures telles que l'intercession diplomatique, l'amélioration des conditions d'accès des plaignants aux organes intergouvernementaux et judiciaires et l'accusation publique. Il sera fait appel aux mécanismes intergouvernementaux pour enquêter sur les informations relatives à de telles exécutions et prendre des mesures efficaces contre de telles pratiques. Les gouvernements, y compris ceux des pays où l'on suspecte qu'il est procédé à des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires et sommaires, apporteront un concours total aux enquêtes internationales;
- Une enquête approfondie et impartiale sera promptement ouverte dans tous les cas où l'on soupçonnera des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires et sommaires, y compris ceux où des plaintes déposées par la famille ou des informations dignes de foi donneront à penser qu'il s'agit d'un décès non naturel dans les circonstances données. Il existera à cette fin des procédures et des services officiels d'enquête chargés d'établir les faits. Toute enquête devra comporter une autopsie adéquate, la collecte et l'analyse de toutes les preuves physiques ou écrites et l'audition des témoins. L'enquête distinguera entre les morts naturelles, les morts accidentelles, les suicides et les homicides.
- L'autorité chargée de l'enquête aura tout pouvoir pour obtenir tous les renseignements nécessaires pour l'enquête et disposera de toutes les ressources budgétaires et techniques dont elle aura besoin pour mener sa tâche à bien. Elle aura aussi le pouvoir d'obliger les fonctionnaires dont on suppose qu'ils sont impliqués dans l'une quelconque des exécutions mentionnées à comparaître et à témoigner. La même règle s'appliquera en ce qui concerne les témoins. À cette fin, elle sera habilitée à citer les témoins – y compris les fonctionnaires en cause – à comparaître et à exiger que des preuves soient fournies;
- L'enquête est effectuée par une commission d'enquête indépendante ou par un organe similaire. Les membres de cette commission seront choisis pour leur impartialité, leur compétence et leur indépendance personnelle. Ils seront, en particulier, indépendants à l'égard de toute institution ou personne qui peut faire l'objet de l'enquête. La commission aura tout pouvoir pour obtenir tout renseignement nécessaire à l'enquête et elle mènera l'enquête en application des Principes;
- Les plaignants, les témoins, les personnes chargées de l'enquête et leurs familles jouiront d'une protection contre les violences, les menaces de violence ou toute autre forme d'intimidation. Les personnes pouvant être impliquées dans des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires ou sommaires seront écartées de toute fonction leur permettant d'exercer une autorité, directe ou indirecte, sur les plaignants, les témoins et leurs familles, ainsi que sur les personnes chargées de l'enquête;
- Les pouvoirs publics veilleront à ce que les personnes dont l'enquête aura révélé qu'elles ont participé à des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires ou sommaires sur tout territoire tombant sous leur juridiction soient traduites en justice. Les pouvoirs publics pourront soit traduire ces personnes en justice, soit favoriser leur extradition vers d'autres pays désireux d'exercer leur juridiction. Ce principe s'appliquera quels que soient et où que soient les auteurs du crime ou les victimes, quelle que soit leur nationalité et quel que soit le lieu où le crime a été commis;

- L'ordre donné par un supérieur hiérarchique ou une autorité publique ne peut pas être invoqué pour justifier des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires ou sommaires. Les supérieurs hiérarchiques, les fonctionnaires ou autres agents de l'État pourront répondre des actes commis par des agents de l'État placés sous leur autorité s'ils avaient raisonnablement la possibilité de prévenir de tels actes. En aucun cas, y compris en état de guerre, état de siège ou autre état d'urgence, une immunité générale ne pourra exempter de poursuites toute personne présumée impliquée dans des exécutions extrajudiciaires, arbitraires ou sommaires.
- Les familles et personnes à charge des victimes d'exécutions extrajudiciaires, sommaires ou arbitraires ont droit à une indemnisation juste et suffisante, dans un délai raisonnable.

438. La Commission fonde ses constats sur les faits dont elle a eu connaissance à propos des exécutions extrajudiciaires, les résultats des auditions qu'elle a organisées et les principes et critères internationaux relatifs aux garanties de protection des personnes contre de telles pratiques.

2. Carence des autorités de fait dans la bande de Gaza pour ce qui est d'engager des poursuites contre les auteurs d'exécutions extrajudiciaires

439. La tolérance de ces autorités à l'égard de tels actes trouve sa confirmation dans la déclaration suivante recueillie par la Commission auprès d'une plaignante : « [...] Le 14 janvier 2009, pendant la guerre [...] J'ai ouvert la porte et je me suis trouvée face à des individus masqués dont un est entré dans la maison [...] Ils m'ont dit qu'ils cherchaient Zaher. Ma belle-sœur est allée chercher mon mari et elle est redescendue avec lui [...] Ils sont sortis avec mon mari dans la rue et quelques minutes après je suis sortie moi aussi et j'ai vu les individus en question qui s'éloignaient en courant avec mon mari. Je les ai poursuivis en criant [...] Mais ils sont entrés dans le secteur de Biyarat. Je suis retournée chez moi et j'ai immédiatement déposé plainte auprès de la police [...] Le lendemain, nous avons appris qu'on l'avait retrouvé mort, les mains et le cou ligotés, à l'hôpital Kamal Adouane, où nous sommes allés en famille le chercher [...] J'accuse le Hamas d'avoir tué mon mari [...] Deux jours après ces faits, le Hamas a publié une déclaration selon laquelle la mort de mon mari serait due à la guerre et il serait considéré comme un martyr. Nous avons reçu sur notre téléphone portable des menaces nous enjoignant de ne pas parler de cette affaire, mais moi je sais qui a tué mon mari. Ce sont les gens du Hamas. Le Hamas les a mis en prison pendant deux semaines, après nous avoir fait promettre de ne pas les poursuivre [...] »

440. L'absence de poursuites engagées contre les auteurs de telles violations dans la bande de Gaza et le refus de l'autorité de fait d'assumer sa responsabilité de protection des personnes contre de telles violations ont fait que les exécutions extrajudiciaires se sont multipliées et répandues, leurs auteurs étant convaincus de l'impunité que leur confère la protection des autorités.

441. La Commission estime qu'il incombe à l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza d'appliquer une politique de refus de toute impunité ou immunité juridictionnelle pour tout individu, chef ou responsable ayant commis des crimes et autres violations des droits et des libertés.

442. Le fait que le Mouvement de la résistance islamique a pris le pouvoir par la force dans la bande de Gaza ne dégage pas ses membres, ni ceux des organisations ou groupements armés qui en dépendent, de l'obligation qui leur incombe de respecter les droits et libertés des individus, en particulier le respect du droit à la vie et l'inadmissibilité de toute peine ne résultant pas d'un jugement équitable, ainsi que la nécessité d'éviter toute atteinte à la dignité des personnes et tout acte de torture et autres peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants.

XI. Conclusions

443. Ayant passé en revue la situation des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales dans les territoires palestiniens, ayant entendu les déclarations des organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme, qui ont vérifié la réalité des violations de ces droits et libertés et fait le bilan des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, et ayant procédé aux enquêtes voulues auprès des parties liées aux violations alléguées par la Mission d'établissement des faits des Nations Unies, la Commission est parvenue aux conclusions suivantes :

444. La majorité des détentions dans les territoires palestiniens – Cisjordanie et bande de Gaza – sont liées à la situation politique palestinienne. La Commission constate que les arrestations arbitraires sont le résultat de la division politique interpalestinienne et de l'existence de deux autorités distinctes, l'une en Cisjordanie et l'autre à Gaza. Ainsi, la majorité des arrestations qui ont eu lieu en Cisjordanie visaient des personnes liées au Mouvement de la résistance islamique Hamas ou proches ou soutiens de ce mouvement et autres personnes relevant d'entités ou de forces politiques alliées ou favorables au Hamas. Dans la bande de Gaza, en revanche, les arrestations visaient des membres du Mouvement de libération nationale palestinien Fatah, des proches et des partisans de ce mouvement et autres personnes relevant d'entités de forces politiques alliées ou favorables au Fatah.

445. Dans la plupart des cas d'arrestation et de détention, les responsables de l'application des lois – services de sécurité – en Cisjordanie et les services de sécurité rattachés à l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza font fi des règles de procédure juridiques qui doivent être respectées en matière d'arrestation et de détention, carence à laquelle s'ajoutent les mauvais traitements et l'usage de la force au moment de l'arrestation.

446. Les responsables de l'application des lois – services de sécurité – en Cisjordanie et les services de sécurité rattachés à l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza ne respectent pas les dispositions des lois en vigueur imposant de déférer l'accusé au parquet dans les délais prévus par le code de procédure pénal palestinien.

447. Des détenus civils sont présentés à des tribunaux militaires, aussi bien en Cisjordanie que dans la bande de Gaza.

448. Dans la plupart des cas, les services de sécurité en Cisjordanie font fi des décisions de remise en liberté prononcées par les tribunaux réguliers et usent de subterfuges pour ne pas les appliquer.

449. Les personnes arrêtées sont soumises à la torture et autres traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants dans le but d'amener la personne concernée à avouer ce qu'on lui reproche ou à accuser d'autres personnes, et ce aussi bien par les services de sécurité de Cisjordanie que par les services de sécurité relevant de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza.

450. Des meurtres et des exécutions extrajudiciaires ont été commis par les entités chargées de l'application des lois et les groupes armés relevant de l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza, aux dépens de personnes accusées d'avoir commis certains actes et de personnes qui avaient été condamnées par des tribunaux militaires ou civils, et ces mêmes services de sécurité ont arrêté des civils qui ont été ensuite liquidés physiquement après interrogatoire.

451. L'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza s'est abstenue d'engager des poursuites contre les auteurs d'exécutions extrajudiciaires et d'obliger les auteurs de telles violations à rendre des comptes, et elle a refusé d'assumer la responsabilité qui lui incombe de protéger les personnes confrontées à de telles violations, qui se sont donc multipliées et répandues, les auteurs d'exécutions extrajudiciaires étant conscients et convaincus que l'autorité de fait leur apportera protection et immunité contre tous interrogatoires ou poursuites.

452. Des entités officielles, plus précisément le Ministère de l'intérieur et les services de sécurité, en Cisjordanie ont commis un certain nombre de violations du droit de constituer des associations, notamment en remplaçant les comités de direction élus par les membres de ces associations par des comités provisoires composés de non-membres, en interdisant à certaines associations de poursuivre leurs activités sous peine d'arrestation des membres de leur comité de direction et autres pratiques contraires à la loi.

453. Des entités officielles de Cisjordanie, plus précisément le Conseil général de la fonction publique et les directions et services de ministères palestiniens compétents, ont commis un certain nombre de violations en rapport avec le droit d'occuper des fonctions publiques, les plus importantes étant des annulations de nomination et des licenciements de centaines d'enseignants et d'autres fonctionnaires, les motifs étant l'appartenance politique des intéressés et l'avis négatif des services de sécurité sur leur nomination. L'on peut dire également que les services de sécurité rattachés à l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza jouent un rôle identique concernant les mesures dites de contrôle de sécurité, en vertu desquelles le licenciement est décidé en fonction de l'appartenance politique de l'intéressé.

454. Des atteintes à la liberté de la presse ont été commises dans les territoires palestiniens, que ce soit en Cisjordanie ou dans la bande de Gaza, les plus importantes étant les assassinats, les détentions et les interrogatoires de journalistes, les motifs étant leurs activités journalistiques, leur appartenance politique ou la publication d'articles écrits ou audiovisuels. Certains d'entre eux ont subi des tortures et autres traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants pendant leur détention ou lors de leur arrestation par les services de sécurité. En outre, ces services interdisent ou entravent l'exercice de la profession de journaliste pour des raisons qui tiennent à l'appartenance politique des responsables ou pour empêcher des journalistes de diffuser des nouvelles ou d'enquêter sur des sujets que ces services ne veulent pas voir évoqués.

XII. Recommandations

455. Compte tenu des éléments qui précèdent et à l'issue des travaux qu'elle a menés conformément au mandat juridiquement bien défini qui lui a été confié par la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, la Commission présente les recommandations suivantes :

456. Enjoindre au parquet et à la magistrature militaires de cesser de délivrer des mandats d'arrêt ou de détention concernant des civils, empêcher les tribunaux militaires de juger des civils et transférer aux tribunaux civils ordinaires toutes les affaires de civils arrêtés ou incarcérés par la justice militaire.

457. Abroger le protocole d'accord et de coopération entre le ministère public et le parquet militaire conclu le 28 juin 2006, en vertu duquel le Procureur général a habilité le parquet militaire à exercer des compétences que la loi confère au ministère public s'agissant d'engager des poursuites à raison d'infractions visées dans le Code pénal en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza.

458. Obliger les services de sécurité relevant de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne à respecter leurs attributions en matière d'arrestation, de garde à vue et de détention, à ne procéder à aucune arrestation sans mandat préalablement délivré par le juge, à respecter les délais de garde à vue fixés dans le code de procédure pénale, à s'abstenir de procéder à toute garde à vue ou détention dans des lieux autres que ceux prévus à cet effet, à respecter l'inviolabilité du domicile et des lieux privés et à ne pas y pénétrer ni y perquisitionner sans ordonnance judiciaire motivée. Il incombe en outre aux entités palestiniennes compétentes d'empêcher les services de renseignement militaire d'exercer des fonctions d'arrestation et de garde à vue de personnes extérieures à l'armée.

459. Faire en sorte que le ministère public palestinien exerce ses fonctions d'inspection des centres de réforme et de réadaptation (prisons) et des lieux de garde à vue pour s'assurer que nul n'y est placé ou détenu illégalement; exercice par le ministère public de son rôle d'intervention pour empêcher tout placement en détention en dehors des centres de réforme et de réadaptation. Il incombe en outre au ministère public de s'employer à empêcher des membres des services de sécurité qui n'ont pas de compétence de police judiciaire, en particulier les services de renseignement militaire, d'usurper celle des agents qui détiennent cette compétence en vertu de la loi.

460. Faire en sorte que toutes les entités chargées de l'application des lois respectent et appliquent les décisions des tribunaux réguliers portant remise en liberté de détenus, sachant que certains services de sécurité – notamment le Service de sécurité préventive, les Renseignements généraux et les Renseignements militaires – n'appliquent pas les décisions des tribunaux réguliers prononçant la libération totale ou conditionnelle de détenus qui restent donc privés de liberté malgré une décision de justice contraire.

461. Mettre fin aux arrestations et gardes à vue de civils qui sont ordonnées par le parquet et la magistrature militaires représentent une usurpation flagrante des compétences des tribunaux réguliers et privent les civils du droit d'être jugés par le magistrat normalement prévu par la législation nationale et les conventions internationales relatives aux droits de l'homme. La Commission considère en outre que le fait pour le parquet et la magistrature militaires de s'attribuer eux-mêmes le pouvoir d'arrêter et de placer en garde à vue des civils revient à laisser à tous les services de sécurité militaires toute latitude d'exercer des fonctions de police judiciaire aux dépens des civils, d'où une limitation des droits et des libertés que confèrent à ces derniers la Loi fondamentale et le code de procédure pénale palestiniens.

462. Faire en sorte que le parquet et la magistrature militaires cessent d'exercer des fonctions d'examen d'affaires relevant de la compétence des tribunaux ordinaires et concernant des personnes dont les affaires, différends et infractions sont normalement examinés par les tribunaux ordinaires, pratique qui constitue une atteinte flagrante aux droits et libertés, et ce d'autant plus que la justice régulière palestinienne, par la voix de sa plus haute instance, la Cour suprême, a réaffirmé dans des dizaines d'arrêtés l'inadmissibilité de l'arrestation et du jugement de civils palestiniens par le parquet et la magistrature militaires.

463. Libérer toutes les personnes qui ont été arrêtées ou détenues par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie ou par l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza et qui n'ont pas encore été déférées à une juridiction régulière compétente.

464. Interdire toutes les formes de torture, de tabassage et autres mauvais traitements pendant les phases d'interrogatoire et d'enquête, la Commission ayant constaté que les services de sécurité persistent dans la pratique de toutes les formes de torture et de traitements dégradants qu'elles font subir aux personnes qu'elles arrêtent afin de leur soutirer des informations ou de les contraindre à avouer les actes ou paroles qui leur sont imputés ou qui sont imputés à autrui.

465. Faire en sorte que les entités officielles en Cisjordanie assument la responsabilité qui leur incombe de poursuivre les auteurs de violations des dispositions de la loi et de les obliger à rendre des comptes, qu'il s'agisse d'arrestations arbitraires, d'actes de torture et autres traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants ou de violations d'autres droits et libertés, la Commission étant convaincue que l'absence de responsabilisation effective et sérieuse des auteurs d'actes de torture et des membres des services de sécurité qui contreviennent aux principes et aux règles régissant l'arrestation et la garde à vue a contribué à accroître le nombre et l'ampleur de ces violations et à encourager leur perpétration.

466. Exiger de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne qu'elle enquête sur tous les cas de meurtre et d'exécution extrajudiciaire commis dans la bande de Gaza afin que tous ceux qui ont ordonné de commettre, incité à commettre ou commis de tels actes soient poursuivis, rendent des comptes et ne bénéficient d'aucune impunité.

467. Faire en sorte que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza prenne toutes les mesures d'ordre juridique voulues pour mettre un terme aux descentes, perquisitions et arrestations effectuées en toute illégalité par des individus masqués. Il incombe en outre à cette autorité d'intervenir pour mettre fin aux arrestations et aux gardes à vue dans des lieux autres que ceux prévus à cet effet par la loi.

468. Faire en sorte que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza respecte les dispositions du code de procédure pénale palestinien interdisant toute arrestation sans la délivrance préalable par la justice d'un mandat à cet effet, instaurant l'inviolabilité du domicile et des lieux privés, sauf délivrance préalable par l'autorité judiciaire d'un mandat à cet effet, et fixant les délais de garde à vue autorisés.

469. Faire en sorte que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza interdise toutes les formes de torture et autres mauvais traitements pendant l'interrogatoire et l'enquête, la Commission ayant constaté que les services de sécurité relevant de cette autorité persistent dans la pratique de toutes les formes de torture et autres traitements inhumains et dégradants pendant la phase de garde à vue.

470. Faire en sorte que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza assume les responsabilités qui lui incombent en vertu des lois nationales palestiniennes et du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme et engage des poursuites contre les auteurs de violations des dispositions de la loi, qu'il s'agisse d'exécutions extrajudiciaires, d'arrestations arbitraires ou d'actes de torture et autres traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants.

471. Faire en sorte que l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza cesse de déférer des civils aux tribunaux militaires, ce qui constitue une forme de violation des droits des accusés qui doivent être jugés par des tribunaux ordinaires.

472. Réaffirmer que l'Autorité nationale palestinienne et l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza sont tenues de s'employer à régulariser la situation de tous les fonctionnaires qui ont été licenciés et de les réintégrer dans leurs fonctions en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, ainsi que de les indemniser du préjudice qu'ils ont subi, la plupart des licenciements étant motivés par l'appartenance politique des intéressés et non par des raisons professionnelles ou des considérations relatives à leur compétence.

473. Abroger l'obligation – imposée aux fonctionnaires par les entités gouvernementales de Cisjordanie et de la bande de Gaza, d'obtenir l'accord des services de sécurité en tant que condition de leur nomination dans la fonction publique, cette obligation constituant un acte illégal et une violation flagrante des dispositions de la Loi fondamentale palestinienne et de la loi sur la fonction publique en vigueur.

474. Faire cesser les poursuites, interpellations et interrogatoires de journalistes – pour leurs activités professionnelles – par les services de sécurité en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, ainsi que les entraves à l'exercice du métier de journaliste imposées par ces services, qui constituent une violation flagrante de la liberté d'opinion et d'expression et de la liberté de la presse telles qu'elles sont inscrites dans la législation nationale et le droit international.

475. Faire cesser les interventions du Ministère de l'intérieur de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne dans les activités des associations de la société civile, consistant notamment à doter ces organisations de comités de direction provisoires composés de personnes non membres de ces organisations, ce qui est illégal.

476. Veiller à ce que le Ministère de l'intérieur de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne respecte et applique les décisions de la Cour suprême palestinienne relatives à l'abrogation des décisions des entités officielles imposant des comités de direction provisoires aux associations.

477. Veiller à ce que les services de sécurité de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne respectent les activités des entités de la société civile, cessent d'intervenir dans leurs affaires et s'abstiennent de les dissoudre, de perquisitionner dans leurs locaux ou de mettre la main sur leurs avoirs sans raisons juridiques valables.

478. Assurer une juste indemnisation par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne et l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza de toutes les victimes de violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, en fonction du niveau et de l'ampleur de ces violations.

479. Veiller à ce que les entités palestiniennes compétentes prennent en considération les carences et les lacunes des lois pénales en vigueur dans les territoires palestiniens en ce qui concerne la lutte contre la torture et autres traitements inhumain et dégradants, et ce en adoptant des textes clairs érigeant ces pratiques en infractions pénales et prévoyant des sanctions correspondant à leur gravité. La Commission estime donc nécessaire que ces lois soient conformes à la Convention internationale contre la torture et autres peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants de 1987, qui constitue la référence juridique qui s'impose à tous les sujets de droit international.

480. Faire en sorte que l'Autorité nationale palestinienne crée une commission palestinienne réunissant les milieux judiciaires, les organisations de la société civile et les organismes officiels et chargée d'assurer le suivi de ces recommandations.

481. Veiller à ce que les combattants palestiniens, dans la lutte armée qu'ils mènent pour recouvrer leurs droits légitimes à disposer d'eux-mêmes, respectent les règles régissant le comportement des combattants dans un conflit armé conformément aux principes fondamentaux et aux dispositions du droit international humanitaire et du droit international général, s'agissant en particulier du respect rigoureux des règles et principes relatifs à la protection des civils dans les conflits armés internationaux.

482. Appeler l'Organisation des Nations Unies à assumer la responsabilité qui lui incombe d'assurer la réalisation effective du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination et à se libérer de l'hégémonie et de l'occupation israéliennes, cette occupation des territoires palestiniens ayant conduit, outre la négation des droits collectifs du peuple palestinien, à la déliquescence et la disparition des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales des Palestiniens, dont la dignité humaine est à chaque instant bafouée par les actes et pratiques de l'occupant, y compris les meurtres, la torture, les bannissements, les expropriations, les entraves à la circulation et le blocus injuste de la bande de Gaza, entre autres.

Annexes au rapport de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Table des matières

Numéro	Objet	Date	Page
1	Résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale	1 ^{er} décembre 2009	183
2	Décret du Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne portant création de la Commission	25 janvier 2010	185
3	Statut de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne	7 février 2010	187
4	Démission de Nasser Al-Rayyes de la Commission, qui accepte sa démission	7 février 2010	197
5	Demandes adressées par la Commission aux organisations non gouvernementales suivantes afin qu'elles lui présentent des rapports sur les violations des droits de l'homme, relevant de sa compétence	14 mars 2010	198
	Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme	14 mars 2010	199
	Association Al-Haq	14 mars 2010	201
	Association Al-Damir pour les droits de l'homme	14 mars 2010	203
	Centre de Jérusalem pour l'aide juridique et les droits de l'homme	14 mars 2010	205
	Centre de la démocratie et des droits des travailleurs	14 mars 2010	207
6	Lettre au Directeur adjoint des services de renseignement égyptiens, M. Omar Qinawi	3 avril 2010	209
7	Lettre au Secrétaire général adjoint de la Ligue des États arabes, Ahmed Ben Helli	3 avril 2010	210
8	Annonce publiée par la Commission dans la presse locale au mois d'avril	Avril 2010	211
9	Conférence et communiqué de presse de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne	8 avril 2010	214
10	Convocation adressée au Bloc de la réforme et du changement en vue de la tenue d'une réunion avec les membres de la Commission	13 avril 2010	220
11	Lettre adressée au Secrétaire général du Conseil législatif sur la tenue d'une réunion avec les représentants des blocs et listes et les coordonnateurs des groupes parlementaires	13 avril 2010	221
12	Lettres adressées aux organisations ci-après, pour leur demander de diffuser l'avis de la Commission sur leurs sites Web	13 avril 2010	222
	Centre de santé mentale de Gaza		223
	Comité de défense des droits et des libertés		224
	Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme		225
	Croix-Rouge à Gaza		226

Numéro	Objet	Date	Page
	Centre Al-Mizan des droits de l'homme		227
	Bureau des Nations Unies à Gaza		228
	Centre palestinien des droits de l'homme		229
	Association Al-Damir des droits de l'homme		230
13	Lettre adressée par le Ministre de l'intérieur de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne, transmettant un rapport au sujet des allégations portées contre le Ministère de l'intérieur	15 avril 2010	231
14	Lettre adressée à la Fondation Samir Kassir pour la prier de remettre à la Commission des documents à l'appui des atteintes à la liberté de la presse	18 avril 2010	232
15	Lettre à la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme au sujet de la coordination des audiences des victimes et des témoins de violations impliquant assassinats, arrestations et torture dans la bande de Gaza, audiences qui auront lieu par visioconférence dans les bureaux de la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme, à Ramallah et à Gaza	28 avril 2010	233
16	Lettre adressée au Chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique, en vue de l'obtention d'une copie des instructions en matière de sécurité données par le Conseil des ministres, et la suite qui y a été donnée	2 mai 2010	234
17	Lettre adressée au Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres, le priant de communiquer à la Commission une copie des décisions prises en ce qui concerne la sécurité des fonctionnaires, et la suite qui y a été donnée	2 mai 2010	237
18	Invitation adressée aux organisations de la société civile en Cisjordanie pour assister aux audiences au siège de la Commission	17 mai 2010	240
	Réseau des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes		241
	Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l'homme		242
	Association Al-Haq		234
	Centre de la démocratie et des droits des travailleurs		244
	Centre de Jérusalem pour l'aide juridique et les droits de l'homme		245
	Association Al-Damir		246
	Centre de soins et de réadaptation des victimes de la torture		247
19	Note verbale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies relative à la date limite de présentation du rapport	4 juin 2010	248
20	Invitation à assister à une audition adressée à la Directrice générale des relations publiques et des associations au Ministère de l'intérieur	7 juin 2010	251
21	Invitation à assister à une audition adressée au Ministre de l'intérieur	8 juin 2010	252
22	Lettre adressée au Gouverneur de l'Autorité monétaire palestinienne, le priant de communiquer à la Commission le cadre juridique régissant l'ouverture de comptes bancaires pour les associations, et réponse à cette lettre	14 juin 2010	253

Annexe 1

Résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale

64/10. Suite donnée au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza

L'Assemblée générale,

Guidée par les buts et principes énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies, Rappelant les règles et principes pertinents du droit international, notamment humanitaire et des droits de l'homme, en particulier la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, du 12 août 1949¹, qui est applicable au territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est,

Rappelant également la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme² et les autres instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme, dont le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques³, le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels³ et la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant⁴,

Rappelant en outre ses résolutions sur la question, notamment sa résolution ES-10/18 du 16 janvier 2009, adoptée lors de sa dixième session extraordinaire d'urgence,

Rappelant les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité sur la question, notamment la résolution 1860 (2009) du 8 janvier 2009,

Rappelant également les résolutions pertinentes du Conseil des droits de l'homme, notamment la résolution S-12/1 du 16 octobre 2009,

Remerciant la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza d'avoir établi un rapport complet sous la direction du juge Richard Goldstone⁵, Affirmant qu'il incombe à toutes les parties de respecter le droit international humanitaire et le droit international des droits de l'homme,

Insistant sur l'importance que revêtent la sécurité et le bien-être de tous les civils, et réaffirmant l'obligation d'assurer la protection des civils en période de conflit armé,

Profondément préoccupée par les informations relatives aux sérieuses violations des droits de l'homme et aux graves infractions au droit international humanitaire commises pendant les opérations militaires israéliennes lancées dans la bande de Gaza le 27 décembre 2008, notamment celles qui figurent dans les conclusions de la Mission d'établissement des faits et de la Commission d'enquête établie par le Secrétaire général⁶,

¹ Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 75, n° 973.

² Résolution 217 A (III).

³ Voir résolution 2200 A (XXI), annexe.

⁴ Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 1577, no 27531.

⁵ A/HRC/12/48.

⁶ A/63/855-S/2009/250.

Condamnant toutes les attaques visant des civils et des installations ou institutions civiles, notamment les locaux de l'Organisation des Nations Unies,

Soulignant que les auteurs de toutes les violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme doivent être comptables de leurs actes afin de lutter contre l'impunité, de garantir la justice, de prévenir de nouvelles violations et de promouvoir la paix,

Convaincue qu'un règlement juste, final et global de la question de Palestine, qui est au cœur du conflit arabo-israélien, est indispensable à l'instauration d'une paix et d'une stabilité globales, justes et durables au Moyen-Orient,

1. Approuve le rapport du Conseil des droits de l'homme sur les travaux de sa douzième session extraordinaire, tenue les 15 et 16 octobre 2009⁷;

2. Prie le Secrétaire général de transmettre au Conseil de sécurité le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza⁵;

3. Demande au Gouvernement israélien de prendre dans les trois mois toutes les mesures nécessaires en vue de procéder à des investigations indépendantes, crédibles et conformes aux normes internationales, sur les graves violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qui ont été signalées par la Mission d'établissement des faits, afin que les responsabilités soient établies et que justice soit faite;

4. Demande instamment, conformément aux recommandations de la Mission d'établissement des faits, que la partie palestinienne procède dans les trois mois à des investigations indépendantes, crédibles et conformes aux normes internationales, sur les graves violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qui ont été signalées par la Mission d'établissement des faits, afin que les responsabilités soient établies et que justice soit faite;

5. Recommande que le Gouvernement suisse, en sa qualité de dépositaire de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre¹, fasse au plus tôt le nécessaire afin de convoquer à nouveau une Conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève sur les mesures à prendre pour imposer la Convention dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et la faire respecter, conformément à l'article premier;

6. Prie le Secrétaire général de lui présenter dans un délai de trois mois un rapport sur l'application de la présente résolution afin de déterminer les nouvelles mesures qui doivent être prises, le cas échéant, par les organes et organismes des Nations Unies, dont le Conseil de sécurité;

7. Décide de rester saisi de la question.

39^e séance plénière
5 novembre 2009

⁷ A/64/53/Add.1.

Annexe 2
Décret du Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne portant création de la Commission

Décret n° () 2010

Portant commission indépendante de suivi du rapport Goldstone

Le Président de l'État de Palestine,
Président du Comité exécutif de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine,
Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne,
En vertu des dispositions de la Loi fondamentale révisée de 2003 et des amendements y relatifs, Vu la décision du Premier Ministre en date du 14 janvier 2010,
Vu le rapport Goldstone,
En vertu des pouvoirs qui lui sont conférés,
Et compte tenu de l'intérêt général,
Décrète ce qui suit :

Article 1

Il est créé une commission indépendante de suivi de l'application des recommandations formulées dans le rapport Goldstone en ce qui concerne l'Autorité nationale palestinienne, ainsi composée :

1. Issa Abu Sharar, Président;
2. Zuhair al-Surani, membre;
3. Ghassan Farmand, membre;
4. Yasser al-Amuri, membre;
5. Nasser Rayyes, membre.

Article 2

1. La Commission s'acquitte des tâches et responsabilités à elle assignées, dont celle de mener une enquête conformément au rapport Goldstone, et agit dans le respect des délais indiqués dans ledit rapport.
2. La Commission présente ses recommandations et les conclusions de ses travaux à toutes les parties compétentes, chacune en ce qui la concerne.

Article 3

La Commission s'appuie sur les experts et les spécialistes qu'elle juge les mieux à même de l'aider à accomplir sa mission.

Article 4

Toutes les parties compétentes, officielles ou non officielles, sont tenues de coopérer avec la Commission et de lui fournir toutes les facilités et informations nécessaires à l'accomplissement de sa mission.

Article 5

Toutes les parties compétentes sont chargées, chacune en ce qui la concerne, de l'exécution des dispositions du présent décret qui prend effet à compter de sa date de publication au Journal officiel.

Fait à Ramallah le 25 janvier 2010

Le Président de l'État de Palestine,
Président du Comité exécutif de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine,
Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne
(Signé) Mahmoud Abbas

Annexe 3

Statut de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne

Statut de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée conformément aux recommandations du rapport Goldstone

La Commission,

En application d'un décret du Président palestinien en date du 25 janvier 2010 portant création d'une commission d'enquête indépendante conformément aux recommandations du rapport Goldstone, ayant pris connaissance de la résolution 64/254 de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies et du rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits créée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme et présidée par le juge Richard Goldstone, chargée d'établir les faits relatifs au dernier conflit à Gaza, et ayant passé en revue les critères et principes qui régissent au plan international les règles et procédures d'enquête sur les violations des dispositions du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire,

Adopte le présent Statut :

Chapitre I

Siège et mandat de la Commission

Article 1

Siège de la Commission

1. La Commission a son siège à Ramallah.
2. La Commission se réunit en son siège, à moins qu'elle n'en décide autrement.
3. La Commission exerce ses fonctions et pouvoirs comme stipulé dans le présent Statut à l'intérieur des territoires palestiniens ou à l'extérieur de ces territoires si nécessaire.

Article 2

Langue de travail de la Commission

L'arabe est la langue officielle des travaux de la Commission et de ses groupes de travail.

Article 3

Mandat de la Commission

1. La Commission d'enquête dispose d'une personnalité juridique indépendante et de la capacité juridique nécessaire pour exercer ses fonctions et réaliser ses objectifs.
2. La Commission exerce un mandat d'enquête sur les contraventions et violations palestiniennes mentionnées dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits créée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme et présidée par le juge Richard Goldstone.

Article 4

Compétence ratione loci et compétences ratione materiae de la Commission

La Commission exerce ses fonctions et pouvoirs comme stipulé dans le présent Statut sur l'ensemble du territoire palestinien occupé.

Article 5

Limites de la compétence de la Commission

La Commission d'enquête n'a ni fonctions ni compétences s'agissant des matières autres que les contraventions et violations palestiniennes mentionnées dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits créée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme.

Article 6

Activités de la Commission

Afin de s'acquitter de sa mission, la Commission doit :

1. Enquêter sur les violations imputées aux Palestiniens dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits;
2. Rassembler les données, éléments de preuve et déclarations en rapport avec sa mission;
3. Recueillir les allégations et plaintes faisant état de violations des droits de l'homme touchant des questions relevant de son mandat;
4. Organiser des auditions;
5. Donner les ordres voulus pour obtenir des autorités officielles tous les documents, pièces justificatives, instructions administratives, dossiers médicaux et autres sources d'information qu'elle juge nécessaires;
6. Convoquer des témoins et autres personnes;
7. Faire des visites de terrain dans les locaux gouvernementaux, les centres de détention et les centres de réforme et de réadaptation;
8. Recueillir des éléments de preuve et des déclarations auprès de témoins et d'organisations se trouvant hors du territoire palestinien occupé;
9. Demander à toute personne ou entité de lui remettre tout document ou autre élément dont elle aurait la propriété, la possession ou le contrôle et qui serait en rapport avec l'objet de l'enquête ou de l'audition;
10. Obtenir tout document ou autre élément en rapport avec l'enquête.

Article 7

Cadre juridique régissant les travaux de la Commission

Dans l'exercice de ses fonctions et activités, la Commission est soumise aux dispositions du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire, aux principes inébranlables et impératifs du droit international, aux obligations contractées par la Palestine en vertu de sa qualité de Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, aux obligations contractées unilatéralement par la Palestine concernant l'application des quatre Conventions de Genève de 1949 et aux lois locales en vigueur dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

Chapitre II

Personnalité juridique de la Commission et conditions de son indépendance

Article 8

Début et fin de la personnalité juridique de la Commission

La personnalité juridique de la Commission d'enquête prend naissance avec la publication du décret présidentiel en vertu duquel elle est créée et prend fin avec la disparition de la raison qui a présidé à sa création ou avec sa dissolution par l'autorité qui l'a créée.

Article 9

Indépendance des travaux de la Commission

1. Les membres de la Commission mènent leurs travaux en toute indépendance et n'ont de maître que la loi.
2. Dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, les membres de la Commission n'acceptent aucune instruction, directive ou ingérence de quelque pouvoir, entité ou personne que ce soit.

Article 10

Serment

1. Chaque membre de la Commission, au moment de prendre ses fonctions, prête le serment suivant : « Je jure devant Dieu tout-puissant d'exercer mes fonctions de membre de cette commission en toute objectivité, honnêteté et impartialité et de respecter la loi et le Statut de la Commission d'enquête. »
2. Le Président de la Commission prête serment devant les membres présents de celle-ci et les membres de la Commission prêtent serment devant le Président.

Article 11

Engagements des membres

Tout membre de la Commission s'engage à être à tout moment prêt à répondre à l'appel du Président lorsque celui-ci convoque une réunion. Il s'engage en outre à assister à toutes les séances d'enquête et auditions afin d'assurer le bon déroulement des travaux de la Commission, à moins que son absence ne soit due à une raison impérieuse valable selon la loi et la coutume.

Article 12

Obligations des membres

Aucun membre de la Commission ne peut, tant qu'il est membre, exercer un emploi ou une activité contraire à ses fonctions de membre de la Commission. Il est en outre interdit à tout membre de la Commission de faire toute annonce ou déclaration ou de participer à toute activité ou action susceptible de jeter un doute sur son objectivité, son impartialité et son honnêteté.

Article 13

Démission

1. Le membre démissionnaire présente sa démission au Président de la Commission.
2. Le Président informe immédiatement les autres membres de la Commission de toute démission qui lui est présentée.
3. La démission du Président de la Commission est déposée au siège de celle-ci.
4. La démission du Président ou d'un membre de la Commission prend effet à la date de son acceptation par les autres membres, étant entendu que cette date doit être immédiatement portée à la connaissance du membre démissionnaire.

Article 14

Nombre minimum de membres de la Commission

1. Si l'un quelconque des membres de la Commission démissionne, celle-ci poursuit ses activités avec les membres restants.
2. Si le Président de la Commission démissionne, celle-ci se réunit pour élire en son sein un nouveau président.
3. Le nombre minimum de membres de la Commission est fixé à trois membres.
4. Si le nombre des membres de la Commission est inférieur au minimum requis, celle-ci interrompt ses activités jusqu'à ce que ce nombre minimum soit de nouveau atteint.
5. La Commission communique au Président de l'Autorité les noms des membres proposés.

Article 15

Fonctions du Président de la Commission

1. Représenter la Commission au niveau local et international.
2. Assurer le suivi des travaux de la Commission et de ses organes subsidiaires.
3. Veiller au bon fonctionnement administratif de la Commission.
4. Présider la Commission et conduire ses délibérations.
5. Veiller à l'application des dispositions du présent Statut.
6. Ouvrir et clore chaque séance de la Commission.
7. Si nécessaire durant l'examen de tout point de l'ordre du jour, proposer à la Commission de limiter le temps de parole et le nombre de prises de parole de chaque intervenant sur tel ou tel point, et clore la liste des orateurs.
8. Proposer le report ou la clôture du débat ainsi que la suspension ou la levée de la séance.

Article 16

Rapporteur de la Commission

1. La Commission élit en son sein un rapporteur.

2. Si le Président de la Commission cesse d'être membre de celle-ci ou s'il démissionne de ses fonctions de président, le Rapporteur de la Commission assume les fonctions de président jusqu'à ce que la Commission se choisisse un nouveau président.

3. L'élection susmentionnée se déroule à bulletins secrets et le candidat ayant obtenu la majorité des voix de la Commission est élu.

Chapitre III

Séances d'enquête et auditions

Article 17

Quorum

Pour que la Commission puisse valablement délibérer, il faut que la majorité simple de ses membres au moins soient présents à la séance.

Article 18

Règlement intérieur des séances

La Commission peut établir toute directive, ligne directrice ou procédure générale ou particulière relative aux séances d'enquête.

Article 19

Organisation des séances

1. Nul ne peut prendre la parole dans les auditions sans l'avoir d'abord demandée et avoir obtenu l'accord du Président.

2. Le Président ne peut refuser de donner la parole pour des raisons autres que celles prévues dans le présent Statut. En cas de désaccord à ce sujet, la décision est prise à la majorité relative des membres présents de la Commission, sans débat.

3. Si l'intervenant emploie des termes inconvenants ou qu'il se produit quelque fait attentatoire à l'ordre et aux bonnes mœurs, le Président est habilité à appeler son attention sur ce fait, à l'avertir de la nécessité de maintenir l'ordre et la morale et, si nécessaire, à lui retirer la parole.

Article 20

Présence aux séances

1. Les auditions se déroulent à huis clos et seuls les membres de la Commission et la personne qui doit être entendue peuvent y assister.

2. Seuls les membres du secrétariat, les interprètes et les personnes qui fournissent une assistance à la Commission peuvent assister aux séances, à moins que la Commission n'en décide autrement.

Article 21

Impartialité et indépendance des membres de la Commission

Si un membre de la Commission estime que, pour des raisons personnelles, il doit s'abstenir de participer à une enquête, il doit en informer immédiatement le Président, qui est alors habilité à désigner un autre membre à sa place.

Article 22

Convocation des victimes et des témoins

1. La Commission d'enquête convoque les victimes de violations des droits de l'homme mentionnées dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits afin d'entendre leurs doléances et elle leur demande de présenter des éléments de preuve et pièces justificatives corroborant leurs déclarations.
2. La Commission peut rechercher tout élément de preuve ou déclaration qu'elle juge en rapport avec la matière examinée, comme elle peut, le cas échéant, enquêter sur les lieux des violations.
3. La Commission décide si les éléments de preuve et déclarations présentés par les parties sont recevables et dignes de foi.
4. La Commission fixe les conditions et procédures d'audition des témoins.
5. La Commission tient des séances d'enquête en présence d'au moins deux de ses membres.
6. La Commission d'enquête peut dépêcher un ou plusieurs de ses membres sur les lieux des faits pour procéder à des inspections sur place.
7. Les autorités officielles palestiniennes doivent accorder aux membres de la Commission et aux personnes qui les accompagnent les privilèges et l'immunité nécessaires à l'accomplissement de leur mission.

Article 23

Immunité

L'immunité et les règles de procédure spéciales qui s'attachent à la qualité officielle d'une personne, que ce soit en droit national ou en droit international, ne sauraient empêcher la Commission d'enquête d'exercer ses fonctions au regard de cette personne.

Article 24

Auditions

La Commission est habilitée à entendre toute personne dont elle juge les déclarations importantes et nécessaires à l'accomplissement de sa mission.

Article 25

Convocation et citation à comparaître

La Commission convoque ou cite à comparaître, par voie de notification signée de son président, toute personne dont elle souhaite entendre les déclarations, cette notification devant préciser quand et où la personne doit se présenter devant la Commission.

Article 26

Non-comparution

Si la personne convoquée refuse de se présenter devant la Commission ou de se conformer à la notification qu'elle lui a adressée, le Président de la Commission peut demander aux autorités compétentes de prendre les mesures d'ordre juridique voulues pour l'amener à se conformer à la demande de la Commission.

Article 27Prestation de serment des témoins et des experts

La Commission demande aux témoins et aux experts de prêter le serment dont elle est convenue.

Article 28Plaintes verbales

Si une personne est, pour cause de handicap ou d'analphabétisme, dans l'impossibilité de soumettre à la Commission une plainte ou une requête écrite, elle peut présenter sa requête, plainte, observation ou communication par des moyens audiovisuels ou sur tout autre support électronique.

Article 29Procès-verbaux d'enquête

Les déclarations de la personne entendue par la Commission sont consignées dans un procès-verbal qui est signé par le procès-verbaliste de l'audition, les membres présents de la Commission et la personne entendue. Sont également consignés dans ce procès-verbal la date, l'heure et le lieu de l'audition et les noms de toutes les personnes présentes. Il y est également fait mention de tout refus de signer le procès-verbal et des raisons invoquées à cet effet.

Article 30Enregistrements audiovisuels

1. La personne qui comparaît devant la Commission est avertie, dans une langue qu'elle parle et comprend bien, que son audition sera enregistrée en audio ou en vidéo et qu'elle peut refuser d'être enregistrée.
2. Si la personne qui comparaît devant la Commission refuse d'être enregistrée en audio ou en vidéo, ses déclarations sont consignées par écrit.
3. En cas d'interruption de l'audition, ce fait et l'heure à laquelle il survient sont signalés dans l'enregistrement puis celui-ci est interrompu. La reprise de l'audition est également signalée dans l'enregistrement.
4. Avant de clore l'audition et le procès-verbal correspondant, la possibilité est donnée à la personne qui comparaît devant la Commission de clarifier éventuellement ses propos.
5. Si l'audition fait l'objet d'un enregistrement audio ou vidéo, le sceau de la Commission est apposé sur la bande originale de l'enregistrement, en présence de la personne entendue par la Commission, et la bande est signée par cette personne et par les membres présents de la Commission.

Article 31Documents d'enquête

Tous les documents relatifs à une enquête sont remis au Rapporteur de la Commission, qui est responsable de leur enregistrement et de leur conservation jusqu'à la fin de l'enquête en question.

Article 32

Experts apportant leur concours à la Commission

1. La Commission d'enquête peut décider de faire appel le cas échéant à des experts et des conseillers.
2. Les personnes apportant leur concours à la Commission sont soumises aux instructions et directives du Président de la Commission.

Article 33

Confidentialité des données et des documents de la Commission

1. Il est interdit à tout membre de la Commission de diffuser tous rapports, documents ou données que la Commission a obtenus dans le cadre de ses enquêtes et auditions.
2. Les membres de la Commission, les enquêteurs, les experts et autres personnes qui apportent leur concours à la Commission sont dans l'obligation, pendant et après la période durant laquelle ils ont exercé leurs fonctions auprès de la Commission, de respecter la confidentialité des faits et données dont ils ont eu connaissance dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions.

Article 34

Confidentialité des éléments de preuve et des documents d'enquête

La Commission conserve en son siège des archives photographiques de tous les documents d'enquête et éléments de preuve qu'elle a pu recueillir et l'accès à ces archives est réservé aux seuls membres en exercice de la Commission.

Article 35

Création d'organes subsidiaires

La Commission peut créer des groupes de travail et comités spécialisés à composition limitée chargés de l'aider dans les procédures d'audition et d'enquête, l'établissement des faits, la collecte des données et documents et autres questions découlant de l'exercice par la commission de ses fonctions.

Article 36

Majorité requise pour l'adoption des décisions de la Commission

1. La Commission prend ses décisions par consensus.
2. Tout membre de la Commission qui a une objection ou une réserve concernant une décision est en droit de faire consigner les causes et raisons de sa réserve ou objection et la réserve elle-même est jointe à la décision.

Chapitre IV

Protection des témoins et des informateurs et mesures de protection

Article 37

Protection des témoins et des informateurs

1. La Commission assure la protection et la sécurité des victimes et des témoins qui lui fournissent des informations et qui peuvent faire l'objet de menaces, avoir des raisons de penser qu'ils pourraient être menacés ou être interrogés et poursuivis par des parties connues ou inconnues.

2. Par « témoin », on entend toute personne qui a fourni des éléments de preuve ou un témoignage ou qui va le faire, ou encore qui décrit des événements dont elle a été témoin, les mesures de protection étant dans ce cas étendues à tous les membres de la famille de l'informateur ou témoin et aux membres de son ménage.

3. Par « victime », on entend toute personne physique qui subit les conséquences préjudiciables de la perpétration d'une infraction pénale relevant de la compétence de la Commission. On entend également par ce terme les personnes morales qui ont été directement lésées dans leurs biens ou directement ou indirectement empêchées d'exercer leurs fonctions.

Article 38

Mesures de protection

Si la Commission s'inquiète de ce qu'un témoin ou une personne qui pourrait l'être risque de faire l'objet de persécutions, de harcèlement ou de violences, elle :

1. Entend le témoin à huis clos ou en tout lieu dont elle estimerait qu'il remplit les conditions de confidentialité et de sécurité voulues.
2. Garde secrète l'identité des informateurs et des témoins.
3. Évite de divulguer ou d'utiliser des éléments de preuve qui risquent de révéler l'identité d'un témoin.
4. Prend toute mesure qu'elle estime appropriée pour protéger les témoins.

Article 39

Protection des informateurs et des témoins contre les poursuites

Les victimes qui fournissent des informations sur des violations et les témoins ne peuvent pas faire l'objet de poursuites pénales, civiles ou administratives à raison d'événements qu'ils ont signalés ou d'éléments de preuve qu'ils ont fournis.

Article 40

Interdiction de citer à comparaître des informateurs ou des témoins

Aucune entité ne peut citer à comparaître des témoins ou des personnes qui fournissent des informations sur des violations, ni leur demander de témoigner ou de donner des informations concernant leurs déclarations ou la teneur des éléments de preuve qu'ils ont fournis à la Commission.

Chapitre V

Dispositions finales

Article 41

Élaboration du rapport de la Commission

1. À l'issue de l'enquête, la Commission rédige son rapport à partir des résultats des investigations qu'elle a menées.

2. Le Président soumet le rapport aux parties concernées, accompagné de toutes les recommandations que la Commission juge appropriées.

3. Le Président consigne la date à laquelle le rapport est adressé aux parties concernées.

Article 42

Règles d'application

La Commission établit les règles qu'elle jugera nécessaires pour assurer l'application des dispositions du présent Statut. Elle établit également des règles financières et administratives régissant la rémunération, les indemnités et les frais liés à l'exercice des fonctions de la Commission, les modalités de paiement ou de remboursement et les indemnités de transport et de subsistance versées aux personnes qui assistent aux séances d'enquête ou pour couvrir les frais de voyage et de logement des membres de la Commission et des experts et fonctionnaires qui les accompagnent.

Article 43

Documentation de la Commission

1. Immédiatement après avoir remis son rapport, la Commission rassemble, enregistre et archive tous ses documents et dossiers dans des boîtes spéciales qui sont ensuite fermées et marquées du sceau de la Commission.

2. Ces boîtes sont confiées à la garde de la Cour suprême palestinienne pour une période de six mois à compter de la date de présentation du rapport final.

3. À l'expiration du délai susmentionné, les boîtes seront ouvertes et les documents et dossiers de la Commission seront détruits en présence du Président et des membres de la Commission.

Article 44

Modifications du Statut

La Commission peut apporter des modifications au présent Statut si la majorité de ses membres y consent.

Annexe 4

Démission de Nasser Al-Rayyes de la Commission, qui accepte sa démission

Al-Haq
Le 6 février 2010

Son Excellence le Président Mahmoud Abbas,
Président du Comité exécutif de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine,
Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne

Objet : Demande en vue d'être dispensé de faire partie de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Je voudrais tout d'abord vous dire combien je vous suis reconnaissant de l'immense confiance que vous me témoignez en me demandant de faire partie de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, ce qui me confère une responsabilité juridique et nationale dont je m'enorgueillis. Malheureusement, pour des raisons d'objectivité, d'impartialité et d'indépendance, je ne peux pas faire partie de cette commission, comme il ressort clairement d'une étude des conditions juridiques énoncées dans le protocole type établi par l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur les commissions nationales d'enquête. En effet, lorsque les autorités nationales en créent une, elles doivent veiller à ce qu'aucun membre de la commission n'entretienne de liens étroits avec des membres du Gouvernement, d'organes publics, de partis politiques ou d'organisations qui auraient participé aux violations commises, ou avec toute entité ou groupe lié aux victimes, susceptible de miner la crédibilité de la commission.

Je suis le conseiller juridique d'une organisation palestinienne de défense des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, qui surveille les violations de ces droits et libertés et recueille des informations sur toute infraction commise à cet égard. J'ai également des liens avec de nombreuses personnes et entités dont les droits et les libertés ont été bafoués et je suis, par l'intermédiaire de l'association Al-Haq et à titre individuel, le représentant juridique de plusieurs d'entre elles. Je fais en outre partie des personnes qui ont participé aux réunions organisées par la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies présidée par le juge Goldstone, et présenté des témoignages sur la situation des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales en territoire palestinien occupé.

Pour ces raisons et aux fins de respecter l'impartialité et l'indépendance de la Commission et d'éviter toute critique, mauvaise appréciation, diffamation, accusation de partialité ou d'absence d'indépendance, je vous demande de me dispenser d'être membre de la Commission, tout en étant parfaitement disposé, à titre individuel et en tant que représentant d'une entité, à offrir à la Commission de l'aide, des renseignements, des conseils techniques et tout ce dont elle pourrait avoir besoin à cet égard. L'institution et moi-même sommes persuadés que cet appui pourra aider la Commission à atteindre les objectifs pour lesquels elle a été constituée, qui représentent une responsabilité nationale et juridique.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Conseiller de l'organisation Al-Haq
(Signé) Nasser Al-Rayyes

Annexe 5
Demandes adressées par la Commission aux organisations non gouvernementales suivantes afin qu'elles lui présentent des rapports sur les violations des droits de l'homme, relevant de sa compétence

- Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme
- Association Al-Haq
- Association Al-Damir pour les droits de l'homme
- Centre de Jérusalem pour l'aide juridique et les droits de l'homme
- Centre de la démocratie et des droits des travailleurs

Le 14 mars 2010

Madame Randa Siniora
Directrice générale de la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme

Objet : La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Madame,

Le 25 janvier 2010, comme suite de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, et conformément au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, le Président palestinien a pris un décret portant création, comme suite au rapport Goldstone, de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens citées dans ledit rapport.

La Commission est présidée par le juge Issa Abu Sharar et comprend les membres suivants : le juge Zuhair Al-Surani, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser Al-Amuri. Elle enquête sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales qui ont été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

La Commission exercera son mandat pour enquêter sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie dans les domaines suivants :

- Détention arbitraire et torture, c'est-à-dire détention injustifiée, fondée sur l'appartenance politique;
- Violation du droit de s'associer librement, interdiction faite aux associations de la société civile d'exercer leurs activités et non-exécution des décisions des tribunaux s'agissant de ces organisations;
- Violation de la liberté de presse;
- Violation du droit de se réunir;
- Discrimination dans la fonction publique sur la base de l'appartenance politique.

La Commission enquêtera également sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes à Gaza :

- Assassinat;
- Détention arbitraire;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

La Commission d'enquête rend hommage à l'éminent rôle que vous jouez dans le domaine de la défense des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et espère que vous l'aidez à atteindre ses objectifs en lui présentant tout document dont dispose votre organisation au sujet de violations qui relèvent des compétences et du mandat de la Commission et qui auraient été commises entre le 27 décembre 2008 et le 31 mars 2009. La Commission tiendra dans ce cadre avec votre organisation, une audition dont elle vous communiquera ultérieurement la date et le lieu.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 14 mars 2010

Monsieur Shawan Jabarin
Directeur général de l'Association Al-Haq

Objet : La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Monsieur,

Le 25 janvier 2010, comme suite de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, et conformément au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, le Président palestinien a pris un décret portant création, comme suite au rapport Goldstone, de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens citées dans ledit rapport.

La Commission est présidée par le juge Issa Abu Sharar et comprend les membres suivants : le juge Zuhair Al-Surani, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser Al-Amuri. Elle enquête sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales qui ont été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

La Commission exercera son mandat pour enquêter sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie dans les domaines suivants :

- Détention arbitraire et torture, c'est-à-dire détention injustifiée, fondée sur l'appartenance politique;
- Violation du droit de s'associer librement, interdiction faite aux associations de la société civile d'exercer leurs activités et non-exécution des décisions des tribunaux s'agissant de ces organisations;
- Violation de la liberté de presse;
- Violation du droit de se réunir;
- Discrimination dans la fonction publique sur la base de l'appartenance politique.

La Commission enquêtera également sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes à Gaza :

- Assassinat;
- Détention arbitraire;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

La Commission d'enquête rend hommage à l'éminent rôle que vous jouez dans le domaine de la défense des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et espère que vous l'aidez à atteindre ses objectifs en lui présentant tout document dont dispose votre organisation au sujet de violations qui relèvent des compétences et du mandat de la Commission et qui auraient été commises entre le 27 décembre 2008 et le 31 mars 2009. La Commission tiendra dans ce cadre avec votre organisation, une audition dont elle vous communiquera ultérieurement la date et le lieu.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 14 mars 2010

Madame Sahar Francis
Directrice générale de l'Association Al-Damir
pour les droits de l'homme

Objet : La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Madame,

Le 25 janvier 2010, comme suite de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, et conformément au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, le Président palestinien a pris un décret portant création, comme suite au rapport Goldstone, de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens citées dans ledit rapport.

La Commission est présidée par le juge Issa Abu Sharar et comprend les membres suivants : le juge Zuhair Al-Surani, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser Al-Amuri. Elle enquête sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales qui ont été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

La Commission exercera son mandat pour enquêter sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie dans les domaines suivants:

- Détention arbitraire et torture, c'est-à-dire détention injustifiée, fondée sur l'appartenance politique;
- Violation du droit de s'associer librement, interdiction faite aux associations de la société civile d'exercer leurs activités et non-exécution des décisions des tribunaux s'agissant de ces organisations;
- Violation de la liberté de presse;
- Violation du droit de se réunir;
- Discrimination dans la fonction publique sur la base de l'appartenance politique.

La Commission enquêtera également sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes à Gaza :

- Assassinat;
- Détention arbitraire;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

La Commission d'enquête rend hommage à l'éminent rôle que vous jouez dans le domaine de la défense des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et espère que vous l'aidez à atteindre ses objectifs en lui présentant tout document dont dispose votre organisation au sujet de violations qui relèvent des compétences et du mandat de la Commission et qui auraient été commises entre le 27 décembre 2008 et le 31 mars 2009. La Commission tiendra dans ce cadre avec votre organisation, une audition dont elle vous communiquera ultérieurement la date et le lieu.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 14 mars 2010

M. Issam Aruri
Directeur général du Centre de Jérusalem pour l'aide juridique
et les droits de l'homme

Objet : La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Monsieur,

Le 25 janvier 2010, à la suite de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, et conformément au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, le Président palestinien a décrété la création de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens, citées dans le rapport.

La Commission est présidée par le juge Issa Abu Sharar et comprend les membres suivants : le juge Zuhair Al-Surani, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser Al-Amuri. Elle enquête sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales qui ont été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

La Commission exercera son mandat pour enquêter sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie dans les domaines suivants :

- Détention arbitraire et torture, c'est-à-dire détention injustifiée en fonction de l'appartenance politique;
- Violation du droit de s'associer librement, interdiction faite aux associations de la société civile d'exercer leurs activités et non-exécution des décisions des tribunaux s'agissant de ces organisations;
- Violation de la liberté de presse;
- Violation du droit de se réunir;
- Discrimination dans la fonction publique sur la base de l'appartenance politique.

La Commission enquêtera également sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes à Gaza :

- Assassinat;
- Détentions arbitraire;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

La Commission d'enquête rend hommage à l'éminent rôle que vous jouez dans le domaine de la défense des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et espère que vous l'aidez à atteindre ses objectifs en lui présentant tout document dont dispose le Centre au sujet de violations qui relèvent des compétences et du mandat de la Commission et qui auraient été commises du 27 décembre 2008 au 31 mars 2009. La Commission tiendra dans ce cadre une audience avec votre organisation, dont elle vous communiquera ultérieurement la date et le lieu.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 14 mars 2010

M. Hassan Barghouti
Directeur général du Centre de la démocratie et des droits des travailleurs

Objet : La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens

Monsieur,

Le 25 janvier 2010, à la suite de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, et conformément au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, le Président palestinien a décrété la création de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens, citées dans le rapport.

La Commission est présidée par le juge Issa Abu Sharar et comprend les membres suivants : le juge Zuhair Al-Surani, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser Al-Amuri. Elle enquête sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales qui ont été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

La Commission exercera son mandat pour enquêter sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie dans les domaines suivants :

- Détention arbitraire et torture, c'est-à-dire détention injustifiée en fonction de l'appartenance politique;
- Violation du droit de s'associer librement, interdiction faite aux associations de la société civile d'exercer leurs activités et non-exécution des décisions des tribunaux s'agissant de ces organisations;
- Violation de la liberté de presse;
- Violation du droit de se réunir;
- Discrimination dans la fonction publique sur la base de l'appartenance politique.

La Commission enquêtera également sur les violations suivantes commises par les autorités palestiniennes à Gaza :

- Assassinat;
- Détention arbitraire;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

La Commission d'enquête rend hommage à l'éminent rôle que vous jouez dans le domaine de la défense des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et espère que vous l'aidez à atteindre ses objectifs en lui présentant tout document dont dispose le Centre au sujet de violations qui relèvent des compétences et du mandat de la Commission et qui auraient été commises du 27 décembre 2008 au 31 mars 2009. La Commission tiendra dans ce cadre une audience avec votre organisation, dont elle vous communiquera ultérieurement la date et le lieu.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 6
Lettre au Directeur adjoint des services de renseignement
égyptiens, M. Omar Qinawi

Le 3 avril 2010

Le général Omar Qanouni

Monsieur,

Je voudrais tout d'abord vous adresser tous mes remerciements et vous dire combien je vous suis reconnaissant d'avoir accepté de recevoir le 27 février 2010 au Caire le Président et les membres de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens. Nous avons pris note de votre solidarité, de votre intérêt sincère pour la cause et la situation palestiniennes, ainsi que de votre disposition à fournir à la Commission tout l'appui possible, pour l'aider à mener à bien sa tâche.

La Commission vous a fait part des options qui se présentent à elle pour qu'elle puisse s'acquitter de la partie de son mandat qui concerne la bande de Gaza, au cas où l'autorité de fait persisterait dans son refus de l'aider à enquêter sur les violations qui lui sont attribuées. Les options se présentent comme suit :

1. La Commission peut désigner un groupe de travail indépendant constitué d'experts renommés pour leur professionnalisme, leur intégrité et leur impartialité, pour s'acquitter du mandat qui lui a été confié s'agissant de la bande de Gaza. Aux fins de renforcer les compétences professionnelles des membres, nous proposons de désigner à la tête de ce groupe M. Charif Bassiouni, qui jouit d'une grande confiance de la part des acteurs régionaux et internationaux, pour ce qui est de ses compétences et de son expérience dans ce domaine;

2. La Commission peut charger quelques organisations de la société civile palestinienne, qui s'occupent de surveiller ces violations et de recueillir des documents y relatifs, d'enquêter sur les actes attribués aux Palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza;

3. Au cas où ces deux options se verraient opposer un refus, la Commission propose de rencontrer en Égypte des représentants d'organisations actives dans la bande de Gaza pour entendre leurs témoignages, ainsi que ceux des victimes, sur les violations qu'y auraient commises les Palestiniens.

Vous nous avez indiqué que vous étiez disposé à faire part de notre point de vue aux autorités compétentes dans la bande de Gaza. Nous espérons que vous nous communiquerez ce qui aura été fait à cet égard.

Nous vous remercions une fois de plus et apprécions les efforts que vous déployez, et espérons continuer de bénéficier de votre coopération et de votre coordination avec la Commission.

Le Président de la Commission
indépendante palestinienne d'enquête,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 7
Lettre au Secrétaire général adjoint de la Ligue des États arabes, Ahmed Ben Helli

Le 3 avril 2010

Monsieur l'Ambassadeur Ahmed Ben Helli
Secrétaire général adjoint de la Ligue des États arabes

Je voudrais tout d'abord vous adresser tous mes remerciements et vous dire combien je vous suis reconnaissant d'avoir accepté de recevoir le 25 février 2010, au siège de la Ligue des États arabes au Caire, le Président et les membres de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, sur les violations qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens. Nous avons pris note de votre solidarité, de votre intérêt sincère pour la cause et la situation palestiniennes, ainsi que de votre disposition à fournir à la Commission tout l'appui possible, pour l'aider à mener à bien sa tâche.

La Commission vous a fait part des options qui se présentent à elle pour qu'elle puisse s'acquitter de la partie de son mandat qui concerne la bande de Gaza, au cas où l'autorité de fait persisterait dans son refus de l'aider à enquêter sur les violations qui lui sont attribuées. Les options se présentent comme suit :

1. La Commission peut désigner un groupe de travail indépendant constitué d'experts renommés pour leur professionnalisme, leur intégrité et leur impartialité, pour s'acquitter du mandat qui lui a été confié s'agissant de la bande de Gaza. Aux fins de renforcer les compétences professionnelles des membres, nous proposons de désigner à la tête de ce groupe M. Charif Bassiouni, qui jouit d'une grande confiance de la part des acteurs régionaux et internationaux pour ce qui est de ses compétences et de son expérience dans ce domaine;

2. La Commission peut charger quelques organisations de la société civile palestinienne, qui s'occupent de surveiller ces violations et de recueillir des documents y relatifs, d'enquêter sur les actes attribués aux Palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza;

3. Au cas où ces deux options se verraient opposer un refus, la Commission propose de rencontrer en Égypte des représentants d'organisations actives dans la bande de Gaza pour entendre leurs témoignages, ainsi que ceux des victimes, sur les violations qu'y auraient commises les Palestiniens.

Vous nous avez indiqué que vous étiez disposé à faire part de notre point de vue aux autorités compétentes dans la bande de Gaza. Nous espérons que vous nous communiquerez ce qui aura été fait à cet égard.

Nous vous remercions une fois de plus et apprécions les efforts que vous déployez et espérons continuer de bénéficier de votre coopération et de votre coordination avec la Commission.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne,
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 8

Annonce publiée par la Commission dans la presse locale au mois d'avril

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, créée par décret du Président de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne comme suite au rapport Goldstone, annonce, conformément à la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, qu'elle commence une enquête sur les violations des droits de l'homme et les libertés fondamentales qui auraient été commises par des Palestiniens entre le 28 décembre 2008 et le 31 mars 2009 en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza.

Le mandat de la Commission recouvre les violations suivantes, qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne :

- Détention arbitraire et torture;
- Violation du droit de s'associer librement, interdiction faite aux organisations de la société civile d'exercer leurs activités et non-exécution des décisions des tribunaux pour ce qui est de ces associations;
- Violation des libertés de la presse;
- Violation de la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques;
- Discrimination en fonction de l'appartenance politique dans la désignation et le licenciement des fonctionnaires.

La Commission pourra également enquêter sur les violations qui auraient été commises dans la bande de Gaza, comme suit :

- Assassinat;
- Détention arbitraire;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

Toute personne qui a été victime des violations susmentionnées devra déposer une plainte à titre individuel ou par l'intermédiaire d'un proche ou d'un représentant, auprès de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne. Elle doit se rendre directement au siège de la Commission pour remplir un formulaire, ou communiquer sa plainte à l'équipe de la Commission par fax, par téléphone ou par courrier électronique.

La Commission garantit à tout plaignant le secret et le traitement confidentiel de sa plainte, ainsi que protection et immunité.

Les plaintes concernent toutes les provinces de la Cisjordanie et de la bande de Gaza et doivent être présentées au siège de la Commission au plus tard le 4 avril 2010, de dimanche à jeudi, de 9 heures à 16 heures.

Adresse de la Commission :

Rue municipale Al-Qods
Immeuble Abraj al-Wataniyah
Rez-de-chaussée
Bireh

Numéro de téléphone : 02 241 0731/02 241 0833

Numéro de fax : 02 241 0732

Courrier électronique : ipalestinecgi@gmail.com

اللجنة الفلسطينية المستقلة للتحقيق وفقاً لتقرير غولدمستون

اعلان

تعلن اللجنة الفلسطينية المستقلة للتحقيق وفقاً لتقرير غولدمستون، وللشكلة بقرار من رئيس السلطة الوطنية الفلسطينية، اعمالاً لقرار الجمعية العامة للأمم المتحدة رقم ٢٠٠٩/٢/٣١، ولغاية ٢٠٠٨/١٢/٢٨ م، حيث ستمارس اللجنة ولايتها في التحقيق بالانتهاكات للدعى بارتكابها طبقاً للتقرير في الضفة الغربية بالجوانب التالية:

- * الاعتقال التعسفي والتعذيب.
- * انتهاك حرية تكوين الجمعيات، واستهداف وعدم تمكين للنظمات الأهلية من ممارسة عملها، وعدم تنفيذ قرارات المحاكم المتعلقة بهذه الجمعيات.
- * انتهاك الحريات الصحفية.
- * انتهاك حرية التجمع السلمي.
- * التمييز على اساس الانتماء السياسي في التعيين وفصل الموظفين لعاملين على خلفية الانتماء السياسي.
- كما ستحقق اللجنة في الانتهاكات للدعى بارتكابها وفقاً للتقرير في قطاع غزة والمتمثلة بالأمور التالية:

 - * القتل.
 - * الاعتقال التعسفي.
 - * التعذيب وسوء المعاملة.

على كل شخص تضرر من الانتهاكات السالفة أن يتقدم بشكوى شخصية أو بواسطة قريب أو وكيل، الى اللجنة الفلسطينية المستقلة للتحقيق وفقاً لتقرير غولدمستون، سواء بالتوجه المباشر الى مقر اللجنة، لتعبئة النماذج الخاصة بذلك، أو عبر ارسال الشكوى بالفاكس أو الاتصال الهاتفي مع طاقم اللجنة أبو عبر البريد الالكتروني.

تقدم الشكاوى في مقر اللجنة، من كافة محافظات الوطن في الضفة الغربية وقطاع غزة، لغاية ٢٠١٠/٤/٢٠ م.

عنوان اللجنة: مدينة البيرة، شارع القدس (البلدية)، بناهة أبراج الوطنية،
لطاقب الأرضي، هاتف رقم ٠٢٢٤١٠٧٢١ أو ٠٢٢٤١٠٨٢٢. فا كس رقم ٠٢٢٤١٠٧٢٢
البريد الالكتروني:

Copie de l'annonce mise dans la presse par la Commission en avril 2010

Annexe 9

Conférence et communiqué de presse de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne

Centre d'information Wattan

Lors d'une conférence de presse tenue au siège du Centre d'information Wattan, la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone a présenté son programme de travail.

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne a tenu, au siège du Centre d'information Wattan, une conférence de presse en présence de son président, M. Issa Abu Sharar, et de deux de ses membres, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser al-Amuri. Cette conférence avait pour but de rendre compte au public palestinien des travaux que la Commission avait accomplis depuis sa création par décret présidentiel, le 25 janvier 2010.

Le juge Issa Abu Sharar, Président de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, a réaffirmé l'indépendance, le professionnalisme et l'impartialité de cette instance et souligné que celle-ci rejetait toute forme d'ingérence dans ses travaux ou toute tentative de pression. Il a aussi précisé que la Commission était habilitée, en vertu de son mandat, à recueillir les plaintes et les témoignages de toutes les victimes de violations relevant de son domaine de compétence et à entendre tous les responsables palestiniens impliqués dans ces violations.

M. Abu Sharar a ajouté que les enquêtes seraient axées sur les violations commises par des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, notamment les meurtres, les emprisonnements arbitraires, les actes de torture, les atteintes à la liberté d'association et à la liberté de rassemblement pacifique, et les discriminations liées aux nominations et licenciements de fonctionnaires basées sur des considérations politiques.

M. Abu Sharar a aussi indiqué que, depuis sa création, la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne avait toujours eu le souhait de se rendre dans la bande de Gaza afin d'établir un rapport traitant de la situation palestinienne dans sa totalité, comme le demandait l'Organisation des Nations Unies. À ce propos, il a souligné que le mandat de la Commission s'étendait à tout le territoire palestinien, que cette dernière était une instance indépendante qui se tenait loin des défis et des divisions politiques, et qu'un échec de sa part aurait des conséquences préjudiciables sur les Palestiniens, voire pourrait conduire à la création d'une commission d'enquête internationale.

En outre, M. Abu Sharar a invité toutes les victimes de violations, tant en Cisjordanie que dans la bande de Gaza, à porter plainte devant la Commission, soulignant que tous les dossiers seraient traités de manière confidentielle et que la Commission assurerait la protection des informateurs et des victimes. En outre, il a rendu hommage aux institutions de défense des droits de l'homme, en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, qui avaient coopéré avec la Commission en lui communiquant des données et des rapports relatifs à la situation des droits de l'homme durant la période couverte par son mandat.

En conclusion, M. Abu Sharar a réaffirmé que la Commission s'acquitterait de son mandat en toute neutralité et objectivité et qu'à cet effet, elle se fonderait sur les références juridiques que sont le droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme, le droit humanitaire international, la Loi fondamentale palestinienne et d'autres textes de loi en vigueur en Palestine.

Centre d'information Wattan – Al-Maad Street, Ramallah, Palestine – P.O. Box 859, Ramallah – Téléphone : 02 2980053/02 2987412 – Télécopie : 02 2959253 – Adresse électronique : Wattanmediacenter@wattan.tv

Centre d'information Wattan

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone informe les organisations de la société civile qu'elle est prête à recueillir des plaintes.

Donnant suite à la recommandation qu'elle a formulée à sa treizième réunion, tenue en son siège à Ramallah, le 12 avril 2010, la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone, a adressé aux organisations de la société civile qui traitent des violations des droits de l'homme des lettres dans lesquelles elle leur demande d'annoncer sur la page d'accueil de leur site Web qu'elle est prête à recueillir des plaintes au sujet de ces violations.

Centre d'information Wattan – Al-Maad Street, Ramallah, Palestine – P.O. Box 859, Ramallah – Téléphone : 022980053/02 2987412 – Télécopie : 02 2959253 – Adresse électronique : Wattanmediacenter@wattan.tv

Le 7 avril 2010

Communiqué de presse

Le 25 janvier 2010, S. E. le Président Mahmoud Abbas a promulgué un décret portant création d'une commission indépendante d'enquête comme suite au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'ONU sur le conflit de Gaza (rapport Goldstone), en application de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, dans laquelle celle-ci demande instamment aux parties concernées de créer des commissions nationales chargées d'enquêter sur les violations qui leur sont imputées.

En réponse à cette demande, le Président palestinien a créé la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne ainsi composée :

Juge Issa Abu Sharar (Président)
Juge Zuhair al-Surani (membre)
Juge Ghassan Farmand (membre)
M. Yasser al-Amuri (membre)
M. Nasser al-Rayyes (membre)

La Commission s'est attachée à définir les tâches et le mandat dont elle devait s'acquitter en application du rapport Goldstone et qui consistent à enquêter sur les violations suivantes réputées avoir été commises en Cisjordanie :

- Arrestations arbitraires et tortures;
- Atteintes à la liberté d'association, mesures prenant pour cibles les organisations de la société civile et visant à empêcher ces dernières de faire leur travail, non-respect des décisions des tribunaux concernant ces organisations;
- Atteintes à la liberté de la presse;
- Atteintes à la liberté de rassemblement pacifique;
- Discrimination fondée sur des motifs politiques et consistant à recruter ou à licencier des fonctionnaires, en fonction de leur appartenance politique.

En outre, la Commission enquêtera sur les violations ci-après dont le rapport affirme qu'elles ont été commises dans la bande de Gaza :

- Meurtres;
- Arrestations arbitraires;
- Torture et mauvais traitements.

En outre, la Commission enquêtera sur les violations du droit international humanitaire qui, selon le rapport, auraient été commises par les Palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza après l'agression israélienne contre ce territoire.

Aussitôt après sa création, la Commission s'est réunie pour examiner ses attributions et son mandat, ainsi que les moyens nécessaires à l'accomplissement de sa tâche, considérant qu'il lui fallait commencer par se doter d'un statut fondé sur les normes et les principes internationaux, notamment les dispositions du modèle de protocole des Nations Unies relatif aux commissions d'enquête nationales, qui visent à garantir l'objectivité, l'indépendance et l'impartialité de ce type d'instances.

Soucieux de garantir la transparence, la crédibilité et l'impartialité de la Commission, M. Nasser al-Rayyes, l'un des membres, s'est récusé, estimant que son appartenance à cette instance contrevenait aux règles du modèle de protocole des Nations Unies relatif aux commissions d'enquête nationales, plus particulièrement à la disposition stipulant qu'aucun membre de la Commission ne doit entretenir de liens étroits avec un individu, une entité gouvernementale, un parti politique ou une autre instance impliqués dans les violations présumées, ni avec une organisation ou un groupe associé à la victime. M. al-Rayyes a été conseiller juridique de l'association Al-Haq, une institution palestinienne de défense des droits de l'homme qui, non seulement surveille et atteste les atteintes à ses droits et libertés, mais a aussi été en relation avec plusieurs personnes et institutions dont les droits et les libertés ont été violés et dont elle a pris la défense. En outre, elle figure au nombre des institutions qui ont rencontré la Mission d'établissement des faits, présidée par le juge Goldstone, qui a interrogé son conseiller juridique sur la situation des droits de l'homme et des libertés dans le territoire palestinien occupé. La démission de M. al-Rayyes a été acceptée et la Commission a poursuivi ses travaux avec le restant de ses membres.

Après avoir élaboré son statut et défini la jurisprudence sur laquelle elle comptait s'appuyer, à savoir les dispositions et principes du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme, le droit humanitaire international, les dispositions de la loi fondamentale palestinienne et les législations pertinentes en vigueur en Palestine, la Commission a décidé de s'inspirer de la jurisprudence internationale dans ce domaine, en se penchant sur des expériences analogues. C'est ainsi qu'elle a effectué une visite privée au Caire afin d'y rencontrer M. Chérif Bassiouni, un éminent spécialiste du droit humanitaire international ayant présidé plusieurs commissions d'enquête dans l'ex-Yougoslavie, avec lequel elle a discuté de tous les détails liés à sa jurisprudence et des modalités d'exercice de son mandat, ainsi que des moyens de s'acquitter de sa mission dans la bande de Gaza.

En outre, lors de son séjour au Caire, la Commission a examiné avec M. Ahmed Ben Helli, le Secrétaire général adjoint de la Ligue des États arabes, les moyens de mener à bien sa mission dans la bande de Gaza. Elle devra opter pour une des trois options suivantes :

1. Elle serait autorisée à s'acquitter de son mandat dans la bande de Gaza, son statut stipulant clairement qu'elle doit œuvrer avec impartialité et professionnalisme, loin de toute considération politique;

2. Au cas où la première option – qui, à notre avis, est la plus professionnelle et la plus acceptable – serait rejetée, la Commission s'efforcerait de nommer un groupe de travail indépendant composé d'experts connus pour leur intégrité, leur professionnalisme et leur impartialité, qui serait chargé de s'acquitter de ses travaux dans la bande de Gaza. La Commission a proposé que ce groupe soit présidé par M. Bassiouni qui, en raison de son professionnalisme et de son expérience étendue de la question, jouit de la confiance des parties régionales et internationales et est reconnu par celles-ci;

3. La troisième option consisterait pour la Commission à confier à certaines institutions de la société civile palestinienne qui s'occupent de surveiller les violations et d'en établir l'existence, la charge d'enquêter sur les violations censées avoir été commises par des Palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza;

4. Au cas où toutes les options susmentionnées seraient rejetées, la Commission a proposé de rencontrer les institutions susmentionnées en Égypte afin d'entendre leur témoignage au sujet des violations des droits de l'homme que les Palestiniens auraient commises à Gaza et de s'entretenir avec des Palestiniens victimes de violations de cette nature.

La Commission n'ayant reçu aucune réponse aux propositions qu'elle avait formulées, elle a jugé nécessaire de démarrer ses travaux en se conformant aux plans et au calendrier suivants :

a) Le 4 avril 2010, elle a fait paraître dans la presse, pendant deux jours consécutifs, un communiqué dans lequel elle expliquait la nature de ses travaux et des violations sur lesquelles elle était chargée d'enquêter en Cisjordanie ainsi que dans la bande de Gaza. En outre, dans ses déclarations, elle a invité toutes les personnes qui avaient affirmé avoir été victimes de violations relevant de son domaine de compétence, aussi bien en Cisjordanie que dans la bande de Gaza, à élever des plaintes à ce sujet, en personne, ou au cas où cela leur serait impossible, par l'intermédiaire d'un proche ou d'une autre personne mandatée à cet effet. En outre, elle a décidé de donner aux personnes victimes de violations la possibilité d'adresser leurs plaintes par télécopie ou par courrier électronique, et ce pour leur faciliter la tâche et parce qu'elle était consciente des difficultés d'accès auxquelles elles pouvaient être confrontées;

b) La Commission a commencé par rassembler les rapports, communiqués et lettres portant sur des violations relevant de son domaine de compétence et émanant d'institutions qui s'occupent des droits de l'homme, et à en vérifier le contenu. En outre, elle a engagé toutes les institutions palestiniennes qui auraient recueilli de la documentation relative à ces violations à prendre contact avec elle de sorte qu'elle puisse prendre connaissance de tous ces éléments d'information.

- Après avoir recueilli les plaintes individuelles, au plus tard le 20 avril 2010, la Commission commencera à les examiner.
- Elle tiendra une réunion avec les associations palestiniennes qui s'occupent des droits de l'homme et avec les médias locaux afin d'examiner les déclarations et rapports que ceux-ci auront présentés concernant des violations imputées aux autorités, et pour entendre ce qu'ils ont à dire au sujet de certaines questions qui font l'objet d'enquêtes. En outre, elle procédera à l'audition des victimes qui feront leurs dépositions et décriront les faits auxquels elles ont été confrontées.
- Aussitôt que les auditions auront pris fin, la Commission s'entretiendra avec les autorités officielles palestiniennes des violations qui leur sont imputées et écoutera ce qu'elles ont à dire sur certains cas qui font l'objet d'une enquête.
- La Commission établira, en temps voulu, un projet de rapport faisant la synthèse des enquêtes qu'elle aura menées au sujet des violations censées avoir été commises par la partie palestinienne ainsi que des recommandations qu'elle juge appropriées.
- Après cela, elle remettra son rapport final aux instances compétentes.

Calendrier des activités de la Commission dans la bande de Gaza

- Vu qu'il lui est difficile d'avoir accès à la bande de Gaza et compte tenu des obstacles d'ordre politique qui pourraient l'empêcher de s'acquitter de son mandat dans la région, les membres de la Commission ont décidé avant d'établir un plan de travail et un échéancier aux fins de la conduite d'enquêtes sur les violations qu'auraient commises les autorités de la bande de Gaza, d'attendre que la Ligue des États arabes réponde à leur demande.

Annexe 10
Convocation adressée au Bloc de la réforme et du changement en vue de la tenue d'une réunion avec les membres de la Commission

Le 13 avril 2010

Les membres du Bloc de la réforme et du changement au Conseil législatif

Objet : Tenue d'une réunion avec les membres du Bloc de la réforme et du changement

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et, conformément aux recommandations issues de sa treizième réunion, vous convoque à une réunion, aux fins de coordonner ses travaux.

La Commission vous prie de prendre les dispositions nécessaires pour assister à cette réunion, qui aura lieu le jeudi 15 avril 2010, à 10 heures, en son siège.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 11
Lettre adressée au Secrétaire général du Conseil législatif sur la tenue d'une réunion avec les représentants des blocs et listes et les coordonnateurs des groupes parlementaires

Le 13 avril 2010

M. Ibrahim Khreisheh
Secrétaire général du Conseil législatif palestinien

Objet : Tenue d'une réunion avec les chefs des blocs parlementaires au Conseil législatif

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et, conformément aux recommandations issues de sa treizième réunion, demande de tenir une réunion avec des représentants des blocs et listes et des coordonnateurs des groupes parlementaires au Conseil législatif, aux fins de faciliter la coordination de ses travaux.

La Commission vous prie de prendre les dispositions nécessaires pour assister à cette réunion, qui aura lieu le dimanche 18 avril 2010, à midi, en son siège.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 12
Lettres adressées aux organisations ci-après, pour leur demander de diffuser l'avis de la Commission sur leurs sites Web

- Centre de santé mentale de Gaza
- Comité de défense des droits et des libertés
- Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme
- Croix-Rouge à Gaza
- Centre Al-Mizan des droits de l'homme
- Bureau des Nations Unies à Gaza
- Centre palestinien des droits de l'homme
- Association Al-Damir des droits de l'homme

Le 13 avril 2010

M. Eyad el-Sarraj
Centre de santé mentale de Gaza

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au siège du Centre, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 12 avril 2010

M. Adel Abu Jahal
Président du Comité de défense des droits et des libertés
Ordre des avocats palestinien

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et, se référant à l'objet susmentionné, vous serait reconnaissante de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au plus grand nombre possible d'avocats et autres, étant entendu qu'il y aura lieu de se conformer au texte dans sa teneur actuelle.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 13 avril 2010

M^{me} Randa Siniora
Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Madame,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au siège de la Commission indépendante, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 13 avril 2010

La Croix-Rouge à Gaza

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Mesdames, Messieurs,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au Centre de la Croix-Rouge, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 13 avril 2010

M. Issam Younes
Centre Al-Mizan

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au siège du Centre, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 13 avril 2010

M. Jamal Hamad
Bureau des Nations Unies à Gaza

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint dans les bureaux de l'Organisation, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 13 avril 2010

M. Iyad Alami
Centre palestinien des droits de l'homme

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au siège du Centre, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 13 avril 2010

M. Khalil Abou Shammala
Association Al-Damir des droits de l'homme

Objet : Diffusion de l'avis

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir diffuser l'avis ci-joint au siège de l'Association, ainsi que sur la page d'accueil de votre site Web.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 13
Lettre adressée par le Ministre de l'intérieur de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne, transmettant un rapport au sujet des allégations portées contre le Ministère de l'intérieur

Organisation de libération de la Palestine
Autorité nationale palestinienne
Le Ministre de l'intérieur

Le 15 avril 2010

Le juge Issa Abu Sharar
Président de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone

Monsieur le juge,

D'ordre du Président Abu Mazen, je vous fais tenir ci-joint le rapport du Ministère de l'intérieur au sujet des allégations portées contre le Ministère de l'intérieur de l'Autorité nationale palestinienne, qui figurent dans le rapport Goldstone.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Ministre de l'intérieur
(Signé) Saïd Abu Ali

[Ajouté à la main]

Comme suite à la décision de la Commission, nous confirmons que la lettre et le rapport ci-joint font partie des documents de la Commission.

[Signature illisible]

Le 20 avril 2010

Annexe 14
Lettre adressée à la Fondation Samir Kassir pour la prier de remettre à la Commission des documents à l'appui des atteintes à la liberté de la presse

Réf. : ICGR/5/57/2010

Le 18 avril 2010

Madame Gisèle Khoury
Présidente du Conseil d'administration de la Fondation Samir Kassir

Madame,

Le 25 janvier 2010, en application de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale, S. E. M. le Président Mahmoud Abbas a décrété la création de la Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne comme suite au rapport Goldstone, en vue d'enquêter sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, notamment de la liberté de la presse, qui auraient été commises en Cisjordanie et à Gaza.

Au vu de l'importance que nous accordons à l'enquête sur les atteintes à la liberté de la presse qui auraient été commises par les autorités palestiniennes dans les territoires occupés en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, nous vous serions reconnaissants d'avoir l'obligeance de nous faire tenir tous les rapports et communiqués publiés par votre Fondation sur la liberté dont a bénéficié la presse dans les territoires palestiniens, du 1^{er} janvier 2009 à ce jour. Nous vous prions de noter que dans un souci de transparence, de professionnalisme et d'impartialité, le rapport de la Commission citera dans son rapport votre Fondation comme la source de toutes les citations ou les données qu'elle obtiendra à partir de vos rapports et communiqués.

Pour finir, je tiens à vous exprimer notre vive appréciation pour votre rôle et votre action de pionnière sur le plan de la défense de la liberté de la presse et de la diffusion de la démocratie dans le monde arabe. Nous formulons le vœu que votre fondation continue de travailler en collaboration et coordination avec la Commission pour lui permettre de mener sa tâche à bien.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 15
Lettre à la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme au sujet de la coordination des audiences des victimes et des témoins de violations impliquant assassinats, arrestations et torture dans la bande de Gaza, audiences qui auront lieu par visioconférence dans les bureaux de la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme, à Ramallah et à Gaza

Le 28 avril 2010

Madame Randa Siniora
Directrice exécutive
Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme

Objet : Tenue d'audiences simultanément en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza

Madame,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous informe qu'elle tiendra des audiences au cours de la première semaine du mois de mai 2010 avec un groupe choisi de personnes qui ont été victimes de violations des droits de l'homme dans la bande de Gaza.

Au vu de l'impartialité et de la crédibilité de la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme, de son attachement aux normes et autres garanties internationales relatives à la protection des personnes qui sont victimes de violations et au vu de l'impossibilité pour elle de se rendre dans la bande de Gaza, la Commission d'enquête souhaite que ces séances aient lieu simultanément par visioconférence dans les bureaux de la Commission indépendante des droits de l'homme, respectivement à Gaza et à Ramallah, pour pouvoir auditionner les victimes de violations.

Nous vous serions reconnaissants de bien vouloir nous répondre le plus rapidement possible, afin que notre équipe administrative puisse établir un calendrier de réunions, en fonction de vos horaires de travail et de vos obligations.

Je tiens enfin à vous exprimer notre vive appréciation pour votre rôle et votre action de pionnière dans la défense de la liberté de la presse et la diffusion de la démocratie dans le monde arabe. Nous formulons le vœu que votre fondation continue de travailler en collaboration et coordination avec la Commission pour lui permettre de mener sa tâche à bien.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 16
Lettre adressée au Chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique, en vue de l'obtention d'une copie des instructions en matière de sécurité données par le Conseil des ministres, et la suite qui y a été donnée

Réf. : ICGR/12/76/2010

Le 2 mai 2010

Monsieur Hussein el-Araj
Chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique

Objet : Remise à la Commission d'une copie de la décision relative au contrôle de sécurité

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et vous demande de bien vouloir lui communiquer une copie des instructions transmises au Conseil général de la fonction publique par le Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres, sachant que le contrôle de sécurité est un élément capital dans la procédure de nomination des fonctionnaires, en application de la décision n° 18, prise le 9 septembre 2007 par le Conseil des ministres.

Je vous remercie de votre coopération et vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Autorité nationale palestinienne
Conseil général de la fonction publique

Le 6 mai 2010

Le juge Issa Abu Sharar,
Président de la Commission d'enquête indépendante
palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone

Objet : Remise à la Commission d'une copie de la décision relative au contrôle de sécurité

Monsieur le juge,

Le Conseil général de la fonction publique vous présente ses compliments et, en référence à votre lettre datée du 2 mai 2010, dans laquelle vous formulez le souhait d'obtenir une copie des instructions transmises au Conseil général de la fonction publique par le Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres, étant donné que le contrôle de sécurité est un élément capital de la procédure de nomination des fonctionnaires, nous vous communiquons ci-joint une copie de la lettre datée du 9 septembre 2007 que nous avons reçue du Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres, en référence à l'objet susmentionné.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique
(Signé) Hussein al-Araj

Autorité nationale palestinienne
Conseil des ministres
Secrétariat du Conseil des ministres

Réf. : 2007/CSCM/2115

Le 9 septembre 2009

Monsieur Jihad Hamdan
Chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique

Objet : Mesures de sécurité

Monsieur,

Le Secrétariat du Conseil des ministres vous présente ses compliments et vous fait part de la décision n° 18 prise par le Conseil des ministres à sa séance hebdomadaire tenue le 3 septembre 2007, sachant que le contrôle de sécurité est un élément capital de la procédure de nomination. Le Conseil général de la fonction publique est chargé de la procédure de nomination et doit par conséquent se mettre en contact avec les services de sécurité à cet égard.

Je vous prie de prendre les mesures nécessaires à l'application de cette décision.

Je vous remercie de votre coopération et vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres,
Chef du cabinet du Premier Ministre
(Signé) Saadi al-Krunz

Annexe 17
Lettre adressée au Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres, le priant de communiquer à la Commission une copie des décisions prises en ce qui concerne la sécurité des fonctionnaires, et la suite qui y a été donnée

Réf. : ICGR/2/75/2010

Le 2 mai 2010

Monsieur Naim Abu Hommos
Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres palestinien

Objet : Demande de copies des décisions prises par le Conseil des ministres relatives aux travaux de la Commission

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone présente ses compliments et vous prie de bien vouloir lui faire tenir une copie de la décision n° 18, adoptée par le Conseil des ministres au cours de sa séance tenue le 9 septembre 2007, sachant que le contrôle de sécurité est un élément capital de la procédure de nomination des fonctionnaires. Nous vous prions de bien vouloir fournir à la Commission une copie des instructions données par le Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres, en application de cette décision.

Je vous remercie de votre collaboration et de votre intérêt pour aider la Commission à s'acquitter de ses tâches.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Autorité nationale palestinienne
Conseil des ministres
Secrétariat du Conseil des ministres

Réf. : CSCM/2010/1000

Le 11 mai 2010

Monsieur Issa Abu Sharar
Président de la Commission d'enquête indépendante
palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone

Objet : Mesures de sécurité

Monsieur,

Le Secrétariat du Conseil des ministres vous présente ses compliments et, en référence à votre lettre datée du 2 mai 2010 dans laquelle vous indiquez votre souhait d'obtenir une copie de la décision du Conseil des ministres au sujet de la sécurité, nous tenons à préciser qu'au cours de sa 18^e séance, tenue le 9 septembre 2007, le Conseil des ministres a estimé que les mesures de contrôle de sécurité étaient un élément capital de la procédure de nomination, conformément à la loi sur la fonction publique. Il a jugé que cette mesure était normale et a constaté qu'elle était appliquée dans de nombreux pays, eu égard à la nature sensible de l'activité des institutions publiques et au souhait du Gouvernement de préserver la sécurité et la sûreté de ces institutions, aux fins de fournir les meilleures prestations possibles.

Je vous remercie de votre compréhension et de votre collaboration.

Le Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres
(Signé) Naim Abu Hommos

Autorité nationale palestinienne
Conseil des ministres
Secrétariat du Conseil des ministres

Réf. : 2007/CSCM/2115

Le 9 septembre 2009

Monsieur Jihad Hamdan
Chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique

Objet : Applications des mesures de sécurité

Monsieur,

Le Secrétariat du Conseil des ministres vous présente ses compliments et vous communique la décision du Conseil des ministres adoptée au cours de sa 18^e séance hebdomadaire, qui s'est tenue le 3 septembre 2007, d'après laquelle un contrôle de sécurité doit avoir lieu dans le cadre de la procédure de nomination. Le chef du Conseil général de la fonction publique est chargé de cette procédure et doit par conséquent se mettre en contact avec les services de sécurité à cet égard.

Je vous prie de prendre les mesures nécessaires à l'application de cette décision.

Je vous remercie de votre collaboration et vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Secrétaire général du Conseil des ministres,
Chef du Cabinet du Premier Ministre
(Signé) Saadi al-Krunz

Annexe 18
Invitation adressée aux organisations de la société civile en Cisjordanie pour assister aux audiences au siège de la Commission

- Réseau des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes
- Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l’homme
- Association Al-Haq
- Centre de la démocratie et des droits des travailleurs
- Centre de Jérusalem pour l’aide juridique et les droits de l’homme
- Association Al-Damir
- Centre de soins et de réadaptation des victimes de la torture

Le 17 mai 2010

Comité de coordination du Réseau des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des représentants du Réseau au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Mesdames et Messieurs,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre leurs déclarations sur les violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre organisation à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestations, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à envoyer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 17 mai 2010

M^{me} Randa Siniora
Directrice générale de la Commission palestinienne indépendante des droits de l'homme

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des membres de la Commission palestinienne indépendante au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Madame,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre leurs déclarations sur les violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre Commission à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestation, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à déléguer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter, Madame, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 17 mai 2010

M. Sha'wan Jabarin
Directeur général de l'association Al-Haq

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des membres de l'association au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre leurs déclarations sur les violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre association à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestation, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à déléguer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter, Monsieur, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 17 mai 2010

M. Hassan Barghouti
Directeur général du Centre de la démocratie et des droits des travailleurs

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des membres du Centre au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre leurs déclarations sur les violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre Centre à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestation, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à déléguer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter, Monsieur, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 17 mai 2010

M. Issam Aruri
Directeur général du Centre de Jérusalem pour l'aide juridique
et les droits de l'homme

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des membres du Centre au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre leurs déclarations sur les violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre Centre à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestation, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à déléguer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter, Monsieur, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 17 mai 2010

M^{me} Sahar Francis
Directrice générale de l'Association Al-Damir

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des membres de l'Association au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Madame,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre leurs déclarations sur les violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre association à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestation, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à déléguer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter, Madame, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Le 17 mai 2010

M. Mahmoud Sahwil

Directeur général du Centre de soins et de réadaptation des victimes de la torture

Objet : Tenue d'une audience avec des membres du Centre, au sujet de violations des droits de l'homme

Monsieur,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Ayant conclu ses audiences avec des plaignants qui ont fait état de violations de leurs droits et de leurs libertés, qui entrent dans le cadre de son mandat, la Commission estime nécessaire, pour poursuivre son enquête, de tenir des audiences avec des représentants des organisations de la société civile, afin d'entendre ce qu'elles ont à dire des violations qui auraient été commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie.

Au regard de l'importance qu'accorde votre Centre à la surveillance et à la collecte d'éléments à l'appui des cas d'arrestation, de torture, de licenciement et d'atteinte à la liberté de réunion et d'association pacifiques, la Commission vous invite à déléguer un représentant en son siège le jeudi 20 mai 2010 à 10 heures, pour entendre votre avis à cet égard. Nous espérons également obtenir de vous des copies de toute correspondance officielle relative à ces violations, ainsi que de la suite qui y a été donnée par les parties intéressées.

Je vous prie d'accepter, Monsieur, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Annexe 19
Note verbale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies relative à la date limite de présentation du rapport

Mission permanente d'observation de la Palestine auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies

New York, le 4 juin 2010

Urgent et important

S. E. M. Salam Fayadh
Premier Ministre

J'ai l'honneur de vous faire tenir ci-joint la note verbale du Secrétariat de l'ONU en date du 27 mai 2010 relative à la résolution 64/254 de l'Assemblée générale, en date du 26 février 2010, intitulée : « Deuxième suite donnée au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza ». Dans cette note, le Secrétariat de l'ONU demande que lui soient présentées par écrit, le 12 juillet 2010 au plus tard, les mesures que la partie palestinienne a prises ou envisage de prendre pour procéder à une enquête indépendante et crédible selon les normes internationales sur les violations graves du droit international humanitaire et du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme mentionnées par la Mission d'établissement des faits dans son rapport. Afin que les responsabilités soient établies et que justice soit faite et pour que le Secrétaire général de l'ONU puisse établir son rapport sur l'application de la résolution susmentionnée, conformément au paragraphe 5 de celle-ci, je vous saurais gré de bien vouloir donner les instructions et prendre les mesures nécessaires afin que nous puissions répondre à la demande du Secrétariat dans le délai imparti.

Je vous prie d'agréer, Excellence, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

L'Ambassadeur,
Observateur permanent (Signé) Riyadh Mansour

– Transmis au Ministre des affaires étrangères

Pièce jointe

Note verbale du Secrétariat de l'ONU

Le 27 mai 2010

Le Secrétariat de l'Organisation des Nations Unies présente ses compliments à la Mission permanente d'observation de la Palestine auprès de l'Organisation et a l'honneur de se référer à la résolution 64/254 de l'Assemblée générale en date du 26 février 2010, intitulée : « Deuxième suite donnée au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza ».

Aux termes du paragraphe 2 de cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale :

« Demande de nouveau au Gouvernement israélien de procéder à des investigations indépendantes, crédibles et conformes aux normes internationales sur les graves violations du droit international humanitaire et des droits de l'homme qui ont été signalées par la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, afin que les responsabilités soient établies et que justice soit faite ».

Aux termes du paragraphe 3 de cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale :

« Demande de nouveau instamment que la partie palestinienne procède à des investigations indépendantes, crédibles et conformes aux normes internationales sur les graves violations du droit international humanitaire et des droits de l'homme qui ont été signalées par la Mission d'établissement des faits, afin que les responsabilités soient établies et que justice soit faite ».

Aux termes du paragraphe 4 de cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale :

« Recommande de nouveau que le Gouvernement suisse, en sa qualité de dépositaire de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre², convoque à nouveau, au plus tôt, une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève sur les mesures à prendre pour imposer la Convention dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et la faire respecter, conformément à l'article premier, en gardant à l'esprit la convocation d'une conférence de ce type et la déclaration adoptée le 15 juillet 1999, ainsi que la reprise de cette conférence et la déclaration adoptée le 5 décembre 2001 ».

Aux termes du paragraphe 5 de cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale :

« Prie le Secrétaire général de lui présenter, dans un délai de cinq mois, un rapport sur l'application de la présente résolution afin de déterminer quelles nouvelles mesures doivent être prises, le cas échéant, par les organes et organismes compétents de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dont le Conseil de sécurité ».

Afin d'aider le Secrétaire général à s'acquitter de la mission qui lui est confiée en vertu du paragraphe qui précède, le Secrétariat demande par la présente à la Mission permanente d'observation de lui fournir, le 12 juillet 2010 au plus tard, des informations écrites concernant les mesures que la partie palestinienne aurait prises, ou qu'elle serait en train de prendre, comme suite aux demandes pressantes formulées par l'Assemblée générale au paragraphe 3 de sa résolution.

Le Secrétariat adresse à la Mission permanente d'Israël et à la Mission permanente de la Suisse auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies des notes verbales similaires leur demandant de lui fournir par écrit des renseignements sur les mesures prises pour donner suite à la demande et à la recommandation formulées par l'Assemblée générale aux paragraphes 2 et 4, respectivement de sa résolution.

Le Secrétariat de l'Organisation des Nations Unies saisit cette occasion pour exprimer à la Mission permanente d'observation de la Palestine auprès de l'Organisation les assurances de sa très haute considération.

Annexe 20
Invitation à assister à une audition adressée à la Directrice générale des relations publiques et des associations au Ministère de l'intérieur

Le 7 juin 2010

M^{me} Fadwa Shaer
Directrice générale des relations publiques et des associations
Ministère de l'intérieur

Objet : Présence à une audition

Madame,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et a l'honneur de se référer au décret publié le 25 janvier 2010 par le Président palestinien – en application de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale – portant création d'une commission indépendante chargée du suivi du rapport susmentionné, dans le but d'enquêter sur les contraventions et violations mentionnées dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits présidée par le juge Richard Goldstone.

Cette commission, composée du juge Issa Abu Sharar, Président, du juge Zuheir Sourani, de M. Ghassan Farmand et de M. Yasser Amouri, a été créée afin d'enquêter sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza.

La Commission s'acquittera de son mandat d'enquête sur les violations commises dans de nombreux domaines par des organismes palestiniens en Cisjordanie, notamment les violations de la liberté de créer des associations, le ciblage d'organisations non gouvernementales, les entraves à leurs activités et le refus d'exécuter les décisions de justice les concernant.

Considérant que la Commission a reçu un certain nombre de plaintes faisant état de violations par le Ministère du droit de créer des associations et qu'elle a achevé l'audition des plaignants et des organisations de la société civile à ce sujet, nous espérons que, par souci d'assurer la réussite des travaux de la Commission et la réalisation de son objectif, vous vous présenterez au siège de la Commission le mardi 8 juin 2010 à 10 h 30 afin de permettre à la Commission d'entendre vos observations sur les allégations de violations qui auraient été commises par le Ministère.

Je vous prie d'agréer, Madame, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Pour annuler ou modifier ce rendez-vous, prière de contacter M^{me} Maram Masruji (tél. : 059 893 4224).

Annexe 21
Invitation à assister à une audition adressée au Ministre de l'intérieur

Le 8 juin 2010

M. Said Abu Ali
Ministre de l'intérieur

Objet : Organisation d'une audition au siège de la Commission

Monsieur le Ministre,

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments et a l'honneur de se référer au décret publié le 25 janvier 2010 par le Président palestinien – en application de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale – portant création d'une commission indépendante chargée du suivi du rapport susmentionné, dans le but d'enquêter sur les contraventions et violations mentionnées dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits présidée par le juge Richard Goldstone.

Cette commission, composée du juge Issa Abu Sharar, Président, du juge Zuheir Sourani, de M. Ghassan Farmand et de M. Yasser Amouri, a été créée afin d'enquêter sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait dans la bande de Gaza.

La Commission s'acquittera de son mandat d'enquête sur les violations commises dans de nombreux domaines par des organismes palestiniens en Cisjordanie, notamment les violations de la liberté de créer des associations, le ciblage d'organisations non gouvernementales, les entraves à leurs activités et le refus d'exécuter les décisions de justice les concernant et la violation de la liberté de la presse et du droit de réunion pacifique.

Considérant que la Commission a reçu un certain nombre de plaintes et entendu les déclarations de personnes et d'organisations concernant la violation par les services de sécurité relevant du Ministère des droits des détenus, dont certains ont été soumis à la torture, et la violation par le Département des organisations non gouvernementales du droit de créer des associations, nous espérons que, par souci d'assurer la réussite des travaux de la Commission et la réalisation de son objectif, vous accepterez de rencontrer les membres de la Commission, au siège de celle-ci, à un moment à convenir avec vous, afin de permettre à la Commission d'entendre vos observations sur les allégations de violations qui auraient été commises par le Ministère.

Je vous prie d'agréer, Monsieur le Ministre, les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Pour annuler ou modifier ce rendez-vous, prière de contacter M^{me} Maram Masruji (tél. : 059 893 4224).

Annexe 22
Lettre adressée au Gouverneur de l'Autorité monétaire palestinienne, le priant de communiquer à la Commission le cadre juridique régissant l'ouverture de comptes bancaires pour les associations, et réponse à cette lettre

Le 14 juin 2010

S. E. M. Jihad al Wazir
Gouverneur de l'Autorité monétaire palestinienne

Objet : Demande de fourniture à la Commission d'une copie de la décision de l'Autorité monétaire palestinienne faisant obligation aux associations d'obtenir l'accord préalable du Ministère de l'intérieur avant l'ouverture de comptes bancaires

La Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone vous présente ses compliments. Comme vous devez le savoir, en application de la résolution 64/10 de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, le Président palestinien a pris le 25 janvier 2010 un décret portant création d'une Commission d'enquête indépendante palestinienne, comme suite au rapport Goldstone, aux fins d'enquêter sur les transgressions et les violations dont fait état le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, qui était présidée par le juge Richard Goldstone.

La Commission, présidée par le juge Issa Abu Sharar et qui comprend les membres suivants : le juge Zouheir Al-Surani, M. Ghassan Farmand et M. Yasser Al-Amouri, a été chargée d'enquêter sur les violations des droits de l'homme et des libertés commises par l'Autorité nationale palestinienne en Cisjordanie et par l'autorité de fait à Gaza.

La Commission enquêtera dans le cadre de son mandat sur les violations commises par les autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie dans plusieurs domaines, notamment les atteintes à la liberté de former des associations, ce qui est ressorti clairement des déclarations des personnes et des membres des organisations qu'elle a auditionnés. Lorsque nous avons interrogé le Directeur général des relations publiques et des affaires des ONG au Ministère de l'intérieur sur certaines questions liées notamment à l'obligation faite aux associations d'obtenir son accord préalable avant l'ouverture de comptes bancaires, il a répondu que cette formalité avait été imposée à la suite d'une décision de l'Autorité monétaire, qui l'en avait notifié officiellement.

Nous vous prions de bien vouloir nous fournir une copie de la décision susmentionnée, la Commission souhaitant obtenir de l'Autorité monétaire une explication au sujet du fondement juridique de cette procédure, s'il y en a un.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission
d'enquête indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
(Signé) Issa Abu Sharar

Autorité monétaire palestinienne

Le 22 juin 2010

Monsieur le juge Issa Abu Sharar
Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne
créée comme suite au rapport Goldstone
Ramallah (Palestine)

Objet : Procédures relatives à l'ouverture de comptes bancaires par les associations

Monsieur,

Me référant à l'objet susmentionné et à votre lettre n° 1CGR/12/111/2010 datée du 4 juin 2010, dans laquelle vous demandez à la Commission une copie de la décision de l'Autorité monétaire relative à l'obligation faite aux associations d'obtenir l'accord préalable du Ministère de l'intérieur avant l'ouverture de comptes bancaires, je tiens à vous préciser ce qui suit :

1. Les procédures liées à l'ouverture de comptes bancaires pour l'ensemble des secteurs sont régies par la directive n° 9 de 2009 du 24 décembre 2009, notamment par la clause 8/1/5 relative à l'ouverture de comptes par les associations, conformément à la loi sur les activités bancaires. Il faut en effet l'accord préalable du Ministère de l'intérieur ou du travail, selon qu'il convient, dans le cadre de la réglementation des relations entre les banques et les autorités bancaires, conformément aux dispositions de la loi sur la lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent;

2. Pour ouvrir un compte bancaire, les associations sont tenues d'obtenir l'accord du Ministère de l'intérieur ou du travail, pour les raisons suivantes :

a) Veiller à ce que l'enregistrement de l'association soit toujours valable, qu'elle n'a pas été radiée, que ses statuts n'ont pas été modifiés, d'autant que l'ouverture d'un compte bancaire a lieu quelque temps après l'enregistrement de l'association;

b) S'assurer de l'exactitude des noms des personnes qui ont le pouvoir de signer au nom de l'association et qui ont été agréées par le Ministère, déterminer s'il y a lieu d'introduire des changements et vérifier les limites du pouvoir de signature.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

L'Autorité monétaire palestinienne
[Signatures illisibles]

Commission de lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent Service de suivi financier Palestine

N° NALC/121/7/2010

Le 6 juillet 2010

Monsieur le juge Issa Abu Sharar
Président de la Commission d'enquête
indépendante palestinienne créée
comme suite au rapport Goldstone
Ramallah (Palestine)

Objet : Le cadre juridique

Monsieur,

La Commission nationale de lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent vous présente ses compliments et, après l'examen de votre lettre n° ICGR/12/111/2010 du 14 juin 2010, dans laquelle vous vous interrogez sur le cadre juridique régissant l'obtention par les associations d'un accord préalable à l'ouverture de comptes bancaires, tient à vous préciser ce qui suit :

La Loi fondamentale garantit et protège les libertés publiques et les dispositions des législations régissant les droits et obligations des personnes physiques ou morales, ce qui permet d'assurer une stabilité juridique et de concrétiser la notion de cadre juridique régissant les relations dans la société.

Le crime de blanchiment d'argent transcende les frontières, ce qui a poussé la communauté internationale à mettre en place des normes internationales en vue de lutter contre ce crime et de protéger la société de ses effets néfastes. « Connaître son client » est un premier pas dans la lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent et le renforcement de la transparence au début de toute opération bancaire avec un client, qu'il s'agisse d'une personne physique ou morale. Le premier paragraphe de l'article 5 de la loi sur la lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent confère aux autorités compétentes le pouvoir d'enquêter sur le degré de transparence de la personne morale qui s'est enregistrée.

Par conséquent, aux fins d'encourager la transparence, notamment dans le secteur bancaire et conformément aux principes de la jurisprudence et de la règle selon laquelle le champ d'application des dispositions à caractère général est modifié ou limité par des dispositions à caractère spécial, l'article 6 de la loi sur la lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent (loi n° 9 de 2007) dispose que les institutions financières doivent connaître leurs clients et enquêter sur eux, qu'il s'agisse de personnes physiques ou morales, grâce aux données ou documents officiels. Cette obligation figure en détail dans l'instruction n° 1 de 2009 de la Commission nationale de lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent, qui énonce les mesures à adopter s'agissant des personnes physiques ou morales, notamment l'obtention d'une lettre du ministère compétent qui précise les noms des personnes habilitées à signer au nom de l'association, pour veiller à ce qu'un organe officiel reconnu et digne de confiance se porte garant d'elles. Cette mesure est conforme aux dispositions de la loi, outre le fait que l'article 13 de la même loi confère aux autorités de contrôle – dont l'Autorité monétaire palestinienne fait partie, conformément à la loi – des pouvoirs de réglementation pour donner des instructions sur les règles d'identification et de vérification des personnes physiques ou morales.

Je vous prie d'accepter les assurances de ma très haute considération.

Le Président de la Commission nationale de lutte contre le blanchiment d'argent (Signé) Jihad al-Wazir

Annexe III

Note verbale, datée du 12 juillet 2010, adressée au Secrétariat par la Mission permanente de la Suisse auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies

La Mission permanente de la Suisse auprès des Nations Unies présente ses compliments au Secrétariat des Nations Unies et a l'honneur de se référer à sa note du 27 mai 2010 priant la Mission de faire support sur les démarches entreprises par la Suisse en application du paragraphe 4 de la résolution 64/254 de l'Assemblée générale, en date du 26 février 2010, intitulée « Deuxième suite donnée au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza ».

La Mission a l'honneur de transmettre son rapport au Secrétariat en pièce jointe dans les délais qui lui ont été impartis.

Appendice

État des entretiens sur le suivi du paragraphe 4 de la résolution 64/254 de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies

1. Le 26 février 2010, l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a adopté la résolution 64/254 intitulée « Deuxième suite donnée au rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza », dont le paragraphe 4 « Recommande de nouveau que le Gouvernement suisse, en sa qualité de dépositaire de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, convoque à nouveau, au plus tôt, une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève sur les mesures à prendre pour imposer la Convention dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et la faire respecter, conformément à l'article premier, en gardant à l'esprit la convocation d'une conférence de ce type et la déclaration adoptée le 15 juillet 1999, ainsi que la reprise de cette conférence et la déclaration adoptée le 5 décembre 2001 ».

2. La Suisse avait reçu une première recommandation de l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies le 5 novembre 2009 par la résolution 64/10. Faisant suite à cette recommandation, la Suisse, en qualité de dépositaire des Conventions de Genève de 1949, avait mené une ronde de consultations à Genève en décembre 2009. Le résultat de cette ronde de consultations figure en annexe du rapport du Secrétaire général de l'Organisation des Nations Unies du 4 février 2010 (A/64/651). Ces consultations préliminaires auprès d'un nombre sélectionné d'acteurs n'avaient pas permis de dégager de tendance dominante en faveur ou contre l'organisation d'une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes, ni sur l'apport d'une nouvelle conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève pour les populations civiles concernées, à savoir quels résultats espérer pour quelles problématiques. La Suisse avait été encouragée à mener ses propres réflexions sur les possibles thèmes pouvant être abordés dans le cadre d'une telle conférence.

3. Afin de mettre en œuvre les recommandations de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies et de faire suite aux conclusions de cette ronde de consultations, la Suisse a nommé un ambassadeur en mission spéciale chargé spécifiquement de conduire ce processus. Elle a aussi mené des réflexions sur les sujets qui pourraient être abordés dans une conférence en gardant à l'esprit qu'une telle conférence doit être inclusive, constructive, consensuelle et promouvoir un résultat concret.

4. À l'issue de ses réflexions, la question de l'accès à Gaza est apparue comme un thème possible et la Suisse a ainsi développé un régime d'accès avec des spécialistes de la branche. Afin de présenter ce régime d'accès, la Suisse a mené des séries d'entretiens à New York, Washington et Bruxelles. Ce qui est ressorti de ces entretiens est que la question de la mise en place d'un régime d'accès à Gaza devait être séparée de celle d'une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes. L'urgence de la situation à Gaza demandait une réponse rapide de la part de la communauté internationale : par conséquent, une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes ne semblait pas être l'enceinte appropriée pour traiter de cette question. Il a aussi été relevé que les recommandations adressées à la Suisse par les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ne concernent pas uniquement la bande de Gaza mais l'ensemble du territoire palestinien occupé. Prenant en compte ces différentes préoccupations, la Suisse a continué ses réflexions et a identifié deux autres thèmes qui pourraient être traités dans le cadre d'une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes : l'opérationnalisation de l'article 1 commun aux Conventions de Genève et les questions juridiques liées aux situations d'occupation prolongée.

5. Afin de sonder les Hautes Parties contractantes et les autres parties intéressées sur ces thèmes, d'évaluer si leurs positions avaient évolué et pour les informer des démarches que la Suisse a entreprises depuis février 2010, la Suisse a décidé de mener une nouvelle série d'entretiens à Genève du 25 juin au 6 juillet 2010.

6. Lors de cette nouvelle série d'entretiens, la Suisse s'est entretenue avec les parties directement concernées, les parties intéressées de la région, les membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, les présidences sortante et entrante de l'Union européenne, les coordonnateurs des groupes régionaux ainsi qu'un certain nombre de Hautes Parties contractantes provenant de tous les groupes régionaux. Les organisations suivantes ont été informées : la Ligue des États arabes, l'Organisation de la conférence islamique, le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge et le Haut-Commissariat aux droits de l'homme.

7. Cette série d'entretiens a été conduite de manière informelle et orale. Lors des différents entretiens, la Suisse a rappelé qu'elle considère qu'une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes doit être inclusive, constructive, consensuelle et ne pas servir de plate-forme pour des accusations politiques. L'objectif d'une conférence doit être de promouvoir une amélioration concrète de la situation de la population civile et contribuer au renforcement du droit international humanitaire. La Suisse a fait part de ces réflexions tout en sollicitant les vues et idées des Hautes Parties contractantes et autres parties intéressées rencontrées. À l'issue de cette série d'entretiens, les positions peuvent se ranger en trois catégories :

- 1) Un premier groupe est favorable à la tenue d'une conférence;
- 2) Un deuxième groupe s'oppose fermement à une conférence;
- 3) Un troisième groupe, composé d'un nombre significatif des Hautes Parties contractantes consultées, n'a pas d'opinion arrêtée pour ou contre la tenue d'une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes mais a exprimé des réserves quant à la valeur ajoutée d'une nouvelle conférence et a des craintes qu'une conférence soit utilisée pour des motifs politiques.

8. En conclusion, cette série d'entretiens n'a, à nouveau, pas permis de dégager de tendance dominante en faveur ou contre l'organisation d'une conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes, ni de déterminer s'il y avait une position dominante au sein des Hautes Parties contractantes et des autres parties intéressées concernant la substance et les modalités d'une conférence. Par contre, cette série d'entretiens a permis de constater que le troisième groupe ne sera pas en mesure de prendre une décision sur la nécessité de convoquer ou non une conférence avant d'avoir les idées plus claires sur quels en pourraient être l'ordre du jour, les modalités et les résultats.

9. Afin de pouvoir mener des réflexions plus approfondies sur ces questions et d'engager un dialogue avec tous les acteurs concernés, la Suisse a été encouragée à continuer les discussions au sein d'un groupe informel de travail. La Suisse va donc prendre dans les meilleurs délais les dispositions nécessaires à cet effet.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
14 septembre 2022
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-dix-septième session

Point 69 de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits humains

Rapport de la Commission internationale indépendante chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par la Commission internationale indépendante chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël, conformément à la résolution S-30/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/77/150.

 Le présent document a été soumis après la date prévue afin que l'information la plus récente puisse y figurer.

Rapport de la Commission internationale indépendante chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le premier que la Commission internationale indépendante chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël soumet à l'Assemblée générale. La Commission y examine l'occupation par Israël de terres palestiniennes, la présumée annexion de jure de ces terres et leur annexion de facto manifeste, ainsi que les incidences de ces actes sur les droits humains des Palestiniens et leurs conséquences juridiques.

I. Introduction

1. Dans sa résolution S-30/1, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a décidé de créer une commission d'enquête internationale indépendante et permanente chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël sur toutes les violations présumées du droit international humanitaire et sur toutes les violations présumées du droit international des droits de l'homme et toutes les atteintes à ce droit qui auraient été commises jusqu'au 13 avril 2021 et depuis cette date.
2. La Commission se compose de trois membres : Navanethem Pillay (Afrique du Sud), Miloon Kothari (Inde) et Christopher Sidoti (Australie). Le secrétariat est assuré par le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme (HCDH).
3. Dans son premier rapport, présenté au Conseil des droits de l'homme à sa cinquantième session (A/HRC/50/21), la Commission a constaté l'existence de preuves crédibles qui indiquaient de manière convaincante qu'Israël n'avait aucune intention de mettre un terme à l'occupation, qu'il appliquait des politiques claires en vue de prendre le contrôle total du Territoire palestinien occupé et qu'il s'employait à en modifier la démographie en maintenant un environnement répressif pour les Palestiniens et un climat favorable aux colons israéliens. Dans le présent rapport, elle se penche sur ces éléments pour examiner les conséquences de l'occupation prolongée en matière de droits humains et dans le domaine juridique, s'agissant notamment de déterminer si Israël a, à toutes fins utiles, « annexé » tout ou partie du Territoire palestinien occupé dans le cadre de son régime d'occupation, et pour formuler des recommandations concrètes à l'intention des parties prenantes concernées.

II. Méthode et coopération

4. Dans sa résolution S-30/1, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a demandé à toutes les parties concernées de coopérer pleinement avec la commission d'enquête et de faciliter son accès. La Commission remercie le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine de sa coopération constante. Les autorités de facto de la bande de Gaza ont fait part à la Commission de leur volonté de coopérer. Le Gouvernement égyptien a de nouveau fait savoir à la Commission qu'il était disposé à coopérer avec elle, mais n'a pas encore donné suite à sa demande d'autorisation qu'elle lui a présentée pour accéder à la bande de Gaza par le point de passage de Rafah.
5. La Commission regrette le manque de coopération du Gouvernement israélien, qui a refusé de l'autoriser à entrer en Israël et à accéder au Territoire palestinien occupé, malgré la volonté exprimée par l'État de Palestine de lui permettre d'y effectuer une visite.
6. La Commission a élaboré le présent rapport en s'appuyant sur les entretiens qu'elle a menés auprès de sources primaires et secondaires jusqu'au 31 juillet 2022, ainsi que sur ses travaux de recherche, ses échanges en personne et en ligne avec les parties prenantes et les communications qu'elle a reçues à la suite de l'appel à contributions lancé le 22 septembre 2021.

III. Le droit international applicable et le régime d'occupation

7. La Commission a exposé le cadre juridique international applicable dans le Territoire palestinien occupé et en Israël dans son rapport précédent, qu'elle a soumis au Conseil des droits de l'homme¹, ainsi que dans son mandat². Le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est et la bande de Gaza, ainsi que le Golan syrien occupé sont actuellement sous occupation belligérante israélienne, situation à laquelle s'appliquent le droit international humanitaire et le droit international des droits humains.

8. La pratique et le droit internationaux n'établissent pas clairement le moment où une situation d'occupation belligérante devient illégale. Dans le cas de la Namibie, dont les origines étaient certes différentes de celles de la situation du Territoire palestinien occupé, la Cour internationale de Justice (CIJ) a estimé dans un avis consultatif que la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud dans ce pays était illégale. En outre, se penchant sur le refus répété de l'Afrique du Sud de se conformer aux résolutions du Conseil de sécurité, elle a déclaré que ce pays encourait des responsabilités internationales pour violation persistante d'une obligation internationale parce qu'il occupait sans titre le territoire de la Namibie³.

9. Selon le droit international humanitaire, l'occupation en temps de guerre est une situation provisoire, qui n'enlève à la Puissance occupée ni sa qualité d'État ni sa souveraineté. L'occupation pour cause de guerre ne saurait comporter un droit quelconque de disposer d'un territoire⁴. Les personnes protégées qui se trouvent en territoire occupé ne doivent pas être privées, du fait d'une tentative d'annexion de tout ou partie du territoire occupé, des droits qui leur sont reconnus en vertu du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits humains.

10. Un certain nombre de juristes ont défini un ensemble de principes dont le respect détermine la légalité d'une occupation, à savoir notamment : la puissance occupante ne possède ni souveraineté ni titre sur le territoire occupé ; la puissance occupante est chargée de gérer l'ordre public et la vie civile dans ce territoire et remplit cette mission au bénéfice de la population occupée, dans l'optique du droit de cette population à l'autodétermination ; l'occupation est temporaire⁵.

11. Dans le présent rapport, la Commission se concentre sur deux indicateurs qui peuvent servir à déterminer l'illégalité de l'occupation : la permanence de l'occupation israélienne, déjà notée dans son précédent rapport, présenté à la cinquantième session du Conseil des droits de l'homme⁶, et les actes assimilables à une annexion, y compris toute mesure unilatérale qu'Israël aurait prise pour disposer

¹ A/HRC/50/21, par. 14 à 25.

² Disponible à l'adresse www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/2022-01/TORs-UN-Independent_ICJ_Occupied_Palestinian_Territories.pdf.

³ Conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain) nonobstant la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 1971, p. 16, par. 108, 109, 111, 115, 117 à 127 et 133.

⁴ Voir Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR), commentaire de 1958 sur l'article 47 de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre. Disponible à l'adresse <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/dih.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=0ED0967890CBAB01C12563BD002D0B5F>.

⁵ Voir Orna Ben-Naftali, Aeyal Gross et Keren Michaeli, « Illegal occupation: framing the Occupied Palestinian Territory », Berkeley Journal of International Law, vol. 23, n° 3 (2005), p. 554 et 555. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 a recensé les critères d'illégalité suivants : annexion ; permanence de l'occupation ; l'occupant n'agit pas dans l'intérêt supérieur de la population occupée ; l'occupant n'administre pas le territoire de bonne foi (voir A/72/556, par. 28 à 38).

⁶ Voir A/HRC/50/21, par. 69 et 70.

de parties du Territoire palestinien occupé comme s'il possédait la souveraineté sur celui-ci.

12. Selon la Commission, il importe de distinguer annexion de jure et annexion de facto. L'annexion de jure est l'extension formelle de la souveraineté d'un État sur un territoire reconnue dans son droit interne (mais pas nécessairement en droit international). L'expression « annexion de facto » a été employée par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé⁷ :

La Cour estime que la construction du mur et le régime qui lui est associé créent sur le terrain un « fait accompli » qui pourrait fort bien devenir permanent, auquel cas, et nonobstant la description officielle qu'Israël donne du mur, la construction de celui-ci équivaudrait à une annexion⁸.

13. L'annexion de facto résulte d'un processus graduel ou progressif, et il n'est pas toujours évident de déterminer à quel moment le seuil a été franchi. La transition passe par des « faits sur le terrain » qui sont destinés à être irréversibles et permanents, mais qui sont accomplis de manière à éviter toute déclaration formelle et à échapper à toute répercussion diplomatique ou politique⁹.

IV. Nature du contrôle exercé par Israël sur les territoires qu'il occupe¹⁰ et situation à l'intérieur d'Israël

A. Jérusalem-Est

14. Israël applique son droit interne à Jérusalem-Est depuis 1967, au moyen de plusieurs lois spécifiques, et a commencé à transférer la propriété de terres à l'État pour faciliter l'expansion de son contrôle et l'établissement de colonies israéliennes¹¹ sur les terres palestiniennes¹². En 1967, Israël a unilatéralement intégré des terres palestiniennes d'une superficie de 70 000 dounoums¹³ dans la municipalité de Jérusalem¹⁴. Au moyen d'une série de lois, Israël a habilité son gouvernement de transférer à l'État des droits de propriété de Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est et permis

⁷ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C. I. J. Recueil 2004, p. 136, par. 75 à 78.

⁸ Ibid., par. 121.

⁹ Voir A/73/447, par. 30.

¹⁰ Aux fins du présent rapport, l'expression « les territoires qu'Israël occupe » et les expressions équivalentes désignent Jérusalem-Est, le Golan syrien, Gaza et la Cisjordanie en dehors de Jérusalem-Est.

¹¹ Dans les rapports de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le Territoire palestinien occupé, le terme « settlements » est utilisé dans les versions anglaises et « colonies » dans les versions françaises. La Commission suit cet usage dans le présent rapport et se penchera sur la terminologie juridique ultérieurement.

¹² Conformément à l'ordonnance sur les terrains (acquisition à des fins publiques) de 1943, telle que modifiée en 1946. Voir Efrat Cohen-Bar et autres, Trapped by Planning: Israeli Policy, Planning, and Development in the Palestinian neighborhoods of East Jerusalem (Jerusalem, Bimkom – Planners for Planning Rights, 2014). Voir également Ir Amim, « Settlements and national parks », disponible à l'adresse www.ir-amim.org.il ; Amnon Ramon et Yael Ronen, Residents, not Citizens: Israeli Policy towards the Arabs in East Jerusalem 1967-2017 (Jerusalem Institute for Policy Research, 2017), p. 49, 50 et 56.

¹³ Les taux de conversion suivants ont été utilisés aux fins du présent rapport :

1 acre = 4,04686 dounoums ; 1 hectare = 10 dounoums ; 1 km² = 999,64 dounoums.

¹⁴ Voir A/HRC/22/63, par. 25. Voir également Cohen-Bar et autres, Trapped by Planning, p. 8.

à des organisations de colons israéliens d'engager des procédures d'expulsion¹⁵. En outre, l'établissement de parcs nationaux a servi à étendre les zones contrôlées par Israël et à favoriser la contiguïté de ces zones à des fins stratégiques¹⁶. Plus d'un tiers de la superficie de Jérusalem-Est a été expropriée pour la construction de colonies israéliennes, seulement 13 % de la zone annexée étant actuellement affectée à la construction de bâtiments palestiniens¹⁷. Des faits plus récents, comme la décision 3790 (2018) prise par le Gouvernement israélien, ont suscité des inquiétudes quant à la possibilité que ce dernier prépare l'établissement de nouvelles colonies et l'expropriation d'autres biens palestiniens¹⁸.

15. À ce jour, 14 colonies ont été établies à Jérusalem-Est ; leur population totale est de plus de 229 000 personnes¹⁹. À Jérusalem-Est, les régimes restrictifs d'aménagement du territoire et de zonage, qui entravent l'accès des Palestiniens à des logements, infrastructures et moyens de subsistance adéquats, ont contribué au rétrécissement de l'espace disponible pour la population palestinienne²⁰. Par ses politiques, Israël continue d'empiéter sur l'habitat et l'espace des Palestiniens : au moins 218 ménages palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est courent actuellement un risque imminent d'expulsion forcée en raison de procédures portées devant des tribunaux israéliens, principalement par des organisations de colons israéliens²¹. La Commission note que le choix de l'emplacement de certaines nouvelles colonies, comme Gi'vat Hamatos, réduit encore la probabilité de la fin de l'occupation et viole le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination²². Une ceinture de colonies situées au-delà des frontières municipales de Jérusalem contribue également à rompre la contiguïté géographique entre Jérusalem-Est et le reste de la Cisjordanie occupée. Ainsi, le plan concernant la zone E1 à l'est de Jérusalem (en dehors des frontières municipales) est destiné à renforcer les colonies de la zone de Maalé Adoumim et à les relier à Jérusalem, ce qui aurait pour effet de diviser la Cisjordanie en deux entités distinctes²³.

16. Le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont fermement rejeté les mesures législatives et administratives prises par Israël depuis 1967. Après l'adoption en 1980 de la Loi fondamentale portant désignation de Jérusalem comme capitale d'Israël, qui a consolidé la présumée annexion de jure de Jérusalem-Est, le Conseil de sécurité a réaffirmé que l'acquisition de territoire par la force était inadmissible. Il a en outre

¹⁵ Voir Conseil norvégien pour les réfugiés, « Legal memo: the absentee property law and its application to East Jerusalem », février 2017 ; Amnesty International, Israel's Apartheid against Palestinians: Cruel System of Domination and Crime against Humanity (Londres, 2022), p. 114 ; Adalah, « The legal implications of land registration procedures implemented by Israel in East Jerusalem », 14 juillet 2022, disponible en anglais à l'adresse www.adalah.org.

¹⁶ Terrestrial Jerusalem, « The strategic encirclement of Jerusalem's old city – the emergence of a settler-controlled biblical realm », 2022, disponible auprès de la Commission, p. 7 et 8 ; Ir Amim, « Settlements and national parks ».

¹⁷ Voir ONU, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « The planning crisis in East Jerusalem: understanding the phenomenon of "illegal" construction », avril 2009.

¹⁸ Voir www.gov.il/he/departments/policies/dec3790_2018 (en hébreu).

¹⁹ Voir La paix maintenant, « Jérusalem ». Disponible en anglais à l'adresse <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/jerusalem>.

²⁰ Voir A/HRC/49/85, par. 11. Voir également Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « West Bank, East Jerusalem: key humanitarian concerns », 21 décembre 2017 ; Cohen-Bar et autres, Trapped by Planning, p. 39.

²¹ Voir A/HRC/49/85, par. 25 ; A/76/336, par. 35 ; S/2021/584, par. 6.

²² Voir, par exemple, La paix maintenant, « Givat Hamatos – a new Israeli neighborhood in East Jerusalem », 13 octobre 2011.

²³ A/HRC/49/85, par. 6.

décidé de ne pas reconnaître la Loi fondamentale et les autres actions d'Israël qui, du fait de cette loi, cherchent à modifier le caractère et le statut de Jérusalem²⁴.

B. Le Golan syrien

17. Le Golan syrien, situé dans le sud-est de la République arabe syrienne, a été occupé par Israël pendant la guerre de 1967. Une partie de cette zone, y compris la ville de Qouneïtra, a été restituée à la République arabe syrienne au titre de l'Accord sur le dégageant des forces israéliennes et syriennes de 1974²⁵. Israël a prétendument annexé le Golan syrien occupé en 1981 en adoptant une loi visant à étendre la compétence de ses tribunaux, sa législation et son administration à cette zone²⁶. Le Conseil de sécurité a définitivement rejeté cette mesure, jugée illégale²⁷. Les États-Unis d'Amérique sont le seul pays à avoir reconnu la présumée annexion.

18. Le 1^{er} juin 1967, environ 90 000 Syriens vivaient dans le Golan. Un mois plus tard, il n'en restait plus que 6 396. Une délégation du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge a constaté que la plupart des réfugiés du Golan avaient été expulsés²⁸. À partir de 1967, Israël a établi des colonies dans le Golan pour créer une réalité de terrain qui établirait irréversiblement son contrôle sur le territoire. Aujourd'hui, on compte 34 colonies dans le Golan. En décembre 2021, le Gouvernement israélien a approuvé un plan visant à y mettre en place 7 300 unités de logement supplémentaires au cours des cinq années suivantes afin de doubler le nombre d'habitants, ainsi qu'à y établir deux nouvelles colonies²⁹.

C. Bande de Gaza

19. Israël a occupé la bande de Gaza pendant la guerre de 1967 et a procédé à l'expropriation de terres et à l'établissement de colonies peu après. En 1997, il avait établi 19 colonies s'étendant sur 23 000 dounoums et comptant quelque 5 000 colons³⁰. Bien qu'Israël se soit désengagé de Gaza en 2005, la Commission note qu'il continue d'occuper ce territoire du fait du contrôle qu'il exerce, entre autres, sur son espace aérien et ses eaux territoriales, ainsi que sur les postes frontière terrestres, les infrastructures civiles, notamment l'approvisionnement en eau et en électricité, et des fonctions administratives clés telles que la gestion des registres de l'état civil de la population palestinienne³¹.

20. La bande de Gaza est également soumise à un blocus imposé par Israël et soutenu par l'Égypte depuis que les autorités de facto ont assumé certaines fonctions de gouvernance en 2007. Depuis, ce blocus a été resserré ou assoupli à plusieurs reprises. Il restreint la circulation des personnes et des biens vers et depuis le

²⁴ Voir résolution 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité. Voir également ONU, Comité pour l'exercice des droits inaliénables du peuple palestinien, « Le statut de Jérusalem » (New York, 1997), p. 24. Disponible à l'adresse <https://unispal.un.org/pdfs/97-24262f.pdf>.

²⁵ S/11302/Add.1.

²⁶ Loi sur le plateau du Golan de 1981. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse https://fs.knesset.gov.il/10/law/10_Isr_211778.PDF.

²⁷ Voir résolution 497 (1981) du Conseil de sécurité.

²⁸ Voir Akevot Institute, « Displacement in the Heights: how the population of the Golan Heights vanished in 1967 », 19 septembre 2022, image intitulée « Annex to Moreillon's letter ». Disponible à l'adresse www.akevot.org.il/en/article/displacement-in-the-golan/#popup/acfbb382d6c3e88ba2b9e112e710a627.

²⁹ Voir www.gov.il/he/departments/news/spoke_golan261221 (en hébreu).

³⁰ Voir A/52/172-E/1997/71, par. 26.

³¹ Voir A/HRC/50/21, par. 16.

territoire. Il a été condamné à de nombreuses reprises en tant que politique susceptible de constituer une peine collective³².

D. Israël

21. La Commission a constaté plusieurs similitudes entre le traitement qu'Israël a réservé aux Palestiniens à l'intérieur du pays à partir de 1948 et les politiques qu'il applique dans le Territoire palestinien occupé.

22. Entre 1948 et 1966, environ 85 % des Palestiniens d'Israël vivaient dans trois zones soumises à un régime militaire et placées sous l'autorité de trois gouverneurs militaires³³. Israël maintenait qu'il avait établi ce régime pour des raisons de sécurité, puisque chacune des trois zones était limitrophe de « pays ennemis ». D'après une enquête gouvernementale sur le régime militaire, Israël visait à répondre au risque qui existait selon lui que les Palestiniens résidant à l'intérieur d'Israël collaborent avec les pays arabes voisins pour agir contre ses intérêts de sécurité ; un autre objectif consistait à maîtriser et à réduire le nombre de réfugiés de Palestine cherchant à rentrer chez eux³⁴.

23. Le régime militaire a pris fin en 1967, mais ses effets perdurent. En 2022, les Palestiniens citoyens d'Israël restent soumis à des politiques discriminatoires, notamment la confiscation de terres, les démolitions et les expulsions qui touchent en particulier les Bédouins du Néguev et les Palestiniens résidant dans d'autres régions d'Israël. En outre, plusieurs lois israéliennes sont discriminatoires à l'égard des Palestiniens citoyens d'Israël. Par exemple, la loi sur l'État-nation de 2018 réserve aux seuls juifs le droit à l'autodétermination en Israël et retire à l'arabe le statut de langue officielle dont il bénéficiait aux côtés de l'hébreu³⁵. En outre, la loi sur la citoyenneté et l'entrée en Israël (ordonnance temporaire) restreint le regroupement familial et entrave le droit d'épouser la personne de son choix³⁶.

E. La Cisjordanie en dehors de Jérusalem-Est

24. En application des Accords d'Oslo, la Cisjordanie a été répartie en trois zones : A, B et C (à l'exclusion de Jérusalem-Est et de la bande de Gaza). Israël exerce un contrôle quasi exclusif sur la zone C, qui recouvre plus de 60 % de la Cisjordanie³⁷. Les dispositions des Accords, qui ne se substituent pas aux obligations découlant du droit international, attribuent à l'Autorité palestinienne le contrôle sur la zone A en matière civile et dans le domaine de la sécurité, et le contrôle sur la zone B en matière civile. Il était prévu dans les Accords que l'Autorité palestinienne assumerait

³² Voir A/74/468, par. 22, A/73/420, par. 7, et A/72/565, par. 28.

³³ Voir <https://storymaps.arcgis.com/stories/81adbee036594229ac65032b8fb80e07?locale=he> (en hébreu).

³⁴ Akevot Institute, « Security settlements and the question of land: the Ratner Committee report on military rule and its secret annex », 24 février 1956.

³⁵ Voir CERD/C/ISR/CO/17-19, par. 13 à 15, et CCPR/C/ISR/CO/5, par. 10. Voir aussi Adalah, « The discriminatory laws database », 25 septembre 2017 ; Centre des droits de l'homme pour l'aide judiciaire à Jérusalem, « Families divided: Israel passes new citizenship law, fortifies apartheid regime » ; Adalah, « Adalah petitions Israeli Supreme Court against new citizenship law banning Palestinian family unification ».

³⁶ Voir Knesset, « Knesset plenum passes Citizenship and Entry into Israel Bill into law », 10 mars 2022 ; Centre des droits de l'homme pour l'aide judiciaire à Jérusalem, « Families divided » ; Adalah, « Adalah petitions Israeli Supreme Court ».

³⁷ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Area C of the West Bank: key humanitarian concerns », version mise à jour, août 2014.

progressivement le contrôle de la Cisjordanie, de manière échelonnée, à l'exception des questions à régler dans le cadre des négociations sur le statut permanent³⁸.

L'entreprise de peuplement israélienne

« Vu les négociations en cours sur l'avenir de la Judée-Samarie, il nous faut désormais mener une course contre la montre. Pendant la période en question, tout sera déterminé principalement par les faits que nous établirons dans ces territoires, plutôt que par toute autre considération. C'est donc le meilleur moment pour lancer une campagne de peuplement vaste et complète (...). »

Source : Fédération sioniste mondiale, « Peuplement en Judée et en Samarie : stratégie, politique et plan » (voir A/36/341-S/14566, annexe).

25. Depuis le début de l'occupation, Israël a établi ou aidé à établir des centaines d'implantations civiles dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ; cette entreprise, qui est contraire au droit international, constitue le principal moteur de son occupation prolongée. Israël a dépensé plusieurs milliards de dollars pour construire des colonies et les infrastructures correspondantes : routes, systèmes de distribution et d'assainissement de l'eau, systèmes de communication et d'électricité, systèmes de sécurité et établissements d'enseignement et de soins de santé³⁹. L'un des principes fondamentaux du droit applicable aux occupations belligérantes est que la Puissance occupante doit protéger les intérêts fondamentaux de la population sous occupation, ce qui passe notamment par l'interdiction du transfert de sa propre population civile dans le territoire qu'elle occupe⁴⁰. L'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève vise à empêcher la Puissance occupante de transférer une partie de sa propre population dans un territoire occupé pour des raisons politiques ou raciales ou pour coloniser ce territoire⁴¹.

26. Alors que toutes les colonies israéliennes sont toutes considérées comme illégales au regard du droit international, Israël distingue les colonies « autorisées » et les avant-postes non autorisés, qu'il considère comme illégaux. Pourtant, il fournit à ces avant-postes des services essentiels, notamment en matière d'alimentation électrique et de sécurité, et leur attribue des terres agricoles et pastorales⁴². En avril 2022, le Bureau du Procureur général d'Israël a estimé dans un avis juridique que les avant-postes situés sur des « terres domaniales » pouvaient être reliés au réseau électrique officiel⁴³. À ce jour, le Gouvernement israélien a autorisé rétroactivement 23 avant-postes en les intégrant dans des colonies voisines ou en leur accordant le statut de colonie indépendante. Selon l'organisation La paix maintenant, deux

³⁸ Voir l'Accord intérimaire israélo-palestinien sur la Rive occidentale et la bande de Gaza (A/51/889-S/1997/357, annexe), art. XI, par. 2.

³⁹ Voir TD/B/EX(71)/2, par. 40 et 66. Voir également Kerem Navot, « The Wild West: grazing, seizing and looting by Israeli settlers in the West Bank », mai 2022. Voir également Yesh Din, Plundered Pastures: Israeli Settler Shepherding Outposts in the West Bank and Their Infringement on Palestinians' Human Rights, document de position, décembre 2021.

⁴⁰ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 27 et 49.

⁴¹ Voir CICR, commentaire de 1958 sur l'article 49 de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre. Disponible à l'adresse <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/dih.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=D057D712602414BEC12563BD002D0BF8>.

⁴² Voir Kerem Navot, « The Wild West » et Yesh Din, « Plundered pastures ».

⁴³ Disponible auprès de la Commission. Selon l'avis juridique, les villages palestiniens de la zone C peuvent également être reliés au réseau électrique officiel.

avant-postes ont été évacués après leur création, mais le Gouvernement serait sur le point d'en autoriser rétroactivement au moins 12 autres⁴⁴.

27. Israël a tenté d'autoriser des colonies et des avant-postes créées sur des terres palestiniennes privées au moyen de mesures législatives. La loi sur la régularisation de 2017 s'applique aux colonies créées sur des terres palestiniennes privées ou sans autorisation préalable avant l'entrée en vigueur de ce texte⁴⁵. En 2020, la Cour suprême d'Israël a censuré cette loi au motif qu'elle portait atteinte aux droits codifiés dans la Loi fondamentale relative à la dignité et à la liberté de la personne, puisqu'elle entraînerait l'expropriation de terres palestiniennes privées et le transfert de la propriété de ces terres à des colons⁴⁶. La Cour a toutefois décidé que les avant-postes créés sur des terres palestiniennes privées pouvaient être autorisés s'ils avaient été établis « de bonne foi ». En 2022, la Cour suprême a déterminé qu'il n'était pas nécessaire d'évacuer l'avant-poste de Mitzpeh Kramim parce que les propriétaires privés des terres avaient été expropriés conformément au critère de la bonne foi et que les « règles régissant le marché »⁴⁷ s'appliquaient aux avant-postes⁴⁸. De fait, elle a ainsi laissé toute latitude aux autorités pour approuver les avant-postes créés sur des terres palestiniennes privées en Cisjordanie.

28. Entre juin 2021 et juin 2022, six nouveaux avant-postes ont été créés⁴⁹. Au cours de cette période, plusieurs membres du Gouvernement ont explicitement exprimé leur soutien à l'établissement d'avant-postes ainsi qu'à des décisions judiciaires tendant à autoriser rétroactivement des avant-postes⁵⁰. Le 20 juillet 2022, des centaines de colons se sont rassemblés en six endroits différents pour créer de nouveaux avant-postes. Les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont publié une déclaration qualifiant ces actes d'illégaux⁵¹ et déployé d'importantes forces de police militaire et civile.

⁴⁴ Voir La paix maintenant, « West Bank population ». Disponible en anglais à l'adresse <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/jerusalem>.

⁴⁵ Loi sur la réglementation des colonies en Judée-Samarie (2017). Disponible en hébreu sur www.nevo.co.il/law_html/law01/501_553.htm.

⁴⁶ Décision rendue le 9 juin 2020 par la Cour suprême dans les affaires n^{os} 1308/17 et 2055/17. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse <https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=HebrewVerdicts%5C17%5C080%5C013%5Cv48&fileName=17013080.V48&type=2>.

⁴⁷ L'expression « réglementation régissant le marché » concerne les terrains acquis auprès du Commissaire chargé des biens publics et des terres abandonnées en Judée-Samarie et dont la propriété avait été jugée publique au moment de la transaction, alors qu'il s'agissait en fait de biens privés. Voir <https://lawjournal.huji.ac.il/sites/default/files/2020-11/mishpatim-50-2-307.pdf> (en hébreu).

⁴⁸ Décision rendue par la Cour suprême le 27 juillet 2022 dans l'affaire n^o 6364/20. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse <https://storage.googleapis.com/haaretz-cms-prod/df/d2/89f3ad634b02a194f7aac204a15b/gada.pdf>.

⁴⁹ L'organisation La paix maintenant fait état de quatre cas d'avant-postes qui ont été créés entre juin 2021 et juin 2022 mais dont les colons ont été expulsés immédiatement, ainsi que d'une augmentation des démolitions de petits avant-postes créés par des « jeunes des collines ». Voir La paix maintenant, « The government of unequivocal annexation: deepening of the settlement project, dispossession and oppression – one year of the Israeli government headed by Yair Lapid and Naftali Bennett », juin 2022.

⁵⁰ Voir https://twitter.com/Ayelet__Shaked/status/1549851212199202821 (en hébreu) ; <https://twitter.com/gidonsaar/status/155230355646777537> (en hébreu).

⁵¹ Déclaration conjointe des Forces de défense israéliennes et de la police israélienne en date du 20 juillet 2022. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse www.idf.il/%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D/2022/%D7%99%D7%95%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%90%D7%99%D7%95%D7%A9-%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%97%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%91%D7%99%D7%98%D7%97%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%A9%D7%98%D7%97%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A6%D7%91%D7%90%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A1%D7%92%D7%95%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%97%D7%95%D7%A7-%D7%9E%D7%90%D7%97%97

Cependant, bien qu'ils aient annoncé leurs intentions à l'avance, les colons ont été autorisés à accéder aux sites concernés et ont mis en place des structures temporaires avant que les forces de sécurité n'évacuent les lieux⁵².

29. Le financement des colonies et des avant-postes proviendrait de diverses sources étatiques et non étatiques, de donateurs privés et de fonds collectés par des organismes israéliens et étrangers à but non lucratif⁵³, y compris des organisations privées telles que Nahala et Amana⁵⁴. La Division du peuplement de l'Organisation sioniste mondiale joue un rôle clé dans la création des colonies et des avant-postes, ainsi que dans l'appui qui leur est apporté. Créée en 1971, elle est financée par le Gouvernement israélien, bien qu'elle ne relève pas de l'État. Elle soutient et finance activement les avant-postes. Par exemple, elle facilite leur régularisation en ce qui concerne leur raccordement au réseau électrique et l'établissement des plans de construction⁵⁵.

30. L'établissement, le maintien et l'expansion des colonies israéliennes dans toute la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, ont fragmenté la population palestinienne et isolé les Palestiniens de leurs terres ainsi que des autres communautés palestiniennes. La Commission souligne que les colonies, où qu'elles soient situées, ont des effets en cascade sur les Palestiniens de l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie. En omettant dans une grande mesure de faire respecter les lois, en continuant d'autoriser rétroactivement la création d'avant-postes de colonies, en négligeant les violences commises par les colons dans ces avant-postes⁵⁶ et en dispensant de sanctions juridiques les colons qui enfreignent les lois, Israël indique clairement aux colons que les avant-postes sont un moyen viable et quasi légal d'établir de nouvelles colonies et d'étendre la présence israélienne en Cisjordanie.

Expropriation et exploitation de terres et d'autres ressources naturelles

31. Depuis le début de l'occupation, Israël invoque des raisons d'ordre militaire pour prendre des mesures permanentes ou temporaires restreignant l'accès à de vastes zones de la Cisjordanie. En pratique, une grande partie des terres en question a été utilisée non pas à des fins militaires, mais pour la création de colonies. Israël a affecté environ 18 % du territoire de la Cisjordanie à des zones militaires d'accès réglementé, notamment dans la zone C⁵⁷. Ces zones couvrent plus de la moitié de la zone C (soit 1,765 million de dounoums). Les colons israéliens ont cultivé plus de 14 000

D7%96%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%91%D7%9C%D7%AA%D7%99-%D7%97%D7%95%D7%A7%D7%99%D7%99%D7%9D/

⁵² Voir www.inn.co.il/news/571834 (en hébreu). Voir également Hagar Shezaf, « Israeli forces evacuate short-lived outposts set up by West Bank settler movement », Haaretz, 21 juillet 2022 ; Hagar Shezaf, « Settlers camp out in six locations across the West Bank, planning to establish new outposts », Haaretz, 20 juillet 2022.

⁵³ Uri Blau, « From N.Y.C. to the West Bank: following the money trail that supports Israeli settlements », Haaretz, 7 décembre 2015. Voir également http://peacenow.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2020/11/TheCombina_Hebl.pdf, p. 7 et 8 (en hébreu).

⁵⁴ Voir A/HRC/49/85, par. 42. Voir également Hagar Shezaf, « How a Jewish settler group raised millions to set up illegal outposts », Haaretz, 20 juillet 2022.

⁵⁵ Voir www.gov.il/BlobFolder/reports/work_plan290622/he/work_plan290622.pdf, élément n° 7 (en hébreu).

⁵⁶ Voir par. 67 et 68 du présent rapport.

⁵⁷ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « The humanitarian impact of Israeli-declared "firing zones" in the West Bank », août 2012.

dounoums de terres dans les zones militaires d'accès réglementé, dont une partie est constituée de terres palestiniennes privées⁵⁸.

32. Dans une décision rendue en 1979, la Cour suprême d'Israël a déterminé que la pratique consistant à émettre des ordonnances militaires pour exproprier des terres afin d'y établir des colonies était contraire au droit international⁵⁹. Cependant, Israël a continué de créer des zones de tir militaires qui ont ensuite été utilisées à d'autres fins. Dans les années 1980, la région de Massafer Yatta, située dans les collines du sud d'Hébron, a été déclarée zone militaire d'accès restreint (zone de tir n° 918), ce qui a eu des effets sur les dizaines de familles palestiniennes qui y vivaient déjà avant 1948⁶⁰. D'après des procès-verbaux publiés récemment qui rendent compte de réunions entre des responsables du Gouvernement israélien et de la Division du peuplement, Israël a établi des zones militaires pour des raisons non militaires, notamment en vue de l'établissement et de l'expansion de colonies⁶¹. En 1981, Ariel Sharon, qui était alors Ministre de l'agriculture, s'est réuni avec la Division du peuplement et a proposé la création d'une zone de tir dans les collines du sud d'Hébron dans l'objectif explicite de contrer l'expansion des populations des villages arabes du flanc de la montagne vers le désert⁶².

33. Israël a désigné de grandes zones comme terres domaniales, en s'appuyant sur le décret n° 59 de 1967 (5727-1967) relatif aux biens publics en Judée-Samarie, qui établit que l'administrateur du Département des biens des absents peut attribuer des biens à l'État et prendre toutes les mesures qu'il juge nécessaires à cette fin⁶³. Israël a désigné comme terres domaniales plus de 750 000 dounoums de terrain en Cisjordanie en vertu de ce décret⁶⁴. Israël a également utilisé une procédure cartographique, qu'il nomme la « procédure relatives aux terres à cadastrer » et qui est fondée sur le code foncier ottoman, pour déterminer si des terres sont incultes ou insuffisamment cultivées et peuvent donc être classées comme terre domaniales⁶⁵.

34. Des parcelles de terre en Cisjordanie ont été désignées comme réserves naturelles ou comme parcs. À ce jour, Israël a créé environ 48 réserves naturelles d'une superficie totale d'au moins 383 600 dounoums, soit environ 12 % de la zone C

⁵⁸ Voir Kerem Navot, A Locked Garden: Declaration of Closed Areas in the West Bank, mars 2015, p. 10 à 15.

⁵⁹ Décision rendue par la Cour suprême le 22 octobre 1979 dans l'affaire n° 390/79. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse <https://hamoked.org.il/items/1670.htm>. Voir également B'Tselem, Under the Guise of Legality: Israel's Declarations of State Land the West Bank, (Jérusalem, février 2012), p. 9 et 12.

⁶⁰ Voir B'Tselem, « Masafer Yatta communities Israel is trying to drive out », 1^{er} janvier 2013. Disponible en anglais à l'adresse www.btselem.org/south_hebron_hills/masafer_yatta.

⁶¹ Voir Yuval Abraham, « Classified document reveals IDF "firing zones" built to give land to settlers », +972 Magazine, 11 juillet 2022.

⁶² Voir Akevot, « Document exposed by Akevot: Ariel Sharon instructed IDF to create training zone to displace Palestinians », 9 août 2020, disponible en anglais à l'adresse www.akevot.org.il/en/news-item/document-revealed-by-akevot-ariel-sharon-instructed-idf-to-create-training-zone-to-displace-palestinians/. Voir également le procès-verbal de la réunion tenue le 12 juillet 1981 entre la commission gouvernementale chargée du peuplement et l'Organisation sioniste mondiale, disponible à l'adresse www.akevot.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/1981-07-12-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%AA-%D7%A9%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%9C%D7%94%D7%AA%D7%99%D7%A9%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%A4%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%98%D7%95%D7%A7%D7%95%D7%9C-%D7%9E%D7%9C%D7%90-%D7%9E%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%A2%D7%A7%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA.pdf.

⁶³ Voir B'Tselem, Land Grab: Israel's Settlement Policy in the West Bank (Jérusalem, mai 2002), p. 52. Voir également B'Tselem, Under the Guise of Legality, p. 13.

⁶⁴ Voir Kerem Navot, Blue and White Make Black: The Work of Blue Line Team in the West Bank, décembre 2016, p. 6 et 42.

⁶⁵ Ibid, p. 6, 7 et 39.

et environ 7 % de l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie⁶⁶. En janvier 2020, le Ministre israélien de la défense a établi sept nouveaux parcs nationaux d'une superficie de plus de 130 000 dounoums et agrandi 12 réserves existantes. Selon l'organisation La paix maintenant, sur cette surface, 20 000 dounoums de terres appartiennent à des particuliers palestiniens qui n'auront pas le droit de les cultiver ni d'y mener d'activités de construction⁶⁷.

35. En plus d'exproprier des terres, Israël a pris le contrôle de toutes les ressources en eau de la Cisjordanie et en utilise une grande partie pour satisfaire ses propres besoins. Par l'ordonnance militaire n° 92 (1967), il a revendiqué le contrôle des trois principales sources d'eau de Cisjordanie et a interdit aux Palestiniens de construire de nouvelles installations hydriques ainsi que d'entretenir les installations existantes sans autorisation militaire. Dans le même temps, Israël a mis en place ses propres infrastructures hydriques pour ses colonies, de même que sur son propre territoire⁶⁸.

36. Israël a également utilisé des terres pour son activité industrielle et économique en créant des zones industrielles en divers endroits de la Cisjordanie. Il a encouragé les entreprises à transférer leurs activités dans ces zones en leur offrant des incitations financières, des permis et des licences qui sont rarement accordés aux entreprises qui fournissent des services aux Palestiniens⁶⁹. Israël a pris des mesures énergiques pour dissuader les États et les entreprises de distinguer les produits fabriqués en Israël de ceux provenant des colonies⁷⁰.

37. En 2015, Israël exploitait 11 carrières produisant 10 millions à 12 millions de tonnes de matières premières dans la zone C, notamment de la pierre, du gravier et d'autres minéraux. Environ 10 millions de tonnes de ces matières premières ont été transférées en Israël. Source de revenus croissants, les carrières de Cisjordanie sont une composante importante du secteur israélien des matières premières⁷¹. En 2015, Israël a reçu 74 102 235 shekels⁷² de redevances et de droits d'utilisation provenant de ces carrières⁷³.

⁶⁶ Voir La paix maintenant, « The Minister of Defense approved the declaration of the largest nature reserve in 25 years in the West Bank », 24 mai 2022.

⁶⁷ Voir https://twitter.com/naftalibennett/status/1217372351911866369?ref_src=twsrc%5Etfw%7Ctwcamp%5Etweetembed%7Ctwterm%5E1217372351911866369%7Ctwgr%5Edc7765b546f118b60ef9d4da93dbb32b48287d60%7Ctwcon%5Es1_&ref_url=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.zman.co.il%2F88980%2F (en hébreu). Voir également Hagar Shezaf, « Israeli defense chief approves new West Bank nature reserves to “develop Jewish settlement” », Haaretz, 15 janvier 2020 ; La paix maintenant, « The Minister of Defense approved the declaration of the largest nature reserve in 25 years in the West Bank ».

⁶⁸ Voir A/HRC/48/43, par. 18. Voir également ONU, « Israel's policy on the West Bank water resources », 1980, disponible en anglais à l'adresse www.un.org/unispal/document/auto-insert-206852/ ; Jerusalem Media and Communication Centre, Israeli Military Orders in the Occupied Palestinian West Bank (1967-1992), disponible à l'adresse www.jmcc.org/Documentsandmaps.aspx?id=622 ; Amnesty International, « Israel/Occupied Palestinian Territories: demand dignity: troubled waters – Palestinians denied fair access to water », 27 octobre 2009.

⁶⁹ Voir A/HRC/37/39, par. 43 et 44.

⁷⁰ Voir, par exemple, Middle East Monitor, « Israel threatens Norway with “adverse” impact following change in settlement labels », 13 juin 2022 ; Barak Ravid, « Israel considers suing EU over decision to label settlement products », Haaretz, 19 novembre 2015.

⁷¹ Ministère du logement, rapport du Comité d'examen des politiques foncières dans le secteur extractif, avril 2015, p. 10 et 11. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse www.gov.il/BlobFolder/policy/balnikov/he/balnikov_final_report_26042015.pdf.

⁷² Au 2 septembre 2022, le taux de conversion était de 3,40 shekels pour 1 dollar des États-Unis.

⁷³ Voir <https://s3-eu-west-1.amazonaws.com/files.yesh-din.org/%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%99%D7%A8+%D7%A2%D7%9E%D7%93%D7%94+%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%A6%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/38443.pdf> (en hébreu).

38. Des entités quasi gouvernementales ont joué un rôle dans l'expropriation des terres et la gestion de leur attribution aux colonies⁷⁴. Le Fonds national juif, par exemple, a été créé en 1901 pour acheter des terres dans la région et y établir des implantations juives. Après 1967, il a acquis des terres auprès de Palestiniens en Cisjordanie pour faciliter l'établissement de colonies et a étendu ses autres domaines d'activité pour soutenir ces dernières⁷⁵. En août 2022, les médias israéliens ont rapporté que le Fonds national juif avait voté l'allocation d'un montant de 61 millions de shekels à l'acquisition de terres appartenant à des Palestiniens dans la vallée du Jourdain, à l'intérieur d'une zone militaire d'accès réglementé⁷⁶.

39. La terre est une ressource naturelle essentielle, qui fait partie intégrante de l'identité et de l'économie palestiniennes. Actuellement, les Palestiniens peuvent mener des activités de construction sur moins de 1 % des terres de la zone C⁷⁷, du fait des politiques d'aménagement israéliennes et de l'expropriation de plus de 2 millions de dounoums de terres par Israël depuis 1967. Israël a exproprié des propriétaires de leurs terres dans toute la Cisjordanie à des fins diverses, notamment pour mettre en place des colonies, des zones industrielles, des terres agricoles et pastorales pour les colons, ainsi que des routes, en violation du droit international⁷⁸.

40. En vertu du droit international, la Puissance occupante a le droit d'utiliser les ressources naturelles d'un territoire occupé dans une mesure limitée. Au titre de l'article 55 du Règlement concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre de 1907 (Règlement de La Haye), la Puissance occupante ne peut agir que comme administrateur et usufruitier des édifices publics, immeubles, forêts et exploitations agricoles. Ce faisant, elle doit sauvegarder le fonds de ces propriétés et les administrer conformément aux règles de l'usufruit. De plus, le pillage est interdit par les articles 28 et 47 du Règlement de La Haye, ainsi que par l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Cette interdiction s'applique à tous les types de biens, que ceux-ci appartiennent à des personnes privées ou à l'État⁷⁹. Le pillage est en outre un crime de guerre au titre du paragraphe 2 b) xvi) de l'article 8 du Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale.

Politiques restrictives en matière d'aménagement, de zonage et développement

41. Au titre des Accords d'Oslo, Israël était temporairement chargé de l'aménagement, du zonage et du développement de la zone C. Cependant, cette responsabilité n'a toujours pas été transférée à l'Autorité palestinienne, chose qui ⁷⁴ Pour plus d'informations sur l'Organisation sioniste mondiale, voir le paragraphe 31 du présent rapport.

⁷⁵ Voir La Paix Maintenant, « Involvement of KKL-JNF and the settlement division in the settlements », p. 2. Disponible à l'adresse http://peacenow.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2020/02/KKL_Settlement-Division-Fact-Sheet.pdf.

⁷⁶ Voir Hagar Shezaf, « Israel recruited the Jewish National Fund to secretly buy Palestinian Land for settlers », Haaretz, 15 juillet 2021. Voir également Hagar Shezaf, « JNF approves funds to buy Palestinian-owned Jordan Valley land at Israel's request », Haaretz, 3 août 2022 ; <https://peacenow.org.il/jnf-tender-for-land-registration> (en hébreu).

⁷⁷ Voir TD/B/EX(71)/2, par. 33.

⁷⁸ Voir B'Tselem, State Business: Israel's Misappropriation of land in the West Bank through Settler Violence (Jérusalem, novembre 2021), p. 7. Voir également B'Tselem, Land Grab, p. 47 ; Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Area C of the West Bank: key humanitarian concerns », version mise à jour en août 2014.

⁷⁹ Voir CICR, commentaire de 1958 sur l'article 33 de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre. Disponible à l'adresse <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/dih.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=B35651ACAD5E6BDAC12563BD002D05DD>.

réduit grandement les possibilités de développement des Palestiniens⁸⁰. Israël s’est servi de son autorité en matière de planification et de zonage pour imposer aux activités de construction des restrictions considérables qui s’appliquent principalement aux Palestiniens, afin de limiter l’utilisation des terres par ces derniers et de soutenir le développement des colonies.

42. Israël a interdit les activités de construction palestiniennes dans 70 % de la zone C par l’établissement de terres domaniales, de réserves naturelles ou de zones militaires ; de plus, il impose d’importantes restrictions de zonage dans les 30 % restants⁸¹. Il rejette la plupart des demandes de permis de construire présentées par des Palestiniens au motif que le zonage ne permet pas les activités de construction, même lorsque le terrain appartient au demandeur⁸². Les Palestiniens obtiennent rarement les permis nécessaires pour construire des structures résidentielles ou des structures destinées à des activités économiques ou pour mettre en place des infrastructures. Pendant la période de 10 ans allant de 2009 à 2018, seulement 2 % environ des demandes de permis de construire ont été approuvées⁸³. En 2019 et en 2020, 32 demandes de permis et plans de construction présentés par des Palestiniens ont été approuvés et 310 autres ont été rejetés, tandis que l’Administration civile d’Israël a approuvé les plans relatifs à 16 098 unités dans les colonies israéliennes⁸⁴.

43. Selon la réglementation israélienne, les projets de construction doivent également être conformes aux plans d’aménagement régionaux du mandat britannique, qui limitent de vastes zones à un petit nombre de destinations : routes, agriculture, développement, réserves naturelles et plages⁸⁵. L’Administration civile et les tribunaux israéliens continuent de s’appuyer sur ces plans obsolètes pour traiter les demandes de permis de construire palestiniens, alors même qu’ils approuvent des centaines de nouveaux plans-cadres visant à modifier le zonage pour permettre les activités de construction des colonies israéliennes⁸⁶.

44. L’Autorité palestinienne est officiellement responsable de la prestation de services éducatifs, médicaux et autres dans la zone C, mais l’Administration civile est chargée de délivrer les permis de construire et d’extension des écoles et des cliniques, ce qui entrave considérablement la capacité des Palestiniens à fournir ces services⁸⁷. Les Palestiniens de la zone C pâtissent donc de l’insuffisance et du caractère inadéquat des possibilités d’aménagement, qui touchent tout particulièrement les groupes de population marginalisés comme les communautés de Bédouins et d’éleveurs palestiniens⁸⁸.

⁸⁰ Voir Programme des Nations Unies pour les établissements humains (ONU-Habitat), Spatial Planning in Area C of the Israeli Occupied West Bank of the Palestinian Territory, Report of an International Advisory Board, mai 2015, p. 10.

⁸¹ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, Special Focus, « Restricting space: the planning regime applied by Israel in Area C of West Bank », décembre 2009. Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Area C of the West Bank: key humanitarian concerns », mise à jour d’août 2014 ; TD/B/EX(71)/2, par. 33.

⁸² Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Humanitarian Bulletin: January-May 2021 ». Disponible à l’adresse <https://www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-bulletin-january-may-2021>.

⁸³ Voir La paix maintenant, « (Dis)approvals for Palestinians in Area C – 2009-2020 », 31 janvier 2021.

⁸⁴ Ibid.

⁸⁵ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Restricting space ». Voir également Limor Yehuda et autres, One Rule, Two Legal Systems: Israel’s Regime of Laws in the West Bank, Association for Civil Rights in Israel, octobre 2014, p. 100.

⁸⁶ Voir ONU-Habitat, Spatial Planning in Area C, p. 23.

⁸⁷ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Restricting space ».

⁸⁸ Voir ONU-Habitat, Spatial Planning in Area C, p. 10.

45. Des déclarations faites par des responsables israéliens font apparaître que les activités de construction des Palestiniens sont considérées comme un obstacle aux activités israéliennes de peuplement en Cisjordanie, d'où la nécessité de prendre des mesures de confiscation, de démolition et de déplacement, ainsi que de réduire le nombre de projets d'aide internationale en faveur des infrastructures palestiniennes dans la zone C⁸⁹. Les démolitions sont liées à l'expansion des colonies, étant donné que des ordres de démolition de grande ampleur sont émis lorsque des colonies israéliennes se voient attribuer des terres pour leur expansion⁹⁰. La Commission note que le régime de planification et de zonage appliqué par Israël se caractérise manifestement par une approche discriminatoire, puisqu'il est très restrictif lorsqu'il est appliqué aux projets de construction des Palestiniens alors qu'il est beaucoup moins strict lorsqu'il s'agit de l'aménagement et du zonage dans les colonies.

Extension de la législation israélienne à la Cisjordanie

46. Depuis le début de l'occupation, Israël a étendu l'application de sa législation à la Cisjordanie, d'où des modifications profondes du droit applicable et, dans la pratique, la coexistence de deux législations applicables : la législation militaire et la législation interne israélienne, qui est appliquée extraterritorialement aux seuls colons israéliens. Cette extension, qui a été opérée au moyen d'ordonnances militaires⁹¹, de dispositions législatives⁹² et de décisions de la Cour suprême⁹³, concerne le droit pénal, la législation nationale relative à l'assurance maladie, le droit fiscal et des lois électorales⁹⁴. Il existe en outre des systèmes juridiques distincts pour ce qui est de l'application du code de la route, et on peut constater un dédoublement institutionnel et législatif du régime de l'aménagement et de la construction⁹⁵.

47. Ce double système juridique a pour résultat que les Israéliens jouissent davantage des droits humains que les Palestiniens ; par conséquent, il est discriminatoire. Il fait partie des griefs soulevés dans la communication soumise par l'État de Palestine contre Israël en vertu de la Convention internationale sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale⁹⁶. Il y a des différences marquées entre les deux systèmes juridiques, en particulier dans le droit pénal, d'où des répercussions importantes sur les droits des Palestiniens. Par exemple, selon le droit militaire, le fait de tenir et d'agiter un drapeau palestinien lors de manifestations

⁸⁹ Voir B'Tselem, « The annexation that was and still is », sans date, p. 4, disponible sur www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202010_the_annexation_that_was_and_still_is_eng.pdf. Voir aussi <https://main.knesset.gov.il/Activity/committees/ForeignAffairs/News/pages/pr290720.aspx> (en hébreu).

⁹⁰ Voir ONU-Habitat, Spatial Planning in Area C, p. 20. Voir également Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Demolitions and forced displacement in the occupied West Bank, January 2012 », 26 janvier 2012 ; Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Resource Centre, « Rule of law: a veil of compliance in Israel and the oPt 2010-2013 », mars 2014, p. 9.

⁹¹ Ordonnance militaire n° 892 concernant l'administration des conseils locaux (Judée-Samarie), 5741-1981, et ordonnance militaire n° 783 concernant l'administration des conseils régionaux (Judée-Samarie), 5739-1979.

⁹² Loi relative à la prorogation du régime d'urgence (Judée-Samarie : compétence des tribunaux et appui judiciaire).

⁹³ Par exemple, décision de la Cour suprême dans l'affaire n° 04/10104, sect. 2 (4), p. 95. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=PediVerdicts/61/2&fileName=SA2_2_10104-04.pdf&type=4.

⁹⁴ Voir Limor Yehuda et autres, One Rule, Two Legal Systems, p. 6. Voir également Yesh Din, The Israeli Occupation of the West Bank and the Crime of Apartheid: Legal Opinion, document de position, juin 2020, p. 40 à 42.

⁹⁵ Voir Limor Yehuda et autres, One Rule, Two Legal Systems, p. 7 et 8.

⁹⁶ Voir https://tbinternet.ohchr.org/Treaties/CERD/Shared%20Documents/1_Global/INT_CERD_ISC_9325_E.pdf (en anglais), par. 146 à 156.

ou de rassemblements de Palestiniens est considéré comme une menace contre la sécurité, ce qui limite sévèrement la liberté d'expression et la liberté de réunion pacifique et d'association des Palestiniens⁹⁷.

V. Les objectifs qui sous-tendent le régime d'occupation appliqué par Israël

48. Lorsqu'il expose sa position officielle sur les colonies, Israël rappelle la présence juive plurimillénaire sur le territoire et la reconnaissance dans le mandat pour la Palestine, qui a été adopté par la Société des Nations en 1922, des « liens historiques du peuple juif avec la Palestine »⁹⁸. Les Palestiniens ont dénoncé énergiquement les colonies israéliennes, faisant observer qu'elles n'avaient aucune validité en droit, constituaient des violations flagrantes du droit international, à savoir la quatrième Convention de Genève, et représentaient un obstacle majeur à la paix⁹⁹.

49. Dès le début de l'occupation, Israël a souligné que les menaces extérieures qui pesaient sur sa sécurité étaient un facteur clé de sa politique de colonisation. En 1977, le chef de la Division du peuplement de l'Organisation sioniste mondiale, Mattityahu Drobbless, a établi le plan de colonisation Drobbless pour la Cisjordanie (publié en 1978), dans lequel il a rappelé que le vaste « front oriental du refus » qui réunissait la République arabe syrienne, l'Iraq, la République islamique d'Iran et l'Arabie saoudite constituait une menace clé pour la frontière orientale d'Israël, qui devait donc veiller à ce que cette frontière soit aussi éloignée que possible des grands centres urbains, industriels et économiques de la plaine côtière. La création de colonies était considérée comme un moyen de créer une zone tampon permettant de mobiliser l'armée et de protéger le pays¹⁰⁰. Elle a mis des civils en danger, en violation du droit international¹⁰¹. Depuis, Israël a conclu un traité de paix avec la Jordanie, unique pays frontalier de la Cisjordanie. Les colonies servent aujourd'hui à assurer le contrôle interne et non à répondre à des menaces extérieures.

50. La Commission note que les attaques armées et les incidents de sécurité ont des effets néfastes importants sur les citoyens et résidents israéliens et palestiniens. Par exemple, pendant la deuxième intifada, entre septembre 2000 et août 2007, 1 024 Israéliens ont été tués par des groupes armés palestiniens en Cisjordanie et en Israël, dont 69 % de civils. Pendant la même période, 4 228 Palestiniens ont été tués par les forces israéliennes, dont environ 59 % de civils¹⁰². Israël applique des mesures à son propre territoire pour assurer la sécurité de sa population civile, mais il entreprend une grande partie de son action dans le Territoire palestinien occupé en partant du principe selon lequel les Palestiniens représentent un risque pour sa sécurité et qu'il peut donc légitimement limiter leurs droits¹⁰³. La Commission fait observer qu'Israël a certes le devoir de garantir la sécurité et le bien-être de ses propres citoyens, mais qu'il est également tenu d'assurer, dans le territoire occupé, la protection, la sécurité ⁹⁷ Voir l'ordonnance n° 101 concernant l'interdiction des actes d'incitation et de propagande hostile (Judée-Samarie), 5727-1967.

⁹⁸ Voir note du Secrétaire général sur la question de Palestine : texte du mandat (A/292). Voir également Ministère israélien des affaires étrangères, « Israeli settlements and international law », 30 novembre 2015, disponible en anglais à l'adresse www.gov.il/en/Departments/General/israeli-settlement-and-international-law.

⁹⁹ Voir S/PV.7853.

¹⁰⁰ Voir A/36/341-S/14566, annexe.

¹⁰¹ Voir www.molad.org/images/upload/files/National-security-and-settlements.pdf (en hébreu).

¹⁰² Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, Special Focus, « Israeli-Palestinian fatalities since 2000 – key trends », août 2007.

¹⁰³ B'Tselem, Forbidden Roads: Israel's Discriminatory Road Regime in the West Bank (Jérusalem, août 2004), p. 3.

et le bien-être général de la population vivant sous occupation¹⁰⁴. Le droit international ne peut être appliqué de manière sélective et doit être mis en œuvre intégralement.

51. La Commission note que les gouvernements israéliens successifs, quelle que soit leur composition politique, ont encouragé l'expansion des colonies tout en déclarant officiellement soutenir la « solution des deux États »¹⁰⁵. Bien qu'Israël ait pris, à l'occasion, des mesures pour mettre en œuvre certaines politiques en faveur des Palestiniens – par exemple, pour leur permettre de travailler en Israël ou pour approuver un petit nombre de projets de construction¹⁰⁶ – ces mesures n'ont guère contribué à améliorer la vie des Palestiniens de façon générale, ni à favoriser la fin de l'occupation grâce à une solution réelle et juste. Au contraire, l'expansion continue des colonies et des infrastructures connexes contribue activement à asseoir l'occupation et rend la « solution des deux États » de moins en moins viable. Cette stratégie a permis aux gouvernements israéliens successifs de maintenir un semblant d'accord avec la communauté internationale tout en laissant pratiquement inchangées ses politiques d'occupation permanente et d'annexion *de facto*¹⁰⁷.

52. Les responsables israéliens ont exprimé publiquement l'intention de leur pays de rendre irréversible la présence des colonies et d'annexer tout ou partie de la zone C. Le 10 septembre 2019, M. Netanyahu, qui était alors Premier Ministre, a annoncé qu'il comptait annexer la vallée du Jourdain et le nord de la région de la mer Morte s'il était réélu¹⁰⁸. Ce plan a ensuite été mis de côté, mais M. Netanyahu a affirmé en août 2020 que la question de la souveraineté était toujours sur la table, s'agissant de la souveraineté israélienne sur la Cisjordanie¹⁰⁹.

53. Dans un discours prononcé devant des colons à Elqana le 17 mai 2022, le Premier Ministre, M. Bennet, a souligné le caractère permanent des colonies, qui font déjà partie intégrante de l'État d'Israël :

Avec l'aide de Dieu, nous serons également présents aux célébrations des cinquantième, soixante-quatrième, 100^e, 200^e et 2000^e anniversaires d'Elqana, au sein d'un État juif uni et souverain sur la Terre d'Israël.¹¹⁰

¹⁰⁴ CICR, « Cisjordanie : Israël doit respecter le droit international humanitaire », 13 septembre 2018.

¹⁰⁵ Pour l'exemple le plus récent, voir États-Unis d'Amérique, Maison Blanche, « Remarks by President Biden and Prime Minister Yair Lapid of the State of Israel », 14 juillet 2022.

¹⁰⁶ Voir A/76/433, par. 34.

¹⁰⁷ Akiva Eldar, « Israel's New politics and the fate of Palestine », The National Interest, vol. 120 (août 2012), p. 6.

¹⁰⁸ Voir www.kan.org.il/item/?itemid=58577 (en hébreu).

¹⁰⁹ Discours prononcé le 13 août 2020. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse <https://13tv.co.il/item/news/politics/politics/netanyahu-press-uae-1109997/>.

¹¹⁰ Propos tenus par le Premier Ministre Bennett lors d'une visite effectuée au conseil local d'Elqana à l'occasion de son quarante-cinquième anniversaire, le 17 mai 2022. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse www.youtube.com/watch?v=LeY_IYNC8ik.

VI. Incidences de l'occupation sur les droits humains¹¹¹

54. La Commission constate avec une vive inquiétude que, malgré les rapports publiés régulièrement par nombre d'organismes des Nations Unies et d'acteurs de la communauté internationale, la gravité des violences et la portée des mesures prises par Israël pour maintenir son occupation ont augmenté au fil du temps, de même que le nombre de personnes qui en pâtissent¹¹². Les nombreuses violations des droits humains et atteintes à ces droits ainsi que les violations du droit international humanitaire dont il est fait état dans ces rapports résultent directement de l'occupation israélienne. Cette section ne couvre pas tous les droits touchés par l'occupation et porte principalement sur la zone C de la Cisjordanie. La Commission souligne que toutes les zones du Territoire palestinien occupé sont touchées par les politiques d'occupation israéliennes, notamment par les incursions et les raids qui sont menés par les forces de sécurité israéliennes dans l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est et qui font souvent des victimes parmi les civils, y compris des enfants¹¹³.

A. Environnement coercitif

« Ils viennent la nuit pendant que nous dormons et jettent des pierres à nos portes et à nos fenêtres. Nous restons à l'intérieur, mais ils nous provoquent jusqu'à ce que nous sortions. Ils nous provoquent par des propos très virulents : "Nous allons vous priver de ces terres, vous brûler et vous expulser, cet endroit est à nous et nous allons le récupérer" ».

Femme palestinienne, province d'Hébron

55. Israël a créé et maintient un environnement coercitif complexe¹¹⁴, caractérisé notamment par la destruction d'habitations et de biens, l'emploi excessif de la force par les forces de sécurité, l'incarcération massive, les violences des colons, la restriction des déplacements aux points de contrôle et sur les routes, et les contraintes qui réduisent l'accès aux moyens de subsistance, aux produits de première nécessité, aux services et à l'aide humanitaire¹¹⁵.

56. Les 34 000 Palestiniens qui vivent dans la zone H2 d'Hébron ou à proximité sont séparés du reste de la ville par 22 points de contrôle et vivent au quotidien dans un environnement coercitif¹¹⁶. Ils peinent à accéder aux soins médicaux de base, ce

¹¹¹ Sauf indication contraire, les citations qui suivent dans les encadrés sont issues d'entretiens menés avec des victimes entre mai et juillet 2022. Le présent chapitre se fonde sur des réunions tenues avec divers interlocuteurs et sur des entretiens menés avec des victimes et des témoins pendant la période de mars à juillet 2022.

¹¹² Voir, par exemple, A/HRC/49/87, par. 5.

¹¹³ Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, page Facebook intitulée « UN human rights – Palestine », publication du 1^{er} juillet 2022. Disponible à l'adresse www.facebook.com/UNHumanRightsOPT.

¹¹⁴ Par exemple, A/HRC/34/39, par. 41.

¹¹⁵ Voir Conseil norvégien pour les réfugiés, « Impacts of annexation on humanitarian relief and development in the West Bank: frequently asked questions », juin 2020, disponible auprès de la Commission.

¹¹⁶ Voir B'Tselem, « List of military checkpoints in the West Bank and Gaza Strip », 11 novembre 2021. Voir également Médecins sans frontières, « "We are all afraid": Settler attacks against Palestinians in Hebron on the rise », 16 août 2021.

qui porte atteinte à leur droit au meilleur état de santé physique et mentale possible¹¹⁷. Ce problème touche tout particulièrement les femmes enceintes, les personnes âgées et les personnes handicapées qui ont besoin de soins et de traitements d'urgence.

57. Lorsque des personnes quittent leur domicile du fait de cette coercition, celle-ci peut constituer un élément du crime de déportation ou de transfert forcé de population, crime contre l'humanité visé au paragraphe 1 d) de l'article 7 du Statut de Rome. En juillet 2022, 19 ménages palestiniens, soit 100 personnes, ont quitté leur communauté d'éleveurs de Ras el-Tin, dans la zone C. Certaines de ces familles ont expliqué au Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires qu'elles étaient parties parce que leurs conditions de vie étaient devenues intolérables, citant les mesures coercitives qui leur étaient imposées dans le cadre de l'occupation par les autorités israéliennes et par les colons israéliens, qui étaient souvent armés. Certains membres de la communauté ont affirmé que des responsables israéliens leur avaient explicitement ordonné de s'installer dans la zone B¹¹⁸.

58. L'environnement coercitif a des effets particulièrement néfastes sur les enfants palestiniens, dont la vie est marquée par la présence militaire constante, les fréquents affrontements et actes de violence, les restrictions de mouvement et la destruction d'habitations, d'infrastructures et de biens. Vingt enfants ont été tués en Cisjordanie depuis le début de l'année 2022, et 56 ordres de démolition d'écoles sont actuellement en attente d'exécution en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est¹¹⁹. Depuis 1967, des milliers d'enfants ont été déplacés et transférés de force à la suite de la démolition de 28 000 logements palestiniens. Cette situation compromet gravement le droit des enfants au meilleur état de santé mentale et physique possible¹²⁰. Les informations disponibles font état d'un taux élevé d'abandon scolaire et des risques correspondants, à savoir le travail des enfants et les mariages précoces, qui touchent plus particulièrement les garçons et les filles, respectivement. Les filles sont souvent retirées de l'école parce que l'on craint que leur sécurité soit compromise dans le climat coercitif qui règne, tandis que les garçons abandonnent leur scolarité en grande partie parce qu'ils sont incités à contribuer aux ressources financières du ménage. Les garçons sont particulièrement exposés à d'autres violations des droits humains, risquant davantage d'être tués ou blessés par les forces de sécurité israéliennes lors d'affrontements, d'incidents de jets de pierres et de manifestations, ainsi que d'être incarcérés¹²¹.

¹¹⁷ Voir Médecins sans frontières, « Providing mental health care to Palestinians living under occupation », 6 mai 2022. Voir également Idit Avrahami et Noam Sheizaf, H2: The Occupation Lab, film documentaire, 2022.

¹¹⁸ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « About 100 Palestinians leave Ras a Tin », 3 août 2022.

¹¹⁹ Organisation des Nations Unies, « Statement of Lynn Hastings, United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator in the Occupied Palestinian Territory », 28 août 2022.

¹²⁰ Voir Save the Children, « "Danger is our reality": the impact of conflict and the occupation on education in the West Bank of the occupied Palestinian territory », 2020, p. 5. Voir également Save the Children, « "Hope under the rubble": the impact of Israel's home demolition policy on Palestinian children and their families », p. 4 à 6, 12 et 13 ; Occupied Palestinian Territories Education Cluster, Education Cluster Strategy Palestine 2020-2021, 2020, p. 9.

¹²¹ Voir Occupied Palestinian Territories Education Cluster, Education Cluster Strategy Palestine 2020-2021, p. 8 à 11. Voir également E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p. 30 et 31 ; A/HRC/43/67, par. 51.

« Un jour où ma fille et moi sommes sorties, les soldats du point de contrôle de Wadi el-Ghrous m'ont dit que ma fille avait du métal sur elle. Ils ont ajouté que le métal se trouvait dans son soutien-gorge et qu'ils voulaient vérifier. J'ai demandé pourquoi ils voulaient la fouiller dans la rue alors qu'il n'y avait aucune femme pour le faire. J'ai refusé de lui faire subir cela, mais ils ne m'ont pas écoutée, et ont fini par refuser de nous laisser passer. »

Femme palestinienne, province d'Hébron

59. Les effets conjugués des différentes pratiques d'occupation, notamment les restrictions des déplacements, pèsent sur l'égalité des droits des deux sexes et entravent l'autonomie des femmes et des filles. Les femmes et les filles sont particulièrement exposées à la violence fondée sur le genre dans le cadre de leurs activités quotidiennes¹²². Les fouilles effectuées par des soldats de sexe masculin et les actes de harcèlement qui sont commis, notamment aux points de contrôle, compromettent les déplacements des femmes et des filles et tendent à les priver d'un accès égal à la vie familiale, à l'éducation, aux soins de santé et à l'emploi¹²³. Les femmes et les filles sont également victimes d'actes de harcèlement et d'attaques violentes perpétrés par des colons¹²⁴. Des victimes et des témoins ont font état de propos racistes et sexistes proférés par des colons et des soldats des deux sexes à leur rencontre ou contre des filles ou des femmes de leur famille, d'où des sentiments d'anxiété, de peur et d'humiliation¹²⁵.

B. Démolitions, expulsions, déplacements forcés et transferts

« La démolition de logements, comme vous le savez, compromet notre existence et notre sécurité en tant qu'êtres humains. Elle a donc un impact psychologique et émotionnel direct et perceptible sur nous, en particulier sur les femmes et les enfants, pour qui le foyer est l'endroit le plus sûr. »

Homme palestinien, province d'Hébron

60. Les politiques d'occupation appliquées par Israël se traduisent par des violations du droit des Palestiniens à un niveau de vie suffisant¹²⁶. Des logements palestiniens sont démolis fréquemment, étant donné que les Palestiniens sont généralement dans ¹²² Voir TD/B/67/5, par. 33 ; A/HRC/46/63, par. 21 ; A/HRC/50/21, par. 61 ; E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p. 11. Pour une définition de la violence fondée sur le genre, voir Comité pour l'élimination de la discrimination à l'égard des femmes, recommandation générale n° 19, par. 6, et recommandation générale n° 35 (2017), par. 14.

¹²³ Convention sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination à l'égard des femmes, art. 10 à 12. De tels faits ont également été rapportés par de nombreuses autres sources, par exemple B'Tselem, « Occupation routine: soldats detain Palestinian girl, 13, after settlers claim to see her holding knife », 30 juin.

¹²⁴ Voir A/HRC/12/48, note de bas de page n° 713 ; A/HRC/35/30/Add.1, par. 66 et 67 ; A/HRC/46/63, par. 11 ; CEDAW/C/ISR/CO/6, par. 30 et 31.

¹²⁵ Voir B'Tselem, « Sexism, homophobia and harassment by settlers and soldiers: life's routine in Hebron (video) », 11 juillet 2021. Voir également B'Tselem, « "You can take your camera and stick it straight up your big ass" », 29 août 2017 ; Idit Avrahami et Noam Shezaf, H2: The Occupation Lab.

¹²⁶ Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, art. 11. Voir également E/C.12/ISR/CO/4, par. 48 et 49.

l'impossibilité d'obtenir des permis de construire et qu'ils construisent donc sans autorisation. Les autorités israéliennes ont émis près de 20 000 ordres de démolition dans la zone C entre 1988 et 2020¹²⁷. À ce jour, plus de 8 500 structures ont été détruites dans le Territoire palestinien occupé¹²⁸.

61. Le droit international humanitaire établit que la propriété privée dans un territoire occupé doit être respectée et ne peut pas être confisquée¹²⁹. En outre, il interdit à la Puissance occupante de détruire des biens, appartenant individuellement ou collectivement à des personnes privées, à l'État ou à des collectivités publiques, à des organisations sociales ou coopératives, sauf dans les cas où ces destructions seraient rendues absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires¹³⁰.

62. La démolition et la confiscation de structures de subsistance telles que des commerces, des abris pour le bétail, des murs et des entrepôts, ainsi que d'infrastructures comme des canalisations, des citernes et des routes, réduisent considérablement l'accès des Palestiniens aux moyens de subsistance. Depuis le début de 2022, Israël a démoli 500 structures dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, dont 153 qui étaient liées à l'agriculture et 136 à des moyens de subsistance¹³¹.

63. Les communautés de bédouins et d'éleveurs sont particulièrement exposées au risque de subir des démolitions, des expulsions forcées et des transferts forcés. Les autorités israéliennes ont eu recours à la coercition de manière manifeste pour forcer des membres de ces communautés à quitter leurs foyers pour que des Israéliens puissent utiliser leurs terres. Les communautés d'éleveurs palestiniens de Massafer Yatta, notamment, ont fait l'objet de plusieurs vagues de démolitions et d'expulsions¹³². Le 4 mai 2022, la Cour suprême d'Israël a jugé que le transfert forcé de Palestiniens et la destruction de leurs habitations à Masafer Yatta étaient légaux¹³³. Cette décision est contraire aux dispositions du droit international qui interdisent la destruction de biens et la déportation ou le transfert forcé de la population civile dans les territoires occupés.

C. Colonies et violences

« Des colons ont attaqué des membres de ma famille à plusieurs reprises, mais la police n'a pris aucune de mes plaintes au sérieux. J'ai déposé des plaintes aussi bien auprès de la police israélienne que du bureau de liaison palestinien, mais rien n'a été fait et personne n'a été mis en examen. Personne n'est tenu responsable, et les violences ne cessent pas. »

Homme palestinien, province d'Hébron

¹²⁷ Voir B'Tselem, « Planning Policy in the West Bank », 11 novembre 2017. Voir également Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Demolition orders against Palestinian structures in Area C – Israeli Civil Administration data ».

¹²⁸ Bureau des Nations Unies pour la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Data on demolition and displacement in the West Bank » (cliquer sur le lien « more breakdowns »). Consulté le 23 août 2022.

¹²⁹ Règlement de La Haye, art. 46.

¹³⁰ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 53.

¹³¹ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Data on demolition and displacement in the West Bank » (cliquer sur le lien « more breakdowns »). Consulté le 23 août 2022.

¹³² A/HRC/49/85, par. 26.

¹³³ Décision de la Cour suprême dans l'affaire n° 413/13 et l'affaire n° 1039/13. Disponible en hébreu à l'adresse <https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=HebrewVerdicts%2F13%2F130%2F004%2Fn89&fileName=13004130.N89&type=2&fbclid=IwAR03oMksLjnT2qD1Zk1eEhbmrrFbGhCXm517cdRVh1GQB9B2eR6FmHUKr0>.

64. Les actes de violence des colons sont une manifestation clé de l'environnement coercitif, et leur nombre et leur gravité augmentent au fil des ans. De janvier à juillet 2022, 398 attaques ont été menées par des colons en Cisjordanie, dont 84 qui ont fait des victimes. À titre de comparaison, 496 attaques se sont produites pendant toute l'année 2021 et 358 en 2020¹³⁴. Les attaques sont également devenues plus graves : récemment, des informations vérifiées ont fait état d'attaques commises par des colons alors que les forces de sécurité israéliennes étaient à proximité, ainsi que de cas où les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont attaqué des Palestiniens aux côtés de colons¹³⁵. Le Ministre israélien de la défense aurait réaffirmé en décembre 2021 que l'armée israélienne était responsable d'intervenir lorsque des colons menaient des attaques. Dans la pratique, l'armée autorise les colons à être armés et n'intervient que rarement pour protéger des Palestiniens¹³⁶. La Commission souligne qu'Israël, en sa qualité de Puissance occupante, a la responsabilité de protéger les Palestiniens contre les attaques des colons. Ces attaques violent le droit des Palestiniens à la vie, à la liberté et à la sécurité de la personne. Les victimes des violences des colons ont également droit à un recours effectif et rapide, y compris à des réparations, mais ce droit ne leur est pas garanti¹³⁷.

65. La législation relative à l'occupation belligérante impose à la Puissance occupante de prendre des mesures pour rétablir et assurer, dans la mesure du possible, l'ordre public et la sécurité de la population sous occupation. Le droit international exige expressément que les personnes protégées soient traitées, en tout temps, avec humanité et protégées notamment contre tout acte de violence ou d'intimidation¹³⁸.

66. Les tribunaux israéliens ont mis en examen peu de personnes soupçonnées d'avoir commis des violences contre des Palestiniens, ce qui contribue au climat d'impunité qui règne¹³⁹. Les mesures prises pour établir les responsabilités ont été particulièrement inadéquates dans les cas où des colons ou des militaires les accompagnant ont tué des Palestiniens¹⁴⁰. Dans l'ensemble, les forces de sécurité civiles et militaires d'Israël protègent rarement les Palestiniens contre les violences des colons. Des éléments indiquent qu'elles ont observé sans intervenir des attaques violentes commises par des colons et, dans certains cas, participé à de telles attaques. Les autorités judiciaires obligent rarement les colons à rendre compte de leurs actes.

67. Nombre d'actes violents liés aux colons de Cisjordanie sont commis dans le contexte des avant-postes¹⁴¹. Le caractère inadéquat de l'action menée par Israël pour empêcher la construction d'avant-postes ou les démanteler, conjugué à l'absence de responsabilité effective pour les violences commises par les colons, a donné à ces derniers un sentiment général d'impunité et de liberté à l'égard de la loi. Ainsi, le village de Burin, près de Naplouse, a été attaqué à plusieurs reprises par des colons qui paraissaient venir de l'avant-poste de Giv'at Ronin. Dans certains cas, ces colons

¹³⁴ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, rapport sur la protection des civils pour la période du 2 au 15 août 2022, 19 août 2022.

¹³⁵ A/HRC/49/85, par. 13.

¹³⁶ Yaniv Kubovich et Amos Harel, « Israeli army and police blame each other as settler violence rages on », Haaretz, 7 février 2022.

¹³⁷ Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, art. 2, par. 3., et art. 6 et 9.

¹³⁸ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 27.

¹³⁹ A/HRC/49/85, par. 20.

¹⁴⁰ Ibid., par. 21 et 22.

¹⁴¹ Ibid., par. 40. Voir également La paix maintenant, « Violent settlement: the connection between illegal outposts and settler violence », novembre 2021, disponible en anglais à l'adresse http://peacenow.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2021/12/sattlers_report_eng.pdf.

auraient été escortés par les forces de sécurité israéliennes, qui n'ont pris aucune mesure pour empêcher leurs actes¹⁴².

68. Outre les actes de violence commis par les colons, la création d'avant-postes et de colonies est à l'origine de violences commises contre les Palestiniens qui participent à des manifestations, y compris des cas de recours à la force létale. On peut citer l'exemple de l'avant-poste d'Evyatar, au sud de Naplouse, qui a été établi par des colons le 3 mai 2021. En réaction à sa création, les Palestiniens de la ville de Bayta, où l'avant-poste avait été établi, ont organisé des manifestations presque quotidiennement. Les manifestants ont lancé des pierres et, à certaines occasions, des cocktails Molotov en direction des forces israéliennes. Ces dernières ont riposté par des tirs de balles réelles, de balles en caoutchouc à noyau métallique, de munitions lacrymogènes et de grenade incapacitantes, tuant au moins 10 Palestiniens, dont deux enfants, et en blessant plus de 6 000, selon le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires¹⁴³.

D. Privation de ressources naturelles, de moyens de subsistance et d'un niveau de vie suffisant

« Nous ne quitterons pas notre terre. Notre terre est notre principale source de revenus, c'est notre terre et celle de nos pères et de nos grands-pères. Où irions-nous et de quoi d'autre pourrions-nous vivre ? »

Homme palestinien, province d'Hébron

69. Les politiques israéliennes décrites dans le présent rapport, notamment celles qui concernent l'expropriation de ressources naturelles et les restrictions dans le domaine du bâtiment, ont des incidences directes sur les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels des Palestiniens, notamment leurs droits au logement, à un niveau de vie suffisant, à l'alimentation, à l'eau et à l'assainissement, aux soins de santé et à l'éducation.

70. Le contrôle total exercé par Israël sur les ressources hydriques est un obstacle clé à l'approvisionnement abordable et adéquat des Palestiniens en eau. Conjugué à l'interdiction de construire de nouvelles installations hydriques et d'entretenir les installations existantes sans permis militaire, ce contrôle accroît le risque de pénurie d'eau qui pèse sur les Palestiniens. Ceux-ci achètent de l'eau auprès de fournisseurs publics ou privés à un coût élevé, environ six fois supérieur au prix national¹⁴⁴. Le prix de l'eau livrée par camion-citerne en Cisjordanie est trois fois plus élevé que le prix national de l'eau courante¹⁴⁵.

¹⁴² B'Tselem, « Burin, Nablus District: settlers attack Israeli activists with stones and clubs and vandalize cars », 2 mars 2022. Voir également B'Tselem, « Israeli settlers escorted by soldiers attack homes with stones in Burin, Nablus District », 18 juillet 2022.

¹⁴³ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, base de données « Data on casualties », disponible à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties. Voir également A/HRC/49/85, par. 42 à 49.

¹⁴⁴ A/HRC/48/43, par. 26 à 35 et 43.

¹⁴⁵ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, Reliefweb, « Challenges accessing water in the West Bank », 14 avril 2021.

« Les femmes sont la pierre angulaire de notre société. Nous faisons le ménage et la cuisine, nous fabriquons les produits laitiers et nous gardons les moutons. L'occupation nous prive d'électricité, d'eau, de routes, d'éducation : tout cela affecte la vie et le rôle des femmes dans nos communautés. Les hommes travaillent à l'extérieur du village et ne sont pas toujours là. »

Femme palestinienne, province d'Hébron

71. Comme il n'y a pas suffisamment d'eau disponible à un prix abordable, les éleveurs des zones rurales manquent d'eau pour s'occuper de leur bétail. En outre, dans le cadre de ses politiques de démolition, Israël confisque souvent les citernes d'eau appartenant aux communautés d'éleveurs. Par exemple, dans le village d'el-Jouaya, dans les collines du sud d'Hébron, trois citernes d'eau ont été confisquées par l'Administration civile le 19 juillet 2022¹⁴⁶. Les femmes et les filles sont particulièrement touchées par le manque d'eau, parce qu'elles ont des besoins supplémentaires pour leur hygiène et qu'elles sont censées se procurer de l'eau pour la consommation domestique, le nettoyage, la lessive et les soins aux enfants, aux personnes âgées et aux malades, ainsi que pour s'occuper du bétail¹⁴⁷.

72. L'agriculture palestinienne a subi les effets des politiques israéliennes relatives à la gestion de l'eau, à l'expropriation de terres et au déversement de déchets¹⁴⁸. La superficie des terres disponibles pour l'agriculture palestinienne est passée de 2,4 millions de dounoums en 1980 à environ 1 million de dounoums en 2010, tandis que la part de l'agriculture dans le produit intérieur brut palestinien est passée de 35 % en 1972 à seulement 4 % ces dernières années¹⁴⁹.

73. Les femmes ont été particulièrement touchées par le déclin du secteur agricole, faute de nouvelles possibilités d'emploi¹⁵⁰. Alors qu'environ 60 % des femmes palestiniennes travaillaient dans l'agriculture avant l'occupation, elles ne sont plus que 8 % aujourd'hui, ce qui s'explique principalement par la perte de terres et de ressources en eau¹⁵¹. En outre, la plupart des autres emplois en Israël et dans les colonies israéliennes sont moins viables pour les femmes, étant donné qu'ils relèvent du secteur de la construction ou parce qu'il faut passer par des points de contrôle israéliens pour y accéder¹⁵². Le taux d'activité des Palestiniens de Cisjordanie affiche un grand écart entre les femmes et les hommes. Chez les femmes, il est estimé à 17 %, contre 74 % chez les hommes, et compte parmi les 10 taux les plus faibles à l'échelle ¹⁴⁶ B'Tselem, « Israel demolishes home and 2 livestock enclosures and rest tent, and confiscates 3 water containers, al-Jawaya, South Hebron Hills », 19 juillet 2022.

¹⁴⁷ Voir également E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p. 23 et 35. Voir également Bimkom, « The effect of forced transfer on Bedouin women », 2017 ; Abdel-Rahman Al-Tamimi, Environmental Challenges in Palestine "Gender Perspectives", Palestinian Working Women Society for Development (octobre 2021), p. 16, 26 et 27.

¹⁴⁸ Voir Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling, « WCLAC's shadow report for the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 66th Session – Israel Review », 2019, p. 11. Disponible à l'adresse <http://www.wclac.org/files/library/19/10/yekz3kqu2vf4q0o3xolozc.pdf>.

¹⁴⁹ Voir CNUCED, The Besieged Palestinian Agricultural Sector, p. 7 et 8. Voir aussi TD/B/67/5, par. 31.

¹⁵⁰ Voir TD/B/67/5, par. 31, et Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling, « WCLAC's shadow report », p. 11.

¹⁵¹ Voir Organisation internationale du Travail (OIT), La situation des travailleurs des territoires arabes occupés : Rapport du Directeur général – Annexe, 2021 (document ILC.109/DG/APP/2021), p. 18.

¹⁵² Voir TD/B/67/5, par. 31.

mondiale¹⁵³. Les femmes voient également leur droit à des moyens de subsistance compromis par les écarts de revenus persistants et par leur manque de contrôle sur d'autres actifs économiques comme les biens fonciers et autres¹⁵⁴.

74. La Commission estime que les politiques appliquées par Israël ont des effets graves sur l'environnement, en violation des obligations faites à la Puissance occupante de préserver les biens publics et privés du territoire occupé, sauf en cas de nécessité militaire¹⁵⁵. C'est notamment le cas des activités de construction, dont l'édification du mur, de la destruction d'oliveraies, de vignobles et d'orangerais au détriment de la biodiversité et des écosystèmes, du transfert de déchets dangereux israéliens vers des usines de traitement en Cisjordanie en violation de la Convention de Bâle sur le contrôle des mouvements transfrontières de déchets dangereux et de leur élimination¹⁵⁶, du transfert de déchets électroniques¹⁵⁷, de la surexploitation des ressources naturelles, notamment de l'eau¹⁵⁸, de l'absence de contrôle de la pollution atmosphérique pour les industries israéliennes en Cisjordanie et des dommages considérables causés aux terres agricoles¹⁵⁹.

VII. Conclusions

A Légalité de l'occupation : permanence et annexion de facto

75. La Commission estime qu'il y a des motifs raisonnables de conclure que l'occupation israélienne du territoire palestinien est aujourd'hui illégale au regard du droit international en raison de sa permanence et des mesures mises en œuvre par Israël pour annexer de facto et de jure certaines parties de ce territoire. Les mesures prises par Israël pour créer des faits irréversibles sur le terrain et pour étendre son contrôle sur le territoire constituent aussi bien des manifestations que des moteurs de son occupation permanente. L'entreprise de peuplement est le principal moyen par lequel ces résultats sont obtenus. Les déclarations des responsables israéliens constituent une preuve supplémentaire du fait qu'Israël a prévu que l'occupation sera permanente, tout comme l'absence de mesures visant à mettre fin à l'occupation, notamment en vue de la « solution des deux États » ou de toute autre solution. En continuant d'occuper le territoire par la force, Israël encourt des responsabilités internationales du fait de la violation persistante d'une obligation internationale et reste responsable de toute violation des droits du peuple palestinien.

76. La Commission conclut qu'Israël considère l'occupation comme une situation permanente et qu'il a – à toutes fins utiles – annexé des parties de la Cisjordanie, tout

¹⁵³ En 2019. Voir également E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p. 32.

¹⁵⁴ Voir État de Palestine, Bureau central palestinien de statistique, communiqué de presse sur les résultats de l'enquête sur la main-d'œuvre, 7 août 2019, p. 24, disponible en anglais à l'adresse http://pcbs.gov.ps/portals/_pcbs/PressRelease/Press_En_7-8-2019-lf_3-en.pdf. Voir également E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p. 32 et 33.

¹⁵⁵ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 53.

¹⁵⁶ Voir Programme des Nations Unies pour l'environnement, State of Environment and Outlook Report for the occupied Palestinian territory 2020, Nairobi, 2020, p. 112. Voir également www.basel.int/TheConvention/Overview/tabid/1271/Default.aspx.

¹⁵⁷ Voir TD/B/EX\(71\)/2, par. 48.

¹⁵⁸ Voir A/HRC/48/43. Voir également Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « Israel's exploitation of Palestinian resources is human rights violation, says UN expert », 18 mars 2019.

¹⁵⁹ Voir B'Tselem, « Made in Israel: exploiting Palestinian land for treatment of Israeli waste », décembre 2017, p. 14.

en invoquant pour se justifier le caractère temporaire de la situation, lequel n'est qu'une fiction. Israël a pris des mesures qui sont constitutives d'une annexion de facto, à savoir notamment : l'expropriation de terres et de ressources naturelles, l'établissement de colonies et d'avant-postes, l'application aux Palestiniens d'un régime d'aménagement et de construction restrictif et discriminatoire et l'application extraterritoriale de la législation israélienne aux colons israéliens en Cisjordanie. La Cour internationale de Justice avait anticipé cette situation dans son avis consultatif de 2004, dans lequel elle avait déclaré que le mur créait sur le terrain un fait accompli qui pourrait fort bien devenir permanent, auquel cas la construction du mur équivaldrait à une annexion. Il s'agit désormais d'une réalité.

77. La Commission souligne que l'occupation et les politiques d'annexion de facto d'Israël pèsent lourdement sur la vie des Palestiniens de toute la Cisjordanie, qu'elles constituent de graves violations des droits humains et atteintes à ces droits et qu'elles sont contraires au droit international humanitaire. L'attachement d'Israël à l'entreprise en question s'est traduit par une série de politiques destinées à soutenir et à étendre cette entreprise, qui ont eu des effets négatifs dans tous les domaines de la vie palestinienne. Il s'agit notamment d'expulsions, de déportations et de transferts forcés de Palestiniens à l'intérieur de la Cisjordanie, de l'expropriation, du pillage et de l'exploitation de terres et de ressources naturelles vitales, de restrictions des déplacements et du maintien d'un environnement coercitif dans le but de fragmenter la société palestinienne, d'inciter les Palestiniens à quitter certaines zones et de faire en sorte qu'ils soient incapables de réaliser leur droit à l'autodétermination. La Commission souligne que les activités des entreprises contribuent à l'expropriation et à l'exploitation par Israël des terres et des ressources palestiniennes et qu'elles facilitent le transfert de colons israéliens dans le Territoire palestinien occupé.

78. Ayant prêté une attention particulière aux violations fondées sur le genre, la Commission constate que les politiques mises en œuvre par Israël dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ont des effets discriminatoires généralisés sur les femmes palestiniennes. Ces politiques ont placé les femmes dans une position de grande vulnérabilité économique et sociale par rapport aux hommes. Les porteurs de devoirs n'agissent pas pour remédier aux raisons structurelles qui rendent les femmes et les filles particulièrement vulnérables aux politiques d'annexion de facto appliquées par Israël. Les victimes de violences fondées sur le genre, notamment les femmes et les filles auxquelles les colons infligent des actes de harcèlement et d'intimidation, ne bénéficient pas de la protection d'Israël ni d'un accès à la justice dans les zones sous contrôle israélien. Tous les porteurs de devoirs, y compris Israël, ont l'obligation de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour éliminer la discrimination et les violences contre les femmes, y compris celles qui sont imputables à des acteurs privés¹⁶⁰.

79. La Commission considère que les questions de sécurité invoquées par Israël pour justifier nombre de ses politiques ne peuvent être examinées isolément. Israël a certes des préoccupations légitimes en matière de sécurité, mais la Commission constate que beaucoup de politiques et de mesures qu'il applique en Cisjordanie ne visent pas à répondre à ces préoccupations, la sécurité étant souvent invoquée pour justifier son expansion territoriale. En outre, malgré les problèmes de sécurité, toutes les mesures prises par Israël doivent être conformes au droit international applicable. La dépossession permanente et le déni des droits élémentaires du peuple palestinien ne constitueront jamais un moyen de parvenir à une sécurité durable.

¹⁶⁰ Convention sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination à l'égard des femmes, art. 2. Voir également Comité pour l'élimination de la discrimination à l'égard des femmes, recommandation générale n° 35 (2017), par. 24.

80. De plus, certaines politiques de « sécurité » telles que la restriction de l'accès à certaines routes aux seuls colons, les fermetures, les restrictions à la liberté de circulation et les démolitions de logements à caractère punitif sont fondées sur des mesures qui sont discriminatoires ou illicites pour d'autres raisons et semblent constituer une punition collective contre toute une population. La Commission souligne qu'Israël a le devoir, en sa qualité de Puissance occupante, d'assurer la protection, la sécurité et le bien-être des personnes vivant sous son occupation et de garantir qu'elles puissent mener une vie aussi normale que possible, conformément à leurs propres lois, culture et traditions.

81. La présumée annexion de jure par Israël de Jérusalem-Est est, sans le moindre doute, illégale, nulle et non avenue, et a été reconnue comme telle par l'Organisation des Nations Unies. La Commission souligne que la situation des Palestiniens continue de se détériorer à Jérusalem-Est à mesure qu'Israël y étend ses colonies et applique des mesures et des politiques visant à réduire encore l'espace dont disposent les Palestiniens et à contraindre ceux-ci à quitter leurs foyers.

82. Israël continue d'occuper la bande de Gaza au moyen du contrôle exercé, entre autres, sur son espace aérien et ses eaux territoriales, sur les points de passages terrestres aux frontières et le fonctionnement des infrastructures civiles, notamment l'approvisionnement en eau et en électricité.

83. En ce qui concerne la situation à l'intérieur d'Israël, la Commission a examiné le traitement des Palestiniens citoyens d'Israël et constaté qu'ils étaient toujours soumis à des lois et à des politiques publiques discriminatoires, notamment dans les domaines de l'éducation, du logement et du bâtiment, et de l'emploi, question qu'elle entend examiner dans un prochain rapport.

84. Selon la Commission, l'occupation permanente et l'annexion de facto par Israël, notamment les mesures examinées dans le présent rapport, ne peuvent pas rester sans réponse. Il convient de demander à la Cour internationale de Justice de donner son avis sur les conséquences juridiques du refus persistant d'Israël de mettre fin à son occupation et des mesures que ce pays a prises pour asseoir son contrôle et favoriser son expansion dans la zone occupée au moyen d'une annexion de facto, ainsi que sur l'obligation incombant aux États tiers et à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de veiller à ce qu'Israël respecte le droit international.

B. Droit pénal international

85. La Commission conclut que certaines des politiques et mesures mises en œuvre par le Gouvernement israélien, qui conduisent à une occupation permanente et donc à une annexion de facto, peuvent constituer des éléments de crimes au regard du droit pénal international. En particulier, elle appelle l'attention sur l'établissement de colonies dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, en violation de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Conformément aux conclusions de l'examen préliminaire de la Procureure de la Cour pénale internationale¹⁶¹, la Commission estime qu'il y a raisonnablement lieu de croire que des crimes de guerre ont été commis au titre du paragraphe 2 b) viii) de l'article 8 du Statut de Rome, compte tenu du transfert en Cisjordanie d'une partie de la population de la Puissance occupante.

¹⁶¹ Bureau de la Procureure de la Cour pénale internationale, « Situation en Palestine : résumé des résultats de l'examen préliminaire ». Disponible à l'adresse <https://www.icc-cpi.int/sites/default/files/itemsDocuments/210303-office-of-the-prosecutor-palestine-summary-findings-fra.pdf>.

86. La Commission estime également que les politiques examinées dans le présent rapport, lesquelles ont contribué au déplacement forcé de la population palestinienne qui vivait dans certaines zones, modifié la composition démographique du Territoire palestinien occupé et abouti à l'encerclement presque total des communautés palestiniennes par des colonies israéliennes, sont susceptibles de constituer le crime de déportation ou de transfert forcé de population, crime contre l'humanité visé au paragraphe 1 d) de l'article 7 du Statut de Rome. Ces politiques semblent relever d'une action intentionnelle, généralisée et systématique dirigée contre la population palestinienne pour la contraindre à quitter certaines parties de la Cisjordanie de façon à en modifier la composition démographique. Ces actes peuvent également constituer le crime de persécution, crime contre l'humanité visé au paragraphe 1 h) de l'article 7 du Statut de Rome.

87. La Commission estime également que le pillage et l'exploitation de ressources naturelles par des particuliers et des entités commerciales à des fins privées ou personnelles, dont il est question au paragraphe 37 du présent rapport, peuvent constituer le crime de pillage, crime de guerre visé au paragraphe 2 b) xvi) de l'article 8 du Statut de Rome.

88. Outre la participation directe à ces crimes et la responsabilité des dirigeants politiques, des chefs militaires et d'autres supérieurs, la Commission entend examiner la responsabilité pénale des personnes qui facilitent les crimes en question par des actes d'aide, d'incitation ou d'assistance.

C. Responsabilité d'États tiers

89. La Cour internationale de Justice a souligné qu'au titre de l'article premier de la quatrième Convention de Genève, tous les États parties étaient dans l'obligation de ne pas reconnaître la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé et de ne pas prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de la situation créée par cette construction. Elle a également estimé que l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et spécialement l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité, devait examiner quelles nouvelles mesures devaient être prises afin de mettre un terme à la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur et du régime qui lui était associé¹⁶².

90. Au titre des articles 146 à 148 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, les États parties doivent en outre fixer des sanctions pénales à appliquer aux personnes ayant commis, ou donné l'ordre de commettre, l'une ou l'autre des infractions graves qui y sont définies. Plusieurs des infractions en question sont recensées dans le présent rapport, à savoir notamment la déportation ou le transfert illégal d'une personne protégée ou la détention illégale d'une telle personne, ainsi que les mesures de destruction et d'expropriation de biens exécutées sur une grande échelle, en l'absence de nécessité militaire et de manière illicite et arbitraire.

¹⁶² Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C. I. J. Recueil 2004, p. 136, par. 159 et 160.

VIII. Recommandations

91. La Commission formule les recommandations suivantes à l'intention du Gouvernement israélien :

a) Se conformer pleinement au droit international et mettre fin sans délai à l'occupation de territoires palestiniens et syriens, qui dure depuis 55 ans ;

b) S'acquitter des obligations que lui imposent le droit international humanitaire et le droit international des droits humains, notamment l'obligation de respecter, de protéger et de réaliser le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination et son droit d'utiliser librement les ressources naturelles, conformément au droit international des droits humains, notamment à l'article premier commun au Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et au Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels.

92. La Commission recommande à l'Assemblée générale de prendre les mesures suivantes :

a) Adresser d'urgence à la Cour internationale de Justice une demande d'avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques du refus persistant par Israël de mettre fin à son occupation du Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, qui constitue une annexion de facto, sur les politiques appliquées pour maintenir cette occupation et sur le refus par Israël de respecter le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, ainsi que sur l'obligation incombant aux États tiers et à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de veiller au respect du droit international ;

b) Transmettre le présent rapport au Conseil de sécurité et lui demander d'envisager de nouvelles mesures pour faire cesser la situation illégale résultant de l'occupation permanente imposée par Israël, et demander au Conseil d'exiger qu'Israël mette fin immédiatement à son occupation permanente.

93. La Commission recommande que le Bureau de la Procureure de la Cour pénale internationale accorde un degré de priorité élevé à l'enquête sur la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé et qu'elle s'emploie non seulement à identifier les auteurs directs des crimes visés par le Statut de Rome et les supérieurs hiérarchiques responsables, mais également à enquêter sur les personnes qui ont apporté leur aide, leur concours ou toute autre forme d'assistance aux actes en question, y compris en fournissant les moyens employés pour les commettre.

94. La Commission recommande au Conseil de sécurité d'envisager d'adopter d'urgence des mesures pour garantir qu'Israël se conforme immédiatement à ses obligations juridiques internationales et aux dispositions de ses résolutions antérieures, notamment celles dans lesquelles il a demandé qu'il soit mis fin à l'occupation, déclaré que l'acquisition de territoires par la force était inadmissible et estimé que les activités de peuplement constituaient une violation flagrante du droit international.

95. La Commission recommande aux États Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies de s'acquitter des obligations que leur impose le droit international, notamment de leurs obligations extraterritoriales en matière de droits humains et des obligations découlant de l'article premier commun aux quatre Conventions de Genève et des articles 146, 147 et 148 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, y compris en engageant des enquêtes et des poursuites visant les personnes soupçonnées d'avoir commis des crimes de droit international dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ou d'avoir apporté leur aide ou leur concours aux personnes qui ont commis ces crimes ou tenté de les commettre.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
4 octobre 2001
Français
Original: anglais

Cinquante-sixième session

Point 119 c) de l'ordre du jour

Questions relatives aux droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme
et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Question de la violation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés, y compris la Palestine

Note du Secrétaire général*

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale un rapport sur les violations du droit humanitaire international et des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Ledit rapport a été établi par John Dugard, Rapporteur spécial, en application de la section A de la résolution 1993/2 et de la résolution 2001/7 de la Commission des droits de l'homme et de la décision 2001/246 du Conseil économique et social.

* Note explicative établie en application du paragraphe 10 de la résolution 55/222 de l'Assemblée générale : document présenté le 4 octobre 2001 seulement, dans le souci d'y faire figurer une information aussi actuelle que possible.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial de la Commission des droits de l'homme sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	3
II. Mandat du Rapporteur spécial.....	3
III. L'occupation en tant que cause sous-jacente du conflit.....	5
IV. La violence et les pertes en vies humaines.....	6
V. Occupation et deuxième Intifada	8
A. Colonies	8
B. Démolition de maisons et destruction de biens	9
C. Bouclages et postes de contrôle : restrictions à la liberté de circulation.....	10
D. La Maison d'Orient	11
VI. Conclusions	11

I. Introduction

1. L'actuel Rapporteur spécial, M. John Dugard (Afrique du Sud), a été nommé en juillet 2001. En août 2001, il a entrepris une mission dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et en Israël et a tenu des réunions avec des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes et israéliennes, des organisations internationales intervenant dans la région et des membres de l'Autorité palestinienne. Il n'a malheureusement pas pu rencontrer les autorités israéliennes, celles-ci ayant clairement dit qu'elles ne coopéreraient pas car elles avaient certaines objections vis-à-vis du mandat du Rapporteur. (La question est abordée plus avant dans le présent rapport.) Au cours de sa mission, le Rapporteur s'est entretenu avec des interlocuteurs dans la bande de Gaza, à Jérusalem et en Cisjordanie. Il s'est également rendu à Rafah, Beit Jala et Shu'afat pour prendre la mesure des destructions infligées aux maisons et aux biens, et à Jéricho pour examiner la manière dont la ville avait été isolée au moyen de tranchées rendant les voies d'accès impraticables.

2. En février 2001, le Rapporteur spécial s'est rendu dans la région en qualité de Président de la Commission d'enquête sur les droits de l'homme, laquelle avait été établie en application de la résolution S-5/1 adoptée le 19 octobre 2000 par la Commission des droits de l'homme. La Commission d'enquête a séjourné plus longtemps dans la région, tenu des consultations plus larges avec des personnes au fait de la situation et rédigé un rapport plus complet (E/CN.4/2001/121) que le présent rapport. Elle a condamné le recours excessif à la force par les Forces de défense israéliennes, l'assassinat de personnalités palestiniennes, l'implantation et l'expansion des colonies de peuplement en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, les agissements des colons et le bouclage des zones palestiniennes, qui a entraîné de nombreuses violations des droits économiques et sociaux. La Commission a formulé un certain nombre de recommandations visant à mettre un terme à l'occupation militaire des territoires palestiniens et à mettre en place un système de nature à répondre aux attentes légitimes du peuple palestinien concernant l'exercice effectif par celui-ci de son droit à l'autodétermination et les préoccupations non moins légitimes du peuple israélien s'agissant de la sécurité.

3. Le présent rapport est le fruit de deux visites effectuées dans la région en 2001, de consultations et de discussions avec des personnes ne résidant pas dans la région, de l'analyse de documents sur la situation dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et d'une abondante couverture journalistique.

II. Mandat du Rapporteur spécial

4. Le mandat du Rapporteur spécial est défini par deux instruments. À la section A de la résolution 1993/2, la Commission des droits de l'homme a décidé de nommer un rapporteur spécial dont le mandat était le suivant :

« a) Enquêter sur les violations par Israël des principes et des fondements du droit international, du droit humanitaire international et de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, du 12 août 1949, dans les territoires palestiniens qu'il occupe depuis 1967;

b) Recevoir des communications, entendre des témoins et utiliser les procédures qui pouvaient lui paraître nécessaires pour s'acquitter de son mandat;

c) Faire rapport à la Commission des droits de l'homme à ses sessions à venir, en lui présentant ses conclusions et recommandations, jusqu'à la fin de l'occupation de ces territoires par Israël. »

Dans la résolution 2001/17, la Commission des droits de l'homme a accueilli avec satisfaction les recommandations figurant dans le rapport de la Haut Commissaire aux droits de l'homme (E/CN.4/2001/114) ainsi que celles qui figurent dans le rapport de la Commission d'enquête sur les droits de l'homme (E/CN.4/2001/121), a demandé instamment au Gouvernement israélien de donner suite à ces recommandations et a prié le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967 – en tant que mécanisme de contrôle – de suivre l'application de ces recommandations et de présenter des rapports à ce sujet à l'Assemblée générale à sa cinquante-sixième session et à la Commission des droits de l'homme à sa cinquante-huitième session.

5. Un certain nombre d'États, notamment Israël, ont émis des objections quant au mandat du Rapporteur spécial, faisant valoir qu'il désignait nommément Israël comme étant un pays violant les droits de l'homme, alors même que depuis l'entrée en vigueur des Accords d'Oslo (A/51/889-S/1997/357) et des accords y relatifs, l'Autorité palestinienne administre plus de 90 % des Palestiniens et contrôle intégralement ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler la zone A, qui englobe la plupart des villes et des localités palestiniennes. Ces objections seraient fondées si le Rapporteur spécial avait reçu pour mandat d'enquêter et de faire rapport sur les violations des droits de l'homme commises par Israël dans les territoires palestiniens occupés, sans que mention soit faite de l'occupation militaire dont ces territoires font l'objet. Cela serait injuste parce que l'Autorité palestinienne a par exemple compétence pour administrer la justice dans la zone A, or dans la plupart des sociétés, c'est dans le domaine de la justice que se produisent le plus grand nombre de violations des droits de l'homme. Le Rapporteur spécial n'a pas cependant reçu mandat pour enquêter sur les violations des droits de l'homme qui se produisent dans les territoires palestiniens occupés en dehors du cadre de l'occupation militaire. La section A de la résolution 1993/2 précise clairement que le Rapporteur spécial a pour mission d'enquêter sur les violations du droit international humanitaire commises par la puissance occupante, c'est-à-dire Israël, jusqu'à la fin de l'occupation des territoires palestiniens par Israël. Il existe une relation évidente entre le droit humanitaire international et les droits de l'homme, relation qui a été réaffirmée par l'Assemblée générale dans la résolution 2675 (XXV). Il est donc impossible d'examiner les violations du droit humanitaire international ou plus généralement du droit international sans faire référence aux textes relatifs aux droits de l'homme, notamment dans des situations d'occupation prolongée comme cela est le cas dans les territoires palestiniens occupés. Il entre donc dans les attributions du Rapporteur d'enquêter sur les violations des droits de l'homme commises par Israël dans les territoires palestiniens occupés, à condition que cela ne sorte pas du cadre de l'occupation militaire. C'est la durée même de l'occupation militaire des territoires palestiniens qui prête un caractère particulier au mandat du Rapporteur spécial et qui fait qu'il ne ressemble pas au mandat des autres rapporteurs nommés par la Commission des droits de l'homme.

III. L'occupation en tant que cause sous-jacente du conflit

6. En 1967, Israël a occupé la Cisjordanie et la bande de Gaza, occupation qui dure toujours 34 ans après. Israël a invoqué un certain nombre d'arguments afin de démontrer que du point de vue juridique la quatrième Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre de 1949 ne s'appliquait pas aux territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 par Israël, y compris Jérusalem-Est. D'une part, il a fait valoir que puisque la souveraineté de la Jordanie sur la Cisjordanie était contestable et que l'Égypte n'avait jamais revendiqué la souveraineté sur la bande de Gaza, Israël n'avait donc pas occupé les territoires en question au détriment d'une puissance souveraine. Par conséquent, bien qu'il soit partie à la quatrième Convention de Genève de 1949, il n'est pas juridiquement tenu de traiter les territoires concernés comme des territoires occupés au sens de la quatrième Convention de Genève. D'autre part, il a déclaré que même si l'argument précédent n'était pas fondé, Israël ne pouvait pas être considéré comme une puissance occupante dans la zone A, laquelle regroupe la majorité de la population palestinienne, puisque l'Autorité palestinienne administrait désormais cette zone.

7. Aucun de ces arguments n'est recevable sur le plan juridique. Le premier, qui repose sur une interprétation abusive de l'article 2 de la Convention de Genève, ne tient pas compte du fait que les principes régissant l'occupation visent à protéger les intérêts de la population d'un territoire occupé et non ceux de la puissance souveraine évincée. Le second qui pose qu'Israël n'est plus une puissance occupante car il n'exerce plus un véritable contrôle sur les territoires palestiniens occupés de la zone A n'est guère plus défendable. Le critère d'application du régime juridique d'occupation n'est pas de savoir si la puissance occupante exerce ou non un véritable contrôle sur un territoire mais si elle a les moyens d'exercer un tel pouvoir, principe qui a été affirmé par le Tribunal militaire des États-Unis à Nuremberg dans l'affaire List and others (l'affaire des otages) en 1948. Les Accords d'Oslo ont laissé à Israël le contrôle légal des territoires palestiniens occupés et le fait que, pour des raisons politiques, il ait généralement choisi de ne pas exercer ce contrôle, alors qu'il possède indiscutablement la capacité militaire de l'exercer (comme cela a été démontré en août 2001 par l'intervention militaire israélienne dans la ville de Beit Jala, en zone A), ne saurait le dégager de ses responsabilités en tant que puissance occupante.

8. La communauté internationale réfute donc l'argument selon lequel la quatrième Convention de Genève ne s'applique pas aux territoires palestiniens occupés. Le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont dans des résolutions successives exhorté Israël à appliquer les dispositions de la Convention et ont rejeté l'annexion voulue de Jérusalem-Est par Israël. Aux yeux de la communauté internationale, la quatrième Convention de Genève est la règle de droit qui doit s'appliquer.

9. Ces derniers mois, la violence dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et en Israël a pu faire oublier que l'occupation militaire constituait la principale cause du conflit que connaît actuellement la région. La presse se focalise tellement sur l'élimination ciblée de dirigeants palestiniens par missiles interposés et sur les attentats suicides en Israël qu'elle en vient à occulter l'occupation elle-même. Dans certains cas, le conflit est dépeint comme un conflit international entre deux États qui se disputent un territoire en employant chacun des techniques de combat différentes. Dans d'autres, il est présenté comme un conflit interne dans lequel les rebelles feraient de la terreur une stratégie militaire. Le cessez-le-feu négocié par les États-Unis dans le cadre du plan Tenet (Ha'aretz, 14 juin 2001) est certes une tentative méritoire pour mettre un terme à la violence dans la région, faire régner la sécurité et sortir de la crise, mais nulle part il n'y est fait mention de l'occupation militaire. Il faut pourtant garder à l'esprit qu'Israël a occupé la Cisjordanie (y compris Jérusalem-Est) et la bande de Gaza par la force en 1967; qu'il faudrait mettre un terme à cette occupation militaire, laquelle par sa nature même est un phénomène temporaire qu'un accord de paix raisonnable permettrait d'éliminer; que tant que l'occupation dure, Israël, puissance occupante, est tenu d'appliquer les dispositions de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

10. Le présent rapport met l'accent sur le fait que l'occupation militaire est la cause profonde du conflit actuel dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et en Israël et des violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire dans la région. Il vise à replacer la question de l'occupation à sa juste place. On ne peut que déplorer et condamner la violence dans la région, qu'elle soit imputable à des tirs de roquettes israéliens ou à des attentats suicides commis par des Palestiniens. Elle est la cause première des pertes en vies humaines et bafoue le droit à la vie, lequel figure en bonne place dans toutes les conventions relatives aux droits de l'homme. Toutefois, elle n'explique pas sur le fond les violations des droits fondamentaux dont la région est le théâtre. L'explication est à chercher dans l'occupation militaire imposée à un peuple par une puissance occupante.

IV. La violence et les pertes en vies humaines

11. Depuis le début de la deuxième Intifada, en septembre 2000, plus de 530 Palestiniens ont été tués et plus de 15 000 autres blessés. Les Israéliens ont perdu quant à eux plus de 150 des leurs. La plupart des victimes étaient des civils.

12. Les premiers mois de la deuxième Intifada se sont caractérisés par de violents affrontements entre des manifestants palestiniens, armés de pierres et de cocktails Molotov, et les Forces de défense israéliennes. La plupart des tués et des blessés l'ont été par des balles tirées par les Forces de défense israéliennes. Dans son rapport, la Commission d'enquête sur les droits de l'homme a conclu que les Forces de défense israéliennes avaient réagi de manière disproportionnée aux actes des manifestants et avaient fait un usage abusif de la force (E/CN.4/2001/121, par. 44 à 52). Depuis lors, la situation a changé du tout au tout, dans la mesure où les Palestiniens ne se contentent plus de manifester et recourent à la force armée et où les Israéliens ripostent avec des armes lourdes. Actuellement, la plupart des décès parmi les Palestiniens sont imputables à des tirs de missile dirigés contre des individus soupçonnés d'être des terroristes mais qui inévitablement font aussi des victimes innocentes, et à des coups de feu tirés par les soldats et les colons, le plus souvent au cours de fusillades. Du côté israélien, ce sont les attaques terroristes commises en territoire israélien et les tirs dirigés contre les colons sur les routes de contournement ou à proximité des colonies de peuplement qui font le plus de victimes.

13. En février 2001, la Commission d'enquête sur les droits de l'homme hésitait à affirmer que l'on était en présence d'un conflit armé non international, conformément à la définition qui en a été faite par la Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie dans l'affaire Tadic, à savoir une situation de « violence armée prolongée entre des autorités gouvernementales et des bandes armées organisées ». Aujourd'hui, au vu des fréquents échanges de coups de feu entre les Forces de défense israéliennes et les combattants palestiniens, il est probable que le seuil de violence a été atteint, même si c'est de manière irrégulière et sporadique. Toutefois, même si les Forces de défense israéliennes disposent d'une plus grande latitude dans l'exercice de leurs pouvoirs en tant que puissance occupante puisqu'elles sont maintenant chargées aussi bien de l'application des lois que des opérations dans le cadre du conflit armé, elles ne sont pas pour autant libérées de toutes les contraintes prévues par le droit international humanitaire et la législation relative aux droits de l'homme. Elles sont toujours tenues de respecter le principe de distinction, en vertu duquel les personnes civiles ne peuvent pas être prises pour cibles «sauf si elles participent directement aux hostilités et pendant la durée de cette participation» [principe qui a été réaffirmé au paragraphe 3 de l'article 51 du Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève (Protocole I)]. En outre, les Forces de défense israéliennes sont soumises au principe de la proportionnalité qui veut que les blessures infligées aux non-combattants ou les dommages causés à des biens civils ne soient pas disproportionnés par rapport aux avantages militaires qui pourraient découler d'une opération. Qui plus est, elles sont soumises à l'article 27 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui dispose que « les personnes protégées ont droit, en toutes circonstances, au respect de leur personne [...] et seront traitées, en tout temps, avec humanité et protégées notamment contre tout acte de violence [...] ».

14. Aussi bien les Israéliens que les Palestiniens ont violé des normes importantes relatives au droit humanitaire et au droit international, du fait que leur confrontation n'est plus de même nature. La pratique ouvertement admise par Israël, de l'assassinat de victimes expressément désignées ou des tueries visant des activistes palestiniens, ne saurait être conforme à certaines dispositions de la quatrième Convention de Genève, dont les articles 27 et 32 qui visent à protéger les vies des personnes protégées ne participant pas directement aux hostilités. Elle viole en outre certaines normes relatives aux droits de l'homme qui affirment le droit à la vie et interdisent l'exécution de civils sans mise en jugement et procédure judiciaire équitable. Rien ne justifie le meurtre de personnes protégées au motif qu'on soupçonne qu'elles se sont livrées, ou qu'elles se livreront, à des activités terroristes. De surcroît, de nombreux civils non soupçonnés de se livrer à une activité illégale ont trouvé la mort à la suite de ces meurtres ciblés, du bombardement de villages ou d'échanges de coups de feu, dans des circonstances qui témoignent d'un usage aveugle et disproportionné de la force.

15. La force à laquelle ont recours les Palestiniens est, elle aussi, contraire aux normes du droit international. Rien ne saurait justifier que l'on tire des coups de feu contre des colons. Certes, l'implantation de colonies viole l'article 49 6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève, et la présence des colons dans les territoires palestiniens occupés est illégale, mais il n'en reste pas moins que les colons sont des civils et ne peuvent être considérés comme des combattants, sauf évidemment s'ils sont engagés comme soldats dans les Forces de défense israéliennes. Le fait de poser des bombes dans des lieux publics en Israël, provoquant ainsi la mort de civils innocents, est contraire aux nouvelles normes du droit international, désormais codifié dans la Convention internationale pour la répression des attentats terroristes à l'explosif de 1998 (résolution 52/164 de l'Assemblée générale), dont l'article 2 qualifie de crime de tels agissements. On ne sait pas bien dans quelle mesure ces actions relèvent de l'Autorité palestinienne. Il ne fait pas de doute que cette dernière pourrait en faire davantage pour empêcher les coups de feu contre les colons et s'opposer à une culture de la violence qui est génératrice de poseurs de bombes suicidaires. D'un autre côté, bien qu'Israël prétende le contraire, il ne semble guère probable que la violence palestinienne relève d'une autorité centralisée quelle qu'elle soit. À cet égard, elle diffère de l'utilisation de la force par Israël.

16. L'échec des tentatives faites pour mettre fin à la violence, soit par des appels provenant des parties au conflit ou d'États tiers (notamment les États-Unis), soit par des arrangements conclus à l'extérieur (plan Tenet, par exemple), amène à conclure que le temps est venu de prévoir une présence internationale dans la région qui serait chargée de surveiller et de réduire l'usage de la violence. Cette conclusion qui s'impose est celle retenue par le G-8 des ministres des affaires étrangères lors de leur réunion à Rome les 18 et 19 juillet 2001. Malgré cela, les tentatives visant à persuader le Conseil de sécurité d'approuver un plan de cette nature ont échoué. Le Rapporteur spécial a de la peine à comprendre pourquoi la communauté internationale n'a pas sérieusement essayé de persuader Israël d'accepter une présence de cette nature (l'Autorité palestinienne l'ayant déjà acceptée). Des missions internationales d'observation ou de maintien de la paix ont été envoyées à travers le monde dans des situations beaucoup moins explosives et il n'y a aucune raison pour qu'il n'en soit pas de même dans les territoires palestiniens occupés.

V. Occupation et deuxième Intifada

17. La cause principale de la deuxième Intifada et de l'escalade de la violence est, de l'avis du Rapporteur spécial, la continuation de l'occupation – une occupation qui se poursuit depuis plus de 34 ans malgré la condamnation par l'Organisation des Nations Unies; une occupation restée identique dans le fond (sinon dans la forme) tout au long de la période de négociations qui a fait suite aux Accords d'Oslo; une occupation qui continue à frustrer et à humilier les Palestiniens. De l'avis du Rapporteur spécial, on ne pourra pas restaurer la paix dans la région tant que l'on n'aura pas une preuve patente que la puissance occupante a l'intention de mettre fin à cette occupation. Or, à l'heure actuelle, il ne semble guère établi que ce soit le cas. Bien au contraire, les signes de l'occupation se sont renforcés depuis le début de la deuxième Intifada. L'extension des colonies, la démolition de maisons et la destruction des biens, les restrictions imposées à la liberté de circulation et le blocus économique rappellent constamment aux Palestiniens que l'occupation continue.

A. Colonies

18. La communauté internationale sans exception s'accorde à penser que les colonies juives en Cisjordanie et à Gaza sont contraires aux dispositions de l'article 49 6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève, dans laquelle il est stipulé que la puissance occupante ne pourra pas procéder à la déportation ou au transfert d'une partie de sa propre population civile dans le territoire occupé par elle. De nombreuses résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale ont déclaré illégale l'implantation des colonies.

19. Aujourd'hui, on dénombre quelque 190 colonies en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, habitées par près de 380 000 colons, dont 180 000 vivent dans la partie orientale de Jérusalem.

rusalem. Les colonies sont reliées entre elles et à Israël par un vaste système de routes de contournement (interdites aux véhicules palestiniens), longées des deux côtés par une zone tampon de 50 à 75 mètres où toute construction est interdite. Ces colonies et routes, qui séparent les communautés palestiniennes et enlèvent aux Palestiniens des terres agricoles, ont fragmenté et le pays et la population. En effet, ils excluent la possibilité d'un État palestinien, car ils en détruisent l'intégrité territoriale.

20. Les relations entre les colons et les Palestiniens ne sont pas les plus heureuses : on se regarde, de part et d'autre, avec hostilité, colère et méfiance. Protégés par les forces militaires israéliennes et échappant à la juridiction des tribunaux de l'Autorité palestinienne, les colons ont commis de nombreux actes de violence à l'encontre des Palestiniens dont ils ont détruit des terres agricoles et des biens. Depuis le début de la deuxième Intifada, les cas d'actes de violence commis par des colons se sont considérablement multipliés. L'hostilité des Palestiniens à l'encontre des colons a pris des proportions alarmantes depuis le commencement de cette Intifada et la plupart des Israéliens tués lors du présent conflit ont été des colons ou des soldats chargés de protéger les colonies et les routes qui y mènent.

21. La paix est impossible sans un gel complet de toutes les activités liées aux colonies, ainsi que l'a souligné le « Mitchell Report » du 20 mai 2001 (Rapport d'établissement des faits constitué à Charm el-Cheikh). La réponse du Gouvernement israélien à cette recommandation a été loin d'être satisfaisante. Il a déclaré qu'il avait déjà pour politique de ne pas implanter de nouvelles colonies, et par ailleurs qu'il était nécessaire de prendre en compte les besoins actuels et quotidiens du développement de ces colonies. En d'autres termes, « l'extension naturelle » des colonies va se poursuivre.

22. Les preuves de l'extension continue des colonies ne sont que trop patentes. Au cours de son voyage, le Rapporteur spécial en a eu la confirmation au vu d'activités de constructions menées dans les colonies de Har Homa et Pisgat Ze'ev et de l'élargissement des zones tampons jouxtant les routes de contournement dans la bande de Gaza. Il a pu également constater l'augmentation du nombre d'unités de logement, l'élargissement des limites territoriales des colonies par l'installation de postes de caravanes adjacents, ainsi que de l'accroissement du nombre de colons en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, passé de 203 067 en décembre 2000 à 205 015 en juin 2001. Étant donné la générosité des allègements fiscaux accordés et la modicité du coût du logement dans les colonies, on peut être certain que ces dernières continueront à s'étendre.

B. Démolition de maisons et destruction de biens

23. La démolition de maisons dans le territoire palestinien, soit à des fins de sécurité (par exemple à Rafah), soit pour des raisons administratives (par exemple dans le camp de réfugiés de Shu'afat), se poursuit. Depuis septembre 2000, plus de 300 maisons ont été complètement détruites (contre 93 en 1999). Le Rapporteur spécial a pu constater de visu que des maisons avaient été démolies à Rafah et à Shu'afat par des bulldozers et à Beit Jala par des missiles. Ces actes commis par les autorités israéliennes ne correspondent guère aux dispositions de l'article 53 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui interdit de détruire des biens mobiliers ou immobiliers, sauf dans les cas où ces destructions seraient rendues « absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires ». Pour Israël, ces actes se justifient par des raisons de nécessité militaire, tandis que, pour les Palestiniens, ils font partie d'un plan plus vaste visant à entraver la croissance de la Palestine, à encourager l'émigration de Palestiniens et à humilier le peuple palestinien.

24. La création de zones tampons autour des routes de contournement et des colonies a eu pour résultat que les bulldozers ont « effacé » de vastes superficies de terres agricoles. Au total, 385 808 arbres fruitiers et oliviers ont été déracinés, et des puits et des constructions agricoles détruits.

C. Bouclages et postes de contrôle : restrictions à la liberté de circulation

25. Depuis le 29 septembre 2000, Israël a imposé des restrictions sévères à la liberté de circulation dans les territoires occupés. Les frontières internationales avec l'Égypte et la Jordanie ont été fermées, la bande de Gaza a été définitivement coupée du reste du territoire palestinien et plus de 100 postes de contrôle ont été installés sur les routes de la Cisjordanie. Les Forces de défense israéliennes ont installé des postes de contrôle à l'entrée des villages et, souvent, il n'est possible d'y entrer et d'en sortir que par des pistes, ce qui entraîne d'énormes difficultés. Des déplacements qui, un temps, ne prenaient que 15 minutes durent désormais plusieurs heures. Dans certains villages, essentiellement dans des zones proches des colonies et des routes de contournement, les pistes ont été également fermées par de grands blocs en béton et des piles de matières terreuses, de sorte que les habitants sont emprisonnés dans leur village. Le Rapporteur spécial s'est rendu dans la ville de Jéricho, autour de laquelle on a creusé une tranchée profonde, de sorte que les véhicules ne peuvent y entrer qu'en passant par un poste de contrôle des Forces de défense israéliennes.

26. Les effets cumulés de ces restrictions imposées à la liberté de circulation des personnes et des biens font, comme on peut le comprendre, que les Palestiniens qui en sont les victimes se sentent en état de siège. Il en est résulté de graves difficultés socioéconomiques dans le territoire palestinien. Les bouclages intérieurs ont en fait coupé les agglomérations palestiniennes du reste du pays et entravé toute circulation d'une localité à l'autre. En raison des restrictions imposées à l'entrée des Palestiniens en Israël, on estime que 115 000 Palestiniens se sont vu refuser l'accès à leur lieu de travail en Israël. Les conséquences économiques ont été catastrophiques : les familles de ces travailleurs sont désormais complètement dépourvues de revenus, et menacées d'indigence. Plus de 50 % de la population active palestinienne est aujourd'hui sous-employée. Les conséquences ont été également dommageables sur le plan de la santé et de l'éducation. Des ambulances se sont vu empêcher de transporter des malades vers les hôpitaux et certaines écoles n'ont pas pu fonctionner en raison de couvre-feux et de bouclages.

27. Les contrôles routiers sont devenus un des faits habituels de la vie des Palestiniens. Les Palestiniens sont obligés d'attendre de longues heures, le temps que les soldats israéliens fouillent les voitures et vérifient les documents d'identité. Afin d'éviter ces retards, certains Palestiniens laissent souvent leur voiture ou quittent leur taxi et traversent le poste de contrôle à pied pour prendre un taxi de l'autre côté. Cette pratique montre bien le but de l'opération. Il ne s'agit pas d'empêcher d'éventuels poseurs de bombe suicidaires de traverser les postes de contrôle qui mènent à Israël, car n'importe lequel d'entre eux pourrait contourner à pied le poste de contrôle en portant un bagage lourd. Il s'agit plutôt d'humilier les Palestiniens et de faire pression sur eux pour qu'ils cessent toute résistance à l'occupation israélienne. Il s'agit donc d'une punition collective du type de celle qui est interdite par l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

D. La Maison d'Orient

28. Le 10 août 2001, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont envahi et occupé la Maison d'Orient, siège politique du peuple palestinien dans le secteur oriental de Jérusalem-Est, en représailles à une attaque suicidaire à la bombe dans le secteur ouest de Jérusalem. Cette intervention, où l'on peut voir une autre preuve de la détermination du Gouvernement israélien d'imposer son autorité en tant que puissance occupante, a exacerbé une situation déjà tendue et a dressé un nouvel obstacle sur la voie de la paix.

VI. Conclusions

29. Il est à l'évidence nécessaire de mettre fin à la violence qui sévit actuellement dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et en Israël. L'assassinat par missiles guidés de Palestiniens spécialement visés, la pause de bombes en territoire israélien par des terroristes, et les massacres aveugles de civils, commis par l'une et l'autre des deux parties, doivent cesser. Qu'il soit difficile d'y parvenir, c'est ce que confirme l'échec des nombreux cessez-le-feu annoncés ces derniers mois – dont les Israéliens et les Palestiniens doivent reconnaître qu'ils sont les uns comme les autres responsables. Dans ces circonstances, il est évident qu'il faut qu'il y ait une présence internationale de quelque nature que ce soit (observateurs ou soldats de la paix) pour garantir que le cessez-le-feu tienne – ou tout du moins marque une amélioration de la situation actuelle. Il est recommandé qu'Israël et l'Autorité palestinienne donnent leur accord pour une telle présence internationale. Il incombe à la communauté internationale de faire en sorte que cet accord intervienne sous peu.

30. Israël continuant à refuser d'accepter que la quatrième Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre représente le droit applicable en la matière, il est impératif que les Hautes Parties contractantes à la Convention se réunissent dans les meilleurs délais pour étudier l'applicabilité de la Convention et les cas de violation de cette dernière.

31. Le droit humanitaire international et les normes relatives aux droits de l'homme ont été gravement violés pendant le conflit actuel. Israéliens et Palestiniens ne devraient ménager aucun effort pour promouvoir la primauté du droit. La violation par Israël de la liberté de circulation dans les territoires palestiniens occupés mérite d'être tout particulièrement étudiée.

32. Les colonies sont un signe constamment visible et de plus en plus marqué de l'occupation et de la conduite illégale d'Israël en tant que puissance occupante. Il ne suffira tout simplement pas de geler les colonies : des dispositions doivent être prises maintenant pour commencer leur démantèlement.

33. Il est nécessaire de restaurer la confiance des deux côtés, condition essentielle de la reprise de négociations devant aboutir à un règlement permanent de la question. Les Palestiniens pourraient sans aucun doute contribuer à restaurer la confiance en prenant des mesures plus fermes pour empêcher des actes de terrorisme en Israël.

On en attend davantage de la part d'Israël. Tant que le Gouvernement israélien ne prendra pas une initiative qui montre qu'il est disposé à envisager de mettre fin à l'occupation, il n'est guère probable que les Palestiniens croiront à sa bonne foi dans des négociations visant à régler de façon définitive la question. Une telle initiative pourrait prendre la forme d'un début de démantèlement des colonies : par exemple le retrait de toutes les colonies de la bande de Gaza. Le Rapporteur spécial en appelle au Gouvernement d'Israël pour qu'il prenne des initiatives de cette sorte afin de restaurer la confiance dans le processus de paix.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
29 août 2002
Français
Original: anglais

Cinquante-septième session

Point 111 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Questions relatives aux droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme
et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Question de la violation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires arabes occupés, y compris la Palestine

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial de la Commission des droits de l'homme sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux Membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport intérimaire sur les violations du droit humanitaire international et des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, présenté par John Dugard, Rapporteur spécial, en application des résolutions 1993/2, section A, et 2002/8 de la Commission des droits de l'homme et de la décision 2002/243 du Conseil économique et social.

* A/57/150.

 Note explicative établie conformément au paragraphe 10 de la troisième partie de la résolution 55/222 de l'Assemblée générale : le présent rapport est soumis après la date limite du 2 juillet dans le souci d'y faire figurer une information aussi actuelle que possible et la décision du Conseil économique et social.

Résumé

Au cours des derniers mois, l'escalade de la violence n'a fait que s'accroître dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et en Israël. Israël a effectivement réoccupé les territoires palestiniens et le processus de paix est au point mort. Les droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire ont énormément souffert de cet état de choses.

Les civils sont les principales victimes du conflit. Israël et la Palestine ont tous deux enfreint les principes fondamentaux de distinction et de proportionnalité dans les actions commises contre les civils ou les concernant. Les groupes palestiniens sont responsables du nombre croissant d'attentats-suicide à la bombe en Israël et du meurtre des colons. Les Forces de défense israélienne (FDI) sont responsables des lourdes pertes en vies humaines occasionnées par les incursions militaires qu'elles ont lancées, en particulier à Naplouse et à Djénine, et les attaques à la roquette menées contre des militants. Bon nombre de personnes tuées en Israël et en Palestine étaient des enfants.

Les incursions des Forces de défense israéliennes en Cisjordanie ont abouti à des arrestations et des détentions sur une grande échelle. Des détenus ont été traités de manière inhumaine et dégradante, qui constituait parfois des actes de torture. Ces incursions ont été marquées par des destructions massives de biens, estimées à 361 millions de dollars par la Banque mondiale.

Les opérations de bouclage, les points de contrôle et les couvre-feux ont annihilé la liberté de mouvement des Palestiniens, entraînant des conséquences désastreuses pour la liberté, la santé, le bien-être et l'éducation.

Les colonies illégales n'ont cessé de s'étendre. En outre, il existe maintenant un plan visant à construire une barrière ou à établir une zone entre Israël et les territoires palestiniens occupés, qui se traduira par une nouvelle annexion de territoires palestiniens.

Les normes fondamentales du droit relatif aux droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire ont été violées sur une grande échelle. La destruction et la désintégration de l'administration civile en Cisjordanie ont de graves incidences pour le peuple palestinien comme pour l'état de droit. En droit, Israël, en sa qualité d'occupant, est tenu de se charger lui-même de l'administration civile ou de permettre à l'Autorité palestinienne de s'acquitter convenablement de ses fonctions. Aux termes de la quatrième Convention de Genève, tous les États parties sont tenus de faire qu'il en soit ainsi.

Table des matières

	Paragraphes	Page
I. Introduction.....	1	4
II. Droits de l'homme et terrorisme.....	2	4
III. Les civils : victimes du conflit.....	3–6	4
IV. Détentions, traitements inhumains et enfants.....	7–8	6
V. Couvre-feux, points de contrôle et réoccupation de la Palestine.....	9–12	7
VI. Destruction de biens.....	13–14	7
VII. Intégrité du territoire palestinien occupé.....	15–20	8
A. Colonies de peuplement.....	15–19	8
B. Clôtures et zones tampons.....	20	9
VIII. L'occupation dans l'optique du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire.....	21–30	10
A. Violations des droits de l'homme.....	23	11
B. Violations du droit international humanitaire.....	24	11
C. L'administration civile dans un État d'occupation.....	25–30	12
IX. Conclusions.....	31	13

I. Introduction

1. Le 26 mars 2002, le Rapporteur spécial a fait rapport à la Commission des droits de l'homme à sa cinquante-huitième session sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967. Le rapport était fondé en grande partie sur la visite qu'il avait effectuée dans la région en février 2002. Depuis lors, bien des événements se sont produits. L'escalade de la violence s'est poursuivie dans les territoires palestiniens et en Israël. Israël a effectivement réoccupé les territoires palestiniens et le processus de paix est au point mort. Le Conseil de sécurité comme l'Assemblée générale ont adopté des résolutions, qui n'ont pas été suivies d'effet¹. Le présent rapport ne cherche pas à donner un compte rendu complet des événements survenus au cours des derniers mois ou des tentatives visant à restaurer la paix dans la région, qui sont de notoriété publique et ont été largement couverts dans les médias (voir aussi A/ES-10/186). Il est axé sur les principales violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire. Inévitablement, bien des événements surviendront dans les territoires palestiniens occupés entre la rédaction de ce rapport et sa présentation. Un additif sera donc présenté à une date ultérieure, à l'issue d'une visite dans la région prévue pour la fin du mois d'août.

II. Droits de l'homme et terrorisme

2. Depuis le 11 septembre 2001, la riposte à donner au terrorisme a été au centre des préoccupations mondiales et on a accordé moins d'importance à la protection des droits de l'homme. Ceci est fâcheux, car il est clair que la promotion et la protection des droits de l'homme sont la méthode la plus efficace de lutte contre le terrorisme. Les liens entre terrorisme et droits de l'homme ne sont jamais plus évidents qu'au Moyen-Orient, où la violation de ces droits dans les territoires palestiniens occupés a déclenché des actes de terrorisme en Israël, violant le droit fondamental qu'est le droit à la vie. Ces actes, à leur tour, ont engendré des actes de terreur militaire dans les territoires palestiniens occupés, entraînant inévitablement la suppression des droits de l'homme fondamentaux. Dans une telle situation, chercher à déterminer les culpabilités ne sert à rien. Il est infiniment plus sage de reconnaître que les violations des droits de l'homme sont une conséquence inéluctable de l'occupation militaire et s'efforcer de mettre un terme à la situation afin que le cycle de la violence laisse place à la recherche, de plus en plus difficile, mais de plus en plus nécessaire, de la paix et de la sécurité.

III. Les civils : victimes du conflit

3. Inévitablement, les civils sont les principales victimes des conflits armés et des guerres civiles. Le droit international humanitaire s'efforce de limiter les dommages infligés aux civils en exigeant de toutes les parties au conflit qu'elles respectent les principes de distinction et de proportionnalité. Le principe de distinction codifié dans l'article 48 du premier Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève de 1977 stipule que les parties au conflit « doivent en tout temps faire la distinction entre la population civile et les combattants ainsi qu'entre les biens de caractère civil et les objectifs militaires et, par conséquent, ne diriger leurs opérations que contre des objectifs militaires ». Les actes ou menaces de violence, dont le but principal est de répandre la terreur parmi la population civile, sont interdits [art. 51 2)]. Le principe de proportionnalité codifié à l'article 51 5) b) interdit les attaques sur une cible militaire dont on peut attendre qu'elles causent incidemment des pertes en vies humaines dans la population civile, des blessures aux personnes civiles, des dommages aux biens de caractère civil qui seraient excessifs par rapport à l'avantage militaire concret et direct attendu. Ce principe qui s'applique aux Israéliens comme aux Palestiniens a été confirmé par les Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève qui, dans une déclaration publiée le 5 décembre 2001, ont appelé les deux parties au conflit à : Malheureusement, aucune des deux parties au conflit n'a véritablement respecté ces principes tandis que le nombre de victimes ne cesse d'augmenter. Depuis le début de la deuxième Intifada en septembre 2000, 1 700 Palestiniens ont trouvé la mort ainsi que 600 Israéliens, au total. La plupart étaient des civils.

« assurer le respect et la protection de la population civile et des biens civils et à opérer en tout temps une distinction entre la population civile et les combattants ainsi qu'entre les biens civils et les objectifs militaires. Elles appellent aussi les parties à s'abstenir de toute brutalité ou violence contre la population civile, qu'elle soit le fait d'agents civils ou d'agents militaires, et de s'abstenir d'exposer la population civile aux opérations militaires ».

4. En Israël, la plupart des décès ont été causés par des attentats-suicide à la bombe commis dans des autobus ou dans des centres commerciaux très animés par des personnes qui transportaient des armes mortelles. Malgré la condamnation de tels actes par l'Autorité palestinienne et les chefs de la communauté palestinienne – et par la communauté internationale –, ce moyen de terreur, qui ne respecte ni le principe de distinction ni celui de proportionnalité, continue d'être utilisé par des groupes palestiniens paramilitaires.

5. Les Forces de défense israéliennes, censées bien connaître les règles du droit international humanitaire, ont, elles aussi, manifesté peu de respect pour les principes de distinction ou de proportionnalité. Les récentes incursions militaires en Cisjordanie, la réoccupation de villes et de cités palestiniennes, se sont traduites par de lourdes pertes dans la population civile. Ceci était particulièrement apparent dans l'opération Bouclier défensif de mars-avril 2002, au cours de laquelle le camp de réfugiés de Djénine et la ville de Naplouse ont été soumis à d'intensifs bombardements aériens et terrestres avant l'entrée des Forces de défense israéliennes, qui ont utilisé des bulldozers pour faciliter leur mouvement et auraient utilisé des civils palestiniens comme boucliers humains pour se protéger de tireurs isolés. Sur les 80 personnes ayant trouvé la mort à Naplouse, 50 étaient des civils; et sur les 52 personnes tuées à Djénine, 22 étaient des civils. Depuis novembre 2000, les Forces de défense israéliennes ont tué un certain nombre de militants par des bombardements ciblés. De plus, ces assassinats ont été souvent commis sans se soucier des civils proches. Sur les 165 personnes tuées dans ce type d'action, un tiers au moins était des civils. Un incident récent illustre dramatiquement la façon dont ces attaques ont parfois été menées. Le 22 juillet, les Forces de défense israéliennes ont effectué un raid aérien tard dans la nuit, visant un chef militaire du Hamas, Salah Shehada, alors qu'il se trouvait dans une zone résidentielle très peuplée de Gaza, raid au cours duquel 15 personnes (dont neuf enfants) ont été tuées et plus de 150 personnes blessées.

6. Bon nombre des victimes étaient des enfants. En 2002, plus de 100 enfants ont été tués – non à la suite de feux croisés entre forces palestiniennes et israéliennes, comme on le croit généralement – mais principalement parce que les Forces de défense israéliennes avaient ouvert le feu au hasard sur des quartiers civils ou les avaient pilonnés. Plus de 20 enfants ont été tués « accessoirement » au cours de l'assassinat de militants.

IV. Détentions, traitements inhumains et enfants

7. Les attaques lancées contre des villes palestiniennes en mars et avril dans le cadre de l'opération Bouclier défensif, ainsi que les opérations militaires menées par la suite en Cisjordanie, se sont accompagnées d'un très grand nombre d'arrestations et de détentions. Entre le 29 mars et le 5 mai, pour ne mentionner que cette période, quelque 7 000 Palestiniens ont été arrêtés, et 5 400 d'entre eux avaient été relâchés au 5 mai². Dans bien des villes et des camps de réfugiés, tous les hommes âgés entre 16 et 45 ans ont été arrêtés. La plupart d'entre eux ont été détenus pendant quelques jours seulement. Les arrestations de ce type constituent une forme de sanction collective car, dans la majorité des cas, la responsabilité individuelle des personnes arrêtées n'a été nullement prise en compte. Dans de nombreux cas, les personnes arrêtées ont subi un traitement humiliant et inhumain. Menottées, les yeux bandés et ne portant que leurs sous-vêtements, elles ont été traînées devant les caméras de télévision, insultées, battues, (notamment avec les pieds), et détenues dans des conditions insalubres. Ceux qui n'ont pas été libérés sont toujours détenus sans procès et n'ont pas accès à un avocat. Certains font l'objet d'une détention administrative, d'autres sont détenus en vertu de l'ordonnance militaire No 1500 du 5 avril, qui autorise la détention, pendant de longues périodes, des personnes arrêtées depuis le 29 mars. Cette ordonnance autorise également la détention au secret pendant une période maximale de 18 jours, qui peut être renouvelée pour de nouvelles périodes pouvant aller jusqu'à 90 jours. Enfin, de nombreuses allégations ont été faites concernant les tortures que subiraient les détenus (privation de sommeil, passages à tabac, violentes secousses, enchaînement à une petite chaise dans des positions douloureuses, bruits assourdissants, menaces contre des membres de la famille).

8. Dans mon rapport du 6 mars adressé à la Commission des droits de l'homme (E/CN.4/2002/32), j'ai appelé l'attention sur les graves allégations concernant les tortures et les traitements inhumains, tels que ceux qui sont décrits au paragraphe précédent, dont seraient victimes des mineurs détenus et emprisonnés pour avoir commis des infractions politiques, notamment pour avoir jeté des pierres en direction de membres des FDI. J'ai souligné que ces traitements n'étaient pas conformes aux importantes normes du droit international énoncées dans la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant (art. 37), la Convention contre la torture et autres peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants (art. 1 et 6) et la quatrième Convention de Genève (art. 27, 31, 32 et 76), et j'ai donc demandé aux autorités israéliennes de mener, au sujet de ces allégations (décrites en détail dans les rapports d'organisations non gouvernementales), une enquête approfondie conduite par un organe indépendant sans lien avec l'armée, la police ou les services pénitentiaires. Malheureusement, aucune mesure n'a été prise à cette fin. Au contraire, la situation des enfants s'est encore détériorée. On estime que 10 à 15 % des milliers de personnes récemment incarcérées sont des enfants³. Qui plus est, certains faits donnent à penser que de nombreux enfants auraient été soumis aux mêmes traitements humiliants et inhumains (qui s'apparentent parfois à la torture) subis par les adultes et décrits plus haut.

V. Couvre-feux, points de contrôle et réoccupation de la Palestine

9. Depuis le début de la seconde Intifada en septembre 2000, Israël contrôle totalement la vie des Palestiniens en restreignant la liberté de circulation. Les autorités israéliennes ont commencé par fermer les frontières internationales et isoler Gaza du reste du territoire palestinien. Elles ont ensuite installé 120 points de contrôle sur les routes de Cisjordanie. Enfin, en 2002, elles ont soumis au couvre-feu, non pas une ville ou un quartier, mais une grande partie de la population. Ces mesures, vigoureusement appliquées par les FDI, ont débouché sur la réoccupation du territoire palestinien.

10. L'opération « Determined Path », lancée par les FDI à la mi-juin, s'est soldée par la réoccupation de sept des huit principaux centres urbains de Cisjordanie, ainsi que des villages et des camps de réfugiés attenants. Entre le 18 et le 25 juin, un couvre-feu a été imposé à Djénine, Qalquiliya, Bethléem, Naplouse, Tulkarem, Ramallah et Hébron. Plus de 700 000 personnes ont été soumises à un régime comparable à l'assignation à domicile, le couvre-feu étant levé pendant quelques heures tous les trois ou quatre jours pour permettre à la population de se procurer des fournitures essentielles. Le couvre-feu était strictement appliqué par les FDI, lesquelles ont tiré sur de nombreux civils qui n'avaient pas respecté le couvre-feu.

11. Cette réoccupation au moyen de bouclages et de couvre-feux a influé sur tous les aspects de la vie des Palestiniens : pénurie de denrées alimentaires de base; perturbation des services médicaux en raison du nonaccès aux médecins et aux hôpitaux; interruption des contacts entre membres d'une même famille; et arrêt des activités des établissements d'enseignement à un moment important, à savoir celui des examens de fin d'année. Les services municipaux, tels que l'eau, l'électricité, le téléphone et l'enlèvement des déchets, ont été annulés ou interrompus, et les FDI ont interdit toute réparation des unités endommagées assurant la prestation de ces services. Cette situation a entraîné un arrêt quasi total des activités de production (secteur manufacturier, construction, commerce, services public et privé), d'où de graves incidences sur les moyens de subsistance de la majeure partie de la population et, partant, une aggravation considérable de la pauvreté. En mai, le Programme alimentaire mondial a estimé que 620 000 Palestiniens de Cisjordanie et de Gaza avaient besoin d'une assistance alimentaire d'urgence.

12. Le couvre-feu s'est appliqué à tous. Le Président Arafat lui-même a été enfermé dans ses locaux à Ramallah et il a été occasionnellement privé d'eau et d'électricité.

VI. Destruction de biens

13. Les attaques lancées contre les villes de Cisjordanie dans le cadre de l'opération Bouclier défensif, entre le 29 mars et le 7 mai, ont eu des effets dévastateurs. À Djénine, 800 habitations ont été détruites et bien d'autres endommagées, et plus de 4 000 personnes se sont ainsi retrouvées sans domicile. La Banque mondiale a estimé les pertes à 83 millions de dollars. À Naplouse, la vieille ville, y compris des sites religieux et historiques, a subi des dégâts considérables. La Banque mondiale a estimé que les réparations coûteraient 114 millions de dollars. Les réfugiés ont été le groupe le plus durement touché. Pendant les offensives militaires menées entre le 27 février et le 17 mars et entre le 29 mars et le 7 mai, quelque 2 800 unités d'habitation abritant des réfugiés ont été endommagées et 878 habitations ont été détruites ou démolies, laissant 17 000 personnes sans abri ou possédant un logement nécessitant des réparations. La Banque mondiale estime à 361 millions de dollars le montant des dégâts matériels causés par l'opération Bouclier défensif dans l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie, et à 305 millions de dollars celui des dommages imputables aux 15 premiers mois de l'Intifada⁴. Les plus touchés ont été le secteur privé (97 millions de dollars), les habitations (66 millions), les routes (64 millions) et les sites appartenant au patrimoine culturel (48 millions).

14. Dans le passé, la destruction des biens se faisait souvent de manière disciplinée et à des fins strictement punitives. Par exemple, les maisons des militants présumés étaient démolies dans le but d'infliger froidement une sanction collective, une pratique qui se poursuit encore aujourd'hui. La destruction de biens dans le cadre de l'opération Bouclier défensif avait toutefois un caractère gratuit qui a surpris même les détracteurs les plus violents des FDI. Dans bien des maisons où ils ont pénétré, les soldats israéliens ont fait des trous dans les murs pour passer dans les maisons voisines. Des trous ont parfois été faits pour passer d'un appartement à un autre alors que les soldats auraient pu y entrer en passant par un balcon ou une fenêtre. Encore plus grave, des témoignages font état d'actes de pillage, de saccages systématiques des maisons et de destructions aveugles de télévisions et d'ordinateurs dans les maisons, les écoles et les immeubles de bureaux⁵.

VII. Intégrité du territoire palestinien occupé

A. Colonies de peuplement

15. L'ensemble de la communauté internationale considère que les colonies de peuplement juives situées en Cisjordanie et à Gaza constituent une violation de l'article 49 (6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui interdit à une puissance occupante de transférer une partie de sa propre population civile dans le territoire qu'elle occupe. Dans nombre de leurs résolutions, le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont dénoncé l'existence de ces colonies, qualifiées d'illégales, et, dans leur Déclaration du 5 décembre 2001, les Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève ont réaffirmé cette position.

16. Aujourd'hui, la Cisjordanie et Gaza comptent quelque 190 colonies de peuplement dans lesquelles vivent 390 000 colons environ, dont quelque 180 000 dans la région de Jérusalem-Est. Les colonies sont reliées entre elles, ainsi qu'avec Israël, par un vaste réseau de routes de contournement bordées des deux côtés par une zone tampon de 50 à 75 mètres de large, dans laquelle aucun bâtiment ne peut être construit. Ces colonies et ces routes, qui séparent les communautés palestiniennes et privent les Palestiniens de terres agricoles, ont fragmenté tant le territoire que la population, et elles suppriment toute possibilité de créer un État palestinien car elles détruisent l'intégrité du territoire palestinien.

17. Les relations entre colons et Palestiniens sont extrêmement tendues, et chaque partie regarde l'autre avec hostilité, colère et suspicion. Protégés par des militaires israéliens et ne relevant pas de la juridiction des tribunaux de l'Autorité palestinienne, les colons ont commis de nombreux actes de violence contre des Palestiniens et détruit des biens et des terres agricoles leur appartenant. Depuis le début de la seconde Intifada, les actes de violence commis par des colons ont considérablement augmenté, l'hostilité des Palestiniens à l'égard des colons s'est intensifiée de manière inquiétante, et bon nombre des Israéliens tués dans le cadre du présent conflit étaient des colons ou des soldats chargés de protéger les colonies de peuplement et les routes menant à ces colonies. Ces derniers mois, les actes de terrorisme dirigés contre des colons se sont multipliés, des militants palestiniens ayant lancé des attaques contre des colonies ou des autobus se dirigeant vers ces colonies.

18. Malgré les menaces qui planent sur la vie et la sécurité des colons, le Gouvernement israélien n'a rien fait pour réduire le nombre des colons. Il a refusé d'aider ces derniers à rentrer en Israël et les a encouragés à rester sur place en continuant à leur offrir des habitations à bas prix, des prêts à des conditions avantageuses et des incitations fiscales⁶.

19. Les assurances du Gouvernement israélien, selon lesquelles celui-ci limiterait l'élargissement des colonies de peuplement sont démenties par les faits. Les colonies ont continué à s'agrandir, principalement par la création d'« avant-postes » informels – officiellement tolérés mais pas officiellement autorisés – à proximité de colonies existantes, ainsi que par la construction de nouvelles unités d'habitation dans ces colonies. D'après La paix maintenant, mouvement israélien pour la paix et les droits de l'homme, 44 « avant-postes » ont été construits depuis février 2001. En juillet 2002, des mesures ont été prises pour détruire certains avant-postes parmi les plus petits et les moins peuplés, une décision décriée par YESHA, l'association des colons, comme étant une incitation au terrorisme. Les colons disposent de pouvoirs très étendus dans les milieux politiques israéliens, ce qui leur permet pratiquement de dicter leur loi au Gouvernement.

B. Clôtures et zones tampons

20. Compte tenu de son incapacité à empêcher les auteurs palestiniens d'attentats-suicide d'atteindre leurs cibles en Israël, le Gouvernement israélien envisage une nouvelle stratégie qui consisterait à construire soit une clôture de sécurité de 360 km de long, soit une zone comprenant des tranchées, des barricades, des murs, des clôtures électrifiées et surveillées, et des routes pour effectuer des patrouilles, l'objectif étant de séparer Israël de la Palestine. L'emplacement exact et la largeur de la clôture ou de la zone n'ont pas été arrêtés, mais il ne fait pas de doute que le tracé du nouveau dispositif ne suivra pas scrupuleusement celui de la Ligne verte, qui marque la frontière d'avant 1967 entre Israël et la Jordanie. On assistera donc à un nouvel empiètement sur le territoire palestinien en raison de l'établissement d'une zone tampon de plusieurs kilomètres de large en Palestine et du rattachement à Israël des colonies de peuplement situées près de la Ligne verte. Jérusalem-Est et les colonies avoisinantes, telles que Ma'ale Adumim, seront également rattachées à Israël. Cette redélimitation unilatérale de la frontière au nom de la sécurité n'est en fait qu'un prétexte pour annexer illégalement le territoire palestinien.

VIII. L'occupation dans l'optique du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire

21. Dans sa déclaration au Conseil de sécurité le 12 mars 2002, le Secrétaire général, Kofi Annan, a demandé à Israël de mettre fin à son « occupation illégale » du territoire palestinien. Lorsqu'on lui a demandé d'expliquer pourquoi il avait qualifié d'« illégale » l'occupation du territoire palestinien, le Secrétaire général a répondu que le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale avaient tous deux déclaré, en diverses occasions, que certains aspects de l'occupation israélienne étaient illégaux. Il a mentionné en particulier la création de colonies de peuplement, l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est et les événements récents dans la région. Les observations du Secrétaire général mettent en relief le fait que c'est au regard du droit applicable en matière d'occupation qu'il convient de juger la conduite d'Israël et que nombre de ses pratiques portent atteinte aux principes fondamentaux de ce droit.

22. L'ensemble des dispositions applicables en la matière figurent dans le Règlement de La Haye de 1907, dans la quatrième Convention de Genève de 1949 et dans les conventions internationales relatives aux droits civils et politiques, aux droits sociaux, économiques et culturels, et au traitement des enfants, complétées par le droit international coutumier. Le fait que le droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme fait partie du droit applicable en matière d'occupation ressort clairement de l'article 27 de la quatrième Convention de Genève qui prévoit que la puissance occupante doit respecter les droits fondamentaux des personnes protégées. D'après le commentaire du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge sur cette disposition : « Le droit au respect de la personne doit être pris dans son sens le plus large : il couvre l'ensemble des droits de la personnalité, c'est-à-dire les droits et qualités qui sont, comme tels, indissolublement liés à la personne humaine, en raison de son existence et de ses forces physiques et mentales; il s'entend notamment des droits à l'intégrité corporelle, morale et intellectuelle, attributs indispensables de la personne humaine » (p. 201 du texte anglais). Les « droits de la personnalité » ont été proclamés, décrits et interprétés dans de nombreux instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme, en particulier dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels de 1966, ainsi que dans la jurisprudence des organes chargés d'en surveiller l'application. Ces instruments de défense des droits de l'homme complètent donc la quatrième Convention de Genève en définissant les droits protégés par l'article 27 et en énonçant la teneur de ces droits. Cela est confirmé par la Déclaration de Vienne adoptée par la Conférence mondiale sur les droits de l'homme en 1993, qui a proclamé :

« Il faudrait prendre des mesures internationales efficaces pour garantir et contrôler l'application des normes relatives aux droits de l'homme à l'égard des populations soumises à une occupation étrangère et leur assurer une protection juridique efficace contre la violation de ces droits conformément

aux normes relatives aux droits de l'homme et au droit international, en particulier à la Convention de Genève de 1949 relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre et aux autres normes du droit humanitaire applicable. »

A. Violations des droits de l'homme

23. Les droits les plus élémentaires ont été bafoués au cours du conflit, tant dans le territoire palestinien occupé qu'en Israël même. Le droit à la vie, dont dépendent tous les droits, a subi de très graves atteintes en raison des attentats-suicide à la bombe commis par des terroristes en Israël, des attaques lancées contre des colons dans le territoire palestinien occupé et des actes de violence perpétrés par les Forces de défense israéliennes à l'encontre de Palestiniens, notamment des actes terroristes, des assassinats, des incursions militaires et des fusillades visant des civils. Le droit à la dignité humaine, le droit de vivre à l'abri de la torture et des arrestations arbitraires, le droit à un procès équitable ont été massivement violés par les Israéliens lors de leurs interventions militaires en Cisjordanie. La pratique des bouclages, la mise en place de points de contrôle et l'imposition de couvre-feux ont complètement aboli la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens et le droit à la propriété a été gravement compromis par les offensives militaires. De même, les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels ont été bafoués. Les couvre-feux, la mise en place de points de contrôle et la destruction de logements constituent des violations des articles 11, 12 et 13 du Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels de 1966. Ces articles reconnaissent tous le droit à un niveau de vie suffisant, y compris le droit d'être nourri, vêtu et logé convenablement, le droit de toute personne de jouir du meilleur état de santé physique et mentale qu'elle soit capable d'atteindre, et le droit à l'éducation. Malheureusement, il a été porté atteinte à nombre des dispositions de la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant, notamment à celles concernant le droit à la vie, aux soins de santé et à un niveau de vie suffisant pour assurer le développement physique, mental, spirituel, moral et social de l'enfant, le droit à l'éducation, le droit de vivre à l'abri de la torture, des traitements inhumains et des arrestations arbitraires, et le droit à un procès équitable ainsi que l'obligation des États d'assurer « dans toute la mesure possible la survie et le développement de l'enfant » (art. 6, par. 2). En outre, en vertu de la Convention, les États sont tenus, conformément à l'obligation que leur impose le droit international humanitaire, de prendre toutes les mesures possibles « pour que les enfants qui sont touchés par un conflit armé bénéficient d'une protection et de soins » (art. 38, par. 4).

B. Violations du droit international humanitaire

24. Nombre des principes les plus élémentaires du droit international humanitaire ont également fait l'objet de violations. Comme on l'a vu plus haut aux paragraphes 3 à 6, aucune des parties au conflit n'a respecté les principes de distinction et de proportionnalité dans leurs actions dirigées contre des civils ou touchant des civils. L'interdiction des peines collectives « de même que [de] toute mesure d'intimidation et de terrorisme » énoncée à l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève a été enfreinte par les forces de défense israéliennes de maintes façons, notamment par la destruction de biens, l'imposition de couvre-feux et l'arrestation de tous les hommes de 16 à 45 ans. La destruction brutale de biens dans le cadre de l'opération Bouclier défensif, en particulier à Naplouse et à Djénine, est incompatible avec l'article 53 de cette convention interdisant la destruction de biens « sauf dans les cas où ces destructions seraient rendues absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires ».

C. L'administration civile dans un État d'occupation

25. Le droit régissant l'occupation, qui trouve son expression dans la coutume internationale, le Règlement de La Haye de 1907 et la quatrième Convention de Genève, vise à assurer que, malgré les besoins de la puissance occupante en matière de sécurité, la vie quotidienne des civils dans un territoire occupé se poursuit normalement. Dans le monde contemporain, cela signifie que les civils doivent pouvoir se nourrir, se loger et bénéficier d'un approvisionnement en électricité et en eau, que les services municipaux tels que le ramassage des ordures et l'évacuation des eaux usées sont maintenus, que les malades peuvent recevoir les soins médicaux dont ils ont besoin et que l'enseignement continuera d'être dispensé sans obstacle.

26. Il n'existe pas une seule règle du droit international prévoyant expressément qu'un occupant belligérant est responsable de l'administration civile d'un territoire occupé. Il existe néanmoins deux sources du droit qui créent une telle responsabilité : la première est l'article 43 du Règlement de La Haye et la deuxième se trouve dans les dispositions de la quatrième Convention de Genève. L'article 43 est succinct et n'énonce pas en détail les obligations de la puissance occupante. Il se contente de simplement stipuler que :

« L'autorité de la puissance légitime étant en fait passée aux mains de l'occupant, ce dernier prend toutes les mesures en son pouvoir pour rétablir et assurer, dans la mesure du possible, l'ordre public et la sécurité tout en respectant, à moins qu'il en soit absolument empêché, les lois en vigueur dans le pays ».

Les obligations de l'occupant ne sont pas énoncées parce qu'en 1907 « la mise en place d'un système d'administration par l'occupant était largement acceptée en pratique ... comme obligatoire⁷ ».

27. La quatrième Convention de Genève complète cette disposition en imposant à l'occupant l'obligation d'assurer « l'approvisionnement de la population en vivres et en produits médicaux » et d'« apporter les vivres, les fournitures médicales et tout autre article nécessaire lorsque les ressources du territoire occupé seront insuffisantes » (art. 55); d'assurer et de maintenir « les établissements et les services médicaux et hospitaliers, ainsi que la santé et l'hygiène publiques dans le territoire occupé » (art. 56); et de faciliter le « bon fonctionnement des établissements consacrés aux soins et à l'éducation des enfants » (art. 50). L'obligation de fournir des services postaux ainsi que des services de télécommunication et de transport et de maintenir des établissements de protection sociale peut être déduite de la quatrième Convention de Genève et du Règlement de La Haye⁸. Prises ensemble, les dispositions énoncées dans ces deux instruments constituent pour l'occupant une obligation de mettre en place une administration civile efficace dans un territoire occupé.

28. Aux termes des Accords d'Oslo, la responsabilité de l'administration civile en Cisjordanie et à Gaza a été transférée à l'Autorité palestinienne. Toutefois, l'identité de l'autorité chargée de l'administration civile en Cisjordanie et à Gaza n'est plus aussi claire aujourd'hui. Les opérations militaires de 2002 ont détruit une grande partie de l'infrastructure de l'Autorité palestinienne. L'approvisionnement en électricité et en eau, de même que les services municipaux ont été interrompus, l'accès aux vivres refusé, la prestation de soins de santé entravée et l'enseignement gravement désorganisé. Il convient de se demander si cela signifie qu'Israël est maintenant tenu d'assumer la responsabilité de l'administration civile du territoire palestinien occupé.

29. Bien qu'Israël ait annoncé qu'il prévoyait une occupation prolongée du territoire palestinien, il n'a manifestement pas l'intention d'assumer de nouveau la responsabilité de l'administration civile du territoire⁹. Il envisage plutôt de remettre une partie des 600 millions de dollars qu'il doit à l'Autorité palestinienne au titre des droits de douane et impôts et qu'il refuse de lui verser depuis septembre 2000¹⁰. De même, même si elle se plaint du fait qu'Israël a de facto mis au rebut les Accords d'Oslo, l'Autorité palestinienne n'est évidemment pas disposée à envisager de céder à Israël la responsabilité de l'administration civile.

30. La situation actuelle est intenable. Israël ne peut, conformément au droit international humanitaire, refuser à l'Autorité palestinienne les moyens d'assurer une administration civile efficace et opérationnelle et, dans le même temps, refuser toute responsabilité à cet égard. En droit, il est tenu soit d'assumer cette responsabilité, soit de permettre à l'Autorité palestinienne de fournir les services que suppose une administration civile digne de ce nom. La quatrième Convention de Genève impose à toutes les parties la lourde charge de prendre des mesures pour assurer le rétablissement d'une administration civile convenable dans le territoire palestinien conformément aux obligations qui leur incombent en vertu de l'article premier de la Convention « de faire respecter » la Convention « en toutes circonstances ».

IX. Conclusions

31. Le territoire palestinien occupé est un terrain d'essai pour le droit relatif aux droits de l'homme et le droit humanitaire. Les grands progrès réalisés dans ces deux domaines sont compromis par une situation où le droit relatif aux droits de l'homme et le droit humanitaire sont niés et ignorés sans que la communauté internationale réagisse sérieusement. La primauté du droit fait évidemment les frais du conflit dans le territoire palestinien occupé encore que les principales victimes soient véritablement les peuples palestinien et israélien.

Notes

¹ Résolutions 1397 (2002), 1402 (2002) et 1405 (2002) du Conseil de sécurité et résolution ES-10/10 de l'Assemblée générale.

² Déclaration du Bureau du Procureur général à la Cour suprême israélienne : HCJ 3239/02 Iyyad Ishaq Mahmud Mar'ab et al c. Commandant des FDI en Judée et Samarie, réponse, 5 mai 2002, par. 14.

- ³ Voir le rapport sur les pratiques israéliennes à l'égard des enfants palestiniens, présenté par Defense for Children International, Section de la Palestine, au Comité contre la torture, mai 2002.
- ⁴ International Herald Tribune, 16 mai 2002.
- ⁵ Amnesty International Israel and the Occupied Territories: The Heavy Price of Israeli incursions, 12 avril 2002.
- ⁶ Voir également B'Tselem, Land Arab: Israeli Settlement Policy in the West Bank, 2002.
- ⁷ E. Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (1993), p. 4 et 5.
- ⁸ M. Greenspan, The Modern Law of Land Warfare (1959), p. 230 à 235.
- ⁹ Voir les déclarations de M. Ben Eliezer, Ministre de la Défense, et du général Amos Gilad dans l'International Herald Tribune du 24 juin 2002.
- ¹⁰ International Herald Tribune, 23 juillet 2002.
-

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
16 septembre 2002
Français
Original: anglais

Cinquante-septième session

Point 111 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Questions relatives aux droits de l'homme :

situations relatives aux droits de l'homme

et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Question de la violation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires arabes occupés, y compris la Palestine

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial de la Commission des droits de l'homme sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Additif

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la visite que ce dernier a effectuée du 25 au 30 août 2002 dans le territoire palestinien occupé et en Israël.

* A/57/150.

Résumé

1. Comme l'indique le rapport principal (A/57/366) qu'il a présenté à l'Assemblée générale, le Rapporteur spécial rend compte dans le présent document de la visite qu'il a effectuée dans le territoire palestinien occupé à la fin du mois d'août 2002.

2. Le Rapporteur spécial s'est rendu dans le territoire palestinien occupé et en Israël du 25 au 30 août, période au cours de laquelle il est allé à Naplouse et à Djénine, où il a pu constater les dégâts causés par l'Opération bouclier de défense, ainsi qu'à Qalquiliya, où il a vu les premiers travaux de construction du grand mur de séparation entre Israël et la Palestine. Il s'est également rendu à Ramallah, à Bethléem et à Jéricho. Il a rencontré des personnes de tous horizons : le Président Yasser Arafat et le Ministre des collectivités locales de l'Autorité palestinienne, M. Sa'eb Erekat; le Gouverneur de Naplouse ainsi que le Gouverneur par intérim et le maire de Djénine; des représentants d'organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes, israéliennes et internationales, et des membres d'organisations humanitaires internationales. Cette visite a permis de confirmer la fiabilité des renseignements fournis dans le rapport principal concernant la situation sur le terrain. Le Rapporteur spécial estime cependant que la gravité de la situation a été sous-estimée dans le rapport. Après avoir été confronté aux couvre-feux, vu de ses propres yeux le camp de réfugiés de Djénine dévasté, les dommages importants subis par la vieille ville de Naplouse, les postes de contrôle où les Palestiniens sont humiliés quotidiennement et le complexe du Président Arafat en grande partie détruit et entendu un certain nombre de personnes évoquer leurs souffrances et celles des autres, le Rapporteur spécial a vu sa perception intellectuelle de la crise humanitaire se transformer en une émotion profonde devant la tragédie humaine qui se déroule en Palestine.

3. Le présent additif n'apporte pas d'information supplémentaire sur tous les thèmes évoqués dans le rapport principal. Il met plutôt l'accent sur les couvre-feux, les bouclages et leurs conséquences, les détentions, les peines collectives, les enfants, les colonies et le financement nécessaire pour faire face à la crise humanitaire.

La sécurité et les droits de l'homme

4. Avant d'aborder ces thèmes, il est nécessaire de parler des besoins et des intérêts d'Israël en matière de sécurité. Il ne fait aucun doute que ses préoccupations en la matière sont fondées. Des vagues d'attentats suicides à la bombe perpétrés par des Palestiniens ont causé de profondes blessures au sein de la société israélienne. Israël a le droit et le devoir de protéger son peuple contre d'autres attaques mais il faut se demander si les mesures qu'il a prises, en particulier les couvre-feux et les bouclages, répondent toujours à un besoin de sécurité. Elles apparaissent en effet souvent tellement disproportionnées et éloignées des considérations de sécurité que l'on en vient à se demander si elles ne sont pas en partie destinées à punir, humilier et asservir le peuple palestinien. Israël doit concilier ses besoins de sécurité, parfaitement fondés, avec les besoins humanitaires – tout aussi fondés – du peuple palestinien. Aux yeux du Rapporteur spécial, il semble qu'un tel équilibre n'existe pas. Les droits de l'homme ont été sacrifiés sur l'autel de la sécurité. Il en résulte une menace plus redoutable encore pour la sécurité des Israéliens : le sentiment d'impuissance né du désespoir, qui conduit inexorablement aux attentats suicides et à d'autres actes de violence dirigés contre les Israéliens.

Les couvre-feux, les bouclages et leurs conséquences

5. Il est difficile de décrire ce que sont les couvre-feux imposés à Naplouse et à Ramallah. Des villes auparavant grouillantes de monde et débordantes d'activité, bruyantes, animées et colorées, sont devenues des villes mortes, le silence n'étant rompu que par le roulement des chars et les tirs sporadiques des soldats. Des villes entières sont emprisonnées derrière des murs. Il s'agit d'un emprisonnement décidé arbitrairement, car personne ne peut prévoir quand le couvre-feu sera levé ou quand il peut être à nouveau décrété, et appliqué de façon brutale, de nombreuses personnes ayant été blessées ou tuées pour n'avoir pas respecté les règles du couvre-feu. Il est moins difficile de décrire un poste de contrôle militaire occupé par un groupe de jeunes soldats ayant l'arrogance qui caractérise l'adolescence, portant des uniformes poussiéreux et des fusils menaçants sur leurs épaules et ayant le pouvoir de décider arbitrairement des mouvements du peuple palestinien. De longues files de véhicules ou de personnes présentant leurs papiers aux soldats postés derrière des blocs de béton attendent, tous conscients que leurs mouvements dépendent entièrement du bon vouloir de ces jeunes soldats étrangers. On constate là l'arrogance de l'occupant et l'humiliation de l'occupé.

6. Il est plus facile de décrire les conséquences des couvre-feux et des bouclages car elles sont étayées par des statistiques. L'assujettissement de plus de 700 000 personnes aux couvre-feux dans les villes principales et le refus de laisser les villageois se rendre dans les villes, se sont traduits par chômage, la pauvreté, la malnutrition et les maladies. Plus de 50 % de la population du territoire palestinien est au chômage. Le taux de pauvreté, qui caractérise ceux qui ont deux dollars ou moins par jour pour vivre, est de 70 % à Gaza et de 55 % en Cisjordanie. Au total, ce sont 1,8 million de Palestiniens qui bénéficient d'une aide alimentaire ou d'autres formes d'assistance humanitaire d'urgence en provenance de multiples sources, notamment l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient, le Programme alimentaire mondial et le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge. Vingt-deux pour cent des enfants de moins de 5 ans souffrent de malnutrition aiguë ou chronique, tandis que 20 % souffrent d'anémie ferriprive. Les problèmes de santé mentale chez les enfants ont augmenté de manière inquiétante. Les soins de santé ont considérablement pâti du manque de médicaments et de l'incapacité de la population à accéder aux centres de soins. Comme toujours, la situation dans les camps de réfugiés est très peu encourageante, ainsi qu'a pu le constater le Rapporteur spécial lorsqu'il s'est rendu dans le camp de réfugiés de Balata près de Naplouse.

Les détentions

7. Le nombre de personnes en détention administrative, c'est-à-dire une détention longue et ne prévoyant pas de jugement, est passé de moins de 100 à 1 860. Sur 7 000 détenus, on compte quelque 300 enfants et 50 femmes (y compris 8 fillettes).

Les peines collectives

8. La démolition des maisons des familles dont un membre a commis un crime contre Israël est une pratique à laquelle les Israéliens ont recours depuis longtemps. En août, la Haute Cour d'Israël s'est prononcée contre l'intervention des tribunaux dans de telles affaires, contrairement à la pratique qui avait été établie, laissant ainsi aux commandants militaires toute latitude pour ordonner la démolition de maisons, et ce, en complète violation de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui interdit les peines collectives.

9. Le 3 septembre, la même Haute Cour a rendu une décision autorisant la déportation forcée de deux Palestiniens de leur lieu de résidence à Naplouse vers la bande de Gaza, au motif qu'ils étaient accusés d'avoir aidé leur frère (tué le 6 août dans le cadre d'une exécution extrajudiciaire commise par les forces israéliennes) à commettre des attaques contre des Israéliens. Même si la Cour a limité ces déportations à des « cas extrêmes », il convient de souligner que la décision n'a pas été précédée d'un jugement permettant d'établir la complicité des personnes déportées. Ces mesures contreviennent au droit à un procès équitable et à l'interdiction des peines collectives (art. 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève) et des transferts forcés (art. 49 de la Convention).

La situation des enfants

10. Les enfants ont énormément souffert des incursions militaires dans le territoire palestinien, des couvre-feux et des bouclages. Nombre d'entre eux ont été tués ou blessés; 300 ont été arrêtés et mis en détention; plus de 2 000 se sont retrouvés sans logis; les deux tiers vivent en dessous du seuil de pauvreté; 22 % des enfants de moins de 5 ans souffrent de malnutrition; au moins 330 000 ont été contraints de rester chez eux en raison des couvre-feux; en Cisjordanie, plus de 600 000 n'ont pas pu se rendre à l'école, et la plupart ont subi des traumatismes graves. Lors de l'Opération bouclier de défense, 11 écoles ont été détruites, 9 vandalisées, 15 transformées en avant-postes militaires, 15 utilisées comme centres de détention et 112 autres endommagées. Les enseignants, tout comme les élèves, n'ont souvent pas été en mesure de se rendre dans leurs écoles à cause des bouclages. Les responsables palestiniens se sont inquiétés auprès du Rapporteur spécial du maintien du couvre-feu alors que les écoles, avaient rouvert leurs portes le 31 août. Ce type de traitement laisse des séquelles à la fois physiques et psychologiques. Pire encore, il alimente la haine de l'occupant, ce qui est de mauvais augure pour l'avenir.

Les colonies

11. Le rapport principal présente un certain nombre de faits sur les colonies. Lors de sa visite, le Rapporteur spécial a pu voir les colonies situées dans les districts de Naplouse et de Djénine, ce qui lui a permis de comprendre ce qui motivait les nombreux bouclages, qui entravent la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens et étranglent la société palestinienne. De petites colonies, situées en haut de collines et composées de plusieurs centaines d'habitants, sont reliées entre elles et à Israël par des routes réservées uniquement aux colons. Les routes palestiniennes qui croisent ces routes sont interdites d'accès, ce qui oblige souvent les villageois à faire de longs détours pour se rendre sur les marchés, dans les magasins, sur leur lieu de travail, dans les écoles et les hôpitaux situés dans d'autres villages ou villes. Ainsi, à l'extérieur de Djénine, les deux colonies de Gannim (158 habitants) et de Kaddim (148 habitants) sont reliées par une route réservée aux colons. La route principale qui mène de Djénine aux huit villages alentour, où résident quelque 20 000 habitants, et qui traversait auparavant cette route réservée, a été fermée par des bulldozers. Les villageois qui n'étaient auparavant qu'à 10 minutes de Djénine en voiture, doivent maintenant emprunter des routes indirectes traversant les villages et mettent de nombreuses heures pour atteindre Djénine. Les libertés fondamentales de circulation et d'accès à des moyens de subsistance corrects sont donc sacrifiées dans l'intérêt de la sécurité et du bien-être de la communauté étrangère des colons. Il est impossible de mesurer la colère et l'humiliation ressenties par les Palestiniens confrontés à cette situation.

Le paradoxe de l'assistance humanitaire

12. La gravité de la situation est indéniable, tout comme la nécessité d'apporter une aide humanitaire massive. Si cette aide n'arrive pas, les conséquences seront irrémédiables pour le peuple palestinien. Le Rapporteur spécial approuve donc les appels lancés à la communauté internationale pour qu'elle apporte une aide humanitaire, et s'y associe.

13. Il convient toutefois de préciser qu'en apportant une aide de ce type, la communauté internationale des donateurs exonère Israël de la responsabilité qu'il a de fournir cette assistance lui-même et qu'on pourrait l'accuser de participer de cette façon au financement de l'occupation. Comme il est indiqué aux paragraphes 26 et 27 du rapport principal, Israël a le devoir, en vertu des articles 50, 55 et 56 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, d'assurer l'approvisionnement de la population en vivres et en produits médicaux, d'assurer et de maintenir les établissements et les services médicaux, et de faciliter le bon fonctionnement des établissements consacrés à l'éducation des enfants.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
12 août 2004
Français
Original: anglais

Cinquante-neuvième session

Point 107 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Questions relatives aux droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme
et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Question de la violation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires arabes occupés, y compris la Palestine

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport sur les violations du droit international humanitaire et des droits de l'homme commises dans le territoire palestinien occupé depuis 1967, qui a été soumis par le Rapporteur spécial, M. John Dugard, en application de la section A de la résolution 1993/2 et de la résolution 2004/10.

* A/59/150.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial de la Commission des droits de l'homme, sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport porte essentiellement sur les conséquences des incursions militaires opérées dans la bande de Gaza, les violations du droit humanitaire international et les droits de l'homme qui découlent de la construction du mur et les restrictions constantes à la liberté de circulation.

Durant ces six derniers mois, les Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) ont intensifié leurs incursions militaires dans la bande de Gaza. Ces attaques ont été interprétées comme une démonstration de force de la part d'Israël qui voulait ainsi empêcher que son retrait unilatéral du territoire ne soit ultérieurement perçu comme un signe de faiblesse. Durant ces incursions, Israël a procédé à des destructions massives et injustifiées de biens. Des bulldozers ont démolit arbitrairement des habitations et défoncé des routes, déterrants notamment des lignes électriques, des égouts et des conduites d'eau. Lors de l'opération Rainbow, menée du 18 au 24 mai 2004, 43 personnes ont trouvé la mort et 167 bâtiments abritant 379 familles (soit 2 066 personnes) au total ont été détruits ou rendus inhabitables. Ces démolitions ont eu lieu durant l'un des pires mois qu'ait connu Rafah récemment. En mai, 298 édifices abritant 710 familles (soit 3 800 personnes) ont été démolis.

Israël a annoncé qu'il se retirerait unilatéralement de Gaza. Il voudrait présenter ce retrait comme une mesure mettant un terme à l'occupation militaire de la bande de Gaza et le dégageant ainsi des obligations qui, s'agissant de ce territoire, lui incombent en vertu de la Convention de Genève du 12 août 1949 relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève). En réalité, il n'a aucunement l'intention de renoncer à son emprise sur la bande de Gaza qu'il prévoit de maintenir sous sa coupe en contrôlant ses frontières, ses eaux territoriales et son espace aérien. Aussi demeurera-t-il sur le plan juridique une puissance occupante toujours soumise aux obligations prévues par la Convention susmentionnée.

Le 9 juillet 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice (CIJ) a jugé que le mur qu'Israël était en train d'édifier dans le territoire occupé était contraire au droits de l'homme et qu'Israël était tenu de cesser immédiatement les travaux de construction de ce mur et de le démanteler sans plus tarder. Dans son avis consultatif, la Cour a rejeté plusieurs des arguments juridiques touchant à l'applicabilité du droit humanitaire et des instruments relatifs aux droits de l'homme qui avaient été invoqués par Israël. Une semaine avant que cet avis ne soit rendu, la Haute Cour d'Israël a rendu une décision portant sur un tronçon du mur long de 40 kilomètres, dans laquelle elle faisait valoir que, si Israël, en tant que puissance occupante, avait le droit de construire le mur pour assurer sa sécurité, de larges portions de ce mur imposaient à la population palestinienne des conditions de vie extrêmement difficiles et qu'il fallait en modifier le tracé.

Israël a annoncé qu'il ne se conformerait pas à l'avis consultatif de la CIJ. Il a indiqué qu'il n'appliquerait le jugement rendu par sa propre Haute Cour qu'aux tronçons qui n'avaient encore pas été construits et non pas à ceux qui étaient achevés.

Israël prétend que le mur a pour objet de le protéger contre les attentats terroristes et que son édification a permis de réduire de plus de 80 % le nombre de ces attentats. Deux observations méritent d'être faites à ce sujet. Tout d'abord, il n'existe aucun élément tendant à prouver de manière irréfutable que le mur n'aurait pas pu empêcher aussi efficacement l'entrée en Israël des auteurs d'attentats-suicide à la bombe s'il avait été construit le long de la Ligne verte (le tracé accepté de la frontière séparant Israël de la Palestine) ou du côté israélien de la Ligne. Deuxièmement, au vu des preuves dont on dispose, il semblerait plutôt que le mur ait été construit aux fins suivantes :

- Incorporer les colonies de peuplement à Israël;
- Confisquer des terres palestiniennes;
- Inciter les Palestiniens à quitter leurs terres et leurs maisons en leur rendant la vie insupportable.

Le tracé du mur montre clairement que ce dernier vise à incorporer le plus grand nombre de colonies de peuplement possible à Israël. En effet, il place près de 80 % des colonies de Cisjordanie en territoire israélien. En outre, M. Benjamin Netanyahu, ancien Premier Ministre et actuel Ministre israélien des finances, a reconnu publiquement dans l'International Herald Tribune du 14 juin 2004, que l'objet de ce mur était d'inclure le plus grand nombre de Juifs que possible.

Bien que la CIJ ait été unanime à considérer que les colonies de peuplement étaient illégales, ces colonies ont connu une forte expansion durant l'année écoulée, tandis que les colons redoublaient de violence à l'égard des Palestiniens. Pis encore, Israël est en train d'incorporer la colonie d'Ariel, située à 22 kilomètres à l'intérieur du territoire palestinien. Cette mesure est interdite par la CIJ et va à l'encontre de la décision prise par la Haute Cour israélienne elle-même.

Le mur a également pour objet d'étendre le territoire israélien. De riches terres agricoles et d'abondantes ressources en eau situées le long de la Ligne verte ont été confisquées et incorporées à Israël. Ces confiscations de terres sont exposées dans de précédents rapports ainsi que dans l'avis consultatif de la CIJ. Ces derniers mois, Israël a exprimé ses visées territoriales sur la région de Jérusalem. En effet, le mur est actuellement construit autour d'une Jérusalem-Est élargie devant englober 247 000 colons répartis sur 12 colonies de peuplement et quelque 249 000 Palestiniens. On se souviendra que l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est par Israël en 1980 est illégale et a été qualifiée de mesure n'« ayant aucune validité en droit » par le Conseil de sécurité.

D'un point de vue sécuritaire, la confiscation de terres situées à Jérusalem-Est est absurde dans la mesure où elle aura souvent pour effet de diviser des communautés palestiniennes. En outre, cette mesure aura de graves répercussions sur les Palestiniens vivant à l'intérieur ou à proximité de Jérusalem-Est. Premièrement, elle risque de priver les 60 000 Palestiniens ayant le droit de résider à Jérusalem de ce droit s'ils se retrouvent du côté du mur situé en Cisjordanie. Deuxièmement, elle rendra périlleux et compliqués les contacts entre Palestiniens et institutions palestiniennes situés de part et d'autre du mur. Enfin, elle interdira à plus de 100 000 Palestiniens qui résident dans des quartiers situés en Cisjordanie et dépendent d'infrastructures et de services situés à Jérusalem-Est (hôpitaux, universités, emplois, marchés pour les produits agricoles, etc.), l'accès à cette partie de la ville.

Le mur a pour troisième objectif de contraindre, en leur rendant la vie insupportable, les Palestiniens vivant dans les zones situées entre lui et la Ligne verte et dans celles qui lui sont contiguës, mais qu'il sépare de leurs terres, à quitter leurs foyers pour recommencer leur vie ailleurs en Cisjordanie. Ce sont essentiellement les restrictions à la liberté de circulation dans la « zone d'accès réglementé » située entre le mur et la Ligne verte et le fait que les agriculteurs sont coupés de leurs terres qui obligeront les Palestiniens à déménager. La Haute Cour israélienne a déclaré que certains tronçons du mur ne pouvaient pas être construits lorsqu'ils imposaient des conditions de vie extrêmement difficiles aux Palestiniens. Logiquement, cette décision devrait s'appliquer aux 200 kilomètres de mur déjà construits. Or, le Gouvernement israélien a fait savoir qu'il n'en ferait rien en dépit de la décision prise par sa propre Haute Cour.

En Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza, la liberté de circulation est sérieusement limitée. À Gaza, la population est de fait encerclée par la mer et par un ensemble de murs et de clôtures. Les barrages routiers qui morcellent ce petit territoire restreignent fortement la liberté de circulation. Les habitants de la Cisjordanie sont soumis à un régime de couvre-feu et à un système de points de contrôle qui les empêchent de circuler librement. Pour se déplacer d'une ville à l'autre, ils ont besoin de permis qui sont arbitrairement retirés et rarement délivrés aux propriétaires de véhicules privés. Plusieurs centaines de points de contrôle militaire réglementent la vie des Palestiniens. La partie du mur située dans la région de Jérusalem menace de devenir un véritable cauchemar pour des dizaines de milliers de Palestiniens qui seront contraints de franchir chaque jour un point de contrôle, celui de Kalandiya. Enfin, et comme on l'a déjà vu, l'existence des Palestiniens résidant dans les zones qui se trouvent entre le mur et la Ligne verte et celles qui sont contiguës à ce mur est régie par un système de permis qui est appliqué de manière arbitraire et fantaisiste.

Les restrictions à la liberté de circulation que les autorités israéliennes imposent aux Palestiniens rappellent les lois relatives aux laissez-passer tristement célèbres de l'Afrique du Sud du temps de l'apartheid. Ces lois étaient humiliantes mais elles étaient appliquées uniformément. Les lois israéliennes régissant la liberté de circulation qui sont elles aussi appliquées de façon humiliante, se caractérisent en outre par leur caractère arbitraire et fantaisiste. Israël est allé encore plus loin que les lois de l'apartheid en créant des routes distinctes pour les colons, instituant ainsi un « apartheid routier » que l'Afrique du Sud du temps de l'apartheid n'a jamais connu.

Dans son avis consultatif, qui a été approuvé par l'Assemblée générale, la CIJ indique que le mur a des conséquences juridiques pour les États autres qu'Israël. Il est rappelé aux États qu'ils ont l'obligation de ne pas reconnaître la situation illicite résultant de la construction du mur et de ne pas prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de cette situation. Le mépris affiché par Israël pour le droit international menace non seulement l'ordre juridique international, mais aussi l'ordre international tout court. La communauté internationale n'a pas donc pas lieu, en pareilles circonstances, de se montrer conciliante.

Table des matières

	Paragraphes	Page
I. Introduction	1–5	7
II. Objet du présent rapport	6	8
III. La bande de Gaza	7–14	9
IV. Le mur	15–33	12
A. L’incorporation des colonies de peuplement	18–22	13
B. Confiscation de terres palestiniennes	23–26	14
C. Exode forcé	27–33	16
V. Liberté de circulation	34–40	18
VI. Conclusion	41–42	20

I. Introduction

1. Le 9 juillet 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a jugé que l'édification du mur qu'Israël était en train de construire dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris à l'intérieur et sur le pourtour de Jérusalem-Est, était contraire au droit international; qu'Israël était tenu de cesser immédiatement les travaux d'édification du mur qu'il était en train de construire dans le territoire palestinien et de démanteler au plus vite cet ouvrage et qu'il était dans l'obligation de réparer tous les dommages causés par la construction du mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Pour finir, la Cour a jugé que tous les États avaient l'obligation de ne pas reconnaître la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur; que tous les États parties à la quatrième Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, du 12 août 1949 (quatrième Convention de Genève), avaient en outre l'obligation de faire respecter par Israël les dispositions de cette convention; et que l'Organisation des Nations Unies devait examiner quelles nouvelles mesures devaient être prises afin de mettre un terme à la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur.

2. Dans son raisonnement, la CIJ a réfuté un certain nombre d'arguments juridiques invoqués par Israël, qui constituent des éléments fondamentaux de la politique étrangère israélienne à l'égard du territoire palestinien occupé. La Cour a estimé que la quatrième Convention de Genève s'appliquait à ce territoire et qu'Israël était tenu de se conformer aux dispositions de cet instrument lorsqu'il agissait dans ledit territoire. En formulant cette conclusion, la Cour a souligné que, selon le sixième alinéa de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, les colonies de peuplement installées par Israël dans le territoire palestinien occupé l'avaient été en « méconnaissance du droit international » et que le pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et la Convention des Nations Unies relative aux droits de l'enfant étaient applicables aux actes d'Israël dans le territoire palestinien occupé. La Cour a aussi souligné que le mur dressait « un obstacle grave à l'exercice par le peuple palestinien de son droit à l'autodétermination ». Enfin, elle s'est montrée sceptique quant à l'état de nécessité invoqué par le Gouvernement israélien pour justifier la construction du mur, estimant qu'« Israël ne saurait se prévaloir du droit de légitime défense ou de l'état de nécessité, comme excluant l'illicéité de la construction du mur ».

3. Peu de temps avant que la CIJ ne rende son avis, la Haut Cour israélienne a prononcé un jugement qui portait sur un tronçon du mur. Tout en admettant qu'Israël en tant que puissance occupante avait le droit d'édifier ce mur pour assurer sa sécurité, elle a néanmoins jugé que certains travaux dudit mur imposaient aux Palestiniens des conditions de vie extrêmement difficiles et qu'il fallait en modifier le tracé. Elle a examiné la question en se fondant essentiellement sur le principe de proportionnalité, et s'est posé la question de savoir si le tracé dudit mur causait à la population locale un préjudice disproportionné par rapport aux avantages qu'il procurait sur le plan de la sécurité. La Cour a conclu qu'en certains endroits, le tracé proposé risquait d'infliger des souffrances disproportionnées aux villages palestiniens dans la mesure où il séparait les habitants de ces villages des terres agricoles qui constituaient leur moyen de subsistance.

4. L'illicéité du mur est désormais évidente au regard du droit international tel qu'exposé par la CIJ. En outre, il semblerait que de vastes portions de ce mur puissent être considérées comme illicites au regard du droit israélien tel qu'exposé par la Haute Cour d'Israël. L'argument selon lequel des impératifs de sécurité conféraient à Israël le droit absolu d'édifier un mur dans le territoire palestinien ne tient plus. Le terrorisme constitue une grave menace pour la société israélienne et il est fort possible que le mur puisse empêcher les auteurs d'attentats-suicide à la bombe de pénétrer en Israël. Néanmoins si tel est le cas, il n'y a pas de raison qu'il ne soit pas édifié le long de la Ligne verte ou sur le côté israélien de cette ligne. S'agissant du rapport qui existe entre le terrorisme et le droit, l'on se contentera de rappeler la déclaration ci-après de la Haute Cour israélienne :

« Nous sommes conscients des pertes en vies humaines et des destructions causées par la terreur dont sont victimes l'État et ses citoyens. À l'instar de tous les autres Israéliens, nous sommes nous aussi convaincus qu'il est nécessaire de défendre le pays et ses citoyens contre les blessures infligées par la terreur. Nous sommes conscients qu'à court terme, le présent jugement ne facilitera pas la lutte que mène l'État contre ceux qui se dressent contre lui. Mais nous sommes des juges. Lorsque nous siégeons pour rendre un jugement, nous sommes nous-mêmes sujets à jugement. Nous agissons avec la plus grande conscience et avec la plus grande sagacité possibles. Nous sommes convaincus qu'au bout du compte, la lutte que mène l'État contre la terreur à laquelle il est confronté gagnera en puissance et en efficacité si elle est conduite dans le respect du droit. Il ne saurait y avoir de sécurité sans droit. » [Voir Le Conseil de village de Beit Sourik c. le Gouvernement israélien (Haute Cour de Justice 2056/04, par. 86)].

5. Face aux objections d'Israël, le Rapporteur spécial a réitéré, dans de précédents rapports, certaines positions juridiques. Il n'est désormais plus nécessaire de se livrer à ce genre d'exercice. La loi est on ne peut plus claire et il est maintenant possible de se concentrer sur les conséquences des actes illicites d'Israël et de réfléchir aux moyens de faire appliquer le droit. C'est là une tâche qui incombe à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, agissant par le truchement de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, ainsi qu'aux États. Le présent rapport sera donc axé sur les actes d'Israël et les conséquences de ces actes.

II. Objet du présent rapport

6. Du 18 au 25 juin 2004, le Rapporteur spécial s'est rendu dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Il a visité Gaza (y compris Rafah) et la Cisjordanie (Jérusalem, Ramallah, Bethléem, Qalqiliya et les villages avoisinants ainsi que Hébron et ses environs). Il s'est surtout intéressé aux conséquences des incursions militaires dans la bande de Gaza, aux violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire découlant de l'édification du mur et aux très nombreuses restrictions à la liberté de circulation. Le présent rapport témoigne de l'intérêt porté à ces questions. Cela étant, le Rapporteur spécial tient à souligner que dans le territoire palestinien occupé, l'on dénombre une multitude d'autres atteintes aux droits de l'homme qui continuent de détruire le tissu social palestinien telles que :

- Les meurtres et les violences et voies de fait. Depuis septembre 2000, plus de 3 000 Palestiniens (dont plus de 500 enfants) et près d'un millier d'Israéliens ont été tués. Plus de 34 300 Palestiniens et 6 000 Israéliens ont été blessés. La plupart de ces victimes étaient des civils;

- Les assassinats. Israël continue d'assassiner des personnes soupçonnées de militantisme. Ces assassinats sont généralement perpétrés sans le moindre égard pour la vie des civils. Bien au contraire, la mort de civils est simplement rangée dans la catégorie des dommages non intentionnels. Quelque 340 personnes ont été victimes d'assassinats ciblés. Cent quatre-vingt-huit de ces victimes figuraient au nombre des personnes visées, 152 n'étaient que des civils innocents;
- Les incursions. Au cours de l'année écoulée, les Forces de défense israéliennes ont fréquemment procédé à des incursions militaires en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza dans le but d'assassiner des militants palestiniens. Il est souvent arrivé que des civils soient pris entre deux feux. C'est ainsi que le 28 juin, M. Khaled Salah, professeur enseignant à l'Université Al-Najah et son fils de 16 ans ont été tués par des tirs aveugles lors d'une incursion de l'armée israélienne à Naplouse;
- Les emprisonnements. Quelque 6 000 Palestiniens, dont 350 enfants et 75 femmes, sont actuellement détenus dans des prisons israéliennes ou dans des camps de détention. Seulement le quart environ de ces prisonniers a été jugé. Bon nombre des détenus affirment avoir été soumis à la torture ou à des traitements inhumains et dégradants;
- Les couvre-feux. Bien que, durant l'année écoulée, les Israéliens aient eu moins fréquemment recours à l'arme que constitue le couvre-feu, cette mesure continue d'être imposée et elle a été très souvent appliquée à Naplouse;
- La crise humanitaire. Dans le territoire palestinien occupé, la pauvreté et le chômage sont endémiques. D'après les statistiques de l'Organisation internationale du Travail (OIT), 35 % en moyenne, des Palestiniens seraient au chômage et 62 % vivraient au-dessous du seuil de pauvreté. Selon un rapport de la Banque mondiale en date du 23 juin 2004, la récession qui frappe les Palestiniens est la pire qu'ait connue l'histoire contemporaine tandis que les revenus individuels moyens ont baissé de plus d'un tiers depuis septembre 2000.

III. La bande de Gaza

7. Ces derniers mois, l'armée israélienne a périodiquement procédé à des incursions militaires dans la bande de Gaza. Les villes les plus touchées ont été Rafah et Beit Hanoun. Israël a fait valoir, à titre de justification, que ces opérations devaient servir à démolir, à Rafah, des tunnels empruntés pour passer des armes en contrebande et à détruire, à Beit Hanoun, les moyens utilisés pour lancer des roquettes Qassam en Israël. Ces opérations doivent toutefois être replacées dans une perspective politique plus large. Israël a annoncé son intention de retirer ses colonies de peuplement et ses troupes de Gaza. Comme de toute évidence, il ne veut pas que ce retrait soit perçu comme une marque de faiblesse, il a décidé, avant de se retirer, de faire une démonstration de force à Gaza. En outre, pour maintenir son emprise sur la frontière séparant Gaza de l'Égypte, il a décidé de créer, le long du « couloir Philadelphe », une zone tampon nécessitant la destruction de maisons situées à Rafah. En juin 2004, l'on a annoncé qu'il se proposait de construire un fossé ou une tranchée dans cette zone.

8. En application des politiques décrites ci-dessus, Israël a procédé à des destructions massives de biens à Gaza. Certains de ces biens, par exemple les maisons de personnes soupçonnées d'être des militants, ont été détruits dans le cadre d'expéditions punitives. D'autres, comme les maisons situées le long du « couloir Philadelphi », ont été rasés pour des raisons stratégiques. Toutefois, ces destructions sont souvent aveugles. Certaines habitations ont été démolies absolument sans raison. Des bulldozers ont défoncé des routes, détruisant les lignes électriques, les égouts et les conduites d'eau, dans le cadre d'une démonstration de force brutale. En outre, on ne s'est pas du tout préoccupé du sort des populations touchées. Le 12 juillet 2004, lors d'un raid effectué à Khan Younis, l'armée israélienne a détruit une maison où se trouvait M. Mahmoud Halfalla, âgé de 75 ans et immobilisé sur une chaise roulante. En dépit des appels lancés pour que le vieillard puisse sortir de sa maison, celle-ci a été démolie et il est mort, enseveli sous les décombres.

9. À la suite de l'opération Rainbow menée par l'armée israélienne en mai 2004, le Rapporteur spécial a visité le pâté de maisons « O », le quartier Brazil et le quartier de Tal Es Sultan, situés à Rafah et il a rencontré les familles que l'opération susmentionnée avait chassées de leurs foyers. Au cours de cette opération, 43 personnes ont trouvé la mort, dont 8 lors d'une manifestation pacifique qui a eu lieu le 19 mai. Pendant la période allant du 18 au 24 mai, 167 bâtiments abritant au total 379 familles (2 066 personnes) ont été détruits ou rendus inhabitables. Ces démolitions ont eu lieu durant l'un des pires mois qu'a connus Rafah récemment. En mai, 298 édifices abritant 710 familles (3 800 personnes), ont été rasés à Rafah où, depuis le début de l'Intifada en septembre 2000, 1 497 édifices ont été démolis et plus de 15 000 personnes ont été touchées par ces destructions. Le Rapporteur spécial a été horrifié à la vue des destructions sauvages infligées à la ville de Rafah. Il garde à l'esprit l'article 53 de la quatrième Convention de Genève qui stipule qu'il est interdit à la puissance occupante de détruire des biens mobiliers, sauf dans les cas où ces destructions seraient rendues absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires, et le non-respect de cette interdiction constitue une violation grave de l'article 147 de ladite convention, dont les auteurs doivent être poursuivis. Le moment est venu pour la communauté internationale d'identifier les responsables de ces destructions sauvages de biens et de prendre les mesures juridiques qui s'imposent à leur encontre.

10. Dans un rapport publié en juin 2004, l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) a indiqué que près de 45 millions de dollars des États-Unis seraient nécessaires pour reloger les Palestiniens ayant perdu leur toit par la faute de l'armée israélienne. Le Rapporteur spécial espère que la communauté internationale répondra favorablement à l'appel lancé par l'UNRWA. Toutefois, il tient à souligner qu'en vertu de la quatrième Convention de Genève, c'est à la puissance occupante qu'incombe la responsabilité d'assurer des vivres et des fournitures médicales adéquates à la population occupée et de veiller au bien-être de celle-ci. Une puissance occupante qui détruit des maisons, prive les gens de leur logement, crée des besoins en nourriture et en services médicaux, puis refuse de s'acquitter de ses responsabilités envers la population occupée commet une grave violation de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

11. En juillet 2004, les forces israéliennes, accompagnées de leurs bulldozers habituels, ont envahi Beit Hanoun, tuant des militants ainsi que des civils, détruisant des maisons et arrachant des oliviers et des orangers, en guise de châtimeut supplémentaire. Le 13 juillet, un convoi de l'UNRWA acheminant des vivres vers Beit Hanoun a essuyé des coups de feu tirés par des soldats israéliens.

12. Il arrive souvent que l'armée israélienne procède au « ratissage » de terres et de maisons situées à proximité de colonies de peuplement et de rocaes desservant ces colonies sous le prétexte d'assurer la sécurité de celles-ci. Les destructions matérielles lors de ces opérations paraissent souvent excessives au regard des impératifs militaires invoqués pour les justifier. Le Rapporteur spécial a été témoin d'un tel excès, près d'une rocade située aux alentours de la colonie de Netzarim. Là, les forces israéliennes, après avoir harcelé pendant des années des familles qui occupaient deux maisons proches d'une rocade ont, au moyen d'un bulldozer, empilé de la terre, tout autour de ces maisons et ce, jusqu'au premier étage. L'eau et l'électricité ont été coupées et les occupants ont reçu l'ordre de ne pas utiliser les pièces du premier étage qui donnaient sur la rocade. Ce n'est là qu'un exemple du type de harcèlements auxquels les militaires israéliens soumettent les habitants de Gaza pour assurer la sécurité des colons.

13. La communauté internationale a réagi favorablement à l'annonce faite par Israël de son intention de se retirer unilatéralement de Gaza. Elle a aussi suivi avec intérêt le conflit politique qui, à l'intérieur du territoire, oppose les forces de l'Autorité palestinienne à des groupes militants. Ce type d'événements risque de détourner l'attention des souffrances qu'endurent les habitants de Gaza. Ces derniers, qui sont en réalité prisonniers sur leur propre territoire où de nombreuses restrictions les empêchent de circuler librement, sont touchés de plein fouet par le chômage et par la pauvreté du fait des pratiques israéliennes et se retrouvent souvent sans abri par la faute de l'armée israélienne. Ce sont là des réalités qui ne sauraient être ignorées.

14. Israël est conscient qu'un retrait de Gaza pourrait lui être avantageux sur le plan politique. Il fait valoir qu'une telle mesure lui éviterait d'être qualifié de puissance occupante assujetties à la quatrième Conférence de Genève dans le territoire de Gaza. En réalité il n'a pas l'intention de relâcher son emprise sur la bande de Gaza, dont il entend contrôler les frontières, les eaux territoriales et l'espace aérien afin de maintenir son autorité. Son plan de désengagement d'avril 2004 montre clairement qu'il compte, en dernier ressort, conserver le contrôle de Gaza. Ce plan stipule notamment, en ce qui concerne Gaza que « l'État d'Israël » supervisera et maintiendra l'enveloppe terrestre externe, aura le contrôle exclusif de l'espace aérien de Gaza et poursuivra ses activités militaires dans les eaux territoriales de la bande de Gaza... L'État d'Israël continuera de maintenir une présence militaire le long de la frontière séparant la bande de Gaza de l'Égypte (couloir Philadelphi). Cette présence est vitale pour sa sécurité. En certains endroits, un élargissement de la zone dans laquelle ce type de déploiement devrait s'opérer pourrait se révéler nécessaire. » Un autre moyen de contrôle envisagé consiste en l'installation, dans les principaux édifices de Gaza, de dispositifs d'écoute de pointe devant permettre aux autorités israéliennes de surveiller les communications. Tout ceci signifie qu'Israël restera une puissance occupante au regard du droit international. Le critère qui permet de déterminer si un territoire donné est, sur le plan juridique, soumis à un régime d'occupation est la réponse à la question de savoir non pas si la puissance occupante exerce ou non un contrôle effectif sur ce territoire, mais plutôt si elle a la capacité de le faire, principe qui a été confirmé par le Tribunal militaire des États-Unis dans l'affaire In Re Liste and others (The hostages case) (1948). Il est indispensable que la communauté internationale prenne connaissance de la véritable nature du plan de retrait israélien et des obligations qui continuent d'incomber à Israël en vertu de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

IV. Le mur

15. Le mur est responsable d'une bonne partie des épreuves qu'endure le peuple palestinien et, risque, s'il est maintenu, d'aggraver davantage ses souffrances. Comme l'a indiqué la Cour internationale de Justice, il constitue une violation du droit humanitaire et des instruments relatifs aux droits de l'homme et porte atteinte au droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien. C'est la raison pour laquelle il a fait l'objet d'une attention toute particulière dans deux précédents rapports et continue d'occuper une large place dans le présent rapport. Pour pouvoir mieux comprendre les conséquences qui en découlent du point de vue des droits de l'homme, le Rapporteur spécial a visité les tronçons du mur qui se trouvent dans la région de Jérusalem (A-Ram, Abu Dis, Kalandiya, Beit Sourik et Biddu), à Qalqiliya (villages d'Isla et de Jayyous) et à Bethléem. Auparavant, il s'était rendu dans des villages situés dans la région de Qalqiliya et de Toulkarem.

16. Israël prétend que le mur a pour but de le protéger contre les attentats terroristes. Les autorités israéliennes font remarquer que les statistiques compilées pour le premier semestre de 2004 montrent que le nombre d'attentats terroristes commis à l'intérieur d'Israël a diminué d'au moins 83 % par rapport au premier semestre de 2003. Deux observations pourraient être faites à ce sujet. Tout d'abord, il n'existe aucun élément prouvant de manière irréfutable que le mur n'aurait pas pu être aussi efficace s'il avait été construit le long de la Ligne verte ou du côté israélien de cette ligne. Deuxièmement, l'argument selon lequel le fait que le mur empiète sur le territoire palestinien est rendu nécessaire par certains impératifs de sécurité n'est pas convaincant. C'est ce qui ressort du jugement rendu par la Cour d'Israël dans l'affaire opposant le Conseil de village de Beit Sourik au Gouvernement israélien. Dans ce jugement, la Haute Cour met en balance les impératifs de sécurité invoqués par le commandement militaire israélien pour justifier ce tracé avec les mesures de sécurité moins attentatoires aux libertés individuelles proposées par le Conseil israélien pour la paix et la sécurité, organe indépendant composé d'officiers de l'armée israélienne à la retraite; et a, à plusieurs reprises, manifesté sa préférence pour les propositions avancées par ce conseil. Le fait que la Haute Cour ait examiné des propositions concurrentes concernant le tracé du mur en tenant compte des impératifs de sécurité et en se fondant sur le principe de la proportionnalité, témoigne des difficultés inhérentes à un tel exercice et amène à s'interroger sur les raisons d'ordre militaire invoquées pour justifier ce tracé.

17. Plus convaincantes sont les explications selon lesquelles la construction du mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé aurait été dictée par la volonté d'atteindre les objectifs suivants :

- Incorporer les colonies de peuplement à Israël;
- Confisquer les terres palestiniennes;
- Pousser les Palestiniens à l'exode en leur refusant l'accès à leurs terres et aux ressources en eau et en restreignant leur liberté de circulation.

On trouvera ci-après une analyse plus détaillée de ces objectifs.

A. L'incorporation des colonies de peuplement

18. Le tracé du mur montre clairement que ce dernier a pour but d'incorporer le plus grand nombre possible de colonies de peuplement à Israël. Ce fait est confirmé par les statistiques qui montrent que 80 % des colons de Cisjordanie se retrouveront du côté du mur situé en territoire israélien. Au cas où l'on aurait besoin d'une autre preuve pour s'en convaincre, l'on se reportera à un article de M. Benjamin Netanyahu, actuel Ministre israélien des finances et ancien Premier Ministre d'Israël, qui a été publié dans le International Herald Tribune le 14 juillet 2004 et dans lequel on peut lire ceci : « pour obtenir un tracé qui soit réellement fondé sur des considérations de sécurité, il faudrait que la clôture incluse autant de juifs que possible et le moins de Palestiniens possible. C'est précisément ce que fait la clôture construite par Israël. Sur une superficie correspondant à moins de 12 % du territoire de la Cisjordanie, le mur regrouperait une population comprenant 80 % des Juifs et 1 % seulement des Palestiniens qui vivent dans les territoires controversés ».

19. Les colonies de peuplement sont bien entendu illicites au regard du droit international. C'est là l'opinion unanime à laquelle a abouti la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif. La Cour a jugé que « les colonies de peuplement installées par Israël dans le territoire palestinien occupé (y compris Jérusalem-Est) l'ont été en méconnaissance du droit international », et que « le tracé choisi pour le mur consacre les mesures illégales prises par Israël en ce qui concerne Jérusalem et les colonies de peuplement » (par. 120 et 122). En outre, le juge Buergenthal, le seul juge dissident, a reconnu que le paragraphe 6 de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève s'appliquait aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes en Cisjordanie et que, de ce fait, « les tronçons du mur construit par Israël pour protéger ses colonies constituaient ipso facto une violation du droit international humanitaire » (par. 9).

20. Malgré cela, les signes d'expansion des colonies de peuplement en Cisjordanie sont innombrables. Le Gouvernement israélien ne prend même plus la peine de réitérer l'engagement de pure forme qu'il avait pris il y a plusieurs années de procéder au gel des implantations. La construction de nouveaux bâtiments dans les colonies de peuplement israéliennes a augmenté de 35 % en 2003 et, au début de 2004, le Ministre israélien du logement et de la construction a engagé des pourparlers avec des entrepreneurs de travaux publics aux fins de la construction, en 2004, de 2 414 nouveaux logements dans des colonies de peuplement telles que Kiryat Arba, Har Homa, Beitar Illit, Sur Hadar, Ma'aleh Adumim, Givat Zeev et Pisgat Zeev. De nouvelles colonies devraient être créées dans la région de Bethléem et il est prévu de construire deux nouvelles colonies, la colonie de Kidmat Zion à proximité d'Abu Dis et celle de Nof Zahav près de Jabal Mukhaber. En outre, M. Sharon a annoncé qu'en échange du démantèlement des colonies de la bande de Gaza et de quatre petites colonies de peuplement dans le nord de la Cisjordanie (colonies de Ghanim, Khadim, Sa-Nur et Homesh), le Gouvernement israélien renforcerait et élargirait les autres colonies de peuplement qui se trouvent en Cisjordanie. Selon un rapport du Directeur général de l'Organisation internationale du Travail, établi en 2004, « depuis 2000, le nombre de colons a continué de s'accroître rapidement, à un taux annuel de 5,3 % en Cisjordanie et de 4,4 % à Gaza, et il avoisine maintenant les 400 000. Ce chiffre équivaut à 6 % de la population israélienne et à 11,5 % de la population palestinienne en 2002. Le fait que le nombre de colons ait crû à un rythme bien plus rapide que la population d'Israël (où le taux de croissance démographique a été de 1,4 % par an durant la période allant de 2000 à 2002) est le signe d'un accroissement de la population qui n'est pas simplement imputable à des causes naturelles même si l'on tient compte des taux de fécondité élevés dans les familles de colons ».

21. À l'expansion des colonies de peuplement sont malheureusement venues s'ajouter les actes de violence perpétrés par les colons. De nombreux incidents au cours desquels des colons s'en sont pris à des Palestiniens et à leurs terres ont été signalés et ce type d'agissements auraient augmenté de 20 %. Les colons sont également accusés d'avoir empoisonné des puits. Leur comportement est particulièrement révoltant à Hébron où ils ne cessent de harceler les Palestiniens et d'endommager leurs biens. Le Rapporteur spécial a lui-même fait l'expérience de ce type de comportement lorsque des colons ont craché puis jeté de la peinture sur le véhicule à bord duquel il se déplaçait en compagnie de représentants de la Présence internationale temporaire à Hébron. Les obstacles que ces colons avaient dressés sur la route n'ont pas été retirés bien qu'un représentant de la Présence internationale temporaire à Hébron ait demandé qu'ils soient enlevés. Bien au contraire, certains soldats israéliens ont affirmé en riant qu'ils approuvaient l'action des colons et ont refusé d'intervenir, alors qu'Israël est légalement tenu de coopérer avec la Présence.

22. Des plans visant à incorporer davantage de colonies de peuplement aux territoires délimités par le mur sont en cours d'exécution. Des mesures ont été prises en vue d'incorporer la colonie de peuplement d'Ariel au territoire israélien. En juin 2004, des responsables du Ministère de la défense ont adressé à des Palestiniens résidant dans la ville de Salfit, au sud d'Ariel, des ordres préliminaires d'expropriation de terres sur lesquelles le mur devait être construit. Ces mesures ont été prises alors qu'Israël a donné aux États-Unis l'assurance qu'aucuns travaux de construction de ce type ne seraient entrepris. Bien que dans l'affaire Beit Sourik la Haute Cour d'Israël n'ait pas tranché la question de savoir si le mur pouvait être construit de manière à incorporer des colonies de peuplement en territoire israélien, il ressort implicitement de son jugement qu'une telle mesure serait illégale. On citera à ce propos la partie de ce jugement dans laquelle la Cour déclare ce qui suit :

« Nous souscrivons à l'avis selon lequel le commandement militaire ne peut ordonner la construction du mur de séparation pour des raisons politiques. L'édification de ce mur ne peut être motivée par la volonté d'annexer des territoires à l'État d'Israël. Ce mur ne peut avoir pour objet de tracer une frontière politique. Dans une affaire précédente, la présente Cour s'était penchée sur la question de savoir s'il était possible de confisquer des terres pour construire une agglomération civile juive, lorsque cette décision se fondait non pas sur des impératifs de sécurité ou sur la nécessité de défendre la région, mais plutôt sur un projet sioniste visant à établir des colonies de peuplement sur toute la terre d'Israël. À cette question, la présente Cour a répondu par la négative » (par. 27).

B. Confiscation de terres palestiniennes

23. Le mur a aussi pour objet d'élargir le territoire israélien. Le long de la Ligne verte des terres agricoles fertiles et d'abondantes ressources en eau ont été confisquées et incorporées à Israël. Lors de la visite, le Rapporteur spécial a été témoin de la confiscation de terres agricoles aux alentours des villages de Jayyous et d'Isla. Les paysans de Jayyous sont coupés de leurs terres car le mur passe entre leurs maisons et des terres agricoles fertiles. Il les sépare de 120 serres de 15 000 oliviers et de 50 000 citrus. Les sept puits – de la ville sont tous du côté du mur situé en territoire israélien. Le village d'Isla semble être dans le même cas.

24. Le tracé suivi par le mur dans les colonies situées au sud d'Hébron constitue lui aussi un motif de préoccupation. Le Rapporteur spécial a rendu visite à des habitants de la région de Jimba vivant dans des grottes, qui devaient être chassés des terres qu'ils occupent depuis des générations. L'on ne sait pas très bien si l'armée compte utiliser ces terres pour des manœuvres militaires ou si elle les destine à l'élargissement des colonies de peuplement.

25. Les visées territoriales d'Israël ne sont nulle part plus évidentes qu'à Jérusalem. Israël a occupé Jérusalem-Est en 1967 et l'a illégalement annexée en 1980. Cette annexion a été condamnée au plan international et qualifiée de mesure « n'ayant aucune validité juridique » par une résolution du Conseil de sécurité. Le territoire ainsi annexé représente 1,2 % de la superficie totale de la Cisjordanie occupée et compte 249 000 Palestiniens. Ces derniers sont obligés d'avoir des cartes de résidents pour vivre sur leur propre territoire. Certains avantages (assurance maladie, retraites, liberté de circulation, etc.) sont liés à ces droits de résidence. Les terres qui ont été illégalement incorporées à la municipalité de Jérusalem ont été utilisées pour construire des colonies de peuplement illégales et modifient ainsi la composition démographique de la région où l'on dénombre aujourd'hui 12 colonies de peuplement israéliennes illégales et où le nombre total de colons s'élève à 180 000. À la suite de la création de colonies de peuplement à Jérusalem-Est, les Palestiniens jouissant du droit de résidence à Jérusalem ont été contraints de construire des maisons en dehors de Jérusalem-Est même.

26. Ces derniers mois, le mur a été construit le long de la frontière illégale de Jérusalem-Est, dans des endroits tels qu'Abou Dis, A-Ram et Kalandiya. Ce mur a un certain nombre de conséquences graves. Tout d'abord, il donne effet à une annexion illégale et incorpore une partie de la ville de Jérusalem (y compris les Lieux saints) à Israël. Il convient de souligner qu'il doit s'étendre au-delà des limites de l'actuelle municipalité de Jérusalem et englobe aussi 59 kilomètres carrés situés en Cisjordanie, le tout devant constituer un ensemble connu sous le nom de « Grande Jérusalem ». (Le nombre total de colons installés dans cette « Grande Jérusalem » (247 000) représentera plus de la moitié du total des colons israéliens installés dans le territoire palestinien occupé.) En deuxième lieu, comme le mur sépare les Palestiniens à d'autres Palestiniens, il ne peut en aucun cas se justifier par des impératifs de sécurité. En troisième lieu, il menace de priver de leur droit de résidence quelque 60 000 Palestiniens qui résidaient auparavant dans les limites de la municipalité de Jérusalem. En quatrième lieu, il divisera les familles où certains membres ont des permis de résidence à Jérusalem et d'autres des documents cisjordaniens. En cinquième lieu, il rendra périlleux et compliqués les contacts entre Palestiniens et institutions palestiniennes situés de part et d'autre de son tracé. En sixième lieu, il affectera les 106 000 Palestiniens vivant dans des banlieues situées en Cisjordanie, qui dépendent des infrastructures et des services présents à Jérusalem-Est (hôpitaux, universités, écoles, emplois, marchés pour la vente des produits agricoles, etc.). Le Rapporteur spécial a rencontré de nombreux habitants palestiniens de Jérusalem auxquels la construction du mur dans leur ville causait un grave préjudice. Malheureusement, rares sont ceux qui se soucient du sort de cette population, la communauté internationale s'étant accoutumée à l'annexion illégale de Jérusalem. Le Rapporteur spécial souligne que les tronçons du mur incorporant des quartiers palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est à Israël ne sont pas différents des autres tronçons qui, en Cisjordanie, incorporent des terres palestiniennes au territoire israélien.

C. Exode forcé

27. Le mur a pour troisième objectif de contraindre, en leur rendant la vie intolérable, les Palestiniens résidant dans la « zone de jointure » située entre le mur et la Ligne verte et ceux qui résident dans la zone contiguë au mur mais que ce dernier sépare de leurs terres, à quitter leurs foyers pour recommencer leur vie ailleurs en Cisjordanie. C'est ce qu'a reconnu la CIJ dans son avis consultatif (par. 122 et 123).

28. Dans la « zone de jointure », les restrictions à la liberté de circulation imposent des conditions de vie particulièrement difficiles aux Palestiniens. Israël a fait de cette zone une zone d'accès réglementé où les Israéliens sont libres de se déplacer à leur gré mais où les Palestiniens n'en ont pas le droit. En outre, plus de 13 500 Palestiniens vivant dans cette zone sont obligés d'avoir des permis pour vivre dans leur propre maison (voir l'ordonnance relative aux règles de sécurité (Judea et Samaria) (n° 378) 5730/1970). Les Palestiniens qui vivent en Cisjordanie et possèdent des exploitations agricoles situées à l'intérieur de la « zone d'accès réglementé » ont besoin de permis pour pouvoir franchir le mur et entrer dans ladite zone, tout comme les autres Palestiniens qui souhaitent s'y rendre pour des raisons personnelles, humanitaires ou pour affaires. Dans une récente étude, le Centre B'Tselem (Centre d'information israélien pour les droits de l'homme dans les territoires occupés) a exposé le caractère arbitraire du système de permis. Ces permis sont accordés pour des périodes qui varient suivant le type de plantes cultivées par le demandeur. C'est ainsi que les propriétaires d'oliveraies devraient se voir délivrer des permis pour les mois d'octobre et novembre, saison de la cueillette, tandis que les propriétaires de serres qui nécessitent des soins tout au long de l'année devraient se voir octroyer des permis de plus longue durée. Toutefois, il ressort des témoignages recueillis auprès des agriculteurs de la région par le Centre B'Tselem que les autorités ne tenaient pas souvent compte du type de plantes cultivées. Il arrive parfois qu'Israël octroie des permis de trois à six mois aux propriétaires d'oliveraies, des permis de plus courte durée aux propriétaires de serres. Dans certains cas, ces permis ne sont accordés que pour deux semaines. En outre, environ un quart des demandes de permis d'entrée dans la « zone d'accès réglementé » sont refusées parfois parce que les demandeurs ne peuvent produire de titre de propriété mais le plus souvent pour des raisons de sécurité. Les motifs de ces refus ne sont jamais indiqués. Les permis autorisent l'entrée dans la « zone d'accès réglementé » en passant par des portes spéciales qui permettent de franchir le mur. Dans la pratique, ces portes ne sont jamais ouvertes aux heures indiquées. Les agriculteurs sont obligés d'attendre pendant des heures avant que les soldats ne daignent les ouvrir. C'est ainsi que les portes situées à Jayyous ne sont ouvertes que pendant une demi-heure, trois fois par jour. Les règles arbitraires régissant l'ouverture de ces portes ont posé des problèmes particuliers pendant la saison des récoltes, lesquelles nécessitent un travail intensif. (Voir Not All It seems: Preventing Palestinians' Access to their Lands West of the Separation Barrier in the Tulkarem-Qalqiliya Area.)

29. Dans certains cas, le mur a été construit compte dûment tenu de la présence de maisons palestiniennes. Toutefois, dans d'autres cas, des habitations ont été démolies sous le prétexte qu'elles étaient trop proches de ce mur. C'est ainsi qu'en août 2004, 10 maisons et magasins ont été détruits dans le village d'Azzun Atma en Cisjordanie.

30. La raison principale pour laquelle les Palestiniens veulent quitter la « zone d'accès réglementé » et la zone voisine du mur est que ce dernier sépare leur maison de leurs terres. Les villages de Jayyous et d'Isla dont il est fait mention plus haut ne sont pas des cas isolés. Bon nombre d'autres villages ont été eux aussi touchés.

31. À ce stade, il convient de rappeler le jugement rendu par la Haute Cour d'Israël dans l'affaire opposant le Conseil de village de Beit Sourik au Gouvernement israélien. Dans ce jugement, la Cour a formulé les observations ci-après au sujet de l'emplacement du tronçon du mur situé dans la zone nord-ouest de Jérusalem près de Beit Sourik :

« 82. ... La partie de la clôture de séparation à laquelle ces ordonnances d'expropriation s'appliquent est d'environ 40 kilomètres. Cette clôture nuit à la qualité de vie d'environ 35 000 personnes. Sa construction a nécessité l'utilisation de 4 000 dounams de terres et l'arrachage de milliers d'oliviers. Elle sépare les habitants de huit villages de 30 000 dounams de terres leur appartenant. Dans leur grande majorité, ces terres sont cultivées et contiennent des dizaines de milliers d'oliviers, d'arbres fruitiers et d'autres cultures. Le régime de permis que le commandement militaire souhaite mettre en place ne peut protéger les agriculteurs locaux contre le grave préjudice causé par la clôture, ni en limiter l'ampleur. L'accès aux terres agricoles est gardé par des portes qui sont très éloignées les unes des autres et ne sont pas toujours ouvertes. Des contrôles de sécurité qui risquent d'empêcher le passage des véhicules et qui ne manqueront pas de créer de longues files d'attente seront effectués à l'entrée de ces portes. Tout cela ne facilitera pas la tâche des paysans. Il y aura fatalement des zones où la clôture de sécurité séparera la population locale de ses terres.

...

84. Le préjudice causé par la clôture de séparation ne se limite pas aux terres qui appartiennent aux habitants ou à l'impossibilité d'accéder à ces terres. Il est bien plus vaste car il affecte la vie de toute une population. Dans maints endroits, il passe juste devant les maisons des gens...

85. ... [N]ous sommes d'avis que l'équilibre défini par le commandement militaire est disproportionné. Par conséquent, la seule option qui nous reste est de réexaminer le tracé de la clôture, en nous fondant sur les critères de proportionnalité que nous avons définis. »

32. Le Gouvernement israélien a exprimé son rejet total de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice. Toutefois, il a clairement indiqué qu'il se conformerait à la décision prise par la Haute Cour d'Israël au sujet des parties du mur qui n'avaient pas encore été construites. Le chef du commandement central de l'armée, le général Moshe Kaplinsky, a déclaré le 13 juillet que « les responsables de la sécurité avaient décidé qu'aucune clôture séparant les agriculteurs palestiniens de leurs champs ne serait construite et que les tronçons futurs de la clôture de sécurité ne comporteraient donc aucune porte d'accès aux terres agricoles ». Les déclarations du Gouvernement israélien montrent que celui-ci n'a aucunement l'intention d'appliquer le jugement susmentionné aux 200 kilomètres de mur déjà construits.

33. En premier lieu, le Rapporteur spécial invite le Gouvernement israélien à donner suite à l'avis consultatif de la CIJ, que l'Assemblée a approuvé le 20 juillet 2004 par 150 voix. La CIJ, qui est l'organe judiciaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, s'est prononcée à la quasi-unanimité contre la licéité du mur. Israël est donc juridiquement tenu de démanteler ce mur et de dédommager les Palestiniens du préjudice subi du fait de son édification. Même si le Gouvernement israélien refuse de prendre de telles mesures, il devrait au moins donner effet au jugement rendu par sa propre Haute Cour dans l'affaire de Beit Zourik. Ce jugement laisse clairement entendre que bon nombre des tronçons du mur déjà construits ne sont pas conformes au principe de la proportionnalité tel que l'a exposé la Haute Cour. Il n'y a aucune raison pour que les parties qui sont dans ce cas ne soient pas démantelées.

V. Liberté de circulation

34. La liberté de circulation est un droit reconnu par tous les instruments relatifs aux droits de l'homme. À l'article 12 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, il est stipulé que quiconque se trouve légalement sur le territoire d'un État a le droit d'y circuler librement et d'y choisir librement sa résidence. Malgré cette disposition, de graves restrictions sont imposées à la liberté de circulation de tous les Palestiniens, et ce, tant dans la bande de Gaza qu'en Cisjordanie. Ces restrictions sont, pour chaque Palestinien, une source d'humiliations constantes et de souffrances individuelles et de tracas. En outre, elles sont la cause principale du déclin que connaît l'économie palestinienne.

35. La population de Gaza est de fait retenue prisonnière par la mer et par un ensemble de murs et de clôtures. L'armée israélienne surveille étroitement au moyen de patrouilles les frontières de la bande de Gaza dont elle contrôle strictement les entrées et sorties. Bien que quelques Gazéens soient autorisés à aller travailler en Israël lorsque les conditions de sécurité le permettent et qu'une poignée de personnalités officielles et autres privilégiés aient le droit de quitter Gaza et d'y retourner, la très grande majorité des Gazéens reste confinée à l'intérieur du territoire. En effet, il est pratiquement impossible aux hommes âgés de 16 à 35 ans, y compris les malades et les étudiants, de quitter Gaza par le terminal de Rafah, qui est la seule porte de sortie vers l'Égypte. À Gaza même, des barrages routiers fréquents et étroitement surveillés restreignent la liberté de circulation. Le territoire est de fait coupé en deux par le point de contrôle d'Abou Houli qui se trouve sur la route Salah al-Din, le principal axe routier reliant le nord au sud. En outre, d'autres barrages routiers, tant provisoires que permanents, ont été mis en place dans le nord et le sud de Gaza tandis que plusieurs zones, dont celles d'Al Mawasi et d'Al Sayafa, sont isolées du reste de la bande de Gaza par des patrouilles militaires israéliennes.

36. La population de Cisjordanie est victime de différentes formes de restriction à sa liberté de circulation. Parfois, les résidents d'une ville ne peuvent pas se rendre librement dans une autre ville de Cisjordanie : il leur faut obtenir auprès de l'armée israélienne des permis qui peuvent leur être arbitrairement refusés. Il est rare que des permis de ce type soient accordés aux propriétaires de véhicules privés.

Quiconque souhaite se déplacer à l'intérieur de la Cisjordanie doit passer par des points de contrôle tant temporaires que permanents que l'on retrouve également à l'intérieur des villes et des districts. La Cisjordanie et la bande de Gaza comptent plusieurs centaines de points de contrôle de ce type qui empêchent de circuler entre les villes et les villages ou d'une ville à l'autre et interdisent l'accès à Israël. Ces points de contrôle ne sont pas les seuls à restreindre la liberté de circulation. Bien qu'Israël y ait moins fréquemment recours qu'auparavant, les couvre-feux restent chose courante, comme le montre l'exemple de Naplouse. Ces restrictions à la liberté de circulation des personnes et des marchandises ont aggravé la crise économique qui sévit dans le territoire palestinien occupé, créé un chômage endémique et gravement perturbé les secteurs de l'éducation, de la santé, des services, de l'emploi et du commerce ainsi que la vie familiale et politique.

37. La présence de roades distinctes reliant les colonies de peuplement les unes aux autres ainsi qu'à Israël et qui sont interdites aux Palestiniens rend encore plus difficiles les déplacements, et ce aussi bien dans la bande de Gaza qu'en Cisjordanie.

38. Dans la région de Jérusalem, le mur menace de devenir un véritable cauchemar. Ceux qui se trouvent du côté du mur situé en Cisjordanie et possèdent des documents d'identité cisjordaniens ne pourront avoir accès aux lieux de travail, écoles, hôpitaux et lieux de culte situés du côté israélien. De la même façon, il sera très difficile, voire impossible, à ceux qui résident du côté du mur situé en territoire israélien d'avoir accès à leurs lieux de travail ainsi qu'aux établissements d'enseignement et aux hôpitaux qui se trouvent du côté cisjordanien. En outre, nombre de Palestiniens résidant officiellement à Jérusalem ont des conjoints qui possèdent des documents d'identité cisjordaniens. Il reste maintenant à savoir si ces couples seront autorisés à vivre ensemble. Il est aussi à craindre que les détenteurs de papiers d'identité de Jérusalem, contraints de vivre à l'extérieur du mur en raison de la pénurie de logements à Jérusalem-Est, ne perdent leurs droits de résider dans cette ville. Tous les résidents de la zone, soit plusieurs milliers de personnes, seront obligés de passer par un grand terminal situé à Qalandiya. Certains d'entre eux seront munis de papiers d'identité cisjordaniens et d'autres de permis de résidence à Jérusalem. Bien que l'on n'ait pas d'estimations précises sur le nombre de Palestiniens qui devront chaque jour passer par le terminal de Qalandiya, il est clair que ce total se chiffrera en dizaines de milliers. La plupart de ceux qui franchiront le mur pour se rendre à leur travail ou à l'école arriveront au terminal de Qalandiya aux heures de pointe et l'on peut s'attendre à ce que cet afflux massif de gens cause des problèmes. Au stade actuel, il est tout simplement impossible de prédire l'ampleur des difficultés auxquelles les Palestiniens vivant à l'intérieur et aux alentours de Jérusalem seront confrontés du fait de l'édification du mur.

39. Comme on l'a vu plus haut, les personnes vivant ou exploitant des terres agricoles le long de la « zone de jointure » située entre le mur et la Ligne verte sont soumises à un régime spécial de permis. En effet, pour pouvoir aller et venir entre leur domicile et leurs champs, il leur faut des permis qui leur sont souvent refusés ou qui ne leur sont accordés que pour des périodes limitées. En outre, il arrive souvent que les portes d'entrée à la « zone d'accès réglementé » ne soient pas ouvertes aux heures indiquées. D'une manière générale, le système de permis fonctionne de façon totalement arbitraire. Les effets psychologiques du mur ont récemment fait l'objet d'une étude réalisée par le Palestinian Counselling Centre et datée du 29 juin 2004, montrant que les personnes vivant à proximité du mur, en particulier celles qui étaient obligées de passer par les portes d'accès, souffraient de graves troubles psychosomatique dus à leur état d'anxiété.

40. Le Rapporteur spécial est malheureusement tenu de comparer les différents systèmes de permis auxquels sont soumis les Palestiniens aux lois sur les laissez-passer de triste mémoire qui, du temps de l'apartheid en Afrique du Sud, régissaient le droit des Africains de circuler dans les zones « blanches ». Ces lois étaient certes humiliantes mais elles s'appliquaient uniformément. Les lois israéliennes sont en fait aussi humiliantes mais leur application n'est ni claire ni uniforme. Leur caractère arbitraire et fantaisiste pèse lourdement sur la population palestinienne pour laquelle les restrictions à la liberté de circulation sont une forme d'humiliation institutionnalisée. L'Afrique du Sud n'a jamais connu d'« apartheid routier ». En créant des routes spécialement réservées aux colons et interdites aux Palestiniens, Israël est allé encore plus loin que l'apartheid en matière de restrictions à la liberté de circulation.

VI. Conclusion

41. Le présent rapport est centré sur trois questions : la destruction de biens à Gaza, les conséquences de l'édification du mur et les restrictions à la liberté de circulation. Le Rapporteur spécial a appelé l'attention sur les graves violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire découlant de ces mesures qu'a prises le Gouvernement israélien. Israël est tenu, sur les plans tant juridique que moral, de mettre ses pratiques et politiques en conformité avec le droit. La Haute Cour de justice israélienne a déclaré à juste titre qu'il ne « saurait y avoir de sécurité sans droit » (affaire Beit Sourik, par. 86).

42. Comme l'indique la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif, qui a été approuvé par l'Assemblée générale, le mur a des conséquences pour les États autres qu'Israël. Le Rapporteur spécial rappelle aux États qu'ils ont l'obligation de ne pas reconnaître la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur et de ne pas prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de cette situation. En outre, tous les États parties à la quatrième Convention de Genève ont l'obligation de faire respecter par Israël le droit international humanitaire incorporé dans la Convention. Le mépris affiché par Israël pour le droit international menace non seulement l'ordre juridique international, mais aussi l'ordre international tout court. Dans ces conditions, la communauté internationale n'a pas lieu de se montrer conciliante.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
18 août 2005
Français
Original: anglais

Soixantième session

Point 73 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Questions relatives aux droits de l'homme :

situations relatives aux droits de l'homme

et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme du peuple palestinien dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport soumis par John Dugard, Rapporteur spécial de la Commission des droits de l'homme sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, en application des résolutions 1993/2 A et 2005/7 de la Commission.

* A/60/150.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial de la Commission des droits de l'homme sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Au cours de l'année écoulée, la décision prise par Israël d'évacuer les colons juifs et ses soldats de la bande de Gaza a focalisé l'attention de la communauté internationale sur Gaza, ce qui a permis à Israël de continuer à construire le mur en territoire palestinien, à étendre les colonies et à faire reculer la présence palestinienne à Jérusalem, sans qu'aucune voix ne s'élève, ou presque. Le présent rapport traite essentiellement de ces questions.

Bien que la portée et les conséquences du retrait israélien de la bande de Gaza ne soient pas pleinement connues, la bande de Gaza restera à l'évidence un territoire occupé assujéti aux dispositions de la Convention de Genève du 12 août 1949 relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève), puisque Israël continuera à en contrôler les frontières. Le retrait des colons juifs de la bande de Gaza entraînera la décolonisation d'une partie du territoire palestinien, mais ne mettra pas fin à son occupation.

Dans son avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a conclu que l'édification du mur en train d'être construit par Israël dans le territoire palestinien occupé était contraire au droit international. En conséquence, elle a affirmé que les travaux de construction devaient cesser et que les tronçons qui avaient été achevés en territoire palestinien occupé devaient être détruits. Le Gouvernement israélien n'a pas tenu compte de l'avis consultatif et les travaux de construction se poursuivent.

L'existence du mur a de graves répercussions pour les Palestiniens qui vivent à proximité. Plusieurs milliers d'entre eux ne peuvent accéder à leurs terres agricoles, situées de l'autre côté du mur, car le laissez-passer nécessaire ne leur est pas délivré. Même pour ceux qui obtiennent un laissez-passer, les portes ménagées dans le mur restent souvent closes aux heures où elles devraient être ouvertes. Les Palestiniens quittent donc progressivement la terre et les maisons qu'ils occupent depuis des générations.

La plupart des colons juifs de Cisjordanie sont désormais installés entre la Ligne verte (tracé accepté de la frontière séparant Israël du territoire palestinien occupé) et le mur. En outre, dans cette zone, appelée « zone d'accès réglementé », certaines colonies sont en expansion, et d'autres continuent d'apparaître. Enhardis par le soutien que leur manifestent le Gouvernement et les Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI), les colons se sont faits plus agressifs à l'égard des Palestiniens, et de plus en plus violents.

L'édification du mur, la « dépalestinisation » de la zone d'accès réglementé et l'expansion des colonies montrent clairement que l'intention est de faire du mur la frontière de l'État d'Israël et d'annexer la zone d'accès réglementé.

Israël a lancé une vaste campagne de transformation de Jérusalem visant à judaïser la ville. Des colonies juives de Jérusalem-Est sont en train d'être étendues et il est prévu de relier Jérusalem à la colonie de Ma'aleh Adumim, où vivent 35 000 personnes, ce qui aura pour effet de couper la Cisjordanie en deux. Les Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est sont en train d'être isolés les uns des autres par l'implantation de colonies juives et par la démolition de logements. La construction du mur a entraîné le déplacement de fait en Cisjordanie de quelque 55 000 Palestiniens résidant officiellement dans la commune de Jérusalem-Est. À l'évidence, ces transformations ont pour objet de couper court à l'idée que Jérusalem-Est constitue une entité palestinienne susceptible de devenir la capitale d'un État palestinien.

La communauté internationale a proclamé le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination et la nécessité de créer un État palestinien vivant côte à côte avec Israël dans la paix et la sécurité, ce qui reste du domaine de l'utopie en l'absence d'un territoire palestinien viable. Or, l'édification du mur, l'expansion des colonies et la dépalestinisation de Jérusalem font obstacle à la viabilité d'un État palestinien.

L'occupation du territoire palestinien continue de donner lieu à de sérieuses violations des droits de l'homme. Les prisons israéliennes comptent environ 8 000 détenus palestiniens, dont le traitement serait loin d'être conforme aux normes internationalement reconnues. La liberté de circulation est sérieusement entravée par la présence de plus de 600 postes de contrôle militaires. Les droits sociaux et économiques ne sont pas respectés. Un quart de la population palestinienne est au chômage et la moitié vit au-dessous du seuil de pauvreté officiel. Les soins de santé et l'enseignement laissent à désirer et il est très difficile pour les Palestiniens de se procurer de l'eau salubre. Le logement reste un grave problème du fait des démolitions auxquelles les FDI ont procédé ces dernières années. Les femmes souffrent davantage de ces violations.

En 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a rendu un avis consultatif dans lequel elle a déclaré illégales non seulement l'édification du mur mais aussi de nombreux aspects de l'administration par Israël du territoire palestinien occupé. L'Assemblée générale a approuvé cet avis consultatif dans sa résolution ES-10/15 du 20 juillet 2004. Depuis lors, la communauté internationale n'a pas fait grand-chose pour contraindre Israël à s'acquitter des obligations juridiques énoncées par la Cour internationale de Justice. Le Quatuor, composé de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, de l'Union Européenne, des États-Unis d'Amérique et de la Fédération de Russie, préfère visiblement négocier avec Israël sur la base de la Feuille de route sans se préoccuper de l'avis consultatif. Il semble que la Feuille de route envisage l'acceptation de certains tronçons du mur construits en territoire palestinien occupé et le rattachement au territoire israélien des grandes colonies juives qui se trouvent sur ce territoire. L'ONU est donc dans une situation délicate car elle ne peut à l'évidence être partie à des négociations faisant abstraction de l'avis consultatif rendu par son propre organe judiciaire.

Table des matières

	Paragraphes	Page
I. Introduction	1–2	5
II. Visite du Rapporteur spécial	3–4	5
III. Gaza	5–11	6
IV. Le mur	12–27	8
A. Les colonies de peuplement et le mur	21–26	10
B. Actes de violence perpétrés par les colons	27	12
V. Jérusalem	28–35	12
VI. Le mur, les colonies et l'autodétermination	36–37	13
VII. Autres violations des droits de l'homme	38–49	14
A. Liberté individuelle	39–40	14
B. Liberté de circulation	41–42	15
C. Discrimination à l'égard des femmes	43	15
D. Crise humanitaire	44–48	16
E. Droit à un environnement non pollué	49	17
VIII. La peine de mort et l'Autorité palestinienne	50	17
IX. Le territoire palestinien occupé et la communauté internationale	51–57	18

I. Introduction

1. Le 8 février 2005, à Charm el-Cheikh (Égypte), le Président de l'Autorité palestinienne, Mahmoud Abbas, et le Premier Ministre israélien, Ariel Sharon, sont convenus d'un cessez-le-feu, la Palestine consentant à mettre fin aux actes de violence dirigés vers les Israéliens, et Israël à cesser toute activité militaire à l'encontre des Palestiniens. Cet accord a fait naître l'espoir d'une paix qui aboutirait à des négociations en vue de la création d'un État palestinien. Au cours des six derniers mois, la paix a été précaire. Les attentats-suicides n'ont pas cessé en Israël : le 25 février, une opération kamikaze a fait quatre tués et 50 blessés à Tel-Aviv et le 12 juillet, une autre a fait 5 tués et 90 blessés à Netanya. Des agents palestiniens indépendants des autorités ont commis plus de 200 attentats contre des objectifs israéliens, causant toutefois peu de pertes. Les violences envers les Palestiniens se sont poursuivies : les Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) ont tué plus de 70 Palestiniens, en ont blessé plus de 500 et ont repris leurs assassinats ciblés. Elles ont fait plus de 2 000 incursions dans les villes et villages de Palestine. Ce qui a surtout retenu l'attention pendant cette période, c'est le départ des colons juifs de la bande de Gaza, qui a causé des clivages importants dans la société israélienne. La communauté internationale s'y est bien entendu intéressée de très près, au détriment cependant des graves violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire commises en Cisjordanie. L'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice, que l'Assemblée générale a confirmé par sa résolution ES-10/15 du 20 juillet 2004, est, en gros, resté lettre morte, bien que selon un rapport que la Suisse, dépositaire des Conventions de Genève, a fait tenir à l'Assemblée le 30 juin 2005, la très grande majorité des États ait réaffirmé que le droit applicable et les obligations des parties concernées avaient été constatés par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004 et ne pouvaient pas être remis en cause (A/ES-10/304, annexe, par. 22). Israël a donc pu poursuivre l'édification du mur sur le territoire palestinien, l'expansion des colonies et la dépalestinisation de Jérusalem. Le présent rapport porte principalement sur ces questions.

2. Dans le présent rapport, le terme « mur » a été préféré aux termes plus neutres que sont « barrière » et « clôture ». Le terme « mur » a été soigneusement pesé et délibérément choisi par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé (voir A/ES-10/273 et Corr.1). Le Rapporteur spécial ne voit pas de raison d'y substituer un autre.

II. Visite du Rapporteur spécial

3. Le Rapporteur spécial a passé la période du 26 juin au 3 juillet 2005 dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Il s'est rendu à Gaza, où il a pu visiter le point de passage de Karni et constater les dommages occasionnés à l'aéroport international de Gaza. Du côté palestinien, du point de passage de Rafah, qui sépare Gaza et l'Égypte, il a croisé des résidents de Gaza qui, rentrant chez eux en autocar, avaient attendu trois ou quatre jours du côté égyptien, en plein soleil, pendant que les fonctionnaires israéliens de l'immigration étudiaient leurs papiers. (B'Tselem, dans une récente publication intitulée One Big Prison, a qualifié d'arbitraire et démesuré le traitement réservé aux habitants de Gaza par les autorités israéliennes au terminal de Rafah.) Pendant son séjour à Gaza, le Rapporteur spécial a rencontré des représentants des organismes des Nations Unies et d'ONG palestiniennes, ainsi que des particuliers.

4. Le Rapporteur spécial a ensuite séjourné en Cisjordanie, dont Jérusalem-Est. Il s'est rendu à Ramallah, Hébron, Jérusalem et Bethléem. Il s'est aussi rendu dans des localités adjacentes au mur dans les régions de Qalqiliya (Jayyous), Tulkarem (Ras), Hébron (Imneizel), Jérusalem (Beit Surik, Beit Dukku, Anata, Abou-Dis, A-Ram, Kalandiya) et Bethléem (An Nu'man). Il a rencontré des groupes touchés par la présence des colonies à Hébron, At Tuwani, Bethléem et Jérusalem. À Jérusalem, il s'est rendu dans le quartier de Silwan, où 88 maisons doivent être rasées. Au cours de cette partie de sa visite, il a rencontré des représentants de l'Autorité palestinienne, des organismes des Nations Unies et d'ONG israéliennes et palestiniennes, ainsi que des particuliers, dont beaucoup ont souffert personnellement de la construction du mur et des colonies.

III. Gaza

5. Au moment de la rédaction du présent document, la situation à Gaza était explosive. Des groupes de colons opposés au départ de 8 000 à 9 000 colons avaient eu des affrontements violents avec les FDI. Des militants palestiniens avaient tiré des roquettes sur Israël et les colonies juives et commis des actes de violence à l'encontre de l'Autorité palestinienne. Le retrait des colons doit avoir lieu entre la mi-août et la mi-septembre et il semble qu'il sera inmanquablement accompagné de violences.

6. Du fait de cette situation explosive, un additif au présent rapport risque de devoir être publié. Pour le moment, le retrait des colons et le statut qu'aura Gaza ne suscitent que des questions.

7. Une grande incertitude règne en ce qui concerne les modalités du retrait. On peut certes concevoir que les FDI aient besoin de créer un effet de surprise pour mener à bien l'opération, mais cette incertitude est lourde de conséquences pour les Palestiniens. Il est très probable que le retrait perturbera fortement la circulation routière et réduira la liberté de circulation, ce qui se répercutera sur les possibilités de ravitaillements et l'accès aux hôpitaux, aux écoles et aux lieux de travail. On comprend donc mal pourquoi le Gouvernement israélien n'a pas pris de dispositions, avec l'Autorité palestinienne, pour éviter une catastrophe humanitaire chez les Palestiniens pendant la période de retrait qui durera un mois. On craint par ailleurs qu'il n'ait pas été tenu suffisamment compte de la présence de munitions non explosées et de mines terrestres à proximité des colonies et d'amiante dans les habitations qui doivent être rasées.

8. Le futur statut de Gaza est très flou. Il semble improbable que l'ONU soit en mesure de publier une déclaration proclamant la fin de l'occupation israélienne de Gaza après le départ des colons puisque Israël continuera d'exercer un contrôle sur Gaza. De surcroît, la Cisjordanie et Gaza constituent « une seule unité territoriale » aux termes des Accords d'Oslo et il serait incompréhensible qu'une déclaration proclamant la fin de l'occupation de Gaza n'aborde pas la question de l'occupation de la Cisjordanie, qui se poursuit. Les projets ou intentions d'Israël en ce qui concerne l'avenir de Gaza ne sont pas clairs. Au moment de la rédaction du présent rapport, l'Autorité palestinienne ne savait toujours pas exactement quelle forme de contrôle Israël continuerait d'exercer et ni de quel degré de liberté Gaza jouirait dans ses rapports avec l'extérieur et avec la Cisjordanie. Israël a affirmé qu'il céderait le contrôle de la route Philadelphi, entre Gaza et l'Égypte, si celle-ci est disposée à patrouiller de son côté de la frontière. Il a annoncé que l'aéroport de Gaza pourrait ne pas rouvrir. Bien qu'il soit disposé à envisager la construction d'un port à Gaza, Israël revendiquera, semble-t-il, le droit de surveiller les eaux territoriales de Gaza. Il est question aussi qu'Israël construise en mer une barrière en béton qui viendrait prolonger sa frontière avec Gaza. La circulation des personnes et des biens entre Gaza et la Cisjordanie reste une inconnue. Jusqu'ici, Israël a rejeté des propositions visant à ce que les personnes puissent circuler librement entre Gaza et la Cisjordanie, la réunification familiale des habitants de Gaza et de la Cisjordanie restant inadmissible à ses yeux. Il n'y aura pas de libre circulation des biens entre Gaza et la Cisjordanie. Le projet de construction, entre Gaza et la Cisjordanie, d'une route mise en déblai, avec une dénivellation de cinq mètres, et entourée d'une clôture, qui permettrait le passage de personnes et de biens, est encore à l'examen. Il est fort possible qu'en ce qui concerne les biens, la méthode du transbordement, lourde à mettre en œuvre et encadrée de façon très stricte, qui est en usage à l'heure actuelle au point de passage de Karni, restera en vigueur. Israël n'est guère enclin à permettre la libre circulation des personnes et des biens entre Gaza et l'Égypte. Il a proposé que le terminal qui se situe actuellement à Rafah, entre Gaza et l'Égypte, soit réinstallé à Kerem Shalom, où les frontières d'Israël, de l'Égypte et de Gaza se rencontrent, ce qui lui permettrait de continuer à exercer un contrôle sur les entrées à Gaza. Les dispositions douanières font encore l'objet de négociations. Dans tous les cas de figure, la conclusion inéluctable est qu'Israël n'est pas disposé à céder le contrôle qu'il exerce sur les frontières de Gaza. En outre, les FDI ont fait savoir qu'elles n'hésiteraient pas à intervenir militairement à Gaza après la départ des colons si la sécurité d'Israël l'exigeait.

9. Il semble donc ne faire aucun doute que Gaza demeurera un territoire occupé assujéti aux dispositions de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre du 12 août 1949 (quatrième Convention de Genève). D'après la jurisprudence relative à l'Allemagne d'après guerre, il y a occupation si un contrôle continue d'être exercé. Dans l'affaire des otages (États-Unis c. Wilhelm List et al., 1949), un tribunal militaire a affirmé qu'il n'est pas nécessaire que la puissance occupante exerce un contrôle effectif sur tout le territoire, pourvu qu'elle puisse à tout moment qu'elle choisit exercer un contrôle sur n'importe quelle partie du pays¹.

10. Le retrait des colons juifs de Gaza doit être considéré comme la décolonisation d'une partie du territoire palestinien. Le contrôle qu'Israël exerce sur ce territoire reste toutefois intact. En conséquence, Israël demeurera une puissance occupante en ce qui concerne Gaza, et les règles du droit international humanitaire applicable aux territoires occupés continueront de s'appliquer. La crise humanitaire qui frappe Gaza depuis 2000 ne prendra pas fin avec le départ des colons juifs. Le contrôle qu'Israël continuera d'exercer empêchera toute reprise économique et Gaza restera un territoire prisonnier où les droits économiques et sociaux sont foulés au pied.

11. L'incertitude qui entoure les projets d'Israël pour l'après-retrait a fait dire qu'Israël entendait reporter sine die les décisions à prendre sur des questions telles que les douanes, le trafic aérien et maritime et la circulation des personnes et des biens. Si les décisions traînent, l'opinion internationale continuera de ne pas prêter attention à l'expansion territoriale d'Israël en Cisjordanie. Douze mois de négociations interminables entre le Gouvernement israélien et l'Autorité palestinienne sur ces questions permettront à Israël d'achever l'édification du mur, de consolider les blocs de colonies et de transformer Jérusalem.

IV. Le mur

12. Dans l'avis consultatif qu'elle a rendu le 9 juillet 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a jugé que l'édification du mur qu'Israël était en train de construire dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris à l'intérieur et sur le pourtour de Jérusalem-Est, était contraire au droit international; qu'Israël était tenu de cesser immédiatement les travaux d'édification du mur dans le territoire palestinien et de démanteler au plus vite cet ouvrage; qu'il était dans l'obligation de réparer tous les dommages causés par la construction du mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé; que tous les États avaient l'obligation de ne pas reconnaître la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur; que tous les États parties à la quatrième Convention de Genève avaient l'obligation de faire respecter par Israël les dispositions de cette convention; et que l'Organisation des Nations Unies devait examiner quelles nouvelles mesures devaient être prises afin de mettre un terme à la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur. Le 20 juillet 2004, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution ES-10/15, dans laquelle elle exigeait qu'Israël s'acquitte de ses obligations juridiques, telles qu'elles sont énoncées dans l'avis consultatif. Le résultat du vote sur cette résolution était le suivant : 150 voix pour, 6 voix contre et 10 abstentions.

13. Le Gouvernement israélien refuse de se plier à l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice. En revanche, il attache une certaine importance au jugement rendu le 30 juin 2004 par la Haute Cour israélienne dans l'affaire opposant le Conseil de village de Beit Sourik au Gouvernement israélien, dans laquelle la Haute Cour faisait valoir que si le mur pouvait être édifié pour des raisons de sécurité, il ne fallait pas qu'il rende les conditions de vie trop difficiles pour les Palestiniens. Malheureusement, ce jugement ne s'est pas appliqué à la plupart des tronçons du mur édifiés avant cette décision de juillet 2004.

14. Le 20 février 2005, le Gouvernement israélien a légèrement modifié le tracé prévu au départ. Une fois achevé, le mur fera 670 kilomètres de long, contre 622 kilomètres auparavant, et suivra la Ligne verte sur 135 kilomètres, contre 48 précédemment. Le nouveau tracé suivra la Ligne verte ou en sera proche dans les hauteurs d'Hébron. Un peu plus au nord, il pénétrera plus profondément dans le territoire palestinien pour englober des colonies du bloc de Goush Etzion près de Bethléem, où vivent plus de 50 000 colons. Il a également été décidé d'incorporer les colonies de Ma'ale Adoumim et d'Ariel du côté israélien du mur. Ce faisant, Israël absorbera environ 10 % des terres palestiniennes. (L'ancien tracé aboutissait à la confiscation de 12,7 % de la Cisjordanie.) Le mur aura pour effet de placer du côté israélien 170 000 colons (sans compter ceux de Jérusalem-Est) et 49 000 Palestiniens, qui vivent dans 38 villages.

15. Jusqu'à présent, 213 kilomètres ont été construits, de la frontière nord de la Cisjordanie près de Toubas jusqu'aux environs d'Elkana au centre, ainsi que deux tronçons à Jérusalem. Les travaux se poursuivent entre Elkana et Jérusalem; autour des colonies d'Ariel et d'Immanuel; à l'intérieur et sur le pourtour de Jérusalem-Est; et de Goush Etzion à Metzudat Yehuda à la frontière sud de la Cisjordanie, dans le gouvernorat d'Hébron. Malgré la progression rapide des travaux depuis l'avis consultatif rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice, le 6 juillet, le Premier Ministre israélien, Ariel Sharon, a reproché aux autorités militaires de « mettre trop de temps » à construire le mur et leur a ordonné d'accélérer les travaux puisque rien ne s'y opposait sur le plan financier. Les retards pris dans les travaux sont largement attribuables aux requêtes adressées à la Haute Cour contre le tracé du mur. Une ordonnance interdisant l'édification du mur autour de la colonie d'Ariel, qui prolongerait le mur de 22 kilomètres à l'intérieur de la Cisjordanie, a été levée le 17 mai 2005, et les travaux de construction le long de la limite orientale de cette bande de terre qui s'enfonce en territoire palestinien ont déjà commencé. La déclaration faite par M. Sharon le 21 juillet 2005, à l'effet que la colonie d'Ariel « fera partie de l'État d'Israël pour toujours » et « sera toujours un élément indissociable de l'État d'Israël », ne laisse planer aucun doute sur l'intention d'Israël de bâtir le mur autour du bloc de colonies d'Ariel.

16. Le Rapporteur spécial s'est rendu jusqu'au mur en divers endroits et a visité plusieurs sites de construction, notamment près de Jayyous et de Ras dans les secteurs de Qalandiya et de Toulkarem; autour de la tombe de Rachel à Bethléem; à A-Ram, le long de la route qui mène à Qalandiya; sur les collines d'Abou-Dis et d'Anata; et à Mneizel dans le sud des hauteurs d'Hébron. Le mur, ou barrière comme certains préfèrent l'appeler, a été édifié sans souci de l'environnement. Il est laid et a entraîné la destruction d'oliveraies, d'agrumeraies et de pâturages, en plus de défigurer les villes et les villages. Dans ses rapports précédents, le Rapporteur spécial a fait valoir que le mur semblait souvent avoir été construit sans réel souci des questions de sécurité. (Par exemple, à certains endroits, le mur a été édifié dans une vallée surplombée par des villages palestiniens.) Sa dernière visite l'a conforté dans son opinion.

17. La zone située entre le mur et la Ligne verte – la frontière reconnue par la communauté internationale, qui sépare Israël de la Cisjordanie – est appelée « zone fermée » ou « zone charnière ». Y vivent quelque 49 000 Palestiniens. Cependant, un nombre encore plus important de Palestiniens vit du côté cisjordanien du mur alors que leurs terres se trouvent dans la « zone fermée ». Les localités palestiniennes, de part et d'autre, sont gravement touchées par l'édification de ce mur. Pour les résidents de la « zone fermée », les contacts avec la famille, ainsi que l'accès aux hôpitaux, aux écoles, aux marchés et aux emplois en Cisjordanie sont devenus difficiles. Ceux qui vivent du côté cisjordanien du mur ont besoin d'un permis pour se rendre sur leurs propres terres agricoles. Aujourd'hui, il semble que les demandes de permis soient déclinées surtout lorsque le propriétaire ou l'exploitant agricole ne peut pas prouver de façon convaincante qu'il possède un titre de propriété ou un titre foncier, alors que ces dernières années, les permis étaient surtout refusés pour des raisons de sécurité. Un propriétaire foncier qui présente une demande de permis pour avoir accès à ses propres terres doit produire un extrait cadastral. Cependant, le titre de propriété n'existe pas dans le système foncier palestinien traditionnel et les propriétaires fonciers palestiniens s'y opposent depuis de nombreuses décennies. Cela peut s'expliquer en partie par le fait que l'inscription au cadastre sous l'Empire ottoman se faisait très lentement et qu'il y a eu peu de progrès en la matière sous le mandat britannique et pendant l'occupation jordanienne avant 1967. Il n'est donc pas inhabituel que les exploitants ne sachent pas quel est le véritable statut des terrains qu'ils cultivent puisqu'ils n'ont jamais dû produire de titre de propriété. La plupart de ces terres sont dans la famille depuis plusieurs générations selon le régime foncier traditionnel, où il n'existe pas de cadastre. Dans ces conditions, produire un titre de propriété ou un titre foncier constitue souvent un obstacle insurmontable. Les permis sont refusés pour ce motif ou parce que l'on estime que le demandeur est un parent trop éloigné du propriétaire. Dans le gouvernorat de Toulkarem, pour la période allant du 1^{er} mars au 31 mai 2005, 58 % des 315 demandeurs de 'Attil, de Deir al Ghoussoun et d'Illar ont reçu un permis; 22 % des 900 demandeurs d'Akkaba en ont reçu un, ainsi que 19 % des 1 222 demandeurs de Baqaa ach-Charkiya, de Nazlat Issa et d'Abou Nar. À Qaffin, qui compte 9 000 habitants, 600 familles, soit entre 3 000 et 3 600 personnes, possèdent des terres et des vergers de l'autre côté du mur. En mai 2005, 1 050 villageois ont présenté une demande de permis pour avoir accès à leurs terres. Seuls 70 permis ont été délivrés; 600 personnes ont essuyé un refus; 380 personnes n'ont reçu aucune réponse. La raison invoquée le plus fréquemment pour justifier ces refus était que le demandeur n'était pas un parent assez proche du propriétaire. Des permis ont été refusés à des fils et à des petits-fils de propriétaires car, estimait-on, il s'agissait de « parents éloignés ». Entre janvier et juin 2005, sur les quelque 3 545 demandes présentées dans le secteur de Toulkarem, 2 404 ont été rejetées, surtout en raison de preuves insuffisantes de l'existence d'un lien de parenté avec le propriétaire.

18. D'autre part, l'ouverture et la fermeture des 25 portes sensées permettre d'entrer dans la « zone d'accès réglementé » sont purement arbitraires, ce qui n'arrange rien. Il n'est pas rare que ceux qui ont un permis attendent l'ouverture des portes pendant plusieurs heures, parfois en vain. En mai et juin 2005, des incendies se sont déclarés dans la zone et les FDI n'ont pas autorisé les agriculteurs à accéder à leurs terres pour les éteindre.

19. Il arrive que des maisons situées trop près du mur soient détruites. C'est ce qui s'est passé le 27 juillet 2005 dans les environs d'Al-Khadr.

20. Beaucoup de ceux dont les terres avoisinent la zone d'accès réglementé ne supportent plus que leurs demandes de permis soient refusées, que les portes restent fermées et que leurs habitations soient détruites. C'est pourquoi les Palestiniens quittent peu à peu les terres et les maisons où ils ont vécu pendant des générations. On ne dispose pas de chiffres précis, mais 11 000 personnes environ auraient déjà été déplacées par suite de la construction du mur. Cette nouvelle génération de déplacés crée une nouvelle catégorie de réfugiés palestiniens. En vertu d'une vieille loi ottomane, les autorités israéliennes vont pouvoir saisir les terres laissées à l'abandon et en transmettre la propriété aux colons.

A. Les colonies de peuplement et le mur

21. Les colonies de peuplement juives en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza sont illégales. Elles contreviennent aux dispositions du paragraphe 6 de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et leur illégalité a été confirmée par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif concernant le mur. Le maintien des colonies de peuplement ne peut donc aucunement être justifié. A fortiori, la communauté internationale doit juger leur expansion totalement inacceptable.

22. La plupart des colons et des colonies de peuplement de Cisjordanie se trouvent du côté israélien du mur. Environ 170 000 colons, soit 76 % de la population de colons de Cisjordanie, vivent dans 56 colonies à l'intérieur de la zone d'accès réglementé, où de nouvelles implantations et l'expansion de colonies existantes sont prévues. Le Rapporteur spécial a pu le constater dans les environs de Jayyous, où la colonie de peuplement de Zufin est en train d'être agrandie de telle façon qu'elle empiètera encore davantage sur les champs des agriculteurs palestiniens dans la zone d'accès réglementé.

23. L'expansion des colonies de peuplement saute aux yeux de toute personne qui se rend sur les sites concernés. L'horizon est parsemé de grues et les activités de construction sont clairement visibles. Les chiffres confirment le développement et l'expansion des colonies de peuplement. Le 8 juin 2005, le Bureau central israélien de statistique a indiqué qu'Israël avait construit près de deux fois plus de logements destinés aux colons au cours du premier trimestre de 2005 qu'au cours de la même période en 2004. Parallèlement, la construction de nouveaux logements en Israël même a chuté de 6 % par rapport au premier trimestre de 2004.

24. Trois grandes implantations, Gush Etzion, Ma'aleh Adumim et Ariel, qui seront toutes encerclées par le mur, auront pour effet de diviser le territoire palestinien en réserves, ou bantoustans, reliés entre eux par des routes ou des tunnels spéciaux. La contiguïté qui en résultera sera le fait des moyens de transport et non de la géographie. Cela signifie que les Palestiniens pourront accéder aux différentes zones de Cisjordanie mais que l'unité territoriale indispensable à la création d'un État viable fera défaut.

25. La construction du mur, la dépalestinisation de la zone d'accès réglementé et l'expansion et la construction de colonies de peuplement dans cette même zone démontrent clairement que le mur a vocation à marquer la frontière de l'État d'Israël et que le territoire appelé zone d'accès réglementé sera annexé. Les membres des Forces de défense israéliennes informent déjà les représentants de la communauté internationale qui se rendent dans la zone d'accès réglementé que celle-ci fait partie du territoire israélien. Ce point de vue est compréhensible, après tout, puisque les Israéliens peuvent y accéder librement alors que les Palestiniens doivent obtenir des permis spéciaux. Comme preuve supplémentaire du fait qu'Israël considère le mur comme une frontière internationale, on peut citer la construction de postes de contrôle qui ressemblent, de par leur taille et leur structure, à des postes frontière internationaux. D'ailleurs, tout comme le poste frontière de Karni, à Gaza, ces postes appliqueront la procédure de passage avec transbordement. Dans le journal Ha'aretz en date du 12 juillet 2005, M. Ran Cohen, membre de la Knesset, a souligné que les Israéliens étaient de plus en plus nombreux à refuser de reconnaître la Ligne verte en tant que frontière entre Israël et la Cisjordanie. Le 28 juillet 2005, M. Sharon, en visite à Paris, a fait entendre clairement les intentions de son pays. S'exprimant lors d'une réunion de la communauté juive, M. Sharon a déclaré que grâce au dégageement de Gaza, Israël avait obtenu des avancées politiques sans précédent, dont la garantie que les principales agglomérations de Judée et de Samarie [c'est-à-dire, de Cisjordanie] continueraient à faire partie d'Israël dans tout accord sur le statut définitif et qu'il n'y aurait pas de retour aux frontières de 1967.

26. En août 2005, les israéliens se retireront de quatre colonies de peuplement du nord de la Cisjordanie : Ganim, Kadim, Homesh et Sa-Nur. Des porte-parole du Gouvernement israélien ont formellement démenti que de nouvelles opérations de retrait de Cisjordanie étaient envisagées.

B. Actes de violence perpétrés par les colons

27. Les statistiques montrent que les actes de violence perpétrés par les colons se multiplient. Soixante-huit incidents ont été signalés en mai 2005, et 67 en juin. Les colons sont rarement l'objet de poursuites, et il semble qu'ils peuvent terroriser les Palestiniens et détruire leurs terres en toute impunité. Comme lors de ses précédentes visites à Hébron, le Rapporteur spécial a été maltraité par les colons. Il a également eu l'occasion de se rendre dans la colonie de Tel Rumeida. Cette colonie située au cœur d'Hébron a récemment été élargie, et les colons y exercent sur leurs voisins palestiniens des pressions de plus en plus fortes visant à les faire partir en les terrorisant. Une visite dans la communauté d'At-Tuwani a apporté d'autres preuves de ces actes de violence de la part des colons. Les écoliers sont passés à tabac et terrorisés par les colons lorsqu'ils se rendent à l'école, et des puits ainsi que des champs ont été empoisonnés. Des cultures ont été détruites, des moutons et des chèvres volés et empoisonnés. La police et les FDI n'interviennent guère pour protéger les habitants des grottes, les paysans et les bergers de la région.

V. Jérusalem

28. Jérusalem-Est ne fait pas partie d'Israël. C'est au contraire un territoire occupé, auquel s'appliquent les règles fixées par la quatrième Convention de Genève. Malheureusement, la tentative d'annexion illégale de Jérusalem-Est par Israël a obscurci cette réalité, et l'opinion publique internationale tend, à tort, à considérer l'occupation de Jérusalem-Est par Israël comme différente de celle de la Cisjordanie et de Gaza.

29. Israël a entrepris d'apporter de grands changements à ce qui fait le caractère de Jérusalem. En substance, ces changements sont destinés à réduire le nombre de Palestiniens dans la ville et à accroître la population juive de la ville, et à saper ainsi les revendications des Palestiniens qui veulent faire de Jérusalem-Est la capitale d'un État palestinien indépendant. C'est là le but de la construction du mur à Jérusalem, et Haim Ramon, Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères, l'a reconnu lorsqu'il a déclaré le 10 juillet que le tracé du mur rendrait Jérusalem « plus juive », ajoutant que « le Gouvernement instaure la sécurité dans la ville et fera de Jérusalem la capitale d'un État d'Israël juif et démocratique ».

30. Les colonies juives à l'intérieur de Jérusalem-Est vont être élargies. Déjà quelque 184 000 colons à Jérusalem-Est se trouveront entre le mur et la Ligne verte. Dans la colonie de Ma'aleh Adumim, qui compte 35 000 personnes, quelque 3 600 logements supplémentaires doivent être construits dans la zone « E1 »; ils accueilleront environ 20 000 colons. De nouvelles colonies sont également en cours de construction près de Walajeh (Nof Yael), Har Homa (Har Homa II), Jabel Mukabbir (Nof Zion), Abu Dis (Kidmat Zion), Binyamin (Geva Binyamin) et Giv'at Ze'ev (Agan ha-Ayalot), en vue de créer une ceinture urbaine juive autour de la ville palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est.

31. La contiguïté du territoire palestinien à Jérusalem-Est sera bouleversée par la démolition d'habitations palestiniennes, l'extension des colonies et la création de parcs. Cela est clairement visible dans la région de Silwan, où 88 habitations ont fait l'objet d'une ordonnance de démolition afin de faire place à un parc. Les colonies juives de Silwan et des zones adjacentes seront ainsi encore rapprochées, et il n'existera plus de contiguïté entre les quartiers palestiniens. Même dans la vieille ville, les colonies juives gagnent du terrain.

32. Quelque 230 000 Palestiniens vivent à Jérusalem-Est. La construction du mur dans la région de Jérusalem vise à transférer en Cisjordanie un grand nombre de Palestiniens détenteurs d'une carte d'identité de résident à Jérusalem. Cela est particulièrement évident si l'on considère le transfert en Cisjordanie du quartier palestinien de Shuafat (qui compte 11 000 réfugiés) et des quartiers de Salaam et Dar Khamis à Anata, actuellement situés à l'intérieur du périmètre municipal de Jérusalem. Cette opération aura pour résultat le transfert de quelque 55 000 Palestiniens de Jérusalem en Cisjordanie. À ce chiffre, il convient d'ajouter environ 50 000 autres personnes munies de cartes d'identité de résident à Jérusalem qui vivent dans les communautés satellites de Jérusalem-Est situées à l'extérieur du périmètre municipal, à l'instar d'Al-Ram, qui a émigré dans l'une de ces communautés parce qu'il ne pouvait pas trouver de logement dans la ville du fait de l'expropriation des terres et des restrictions du droit de construire. Cela signifie que le mur porte préjudice à plus de 40 % des 230 000 Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est. L'historien israélien Tom Segev fait observer à cet égard que « ce qui se passe aujourd'hui à Jérusalem va au-delà des besoins liés à la sécurité et reflète l'essence du rêve sioniste original : un maximum de territoire, un minimum d'Arabes ».

33. Dans un récent rapport intitulé The Jerusalem Powder Keg, International Crisis Group fait observer que :

« En élargissant le périmètre municipal, en annexant des terres palestiniennes et en construisant de nouvelles colonies et de nouveaux quartiers juifs, Israël a peu à peu créé une zone municipale d'une superficie plusieurs fois supérieure à la superficie originale de Jérusalem. Israël a aussi créé de nouvelles colonies urbaines à l'extérieur du périmètre municipal pour encercler la ville, briser la contiguïté entre Jérusalem-Est et la Cisjordanie et resserrer les liens entre ces colonies, Jérusalem-Ouest et le reste d'Israël » (p. i).

34. Les changements décrits ci-dessus servent peut-être les intérêts politiques d'Israël, mais c'est aux dépens de la population palestinienne. Il n'est pas rare que les membres d'une même famille aient des papiers d'identité différents : une femme et son mari peuvent avoir des papiers d'identité l'une de résidente à Jérusalem et l'autre de résident en Cisjordanie. Il reste à voir s'ils seront autorisés à vivre ensemble. De nombreux détenteurs de cartes d'identité de résident à Jérusalem travaillent actuellement en Cisjordanie, et l'incertitude règne quant à la question de savoir s'ils seront autorisés à se rendre librement en Cisjordanie ou s'ils devront choisir entre la Cisjordanie et Jérusalem. L'accès aux écoles et aux hôpitaux posera également de graves problèmes.

35. Jérusalem est une ville historique d'une grande beauté, que le mur a beaucoup contribué à défigurer. Les responsables du projet de construction et de l'édification du mur à Jérusalem ont agi sans respect aucun pour l'environnement. Tout cela a été fait pour transformer Jérusalem en ville juive.

VI. Le mur, les colonies et l'autodétermination

36. Dans son avis consultatif, la Cour internationale de Justice a souligné le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination. Ces derniers temps, des politiciens de tous bords ont appuyé le règlement du conflit prévoyant deux États, où les États d'Israël et de Palestine vivraient côte à côte en paix et en sécurité. Cette perspective est irréaliste sans un territoire palestinien viable. L'édification du mur, l'extension des colonies et la dépaletinisation de Jérusalem sont incompatibles avec le règlement prévoyant deux États. Les interlocuteurs du Représentant spécial en Israël comme en Cisjordanie l'ont averti que, la solution prévoyant deux États devenant de plus en plus difficile, voire impossible, il conviendrait d'envisager la création d'un État palestinien binational. La démographie de la région donne de plus en plus à penser qu'il en sera ainsi.

37. Dans son avis consultatif, la Cour internationale de justice a noté « l'assurance donnée par Israël que la construction du mur n'équivaut pas à une annexion et que le mur est de nature temporaire ». La Cour a toutefois estimé que « la construction du mur et le régime qui lui est associé créent sur le terrain un " fait accompli " qui pourrait fort bien devenir permanent, auquel cas, et nonobstant la description officielle qu'Israël donne du mur, la construction de celui-ci équivaudrait à une annexion de facto » (par. 121). L'on peut très certainement soutenir que l'on en est arrivé à ce stade. L'interdiction de l'annexion de territoires par la force est, bien entendu, l'un des principes les plus fondamentaux du droit international.

VII. Autres violations des droits de l'homme

38. Le Rapporteur spécial a privilégié dans son rapport ce qu'il considère comme les principales violations des droits de l'homme. Le mur et les colonies portent gravement atteinte au droit fondamental du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, dont dépendent tous les autres droits. Le mur et les colonies sont dans une large mesure une conséquence de l'occupation. Le régime de l'occupation résulte par définition d'une violation des droits de l'homme. Une occupation prolongée telle que celle à laquelle le peuple palestinien est soumis depuis 38 ans représente inévitablement une menace pour les droits de l'homme les plus élémentaires. L'expérience des Palestiniens en est la preuve.

A. Liberté individuelle

39. Au cours de l'année écoulée, Israël a libéré quelque 900 prisonniers palestiniens. Au cours de la même période, plus de 1 000 nouveaux prisonniers ont été incarcérés. Plus de 8 000 prisonniers palestiniens, parmi lesquels 120 femmes, sont encore dans les prisons israéliennes. Plus de 300 enfants de moins de 18 ans se trouvent dans des centres de détention israéliens; 40 % d'entre eux ont été condamnés à une peine d'emprisonnement et 60 % sont en détention provisoire. Plus de 600 de ces prisonniers sont placés en détention administrative, c'est-à-dire qu'ils sont détenus sans avoir été jugés. Les visites des familles restent un grave problème. Étant donné que les prisons sont situées en Israël et que de nombreux Palestiniens ne sont pas autorisés à se rendre en Israël, une majorité de prisonniers ne reçoivent aucune visite de leur famille. Si l'avenir des prisonniers palestiniens originaires de Cisjordanie et de Gaza est examiné de très près en vertu de l'Accord de Charm el-Cheikh, les prisonniers palestiniens originaires de Jérusalem-Est sont laissés pour compte. Les conditions carcérales sont pénibles : les prisonniers vivent dans des cellules surpeuplées et peu aérées dont ils ne sortent que deux heures par jour. Des allégations continuent d'être faites selon lesquelles les détenus et les prisonniers seraient soumis à des tortures et à des traitements inhumains (passages à tabac, enchaînement dans des positions douloureuses, coups de pieds, bandage prolongé des yeux, privation de l'accès à des soins médicaux, exposition à des températures extrêmes et distribution de nourriture et d'eau en quantités insuffisantes, par exemple).

40. Très peu de soldats des FDI ayant blessé des Palestiniens font l'objet de poursuites, en dépit du grand nombre de personnes qui sont leurs victimes. L'impunité des FDI a été poussée plus loin encore en 2005, avec l'adoption par la Knesset d'une loi prenant rétroactivement effet en 2000, qui restreint considérablement le droit des Palestiniens d'engager une action en réparation pour les préjudices subis pendant l'Intifada. Les Palestiniens ne seront autorisés à se constituer partie civile que dans les affaires liées à des accidents de circulation et lorsqu'un Palestinien a reçu des blessures corporelles dans un centre de détention militaire.

B. Liberté de circulation

41. Les postes de contrôle en Cisjordanie et à Gaza continuent d'entraver gravement la liberté de circulation. En avril 2005, le nombre de ces postes était passé de 680 à 605, mais il est désormais davantage fait recours aux points de contrôle « volants », c'est-à-dire à des postes de contrôle militaires placés sur les routes de manière aléatoire. On a recensé 368 « postes volants » en mai 2005 et 374 le mois suivant. La mise en place de ce système de contrôle est une atteinte à la dignité humaine. La fréquence de son utilisation ressort clairement d'un rapport récemment établi par Machsom Watch intitulé A counterview: checkpoints 2004. Machsom Watch est une organisation constituée d'environ 500 Israéliennes de différentes origines qui se sont engagées dans la recherche de la paix dans la région et surveillent, de leur propre initiative, le comportement des FDI aux postes de contrôle. Dans le rapport susmentionné, il est indiqué que :

« Le système des postes de contrôle est arbitraire et aléatoire, et obéit à des règles qui changent constamment, souvent en fonction de l'humeur du soldat en service... Aux postes de contrôle [...] nous avons été témoins de la manière dont l'existence des Palestiniens est méthodiquement gâchée... Quiconque a vu le sourire angoissé d'un homme qui présente sa carte d'identité pour qu'elle soit contrôlée par une femme-soldat indifférente à un poste de contrôle, ne peut ni oublier cette injustice ni l'ignorer. Nous recensons les petites humiliations et les tensions, jour après jour, le mépris de l'humanité de l'Autre Palestinien, et les manifestations de la rage débordante d'un peuple occupé. » (p. 8 à 10)

42. Bien que les couvre-feux soient moins fréquemment imposés que par le passé, cette méthode de restriction de la liberté de circulation a toujours cours. Vingt-trois couvre-feux ont été imposés en mai 2005, et 16 le mois suivant.

C. Discrimination à l'égard des femmes

43. Du fait de l'occupation et de l'existence du mur, les droits des femmes sont bafoués dans une plus large mesure que ceux des hommes : les Palestiniennes sont régulièrement la cible de harcèlements, d'intimidations et de sévices commis par les soldats israéliens, aux points de contrôle et aux portes. Elles sont humiliées devant leur famille et subissent des violences sexuelles tant de la part de soldats que de celle de colons. On compte environ 120 Palestiniennes en détention, dont 11 sont maintenues en détention administrative, sans avoir été jugées ni même inculpées. Les détenues sont victimes de violence sexiste au cours des enquêtes et pendant leur détention. En outre, la situation dans les prisons ne laisse pas d'être préoccupante pour les conditions de vie et la santé des détenues. Les restrictions à la liberté de circulation par suite de l'occupation entravent gravement l'accès des Palestiniennes à l'éducation et à la santé. Ces mêmes restrictions limitent leurs chances d'être autonomes et font que moins de femmes cherchent à bénéficier d'un enseignement de type scolaire ou à accéder à l'emploi, le modèle culturel de la région voulant que la femme étudie et travaille à la maison. La santé des femmes a décliné parce qu'elles sont dans l'impossibilité de se rendre dans les centres de santé. Les femmes enceintes courent le risque d'attentes interminables aux points de contrôle. Depuis le début de la deuxième Intifada, en mars 2004, 55 Palestiniennes ont accouché à un point de contrôle, et 33 enfants nés à des points de contrôle étaient mort-nés en raison de retards ou d'un refus de laisser accéder à un établissement de soins. Il a été établi que le chômage et la pauvreté consécutifs à l'occupation engendraient des divorces et des violences dans la famille. La loi israélienne de 2003 sur la nationalité et l'entrée en Israël a pour but d'empêcher le regroupement familial lorsqu'un des deux époux est résident du territoire palestinien occupé. Du fait de cette loi, ce sont des milliers de membres des familles concernées qui vivent séparés les uns des autres, sans moyens légaux de rejoindre leurs proches. Le seul moyen de préserver l'unité familiale consiste à résider illégalement en Israël, dans la peur continue d'être contrôlé et expulsé. Tout cela a des effets considérables sur l'état psychologique des Palestiniennes. Cette loi, qui ne s'applique pas aux colons israéliens vivant dans le territoire palestinien occupé ni aux Juifs israéliens ayant épousé un étranger, instaure un régime discriminatoire fondé sur la nationalité, qui pénalise exclusivement les Palestiniens.

D. Crise humanitaire

44. La population du territoire palestinien occupé est de 3,8 millions d'habitants (2,4 millions en Cisjordanie et 1,4 million dans la bande de Gaza), dont 42 % environ (soit 1,6 million) sont immatriculés comme réfugiés. Le taux d'accroissement naturel est de 3,5 %.

45. Les rapports précédents appelaient l'attention sur la crise humanitaire dans le territoire palestinien occupé causée par l'occupation et la construction du mur. Au dernier trimestre 2004, le chômage a atteint le taux de 25 % (34 % dans la bande de Gaza et 23 % en Cisjordanie), ce qui représente 93 000 chômeurs à Gaza et 133 000 en Cisjordanie. L'impossibilité d'accéder aux emplois en Israël est en grande partie responsable du chômage qui sévit. La moitié de la population environ – 1,8 million d'habitants – vit en dessous du seuil de pauvreté officiel, soit avec moins de 2,10 dollars des États-Unis par jour. Le taux d'extrême dénuement – tel qu'on ne parvient pas à assurer sa subsistance – est de 16 %, selon les estimations. Le taux de pauvreté est plus élevé à Gaza (65 %) qu'en Cisjordanie (38 %). Chômage croissant, bouclages, perte des biens résultant des démolitions de logements par les FDI, confiscation des terres et nivellement des terrains en sont à l'origine. Les revenus agricoles ont considérablement diminué du fait de la destruction des zones de cultures et de l'isolement des terres et des puits de l'autre côté du mur.

46. Les bouclages ont entravé l'accès aux services de santé et d'éducation. La fourniture des services de santé a baissé de façon spectaculaire en raison des restrictions d'accès mises en place. La qualité de l'enseignement a souffert du fait que les écoles ont dû raccourcir la journée d'enseignement pour l'adapter aux heures d'ouverture des portes du mur. En outre, les enfants sont contraints d'abandonner l'école, soit parce qu'ils aident à compenser la perte des revenus de leur famille, soit parce que leurs parents ne peuvent plus assurer la charge financière qu'entraîne leur scolarisation.

47. Les Palestiniens ont rencontré d'énormes difficultés pour accéder à l'eau salubre. Les incursions répétées des FDI ont entraîné la destruction des infrastructures d'approvisionnement en eau et d'assainissement. De plus, les restrictions à la liberté de circulation ont empêché les Palestiniens de parvenir aux sources d'approvisionnement en eau.

48. Bien que les FDI aient cessé de démolir des logements à des fins punitives, et que les six derniers mois n'aient pas connu de démolitions de logement justifiées par un prétendu principe de nécessité militaire, les démolitions opérées les années précédentes par les FDI sont cause d'une pénurie importante de logements. À Gaza, plusieurs milliers de personnes sont encore sans logement. On continue de démolir des logements au prétexte qu'ils ont été construits sans permis. La pratique de cette forme de démolition, dite « administrative », est encore très répandue, en particulier à Jérusalem. Comme il est pratiquement impossible pour les Palestiniens d'obtenir un permis de construire, un grand nombre de logements sont construits sans ce permis, et leurs occupants s'exposent au risque d'une démolition arbitraire.

E. Droit à un environnement non pollué

49. Pour l'essentiel, l'occupation se déroule sans qu'il soit guère prêté attention à l'environnement dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Le mur a défiguré les collines et les villes de Palestine. Le déversement des eaux usées des implantations juives dans les terres palestiniennes pose un problème de taille. Un grand nombre de colonies de peuplement de Cisjordanie ne disposent d'aucune forme de traitement des eaux usées industrielles ou résidentielles, lesquelles s'écoulent dans les vallées palestiniennes voisines sans qu'on se préoccupe de l'impact sur l'environnement. Qui plus est, il est question qu'Israël déverse ses déchets solides dans la carrière d'Abou Choucha, dans le district de Naplouse. Comme indiqué plus haut, les terres du district de Tuwani ont été délibérément empoisonnées par les colons.

VIII. La peine de mort et l'Autorité palestinienne

50. Le mandat du Rapporteur spécial ne couvre pas les violations des droits de l'homme commises par l'Autorité palestinienne. Cependant, il serait irresponsable pour un rapporteur spécial des droits de l'homme de passer sous silence l'exécution de prisonniers palestiniens. Depuis 2002, l'Autorité palestinienne s'était abstenue d'appliquer la peine de mort. Mais, en 2005, cinq prisonniers palestiniens ont été exécutés. Le degré de civilisation d'une société se mesure à l'attitude qu'elle adopte face à la peine de mort. Le Rapporteur spécial émet l'espoir que ces exécutions ont été des aberrations et que l'Autorité palestinienne s'abstiendra à l'avenir d'appliquer cette forme de peine.

IX. Le territoire palestinien occupé et la communauté internationale

51. Le retrait des colons de Gaza marque une étape décisive : il mettra fin à la colonisation de Gaza, libérera des terres pour les Palestiniens et entraînera le départ des FDI de la région. C'est une mesure positive dont on doit se féliciter. Toutefois, même si elle n'est plus colonisée, Gaza demeurera sous contrôle. La crise humaine ne pourra guère s'atténuer avec la poursuite de la dégradation économique résultant du contrôle exercé par Israël. Le retrait de Gaza ne doit pas détourner l'attention de ce qui se passe en Cisjordanie. La construction du mur et l'expansion des colonies de peuplement menacent gravement le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien et compromettent les perspectives d'un État palestinien. Selon toute vraisemblance, l'annexion du territoire palestinien est déjà un fait accompli.

52. Après avoir conclu que la construction du mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé et le régime qui lui est associé étaient contraires au droit international, la Cour internationale de Justice a décidé que tous les États étaient dans l'obligation de ne pas reconnaître la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur et de ne pas prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de la situation créée par cette construction. Les États doivent donc refuser de reconnaître ou de soutenir le système des permis qui donnent accès à la « zone fermée », ou encore d'accepter des marchandises produites dans les colonies de peuplement situées dans la zone comprise entre le mur et la Ligne verte, ce qui a des conséquences en particulier pour les États membres de l'Union européenne, qui importent des produits agricoles du territoire israélien. Ces pays portent l'obligation d'établir avec précision l'origine des produits importés et de refuser ceux qui proviennent de la « zone fermée ».

53. La Cour internationale de Justice a jugé qu'Israël était dans l'obligation de réparer tous les dommages causés par la construction du mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris à l'intérieur et sur le pourtour de Jérusalem-Est. En application de cette décision, dans sa résolution ES-10/15, l'Assemblée générale a prié le Secrétaire général d'établir un registre des dommages causés à toutes les personnes physiques ou morales qui auraient subi un préjudice matériel quelconque du fait de la construction de ce mur. Le 11 janvier 2005, le Secrétaire général a adressé une lettre au Président de l'Assemblée générale (A/ES-10/294), dans laquelle il décrivait le cadre juridique et institutionnel voulu pour l'établissement du registre en question. Il semble bien que l'on n'ait pas beaucoup progressé dans cette voie, et que le processus se soit noyé dans les méandres de l'ONU. Cela est d'autant plus fâcheux que la Cour internationale de Justice a explicitement attaché une grande importance à l'obligation d'Israël de procéder à l'indemnisation des personnes lésées pour la destruction des habitations, des vergers, des oliveraies et des terres agricoles entraînée par la construction du mur.

54. Il apparaît clairement que le Conseil de sécurité est peu enclin à faire pression sur Israël pour qu'il applique l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice. Le 21 juillet, à l'issue d'un exposé sur la situation fait aux membres du Conseil de sécurité par le Coordonnateur spécial pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et Représentant personnel du Secrétaire général, M. Alvaro de Soto (voir S/PV.5230 et Resumption 1), le Conseil a décidé de ne pas se lancer dans l'examen de la construction du mur et de l'avis consultatif. Les États européens semblent être d'accord avec une telle démarche, comme l'atteste un rapport publié dans Ha'aretz le 28 juillet 2005, qui relate dans les termes ci-après une réunion tenue entre MM. Sharon et Chirac : « C'est à peine si la question des relations israélo-palestiniennes a été soulevée lors de la réunion, d'après les participants israéliens. Selon un accord préalablement passé, les Français ont évité toute question qui prête à controverse telle que les constructions dans les implantations de Cisjordanie, l'emplacement de la clôture de séparation et "l'après-désengagement" ».

55. Dans sa résolution ES-10/15, l'Assemblée générale a invité la Suisse, en sa qualité de dépositaire des Conventions de Genève, à mener des consultations et à lui présenter un rapport sur la question, y compris sur la possibilité de reprendre les travaux de la Conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève. Dans le rapport qu'il a établi – cité au paragraphe 1 – , le Gouvernement suisse a conclu que la majorité des États estime que l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice offre le cadre juridique voulu pour s'attaquer à la situation en Palestine. Il a proposé de mettre en place deux groupes de dialogue distincts, l'un associant Israël et l'autre l'Autorité palestinienne, qui feraient rapport au Quatuor (voir A/ES-10/304, annexe, par. 59), ce qui montre bien la confiance qui lui est accordée. La dernière déclaration en date du Quatuor, qui remonte au 23 juin 2005, porte toutefois à se demander si cette confiance est bien placée. Dans sa déclaration, il se dit certes préoccupé par les activités de colonisation, mais il ne fait aucunement mention de la construction du mur, de l'expansion des colonies de peuplement (par opposition aux activités), de la dégradation de Jérusalem, de la violation des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé et de l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien (même si la création d'un État palestinien est bien envisagée). Cela donne à penser que le Quatuor et la feuille de route pour laquelle il s'est engagé ne procèdent pas de la primauté du droit ou du respect des droits de l'homme. S'il en est ainsi, on risque de voir la feuille de route connaître les mêmes erreurs que le processus d'Oslo, dans lequel il n'avait été tenu aucun compte des considérations relatives aux droits de l'homme. Le Rapporteur spécial a pour mandat de signaler les violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit relatif aux droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Il ne fait aucun doute que ce mandat concerne aussi l'attitude des États et des organisations internationales à l'égard de la situation qui règne dans ce territoire. Le Rapporteur spécial est donc tenu de mettre en cause la démarche adoptée par le Quatuor.

56. L'Organisation des Nations Unies se trouve elle-même dans une position particulièrement délicate : d'un côté, elle fait partie du Quatuor, mais de l'autre, elle est obligée de se conformer à l'avis consultatif de son propre organe judiciaire. Bien qu'il s'agisse d'un avis consultatif présenté aux États, il est strictement conforme au droit qui régit la construction du mur et peut être qualifié de droit de l'ONU. En outre, la Cour internationale de Justice a dit être d'avis que « l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et spécialement l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité, doivent, en tenant dûment compte du présent avis consultatif, examiner quelles nouvelles mesures doivent être prises afin de mettre un terme à la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur et du régime qui lui est associé » (A/ES-10/273, avis consultatif, par. 160). Il est donc clair que l'ONU a l'obligation légale d'agir pour mettre un terme à la construction du mur, comme l'Assemblée générale l'a confirmé dans sa résolution ES-10/15 en date du 20 juillet 2004.

57. Le Gouvernement israélien est décidé à reporter les négociations sur le statut final aussi longtemps qu'il le pourra afin de se laisser le temps d'établir le plus grand nombre possible de faits sur le terrain avant le début de ces négociations. La communauté internationale devrait prendre conscience de cette évidence, et faire tout son possible pour garantir que les négociations démarrent sur-le-champ. Seul un règlement du conflit mettant fin à l'occupation israélienne du territoire palestinien occupé, à la construction du mur, à l'expansion des colonies de peuplement et à la « dépaletinisation » de la ville de Jérusalem permettra l'avènement d'un climat laissant espérer le respect des droits de l'homme.

Notes

¹ United Nations War Crimes Commission, Law Reports of Trials of War Criminals, vol. III, 1949, p. 56.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
27 septembre 2006
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante et unième session

Point 67 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général*

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, présenté par John Dugard en application de la décision 1/102 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, dans laquelle le Conseil a décidé de reconduire à titre exceptionnel, pour une année, les mandats et les détenteurs de mandats de toutes les procédures spéciales de la Commission des droits de l'homme.

* La présentation du rapport a été retardée de façon à pouvoir y inclure les informations les plus récentes et en raison de consultations.

Résumé

L'essentiel du présent rapport concerne le siège et le conflit de Gaza. Le 25 juin 2006, après la capture du caporal Gilad Shalit par des militants palestiniens et la poursuite des tirs de roquettes artisanales Qassam contre Israël, ce pays a fait de multiples incursions militaires et bombardé systématiquement Gaza, causant de nombreux morts et blessés et la destruction de maisons, de champs et d'ouvrages d'infrastructures, commettant ainsi sur une grande échelle une violation des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire. En particulier, Israël a violé l'interdiction d'utiliser aveuglément la puissance militaire contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil. L'usage de la force a été disproportionné et excessif. Il s'agit là d'un châtement collectif infligé à un peuple occupé en violation de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Il est difficile de ne pas conclure que ceux qui en sont responsables sont coupables de graves crimes de guerre.

La situation en Cisjordanie s'est également nettement dégradée.

Le mur en construction sur le territoire palestinien n'est plus justifié par Israël comme n'étant qu'une mesure de sécurité, il est maintenant présenté par le nouveau Gouvernement israélien comme une mesure politique visant à annexer 10 % du territoire palestinien situé entre la Ligne verte et le mur, où vivent 76 % des colons israéliens. Lorsque l'ouvrage sera achevé, 60 500 Palestiniens de Cisjordanie vivant dans 42 villages et bourgades seront, selon les estimations, enfermés dans la zone comprise entre le mur et la Ligne verte. Les 500 000 Palestiniens qui vivent près du mur doivent avoir un permis pour le franchir et on estime à 40 % la proportion des demandes de permis rejetées.

Israël poursuit sa politique de « dépaletinisation » de Jérusalem. Le mur est ainsi construit qu'il place en Cisjordanie le quart environ de la population palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est (230 000 habitants). Ces personnes devront à l'avenir détenir un permis pour aller au travail, chez des amis, à l'hôpital ou dans les lieux de culte de Jérusalem.

Les colonies continuent de grandir, en infraction avec la quatrième Convention de Genève. Les colons de Cisjordanie et de Jérusalem-Est sont maintenant plus de 440 000.

À cause du « minimur » en construction au sud d'Hébron, les Palestiniens qui vivent entre cet ouvrage et la Ligne verte auront du mal à se rendre sur leurs terres, dans leurs écoles et dans leurs centres médicaux.

Bien qu'ayant renoncé à ses anciens projets de construire le mur le long de la Cisjordanie et d'incorporer pratiquement la vallée du Jourdain en Israël, le Gouvernement israélien a lancé un plan qui consiste à accroître le contrôle sur cette région en limitant les possibilités de circulation des Palestiniens, en détruisant des maisons et en installant des colonies juives.

Le nombre de postes de contrôle a augmenté, passant de 376 en août 2005 à plus de 500. Les permis nécessaires pour se déplacer d'une région de Cisjordanie à l'autre sont accordés au compte-gouttes et les Palestiniens doivent se soumettre à des procédures administratives arbitraires. Naplouse et Djénine, en particulier, ont beaucoup souffert de la présence des postes de contrôle et sont en fait aujourd'hui des villes emprisonnées. Beaucoup de postes de contrôle n'ont apparemment d'autre objectif que d'empêcher les Palestiniens d'oublier qu'Israël est maître de leur vie et de les humilier du même coup. Depuis la guerre au Liban, le contrôle y est encore plus rigoureux.

La démolition de maisons reste un trait constant de l'occupation. C'est devenu une pratique courante que de détruire des maisons au moment de procéder à des arrestations lors d'une opération de police. La destruction de maisons pour d'autres motifs que la nécessité militaire est interdite par le droit international humanitaire.

La vie familiale des Palestiniens souffre de plusieurs législations et pratiques israéliennes. Récemment, la Haute Cour israélienne a confirmé une loi interdisant aux Arabes israéliens qui épousent des Palestiniens de vivre avec eux en Israël. À Jérusalem, le mur a également séparé des familles.

Plus de 10 000 Palestiniens, dont des femmes et des enfants, sont détenus dans des prisons israéliennes.

L'occupation du territoire palestinien est à l'origine de la plupart des violations des droits de l'homme. Elle est exercée par les autorités israéliennes d'une manière inutilement sévère.

La situation humanitaire est consternante tant en Cisjordanie que dans la bande de Gaza. Au moins 4 Palestiniens sur 10 vivent au-dessous du seuil officiel de pauvreté (2,10 dollars des États-Unis par jour); le taux de chômage est d'au moins 40 %. Une circonstance aggrave la situation, à savoir que le secteur public, qui représente 23 % du total des emplois dans le territoire palestinien, garde ses salariés mais ne peut les payer du fait que le Gouvernement israélien ne verse pas les fonds qu'il doit à l'Autorité palestinienne, notamment des recettes fiscales représentant de 50 à 60 millions de dollars par mois. De plus, les États-Unis et l'Union européenne ont interrompu le financement de l'Autorité palestinienne au motif que le Hamas, parti élu aux affaires en janvier 2006, est inscrit par leur législation sur la liste des organisations terroristes. Des organisations non gouvernementales qui travaillent auprès de l'Autorité palestinienne ont également été touchées par ces restrictions financières.

Le fait est que le peuple palestinien a été soumis à des sanctions économiques, premier exemple d'un tel traitement à l'égard d'un peuple occupé. Cette situation ne change pas, même si Israël est en infraction avec de nombreuses résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale et s'il n'a pas donné suite à l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice du 9 juillet 2004.

Le Quatuor lui-même fait fi de cet avis consultatif, qu'il ne mentionne même pas dans ses déclarations publiques. Cela a considérablement terni l'image de l'Organisation dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Si les Palestiniens tiennent en haute estime les agents de l'ONU qui travaillent sur le terrain avec dévouement et détermination, ils se méfient beaucoup du rôle de l'Organisation à New York et Genève.

Table des matières

	Paragraphes	Page
I. Introduction	1–5	5
II. La question de l’occupation	6	5
III. Gaza	7–31	6
A. Bombardements d’ouvrages publics	11–12	7
B. Bombardement d’installations et d’édifices publics	13	7
C. Fermeture des frontières	14–18	8
D. Victimes	19	8
E. Incursions militaires provoquant morts et destructions	20	8
F. Bombardements et bangs supersoniques	21–22	9
G. Assassinats ciblés	23	9
H. Terrorisme téléphonique	24	9
I. Hôpitaux et services de santé	25–26	9
J. Alimentation et pauvreté	27–28	10
K. Évaluation juridique de l’action d’Israël	29–31	10
IV. Cisjordanie	32–37	11
V. Jérusalem et le mur	38–41	13
VI. Bethléem et le mur	42	14
VII. Colonies	43–48	14
VIII. Le sud d’Hébron et le « minimur »	49–50	15
IX. Vallée du Jourdain	51–54	16
X. Démolition de maisons	55–56	16
XI. Postes de contrôle	57–59	17
XII. Séparation des familles	60	18
XIII. Administration de la justice	61–63	19
XIV. Israël, la sécurité et les droits de l’homme	64–65	19
XV. La crise humanitaire et le financement de l’Autorité palestinienne	66–70	20
XVI. L’avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice et la position de l’Organisation des Nations Unies	71–73	22
XVII. Conclusion	74–76	22

I. Introduction

1. Je me suis rendu dans le territoire palestinien occupé et en Israël du 9 au 17 juin 2006 pour y réunir les informations nécessaires à la rédaction du présent rapport. Peu après mon départ, une grave crise s'est ouverte à Gaza à la suite de la capture par des militants palestiniens d'un soldat israélien, le caporal Gilad Shalit. Ce fait nouveau est décrit et analysé dans le contexte de sources d'information secondaires : articles de presse, rapports d'organisations non gouvernementales (ONG), publications de l'ONU, etc.

2. Au cours de ma mission, je me suis rendu à Jérusalem, à Gaza, dans des villages des environs de Jérusalem gravement affectés par la construction du mur, à Ramallah, Hébron et dans les localités des hauteurs du sud d'Hébron, à Bethléem et au mur près de la tombe de Rachel, dans le village de Wallaja où des maisons ont été démolies, dans la vallée du Jourdain, y compris Jéricho et dans les localités où les droits de l'homme subissent les conséquences des politiques et des pratiques israéliennes, à Naplouse, dans le camp de réfugiés de Balata, au village de Jayyous sur le tracé du mur et dans les localités agricoles proches du mur, ainsi que dans les postes de contrôle situés autour de Naplouse et sur les routes des alentours.

3. Au cours de cette tournée, j'ai rencontré des personnes très diverses, Palestiniens autant qu'Israéliens, avec qui je me suis entretenu des violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire. J'ai prononcé une conférence à la Hebrew University de Jérusalem, sous le parrainage du Minerva Centre for Human Rights et du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR). Dans mon exposé devant plus d'une centaine de personnes, j'analysais les aspects controversés du droit humanitaire liés au conflit dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Malheureusement, je n'ai pas pu entrer en relation avec des officiels israéliens, le Gouvernement israélien ne reconnaissant pas mon mandat. Le Gouvernement était toutefois au courant de ma présence et n'a rien fait pour gêner mon travail.

4. L'éruption de la violence à Gaza après la capture du caporal Shalit et l'arrestation de membres du Conseil législatif palestinien et de l'Autorité palestinienne (voir par. 11 ci-dessous) a été suivie par l'invasion du Liban par Israël et par des violences à grande échelle au Liban, en Israël et à Gaza. Il n'y a pas lieu dans le présent rapport de commenter les événements du Liban et de la frontière nord d'Israël, qui ne relèvent pas de mon mandat. Cependant, j'examinerai de façon approfondie la situation à Gaza. On notera que les événements intervenus au Liban ont dans une large mesure fait oublier les violences dans la bande de Gaza et le long de ses frontières.

5. J'utiliserai ici le terme « mur », au lieu de « barrière » ou « clôture ». Il a été soigneusement et délibérément choisi par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif de 2004 sur les Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Je ne vois aucune raison d'en utiliser un autre.

II. La question de l'occupation

6. Avant d'aborder le fond de mon rapport, je tiens à régler une question préliminaire. C'est celle de l'occupation. Le Gouvernement israélien évite de reconnaître que le territoire palestinien occupé – c'est-à-dire la Cisjordanie et la bande de Gaza, y compris Jérusalem-Est – est un territoire occupé. Il préfère parler de « territoires contestés » et affirmer que le retrait des colons et des Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) de la bande de Gaza en août 2005 a mis fin à l'occupation de celle-ci. C'est une représentation erronée et sur le plan du droit et sur celui des faits. La Cour internationale de Justice, le Conseil de sécurité et même la Haute Cour israélienne ont affirmé que le territoire palestinien occupé est et demeure un territoire occupé et qu'en tant que tel il est soumis à un régime juridique particulier. Selon ce régime, Israël est tenu de respecter en ce qui concerne les Palestiniens le droit international humanitaire et les droits de l'homme. Il s'agit, il faut le reconnaître, d'une occupation d'un type inhabituel puisqu'elle dure depuis près de quatre décennies. La longueur de la période ne réduit pas pour autant la responsabilité de la puissance occupante. Au contraire, elle l'augmente. La durée de l'occupation a conduit certains auteurs à qualifier celle-ci de colonialisme ou d'apartheid. Bien que la conduite d'Israël ressemble parfois à celle d'une puissance coloniale ou d'un régime d'apartheid, il est plus exact de voir dans Israël une puissance occupante du territoire palestinien occupé et de juger ses actes au regard des règles de droit international qui s'appliquent à une occupation.

III. Gaza

7. En août 2005, Israël a retiré ses colons et ses forces armées de la bande de Gaza. Ses déclarations selon lesquelles ce retrait mettait fin à l'occupation de la bande de Gaza sont très éloignées de la vérité. Même avant le début de l'opération « Pluies d'été », à la suite de la capture du caporal Shalit, ce territoire était soumis à l'emprise effective d'Israël, qui se faisait sentir de plusieurs façons. D'abord, Israël conservait le contrôle de l'espace aérien, de l'espace maritime et des frontières de la bande de Gaza. Des arrangements particuliers avaient été pris pour l'ouverture du passage de Rafah vers l'Égypte sous la surveillance du personnel de l'Union européenne, mais la plupart des autres points de passage restaient fermés. La fermeture de Karni, où le passage des marchandises était interdit pendant de longues périodes, avait des conséquences particulièrement graves pour Gaza car elle signifiait qu'il était impossible de faire venir des denrées, des médicaments et du carburant. Un projet qui devait permettre aux gens de Gaza de rendre visite à leur famille en Cisjordanie par convois d'autocars ne s'est jamais concrétisé. En fait, après le retrait d'Israël, Gaza est devenue une société coupée de l'extérieur, emprisonnée. La réalité du contrôle d'Israël s'est vérifiée une fois encore sous la forme des bangs supersoniques causés par ses avions cherchant à terroriser la population de Gaza, du bombardement périodique des maisons et des champs le long de la frontière et des assassinats ciblés de militants, réalisés comme dans le passé sans grands égards pour les passants civils innocents. Les actions entreprises par les FDI à l'égard de Gaza montrent à l'évidence que la technologie moderne permet à une puissance occupante de s'assurer efficacement d'un territoire sans même être militairement sur les lieux.

8. La question de savoir si la bande de Gaza reste un territoire occupé n'a plus qu'un intérêt théorique. Au cours de l'opération cyniquement intitulée « Pluies d'été », qui a commencé le 25 juin, les FDI y ont fait sentir leur mainmise non seulement en bombardant intensivement le secteur mais aussi en y étant militairement présentes.

9. Le 25 juin 2006, un groupe de militants palestiniens a attaqué une base militaire près de la frontière israélo-égyptienne. En se retirant, le groupe a emmené comme prisonnier le caporal Gilad Shalit. Il a exigé pour le relâcher la libération des femmes et des enfants détenus dans les prisons israéliennes. Cette opération et les tirs constants de roquettes Qassam contre Israël ont déclenché une réaction sauvage de la part du Gouvernement israélien. D'abord, il a fait arrêter huit ministres issus du Gouvernement du Hamas et 26 membres du Conseil législatif palestinien à Ramallah. Au moment de la rédaction du présent rapport, la plupart de ces personnes étaient encore en détention. Israël dit les garder parce qu'elles soutiendraient des activités terroristes, mais il est difficile de chasser l'impression qu'elles sont tenues en otage, en violation de l'article 34 de la (quatrième) Convention de Genève relative à la protection des civils en temps de guerre.

10. L'attaque et le siège de Gaza par Israël dans le cadre de l'opération « Pluies d'été » ont pris de multiples formes, qui seront décrites dans les paragraphes qui suivent.

A. Bombardements d'ouvrages publics

11. Le 28 juin 2006, l'Armée de l'air israélienne a détruit les six transformateurs de la seule usine de production électrique de la bande de Gaza. Cette centrale fournit à Gaza 43 % de sa consommation quotidienne, le reste provenant de l'Israel Electrical Corporation. Sur les 1,4 million d'habitants de Gaza, environ 700 000 se sont retrouvés initialement sans électricité. À l'heure actuelle, la Gaza Electrical Distribution Company (GEDCO) emprunte le reste de l'électricité nécessaire à Israël mais la distribution de courant à tous les foyers de la bande de Gaza est intermittente. Comme la plupart des puits sont raccordés au réseau électrique national maintenant détruit, il faut utiliser des groupes électrogènes pour faire fonctionner les pompes et la ration quotidienne d'eau servie aux ménages a dû être réduite. Cette situation risque de durer encore une année au moins. Les opérations militaires israéliennes ont également détruit les canalisations d'eau et le réseau d'égouts. Enfin, la fermeture fréquente de l'oléoduc de Nahal Oz, le seul à alimenter la bande de Gaza en carburant, a compromis la solution des groupes électrogènes comme moyen d'assurer la distribution de l'eau. D'autres transformateurs électriques ont été également bombardés.

12. La réduction considérable des quantités de courant électrique et de carburant jointe aux interruptions de l'alimentation en eau a eu de graves conséquences pour la vie quotidienne des Palestiniens, qui sont sans lumière la nuit et cuisinent sans électricité. Les égouts menacent de déborder. Les hôpitaux ont été gravement handicapés et forcés par les coupures de courant de recourir à des groupes électrogènes pour faire fonctionner le matériel d'importance vitale.

B. Bombardement d'installations et d'édifices publics

13. Les avions de guerre israéliens ont pris délibérément pour cibles des édifices publics à Gaza. Les immeubles où étaient logés les Ministères de l'intérieur, des affaires étrangères et de l'économie nationale, et le Cabinet du Premier Ministre ont tous été détruits. Ces attaques n'ont aucune finalité en termes de sécurité et on ne peut qu'y voir une tentative de déstabilisation des institutions officielles. Des établissements d'enseignement ont aussi été démolis. Six ponts reliant la ville de Gaza au centre de la bande de Gaza ont été détruits, ainsi que plusieurs routes. Le 28 juin, les FDI ont occupé l'aéroport international de Gaza et en ont démoli de grandes parties.

C. Fermeture des frontières

14. Depuis le 25 juin, plusieurs écoles ont été gravement endommagées durant les opérations militaires et il sera difficile de les remettre en état avant le début de la nouvelle année scolaire.

15. Bien que le point de passage de Rafah ne soit pas en théorie contrôlé par Israël, les FDI ont empêché les observateurs européens qui doivent le faire fonctionner de s'y rendre. Il est donc fermé depuis le 25 juin et n'a été ouvert que pendant de courtes périodes. La fermeture de ce passage pendant trois semaines en juillet 2006 a laissé abandonnés du côté égyptien de la frontière, dans des conditions difficiles, plus de 3 000 Palestiniens – dont 578 en situation d'« urgence humanitaire » qui étaient allés se faire soigner à l'extérieur. Huit Palestiniens sont morts parce qu'on leur a refusé à la frontière soins médicaux, eau et abri.

16. La fermeture de Rafah a eu des conséquences graves aussi pour les Palestiniens se trouvant du côté de Gaza, notamment ceux qui vivent à l'étranger et qui y étaient venus pour rendre visite à leur famille.

17. Karni, point où passent les marchandises, a été fermé par intermittence. L'importation de certaines denrées et de fournitures médicales a été autorisée vers Gaza, mais l'exportation de marchandises a été sérieusement restreinte.

18. Les navires de guerre israéliens ont empêché les Palestiniens de pêcher le long du littoral ce qui a fait disparaître le poisson des marchés locaux.

D. Victimes

19. Depuis le 25 juin 2006, quelque 260 Palestiniens (des civils pour la moitié au moins) ont été tués, dont 58 enfants. Environ 800 personnes ont été grièvement blessées, y compris des enfants et des femmes. Un soldat israélien a été tué et 26 Israéliens blessés, dont 12 par des roquettes artisanales tirées de Gaza.

E. Incursions militaires provoquant morts et destructions

20. Depuis le 25 juin, les FDI ont fait plusieurs incursions dans la bande de Gaza, tuant des civils et démolissant des maisons. Les incursions les plus graves ont eu lieu à Beit Hanoun, Beit Lahia, Sajiyeh, Deir el-Balah, au camp de réfugiés d'el-Maghazi, à Rafah et à Khan Younis. Au cours de ces opérations menées par des blindés et des bulldozers, des maisons ont été réquisitionnées et transformées en bases militaires. Elles ont été gravement endommagées et plusieurs centaines d'habitations ont été détruites. Des écoles de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) ont été attaquées et endommagées. Des oliviers et des arbres à agrumes ont été déracinés et des terres agricoles détruites par les travaux de terrassement. Des routes, des canalisations d'eau et des poteaux électriques et téléphoniques ont été endommagés. Beaucoup de familles ont dû fuir de chez elles et l'on estime à 3 400 environ le nombre de Palestiniens auxquels l'UNRWA doit actuellement fournir un abri à la suite de ces opérations militaires. Les incursions militaires se sont accompagnées de bombardements massifs et de dynamitages de maisons provoquant la mort de nombreux civils.

F. Bombardements et bangs supersoniques

21. Israël a pilonné sans relâche la bande de Gaza après le 25 juin; plusieurs milliers d'obus ont été tirés, soit 200 à 250 par jour selon les estimations. Son armée de l'air a procédé à plusieurs centaines de bombardements et ses chasseurs ont tiré des missiles air-sol. Ces opérations se sont accompagnées de survols de F-16 à basse altitude et de franchissements du mur du son au-dessus de Gaza, provoquant des bangs supersoniques aussi puissants qu'un véritable bombardement. Ces phénomènes ont causé une panique générale parmi la population, surtout les enfants. Si le mot terrorisme a un sens, c'est sûrement cela qu'il désigne.

22. Les Palestiniens ne sont pas irréprochables pour ce qui est des tirs d'artillerie. Les militants continuent de tirer aveuglément des roquettes artisanales Qassam contre Israël, blessant des civils israéliens, dévastant des ouvrages de caractère civil et semant la peur parmi la population civile qui vit près de la frontière de la bande de Gaza. On estime à huit ou neuf le nombre de roquettes tirées tous les jours.

G. Assassinats ciblés

23. Les assassinats ciblés se sont poursuivis avec d'inévitables « dommages collatéraux » pour les civils.

H. Terrorisme téléphonique

24. L'armée israélienne a trouvé un nouveau procédé pour créer la terreur psychologique. Des Palestiniens sont appelés au téléphone par des agents du renseignement militaire israélien, qui leur annoncent qu'on fera sauter leur maison dans moins d'une heure. Parfois cette menace est mise à exécution, parfois elle ne l'est pas. Cette méthode ne peut que provoquer le désarroi psychologique et la panique. Ceux qui sont forcés de quitter leur maison de cette façon sont devenus des personnes déplacées dans leur propre pays qui doivent vivre dans les établissements scolaires de l'UNRWA.

I. Hôpitaux et services de santé

25. Les hôpitaux continuent de fonctionner, mais avec beaucoup de difficultés. Des groupes électrogènes desservent le service de radiologie et les salles d'opération. Le transfert de patients à l'extérieur de la bande de Gaza a beaucoup souffert de la crise actuelle. Comme on l'a déjà fait observer, les postes de contrôle ont été fermés pour les patients, les autorisations refusées. Des problèmes particulièrement graves sont apparus au point de passage de Rafah vers l'Égypte.

Des médicaments essentiels sont également en rupture de stock. Le 27 juillet, le Ministère de la santé de l'Autorité palestinienne a annoncé que 67 des 473 articles de la liste des médicaments essentiels étaient épuisés.

26. La santé publique est menacée par le manque d'eau salubre et les fuites des égouts; les cas de diarrhée ont augmenté de 163 % par rapport à la même période de l'année passée. Il faut craindre la réapparition de maladies contagieuses comme le choléra et la poliomyélite.

J. Alimentation et pauvreté

27. La proportion de pauvres atteint à Gaza 75 % de la population. Autrement dit, les trois quarts de la population ne peuvent pas se nourrir sans assistance, soit une augmentation de 30 % en un peu plus d'une année. Cette situation est imputable essentiellement au siège. L'insécurité vivrière a en partie pour origine la faiblesse du pouvoir d'achat car peu de gens ont aujourd'hui assez d'argent pour subvenir aux besoins fondamentaux de leur famille. Le prix des denrées a augmenté et l'offre s'est réduite avec les opérations en cours. Comme on l'a dit, on ne trouve plus de poisson à cause du blocus maritime. Les minoteries, les usines alimentaires et les boulangeries ont été forcées de réduire leur production faute de courant. De plus, comme les capacités de conservation des périssables dans le climat chaud de Gaza sont réduites, les pertes sont élevées. Les réserves de sucre, de produits laitiers et de lait sont presque épuisées puisque peu de fournitures commerciales arrivent d'Israël.

28. Comme on l'a dit, les ressources en eau ont été gravement affectées par la destruction de la centrale électrique de Gaza et la rupture des conduites par les explosions. L'eau potable est donc rare. L'UNRWA et le CICR ont été obligés d'en distribuer par camions-citernes.

K. Évaluation juridique de l'action d'Israël

29. Les actions d'Israël doivent être évaluées tant au regard des normes relatives aux droits de l'homme qu'au regard du droit international humanitaire. Selon l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice cité ci-dessus, ces deux régimes s'appliquent au comportement d'Israël dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

30. Israël a violé plusieurs des droits consacrés dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, notamment le droit à la vie (art. 6), le droit de n'être pas soumis à la torture ni à des traitements inhumains ou dégradants (art. 7), le droit de ne pas être arrêté ni détenu arbitrairement (art. 9), le droit de circuler librement (art. 12) et le droit des enfants à des mesures de protection (art. 24). Il a également violé des droits consacrés dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, dont le droit à un niveau de vie décent pour soi-même et sa famille, y compris à une nourriture, des vêtements et un logement suffisants, le droit d'être à l'abri de la faim et le droit à l'alimentation (art. 11), ainsi que le droit à la santé (art. 12).

31. Israël a violé aussi les règles les plus fondamentales du droit international humanitaire, ce qui constitue un crime de guerre selon l'article 147 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et l'article 85 du Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux (Protocole I). Ces violations ont pris diverses formes : attaques lancées directement contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil et attaques lancées sans distinction entre les objectifs militaires et les civils ou les biens de caractère civil (art. 48, 51 4) et 52 1) du Protocole I); recours à une force excessive pour des attaques disproportionnées contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil (art. 51 4) et 51 5) du Protocole I); terreur parmi la population civile (art. 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et art. 51 2) du Protocole I); destruction de biens non justifiée par la nécessité militaire (art. 53 de la quatrième Convention de Genève). Enfin et surtout, le Gouvernement israélien a enfreint l'interdiction d'infliger des peines collectives à un peuple occupé, fixée à l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. L'emploi de la force avec excès et sans distinction contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil, la destruction d'ouvrages fournissant l'électricité et l'eau, la démolition à l'explosif des édifices publics, les restrictions imposées à la liberté de circulation et les conséquences de toutes ces actions pour la santé publique, l'alimentation, la vie des familles et l'état psychologique du peuple palestinien constituent une punition collective flagrante. La capture du caporal Gilad Shalit et le lancement incessant de roquettes Qassam contre Israël sont sans excuse. Mais rien ne peut justifier qu'un peuple tout entier fasse l'objet d'un châtement draconien comme celui qu'a imposé Israël.

IV. Cisjordanie

32. De nombreuses politiques et pratiques suivies par Israël en Cisjordanie représentent de graves infractions aux droits de l'homme des Palestiniens. Le mur actuellement en construction sur le territoire palestinien, les postes de contrôle et les barrages routiers, les colonies, le régime arbitraire des permis, les démolitions omniprésentes de maisons, les assassinats ciblés, les arrestations et les emprisonnements violent toute une gamme de droits civils et politiques. Les droits économiques et sociaux ont également souffert de la crise humanitaire résultant de l'occupation.

Le mur

33. Le mur qu'Israël est en train de construire en grande partie en territoire palestinien est incontestablement illégal. Dans son avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a affirmé qu'il était contraire au droit international et qu'Israël avait l'obligation d'en interrompre la construction et de démanteler les tronçons de l'ouvrage déjà en place. Le 20 juillet 2004, l'Assemblée générale a adopté sa résolution ES-10/15 par 150 voix contre 6, avec 10 abstentions, exigeant qu'Israël accomplisse ses obligations de droit telles que les définissait l'avis consultatif. La Haute Cour de justice israélienne, dans l'arrêt de septembre 2005 rendu en l'affaire Mara'abe c. le Premier Ministre d'Israël (HCJ 7957/04), a écarté l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice au prétexte que celle-ci n'avait pas tenu compte des considérations de sécurité qui motivaient la construction du mur. Cet arrêt a été fragilisé dans son fondement quand le Gouvernement israélien a admis par la suite que le mur était censé servir un dessein politique et pas seulement à des fins de sécurité. Le fait ayant été reconnu que le mur était en partie construit pour englober des colonies de Cisjordanie dans son enceinte et les mettre sous la protection directe d'Israël, la Haute Cour a réprimandé le Gouvernement pour l'avoir induite en erreur dans l'affaire Mara'abe et dans d'autres affaires mettant en cause la légalité du mur¹. On ne peut plus sérieusement douter du fait que le mur a pour but de capter les terrains environnant les colonies de Cisjordanie et d'inscrire ces colonies elles-mêmes dans les frontières d'Israël : le fait que 76 % des colons de Cisjordanie sont protégés par le mur suffit à le prouver.

34. Le 30 avril 2006, le Gouvernement israélien a redessiné le tracé du mur. Lorsqu'il sera achevé, sa longueur sera dorénavant de 703 kilomètres, et non plus de 670 kilomètres. À l'heure actuelle, l'ouvrage est plus qu'à moitié terminé. On estime qu'à la fin des travaux, 60 500 Palestiniens de Cisjordanie de 42 villages et agglomérations vivront dans la zone fermée entre le mur et la Ligne verte. Plus de 500 000 Palestiniens qui vivent à 1 kilomètre du mur se trouvent du côté est et doivent le traverser pour aller aux champs ou au travail et rester en relation avec leurs familles. Le mur se trouve à 80 % en territoire palestinien et, pour englober le bloc de colonies d'Ariel, il fait une incursion de 22 kilomètres en Cisjordanie. À l'heure actuelle, il compte 73 portes, mais 38 seulement sont accessibles aux Palestiniens, et encore, uniquement à ceux qui détiennent le permis nécessaire.

35. Le mur a des conséquences graves pour les Palestiniens vivant dans la zone fermée (située entre le mur et la Ligne verte). Il les sépare de leur travail, de leurs écoles, de leurs universités et de leurs centres médicaux spécialisés et fragmente considérablement leur vie communautaire. Les Palestiniens qui vivent du côté est du mur, alors que leur terre se trouve dans la zone fermée, se heurtent à de sérieuses difficultés économiques du fait qu'ils ne peuvent pas se rendre sur leur champ pour en récolter le produit ou pour faire paître leurs animaux, s'ils n'ont pas le permis nécessaire. Qui veut obtenir ce permis doit s'attendre à une série de difficultés. Les démarches administratives sont vexatoires et font barrage. Bien qu'on n'ait pas de chiffres précis, il semble que la proportion de permis refusés soit de 40 % au bas mot. Les motifs de refus vont de considérations de sécurité à l'impossibilité pour le requérant d'établir son droit de propriété. Cette dernière raison est maintenant souvent invoquée par les Israéliens parce qu'il est devenu évident que les Palestiniens, dont les propriétés datent d'un régime foncier ottoman chaotique, sont fréquemment incapables d'apporter la preuve de leurs titres, à la satisfaction d'autorités décidées à leur refuser le passage. Les difficultés et les humiliations associées aux demandes de permis dissuadent beaucoup de Palestiniens d'en présenter une. L'ouverture et la fermeture des portes qui donnent sur la zone fermée se font de manière tout à fait arbitraire et rarement à l'heure prévue, ce qui aggrave la situation.

36. Les obstacles qui rendent difficile d'accès la zone fermée y ont gravement compromis les travaux des champs. Alors que beaucoup de Palestiniens retournent à la terre parce que le salaire des fonctionnaires n'est pas payé et que de nombreuses entreprises privées ont dû fermer en ville, le régime des permis a de lourdes conséquences pour l'emploi et les moyens de subsistance des Palestiniens.

37. Près de la moitié de la population palestinienne vivant dans le territoire palestinien occupé est constituée de réfugiés ayant fui de chez eux à l'approche des forces armées israéliennes durant les précédents conflits armés. À présent, à cause du mur, une nouvelle catégorie de personnes déplacées dans leur propre pays est en train de se constituer, du fait de la confiscation de terres et de biens aux fins de la construction de l'ouvrage, de l'interdiction d'accès au travail, aux hôpitaux, aux

¹ Haaretz, 14 et 16 juin 2006.

écoles et aux familles en Cisjordanie et du refus d'octroyer des permis pour accéder aux terres agricoles situées dans la zone fermée. Il n'y a pas de statistiques globales à ce sujet. Selon le Bureau central palestinien de statistique, près de 14 500 personnes ont déjà été déplacées à cause du mur et selon B'Tselem, l'organisation israélienne des droits de l'homme, ce nombre devrait atteindre 90 000 environ. Dans d'autres régions, le déplacement forcé de personnes par le biais de violations des droits de l'homme est qualifié de nettoyage ethnique.

V. Jérusalem et le mur

38. Le mur de 75 kilomètres qui fait le tour de Jérusalem (dont 5 kilomètres seulement coïncident avec la Ligne verte) est le moyen qui sert à induire des changements majeurs dans la ville, à laquelle il s'agit de donner un caractère essentiellement juif en affaiblissant ainsi les prétentions des Palestiniens qui veulent en faire la capitale d'un État palestinien indépendant. C'est pourquoi le mur passe à travers les quartiers palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est et les quartiers qui se trouvent sur son côté est sont tenus pour appartenant à la Cisjordanie. Cela a de graves conséquences pour les droits de l'homme des 230 000 Palestiniens qui vivent à Jérusalem.

39. Tout d'abord, si les Palestiniens qui vivent du côté ouest du mur pourront conserver leur qualité d'habitants de Jérusalem, avec certains avantages, notamment en matière de sécurité sociale, ils auront de plus en plus de mal à se rendre dans les villes de la Cisjordanie, par exemple à Ramallah et Bethléem, où beaucoup travaillent. De plus, s'ils choisissent de résider en Cisjordanie pour se rapprocher de leur travail, ils risquent de perdre leur statut d'habitant de Jérusalem et le droit d'y vivre parce que le principe dit du « centre de vie » de la politique israélienne veut que les Palestiniens prouvent qu'ils vivent à Jérusalem-Est pour conserver leur droit de résidence dans la ville. Les droits de résidence peuvent être retirés pour des motifs politiques. Le 2 juillet 2006, le Gouvernement israélien a révoqué les droits de résidence à Jérusalem de quatre hauts responsables du Hamas vivant à Jérusalem-Est.

40. Ensuite, les Palestiniens relégués en Cisjordanie par le mur, soit le quart environ de la population palestinienne de la ville, perdront leur statut d'habitant de Jérusalem et les privilèges qu'il comporte. Il leur faudra également un permis pour entrer en ville et ils ne pourront le faire que par 4 des 12 passages dans le mur, ce qui allongera considérablement leurs allées et retours et les empêchera de se rendre dans les établissements scolaires, les universités, les hôpitaux, les lieux de culte et les lieux de travail. Il est difficile de décrire l'humiliation subie aux passages vers Jérusalem. Au passage principal de Kalandiya, désormais appelé « terminal », la traversée peut prendre de une à deux heures en période de pointe en raison des procédures administratives punitives imposées.

41. La construction du mur pour judaïser Jérusalem est une opération d'ingénierie sociale cynique qui impose des rigueurs considérables à tous les aspects de la vie palestinienne. Comme le dit B'Tselem : « Le tracé de la barrière [dans Jérusalem], censé faire obstacle aux attaques terroristes meurtrières, est en fait dicté par [...] des considérations politiques [...]. La situation qui en résulte va à l'encontre de la raison d'être même de la barrière en tant que mesure de sécurité et constitue une violation graves des droits fondamentaux »².

VI. Bethléem et le mur

42. La ville historique de Bethléem a connu le même sort que Jérusalem. Elle est entourée d'un enchevêtrement de blocs de ciment, de clôtures de fil rasoir, de tranchées et de miradors abritant des tireurs d'élite qui porte gravement atteinte au caractère historique de la ville. Le mur a créé des ghettos et anéanti le quartier palestinien autour du Tombeau de Rachel, qui est encerclé par un mur visant à protéger les fidèles juifs. La plupart des commerces locaux ont fermé ou ont été contraints de déménager. Le « terminal » de Bethléem est semblable à celui de Kalandiya et limite les mouvements entre Bethléem et Jérusalem.

VII. Colonies

43. Les colonies juives de Cisjordanie sont illégales. Elles violent le paragraphe 6 de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et leur illégalité a été confirmée par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif sur le mur. La Haute Cour israélienne a toujours refusé de se prononcer sur leur légalité, ce qui montre que même la juridiction suprême israélienne ne veut pas leur reconnaître une légitimité.

44. Malgré leur caractère illégal et leur condamnation unanime par la communauté internationale, le Gouvernement israélien continue à laisser les colonies se développer, dans certains cas ouvertement et avec sa pleine approbation. Depuis le début de 2006, le Gouvernement a lancé des appels d'offres pour la construction de 952 logements dans des colonies en Cisjordanie³. Le plus souvent cependant, le développement se fait discrètement, sous le couvert d'une « croissance naturelle », qui atteint pour les colonies un taux moyen de 5,5 %, contre 1,7 % pour les villes israéliennes. Parfois, enfin, les colonies s'étendent illégalement au regard du droit israélien, mais rien n'est fait pour faire respecter la loi. Des postes avancés sont créés fréquemment et, quand on menace de les démanteler, les menaces ne sont pas mises à exécution. En 2006, des colons ont eu l'audace d'emménager dans des appartements de la colonie d'Upper Modi'in, construits sur des terres appartenant au village palestinien voisin de Bil'in malgré l'interdiction formelle de la Haute Cour.

45. Du fait de cette expansion, la population des colons de Cisjordanie atteint environ 260 000 personnes, celle de Jérusalem-Est près de 200 000. Comme indiqué ci-dessus, le mur est actuellement construit en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est de manière à englober la plupart des colonies dans son enceinte. De plus, les trois grands blocs de colonies de Gush Etzion, Ma'aleh Adumim et Ariel divisent en fait le territoire palestinien en cantons, détruisant ainsi l'intégrité territoriale de la Palestine.

46. Il ressort à l'évidence des déclarations du Gouvernement israélien que les grands blocs de colonies ont vocation à rester en Israël. Le 3 mai 2006, le Premier

² B'Tselem. A Wall in Jerusalem: Obstacles to Human Rights in the Holy City, été 2006.

³ Haaretz, 21 septembre 2006.

Ministre Olmert a déclaré à la Knesset que « ce qu'a réussi le mouvement de colonisation dans les principaux centres d'établissement restera à jamais partie intégrante de l'État souverain d'Israël, comme Jérusalem, notre capitale unifiée »⁴.

47. La politique de « dégageant unilatéral », de « convergence » ou de « réaligement » du Gouvernement israélien, aujourd'hui en suspens en raison de la guerre au Liban, prévoit clairement l'annexion illégale de vastes portions de territoire palestinien. Les euphémismes utilisés pour qualifier cette politique ne doivent pas masquer cette dure réalité.

48. La violence des colons reste un problème grave. En juin 2006, le Groupe de surveillance de la Palestine a publié un compte rendu mensuel de cas de violences, qui illustre bien le problème :

« Des colons israéliens ont essayé d'enlever une étudiante dans le district de Salfit; ont frappé des civils à Hébron et d'autres civils près de la colonie de Ma'on; ont fermé une route dans le district de Qalqiliya; ont caillassé des maisons de civils dans le quartier de Tel Rumeida à Hébron et volé une pompe à eau dans une maison de ce même quartier. Ils ont incendié deux véhicules civils et un camion à Huwara; ont mis le feu à des récoltes et à des oliviers à Salim, près de Naplouse, et à Al Jab'a près de Bethléem; ils ont fait paître leurs troupeaux de moutons dans des champs cultivés du district d'Hébron ».

VIII. Le sud d'Hébron et le « minimur »

49. Les plans qui prévoyaient la construction du mur au sud d'Hébron ont été abandonnés; selon le nouveau projet, le mur suivra essentiellement la Ligne verte. À la place, Israël construit une barrière routière ou « minimur » le long du côté nord des routes de contournement des colons de la région. Ce mur, d'environ un mètre de hauteur, vise à empêcher les véhicules palestiniens de pénétrer sur la grande route et à donner aux colons libre accès aux routes de contournement. Ce dispositif permettra aux colons de se déplacer en toute sécurité entre les colonies et le reste d'Israël sans avoir à traverser de terres palestiniennes. Vingt-deux localités palestiniennes et plus de 1 900 Palestiniens se trouveront enfermés entre le minimur et le mur lui-même. Le minimur empêchera des bergers palestiniens et leur 24 000 têtes de bétail d'accéder aux pâturages situés de l'autre côté. Il ajoutera aux difficultés que connaissent déjà les localités palestiniennes qui se trouvent au sud d'Hébron, dépourvues de centres de soins, d'écoles et d'installations d'élimination de déchets adéquats. L'eau doit être amenée par camions dès le début de l'été, quand le réseau d'irrigation par eaux pluviales commence à se vider. Le Gouvernement israélien refuse de raccorder les localités palestiniennes à son propre réseau d'adduction, qui n'alimente que les colons. Enfin, il refuse d'émettre des permis de construire pour les maisons.

50. La situation dans le village de Tuwani, où je me suis rendu à plusieurs occasions, témoigne du sort des localités palestiniennes du sud d'Hébron. Ce village n'a ni électricité, ni eau, ni services sanitaires et il est interdit d'y construire de nouvelles maisons. De plus, les villageois subissent des violences de la part des colons de Ma'on. Pour aller à l'école, les enfants doivent être escortés par les FDI, qui les protègent des colons. Ces derniers sont également responsables de l'empoisonnement des terres.

⁴ Haaretz, 4 mai 2006.

IX. Vallée du Jourdain

51. Israël a abandonné le projet qu'il avait de construire le mur le long de l'axe du TPO et de s'approprié formellement la vallée du Jourdain. Il exerce toutefois son autorité sur la région, qui représente 25 % de la Cisjordanie, de la même façon qu'il le fait sur la zone fermée entre le mur et la Ligne verte, à la frontière occidentale de la Palestine. Son intention de rester définitivement dans la vallée du Jourdain transparaît non seulement dans ses déclarations officielles, mais aussi à travers les restrictions imposées aux Palestiniens, par les contrôles exercés et l'augmentation du nombre de colonies dans la vallée.

52. Les Palestiniens qui vivent dans la vallée du Jourdain doivent détenir une pièce d'identité avec une adresse dans la vallée, obligatoire pour pouvoir se déplacer dans la vallée sans permis israélien. Les autres Palestiniens, y compris les propriétaires fonciers et les travailleurs non résidents, doivent demander un permis, lequel en pratique n'autorise pas son détenteur à passer la nuit dans la vallée, ce qui l'oblige à faire des allers et retours quotidiens et à perdre du temps aux postes de contrôle qui relient la vallée du Jourdain au reste de la Cisjordanie. La vallée du Jourdain se trouve donc isolée. Les restrictions imposées aux déplacements font que les agriculteurs de la vallée ont du mal à se rendre sur les marchés de Cisjordanie, les denrées étant fréquemment retenues et se gâtant aux postes de contrôle, notamment à Al Hamra. Les tentatives de vente au bord des routes ont échoué, les FDI ayant détruit les stands.

53. La vallée du Jourdain fait également face à une crise du logement car elle est en grande partie classée en zone C, ce qui signifie que les autorités israéliennes doivent donner leur autorisation avant toute construction d'habitation. J'ai rendu visite à une famille de Bédouins, près de Jéricho, dont la maison « illégale » faisait l'objet d'un ordre de démolition. L'incident amusant, mais révélateur décrit ci-après illustre bien l'enthousiasme vengeur avec lequel les FDI s'acquittent de ce type de tâche. Je me suis rendu dans une maison du village de Zbeidat, en bordure de la zone C. Son propriétaire avait planté une rangée de géraniums qui s'étendait en partie sur la zone interdite. Les FDI l'ont informé qu'il devait déterrer ces géraniums car ils avaient été plantés sans autorisation.

54. La plupart des terres de la vallée du Jourdain sont contrôlées par des colonies juives ou servent de terrains militaires. Seulement 4 % sont accessibles aux 47 000 Palestiniens, pour mise en valeur ou résidence. Environ 8 300 colons vivent dans la vallée et leur nombre continue de croître en raison de la réinstallation des colons de Gaza. Alors que la plupart des localités palestiniennes n'ont ni électricité, ni eau, les colons sont raccordés aux réseaux israéliens. De plus, ces 8 300 colons consomment chaque année plus d'eau que les 47 000 Palestiniens.

X. Démolition de maisons

55. La démolition de maisons est un fait ordinaire de l'occupation, dont le bulldozer est devenu le symbole odieux. Traditionnellement, la puissance occupante démolit une maison à titre de punition (lorsque l'un de ses habitants a commis un crime contre Israël), en raison de nécessités militaires ou parce que la construction s'est faite sans permis. Ces derniers temps ont vu apparaître des motifs supplémentaires : d'abord, le passage du mur, ensuite l'arrestation de personnes recherchées. On se rappellera que l'an dernier la Haute Cour israélienne a interdit d'utiliser des civils palestiniens comme boucliers humains lors des opérations d'arrestation. Aujourd'hui, si l'on soupçonne qu'une personne recherchée se trouve dans telle ou telle maison et refuse de se rendre, la maison est rasée. J'ai vu de mes propres yeux des maisons détruites de cette façon dans le camp de réfugiés de Balata, près de Naplouse.

56. Il y a des années qu'Israël démolit les maisons construites sans permis, en alléguant qu'il se contente de faire respecter les lois municipales sur le logement, comme le fait toute autre société développée. Cette argumentation néglige deux considérations. D'abord, une puissance occupante n'a pas le droit de démolir l'habitation de personnes protégées par le droit international humanitaire (voir par. g) de l'article 23 du Règlement concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre annexé à la Convention IV concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre de La Haye, et l'article 53 de la Quatrième Convention de Genève). Cela vaut pour les maisons des Palestiniens de Cisjordanie, de la bande de Gaza et de Jérusalem-Est. Ensuite, les permis de construire sont accordés de façon si arbitraire et refusés de façon si systématique qu'il est devenu pratiquement impossible pour un Palestinien de construire une maison avec autorisation. Le régime des permis à Jérusalem-Est est administré de façon complètement différente pour les Palestiniens et pour les Israéliens. Le caractère discriminatoire de l'application de ce régime à Jérusalem-Est a été récemment mis en lumière par Meir Margalit dans Discrimination in the Heart of the Holy City (2006). Lors de mon séjour, je me suis rendu dans le village d'Al Walaja. Bien qu'il ait été annexé à Jérusalem-Est après la guerre de 1967, ses habitants n'ont pas le statut de résidents de Jérusalem et leurs demandes de permis de construire sont systématiquement rejetées. Récemment, la construction du mur à l'intérieur du village a été envisagée, initiative qui semble aujourd'hui avoir été abandonnée. Les autorités israéliennes paraissent néanmoins déterminées à faire pression sur les résidents du quartier Ein-Jweisa d'Al Walaja pour qu'ils déménagent, en menaçant de raser leurs habitations. Vingt-neuf maisons ont été démolies entre 1985 et 2006 et 24 autres font actuellement l'objet d'ordres de démolition.

XI. Postes de contrôle

57. Le nombre de postes de contrôle, barrages routiers, remblais et tranchées compris, est passé de 376 en août 2005 à plus de 500. Ces postes divisent la Cisjordanie en quatre zones distinctes : le nord (Naplouse, Djénine et Tulkarm), le centre (Ramallah), le sud (Hébron) et Jérusalem-Est. À l'intérieur de ces zones, des enclaves ont été créées grâce à la mise en place d'un réseau de postes et de barrages. Les villes sont coupées les unes des autres puisqu'il faut un permis pour passer d'une zone à l'autre et que, là encore, ce permis est difficile à obtenir. Les règles qui en gouvernent l'obtention ne cessent de changer, notamment du point de vue de l'âge des requérants à qui il est refusé. De plus, les démarches administratives à entreprendre pour l'obtenir sont arbitraires et dissuasives. La situation a empiré avec l'arrivée du Hamas aux affaires, dans la mesure où ceux qui ont besoin d'un permis doivent désormais s'adresser directement à l'Administration civile israélienne, le Gouvernement israélien refusant de coopérer avec quelque autorité officielle de Palestine que ce soit. Ce système de permis explique aussi le déclin économique du TPO puisque la main-d'œuvre et les marchandises ne peuvent circuler librement.

58. En juin 2006, je me suis rendu à Naplouse, ville complètement cernée par des postes de contrôle, au point que la plupart de ses habitants ne peuvent ni y entrer, ni en sortir. Le poste de contrôle d'Hawara, en particulier, est tristement célèbre pour la dureté avec laquelle il est administré. Naplouse est devenue de fait une ville prisonnière.

59. Les Israéliens justifient les postes de contrôle par des considérations de sécurité. Il est difficile d'accepter cette justification pour la plupart d'entre eux. Après tout, le mur constitue une barrière de sécurité efficace entre Israël et le TPO et il existe, le long de la bande de terre où a été installé le bloc de colonies d'Ariel, une ligne de postes de contrôle qui devrait protéger efficacement les Israéliens. Les postes installés ailleurs, par exemple autour de Naplouse, ne répondent apparemment à aucune nécessité du point de vue de la sécurité. On peut en conclure que l'objectif principal de beaucoup d'entre eux est en fait d'empêcher les Palestiniens d'oublier qu'Israël est maître de leurs vies et de les humilier du même coup.

XII. Séparation des familles

60. Le droit à une vie de famille est reconnu par tous les instruments relatifs aux droits de l'homme. Dans le territoire palestinien occupé, Israël en entrave l'exercice de plusieurs façons. Premièrement, le mur élevé entre les quartiers de Jérusalem sépare les Palestiniens selon qu'ils ont des documents d'identité de Jérusalem ou de Cisjordanie. Quand deux époux ont des documents différents, ils n'ont souvent pas d'autre choix que de vivre séparés pour que celui qui a les documents de Jérusalem puisse conserver les avantages qui s'y attachent. Dix-huit pour cent des foyers palestiniens de Jérusalem sont ainsi séparés du père et 12 %, de la mère. Deuxièmement, les autorités appliquent depuis peu une politique qui consiste à refouler les Palestiniens titulaires d'un passeport étranger. Auparavant, ces derniers étaient autorisés à vivre en Cisjordanie à condition de renouveler leur visa tous les trois mois. La nouvelle politique touche environ 50 000 Palestiniens de Cisjordanie, à qui l'on refuse désormais un visa⁵. Troisièmement, une loi israélienne relative à la citoyenneté interdit aux Palestiniens qui épousent des Arabes israéliens de vivre en Israël avec leur conjoint. Cette loi a dernièrement fait l'objet d'un arrêt controversé de la Haute Cour de justice israélienne, celle-ci ayant jugé que le texte, qui ne s'applique pas aux Israéliens juifs épousant des étrangers, était constitutionnel pour des raisons de sécurité. Selon la Cour, l'État a le droit d'empêcher un Palestinien de vivre avec son conjoint israélien en Israël, car des Palestiniens menaçant la sécurité d'Israël pourraient en profiter pour entrer dans le pays.

⁵ Haaretz, 10 juillet 2006.

XIII. Administration de la justice

61. Il est clair qu'Israël ne cherche pas à se gagner les cœurs et les esprits lorsqu'il administre la justice; il agit plutôt avec une poigne de fer, pour ce qui est des arrestations et du traitement des individus arrêtés et des détenus. Il semble que la situation se soit encore dégradée depuis que le Hamas a été élu au Gouvernement.

62. Les arrestations s'accompagnent souvent, comme on l'a dit, de la destruction ou du saccage des biens, de voies de fait, d'attaques de chiens lancés dans les logements des civils, de fouilles à corps humiliantes et de descentes au petit matin. Les interrogatoires des personnes arrêtées continuent d'être menés en combinant pressions psychologiques et violences physiques. Le nombre de prisonniers ne cesse de croître. On compte aujourd'hui plus de 10 000 Palestiniens dans les prisons israéliennes, femmes et enfants inclus. La situation des enfants est particulièrement inquiétante, car ils doivent souvent partager leur cellule avec des adultes et n'ont accès ni à l'enseignement, ni à leur famille.

63. L'arrestation de personnalités rappelle aux Palestiniens que nul n'est hors d'atteinte de la puissance israélienne. En mars 2006, Israël a pris d'assaut et détruit en grande partie la prison de Jéricho afin d'arrêter Ahmed Saadat et ses complices, immédiatement après que les responsables britanniques et américains de l'établissement s'étaient retirés en violation d'un accord de 2002 en vertu duquel ils s'étaient engagés à surveiller la détention de Saadat et d'autres prisonniers. En juin 2006, huit membres du Gouvernement du Hamas et 26 membres du Conseil législatif palestinien ont été arrêtés à Ramallah. En août 2006, le porte-parole du Conseil, Aziz Dweik, le Vice-Premier Ministre, Nasser Al-Shaer, et le Secrétaire général du Conseil, Mahmoud Al-Ramahi, ont été arrêtés au cours de raids menés séparément.

XIV. Israël, la sécurité et les droits de l'homme

64. Il est difficile d'accorder la longue liste de violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire déroulée dans le présent rapport avec l'engagement d'Israël envers la primauté du droit. Telle est la situation paradoxale dans laquelle se trouve cet État. Il est vrai qu'Israël est doté d'une Cour suprême et d'institutions ayant pour mission de faire respecter l'état de droit. Israël est néanmoins accusé de graves violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire, ce à quoi il répond en contestant les faits dans bien des cas ou, lorsque ceux-ci sont incontestables, en invoquant pour se justifier des mesures de sécurité nécessaires.

65. Dans beaucoup de régions du monde, on approuve ce que fait Israël en estimant que ce dernier est engagé dans une guerre contre le terrorisme, ce qui lui permet de s'affranchir des conventions relatives aux droits de l'homme. En outre, compte tenu de son attachement à l'état de droit, Israël est perçu comme un occupant bienveillant qui viole malgré lui les normes relatives aux droits de l'homme et au droit humanitaire, dans l'intérêt de la sécurité. Cette perception est malheureusement fautive. Israël n'occupe pas de façon bienveillante la Cisjordanie, la bande de Gaza et Jérusalem-Est. Comme on a pu le constater, sa réaction à une menace contre la sécurité est souvent très disproportionnée. De plus, les forces israéliennes s'acquittent de leurs tâches de façon arbitraire et vindicative. Ainsi, le système de permis qui régleme la circulation des Palestiniens est appliqué arbitrairement, ce qui met les demandeurs entièrement à la merci des lubies du bureaucrate israélien chargé d'accorder ou de refuser ces permis. Les soldats qui tiennent les postes de contrôle se comportent de façon humiliante. Il est important de souligner que leur malveillance est encore plus manifeste depuis l'élection du Hamas et le déclenchement de la guerre au Liban. On a maintenant l'impression qu'ils considèrent chaque Palestinien comme un terroriste en puissance à traiter sans respect. Ils manifestent peu de compassion envers les malades et les personnes âgées, et les cas de femmes accouchant à un poste de contrôle parce que des soldats ne les autorisent pas à se rendre à un hôpital ne manquent pas. Les arrestations ne s'accompagnent pas seulement de la destruction des biens, mais aussi de leur saccage (le Rapporteur spécial a visité dans le camp de réfugiés de Balata une école de l'UNRWA qui avait été saisie en février 2006 pour servir de base à des opérations militaires sur place; les biens de cette école avaient été délibérément saccagés et des inscriptions avaient été griffonnées sur les murs d'une façon qui ne pouvait pas être justifiée par des considérations de sécurité). Les maisons construites sans permis sont détruites inutilement, et parfois même alors qu'une action en justice est en cours. Les actes de violence et de vandalisme des colons sont visiblement tolérés par les forces de défense israéliennes. Certains villages se voient refuser l'accès à l'eau et à l'électricité alors qu'il serait facile de le leur fournir en les raccordant aux réseaux d'alimentation des villages voisins. Il n'y a aucune considération pour la vie de famille, ni pour bien d'autres aspects de la vie humaine. Bref, l'occupation ne se déroule pas de façon humaine. Les dissidents israéliens qui ont fait partie du système (comme ces soldats qui, en 2004, ont constitué le groupe dissident « Rompre le silence ») et ceux qui surveillent l'occupation (comme les membres de l'ONG Machsom Watch) ont fait état des conditions impitoyables dans lesquelles elle a lieu.

XV. La crise humanitaire et le financement de l'Autorité palestinienne

66. La crise humanitaire à Gaza est traitée ci-dessus dans la partie consacrée à cette zone. La situation humanitaire consternante qui règne dans cette partie du territoire palestinien occupé ne doit pas détourner l'attention de la grave crise humanitaire que connaît le reste du territoire. Sur 10 Palestiniens, 4 vivent en dessous du seuil officiel de pauvreté, qui est de 2,10 dollars par jour. Il est difficile d'évaluer l'ampleur du chômage. L'Organisation internationale du Travail a estimé qu'il touchait plus de 40 % de la main-d'œuvre palestinienne. Ce taux ne tient cependant pas compte du fait que les fonctionnaires du secteur public, qui offre 23 % du total des emplois sur le territoire, travaillent sans être payés.

67. La crise humanitaire résulte en grande partie de l'interruption du financement de l'Autorité palestinienne après l'élection du Hamas. Premièrement, le Gouvernement israélien s'abstient de verser à l'Autorité les taxes sur la valeur ajoutée et les droits de douane de 50 à 60 millions de dollars par mois qu'il perçoit pour le compte de cette dernière sur les marchandises importées dans le territoire palestinien occupé. En droit, Israël ne peut pas refuser de virer les montants en question, qui appartiennent à l'Autorité en vertu du Protocole de 1994 relatif aux relations économiques entre le Gouvernement d'Israël et l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine (Protocole de Paris). Comme on pouvait le prévoir, Israël justifie son attitude par des considérations de sécurité. Le déficit financier que connaît ainsi l'Autorité palestinienne s'accompagne d'une réduction considérable de l'aide financière accordée par les institutions et les pays donateurs. Cela a gravement nui aux activités des ONG, qui ont dû suspendre ou annuler leurs projets liés aux travaux de l'Autorité. Le Hamas étant considéré comme une organisation terroriste par les États-Unis et l'Union européenne, le Trésor américain a décidé d'interdire toute opération financière avec l'Autorité. Cette décision a profondément influencé les banques, qui ne sont pas disposées à virer des fonds pour le compte de l'Autorité, des organismes qui en dépendent, des projets qu'elle mène et des ONG engagées dans des projets avec elle. Pour certaines réalisations auxquelles l'Autorité participe, le financement a été maintenu (c'est le cas, notamment, pour les projets de la Banque mondiale). L'Union européenne a quant à elle mis en place un mécanisme international temporaire, approuvé par le Quatuor, afin de venir en aide aux Palestiniens qui travaillent dans le secteur de la santé, d'assurer le fonctionnement ininterrompu des réseaux publics, y compris pour le carburant, et de distribuer des allocations de base permettant aux couches les plus pauvres de la population de subvenir à leurs besoins.

68. Malgré quelques tentatives de financement de cette nature, il est clair que l'économie palestinienne, fortement tributaire des aides financières des donateurs depuis 1994, a énormément souffert des retenues opérées par Israël et par la communauté internationale depuis l'élection du Hamas. Cette asphyxie économique a eu de lourdes conséquences sur le plan des droits économiques et sociaux du peuple palestinien. Un million environ de Palestiniens, sur les 3,5 millions d'habitants que compte la Palestine, sont directement touchés par l'interruption du versement des salaires des quelque 152 000 fonctionnaires, tandis que l'ensemble de la population en souffre indirectement. De plus, comme l'Autorité palestinienne est responsable de plus de 70 % des écoles et de 60 % des services de santé dans le territoire palestinien occupé, l'enseignement et la santé ont subi un sérieux préjudice. En août 2006, les fonctionnaires se sont mis en grève pour réclamer le versement de leur salaire, ce qui a encore aggravé la crise socioéconomique.

69. La question des soins de santé est examinée plus en détail dans la partie consacrée à la bande de Gaza. Il est cependant important de souligner que les restrictions financières ont nui gravement à ces soins dans l'ensemble du territoire palestinien occupé. Faute d'être payés, les professionnels de la santé s'absentent, tout simplement parce qu'ils ne peuvent pas s'offrir les moyens de transport disponibles pour se rendre sur leur lieu de travail. Les stocks de médicaments et de vaccins sont insuffisants. Les hôpitaux ne peuvent prendre en charge convenablement les patients atteints d'un cancer ou dialysés. Le transfert des patients dans d'autres hôpitaux de Cisjordanie, et surtout d'Israël ou d'Égypte, est devenu particulièrement difficile en raison des bouclages et du refus de délivrer des permis.

70. Le fait est que le peuple palestinien est soumis à des sanctions économiques, premier exemple d'un tel traitement à l'égard d'un peuple occupé. Cela est difficile à comprendre. Israël viole les principales résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale relatives à l'illégalité des modifications territoriales et à la violation des droits de l'homme et n'a pas donné suite à l'avis consultatif rendu en 2004 par la Cour internationale de Justice. Pourtant, il échappe lui-même aux sanctions. C'est en revanche le peuple palestinien, et non l'Autorité palestinienne, qui est soumis aux formes de sanctions internationales les plus dures peut-être qu'aient connues les temps modernes. Il est intéressant de rappeler à ce propos que les États occidentaux ont refusé d'imposer à l'Afrique du Sud de véritables sanctions économiques pour l'obliger à renoncer à l'apartheid au motif que cela risquait de porter préjudice aux Noirs de ce pays. Ni le peuple palestinien, ni ses droits fondamentaux ne bénéficient des mêmes égards.

XVI. L'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice et la position de l'Organisation des Nations Unies

71. En 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a jugé que le mur qu'Israël édifie actuellement en territoire palestinien était illégal et devait être démantelé. Dans son avis consultatif, elle a estimé que plusieurs autres pratiques israéliennes (telles que l'établissement de colonies) étaient contraires au droit international. Deux ans ont passé, mais rien n'a été fait pour donner suite aux conclusions de la Cour. Pis encore, le mur n'est absolument pas mentionné dans les déclarations périodiques du Quatuor. Tout se passe comme s'il n'y avait jamais eu d'avis consultatif.

72. En 2004, dans sa résolution ES-10/15, l'Assemblée générale a prié le Secrétaire général d'établir un registre des dommages causés par la construction du mur. Deux ans plus tard, ce registre n'existe toujours pas, ce qui amène à se demander sérieusement si sa forme, ses objectifs et son mode d'utilisation seront conformes aux termes de l'avis consultatif.

73. L'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice est un jugement autorisé de l'organe judiciaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, auquel l'Assemblée générale a souscrit dans sa résolution ES-10/15. Compte tenu de sa nature, il n'est pas contraignant pour les États. Il dit cependant le droit de façon décisive en ce qui concerne l'Organisation et il doit guider celle-ci de la même façon que l'avis consultatif du 21 juin 1971 (sur les conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie) a orienté ses organes politiques dans le traitement de la question de la Namibie. En tant que membre du Quatuor, l'Organisation a le devoir de persuader cette instance de faire au moins mention de l'avis de la Cour dans ses déclarations. Si elle n'y parvient pas, elle devra au moins faire part de son mécontentement devant le fait que le Quatuor ne s'inspire pas de l'avis et ne le mentionne pas.

XVII. Conclusion

74. Le présent rapport n'est pas particulièrement réjouissant. Israël viole des normes importantes des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire. Si l'on admet sans hésitation que la sécurité d'Israël est menacée et que ce pays a le droit de se défendre, il ne faut pas oublier que la cause profonde de cette menace est la poursuite de l'occupation d'un peuple qui souhaite exercer son droit à l'autodétermination dans un État indépendant. Consciente de la nécessité de mettre un terme à cette situation, la communauté internationale a délégué son autorité au Quatuor, composé de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, de l'Union européenne, des États-Unis d'Amérique et de la Fédération de Russie, afin qu'il facilite un règlement pacifique sous la forme de la création d'un État palestinien. Malheureusement, il semble que cet objectif ait été perdu de vue dans la mesure où le Quatuor a recours à des mesures punitives visant à obliger le Hamas à changer de position idéologique ou à provoquer un changement de régime, comme l'indique clairement la déclaration du Quatuor du 9 mai 2006. On peut se demander si l'Organisation des Nations Unies est autorisée en droit à participer à la pression économique exercée par le Quatuor sans suivre les procédures qu'elle s'est fixées dans la Charte. Quoi qu'il en soit, la diplomatie a cédé le pas devant la pression.

75. Il serait vain pour le Rapporteur spécial de recommander que le Gouvernement israélien fasse preuve de respect envers les droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire. Des organes ayant davantage d'autorité que lui, la Cour internationale de Justice et le Conseil de sécurité en particulier, ont lancé des appels en ce sens avec aussi peu de succès qu'en ont eu les rapports précédents du Rapporteur. Il serait également vain pour ce dernier d'appeler le Quatuor à s'efforcer de rétablir les droits de l'homme, car ni le respect des droits de l'homme, ni celui de l'état de droit ne figurent en bonne place à son ordre du jour, si l'on en croit ses déclarations publiques. Ainsi, le Rapporteur ne peut que lancer un appel à l'ensemble de la communauté internationale pour qu'elle s'intéresse davantage au sort du peuple palestinien.

76. Il est à regretter que l'image et la réputation de l'Organisation des Nations Unies aient souffert dans les territoires palestiniens occupés. Alors que le dévouement et la détermination de ses agents sur le terrain leur valent une grande estime, on ne peut pas en dire autant de l'Organisation à New York et à Genève. Les Palestiniens sont consternés par le fait que le Conseil de sécurité est incapable de prendre des mesures pour protéger les droits de l'homme, comme en atteste le veto opposé le 12 juillet 2006 à un projet de résolution équitable sur Gaza. Les organes politiques de l'ONU doivent se montrer plus soucieux des droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens. Des rapports comme celui-ci font état de violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire. Il est toutefois indispensable que l'Organisation prenne des mesures concrètes en ces temps difficiles.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
17 septembre 2007
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-deuxième session

Point 72 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, que John Dugard a présenté en application de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/62/150.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, reconnu par les organes politiques de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la Cour internationale de Justice et Israël, doit s'exercer en Cisjordanie, à Jérusalem-Est et à Gaza, qui forment ensemble l'unité territoriale palestinienne concernée par l'autodétermination. L'exercice de ce droit est menacé par la séparation entre la Cisjordanie et Gaza intervenue du fait que Hamas avait pris le pouvoir à Gaza en juin 2007 tandis que le Fatah avait pris le pouvoir en Cisjordanie. La communauté internationale ne doit ménager aucun effort pour restaurer l'unité palestinienne. Sans cette unité, le droit à l'autodétermination ne pourra se concrétiser pleinement.

Cette année correspond au quarantième anniversaire de l'occupation du territoire palestinien. Les obligations incombent à Israël en tant que puissance occupante ne sont nullement réduites par la longue durée de l'occupation. Au contraire, ces obligations se sont accrues, du fait des actes illicites commis par Israël sur le territoire occupé. Il est proposé de prier la Cour internationale de Justice de rendre un avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques d'une occupation prolongée pour le peuple occupé, la puissance occupante et les États tiers.

Israël conserve sa qualité de puissante occupante à Gaza. La thèse selon laquelle Israël aurait mis fin à l'occupation de Gaza en 2005 en évacuant ses colonies de peuplement et en retirant ses troupes ne tient aucun compte du fait qu'Israël maintient un contrôle effectif sur Gaza en maîtrisant ses frontières extérieures, son espace aérien, ses eaux territoriales, le registre de l'état civil, ses recettes fiscales et ses fonctions gouvernementales. Le caractère effectif de ce contrôle est accentué par des incursions militaires et des tirs de roquettes continus. Le comportement d'Israël envers Gaza doit donc être évalué à l'aune des normes du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme. Au cours de l'année écoulée, Israël a transgressé des principes importants du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme en menant des opérations utilitaires contre des cibles civiles et en provoquant une crise humanitaire par la fermeture des frontières extérieures de Gaza. Israël est juridiquement tenu de mettre fin à ces mesures. C'est également en violation du droit international humanitaire que d'autres États ont pris part au siège de Gaza.

La situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie pourrait connaître une amélioration à la suite du rapprochement intervenu après la prise de contrôle de Gaza par le Hamas entre le Gouvernement d'urgence du Président Abbas et dirigé par le Premier Ministre Salam Fayyad, Israël, les États-Unis et le Quatuor. On compte déjà 255 prisonniers libérés, 119 millions de dollars des États-Unis de recettes fiscales palestiniennes transférées à l'Autorité palestinienne et 178 militants du Fatah amnistiés. Malgré ces avancées et les promesses d'œuvrer davantage à l'amélioration des conditions de vie des Palestiniens faites par Israël, les États-Unis et le Quatuor, on note encore des violations massives des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est. La construction du mur (ou barrière) se poursuit, les colonies de peuplement continuent de s'étendre, les points de contrôle restent opérationnels, la judaïsation de Jérusalem se prolonge et l'annexion de facto de la vallée du Jourdain perdure. Les incursions militaires suivies d'arrestations persistent de plus belle. La destruction de maisons est une réalité quotidienne en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est.

Le Secrétaire général de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a institué un comité chargé d'enregistrer les demandes d'indemnisation des Palestiniens liées à la construction du mur. D'épineuses questions se posent sur la manière dont ce comité fonctionnera.

Les violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire, ainsi que le refus d'Israël de transférer les recettes fiscales qui reviennent à l'Autorité palestinienne et les restrictions bancaires imposées par les États-Unis, ont eu de graves répercussions sur la situation humanitaire en Cisjordanie. La pauvreté et le chômage sont au plus haut, la santé et l'éducation entravées par les incursions militaires, le mur et les points de contrôle, et l'ensemble du tissu social menacé.

Quelque 10 000 prisonniers politiques palestiniens sont détenus dans les prisons israéliennes dans des conditions inhumaines et dégradantes. L'exécution extrajudiciaire de militants présumés par des tirs de roquettes se poursuit sans relâche.

Bien que les organismes des Nations Unies et leurs personnels œuvrent à la promotion et à la protection des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé, le rôle du Secrétaire général au niveau du Quatuor suscite aujourd'hui de sérieuses interrogations. Composé de l'ONU, de l'Union européenne, de la Fédération de Russie et des États-Unis, le Quatuor est devenu un acteur clef du processus de paix dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Cette structure, dirigée en fait par les États-Unis, a manifesté peu d'intérêt pour la promotion des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire et assume indirectement la responsabilité des sanctions économiques imposées au territoire palestinien occupé. En mai 2007, l'ancien Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et Envoyé du Secrétaire général auprès du Quatuor, M. Alvaro de Soto, a déclaré que le Quatuor, sous l'influence des États-Unis, avait perdu la confiance du peuple palestinien et il a demandé au Secrétaire général de réexaminer sérieusement la participation de l'ONU au Quatuor.

Le Rapporteur spécial invite le Secrétaire général à user de son influence pour amener le Quatuor à faire du respect des droits de l'homme, du droit international humanitaire, de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice et des considérations de neutralité et d'impartialité, les principes directeurs de son action dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Si cela s'avérerait impossible, l'ONU devrait se retirer du Quatuor.

Enfin, le Rapporteur spécial demande à l'Assemblée générale de prier la Cour internationale de Justice de rendre un nouvel avis consultatif sur les conséquences d'une occupation prolongée pour le peuple occupé, la puissance occupante et les États tiers.

Table des matières

	Paragraphes	Page
I. Introduction	1–2	5
II. Autodétermination	3–5	5
III. L'occupation par Israël du territoire palestinien, en particulier Gaza	6–24	6
IV. Les droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est	25–42	13
A. Le mur	27–32	14
B. Colonies et colons	33–34	16
C. La vallée du Jourdain	35–36	17
D. Postes de contrôle et barrages routiers, obstacles à la liberté de circulation	37–38	17
E. Incursions militaires	39	18
F. La situation humanitaire	40–42	18
V. Violation des interdictions concernant la détention arbitraire, le traitement inhumain et les exécutions extrajudiciaires	43–45	19
VI. Le rôle de l'Organisations des Nations Unies en matière de protection des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés	46–50	20
VII. Recommandations	51–57	22

I. Introduction

1. Le mandat du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé est de faire des enquêtes, des études et des rapports sur le respect des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé, non de rendre compte des politiques qui y sont appliquées. En effet, au vu des précédents rapports, certains États ont mis en garde le Rapporteur spécial contre le dépassement de son mandat. Il est donc pleinement conscient des limites assignées à celui-ci. Il existe cependant une zone intermédiaire entre les droits de l'homme et la politique, à l'intérieur de laquelle ils interagissent, et qui doit relever du présent mandat. Malheureusement, cette zone s'est élargie et continue de s'étendre. Aujourd'hui, la plupart des questions qualifiées de politique ont un lien avec les droits de l'homme. Le clivage politique entre la Cisjordanie et Gaza, l'asphyxie économique de Gaza, la confiscation de terres palestiniennes occasionnée par la construction du mur et l'expansion des colonies de peuplement, les incursions des Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) à Gaza et en Cisjordanie, l'annexion progressive de la vallée du Jourdain, le traitement des réfugiés, les barrages routiers et les points de contrôle en Cisjordanie et la judaïsation de Jérusalem sont autant de questions politiques qui soulèvent, en même temps, des points importants concernant les droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire. Les politiques menées par les organisations internationales, telles que l'ONU et l'Union européenne, ont également des incidences sur les droits de l'homme. Ces questions ne peuvent être négligées lorsqu'on rend honnêtement compte de la situation actuelle des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

2. Quatre thèmes constitueront la trame du présent rapport : le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien; l'occupation israélienne de la Cisjordanie, Gaza et Jérusalem-Est; la violation des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire par la puissance occupante; l'action des organisations internationales en faveur ou au détriment des droits de l'homme. Le Rapporteur spécial, depuis qu'il a pris ses fonctions en 2001, se rend dans le territoire palestinien occupé deux fois par an. Sa dernière visite dans la région remonte à décembre 2006, il n'a malheureusement pas pu y retourner depuis. Il compte toutefois s'y rendre avant la soumission du présent rapport.

II. Autodétermination

3. Que le peuple palestinien ait droit à l'autodétermination est indiscutable. Ce droit a été reconnu par le Conseil de sécurité, l'Assemblée générale, la Cour internationale de Justice et Israël lui-même. Dans son avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004 sur les Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, la Cour internationale de Justice a constaté que « S'agissant du principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, la Cour observera que l'existence d'un "peuple palestinien" ne saurait plus faire débat »¹. Le 1^{er} décembre 2006, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 61/25, dans laquelle elle a souligné la nécessité de « réaliser les droits inaliénables du peuple palestinien, au premier rang desquels le droit à l'autodétermination et le droit de créer un État indépendant » (voir aussi la résolution 61/152 du 19 décembre 2006).

¹ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, CIJ, Recueil 2004, p. 136, par. 118.

4. Le territoire sur lequel doit s'exercer le droit à l'autodétermination s'étend incontestablement à la Cisjordanie, Jérusalem-Est et Gaza. Cela est implicite dans bien des résolutions des organes de l'ONU qui proclament le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination. L'existence de ce droit ne fait aucun doute, vu qu'il est affirmé dans le cadre de la « solution prévoyant deux États », c'est-à-dire une région « dans laquelle deux États, Israël et la Palestine, vivent côte à côte, à l'intérieur de frontières sûres et reconnues »². En préconisant cette solution, le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale envisagent la création d'un État palestinien pour le peuple palestinien. C'est ce qu'on souligne lorsqu'on demande « le raccordement permanent de la bande de Gaza et de la Cisjordanie »³.

5. Depuis bientôt 60 ans, Israël refuse et entrave le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien. À l'heure qu'il est, ce droit est menacé par la séparation politique entre la Cisjordanie et Gaza, due au fait que le Hamas avait pris le pouvoir à Gaza, en juin 2007, et que le Fatah avait pris le pouvoir en Cisjordanie. Le Gouvernement d'unité nationale palestinien, dont la composition avait été soigneusement négociée, a été emporté par les luttes intestines qui avaient éclaté en mai et juin et qui ont fait quelque 200 victimes palestiniennes, pour la plupart des militants du Fatah. À l'heure où ce rapport est écrit (août), on ne peut espérer une réconciliation immédiate entre le Hamas et le Fatah, ce qui préoccupe profondément le Rapporteur spécial, car le droit à l'autodétermination est un droit de l'homme essentiel et fondamental. Le Quatuor, l'ONU, l'Union européenne et d'autres institutions internationales déterminées à assurer la concrétisation du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination doivent également s'en préoccuper. L'intérêt porté au problème ne doit toutefois pas être une manifestation de soutien – politique, économique ou militaire – à une faction au détriment de l'autre, il doit plutôt tendre à la réconciliation entre les deux factions de façon à rendre possible l'exercice du droit à l'autodétermination à l'intérieur des frontières de 1967 de l'unité territoriale palestinienne concernée par l'autodétermination, qui comprend la Cisjordanie, Jérusalem-Est et Gaza. Des suggestions tendant à rattacher la Cisjordanie à la Jordanie et Gaza à l'Égypte compromettraient gravement le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, tel qu'il a évolué au cours des dernières décennies. Malheureusement, le Quatuor (dont l'ONU est membre) œuvre peu, à l'heure actuelle, à la promotion de l'unité du peuple palestinien. Au contraire, il poursuit une politique séparatiste consistant à préférer une faction à l'autre, à dialoguer avec une et pas l'autre, à traiter avec une en excluant l'autre.

III. L'occupation par Israël du territoire palestinien, en particulier Gaza

6. Le territoire palestinien est occupé depuis si longtemps – 40 ans – que dans certains milieux, on a tendance à perdre de vue cette réalité et à prendre le territoire palestinien occupé pour une entité « non occupée ». Aussi finit-on par avoir l'impression qu'Israël et la Palestine sont deux États qui s'opposent, Israël étant

² Résolution du Conseil de sécurité 1397 (2002) et 1515 (2003); résolution 61/25 de l'Assemblée générale.

³ Résolution 61/25 de l'Assemblée générale.

perçu comme la victime et la Palestine comme un État voisin agressif et terroriste. Bien entendu, rien n'est moins vrai. Le territoire palestinien, qui comprend la Cisjordanie, Jérusalem-Est et Gaza, reste un territoire sous occupation, occupé par Israël. Dans la mesure où il y a une partie « victime », c'est la Palestine, car forcément la partie occupée est victime de l'occupant.

7. La Cour internationale de Justice a réaffirmé qu'Israël, qui occupe le territoire palestinien, est soumis aux obligations imposées par le droit international à la puissance occupante, dans son avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, lorsqu'elle a conclu que les territoires palestiniens (y compris Jérusalem-Est) demeuraient des territoires occupés et qu'Israël y avait conservé la qualité de puissance occupante⁴. Il en résulte, selon la Cour, que la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève) est applicable au territoire palestinien occupé, tout comme les pactes internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme de 1966⁵.

8. L'occupation a beau durer, les obligations d'Israël ne s'en trouvent pas réduites⁶. Au contraire, elles se sont accrues en raison de la nature de l'occupation israélienne qui a amené à considérer que celle-ci étant devenue, au fil des années, entachée d'illégalité⁷. Dans ces circonstances, le Rapporteur spécial a proposé, dans son rapport au Conseil des droits de l'homme en mars 2007 (A/HRC/4/17), que la Cour internationale de Justice soit priée de rendre un nouvel avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques d'une occupation prolongée. Il pourrait être demandé à la Cour de se prononcer sur les conséquences juridiques d'une occupation prolongée qui a acquis certaines des caractéristiques de l'apartheid et du colonialisme et qui viole nombre des obligations fondamentales d'une puissance occupante. Cette occupation cesse-t-elle de relever d'un régime licite, eu égard notamment à certaines « mesures visant à garantir les propres intérêts de l'occupant »⁸? S'il en est ainsi, quelles sont les conséquences juridiques pour le peuple sous occupation, la puissance occupante et les États tiers? L'avis en question pourrait non seulement apporter une précision juridique sur les conséquences de l'occupation israélienne des territoires palestiniens mais aussi accentuer la pression sur la communauté internationale pour contraindre Israël à s'acquitter de ses obligations en tant que puissance occupante. Certes, l'avis consultatif de 2004 sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé a eu peu d'effets à ce jour. Toutefois, on ne doit pas oublier que l'ONU avait demandé quatre avis consultatifs à la Cour internationale de Justice pour l'éclairer sur l'attitude à adopter face à l'occupation du Sud-Ouest africain (actuelle Namibie) par l'Afrique du Sud.

9. L'avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé portait sur la construction d'un mur en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est. N'ayant pas été saisie de la question du statut juridique de Gaza, la Cour semble s'être limitée à confirmer l'application aux deux

⁴ Avis consultatif, op. cit., par. 78.

⁵ Ibid., n^{os} 101, 111 et 112.

⁶ Voir A. Roberts, « Prolonged Military Occupation: The Israeli-Occupied Territories since 1967 », American Journal of International Law, vol. 84, 1990, p. 55 à 57 et 95.

⁷ O. Ben-Naftali, A. M. Gross & K. Michaeli, « Illegal Occupation: Framing the Occupied Palestinian Territory », Berkeley Journal of International Law, vol. 23, 2006, p. 551 à 614.

⁸ E. Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation, Princeton University Press, 1993, p. 216.

entités visées du statut de territoire sous occupation⁹. Ce facteur, conjugué à l'évacuation par Israël de ses colonies de peuplement et le retrait, en 2005, de ses Forces de défense de Gaza où elles étaient stationnées en permanence, accrédite l'idée que Gaza n'est plus un territoire occupé. Le 15 septembre 2005, le Premier Ministre Sharon a déclaré devant l'Assemblée générale que le retrait israélien de Gaza mettait fin aux obligations d'Israël envers ce territoire. Par la suite, dans des interventions devant la Cour suprême israélienne, le Gouvernement israélien a soutenu qu'il n'occupait plus Gaza et qu'il n'était plus lié par le droit international humanitaire dans ses décisions concernant les habitants de ce territoire. Récemment, le 8 juillet, le Comité ministériel israélien aux affaires législatives a approuvé un projet de loi reconnaissant Gaza comme une « entité étrangère ». En substance, la position israélienne est que la responsabilité de la population civile de Gaza, y compris le fonctionnement de son économie, incombe uniquement à l'Autorité palestinienne.

10. La thèse selon laquelle l'occupation israélienne de Gaza a pris fin ne s'appuie sur aucun fondement juridique ou factuel. C'est ce que souligne une étude intitulée Disengaged Occupiers: The Legal Status of Gaza, par Sari Bashi et Kenneth Mann, publiée en janvier 2007 par l'ONG israélienne Gisha : Centre juridique pour la liberté de circulation. Cette étude montre de manière convaincante qu'en droit international, le critère pour déterminer si un territoire est sous occupation est moins la présence permanente de l'armée de la puissance occupante sur le territoire occupé que le contrôle effectif qu'elle exerce sur celui-ci¹⁰. Les progrès technologiques permettent à Israël de garder le contrôle sur des aspects importants de la vie quotidienne à Gaza sans y maintenir une présence militaire permanente. Cela passe par :

a) Un contrôle effectif des six voies d'accès terrestre à Gaza : le point de passage d'Erez est pratiquement fermé aux Palestiniens voulant se rendre en Israël ou en Cisjordanie. Celui de Rafah reliant l'Égypte à la Cisjordanie et qui est régi par l'Accord réglant les déplacements et le passage, conclu sous l'égide des États-Unis, par Israël et l'Autorité palestinienne le 15 novembre 2005, a été fermé par Israël depuis juin 2006 durant de longues périodes. Le principal point d'entrée de marchandises, à Karni, est strictement surveillé par Israël et depuis juin 2006, il a également fait l'objet de fermetures répétées, ce qui a eu des conséquences désastreuses pour l'économie palestinienne;

b) Un contrôle effectué par le biais d'incursions militaires, de tirs de roquette et de bangs supersoniques : certains quartiers de Gaza sont déclarés zones interdites aux habitants qui risquent d'être fusillés s'ils y pénètrent;

c) Un contrôle total de l'espace aérien de Gaza et de ses eaux territoriales;

d) Un contrôle des registres de l'état civil des Palestiniens : la détermination des statuts de « Palestinien » et de résident de Gaza et de la Cisjordanie est sous le contrôle de l'armée israélienne. Même lorsqu'il est ouvert, le point de passage de Rafah n'offre l'accès à Gaza qu'aux seuls détenteurs d'une ⁹ Avis consultatif, op. cit., par. 101.

¹⁰ Voir États-Unis c. Wilhelm List et al. (affaire des otages), United Nations War Crimes Commission, Law Reports of Trials of War Criminals, vol. III, 1949, p. 56; République démocratique du Congo c. Ouganda, C.I.J. Recueils 2005, par. 173 et 174.

pièce d'identité palestinienne; ainsi, contrôler les registres de l'état civil palestinien c'est aussi garder le contrôle sur qui peut entrer à Gaza ou en sortir. Depuis 2000 et à quelques exceptions près, Israël n'a pas autorisé de nouvelles inscriptions sur les registres de l'état civil palestinien;

e) Un contrôle de la capacité d'exercice de fonctions gouvernementales par l'Autorité palestinienne : Israël contrôle la capacité de l'Autorité palestinienne d'assurer aux habitants de Gaza et de la Cisjordanie l'offre de services et le fonctionnement des organes gouvernementaux, y compris un contrôle sur le transfert des retenues d'impôts évaluées à 50 % des recettes d'exploitation de l'Autorité palestinienne. En outre, Gaza et la Cisjordanie sont deux provinces d'un même segment territorial, avec un système d'institutions civiles unifiées et pareilles sur toute leur étendue, financées par le même budget principal et gouvernées par une autorité centrale unique. C'est dire donc que par le contrôle direct qu'il continue d'exercer en Cisjordanie, Israël continue d'exercer un contrôle indirect à Gaza.

11. Le fait que Gaza demeure un territoire sous occupation signifie que les mesures prises par Israël la concernant doivent être confrontées aux normes du droit international humanitaire et des droits de l'homme.

12. Depuis juin 2006, Israël procède à la fois à des opérations armées de grande envergure et à de brèves incursions militaires dans Gaza.

13. Au cours des opérations « Pluies d'été » et « Nuages d'automne », entre juin et novembre 2006, les Forces de défense israéliennes ont mené 364 incursions militaires à différents endroits de Gaza, appuyées par des tirs continus d'artillerie et de missiles air-sol. Les missiles, les obus et les bulldozers ont détruit ou gravement endommagé des maisons, des écoles, des hôpitaux, des mosquées, des édifices publics, des ponts, des canalisations d'eau et des réseaux d'égouts. Le 27 juin, l'armée de l'air israélienne a détruit les six transformateurs de l'unique centrale produisant de l'électricité à usage domestique de la bande de Gaza, qui fournissait 43 % de l'électricité consommée chaque jour à Gaza. En conséquence, la moitié de la population de Gaza a été privée d'électricité pendant plusieurs mois. Des champs et des plantations d'agrumes ont été rasés au bulldozer, et pendant la première phase de l'opération « Pluies d'été », des F-16 ont survolé Gaza à basse altitude et à une vitesse supersonique, provoquant une terreur générale parmi la population. Les offensives militaires israéliennes ont contraint des milliers de Palestiniens à désertir leur maison.

14. Beit Hanoun, ville de 40 000 habitants dans le nord de la bande de Gaza, a été la cible d'une offensive militaire particulièrement violente en novembre, pendant l'opération « Nuages d'automne ». Au cours d'une incursion qui a duré six jours, les FDI ont tué 82 Palestiniens, dont au moins une moitié de civils (comprenant 21 enfants). Plus de 260 personnes, parmi lesquelles 60 enfants, ont été blessées, et des centaines d'hommes âgés de 16 à 40 ans ont été arrêtés. Les 40 000 habitants ont été confinés chez eux par un couvre-feu tandis que les chars et les bulldozers israéliens saccageaient la ville, détruisant 279 maisons, une mosquée vieille de 850 ans, des édifices publics, des réseaux électriques, des écoles et des hôpitaux, rasant des vergers et défonçant les routes, les canalisations d'eau et les réseaux d'égouts. L'attaque menée par Israël contre Beit Hanoun a atteint son paroxysme le 8 novembre 2006, avec le pilonnage d'une maison où 19 personnes ont péri et 55 autres ont été blessées. Située dans un quartier densément peuplé, la maison était habitée par la famille Al-Athamnah, qui a perdu 16 de ses membres ce jour funeste.

Sur les 19 civils tués, il y avait sept femmes et huit enfants. Malheureusement, Israël a refusé qu'une enquête internationale soit conduite sur cette affaire. Il a refusé l'entrée de son territoire et du territoire palestinien occupé à une mission mandatée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme, que l'archevêque Desmond Tutu aurait dirigée. Le refus d'Israël d'autoriser une enquête internationale sur la tuerie des 19 personnes à Beit Hanoun, ou de conduire lui-même une enquête impartiale, est regrettable puisqu'il paraît indiscutable que le pilonnage aveugle d'un quartier civil n'abritant aucun objectif militaire visible constitue un crime de guerre.

15. Des incursions militaires sporadiques ont été menées à Gaza durant les quatre derniers mois. Au cours de la période du 20 au 27 juin 2007, les FDI ont opéré sept incursions dans Gaza, causant la mort d'au moins 17 Palestiniens (parmi lesquels six civils, dont deux enfants) et en blessant 39 autres. Du 27 juin au 3 juillet, 19 Palestiniens ont été tués : 8 par des obus de chars des FDI (parmi les victimes, un garçon de 10 ans); 7 par des frappes aériennes israéliennes; 3 au cours d'affrontements armés avec les soldats des FDI et le dernier, qui avait été atteint plus tôt, a succombé à ses blessures.

16. Israël a longuement justifié ses attaques et incursions en déclarant qu'il s'agissait d'opérations de défense préventive contre le lancement de roquettes Qassam sur Israël, visant l'arrestation ou l'élimination de militants présumés ou la destruction de passages souterrains. Certes, les tirs de roquettes sur Israël par des milices palestiniennes en dehors de toute cible militaire, qui ont tué et blessé des Israéliens sont intolérables et constituent un crime de guerre¹¹. Il n'en demeure pas moins que des questions préoccupantes se posent au sujet de la proportionnalité de la riposte militaire israélienne qui n'a pas fait de distinction entre les cibles militaires et civiles. On peut fort bien soutenir qu'Israël a transgressé les règles les plus fondamentales du droit international humanitaire, commettant des crimes de guerre au sens de l'article 147 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et de l'article 85 du Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949, relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux (Protocole I). Au nombre de ces crimes, des attaques lancées directement contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil et des attaques lancées sans distinction entre les objectifs militaires et les civils ou les biens de caractère civil (art. 48, 51 4) et 52 1) du Protocole I); le recours excessif à la force par des attaques disproportionnées contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil (art. 51 4) et 51 5) du Protocole I); le fait de semer la terreur parmi la population civile (art. 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et art. 51 2) du Protocole I); et la destruction de biens non justifiée par la nécessité militaire (art. 53 de la quatrième Convention de Genève).

17. Gaza est devenue un territoire assiégé et coupé du monde sous l'effet conjugué des facteurs suivants : les sanctions économiques imposées par Israël et par l'Occident à la suite du succès électoral du Hamas au scrutin de janvier 2006; la capture du caporal Gilad Shalit en juin 2006; et la prise du pouvoir par le Hamas en juin 2007. Les frontières extérieures sont pour la plupart fermées et ne sont ouvertes que pour permettre un minimum d'importations et d'exportations, et des voyages à l'étranger. Cela a débouché sur une crise humanitaire, soigneusement orchestrée par Israël, qui punit la population de Gaza sans que cela ne déclenche d'alarme en Occident. Il s'agit d'un étranglement maîtrisé qui contrevient gravement aux normes des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire et qui semble, malgré tout, s'inscrire dans les limites généreuses de la tolérance internationale.

¹¹ Voir Human Rights Watch, Indiscriminate Fire: Palestinian Rocket Attacks on Israel and Israeli Shelling in the Gaza Strip, juillet 2007.

18. Il existe six portes d'entrée à Gaza, toutes sous contrôle israélien, dont les deux principales sont Rafah, le point de passage emprunté par les habitants de Gaza pour se rendre en Égypte, et Karni, poste commercial pour l'importation et l'exportation de marchandises. Elles sont régies par l'Accord réglant les déplacements et le passage, qui prévoit le libre déplacement des habitants de Gaza vers l'Égypte en passant par Rafah, et une augmentation substantielle du nombre de camions transportant les exportations par le poste de Karni. Depuis le 25 juin 2006, suite à l'arrestation du caporal Shalit et surtout depuis la mi-juin 2007, après la prise du pouvoir par le Hamas, le point de passage de Rafah a été fermé pendant de longues périodes, Israël ayant empêché le personnel de la Mission d'assistance frontalière de l'Union européenne, chargée d'administrer ce poste, de s'acquitter de sa mission. Entre la mi-juin et le début d'août, quelque 6 000 Palestiniens ont été bloqués du côté égyptien de la frontière, sans logement décent ni installations, et privés du droit de retourner chez eux. Plus de 30 personnes ont trouvé la mort durant cette attente. La terrible situation endurée par les civils palestiniens n'a nullement été prise en considération par Israël lorsqu'il a décidé de fermer le passage de Rafah. Le point de passage de Karni a lui aussi été fermé de longues périodes au cours des 18 derniers mois, plus précisément depuis la mi-juin 2007.

19. Le siège de Gaza a eu de lourdes conséquences sur son économie. L'emploi en a énormément souffert. Le 9 juillet 2007, l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) a annoncé qu'il avait mis un terme à tous ses projets de construction à Gaza parce qu'il n'arrivait plus à trouver des matériaux de construction tels que le ciment. Cela a compromis 121 000 emplois occupés par des personnes travaillant à la construction de nouvelles écoles, de maisons, d'installations de distribution d'eau et de dispensaires. De plus, 80 % des 3 900 usines fonctionnant à Gaza ont été contraintes de fermer faute de matériaux de construction devant être importés par le poste de Karni. Cela a contribué à détériorer les moyens d'existence de 30 000 personnes. La fermeture de la frontière entrave également l'exportation de produits agricoles, privant les agriculteurs de leur revenu. La pêche a pratiquement disparu, conséquence de l'interdiction de pêcher le long de la côte de Gaza, rigoureusement appliquée par les gardes-côtes israéliens. Les fonctionnaires qui conservent, en théorie, leur emploi, ne perçoivent plus de salaire, pénalisés par le refus d'Israël de transférer les retenues fiscales dues à l'Autorité palestinienne. La Banque mondiale a estimé à 3 200 le nombre de sociétés qui ont fermé en juin, laissant derrière elles 65 000 chômeurs.

20. Par ailleurs, l'abrogation du Code des douanes de Gaza par les autorités israéliennes a eu pour effet de bloquer dans des ports israéliens 1 300 conteneurs de biens commerciaux destinés à Gaza, entraînant une pénurie des produits de première nécessité tels que le lait en poudre, le lait pour bébé et l'huile végétale. Des incursions militaires ont obligé des écoles à fermer. Selon le Ministère de la santé palestinien, 81 produits inscrits sur la liste des médicaments de base, du fait de la crise financière, étaient en rupture de stock. La santé mentale constitue un grave problème à cause des traumatismes causés par les incursions militaires.

21. La pauvreté est généralisée. Plus de 90 % de la population vit en dessous du seuil de pauvreté officiellement défini. L'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies et le Programme alimentaire mondial fournissent une aide alimentaire à 1,1 million d'habitants de Gaza sur une population de 1,4 million. Cette aide alimentaire consiste en rations de farine, de riz, de sucre, d'huile de tournesol, de lait en poudre et de lentilles. Rares sont ceux qui peuvent se permettre d'acheter de la viande, du poisson (quasiment introuvable, de toute façon, à cause de l'interdiction de pêcher), des légumes ou des fruits. Le moral est bas. À Gaza, le tissu même de la société est menacé par le siège.

22. Dans un rapport du 11 juillet 2007, la Banque mondiale a indiqué que la fermeture prolongée des frontières de Gaza pouvait aboutir à l'effondrement économique « irréversible » de Gaza. Le 19 juillet, la Commissaire générale de l'UNRWA, M^{me} Karen AbuZayd, a averti que sans l'ouverture du point de passage de Karni, l'économie locale s'effondrerait.

23. Par son siège de Gaza, Israël a violé toute une série d'obligations qui lui incombent, en vertu tant du droit international des droits de l'homme que du droit international humanitaire. Le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels dispose que chaque personne a droit « à un niveau de vie suffisant pour elle-même et sa famille, y compris une nourriture, un vêtement et un logement suffisants », le droit d'être à l'abri de la faim et le droit à l'alimentation (art. 11) et que chaque personne a droit à la santé, autant de droits gravement violés. Par-dessus tout, Israël a enfreint l'interdiction d'infliger des châtiments collectifs à une population occupée, énoncée à l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Le recours systématique et excessif à la force contre des civils et des biens de caractère civil, la destruction d'installations de desserte en eau et électricité, le dynamitage d'édifices publics, les restrictions à la liberté de circulation, la fermeture des points de passage et les conséquences de ces mesures sur la santé publique, l'alimentation, la vie des familles et l'état psychologique du peuple palestinien constituent une punition collective flagrante. La capture du caporal Gilad Shalit et le lancement incessant de roquettes Qassam sur Israël ne sauraient être tolérés. Pour autant, ces actes ne peuvent justifier la punition brutale de tout un peuple, comme le fait Israël.

24. Gaza n'est pas un État auquel d'autres États peuvent librement imposer des sanctions économiques en vue de créer une crise humanitaire, ou entreprendre une intervention militaire disproportionnée mettant en péril la population civile au nom de la légitime défense. C'est un territoire sous occupation dont tous les États devraient se préoccuper du bien-être et promouvoir le progrès social. Selon l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, c'est une obligation pour tout État partie à la quatrième Convention de Genève « de s'assurer du respect par Israël du droit international humanitaire tel que défini dans cette convention »¹². Israël a enfreint des obligations erga omnes dont la violation préoccupe tous les États, qui doivent en conséquence y mettre fin. En premier lieu, la puissance occupante, Israël est tenu de cesser de violer le droit international humanitaire. Mais d'autres États ayant pris part au siège de Gaza ont également porté atteinte à ce droit et doivent cesser leurs faits illicites. Que Gaza soit dirigé par un « groupe terroriste » n'est pas une excuse. La notion de terrorisme est relative, spécialement dans le contexte d'une occupation, puisque la résistance à l'occupation sera toujours vue comme du terrorisme par la puissance occupante et ses complices. Les combattants de la résistance française étaient traités de terroristes par l'occupant allemand, et les membres de la South West Africa People's Organization, qui luttait contre l'occupation sud-africaine de la Namibie, étaient des terroristes pour le régime sud-africain. Aujourd'hui, ces résistants sont considérés comme des héros et des patriotes. Telle est la conséquence inévitable de la résistance à l'occupation.

¹² Avis consultatif, op. cit. par. 159.

IV. Les droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est

25. On peut sans doute noter une amélioration dans la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie depuis la mi-juin. La prise de pouvoir à Gaza par le Hamas a entraîné un rapprochement entre le Gouvernement d'urgence du Président Abbas conduit par le Premier Ministre Salam Fayyad, et Israël d'une part, et les États-Unis et le Quatuor de l'autre. En voici quelques exemples :

- La libération de 255 prisonniers palestiniens, appartenant principalement au Fatah;
- Le déblocage de 119 millions dollars des États-Unis correspondant aux taxes qu'Israël perçoit pour le compte de l'Autorité palestinienne sur les marchandises importées dans le territoire palestinien occupé et saisies par Israël depuis l'élection du Gouvernement du Hamas en janvier 2006;
- L'amnistie accordée à 178 militants du Fatah recherchés par Israël;
- Les promesses, pour l'instant non tenues, de cesser les incursions militaires en Cisjordanie, de réduire le nombre des points de contrôle et d'éliminer les avant-postes de colons;
- La proposition des États-Unis de fournir une aide d'un montant de 190 millions de dollars;
- La bénédiction du Quatuor qui, le 19 juillet, a déclaré son soutien au gouvernement palestinien de M. Fayyad, et sa position en faveur d'une aide financière directe et rapide à son gouvernement « pour contribuer à réformer, protéger et renforcer les infrastructures et les institutions vitales du pays, et pour apporter un soutien à l'état de droit ».

26. Le soutien prêté récemment au Gouvernement de M. Fayyad en Cisjordanie n'a modifié ni adouci en rien la position idéologique d'Israël qui constitue une violation grave des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie. La construction du mur (ou barrière) se poursuit et les colonies de peuplement continuent de s'étendre, les points de contrôle sont toujours en vigueur; la judaïsation de Jérusalem se prolonge; et l'annexion de facto de la vallée du Jourdain perdure. En outre, au moment de la rédaction de ce texte, des incursions militaires, certes dirigées principalement contre le Hamas, se poursuivent sans relâche en Cisjordanie, ainsi que les destructions de maisons.

A. Le mur

1. Contexte général

27. Le mur qu'Israël est en train de construire, en grande partie sur le territoire palestinien, est manifestement illégal. Dans son avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a affirmé que cette mesure est contraire au droit international et qu'Israël était dans l'obligation d'en cesser l'édification et de démanteler les portions de l'ouvrage déjà en place. Israël ne prétend plus que le mur sert des objectifs de sécurité, et admet à présent que celui-ci a été en partie construit pour englober des colonies de Cisjordanie et les mettre sous la protection d'Israël. Le fait que 76 % des colons de Cisjordanie sont protégés par le mur suffit à le prouver.

28. La longueur prévue du mur est de 721 kilomètres, et 59% en a déjà été terminé. Deux cent kilomètres du mur ont été construits depuis l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice qui le déclare illégal. On estime qu'à la fin des travaux, quelque 60 000 Palestiniens de Cisjordanie de 42 villages et agglomérations vivront dans la zone d'accès réglementé située entre le mur et la Ligne verte. Cette zone constituera 10,2 % des terres palestiniennes en Cisjordanie. Plus de 500 000 Palestiniens vivent à moins d'un kilomètre du mur, du côté est, et doivent le franchir pour se rendre dans leurs champs ou sur leur lieu de travail ou maintenir des relations avec leur famille. Quatre-vingt pour cent du mur se trouve en territoire palestinien et il s'avance sur 22 kilomètres en Cisjordanie afin d'englober le bloc de colonies d'Ariel. Dans la zone d'accès réglementé se trouve une bonne partie des ressources en eau les plus précieuses de Cisjordanie. L'achèvement du mur autour du bloc de Ma'aleh Adumim séparera Jérusalem-Est du reste de la Cisjordanie, limitant ainsi l'accès au travail, à la santé, à l'éducation et aux lieux de culte. Plus au sud, le tracé du mur autour du bloc de colonies de Gush Etzion coupera la dernière route entre Bethlehem et Jérusalem et isolera la majorité de l'arrière-pays agricole de Bethléem.

29. Sur le plan humanitaire, le mur a de lourdes conséquences pour les Palestiniens qui vivent dans la zone d'accès réglementé (située entre le mur et la Ligne verte). Il les sépare de leurs lieux de travail, des écoles, des universités et des centres médicaux spécialisés, et fragmente considérablement leur vie communautaire. En outre, il les prive d'un accès permanent aux services médicaux d'urgence. Les Palestiniens qui vivent à l'est du mur alors que leurs champs se trouvent dans la zone d'accès réglementé ont de graves problèmes économiques, parce qu'ils ne peuvent pas y accéder pour faire les récoltes ou faire paître leurs animaux sans autorisation. Or, les permis ne sont pas accordés facilement. Ceux qui veulent en obtenir un se heurtent à de nombreuses difficultés, notamment des démarches administratives vexatoires et délibérément longues ou compliquées. Le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires a estimé que 60 % des familles d'agriculteurs qui avaient des terres à l'ouest du mur ne pouvaient plus y accéder. En outre, l'ouverture et la fermeture des portes permettant d'accéder à la zone sont réglementées de manière extrêmement arbitraire, ce qui aggrave encore la situation. Une enquête réalisée par le Bureau en novembre 2006 dans 57 localités situées près du mur a montré que les Palestiniens ne pouvaient utiliser pendant toute l'année que 26 des 61 portes, et seulement pendant 64 % de l'horaire d'ouverture officiel. Les difficultés endurées par les Palestiniens qui vivent dans la zone d'accès réglementé et dans l'enceinte du mur ont déjà poussé environ 15 000 personnes à quitter la région.

2. Jérusalem-Est

30. La construction de 75 kilomètres de mur à Jérusalem-Est est pratiquement terminée aujourd'hui, à l'exception d'une section de 200 mètres entre Dayiyat et Beit Hanina. Ce mur, qui passe à travers les quartiers palestiniens, coupant la population palestinienne en deux, est une mesure d'ingénierie sociale qui vise à judaïser la ville en réduisant le nombre de Palestiniens qui y vivent. Son tracé peut difficilement être justifié par des motifs de sécurité.

3. Indemnisation pour les dommages causés par la construction du mur

31. Dans son avis consultatif de 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a affirmé qu'Israël avait l'obligation de réparer les dommages occasionnés aux Palestiniens par la construction du mur. Au cas où une restitution en nature s'avérerait matériellement impossible, a déclaré la Cour, Israël « serait tenu [...] d'indemniser, conformément aux règles du droit international applicables en la matière, toutes les personnes physiques ou morales qui auraient subi un préjudice matériel quelconque du fait de la construction du mur »¹³. En 2004, l'Assemblée générale a ordonné la mise en place du Registre de l'ONU concernant les dommages causés par la construction du mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé (Registre des dommages) et la mise en place d'un conseil chargé d'administrer le Registre. Le 15 décembre 2006, soit plus de deux années plus tard, comme ces mesures n'avaient toujours pas été appliquées, l'Assemblée générale a prié le Secrétaire général, lors de la dixième session extraordinaire d'urgence, dans la résolution ES-10/17 de lui présenter, dans un délai de six mois, un rapport sur les progrès accomplis dans ce domaine. C'est en réponse à cette demande que, le 10 mai 2007, le Secrétaire général a nommé Harumi Hori du Japon, Matti Paavo Pellonpää de Finlande et Michael F. Raboin des États-Unis membres du Conseil. Celui-ci s'est réuni du 14 au 16 mai 2007 et prévoit de se réunir à nouveau en août/septembre.

32. La réparation des violations des droits de l'homme des Palestiniens et des violations des règles de droit international humanitaire du fait de la construction du mur est une question relative aux droits de l'homme qui relève du mandat actuel du Rapporteur spécial. Le Rapporteur spécial partage les préoccupations exprimées par les parties prenantes et la société civile sur le Conseil et ses fonctions. Tout d'abord, il faut mentionner la manière opaque avec laquelle le Conseil a été nommé. De nombreux fonctionnaires des Nations Unies qui occupent des postes semblables sont élus, d'autres sont nommés après de larges consultations. Le fait que le Secrétaire général n'ait pas choisi une méthode plus transparente pour nommer le Conseil, et le fait que celui-ci soit composé de ressortissants d'États du nord, qui tout qualifiés qu'ils soient, viennent de pays qui entretiennent des relations étroites avec Israël, signifie inévitablement que les membres du Conseil devront surmonter les réserves des parties prenantes et de la société civile. Ensuite, certains se demandent comment le Conseil va percevoir son rôle. Quels critères va-t-il adopter pour décider si les réclamations sont recevables ou non et pour les vérifier? Prendra-t-il en compte les préjudices non matériels comme les séquelles sur la santé mentale et la vie familiale? Se limitera-t-il au préjudice matériel? Insistera-t-il pour avoir accès aux territoires palestiniens occupés afin d'évaluer pleinement les dommages en question ou s'en remettra-t-il à Israël quand leur accès lui sera refusé? S'assurera-t-il que les Palestiniens sont informés de leur droit de demander réparation? Y-aura-t-il des consultations avec la société civile?

¹³ Avis consultatif, op.cit., par. 152 et 153.

B. Colonies et colons

33. Il y a quelque 140 colonies juives et 100 « avant-postes de colons » (non autorisés mais parrainés et financés par les ministères d'État) établis en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est. Ces colonies sont illégales car elles constituent une violation du paragraphe 6 de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Leur illégalité a été confirmée à l'unanimité par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif sur le mur. Malgré leur caractère illégal et leur condamnation unanime par la communauté internationale, le Gouvernement israélien continue à laisser les colonies se développer, dans certains cas ouvertement et avec sa pleine approbation. En 2007, le Comité d'organisation de la municipalité de Jérusalem a approuvé des plans de construction de trois nouvelles colonies à Jérusalem-Est, l'une au sud de Ramallah et deux au nord-ouest de Bethléem. Le plus souvent, cependant, le développement se fait discrètement, sous le couvert d'une « croissance naturelle », qui atteint pour les colonies un taux moyen de 5,5 %, contre 1,7 % pour les villes israéliennes. Parfois, les colonies s'étendent illégalement au regard du droit israélien, mais rien n'est fait pour faire respecter la loi. De nombreux avant-postes, qui sont le prélude à l'implantation de colonies, ont été mis en place, et quand on menace de les démanteler, les menaces ne sont pas mises à exécution. Du fait de cette expansion, la population des colons de Cisjordanie atteint environ 260 000 personnes, celle de Jérusalem-Est près de 200 000. Comme indiqué plus haut, la construction actuelle du mur en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est vise à englober la plupart des colonies dans son enceinte. De plus, les trois grands blocs de colonies de Gush Etzion, Ma'aleh Adumim et Ariel divisent en fait le territoire palestinien en cantons, détruisant ainsi l'intégrité territoriale de la Palestine.

34. En octobre 2006, l'ONG israélienne La paix maintenant a publié une étude qui montrait, sur la base de cartes et de chiffres établis par le Gouvernement, que près de 40 % des terres occupées par les colonies israéliennes en Cisjordanie appartenaient en bien propre à des citoyens palestiniens. Ces données montrent par exemple que 86 % de la plus grande colonie de Ma'aleh Adumim et 35 % de la colonie d'Ariel se trouvent sur des propriétés privées palestiniennes, et que plus de 3 400 bâtiments situés dans des colonies sont construits sur des terres appartenant en bien propre à des citoyens palestiniens. Le 6 juillet 2007, La paix maintenant a publié une autre étude, basée sur des données officielles publiées par le Gouvernement israélien suite à une décision de justice, qui montre que les colons utilisent seulement 12 % des terres qui leur ont été allouées, mais qu'un tiers du territoire qu'ils occupent en réalité s'étend au-delà. Quatre-vingt-dix pour cent des colonies s'étendent au-delà de leurs frontières officielles malgré la quantité de terres allouées qu'ils n'utilisent pas. D'une part, l'État affecte des terrains gigantesques aux colonies, disproportionnés à la taille de celles-ci, afin de dissuader les constructions palestiniennes dans ces zones. D'autre part, une fois que la zone est fermée aux Palestiniens, les colons commencent à saisir les terres palestiniennes adjacentes, souvent privées, qui se trouvent en dehors de leur ressort.

C. La vallée du Jourdain

35. Israël a abandonné le projet qu'il avait de construire le mur le long de l'axe du territoire palestinien occupé et de s'approprier formellement la vallée du Jourdain. Il exerce toutefois son autorité sur la région, qui représente 25 % de la Cisjordanie, tout comme il le fait sur la zone fermée entre le mur et la Ligne verte, à la frontière occidentale de la Palestine. Son intention de rester définitivement dans la vallée du Jourdain transparaît non seulement dans ses déclarations officielles, mais aussi à travers les restrictions imposées aux Palestiniens, par les contrôles exercés et l'augmentation du nombre de colonies dans la vallée.

36. Les Palestiniens qui vivent dans la vallée du Jourdain doivent détenir une pièce d'identité avec une adresse dans la vallée, obligatoire pour pouvoir s'y déplacer sans permis israélien. Les autres Palestiniens, y compris les propriétaires fonciers et les travailleurs non résidents, doivent demander un permis, qui dans la pratique n'autorise pas son détenteur à passer la nuit dans la vallée, ce qui l'oblige à faire des allers et retours quotidiens et à perdre du temps aux postes de contrôle qui relient la vallée du Jourdain au reste de la Cisjordanie. La vallée du Jourdain se trouve donc isolée.

D. Postes de contrôle et barrages routiers, obstacles à la liberté de circulation

37. Les postes de contrôle et les barrages routiers constituent une atteinte à la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie, et ont des conséquences désastreuses pour leur vie personnelle et l'économie de la région. On dénombre environ 550 de ces obstacles à la liberté de circulation, plus de 80 postes de contrôle gardés et 470 barrages non gardés, constitués de portes verrouillées, de monticules de terre, de blocs de béton et de tranchées. Par ailleurs, des milliers de postes de contrôle temporaires, connus sous le nom de « postes de contrôle volants » sont installés chaque année par les patrouilles armées israéliennes sur les routes qui sillonnent la Cisjordanie, pour des périodes limitées allant d'une demi-heure à plusieurs heures. En 2006, on a enregistré environ 7 000 de ces postes de contrôle volants¹⁴. Il y avait 488 postes de contrôle volants en juin 2007 et 409 en juillet 2007. Ces postes divisent la Cisjordanie en quatre zones distinctes : le nord (Naplouse, Djénine et Tulkarm), le centre (Ramallah), le sud (Hébron) et Jérusalem-Est. À l'intérieur de ces zones, des enclaves ont été créées par la mise en place d'un réseau de postes et de barrages. Qui plus est, les autoroutes réservées aux Israéliens fragmentent le territoire palestinien occupé en 10 petits cantons, ou bantoustans. Les villes sont coupées les unes des autres puisqu'il faut un permis pour passer d'une zone à l'autre et que ce permis est difficile à obtenir. Les postes de contrôle servent essentiellement les intérêts des colons, dans la mesure où ils sont placés près des colonies ou près des routes de contournement réservées aux seuls colons.

¹⁴ Amnesty International, Une occupation persistante : les Palestiniens de Cisjordanie en état de siège (juin 2007), p. 16.

38. À cause des postes de contrôle et du mauvais état des routes secondaires que les Palestiniens sont forcés d'utiliser afin de libérer les routes principales pour les colons, des trajets qui auparavant s'effectuaient en 10 à 20 minutes prennent maintenant deux à trois heures. Israël justifie ces mesures ainsi que le comportement de ses soldats aux postes de contrôle par des considérations de sécurité et prétend avoir ainsi réussi à empêcher le passage de nombreux candidats à l'attentat-suicide. L'on peut cependant envisager différemment la question de la sécurité. Les Palestiniens, eux, sont d'avis que ces mesures ont été conçues, en premier lieu, pour simplifier la vie des colons et faciliter leur traversée de la Cisjordanie sans avoir à entrer en contact avec les Palestiniens et, en second lieu, pour humilier les Palestiniens, en les traitant comme des êtres humains inférieurs. Cette situation engendre une colère réprimée qui constitue, à long terme, une menace bien plus grave pour la sécurité d'Israël.

E. Incursions militaires

39. Depuis l'élection du gouvernement du Hamas en janvier 2006, les FDI ont intensifié leurs incursions militaires en Cisjordanie. Ces raids militaires, au nombre de plusieurs centaines par mois (641 en juillet 2007), ont provoqué la mort d'environ 200 Palestiniens, blessé plus d'un autre millier, et des opérations de perquisition ont entraîné des dommages matériels et plusieurs centaines d'arrestations chaque mois. Le Gouvernement israélien a annoncé, à la suite de la prise de contrôle de la Cisjordanie par le Hamas, qu'il mettrait un terme à ses incursions militaires en Cisjordanie en témoignage de bonne volonté. À ce jour, il n'y a aucun signe d'un quelconque arrêt desdites opérations. Les incursions militaires des FDI qui sont la cause de morts, de blessures, de perquisitions et de dommages matériels, restent un élément de la vie quotidienne en Cisjordanie.

F. La situation humanitaire

40. La construction du mur, l'expansion des colonies de peuplement, les restrictions à la liberté de circulation, les destructions de maisons et les incursions militaires ont eu des conséquences désastreuses sur l'économie, la santé, l'éducation, la vie familiale et le niveau de vie des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie. Depuis 2006, la situation s'est détériorée à cause de deux facteurs : tout d'abord, le fait que le Gouvernement israélien refuse de verser à l'Autorité palestinienne les taxes d'un montant de 50 à 60 millions de dollars par mois qu'il perçoit pour le compte de cette dernière sur les marchandises importées dans le territoire palestinien occupé; ensuite le régime de sanctions imposé par les États-Unis, l'Union européenne et les autres pays occidentaux (implicitement approuvé par le Quatuor), qui se traduit par la réduction de l'aide financière et des restrictions bancaires sur le transfert de fonds à l'Autorité palestinienne et les autres institutions palestiniennes. Comme l'a déclaré Karen AbuZayd, la Commissaire générale de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) :

« Il y a une ironie stupéfiante dans le contraste entre l'engagement universel pour l'élimination de la pauvreté (exprimé dans la Déclaration du Millénaire pour le développement des Nations Unies) et la décision d'imposer aux

Palestiniens un des régimes de sanctions les plus draconiens de l'histoire récente, laissant ainsi s'installer une misère généralisée. »¹⁵

41. Au cours du mois dernier, Israël a transféré 119 millions de dollars de taxes d'importation qu'il avait illégalement saisis à l'Autorité palestinienne, et les États occidentaux du Quatuor se sont engagés à recommencer à envoyer des fonds à l'Autorité palestinienne (dans la mesure où ils ne servent pas les intérêts du Hamas à Gaza). Au moment de l'établissement du présent document, aucun changement n'est perceptible dans la situation humanitaire en Cisjordanie, du fait d'une occupation persistante, des violations des droits de l'homme décrites dans ce rapport et du refus d'Israël de verser à l'Autorité palestinienne la totalité des taxes qui lui sont dues. La pauvreté et le chômage sont à leur niveau le plus élevé, la santé et l'éducation sont perturbés par les incursions militaires, le mur et les postes de contrôle; et le tissu social de la société est menacé.

Conclusion

42. La situation en Cisjordanie n'est peut-être pas aussi grave qu'à Gaza. Cependant, ce n'est qu'une question de degré. En outre, comme à Gaza, la situation humanitaire préoccupante en Cisjordanie résulte essentiellement des violations du droit international par Israël. Le mur constitue une violation des normes de droit international humanitaire et des droits de l'homme, d'après la Cour internationale de Justice; les colonies, une violation de la Quatrième Convention de Genève; les postes de contrôle, une violation de la liberté de circulation telle que décrite dans les instruments relatifs aux droits de l'homme; les destructions de maisons, une violation de la Quatrième Convention de Genève; la crise humanitaire en Cisjordanie, provoquée par le refus du Gouvernement d'Israël de verser les taxes à l'Autorité palestinienne et d'autres violations du droit international, entraîne le non-respect de droits énoncés dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels. Comme à Gaza, les actions d'Israël en Cisjordanie constituent une politique de châtiments collectifs contre le peuple palestinien tout à fait illégale.

V. Violation des interdictions concernant la détention arbitraire, le traitement inhumain et les exécutions extrajudiciaires

Prisonniers

43. Il y a plus de 10 000 prisonniers politiques palestiniens dans les prisons israéliennes, dont 116 femmes et 380 enfants. En juillet 2007, 255 prisonniers, appartenant principalement au Fatah, ont été libérés. Les Forces de défense israéliennes continuant quotidiennement d'arrêter un grand nombre de Palestiniens au cours de leurs incursions militaires en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, la libération de ces prisonniers ne peut être considérée que comme un tout petit pas dans la bonne voie (en juillet 2007, 391 Palestiniens ont été arrêtés : 354 en Cisjordanie et 37 à Gaza).

¹⁵ Discours prononcé au Woodrow Wilson Institute à Washington (DC) le 22 mai 2007.

Traitement inhumain

44. Des griefs sérieux continuent de se faire entendre à propos du traitement réservé aux prévenus et aux détenus. D'après un rapport sur la torture et les mauvais traitements infligés aux détenus palestiniens, publié en avril 2007 par deux organisations non gouvernementales israéliennes – Hamoked (Centre de défense des particuliers) and B'Tselem (Centre israélien d'information pour les droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés) –, les personnes arrêtées sont soumises à des brutalités et à des actes d'humiliation, leurs besoins élémentaires ne sont pas satisfaits, et celles qui sont soupçonnées de détenir des informations qui pourraient permettre de prévenir des attaques (scénarios dits de la « bombe à retardement ») sont battues et privées de sommeil pendant plus de 24 heures et subissent des mauvais traitements corporels¹⁶. Ces actes constituent sans conteste un traitement inhumain et dégradant, voire la torture.

Exécutions extrajudiciaires et assassinats ciblés

45. Les Forces de défense israéliennes continuent d'assassiner des militants présumés en les attaquant à la roquette. Depuis 2000, quelque 500 Palestiniens, dont de nombreux passants innocents, ont été tués de cette manière. Israël prétend avoir aboli la peine de mort mais cette pratique vide cette affirmation de son sens.

VI. Le rôle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en matière de protection des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés

46. L'ONU est l'ultime défenseur des droits de l'homme dans la communauté internationale, puisqu'elle dispose d'organismes, de fonctionnaires et d'institutions politiques qui se consacrent à cette cause. Dans les territoires palestiniens occupés, des organismes tels que l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient, le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, le Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement, le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, le Programme alimentaire mondial, la Banque mondiale, le Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance, l'Organisation mondiale de la santé, l'Organisation internationale du Travail et l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour l'alimentation et l'agriculture s'attachent à promouvoir le développement et à défendre les droits de l'homme. Un personnel dévoué fait vivre les idéaux de la Charte des Nations Unies en apportant son aide à un peuple vivant sous occupation. Il est en effet difficile d'imaginer comment les Palestiniens pourraient survivre sans l'aide d'organismes tels que l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient. L'histoire est malheureusement tout autre s'agissant des hautes instances politiques à New York.

47. En ce qui concerne les territoires palestiniens occupés, le Conseil de sécurité a renoncé en grande partie à ses pouvoirs au profit d'un organe amorphe connu sous le nom de Quatuor, qui se compose de l'ONU, de l'Union européenne, des États-Unis et de la Fédération de Russie. Le Quatuor, constitué de manière non officielle en 2003 sans résolution ni mandat du Conseil de sécurité ou de l'Assemblée générale, a pour mission de promouvoir la paix conformément à la Feuille de route pour la paix, à laquelle Israël a apposé 14 réserves, et qui est maintenant irrémédiablement dépassée. Dans son rapport de fin de mission établi en mai 2007, Alvaro de Soto, ancien Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et Envoyé de l'ONU auprès du Quatuor, a déclaré ce qui suit : « Dans les faits, on peut dire que le Quatuor est un petit groupe d'amis des États-Unis et que ceux-ci ne ressentent le besoin de le consulter étroitement que lorsque c'est dans leur intérêt » (par. 63). Malgré son mandat équivoque et la légalité contestable de ses actions, le Quatuor n'a jamais été remis en question par le Conseil de sécurité ni l'Assemblée générale.

¹⁶ Utterly Forbidden. The Torture and Ill-Treatment of Palestinian Detainees (avril 2007).

48. Le Quatuor n'estime pas qu'il relève de ses fonctions de promouvoir le respect des droits de l'homme, du droit international humanitaire, de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice, du droit international ou des innombrables résolutions adoptées par l'ONU sur la question des territoires palestiniens occupés. Dans ses déclarations périodiques, il ne fait allusion que de manière à peine critique à l'expansion des colonies et à la situation humanitaire dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et ne condamne jamais la poursuite de l'occupation ni les violations du droit international humanitaire (en particulier de la quatrième Convention de Genève) et des droits de l'homme perpétrées par Israël. Par ailleurs, le Quatuor n'a même jamais évoqué l'avis consultatif rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice. Depuis janvier 2006, les territoires palestiniens occupés subissent des sanctions économiques, notamment l'interruption de l'aide versée par certains donateurs, l'imposition de restrictions bancaires et la saisie de certaines taxes. Si les États-Unis, l'Union européenne et Israël doivent endosser au premier chef la responsabilité de ces actions, le Quatuor doit en endosser la responsabilité indirecte¹⁷. Dernièrement, le Quatuor s'est engagé dans une politique hostile à l'autodétermination palestinienne en apportant son soutien à une faction palestinienne, le Fatah, aux dépens de l'autre, le Hamas, et en ne faisant rien pour restaurer l'unité du peuple palestinien¹⁸. Quant à la bande de Gaza, le Quatuor semble l'avoir purement et simplement abandonnée.

49. Les actions des États-Unis et de l'Union européenne au sein du Quatuor peuvent s'expliquer par leur volonté de ne pas déplaire à leurs électeurs et leurs contraintes d'ordre interne. Pour ce qui est de la Fédération de Russie, elle semble plutôt mal à l'aise dans ce groupe et s'efforce, en vain, d'adopter une approche équilibrée vis-à-vis de la situation dans les territoires occupés. Mais quelle est donc la position de l'ONU, censée protéger la légitimité inscrite dans la Charte des ¹⁷ Dans son rapport de fin de mission de mai 2007, Alvaro de Soto déclare ce qui suit : « Stricto sensu, ce n'est pas le Quatuor qui a remis l'aide en question, contourné l'Autorité palestinienne pour la verser à des organismes œuvrant surtout dans l'humanitaire, imposé des restrictions bancaires étouffantes ou privé les Palestiniens de leur principale source de revenus. Ce sont, dans l'ordre, les États-Unis, l'Union européenne et Israël qui doivent assumer la responsabilité de ces actions. Compte tenu des amendements que nos partenaires du Quatuor ont acceptés en janvier 2006, nous pouvons dire qu'aucune de ces mesures n'émane des décisions du Quatuor, et nous en dissocier ou les critiquer ouvertement (le non-versement par Israël de l'argent palestinien à l'Autorité palestinienne). Et c'est ce que nous faisons. Mais pour l'opinion publique palestinienne et arabe, qui a une perspective plus large de la question, tout cela n'est que de la prestidigitation verbale et ne convainc personne. Par association avec tout ce qui a été infligé aux Palestiniens depuis le début de 2006, devant le tribunal de l'opinion publique palestinienne et arabe, nous sommes coupables des faits qui nous sont reprochés » (par. 78).

¹⁸ La déclaration du Quatuor en date du 19 juillet 2007 est très claire à ce sujet.

Nations Unies et représenter non seulement les vues des cinq membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité mais aussi celles de l'ensemble des 192 Membres de l'Organisation? Hélas, l'ONU, par le truchement du Secrétaire général, a fait fi des vues de la majorité de ses Membres et abandonné son rôle de protecteur de la légitimité internationale. Au lieu de favoriser l'autodétermination palestinienne, de s'efforcer de mettre un terme à l'occupation et de s'opposer à la poursuite des violations des droits de l'homme, l'Organisation a choisi de légitimer les déclarations et actions du Quatuor. La situation est bien décrite par Alvaro de Soto dans son rapport de fin de mission :

« [Le Secrétaire général] est instrumentalisé pour donner l'impression d'avaliser les positions du Quatuor au nom de la communauté internationale, ce qui est bizarre puisqu'il participe au Quatuor non pas parce qu'il y a été délégué ou habilité par un organe de l'ONU, encore moins par le Conseil de sécurité, mais pratiquement en sa qualité propre. De vastes pans de la communauté internationale ne sont pas représentés au sein de ce Quatuor autoproclamé, notamment les parties arabes. Quoi qu'il en soit, j'ai pu tolérer ces arrangements jusqu'à ce que le Quatuor commence à adopter des positions qui n'étaient pas susceptibles de rallier la majorité des organes de l'ONU et étaient contraires aux résolutions du Conseil de sécurité ou au droit international ou, si elles ne l'étaient pas expressément, restaient en deçà des critères les plus élémentaires d'équité devant présider à l'action du Secrétaire général. » (par. 69)

50. Ces dernières années, dans ses rapports, le Rapporteur spécial a demandé au Quatuor de faire preuve de davantage d'équité et de respect envers les droits de l'homme et les principes du droit dans ses actions et déclarations. Ces appels n'ont jamais été entendus. Quant à l'ancien Secrétaire général adjoint, Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et Envoyé de l'ONU auprès du Quatuor, il s'est exprimé en termes beaucoup plus forts, accusant le Quatuor d'être conduit (et contraint) par les États-Unis à adopter des positions qui sont en contradiction avec les idéaux de la Charte, et invitant le Secrétaire général à envisager sérieusement la possibilité de se retirer du Quatuor. Dans les faits, l'appel est resté sans suite et le message éliminé¹⁹.

VII. Recommandations

51. Les recommandations ou appels suivants sont formulés à l'intention d'Israël, des groupes armés palestiniens, des États Membres des Nations Unies et de l'Organisation elle-même.

À l'intention d'Israël

52. L'occupation par Israël de la Cisjordanie, de Jérusalem-Est et de Gaza est dans sa quarantième année. Cette occupation, qui donne lieu à de nombreuses violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit relatif aux droits de l'homme, entame sérieusement l'intégrité et la réputation de l'État d'Israël. Israël est instamment prié d'engager des négociations sérieuses avec l'Autorité

¹⁹ Voir la déclaration faite par le Secrétaire général Ban Ki-moon lors d'une conférence de presse, le 13 juin 2007.

palestinienne afin de créer un État palestinien dans les frontières de 1967, de mettre un terme à l'occupation du territoire palestinien et de respecter, dans ses rapports avec le peuple palestinien, le droit international humanitaire et le droit relatif aux droits de l'homme.

À l'intention des groupes militants palestiniens

53. Les groupes militants palestiniens sont engagés à mettre fin à leurs attaques contre des civils et à se conformer au droit international humanitaire, dans les territoires palestiniens occupés comme en Israël.

À l'intention des États Membres des Nations Unies

54. Les États Membres des Nations Unies sont instamment priés de faire pression sur le Quatuor pour qu'il agisse avec équité et dans le respect des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire. En tant que parties à la quatrième Convention de Genève, ils sont également engagés à faire respecter par Israël le droit international humanitaire incorporé dans la Convention. (Cette obligation a été réaffirmée par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif sur le mur²⁰.)

À l'intention de l'Organisation des Nations Unies
(en particulier du Secrétaire général)

55. Le Secrétaire général est instamment prié, en tant que représentant de l'ONU dans le Quatuor, de veiller à ce que celui-ci :

a) Condamne les violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit relatif aux droits de l'homme commises par Israël (décrites dans le présent rapport) et fasse le nécessaire pour qu'Israël se conforme à ses obligations en la matière;

b) Accepte d'utiliser comme fondement juridique, dans ses rapports avec Israël, l'avis consultatif rendu en 2004 par la Cour internationale de Justice sur les Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé;

c) Exhorte Israël à verser immédiatement à l'Autorité palestinienne tous les droits de douane et toutes les sommes provenant de la taxe sur la valeur ajoutée que ce pays a collectés au nom des Palestiniens afin de parer à la crise humanitaire qui touche les territoires palestiniens occupés;

d) Adopte une approche juste et équitable face aux positions respectives d'Israël et des Palestiniens;

²⁰ Avis consultatif, op. cit., par. 159.

e) Adopte une approche juste et équitable à l'égard des différentes factions de la communauté palestinienne, comme l'Organisation des Nations Unies l'a fait dans des situations de conflit comparables²¹, de sorte que les Palestiniens parviennent à l'autodétermination.

56. Si le Secrétaire général ne réussit pas à persuader le Quatuor d'agir ainsi qu'il est proposé ci-dessus, l'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait cesser d'avaliser les actions du Quatuor et s'en retirer.

À l'intention de l'Organisation des Nations Unies
(en particulier de l'Assemblée générale)

57. L'Assemblée générale est instamment priée de demander à la Cour internationale de Justice de rendre un autre avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'occupation prolongée pour le peuple sous occupation, la puissance occupante et les autres États (voir aussi le paragraphe 8 ci-dessus).

²¹ Il convient à cet égard de citer un passage du discours prononcé par Karen AbuZayd, Commissaire générale de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient, à l'Institut Woodrow Wilson (Washington) le 22 mai 2007 : « Il y a une autre incohérence dans l'approche adoptée par la communauté internationale face au conflit israélo-palestinien. L'impasse dans laquelle se trouve le processus de paix est la conséquence directe de la politique qui consiste à isoler une partie, sans tenir compte du fait qu'elle représente un grand nombre de personnes. On peut soutenir que la politique d'isolement est en contradiction avec la conception de la sécurité collective, inscrite dans la Charte des Nations Unies, qui repose sur le règlement pacifique des différends, le fait de s'abstenir, de part et d'autre, de recourir à la force, et l'action collective pour déjouer les menaces qui pèsent sur la paix et la sécurité internationales. Cette politique qui consiste à exclure l'une des parties est également en contradiction avec l'approche que la communauté internationale a adoptée pour résoudre d'autres conflits armés. Dans des cas bien connus ayant fait date, qui se sont produits récemment en Europe occidentale et en Asie du Sud, ni l'épithète terroriste ni le fait que le conflit armé se poursuive, voire s'aggrave, n'ont empêché les médiateurs d'engager le dialogue avec les protagonistes et de continuer à faire pression pour arriver à une solution [...] De nombreuses négociations de paix ont pu aboutir grâce à plusieurs éléments : la neutralité des médiateurs, la participation de toutes les parties et le fait que l'on s'abstienne de formuler un jugement moral ou politique sur la question de savoir si l'une ou l'autre des parties avait le droit d'être présente à la table des négociations. »

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
25 août 2008
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-troisième session

Point 67 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :

situations relatives aux droits de l'homme

et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

La situation des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Richard Falk, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/63/150 et Corr.1.

 La soumission du présent document a été repoussée après la date limite afin que l'actualité la plus récente puisse être prise en compte.

La situation des droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé par Israël depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport, qui est le premier soumis par Richard Falk, porte sur le respect des normes internationales humanitaires et relatives aux droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967, au cours du premier semestre 2008. Une attention particulière y est accordée aux conséquences d'une occupation prolongée durant laquelle les directives de l'ONU relatives au respect des droits reconnus par la loi ont été systématiquement ignorées.

Il est également pris note de l'entreprise liée à la relance du processus de paix lors du sommet d'Annapolis de décembre 2007, en particulier du fait que l'on comptait qu'Israël gèlerait l'expansion des colonies et assouplirait les restrictions à la circulation imposées en Cisjordanie. Il est décourageant de constater que les faits montrent que les colonies se développent et que de nouvelles restrictions sont imposées en Cisjordanie.

Il est en outre fait état de la violation du droit international humanitaire liée à l'existence du mur de séparation, et des victimes palestiniennes, notamment parmi les enfants, en conséquence du recours excessif des Israéliens à la force pour mettre fin à des manifestations non violentes. L'attention est par ailleurs appelée sur les exactions commises par Israël aux points de passage de la frontière, le harcèlement et les agressions dont sont victimes les journalistes palestiniens étant particulièrement préoccupants. Le rapport porte essentiellement sur la crise en matière de soins de santé, spécialement à Gaza.

Le Rapporteur spécial déplore qu'Israël n'applique pas les recommandations de la Cour internationale de Justice, que l'Assemblée générale a faites siennes, et appelle à une définition plus claire des droits du peuple palestinien en recommandant que l'Assemblée générale recueille un avis juridique sur la mesure dans laquelle l'occupation met en danger la réalisation du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	4
II. Évolution de la situation politique et du cadre de l'occupation.....	6
III. Les défis à relever dans le domaine des droits de l'homme : quelques études de cas	10
A. Liberté d'expression et harcèlement des journalistes : l'affaire Mohammed Omer.....	10
B. Bouclages et opérations militaires des Forces de défense israéliennes en Cisjordanie : violences contre la population civile de Naplouse	12
C. Droit de réunion pacifique : manifestations contre la construction du mur en Cisjordanie	14
IV. Les implantations de colonies dans le territoire palestinien occupé et leurs conséquences sur la jouissance des droits de l'homme	15
V. Crise sanitaire dans les territoires palestiniens	17
A. Autres violations touchant les patients de Gaza : interrogation par le Shin Bet des patients palestiniens au passage d'Erez	20
VI. Recommandations	21

I. Introduction

1. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 a été nommé, conformément à la résolution 1993/2A de la Commission des droits de l'homme, le 26 mars 2008, et a pris ses fonctions le 1^{er} mai 2008. Il n'a pas encore été à même de se rendre en Israël et dans le territoire palestinien occupé pour s'acquitter pleinement de son mandat et présenter un témoignage de première main sur la mesure dans laquelle le droit international des droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire sont respectés. Le Rapporteur spécial entend n'épargner aucun effort pour obtenir un accès dans l'avenir et cherchera à s'assurer la coopération du Gouvernement israélien à cette fin.

2. Le présent rapport est le premier à paraître depuis que le Rapporteur spécial a pris ses fonctions le 1^{er} mai 2008. Il inclut les faits nouveaux qui se sont produits essentiellement entre le 1^{er} janvier et le 31 juillet 2008 et repose sur des informations fiables réunies par les ONG et les institutions internationales qui s'occupent des droits de l'homme, y compris l'ONU, fortes de leur objectivité et de leur l'expérience de longue date quant aux conditions de l'occupation. Le Rapporteur spécial prend note des changements positifs et négatifs sur le terrain, ainsi qu'aux échelles régionale et mondiale. Il entend, sans que cela ait d'implications politiques, traiter l'administration du Hamas à Gaza comme une « autorité de facto » aux fins de son rapport.

3. Le Rapporteur spécial prend note en particulier du fait que l'occupation militaire du territoire palestinien se poursuit depuis plus de 40 ans et présente les caractéristiques du colonialisme et de l'apartheid, comme l'a fait observer son prédécesseur. Dans un tel contexte, la prolongation de l'occupation est une menace croissante et une atteinte de plus en plus grave au droit de l'homme le plus fondamental de tous : le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien. Cette considération confère un caractère urgent à une évaluation de la revendication palestinienne d'un droit à la résistance aux fins de l'autodétermination, et à des recommandations tendant à une plus grande expression de la responsabilité de l'ONU s'agissant de résoudre le conflit israélo-palestinien compte pleinement tenu du droit international, et, dans l'intervalle, de prendre des mesures immédiates pour veiller au respect par Israël des obligations que lui impose le droit international humanitaire relatif à l'occupation militaire. Il conviendrait à cet égard de prendre note du refus d'Israël de se conformer à l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur les Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé (A/ES-10/273 et Corr.1), cautionné par 14 des 15 juges et massivement approuvé par l'Assemblée générale dans sa résolution ES-10/15. Cette observation générale relative à la poursuite de l'occupation a deux implications pour l'ONU. D'une part, dans le cadre du processus de paix d'Annapolis, une responsabilité spéciale incombe à l'ONU en tant que membre du Quatuor pour ce qui est de veiller à ce que des mesures soient prises afin de convaincre toutes les parties que l'évaluation des intérêts opposés d'Israël et de la Palestine sera fondée sur le droit international durant les négociations sur les questions qui continuent d'être l'objet de controverses. D'autre part, le fait que le mépris d'un message aussi clair et ferme concernant les obligations juridiques internationales liées aux devoirs d'une puissance occupante, associé à d'autres preuves de mépris exposées en détail dans le présent rapport, devraient contribuer à inciter le Secrétaire général, l'Assemblée générale et les autres organes de l'ONU à reconnaître qu'il faut d'urgence mettre en œuvre les initiatives nécessaires pour garantir les droits de l'homme et, en réalité, la survie du peuple palestinien, et pour amener Israël à respecter les obligations que lui impose le droit international. L'une de ces initiatives, qui va dans le sens de la recommandation du Rapporteur spécial précédent, consisterait pour la Troisième Commission à proposer à l'Assemblée générale une demande visant à obtenir un nouvel avis juridique de la Cour internationale de Justice sur les effets illégaux du refus persistant de respecter le droit à l'autodétermination des Palestiniens, en raison de la prolongation et de la nature de l'occupation, en particulier les atteintes qu'elle porte à la propriété et à l'occupation des terres par les Palestiniens.

4. Le principal instrument juridique pertinent aux fins de l'évaluation des droits et des devoirs d'une puissance occupante est la quatrième Convention de Genève, relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (1949), mais le Protocole additionnel I de 1977 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux est également pertinent en tant qu'expression du droit international coutumier évolutif et contraignant pour les parties au traité. Les preuves de la violation constante et délibérée de ce traité international universellement contraignant par Israël du fait de son occupation du territoire palestinien revêtent une gravité qui appelle une réaction unanime de la communauté internationale. Il conviendrait de rappeler que l'article 1 de la quatrième Convention de Genève se lit ainsi : « Les Hautes Parties contractantes s'engagent à respecter et à faire respecter la présente Convention en toutes circonstances ». Il est grand temps de répondre à cet appel.

5. Le Gouvernement israélien affirme, depuis l'exécution de son plan de désengagement en 2005, que la bande de Gaza n'est plus sous occupation et que pour cette raison le droit international humanitaire n'est pas applicable. La position officielle d'Israël, maintes fois réaffirmée, est que « l'occupation de guerre de la bande de Gaza » par les Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) a pris fin le 12 septembre 2005 « avec toutes les incidences politiques, sécuritaires et juridiques qui en résultent ». Israël a explicitement tiré la conclusion générale selon laquelle puisque « les pleins pouvoirs en matière de gouvernement » ont été à cette date « transférés à l'Autorité palestinienne », il n'est plus tenu par les responsabilités juridiques et morales incombant à une Puissance occupante¹. Dans cette perspective, le Gouvernement israélien se fonde sur une décision de la Cour suprême d'Israël dans l'affaire Albassiouni c. le Premier Ministre, aux termes de laquelle le Gouvernement « n'a pas pour devoir général d'assurer le bien-être des habitants de la bande de Gaza ». Le Rapporteur spécial conteste cette évaluation de la situation dans la bande de Gaza, en arguant qu'un territoire est occupé s'il est placé sous le « contrôle effectif » d'un État autre que celui du souverain territorial. Israël continue, depuis son désengagement, à exercer un contrôle strict et constant sur les frontières, l'entrée et la sortie, l'espace aérien et les eaux territoriales de Gaza. Il a en outre mené de nombreuses incursions militaires et des attaques meurtrières visant des individus, a soumis la population civile tout entière du territoire à des conditions de siège dès le moment où le Hamas a clairement remporté les élections législatives générales de janvier 2006 à Gaza, et a durci le siège après que le Hamas ait pris le contrôle de Gaza à la mi-juin 2007. L'imposition d'un siège qui fait peser de lourdes contraintes sur les habitants de Gaza, et les tentatives d'y associer la communauté internationale, ont rendu impossible pour les autorités administrantes palestiniennes d'assurer le bien-être minimal de 1,5 million d'habitants. Il est donc plus que certain que, du point de vue du droit international, la bande de Gaza reste sous occupation israélienne – les responsabilités juridiques connexes incombant à la Puissance occupante – et que la Convention de Genève demeure pleinement applicable.

¹ Voir la réponse du coordonnateur des activités dans les territoires au rapport de Médecins pour les droits de l'homme relatif aux interrogatoires subis par les patients au point de passage d'Erez, Ministère de la défense de l'État d'Israël, 4 juin 2008.

6. De nombreux aspects de la situation au quotidien qui se poursuit dans le territoire palestinien occupé sont pertinents eu égard à une évaluation juridique des droits et devoirs des parties. L'un des principaux objectifs du présent rapport est de faire comprendre, preuves à l'appui, la mesure dans laquelle la situation a continué de se détériorer dans tout le territoire palestinien occupé, à tel point que les souffrances et les traumatismes mentaux et physiques endurés par le peuple palestinien vivant sous l'occupation ont atteint un niveau dangereux et non viable. Cela contredit le point de vue selon lequel de nombreux faits nouveaux, notamment l'accord de cessez-le-feu relatif à Gaza, la relance du processus de paix à Annapolis et la baisse généralisée du taux de décès par mort violente parmi les civils et les militaires israéliens ainsi que de l'incidence du terrorisme, ont rendu moins pesante l'occupation. Il semble vrai, certes, que la situation s'est améliorée économiquement et politiquement pour Israël durant cette période, mais la situation du peuple palestinien a empiré : davantage de terres ont été confisquées au profit des colonies, qui ont été élargies, la crise persiste partout à Gaza, les restrictions à la circulation dans toute la Cisjordanie ont été maintenues ou resserrées et de nouvelles démarches juridiques ont été entreprises pour expulser des Palestiniens vivant à Jérusalem. Suite à la très récente approbation par Israël de la construction de 447 logements supplémentaires dans le secteur de Jérusalem, le négociateur palestinien pour la paix, Saeb Erakat, a déclaré selon une dépêche de l'agence Reuters « J'ignore combien de fois les Israéliens devront faire cela pour que la communauté internationale ouvre les yeux. Le monde ne voit-il donc pas que cela détruit le processus de paix? ». Le thème du présent rapport est que la réalité palestinienne est pire que jamais auparavant, sans que rien ne laisse entrevoir aucune amélioration sensible.

7. Le présent rapport se veut impartial pour ce qui, d'une part, de mettre en lumière les incidents qui illustrent les problèmes d'ordre général plus profonds associés à l'occupation et, d'autre part, d'examiner des modèles de comportement qui semblent violer les droits de l'homme du peuple sous occupation, en tenant dûment compte des droits de la Puissance occupante s'agissant de faire respecter la sécurité durant l'occupation. Le Rapporteur spécial a consacré un chapitre de son rapport au droit à la santé, en privilégiant tout particulièrement Gaza.

II. Évolution de la situation politique et du cadre de l'occupation

8. Il est important de comprendre le cadre de l'occupation pour bien évaluer certains événements ainsi que les politiques d'occupation et les activités de résistance et apprécier la situation générale en matière de droits de l'homme, dans la mesure toutefois où la sécurité de l'occupant le permet. L'importance accordée à ces aspects de l'occupation permet d'appeler l'attention sur la nature essentielle du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination et de leur lutte à cette fin dans les conditions découlant de la longue occupation de leur territoire. Toute modification du contexte plus large des relations israélo-palestiniennes donne une idée tant de la nature oppressive de l'occupation que de la difficulté d'améliorer les conditions de vie des Palestiniens tant qu'ils vivront sous occupation.

9. Lorsque, le 23 janvier 2008, le Hamas a détruit une partie du mur qui sépare l'Égypte de Gaza en posant des explosifs près du point de passage de Rafah, des dizaines de milliers de personnes vivant dans la bande de Gaza (et peut-être même, selon certaines sources, 500 000) ont franchi la frontière pour se ruer vers la ville de Rafah, en Égypte, principalement pour y faire des provisions de nourriture, de médicaments et de divers biens de consommation auxquels elles n'avaient pas accès à Gaza. Le Président égyptien, Hosni Moubarak, aurait dit aux gardes frontière qui lui demandaient ce qu'ils devaient faire « Laissez-les entrer pour qu'ils puissent manger et se ravitailler avant de rentrer chez eux, à condition qu'ils ne portent pas d'armes »². Un porte-parole du Hamas aurait dit : « Nous créons des événements. Nous devons tenter de faire évoluer la situation; maintenant, nous attendons les résultats. Nous avons prévenu le peuple égyptien que nous avions faim et étions en train de mourir ». Nombre d'habitants de la bande de Gaza sans affiliation politique ont dit, de diverses façons : « C'est ce que le Hamas a fait de mieux. » Un journaliste indépendant, Allan Nairn, a bien résumé la situation en écrivant : « [...] la décision de détruire le mur de Gaza a été facile à prendre : personne n'a été tué, certains ont peut-être même été sauvés et le spectacle de l'exode vers l'Égypte a bien mis en évidence une grossière injustice »³. Par ses propos, Nairn donne une bonne description des principaux faits liés à l'occupation, à savoir l'exode et le spectacle de cet exode. Il était impossible d'être témoin de ces événements sans comprendre le désespoir d'un peuple longtemps écrasé par une occupation déshumanisante qui menace son bien-être, et même sa survie, et à laquelle il faudrait mettre fin. Quelques jours plus tard, les habitants de la bande de Gaza ont dû retourner chez eux, le mur a été réparé et le siège et le confinement ont été rétablis. Il est possible que l'exode et le spectacle de milliers de personnes quittant Gaza aient entraîné quelques subtils changements positifs, les événements ayant mieux fait comprendre à la communauté internationale la situation désespérée de 1,5 million de personnes isolées et confinées de force dans la bande de Gaza.

10. Aucun lien de cause à effet n'a été établi ni reconnu entre les événements associés à la destruction partielle du mur de Rafah et le début de négociations secrètes, au Caire, sous l'égide de l'Égypte, entre les représentants du Gouvernement israélien et ceux du Hamas, aux fins de la conclusion d'un accord de cessez-le-feu qui mettrait fin aux tirs de roquettes contre Israël à partir de la bande de Gaza et aux incursions militaires et assassinats ciblés d'Israël à Gaza. En même temps, il semble difficile de ne pas conclure que la couverture médiatique des événements, surtout les photographies de l'ouverture pratiquée dans le mur, qui ont fait le tour du monde, a incité Israël à se montrer plus réceptif aux propositions faites depuis longtemps par le Hamas de convenir mutuellement d'un cessez-le-feu. Les négociations ont duré relativement longtemps, mais elles ont en fin de compte porté leurs fruits. Le 20 juin 2008, un cessez-le-feu a été décrété et, malgré certains manquements des deux côtés, de façon générale respecté⁴. Les modalités du cessez-

² Voir le New York Times, 24 janvier 2008.

³ Allan Nairn, « Justified Violence: Breaking the Gaza Wall », The Nation, 29 janvier 2008.

⁴ Pour un examen du cessez-le-feu, voir Uri Avnery, « The Ceasefire », London Review of Books, le-feu n'ont pas été divulguées, mais des observateurs bien informés ont estimé que si le Hamas démontrait sa volonté et sa capacité de faire respecter le cessez-le-feu par ses propres groupes militants, Israël adoucirait les conditions du siège.

11. Israël a reconnu les dispositions prises par le Hamas pour faire en sorte que le cessez-le-feu soit respecté et, en retour, a amélioré les conditions de vie difficiles des habitants de Gaza. Israël prétend avoir augmenté de jusqu'à 50 % l'approvisionnement en vivres et en médicaments et envisage d'adopter d'autres mesures pour atténuer les tensions et les privations. Néanmoins, du fait de la durée et de l'ampleur du siège qui sont venues s'ajouter à la pauvreté et aux difficultés préexistantes, la situation humanitaire dans la bande de Gaza demeure désespérée et pourrait aisément se traduire par de nouveaux événements dramatiques.

12. À ces événements nouveaux s'ajoute la reconnaissance implicite par Israël de la gouvernance de facto par le Hamas de Gaza. Selon Meir Javedanfar, spécialiste respecté du Moyen-Orient vivant à Tel-Aviv, « C'est avec le Hamas qu'Israël doit négocier. Ce n'est pas une reconnaissance diplomatique complète, mais Israël a reconnu que le Hamas jouait un rôle important. Pour certaines questions, il est impossible de ne pas en tenir compte. Israël montre que sa politique passée, qui était de refuser de parler aux organisations militantes [...], ne portait pas toujours ses fruits [...] et a compris que parler à ses ennemis était le moyen le plus rapide et le plus rentable sur les plans militaire, économique et stratégique »⁵. Officiellement, Israël n'a pas modifié sa position qui est que le Hamas est une organisation terroriste et que l'accord de cessez-le-feu doit être considéré comme une proposition de compromis de l'Égypte acceptée par les deux parties. Israël persiste à dire qu'il ne modifiera sa position diplomatique officielle que si le Hamas respecte unilatéralement trois conditions. Ces conditions sont la reconnaissance du droit à l'existence d'Israël en tant qu'État juif, la confirmation des accords conclus entre l'Autorité palestinienne et Israël et la renonciation aux actes de violence.

13. Dans une certaine mesure, ces faits récents sont éloquents : le Hamas a pu conclure un accord de cessez-le-feu et devenir un partenaire d'Israël dans la mise en œuvre d'accords conjoints. Pour Israël, l'accord est une reconnaissance implicite par le Hamas de l'État d'Israël. Il faut souhaiter qu'il s'agisse là d'un indice que le siège de Gaza sera levé, que l'aide économique internationale reprendra et que sera établi un régime d'occupation qui respecte le droit international humanitaire et les droits de l'homme autant que faire se peut, vu la situation en matière de sécurité. Toute nouvelle évaluation du processus portera vraisemblablement sur la question de savoir si les négociations entre l'Égypte et l'Autorité palestinienne concernant la réouverture du point de passage de Rafah aboutiront et si un accord sur un échange de prisonniers prévoyant la libération du caporal Gilad Shalit, le soldat israélien détenu depuis plus de deux ans, pourra être conclu. Encourager ces négociations revient sur le plan pratique à tenter de mieux protéger les droits économiques et sociaux des 1,5 million de Palestiniens vivant à Gaza, même si, sur le plan strictement juridique, les obligations d'Israël en tant que Puissance occupante sont contraignantes et non facultatives, en particulier lorsque les droits fondamentaux de la population générale de Gaza sont concernés.

31 juillet 2008.

⁵ Pour une première analyse du cessez-le-feu, voir l'article de Joshua Mitnick, « As Gaza ceasefire holds, Israel eases economic blockade », Christian Science Monitor, 23 juin 2008.

14. Même si les relations tendues entre le Hamas et le Fatah sur le territoire palestinien occupé ne font pas l'objet du mandat actuel, le récent appel aux pourparlers lancé par le Président Mahmoud Abbas en vue de la constitution d'un gouvernement d'unité nationale palestinien va également dans le sens d'une réduction de la violence et devrait renforcer les espoirs de la population civile sous occupation israélienne de voir ses droits de l'homme mieux protégés. Pour que le processus de paix soit viable, il faudra notamment que tous les Palestiniens vivant sous occupation soient représentés par un gouvernement unifié.

15. Certains des événements qui se sont produits dans la région sont également encourageants et pourraient se traduire indirectement par une amélioration du régime d'occupation même si, à ce jour, aucune activité concrète ne permet de croire que ces espoirs sont fondés. La négociation d'un accord entre le Hezbollah et le Gouvernement libanais permet d'espérer une stabilisation de la situation. Les négociations continues entre Israël et la République arabe syrienne, sous l'égide de la Turquie, donnent également à penser que l'approche diplomatique est de nouveau privilégiée pour résoudre les conflits et que l'État d'Israël pourrait être disposé à envisager son retrait du territoire occupé pendant la guerre de 1967. Les initiatives égyptiennes concernant la situation de Gaza font elles aussi partie de l'atmosphère plus constructive qui prévaut dans les pays voisins du territoire palestinien occupé mais jusqu'à maintenant, le sort des Palestiniens qui vivent sous occupation ne s'est guère amélioré et, à bien des égards, a continué de se détériorer.

16. Mettre fin à l'occupation est le seul moyen de permettre au peuple palestinien de pleinement jouir à nouveau de ses droits de l'homme. Selon la doctrine du droit international, Israël doit se retirer de la presque totalité du territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, pour se conformer à la demande symbolique du Conseil de sécurité dans sa résolution 242 (1967), adoptée au lendemain de la guerre arabo-israélienne de 1967. On estime cependant que ce retrait est extrêmement peu probable en l'absence de négociations bilatérales portant sur toutes les questions en suspens entre Israël et l'Autorité palestinienne. De ce point de vue, il a probablement été optimiste de croire que la Conférence d'Annapolis du 27 novembre 2007 qui avait réuni quelque 40 gouvernements concernés constituait une relance du processus de paix se fondant sur les orientations définies par le Quatuor dans la Feuille de route de 2003. À Annapolis, les gouvernements participants sont convenus qu'Israël et l'Autorité palestinienne s'efforceraient de régler l'ensemble des questions en suspens et le Gouvernement américain aurait modifié sa position pour encourager les négociations bilatérales. Par la suite, le Premier Ministre israélien, Ehud Olmert, et le Président de l'Autorité palestinienne, Mahmoud Abbas, se sont rencontrés de nombreuses fois, mais aucun progrès notable sur la question du statut final n'a été enregistré et il est peu probable que ces négociations donnent des résultats concrets. La situation s'explique par la faiblesse du Premier Ministre Olmert face à l'opposition interne, aux attaques dont il fait l'objet et au fait qu'il a annoncé sa démission après les réunions du parti Kadima qui auront lieu en septembre 2008. De manière plus fondamentale, Israël n'a pas réussi les tests déterminants du processus de paix définis à Annapolis qui comprenaient un gel complet des colonies de peuplement (de même que le démantèlement des « avant-postes » établis en Cisjordanie qui sont interdits par le droit israélien) et une diminution des entraves à la liberté de mouvement aux postes de contrôle. Depuis Annapolis, c'est en effet le contraire qui s'est produit, c'est-à-dire que les colonies de peuplement ont continué de prendre de l'expansion à un rythme accéléré, le démantèlement d'aucun avant-poste n'a été signalé et le nombre de mesures contraignantes associées au réseau de postes de contrôle militaires israéliens a augmenté.

17. Le deuxième test à réussir était une diminution de la violence palestinienne. Le cessez-le-feu de Gaza, s'il n'est pas violé, semble dans ce cas extrêmement pertinent, tout comme la volonté de l'Autorité palestinienne de mettre en œuvre, du mieux qu'elle le peut, une politique visant à abandonner la lutte armée contre l'occupation israélienne. En l'absence d'actions comparables de la part d'Israël pour ce qui est des colonies de peuplement, le processus risque de s'enliser indéfiniment ou d'être abandonné. Aujourd'hui, il n'y a pas lieu de s'attendre à ce que l'initiative d'Annapolis se traduise par la fin, dans les délais prévus, de l'occupation ni la paix ni le respect, par Israël, des droits du peuple palestinien reconnus par le droit international humanitaire et par les normes internationales relatives aux droits de l'homme.

III. Les défis à relever dans le domaine des droits de l'homme : quelques études de cas

A. Liberté d'expression et harcèlement des journalistes : l'affaire Mohammed Omer

18. Mohammed Omer est un journaliste vivant à Gaza qui avait obtenu une autorisation de sortie afin de se rendre en Europe, où il avait été invité à recevoir le prix Martha Gellhorn de journalisme et à donner des conférences. L'autorisation ne lui avait été accordée qu'après qu'un parlementaire néerlandais eut fortement insisté auprès du Gouvernement israélien pour le persuader d'autoriser M. Omer à quitter Gaza. M. Omer est le plus jeune lauréat du prix Gellhorn, décerné à des journalistes ayant fait preuve de courage et montré leur aptitude à faire leur métier dans des zones de conflit. Tant les qualités personnelles que les compétences professionnelles de M. Omer sont apparues clairement lors d'entretiens menés directement avec celui-ci et avec plusieurs personnalités éminentes. Le jeune homme de 24 ans est largement admiré pour les reportages qu'il a effectués au cours des dernières années à Gaza. C'est en rentrant à Gaza que M. Omer a rencontré des difficultés. Il a en effet essayé de passer par Israël et le pont Allenby et lorsqu'il a atteint la frontière jordanienne, le diplomate néerlandais qui devait l'accompagner était en retard. Le journaliste a indiqué que l'engagement avait été pris de le faire escorter par un diplomate lorsqu'il avait été encouragé à quitter Gaza pour recevoir en personne le prix Gellhorn. Ces événements, qui se sont déroulés le 26 juin 2008, ont fait l'objet d'articles dans les journaux du monde entier. Dans une communication privée, l'Ambassadeur des Pays-Bas à Genève a assuré le Rapporteur spécial que l'incident était pris très au sérieux et l'a informé qu'une explication avait été demandée au Gouvernement israélien. J'ai appuyé cette demande en adressant un appel urgent à l'Ambassadeur d'Israël à Genève. À ce jour, ni la demande d'explication ni l'appel urgent n'ont reçu de réponse. Dans sa version personnelle des faits, Mohammed Omer a notamment indiqué ce qui suit : « À mon retour de Londres, j'ai été devêtu sous la menace d'une arme, puis interrogé, roué de coups de pied et battu pendant plus de quatre heures. J'ai, à un moment donné, perdu connaissance, et, lorsque j'ai repris connaissance, j'ai senti des ongles écorcher la chair sous mes yeux. Un agent de l'État a écrasé mon cou sous sa botte et comprimé ma poitrine contre le sol. Sans cesser de rire, d'autres agents se sont relayés pour me donner des coups de pied et me pincer. Ils m'ont tiré par les pieds, trainant ma tête dans mes propres vomissures. J'ai été informé plus tard qu'ils m'avaient transféré dans un hôpital [...]. Aujourd'hui, j'éprouve des difficultés à respirer. Ma poitrine et mon cou ont été écorchés et griffés. Mon médecin m'a informé qu'un des coups de pied reçus a endommagé des nerfs, ce qui pourrait m'empêcher d'avoir des enfants et m'obliger à subir une opération »⁶. M. Omer est convaincu que cette attaque brutale a été commise par des agents du Shin Bet qui, pleinement conscients du fait qu'on lui avait décerné le prix Gellhorn pendant son séjour à l'étranger, auraient voulu confisquer l'argent du prix mais ont été déçus car cet argent avait été déposé sur un compte en banque. M. Omer aurait perdu conscience après l'incident d'Allenby et été transféré à Jéricho, en Cisjordanie, puis au point de passage d'Erez, d'où il a été emmené à l'hôpital européen du camp de réfugiés de Khan Younis, afin d'y recevoir des soins.

19. Ce déplorable épisode n'est ni un accident ni un événement unique dont seraient responsables des agents des services de sécurité israéliens indisciplinés. Le traitement infligé à M. Omer semble avoir été motivé par la colère des Israéliens face à la reconnaissance internationale du travail de ce journaliste, qui décrit l'occupation de Gaza, au fait que M. Omer ait accepté de décrire la situation à l'étranger et à sa volonté de continuer à témoigner, dans son travail, des excès de l'occupation. Il faut noter que si tous les Palestiniens sont arbitrairement harcelés et soumis à de mauvais traitements aux frontières et aux points de contrôle, l'hostilité est particulièrement marquée envers les journalistes. Pendant son séjour en Europe, M. Omer a décrit à des parlementaires les souffrances que provoquent à Gaza le siège, les bouclages et les pénuries de vivres et de carburant. Il convient de noter que M. Omer n'a été accusé d'aucun crime et ne transportait pas d'articles interdits. Le traitement qui lui a été infligé semble être une violation flagrante des alinéas a) et c) du paragraphe 1) de l'article 3 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui dispose que « [...] sont et demeurent prohibés, en tout temps et en tout lieu. [...] » « a) les atteintes portées à la vie et à l'intégrité corporelle [...] » et « c) les atteintes à la dignité des personnes, notamment les traitements humiliants et dégradants ». En outre, aux termes de l'article 5 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, nul ne doit être soumis à sera soumis à des peines ou traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants. L'article 19 de la Déclaration et l'article 19 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques (1966) s'appliquent directement au cas de M. Omer. Le paragraphe 2 de l'article 19 s'appliquerait tout particulièrement aux journalistes qui luttent pour défendre le droit « de recevoir et de répandre des informations de toute espèce, [...] sous une forme écrite [ou] imprimée [...] ou par tout autre moyen de [leur] choix ». En outre, le paragraphe 2 de l'article 13 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, qui dispose que « Toute personne a le droit de quitter tout pays, y compris le sien, et de revenir dans son pays », confirme le droit de chacun de retourner sans entraves dans son pays de résidence. Il est incontestable que dans le cas de M. Omer, ce droit a été violé.

20. Bien qu'une seule personne ait été victime de cet incident, ce dernier a forcément eu un effet inhibant et semble s'inscrire dans un cadre d'ingérences punitives commises systématiquement par Israël et contre les journalistes indépendants décrivant l'occupation. Lorsque l'équipage d'un char israélien a tué un caméraman de Reuters en avril 2008, Amnesty International a déclaré : « Fadel Shana, un civil, semble avoir été tué volontairement alors qu'il ne participait d'aucune manière à des attaques contre l'armée israélienne ». En août, l'équipage du char responsable de la mort de M. Shana a été officiellement innocenté dans une lettre du Procureur général aux forces armées, le général de brigade Avihai Mendelblit. Le rédacteur en chef de Reuters, David Schlesinger, a réagi par la déclaration suivante : « Je suis extrêmement déçu que cette déclaration [de l'armée israélienne] excuse l'emploi disproportionné d'une force ayant entraîné mort d'homme lors d'événements que l'armée elle-même reconnaît n'avoir pas clairement analysés ». Les violences commises par les Israéliens envers les journalistes palestiniens et étrangers à Gaza et en Cisjordanie ont également été critiquées par des organisations aussi respectées que Reporters sans frontières et le Committee to Protect Journalists. L'incident dont a été victime Mohammed Omer serait en somme la dernière en date des atteintes systématiques à la liberté de la presse commises par Israël dans le cadre de l'occupation, qui privent la population palestinienne de la protection que pourrait représenter l'exposition des abus de pouvoir commis par la Puissance occupante. La responsabilité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies est bien définie : de par sa vocation à défendre les droits de l'homme et le droit international, elle est incontestablement tenue de protéger les journalistes indépendants, en particulier dans les zones de conflit et les zones occupées.

⁶ Mohammed Omer, « Truth and Consequences Under the Israeli Occupation », The Nation, 31 juillet 2008.

B. Bouclages et opérations militaires des Forces de défense israéliennes en Cisjordanie : violences contre la population civile de Naplouse

21. L'encerclement des principales villes de Cisjordanie se poursuivant du fait de l'extension du mur de séparation et du maintien des postes de contrôle, entrer et sortir du territoire reste difficile et humiliant. Même les pourparlers de paix qui ont actuellement lieu entre le Premier Ministre Olmert et le Président Abbas, les assurances données par le Gouvernement israélien de faciliter la liberté de circulation en Cisjordanie en échange du renoncement par l'Autorité palestinienne à la résistance armée et la nette diminution des actes de violence commis par les Palestiniens à Gaza et en Cisjordanie n'ont pas adouci les épreuves de l'occupation pour les Palestiniens. Les villes et les localités dans lesquelles il est estimé que le Hamas a une forte influence, compte tenu de son succès lors des élections municipales de 2006, subissent des pressions encore plus fortes car les incursions militaires y sont plus fréquentes. Naplouse en est un exemple particulièrement représentatif. Le Rapporteur spécial a reçu d'observateurs non palestiniens des témoignages faits sous serment sur la situation dans cette ville. Il ressort de ces témoignages qu'Israël a régulièrement employé la force contre la population civile de Naplouse sans même la justifier par des activités de résistance antérieures. Du 26 juin jusqu'à la fin du mois de juillet 2008, les Forces de défense israéliennes ont mené plusieurs opérations nocturnes à Naplouse, au cours desquelles elles ont tué au moins deux jeunes Palestiniens, arrêté des dizaines d'hommes, de femmes et d'enfants et confisqué et détruit des biens, instaurant ainsi un climat de peur. De telles opérations militaires sont menées sans qu'aucune accusation n'ait été clairement formulée à l'encontre des habitants de Naplouse. Parmi les dommages causés figure la destruction de biens appartenant à plusieurs organisations de bienfaisance, dont des écoles, des dispensaires et un orphelinat, qui fournissaient des services nécessaires à la population de cette ville. Ces établissements ont été fermés arbitrairement, tout comme le centre commercial de Naplouse, où se trouvaient certains des établissements commerciaux les plus anciens, respectés et prospères de la ville. Les biens d'importantes entreprises ont été réquisitionnés par les autorités militaires israéliennes, qui n'ont offert ni garantie d'une procédure régulière ni justification crédible sur le plan de la sécurité. Les activités israéliennes ont entraîné une baisse d'au moins 50 % de l'activité économique de la ville, qui était jusque-là considérée comme le centre d'affaires de la Palestine. Outre les pertes matérielles résultant des mesures récemment prises dans le cadre de l'occupation et les souffrances psychologiques causées par les incursions terrifiantes conduites en pleine nuit par des militaires israéliens lourdement armés, les nombreux postes de contrôle et barrages routiers encerclant la ville renforcent l'isolement de Naplouse.

22. Ces derniers mois, d'autres organismes de bienfaisance et institutions civiles ont été fermés par l'armée israélienne dans de nombreuses autres villes de Cisjordanie. Ces fermetures illustrent bien la dégradation des conditions d'occupation dans cette partie du territoire palestinien mais aussi la violation, par la Puissance occupante, à la fois des droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens et des obligations qui lui incombent au titre de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Non seulement Israël ne respecte pas les obligations juridiques qui sont les siennes en tant que Puissance occupante en vertu du droit international humanitaire, mais il fait aussi obstruction aux mesures prises par les Palestiniens pour atténuer l'impact de ces violations sur le bien-être de la population qui subit l'occupation. Au cours de l'année écoulée, la situation a été si grave à Gaza qu'on a véritablement craint l'effondrement des structures sociales, la famine et la propagation des maladies et que les difficultés et les souffrances des populations vivant en Cisjordanie sont, comparativement, passées au deuxième plan.

23. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit, en toute indépendance, défendre les droits de l'homme de la population occupée, et notamment veiller au respect des droits de tous les groupes de population au lieu de ne s'attacher qu'à ceux qui sont menacés par une catastrophe humanitaire imminente. Les politiques menées par Israël dans le cadre de l'occupation enfreignent l'esprit et la lettre du droit international humanitaire au sens des articles 47 à 78 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. L'article 53 est particulièrement pertinent car il interdit aux puissances occupantes de détruire des biens appartenant aux populations occupées « sauf dans les cas où ces destructions seraient rendues absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires ». Les opérations militaires de bouclage ont abouti à la destruction de biens appartenant aux habitants de Naplouse. Les articles 64 à 69 de la Convention établissent un cadre juridique pour la détention d'habitants d'un territoire occupé pénalement responsable des infractions qu'ils auraient commises mais la Convention interdit expressément les exécutions extrajudiciaires, les mesures de représailles et tout type de violences collectives punitives. Dans un article publié dans Ha'aretz le 20 juillet 2008, le journaliste israélien bien connu, Gideon Levy, a fait remarquer ce qui suit au sujet des Palestiniens habitant en Cisjordanie : « on ne peut à la fois les emprisonner et leur interdire de gagner leur vie alors qu'ils n'ont pas de couverture sociale et, en plus, s'attaquer à ceux qui, pour une raison ou une autre, tentent de les aider. Si Israël veut s'attaquer aux associations caritatives, il lui faut au moins remplacer les services qui étaient offerts.

Sur le dos de qui s'appuie-t-on pour combattre la terreur? Celui des veuves et des orphelins? C'est une honte ». Mairead Maguire (Irlande du Nord), lauréate du prix Nobel de la paix, a été du même avis dans son émouvant rapport sur la fermeture des orphelinats à Hébron.⁷

C. Droit de réunion pacifique : manifestations contre la construction du mur en Cisjordanie

24. Ni'lin est un village situé dans le district de Ramallah en Cisjordanie, à proximité du mur qu'édifie Israël illégalement sur le territoire palestinien occupé au mépris de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur le mur de séparation. Il a été le théâtre de nombreuses manifestations non violentes organisées pour protester contre la construction du mur, dressé de manière à confisquer une bonne part des terres du village, chapitre qui s'inscrit dans le cadre d'une longue histoire de spoliation foncière des Palestiniens.

25. On estime que pas moins de 80 % des terres de Ni'lin ont été graduellement confisquées par Israël depuis 1948. Son emplacement à proximité de la Ligne verte lui a valu au lendemain de la guerre de 1967 de nouvelles confiscations de terres au profit des colonies de Cisjordanie (74 dounams pour la colonie de Shalit, 661 dounams pour Mattityahu, 934 dounams pour Hashmonaim, 274 dounams pour Mod'in Illit et 20 dounams pour Menora), soit environ 13 % de ses terres. Lorsqu'Israël a officiellement décidé de confisquer encore 20 % des terres des habitants de Ni'lin pour la construction du mur, des manifestations massives ont eu lieu. Ni'lin est devenu le centre d'inspiration du mouvement d'opposition au mur, et a été, de 2003 à 2004, le théâtre de nombreuses manifestations. Au cours des derniers mois, on a assisté à toute une série de manifestations organisées par des habitants de villages, des sympathisants de villes voisines telles que Ramallah et Tulkarem et également de pacifistes israéliens venus se joindre aux protestations non violentes visant à empêcher la reprise des travaux de construction du mur.

26. Les forces militaires israéliennes et les agents de la police des frontières ont eu recours à divers procédés violents pour disperser les manifestants, notamment à des balles en acier enrobées de caoutchouc et à des balles réelles. Deux jeunes Palestiniens ont succombé à leurs blessures. Ahmed Mousa, garçonnet de 10 ans photographié à la manifestation, a, selon des témoins, été tué au moment où il la quittait. Un Israélien jouissant d'une grande estime, qui participait aux manifestations, Uri Avnery, ancien membre de la Knesset, a dans un article rédigé pour le compte de l'agence de presse Mahan News, en date du 3 août 2008, indiqué qu'un soldat avait visé l'enfant et tiré sur lui à bout portant à balle réelle. Ceux qui ont vu l'enfant ont indiqué que son visage était méconnaissable. Mustafa Barghouti, parlementaire palestinien de renom, aurait déclaré qu'Israël essayait d'inciter des manifestants pacifistes à la violence. Quelques jours plus tard, un deuxième Palestinien, âgé de 19 ans, Yousef Akmada Omaira, devait également succomber des suites de blessures reçues à la tête lors des funérailles d'Ahmed Mousa.

27. Selon le droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme, les résidents de Ni'lin avaient le droit de manifester pacifiquement contre un prolongement manifestement illégal de l'occupation, la poursuite de la construction sur des terres palestiniennes occupées du mur au mépris de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice et de son entérinement par une majorité écrasante des membres de l'Assemblée générale⁸. Par ailleurs, le recours excessif d'Israël à la force, surtout lorsqu'il semble délibérément chercher à tuer ou à mutiler des manifestants, dont des enfants, remet en cause toutes les affirmations selon lesquelles la police et l'armée avaient dû intervenir pour des raisons de sécurité et d'ordre public. Les populations ont le droit fondamental de défendre leur terre contre des confiscations illégales et ce droit s'applique en cas d'occupation lorsqu'il existe un régime juridique – quatrième Convention de Genève – expressément prévu pour préserver le caractère du territoire occupé et protéger les intérêts des citoyens qui y vivent. Suite à un certain nombre d'initiatives juridiques palestiniennes, les autorités israéliennes ont transférés des pans du mur ailleurs afin de limiter les entraves à l'activité agricole palestinienne à Nil'in et à Qalqilia.

⁷ Rapport sur la destruction par Israël d'établissements caritatifs musulmans à Hébron, 5 juin 2008.

IV. Les implantations de colonies dans le territoire palestinien occupé et leurs conséquences sur la jouissance des droits de l'homme

28. La poursuite de l'expansion des colonies israéliennes illégales en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem constitue de la part de la Puissance occupante une pratique grave et bien établie qui montre son mépris des engagements internationaux qu'elle a pris de geler l'expansion des colonies et de démanteler les avant-postes établis en Cisjordanie sans autorisation véritable. Par ailleurs, l'ampleur du programme d'implantation, notamment la mise en place de dispositifs de sécurité et la construction de routes, de tunnels et de ponts de contournement, est un obstacle majeur à l'instauration de la paix entre Israël et la Palestine ainsi qu'une source de frictions quotidiennes pour les habitants du territoire occupé. Le caractère illégal des colonies implantées partout dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, a été établi de longue date par un consensus de juristes internationaux et confirmé par des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité. Cette conclusion est étayée de façon on ne peut plus manifeste par l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève qui interdit à la Puissance occupante de transférer « une partie de sa propre population civile dans le territoire qu'elle occupe ».

29. Malheureusement, un échange de correspondance officielle entre Ariel Sharon, alors Premier Ministre d'Israël, et George W. Bush, Président des États-Unis d'Amérique, le 14 avril 2004, largement interprété comme un signe d'acceptation par les États-Unis de l'annexion permanente par Israël des vastes colonies israéliennes situées à proximité des frontières de 1967, abritant 80 % de la population totale des colons, ainsi que des parties occupées de Jérusalem, est venu compliquer la situation diplomatique pour ce qui est des colonies. Il est à noter que cette correspondance peut avoir un poids politique pour les deux gouvernements, mais qu'elle n'a aucune valeur juridique et ne saurait nullement compromettre les droits des palestiniens au regard du droit international humanitaire. Vue strictement sous cet angle, elle n'a rien à voir avec un processus de paix légitime quelconque et la participation de l'ONU doit clairement refléter le fait qu'elle ne peut en aucun cas compromettre des droits palestiniens.

⁸ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, Cour internationale de Justice, avis consultatif, 9 juillet 2004; l'Assemblée générale a, dans sa résolution ES-10/15 demandé aux parties de s'acquitter de leurs obligations juridiques telles qu'elles sont énoncées dans l'avis consultatif. Israël a refusé de se plier à l'avis consultatif et poursuivi la construction d'autres pans du mur.

30. Il est intéressant de constater que, même abstraction faite de l'importance juridique ou du poids moral de cette correspondance, la lettre du Premier Ministre Sharon portait déjà sur une initiative israélienne concernant les colonies, qui n'a nullement modifié la situation. Sharon y disait être conscient des responsabilités incombant à l'État d'Israël, s'agissant notamment de la limitation de l'expansion des colonies et du démantèlement des avant-postes non autorisés, responsabilités réaffirmées par l'actuel Gouvernement israélien à Annapolis qui, une fois de plus, ne s'en est aucunement acquitté. L'expansion des colonies, mesurée à l'aune de la population, mais plus encore, à celle de l'acquisition de terres, principalement par voie d'expropriation et de confiscation et du développement, s'est, au contraire, poursuivie à un rythme accéléré.

31. Cette situation et le cantonnement de la vie quotidienne palestinienne qui en est le corollaire sont de plus en plus perçus comme un message adressé aux Palestiniens pour leur signifier que la solution des deux États n'est plus viable même si elle reste la politique déclarée du Quatuor, l'Accord d'Annapolis, et ce qui revient le plus dans les commentaires faits sur les objectifs du processus de paix. Il est notamment troublant de constater que dans sa lettre, le Président Bush souscrit à l'idée de définir les obligations de retrait ultérieur d'Israël en fonction des réalités sur le terrain, notamment les grands centres de population israéliens. Il n'est fait nulle mention des rappels constants adressés au Gouvernement israélien sur l'incompatibilité de sa politique d'implantation avec ses obligations en vertu du droit international humanitaire et des résolutions spécifiques de l'ONU.

32. Le degré d'empiètement des colonies sur le territoire de la Cisjordanie et de Jérusalem-Est est difficile à déterminer avec précision du fait de leur expansion continue. D'après les estimations les plus fiables dont on dispose à l'heure actuelle, les terrains où se sont implantées des colonies faisant l'objet de litiges (auxquels sont venues s'ajouter les terres palestiniennes saisies pour la construction du mur de séparation) représentent 14 % du territoire de la Cisjordanie qui, lui-même, ne représente que 22 % de la Palestine sous mandat britannique d'origine. Selon les chiffres publiés récemment, il existe actuellement quelque 200 colonies, 100 avant-postes et 29 bases militaires israéliennes. Le coût du maintien du réseau de colonies est d'environ 556 millions de dollars par an et le nombre de colons se situe d'après les estimations entre 480 000 et 550 000 personnes. Le taux d'expansion des colonies est d'à peu près 4 % par an, tant pour la superficie que la population. Un certain nombre de problèmes particuliers découlant des colonies alimentent la violence, aussi bien celle des colons envers les Palestiniens que celle de la résistance palestinienne. La ville d'Hébron, où habitent 150 000 Palestiniens, est un point chaud constant et le théâtre de maints incidents violents et de morts tragiques. Sept cents colons y sont protégés par 300 soldats israéliens. Les statistiques les plus éloquentes (établies par le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires pour le territoire palestinien occupé) concernent peut-être le fait que les terres palestiniennes confisquées par Israël pour l'implantation de colonies, de zones militaires fermées (notamment presque toute la vallée du Jourdain) et de réserves classées naturelles par les Israéliens rendent à présent 40 % de la Cisjordanie inaccessibles ou inexploitable à des fins résidentielles, agricoles ou commerciales ou pour le développement municipal.

33. L'expansion des colonies a été particulièrement notable à Jérusalem-Est. Le Comité de planification et de construction du district de Jérusalem a récemment approuvé la construction de 1 800 nouveaux logements (920 à Har Homa/Jabal Abu Ghneim et 880 à Pisgat Ze'ev). L'expansion favorise également la politique israélienne visant à faire de Jérusalem-Est un lieu de résidence à majorité juive et s'accompagne d'expulsions de Palestiniens. Par ailleurs, la présence des 250 000 Juifs qui y vivent « illégalement » est passée sous silence.

V. Crise sanitaire dans les territoires palestiniens

34. Tous les observateurs spécialisés s'accordent à reconnaître l'existence à Gaza et en Cisjordanie d'une crise sanitaire persistante, de nature pluridimensionnelle, qui risque fort de provoquer un effondrement total du système de santé de base et d'avoir des conséquences désastreuses pour la population palestinienne.

35. La situation économique et sociale générale dans le territoire palestinien occupé se caractérise par des taux de chômage et de pauvreté extrêmement élevés, surtout à Gaza. Selon l'ONU et la Banque mondiale, le taux de pauvreté moyen pour la Cisjordanie et Gaza s'élève actuellement à 59 % et l'insécurité alimentaire touche au moins 38 % de l'ensemble de la population du territoire palestinien occupé. Le niveau de chômage à Gaza se situe officiellement à 45 %, le taux le plus élevé au monde, mais il s'agit là, pour diverses raisons, du chiffre réel d'une sous-estimation. Quatre-vingt-quinze pour cent des usines de Gaza seraient à présent fermées pour cause de siège. La Banque mondiale a laissé entendre que cette situation risquait de provoquer un effondrement économique « irréversible ».

36. Israël a classé Gaza dans la catégorie des « entités ennemies » depuis que le Hamas en a pris le contrôle à la mi-juin 2007, justifiant ainsi la réduction des approvisionnements en vivres et en combustible à la portion congrue. Selon les statistiques disponibles, Gaza ne reçoit que 30 % des combustibles dont il a besoin chaque semaine et n'est surtout pas suffisamment ravitaillé en huile de cuisine et en combustible diesel. Le classement dans la catégorie des « États ennemis » a également conduit Israël à bloquer le versement des recettes douanières palestiniennes, et l'Europe et les États-Unis ont suspendu leur aide économique à Gaza.

37. Les fournitures médicales et le matériel essentiel font souvent défaut car il est impossible d'importer des pièces détachées ou de rechange. Les habitants de Gaza qui sont malades et ont besoin de soins médicaux spécialisés impossibles à obtenir sur place éprouvent toutes les peines du monde à se faire délivrer des autorisations de sortie pour se faire soigner en Israël et nombre d'entre eux meurent faute d'avoir pu se faire administrer à temps les soins médicaux nécessaires. Les obstacles auxquels se heurtent les Palestiniens de Gaza malades qui se trouvent dans ce cas sont examinés au paragraphe 46. Selon le programme de santé mentale communautaire de Gaza, les effets conjugués de ces facteurs ont eu de graves conséquences sur la santé mentale des Palestiniens, la plupart des civils éprouvant des sentiments de peur, d'anxiété, de panique, de dépression, de frustration et de désespoir découlant des pratiques d'occupation israélienne, du siège et de la pauvreté.

38. La situation en Cisjordanie est moins dramatique du point de vue sanitaire, mais elle reste tout de même encore très en deçà des normes internationales minimales. Le taux de chômage s'élève à 25 %, même avec l'assistance économique dont bénéficie l'Autorité palestinienne, mais les fermetures et le cantonnement font qu'il est difficile, voire impossible, de maintenir une activité économique rémunérée. L'une des difficultés fondamentales tient notamment au fait qu'il existe des postes de contrôle et des barrages routiers et qu'il faut obtenir des permis, ce qui entrave les déplacements à destination et en provenance des centres médicaux, même en Cisjordanie, et surtout des villages et camps de réfugiés ceinturant les grandes villes où se trouvent les hôpitaux et autres établissements médicaux. Les restrictions rendent également l'accès à Israël très difficile, voire impossible, pour la plupart des Palestiniens vivant en Cisjordanie et c'est cette situation qui, de l'avis général, est à l'origine de diverses maladies, en particulier chez les enfants qui souffrent de malnutrition et de traumatismes.

39. Le Gouvernement israélien refuse toute responsabilité en tant que Puissance occupante pour la grave situation sanitaire. S'agissant de Gaza, il estime que depuis le 12 septembre 2005, il n'est plus la Puissance occupante, comme indiqué au paragraphe 5, et n'est par conséquent plus légalement responsable des problèmes auxquels doivent faire face les habitants de Gaza. Israël estime également que depuis la prise de contrôle de la bande par le Hamas, la politique de lutte contre le terrorisme qu'il mène vis-à-vis de Gaza est similaire à une guerre, une « guerre contre la terreur ». Selon le droit international, Israël demeure toutefois la Puissance occupante et est donc soumis à la quatrième Convention de Genève qui, dans ses articles 13 à 25, porte tout particulièrement sur l'obligation juridique qu'a la puissance occupante de protéger la santé de la population soumise à l'occupation.

40. Compte tenu de la nature prolongée de l'occupation et s'agissant de Gaza, des graves incidences supplémentaires qu'ont les politiques israéliennes sur la santé et le bien-être de l'ensemble de la population de la bande, ces obligations concernent tout particulièrement le territoire palestinien occupé. L'article 16, par exemple, est ainsi rédigé : « Les blessés et les malades, ainsi que les infirmes et les femmes enceintes, seront l'objet d'une protection et d'un respect particuliers. » Cette obligation est renforcée par le paragraphe 1 de l'article 25 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme qui dispose que « toute personne a droit à un niveau de vie suffisant pour assurer sa santé, son bien-être et ceux de sa famille, notamment pour l'alimentation, l'habillement, le logement, les soins médicaux ainsi que pour les services sociaux nécessaires; elle a droit à la sécurité en cas de chômage, de maladie, d'invalidité, de veuvage, de vieillesse et dans les autres cas de perte de ses moyens de subsistance par suite de circonstances indépendantes de sa volonté. »

41. L'articulation peut-être la plus claire du droit international concernant le droit à la santé se trouve au paragraphe 1 de l'article 12 du Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels qui est ainsi en partie rédigé : « Les États parties au présent Pacte reconnaissent le droit qu'a toute personne de jouir du meilleur état de santé physique et mentale qu'elle soit capable d'atteindre. » Le paragraphe 2 de l'article 12 et ses alinéas b) et d) sont également pertinents et ainsi rédigés : « Les mesures que les États parties au présent Pacte prendront en vue d'assurer le plein exercice de ce droit devront comprendre les mesures nécessaires pour assurer : b) l'amélioration de tous les aspects de l'hygiène du milieu et de l'hygiène industrielle; [...] et d) la création de conditions propres à assurer à tous des services médicaux et une aide médicale en cas de maladie ».

42. Israël est partie à cet instrument et est donc lié par les normes de base qui y figurent et sont, en tout état de cause, une expression des obligations juridiques consacrées par le droit international coutumier. De manière générale, les obligations aux termes du droit international humanitaire et des normes en matière de droits de l'homme sont tout particulièrement applicables lorsqu'une puissance occupante joue un rôle fiduciaire envers une population captive.

43. La démarche adoptée envers Gaza par Israël, les États-Unis d'Amérique et l'Union européenne depuis la victoire électorale du Hamas en janvier 2006 se fonde sur une violation massive et systématique de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève qui interdit absolument les peines collectives : « Aucune personne protégée ne peut être punie pour une infraction qu'elle n'a pas commise personnellement. Les peines collectives, de même que toute mesure d'intimidation ou de terrorisme, sont interdites. » De façon plus pratique, les spécialistes médicaux ne cessent d'appeler l'attention sur le fait que le système de santé à Gaza se trouve dans une situation précaire et même « au bord de l'effondrement » ou « non viable ».

44. La situation de la Cisjordanie, qui ne fait pourtant pas l'objet d'un siège systématique et dispose des fonds lui permettant de fournir des services de santé, ressemble par de nombreux aspects à celle de Gaza, même si Israël ne prétend pas ne plus être la Puissance occupante en Cisjordanie. Les politiques du Gouvernement israélien qui, en Cisjordanie, punissent la population palestinienne dans son ensemble, sont régulièrement justifiées comme étant nécessaires à la sécurité de l'occupation, notamment celles des colonies de peuplements et d'Israël même. Ces assertions relatives à la sécurité, quelle que soit leur validité quand elles sont faites indépendamment, doivent être mises en balance avec les effets négatifs causés au peuple occupé. C'est ce qu'a fait la Cour internationale de Justice s'agissant du mur (voir par. 3). Elle a rejeté l'assertion d'Israël, notamment parce que celui-ci avait construit le mur en territoire palestinien occupé et utilisé des terres confisquées pour agrandir les colonies de peuplement, objectif illégal et sans aucun rapport avec un besoin légitime de sécurité. Le traitement des maladies mentales et l'accès aux établissements médicaux, en particulier lors des urgences sanitaires, ont été particulièrement entravés par les restrictions à la liberté de mouvement dans l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie, notamment les points de contrôle, les barrages routiers et les fermetures. Ces restrictions semblent excessives et ont été fréquemment observées, en même temps que toute une gamme de pratiques visant à intimider et à humilier qui découragent le mouvement des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie. Au fil du temps, la situation a gravement porté préjudice à la santé des habitants. Cette politique d'isolement revient à infliger une peine collective et viole le paragraphe 1 de l'article 13 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme qui dispose que « toute personne a le droit de circuler librement et de choisir sa résidence à l'intérieur d'un État ».

45. Pour résumer, les formes qu'a prises l'occupation à Gaza et en Cisjordanie ont mis à rude épreuve le maintien de la santé physique et mentale des Palestiniens vivant en territoire occupé. Les effets négatifs ont été particulièrement graves pour les enfants. Il convient de noter que compte tenu de la durée de l'occupation, l'écrasante majorité des Palestiniens vivant à Gaza et en Cisjordanie ont passé toute leur vie sous l'occupation. Lors d'une conférence tenue à Jérusalem-Est, le Rapporteur spécial a été tout particulièrement frappé par l'observation faite par un professeur de Cisjordanie enseignant à l'Université de Bir-Zeit qui a dit « j'ai 43 ans et je n'ai pas eu un seul jour heureux dans ma vie ». Au-delà des statistiques, l'oppression d'une occupation militaire impitoyable et qui dure depuis longtemps ne permet pas de garder une santé mentale et physique minimale.

A. Autres violations touchant les patients de Gaza :
interrogation par le Shin Bet des patients palestiniens
au passage d'Erez

46. L'organisation Physicians for Human Rights-Israel (Médecins pour les droits de l'homme-Israël) a publié le 4 août 2008 un rapport contenant le témoignage de 32 patients de Gaza interrogés au point de passage d'Erez. Ce rapport se fonde sur des informations reçues depuis juillet 2007. Ces personnes, qui avaient des problèmes de santé graves mettant souvent leur vie en danger, souhaitaient entrer en Israël pour y recevoir un traitement médical urgent non disponible à Gaza. Elles ont affirmé qu'elles avaient été interrogées avec rudesse et d'une façon inappropriée et faite pour les intimider par des membres du Service général de sécurité israélien (Shin Bet). Il ressort des témoignages recueillis qu'Israël insiste systématiquement auprès des personnes cherchant à obtenir une autorisation de sortie pour qu'elles acceptent de fournir au Service général de sécurité les informations demandées ou de collaborer à l'avenir avec ce service, faute de quoi elles peuvent l'attendre indéfiniment. Le rapport indique également qu'un certain nombre d'habitants de Gaza ont décidé de ne pas se faire soigner plutôt que de se soumettre à un interrogatoire en dépit des conséquences probablement désastreuses de cette décision sur leur santé. Une personne a rapporté ce qui suit : « Ensuite, l'interrogateur m'a dit : "Vous avez le cancer et bientôt celui-ci se propagera vers votre cerveau. Tant que vous ne nous aiderez pas, vous devrez attendre l'ouverture du point de passage de Rafah" ». Cette remarque était typique des autres témoignages recueillis aux fins de l'établissement du rapport.

47. Le Gouvernement israélien a répondu aux allégations figurant dans le rapport de Physicians for Human Rights-Israel affirmant qu'il agissait dans le cadre de ses droits souverains et était raisonnable compte tenu des graves problèmes de sécurité, notamment des attaques lancées par le Hamas contre le point de passage d'Erez où avaient lieu les interrogatoires. Les principales assertions d'Israël sont qu'il n'a plus aucune responsabilité concernant ce qui se passe à Gaza car il a cessé d'être la Puissance occupante le 12 septembre 2005, qu'il a toute discrétion pour refuser l'accès des habitants de Gaza à Israël et les autorités judiciaires israéliennes ont soutenu cette conclusion.

48. Du point de vue du droit international humanitaire, la bande de Gaza (voir par. 5) continue d'être sous occupation israélienne. En conséquence, bien qu'ils ne s'appliquent pas explicitement à la situation examinée, les articles 55 et 56 de la quatrième Convention de Genève disposent que toute puissance a l'obligation juridique générale de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour sauvegarder la santé des personnes protégées.

49. Selon la façon dont on considère ces tentatives d'extorsion d'informations et de collaboration en échange d'autorisations de sortie permettant de recevoir un traitement médical, il semblerait qu'elles violent l'alinéa c) du paragraphe 1 de l'article 3 qui interdit les traitements cruels et la torture ainsi que l'article 5 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme. L'instrument juridique qui est peut-être le plus pertinent est la Convention contre la torture qui définit toute une série de conditions permettant d'éviter inférence de « torture et autres traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants ». L'article 1 établit un lien entre la torture et les traitements connexes susceptibles d'entraîner des souffrances physiques ou mentales et le comportement d'agents publics au cours d'un interrogatoire visant à obtenir des informations par différentes formes d'intimidation. D'autres dispositions de la Convention contre la torture prévoient toute une gamme d'obligations juridiques par les États et donnent des droits aux personnes lésées.

50. Le Rapporteur spécial conclut que les pratiques israéliennes relatives aux interrogatoires dont fait état Physicians for Human Rights-Israel dans son rapport qui se fonde sur les témoignages d'habitants de Gaza donnent fortement à penser qu'Israël, en tant que Puissance occupante, viole ses obligations juridiques. Les réponses données par Israël ne sont pas satisfaisantes car elles partent de l'hypothèse que la bande de Gaza n'est plus occupée. Selon d'autres nouvelles inquiétantes, six habitants de Gaza gravement malades sont morts en 24 heures pendant qu'ils attendaient la permission de se déplacer. D'après le Free Gaza Movement, 233 patients de Gaza gravement malades sont morts pendant qu'ils attendaient l'autorisation de quitter Gaza afin d'obtenir le traitement médical qui leur était nécessaire au cours du siège.

VI. Recommandations

51. Les recommandations ci-après, tirées du rapport, sont mises en évidence de toute urgence :

a) L'Assemblée générale devrait demander à la Cour internationale de Justice de procéder à une évaluation juridique de l'occupation israélienne du territoire palestinien du point de vue du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination;

b) Il conviendrait d'obtenir l'assistance du Conseil de sécurité concernant la mise en œuvre de l'avis consultatif rendu en 2004 par la Cour internationale de Justice sur les conséquences juridiques de la construction d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé;

c) Compte tenu du fait que les Conventions de Genève ont fait l'objet de graves violations pendant longtemps, il serait bon de se pencher sérieusement sur les obligations juridiques des Parties à ces traités afin de veiller à ce que les engagements de fond mentionnés à l'article premier soient respectés. Il pourrait être envisagé initialement de prier instamment le Gouvernement suisse, dépositaire des Conventions de Genève, de convoquer une réunion des États parties afin d'examiner comment ils peuvent s'acquitter de leurs obligations juridiques, compte tenu du fait qu'Israël persiste à violer son régime juridique d'occupation;

d) Il conviendrait que tous les organismes compétents des Nations Unies prennent dûment note du fait qu'Israël ne respecte pas les engagements qu'il a pris lors du sommet d'Annapolis de mettre un terme à l'expansion des colonies de peuplement, d'améliorer la liberté de mouvement en Cisjordanie et de satisfaire les besoins humanitaires des Palestiniens qui vivent sous son occupation;

e) L'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait examiner quelle est sa responsabilité propre pour ce qui est du bien-être des Palestiniens vivant sous occupation illégale, en particulier s'agissant des irrégularités concernant le contrôle des frontières, la liberté et l'indépendance des journalistes et la crise sanitaire générale, en particulier à Gaza;

f) Compte tenu de la crise sanitaire à Gaza, les membres de la communauté internationale, et notamment l'Organisation des Nations Unies, devraient reprendre leur assistance économique à titre hautement prioritaire. Face à la menace de catastrophe humanitaire, il importe au plus haut point de faire tout ce qui est possible pour alléger les souffrances humaines. Il s'agit d'une responsabilité envers la population civile de Gaza qui n'a rien à voir avec le respect par le Hamas des conditions politiques définies par Israël ni avec le maintien du cessez-le-feu.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
25 septembre 2009
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-quatrième session

Point 71 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux Membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Richard Falk, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/64/150.

 Le présent document a été soumis après la date limite afin que des renseignements sur les faits les plus récents puissent y figurer.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport porte sur le respect des normes internationales humanitaires et relatives aux droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967, au cours de la période allant de décembre 2008 à juillet 2009. Il prend note du refus persistant et arbitraire du Gouvernement israélien de coopérer avec le titulaire du mandat. Il s'intéresse particulièrement à la bande de Gaza au lendemain de l'opération militaire israélienne « Plomb durci » et signale que le maintien du blocus met en péril les droits fondamentaux et entrave les travaux de reconstruction et de réparation des infrastructures civiles de base.

Le rapport évalue les crimes qui auraient été commis lors de l'opération « Plomb durci » et la question des responsabilités. Il examine les informations faisant état d'attaques contre des installations de l'ONU et la population civile et en analyse les aspects juridiques. Le rapport relève les témoignages de soldats qui ont pris part à l'opération « Plomb durci », qui confirment un recours constant à des règles d'engagement floues et la destruction systématique de cibles qui ne pouvaient se justifier ni sur le plan militaire ni par souci de sécurité.

Le rapport aborde la question des colonies de peuplement israéliennes en notant que de récentes discussions engagées sur le gel de leur implantation en ont fait des jalons politiques plutôt que des droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit international humanitaire. Enfin, le rapport évoque la question de la poursuite de la construction d'un mur dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et le non-respect par Israël de l'avis consultatif rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice en 2004, qu'il estime porter préjudice au droit international, à la Cour internationale de Justice et à l'Organisation des Nations Unies en général.

Le rapport s'achève sur des recommandations invitant l'Assemblée générale à adresser une demande d'avis consultatif à la Cour internationale de Justice sur l'obligation et le devoir qui incombent aux États Membres de coopérer avec l'Organisation et ses représentants; à encourager les Membres de l'Organisation à user de moyens nationaux, notamment en faisant appel aux tribunaux, pour faire appliquer le droit pénal international aux territoires palestiniens occupés; à faire dorénavant du respect par Israël du droit international et des droits des Palestiniens un élément constitutif des négociations de paix futures; et à envisager de limiter la quantité d'armes fournies aux parties au conflit israélo-palestinien.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	4
II. Gaza après le cessez-le-feu	7
A. Le blocus	8
B. Crimes de guerre et responsabilité	10
C. Rompre le silence	12
III. Les implantations en territoire palestinien et leur impact sur la jouissance effective des droits de l'homme	15
IV. Le mur et ses conséquences juridiques	18
V. Recommandations	20

I. Introduction

1. Nommé conformément à la résolution 1993/2 A de la Commission des droits de l'homme, le 26 mars 2008, le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 a pris fonction le 1^{er} mai 2008. Richard Falk, Rapporteur spécial titulaire du mandat, a été expulsé d'Israël le 14 décembre 2008, et en dépit de maintes démarches officielles effectuées pour tenter de déterminer les prochaines visites en territoire palestinien occupé, Israël a rejeté toutes ces initiatives sans fournir d'explication.

2. Son rapport prend note en particulier du maintien du refus arbitraire d'Israël de coopérer avec le titulaire dans le cadre de l'accomplissement de son mandat. La mission d'établissement des faits sur le conflit de Gaza dirigée par le juge Richard Goldstone s'est également vu refuser entrée et coopération. Comme il ressort de rapports précédents, cette non-coopération crée un fâcheux précédent dans les relations du Conseil des droits de l'homme de l'ONU et les États Membres et entrave les activités menées dans le cadre du mandat. Comme ce fut le cas précédemment, il est recommandé à l'Assemblée générale ou au Conseil des droits de l'homme de demander des précisions sur les conséquences juridiques de ce manque de coopération en portant l'affaire devant la Cour internationale de Justice en vue de l'obtention d'un avis consultatif. Faute d'avoir pu effectuer des visites d'inspection, le Rapporteur spécial compte beaucoup, pour l'établissement de son rapport, sur le travail des autres, notamment d'un large éventail d'organisations non gouvernementales de défense des droits de l'homme indépendantes et fiables et celui de divers acteurs du système des Nations Unies.

3. Le rapport couvre des événements qui se sont déroulés principalement de décembre 2008 à juillet 2009 et plusieurs questions seront examinées en détail, notamment la crise à Gaza, le non-respect du principe de responsabilité, l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice rendu le 9 juillet 2004 sur l'édification d'un mur de sécurité par Israël¹, l'expansion des colonies, l'autodétermination palestinienne et les lacunes du droit international humanitaire. Les sections suivantes donnent un bref aperçu de chacune de ces questions.

4. Pour ce qui est de la crise de Gaza, bien que le cessez-le-feu établi par les parties le 18 janvier 2009 ait généralement tenu, la situation globale a continué à se détériorer au point de révéler des infractions graves et systématiques de la quatrième Convention de Genève et des violations du droit international des droits de l'homme qui ont des incidences sur le droit pénal international. En raison du maintien du blocus sur la bande de Gaza, la population manque de denrées de première nécessité; les conditions sanitaires se sont encore dégradées, allant jusqu'à mettre en danger tous les habitants; les matériaux nécessaires à la réparation et à la reconstruction des maisons et des bâtiments endommagés par les forces de défense israéliennes pendant les 22 jours de la guerre de Gaza n'ont pas pu entrer. Le système des Nations Unies est mis au défi de prendre d'urgence des mesures concrètes pour assurer la protection de la population civile de Gaza.

¹ Voir A/ES-10/273 et Corr.1; voir aussi Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, Avis consultatif, Rapport de la Cour internationale de Justice 2004, p. 136, et résolution ES-10/15 de l'Assemblée générale.

5. À propos de la responsabilité, plusieurs rapports convergents et complémentaires faisant autorité sont venus à présent confirmer les allégations de crimes de guerre². Il importerait d'ajouter à ces informations dont on dispose le rapport de la mission d'établissement des faits dirigée par le juge Goldstone, attendu le 12 septembre 2009, mais il n'est pas très prématuré de s'interroger sur la suite à lui donner, c'est-à-dire chercher à mettre en place des mécanismes propres à assurer le respect du principe de responsabilité et à éviter l'impunité. La récente décision du Gouvernement britannique d'annuler des contrats de livraison de pièces détachées à la marine israélienne découlait d'objections au sujet de la manière dont Israël avait conduit ses dernières opérations militaires. Il est intéressant de noter qu'Amnesty International a préconisé un embargo total sur les livraisons d'armes à Israël et au Hamas à la faveur de ses conclusions examinées plus haut sur l'opération militaire israélienne à Gaza baptisée opération « Plomb durci ».

6. Le cinquième anniversaire de la publication de l'avis consultatif sur l'édification d'un mur de sécurité par Israël¹ appelle l'attention sur plusieurs facteurs : a) en dépit de l'avis quasi unanime de la Cour internationale de Justice (14 juges contre un) selon lequel le mur situé sur le territoire palestinien occupé était illégal et devrait être démantelé immédiatement, Israël en a poursuivi la construction qui est à présent aux deux tiers achevée; b) le mépris d'Israël à l'égard d'une décision de la Cour internationale de Justice qui fait autorité en matière de droit international constitue une grave violation de ses obligations de Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et d'État souverain; bien que revêtant la forme d'un « avis consultatif », la décision de la Cour représente un avis autorisé du droit international et a été également considérée comme telle par l'Assemblée générale dans une résolution ES-10/15 adoptée le 20 juillet 2004; c) le fait que le système des Nations Unies ne se soit pas mieux employé à appliquer une décision aussi claire et quasi unanime du droit international est une nouvelle indication que les droits des Palestiniens ne sont pas respectés et qu'Israël jouit d'une impunité de fait; d) les manifestations pacifiques que les Palestiniens continuent d'organiser à différents points de construction du mur ont été brutalement réprimées par les forces de sécurité israéliennes, faisant plusieurs morts et de nombreux blessés³.

7. Au sujet de l'expansion des colonies, malgré les nombreux appels lancés en faveur d'un gel, notamment par le Président Obama des États-Unis, des informations font état de leur poursuite à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie. L'Autorité palestinienne et le Gouvernement des États-Unis ont clairement fait comprendre que l'on ne pourra pas faire avancer la Feuille de route tant qu'Israël ne procédera pas à un gel inconditionnel de l'expansion des colonies. Il conviendrait de noter que même s'il fait l'objet d'un accord, un gel ne résout pas la question de l'illégalité fondamentale des colonies telle que définie à l'article 49 (6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

² Voir par. 24 ci-dessous.

³ Mille huit cent quatre Palestiniens ont été blessés lors de manifestations organisées contre la construction du mur entre janvier 2005 et juin 2009, soit 31 % de l'ensemble des traumatismes causés directement par le conflit en Cisjordanie. Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires « Five Years after the International Court of Justice Advisory Opinion: A Summary of the Humanitarian Impact of the Barrier », 10 juillet 2009. Consultable à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org.

8. À propos de l'autodétermination palestinienne, le droit le plus fondamental au regard du droit international dont la réalisation a été entravée par l'occupation israélienne des territoires palestiniens est le droit inaliénable à l'autodétermination tel que consacré par l'article 1 des pactes internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme. De l'avis général, l'exercice de ce droit palestinien serait assuré par le biais de négociations bilatérales, renforcées par le rôle des États-Unis, plus récemment par le Quatuor (avec la participation directe de l'ONU) et encouragées par la communauté internationale tout entière. L'exercice de ce droit n'ayant été que trop longtemps retardé et les Palestiniens placés sous occupation étant victimes de multiples formes d'arbitraire, œuvrer pour trouver une solution pacifique et mettre un terme à l'occupation israélienne relèvent de la plus grande urgence.

9. Il importe au titre du présent rapport de relever deux séries de faits contradictoires, d'aucuns négatifs, d'autres apparemment positifs, qui influent sur le droit à l'autodétermination. Le principal élément négatif est le refus apparent du Gouvernement israélien récemment élu d'adhérer clairement au consensus international sur un État palestinien souverain constitué de la Cisjordanie et de la bande de Gaza, avec Jérusalem Est pour capitale; l'incapacité de la partie palestinienne de se doter d'une représentation unifiée et légitime qui semblerait être une condition préalable à de véritables négociations de paix en est un autre.

10. Cette série de facteurs a conduit ces derniers mois à la préconisation d'une solution imposée par des parties externes, souvent appelée le « Plan Solana » en raison de l'importance accordée aux propositions formulées dans ce sens par Javier Solana. À l'heure actuelle, ni l'opinion publique ni les dirigeants israéliens ou palestiniens ne sont favorables à une solution imposée, et sa préconisation doit être perçue comme un élément négatif, incompatible avec le droit à l'autodétermination et comme l'expression d'une frustration découlant de la futilité apparente de négociations directes.

11. Les éléments positifs reposent sur une définition claire de l'importance des progrès devant être réalisés sur le plan de l'autodétermination compte tenu de l'arrêt de l'occupation israélienne et de la création d'un État palestinien. À cet effet, le Président Obama a déclaré en substance le 4 juin 2009 au Caire que la situation du peuple palestinien était intolérable et que l'Amérique ne tournerait pas le dos aux aspirations légitimes du peuple palestinien à la dignité, à un avenir meilleur et à un État propre. Cette position a été réitérée par le Conseil de sécurité dans sa déclaration du 11 mai 2009 et par le Quatuor dans sa déclaration du 26 juin 2009 à Trieste. Il a estimé qu'une paix israélo-arabe et la création d'un État palestinien en Cisjordanie et à Gaza au sein duquel le peuple palestinien peut déterminer son propre destin sont dans l'intérêt suprême de la communauté internationale.

12. S'agissant des lacunes du droit international humanitaire, l'occupation prolongée des territoires palestiniens ainsi que les récentes opérations militaires menées par Israël ont révélé trois lacunes dans le droit qu'il convient de relever et de combler aussitôt que possible : a) le déni du droit des civils de quitter une zone de combat. Ce droit a été nié à tous les civils de Gaza lors de l'opération « Plomb durci » à l'exception de quelques centaines de résidents titulaires de passeports étrangers et de membres d'une communauté chrétienne restreinte de Gaza⁴. Divers problèmes semblent se poser ici concernant le devoir qui incombe aux occupants de protéger la population civile comme le stipule très clairement le Protocole additionnel I aux Conventions de Genève, qui est contraignant parce que ses normes sont incorporées dans le droit international coutumier en dépit du fait qu'Israël n'est pas partie à ce traité⁵; b) le refus d'autoriser le passage de matériaux fournis au titre de l'aide à la reconstruction par la communauté internationale pour réparer les dégâts causés par la guerre à Gaza en raison du maintien d'un blocus en violation de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Ce blocage de l'aide à la reconstruction pourrait être assimilé à un cas de châtement collectif interdit mais qui, parce qu'il soulève une série de problèmes distincts d'après combat qui ne sont pas explicitement abordés par le droit international humanitaire, pourrait mieux être servi par l'adoption d'un autre protocole aux Conventions de Genève; et c) les dislocations poignantes de familles résultant directement de l'occupation prolongée du territoire palestinien occupé, à présent dans sa quarante-deuxième année, alliées aux restrictions de déplacements imposées par la Puissance occupante, sont venues accentuer les souffrances palestiniennes, ce qui semble inadmissible du point de vue du droit international des droits de l'homme.

⁴ Voir le rapport d'Amnesty International intitulé « Israel and Gaza: Opération "Cast Lead": 22 days of death and destruction », 2 juillet 2009, consultable à l'adresse suivante : www.amnesty.org/en/library/info/MDE15/015/2009/en.

13. La lauréate du prix Nobel de la paix, Mairead Maguire, qui se rend fréquemment en visite à Gaza et en Cisjordanie, a récemment indiqué qu'il était à juste titre beaucoup question d'accès des populations et de l'aide à Gaza mais que, pour elle, le crime le plus abominable que commet le Gouvernement israélien est de séparer les habitants de Gaza de leur famille et de leurs amis de Cisjordanie et également d'autres Palestiniens à travers le monde. Et de noter que nier aux gens le droit de retrouver leur famille et leurs amis est assurément l'une des pires formes de torture et de châtement collectif imposées à des civils⁶. Ces déclarations ne témoignent manifestement pas de l'existence de droits juridiques, mais signalent celle de lacunes dans la protection par le droit international humanitaire d'une population civile soumise à une occupation prolongée. Dans la situation de la Palestine, où les droits d'entrée et de sortie sont soumis à un contrôle si rigoureux, ces restrictions sont source d'angoisses particulièrement vives. Un autre aspect de l'occupation prolongée est lié au fait que des réfugiés palestiniens vivant à l'étranger aient été coupés de leur famille pendant plus de quatre décennies. Cette profonde lacune observée dans la protection des civils et découlant d'une occupation prolongée semble n'avoir pas du tout été examinée dans le cadre actuel du droit international humanitaire.

II. Gaza après le cessez-le-feu

14. La crise que traverse encore toute la population civile de la bande de Gaza dans des circonstances d'interminable désespoir imputables à divers aspects illégaux de l'occupation israélienne pose un problème au système des Nations Unies et à la communauté internationale. Méconnaître ce problème reviendrait à proclamer que les violations des normes du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme sont sans importance et qu'un État bénéficiant d'un soutien géopolitique puissant jouit d'une impunité pratiquement illimitée.

⁵ Ibid., voir les articles 51, 52, 57 du Protocole I des Conventions de Genève.

⁶ Lettre adressée à Miguel d'Escoto-Brockamn, Président de l'Assemblée générale, le 17 juillet 2009.

A. Le blocus

15. Le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR) a publié le 1^{er} juillet 2009 un important rapport intitulé Gaza: 1.5 Million People Trapped in Despair. Prenant note de l'immense dévastation humaine et matérielle causée par les 22 jours de l'opération Plomb durci, le CICR écrit ceci : « Six mois plus tard [après le cessez-le-feu], les restrictions aux importations empêchent les habitants de reconstruire leur vie. Les quantités de marchandises qui entrent actuellement à Gaza sont très inférieures à ce qu'il faudrait. En mai 2009, seuls 2 662 camions transportant des marchandises y sont entrés depuis Israël, soit près de 80 % de moins qu'en avril 2007 (11 392 camions), avant que le Hamas reprenne le territoire. »⁷. Selon les estimations d'Amnesty International, cela représente environ 5 % de la moyenne quotidienne des marchandises qui entraient à Gaza avant le blocus, encore que, selon certaines estimations, l'écart serait de 1 à 5.

16. Le rapport du CICR note que les quartiers de Gaza détruits par l'opération militaire continueront de ressembler à l'épicentre d'un vaste séisme sauf si des quantités massives⁷ de matériaux de construction sont admises tant pour construire que pour réparer les dégâts à l'infrastructure. De plus, 340 000 Palestiniens auraient été déplacés par l'opération Plomb durci et, en raison du blocus, beaucoup seraient encore sans abri. Dans sa lettre ouverte à Carl Bildt⁸, le Conseil palestinien des organisations des droits de l'homme affirme ceci : « Les malades, dont certains ont été blessés du fait de l'opération Plomb durci se voient régulièrement refuser la permission de quitter la bande de Gaza afin de recevoir à l'étranger un traitement médical vital, ce qui s'est traduit par plusieurs décès. »

17. Selon le rapport du CICR, « le seul moyen de faire face à cette crise est de lever les restrictions sur les pièces détachées, les conduites d'eau et les matériaux de construction comme le ciment et l'acier [et le verre] afin de pouvoir reconstruire les logements et entretenir ou améliorer l'infrastructure essentielle⁷. Or, en l'état actuel des choses, le maintien du blocus empêche la reconstruction, laisse le système d'évacuation des eaux et des déchets dans l'insalubrité et propage la crise sanitaire déjà décrite dans le rapport précédent du Rapporteur spécial (A/63/326). Bien que 4,5 milliards de dollars aient été promis en mars 2009 en Égypte à la Conférence des donateurs pour la reconstruction de Gaza, cette somme n'y a eu presque aucun effet sur la vie quotidienne ni sur sa population. De son côté, Israël soutient que seules les marchandises « humanitaires » pourront y entrer et qu'il entend strictement par là la subsistance à l'exclusion d'aliments comme le concentré de tomates, les biscuits et le thon en boîte ainsi que tous les matériaux de construction.

18. Ces derniers mois, le blocus a encore aggravé la misère des habitants que, de plus en plus, les spécialistes estiment quasiment irréversible sauf effort massif. Comme le dit le rapport du CICR, la crise est devenue si grave et si invétérée que, même si demain, tous les points de passage étaient ouverts, il faudrait des années pour relancer l'économie⁷. Selon les chiffres récents, le chômage serait de plus de 44 %, la dépendance envers l'aide alimentaire de subsistance de 80 %, le déclin de la production industrielle de 96 % et la pauvreté de plus de 70 %. Dans les débats sur le blocus, on met généralement l'accent sur les restrictions aux importations mais l'interdiction frappant les exportations a elle aussi été catastrophique pour l'économie et le bien-être de la population de Gaza, anéantissant les exportations industrielles et agricoles qui avaient donné une certaine sécurité matérielle à de nombreux habitants et permis d'espérer que la bande de Gaza finirait par se développer. Il ne suffirait d'ailleurs pas de revenir au statu quo antérieur à l'opération Plomb durci : seule serait acceptable la levée complète du blocus qui permettrait d'importer et d'exporter comme en mai 2007.

⁷ Voir Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, Gaza: 1.5 Million People Trapped in Despair, juillet 2009.

⁸ Voir lettre datée du 23 juillet 2009, adressée à Carl Bildt, Ministre suédois des affaires étrangères, par le Conseil palestinien des organisations des droits de l'homme.

19. Un effet pervers du maintien du blocus est qu'il amène les habitants à recourir à des tunnels vers l'Égypte pour obtenir des produits essentiels, ce qui donne lieu à des activités de marché noir et crée de graves dangers. Ainsi, en 2009, 39 personnes seraient mortes du fait d'accidents dans ces tunnels, écrasées dans un éboulement ou asphyxiées par des fuites de carburant. Comme on l'a noté, le siège rigoureux imposé par les forces d'occupation israéliennes à la bande de Gaza a incité à l'emploi des tunnels qui a prospéré face à la grave pénurie de biens essentiels⁹. Or, si les points de passage étaient ouverts, il est probable que les tunnels disparaîtraient ou que leur rôle serait borné à des efforts de contrebande d'armes et d'autres articles. Selon les spécialistes des armements, les roquettes Qassam que le Hamas a surtout utilisées dans ses attaques contre Israël sont fabriquées à Gaza même : il n'y a donc pas lieu de maintenir fermés les points de passage pour des raisons de sécurité. Il serait plus logique qu'Israël surveille le trafic dans les tunnels, dans la mesure où il persisterait, pour déceler la contrebande d'armes.

20. La nocivité de la stricte limitation des déplacements pour les relations familiales et sociales s'inscrit dans la situation qui règne à Gaza et que le CICR résume éloquemment par la formule applicable à toute la population de la bande : « captive du désespoir ». Autre dimension de cette captivité : l'interdiction faite à des centaines de jeunes de poursuivre des études à l'étranger¹⁰, avec des cas cruels et déprimants de Palestiniens qui, après avoir obtenu une bourse d'études dans de grandes universités, se voient refuser un permis de sortie par Israël, Puissance occupante¹¹.

21. On ne saurait trop répéter que le blocus en soi est manifestement et vindicativement illégal vu l'obligation d'éviter sans exception les punitions collectives qu'impose clairement l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Il constitue donc un énorme crime de guerre. Refuser l'entrée des matériaux de reconstruction semble bien être une violation aggravante de l'article 33, d'autant plus sévère qu'à la suite de l'opération Plomb durci, la population est physiquement et psychologiquement vulnérable.

22. Une fois encore, le Free Gaza Movement a cherché à envoyer à Gaza un navire, le Spirit of Humanity, chargé de fournitures humanitaires comme expression symbolique du rejet de ce blocus illégal par les militants de la paix. Six navires avaient déjà réussi à accoster à Gaza; un autre, le Dignity, percuté en décembre 2008

⁹ Voir Centre Al-Mezan pour les droits de l'homme, communiqué de presse n° 67/2009 du 28 juillet 2009.

¹⁰ Voir Bureau de coordination des affaires humanitaires; The Humanitarian Monitor, juin et juillet 2009.

¹¹ Pour la confirmation de ce rôle du point de vue du droit international, voir le rapport d'Amnesty International, p. 80, qui rejette l'affirmation d'Israël selon laquelle l'exécution de son plan de « désengagement » en 2005 l'a dégagé de ses responsabilités de puissance occupante à Gaza.

par un navire de guerre israélien, n'y est pas parvenu. Le but proclamé de cette mission était de livrer à Gaza des fournitures nécessaires mais aussi d'exposer la carence de l'ONU et de la communauté intergouvernementale des États dans l'application du droit international humanitaire qu'exigent les articles 1 et 147 de la quatrième Convention de Genève ainsi que le paragraphe 1 de l'article 86 du Protocole I.

23. Comme auparavant, le navire a été arraisonné dans les eaux internationales, ce qui constitue un acte illégal; les passagers ont été détenus, certains pendant plusieurs jours; parmi eux figurait l'ancienne parlementaire américaine et candidate présidentielle du Parti vert, Cyntia McKinney. Bien que l'affaire se soit déroulée en un lieu international, 20 passagers ont été initialement accusés « d'entrée illégale dans les eaux israéliennes »; ils ont ensuite été relâchés. Le Free Gaza Movement renforce nettement l'impression qu'en l'occurrence la société civile prend plus au sérieux que les gouvernements le droit international humanitaire et le droit pénal international.

B. Crimes de guerre et responsabilité

24. Plusieurs études importantes faites sous des auspices respectés ont confirmé les soupçons issus d'exposés journalistiques et de récits de témoins oculaires concernant les crimes de guerre liés à l'opération Plomb durci : a) une étude complète présentée le 30 avril 2009, élaborée à l'initiative de la Ligue arabe par une équipe de spécialistes du droit international humanitaire dirigés par John Dugard, ancien Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, et intitulée « Rapport à la Commission indépendante d'enquête sur Gaza : nulle part où s'abriter »; le grand rapport sur les crimes de guerre publié en juillet 2009 par Amnesty International : « Israël/Gaza: Operation "Cast Lead": 22 Days of Death and Destruction »; plusieurs rapports de Human Rights Watch¹²; et 3) le rapport du CICR intitulé Gaza: 1.5 Million People Trapped in Despair, qui ne fait que confirmer l'ampleur de la dévastation qu'aggrave encore Israël en refusant de lever le blocus. Il existe aussi un grand rapport de la Commission d'enquête de l'ONU sur les dommages infligés aux installations de l'ONU et à son personnel par l'opération Plomb durci. Une série de conclusions relatives à la responsabilité et aux obligations d'Israël sont exposées dans le résumé du rapport; malheureusement, sur l'ordre du Secrétaire général, le texte intégral n'a pas été publié mais sa conclusion principale est que, sans justification militaire suffisante et de propos délibéré, Israël a gravement endommagé plusieurs installations de l'ONU et causé de lourdes pertes parmi ceux qui s'étaient réfugiés dans ses immeubles et ses écoles.

25. Les rapports de John Dugard, d'Amnesty International et de Human Rights Watch sont des plus fiables car ils convergent à deux égards importants : d'abord ils adoptent une démarche impartiale face aux allégations de crimes de guerre liés aux tactiques du Hamas, notamment le tir de roquettes contre le sud d'Israël et les accusations de recours par ses combattants à des boucliers humains, et ils contiennent un examen détaillé des allégations sur les tactiques israéliennes pendant l'opération Plomb durci; ensuite, leur évaluation des faits et de la cause concordent et amènent à l'incrimination primordiale des tactiques de combat israéliennes comme contrevenant au droit international humanitaire et relevant donc du droit pénal international. Ces conclusions sont encore étayées par le témoignage extraordinaire de 30 soldats des Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) ayant pris part à l'opération Plomb durci, auquel le Gouvernement israélien a opposé des démentis de pure forme¹³. De plus, les rapports ont dégagé une conclusion subsidiaire selon laquelle les tactiques du Hamas, même sur une base bien plus restreinte, constituaient aussi des violations des lois de la guerre.

¹² Rain of Fire, Israel's Unlawful Use of White Phosphorus in Gaza, 25 mars 2009; Precisely Wrong Gaza Civilians Killed by Israeli Drone-Launched Missiles, 30 juin 2009; Gaza/Israël : les tirs de roquettes par le Hamas contre la population civile israélienne sont illégaux, 6 août 2009; White Flag Deaths, Killings of Palestinian Civilians during Operation Cast Lead, 13 août 2009 (voir <http://www.hrw.org/en/publications/reports/>).

26. On l'a dit plus haut, malgré le consensus écrasant lié à la documentation disponible sur les allégations de crimes de guerre visant Israël et le Hamas (autorité gouvernante de fait à Gaza), le rapport de la mission d'enquête du juge Goldstone, attendu avec grand intérêt, portera vraisemblablement sur le même ensemble de questions, tout en comportant aussi l'évaluation des témoignages reçus lors d'une série d'audiences avec des victimes et d'autres participants; il faut noter que les membres de cette mission, décidée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme, se sont aussi vu refuser l'accès à Gaza depuis Israël et ont dû faire appel au concours du Gouvernement égyptien pour y entrer; la coopération demandée à Israël leur a été refusée. Leur rapport est attendu pour septembre 2009.

27. Que ce soit en réponse aux témoignages accablants des soldats israéliens ou en prévision de la parution du rapport du juge Goldstone, le Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères a annoncé le 30 juillet 2009 qu'il allait enquêter sur 100 plaintes concernant l'opération Plomb durci, y compris les allégations relatives à l'utilisation d'obus au phosphore. C'est là une reconnaissance salubre par le Gouvernement israélien qu'il vaut mieux recevoir les allégations de crimes de guerre et enquêter sur elles que les rejeter sommairement. Bien qu'on continue d'espérer que l'objectivité prévaudra, l'annonce officielle de l'enquête par Israël a été jointe à une réaffirmation détaillée et une explication complète de la raison pour laquelle l'opération Plomb durci était, face aux tirs de roquettes et aux attentats-suicides qui ont eu lieu pendant huit ans, une riposte nécessaire et mesurée, menée avec un souci scrupuleux du droit international humanitaire¹⁴.

28. Tout ce qui précède indique que, une fois les faits établis et les recommandations reçues, l'attention se portera sur la question plus difficile de la mise au point d'un mécanisme approprié pour établir la responsabilité des crimes de guerre. Pour des raisons politiques, il ne sera probablement pas créé sous les auspices de l'ONU, qui d'ailleurs en a la capacité juridique, comme on l'a vu dans les années 90 avec la création des tribunaux pénaux spéciaux pour l'ex-Yougoslavie et le Rwanda. De plus, l'Assemblée générale a, selon l'Article 22 de la Charte des Nations Unies, l'autorité constitutionnelle de créer les organes subsidiaires qu'elle juge nécessaires à l'exercice de ses fonctions, bien qu'elle n'ait jamais créé un tribunal pénal, il y a tout lieu de penser qu'elle y est habilitée. Par ailleurs, pour des raisons tant juridictionnelles que politiques, il est presque certain que la Cour pénale internationale ne pourra pas être saisie : Israël n'y est pas partie et lui refuserait à coup sûr sa coopération. La Palestine n'a cherché à en faire partie qu'après l'opération Plomb durci et on estime en général qu'elle ne peut juridiquement pas prétendre actuellement à être admise comme « État ». Il est donc probable qu'on ne pourra faire jouer la responsabilité que par des initiatives de la société civile liées à l'imposition de boycottages sportifs et culturels et au désinvestissement commercial et financier. Là aussi, on s'attend à ce que ni les gouvernements ni l'ONU ne s'acquitteront, le moment venu, de leurs obligations juridiques internationales.

¹³ Voir ci-dessous par. 29 et note 14.

¹⁴ Voir Reuters, « Israel says investigating 100 Gaza war complaints » 30 juillet 2009; le texte intégral du rapport israélien s'intitule : The Operation in Gaza: Factual and Legal Aspects, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, 29 juillet 2009.

C. Rompre le silence

29. Breaking the Silence: Operation Cast Lead (Rompre le silence : l'opération Plomb durci)¹⁵ est une publication qui regroupe les réponses de soldats qui ont participé à l'opération militaire. Elle a suscité un vif intérêt de la part des médias car elle confirme certaines allégations troublantes émanant des Forces de défense israéliennes : l'observation systématique de règles d'engagement par trop souples, ce qui signifie que les normes de droit international humanitaire imposant la retenue dans l'emploi de la force militaire contre les civils et les cibles civiles ne s'appliquaient pratiquement plus et étaient omises des instructions données avant ou pendant les combats; des destructions généralisées de cibles, qui étaient injustifiées du point de vue militaire ou de la sécurité; l'utilisation de phosphore dans des zones à forte densité de population; les entraves aux mouvements de la population civile de Gaza vers des lieux relativement plus sûrs, avec la fragmentation de la bande, ce qui fait que bon nombre de personnes se retrouvaient coincées dans les pires zones de combat; des pressions racistes exercées sur les soldats de la part du « rabinat militaire », qui consistaient à déshumaniser les Arabes et les Palestiniens et à traiter le conflit comme une guerre sainte contre un ennemi démoniaque.

30. Il faut noter que les témoignages de ces soldats israéliens sont d'autant plus crédibles qu'ils ne sont pas systématiquement anti-israéliens ou antisionistes et que bon nombre de soldats avaient accepté le principe fondamental de l'opération Plomb durci comme étant une riposte défensive nécessaire face aux roquettes du Hamas. Par ailleurs, leur condamnation du manque de respect manifesté par les Forces de défense israéliennes à l'égard des civils était assortie de réserves : il a été reconnu que les Forces avaient lancé des avertissements, tiré parfois des coups de semonce pour identifier les suspects ou dissuader les habitants de Gaza de s'approcher d'une zone de déploiement et que certains commandants des Forces faisaient parfois des efforts pour éviter d'infliger autant de dégâts civils qu'il aurait pu y en avoir. Dans l'ensemble, l'impression qui se dégage des témoignages est que bon nombre des tactiques utilisées visaient moins à tuer ou à blesser les civils palestiniens qu'à empêcher les soldats israéliens d'être blessés, tués ou capturés; néanmoins les risques encourus par les civils innocents palestiniens s'en trouvaient accrus. L'ordre suivant donné par un commandant aux soldats traduit un sentiment général issu des témoignages : « Aucun de mes soldats ne perdra un seul cheveu et je ne permettrai à aucun d'entre eux d'avoir une hésitation qui risquerait de lui coûter la vie. Dans le doute, tirez »¹⁵. Ou plus généralement : « Il était clair, et cela ressortait dans chaque témoignage de soldat, que les considérations d'ordre humanitaire n'entraient pas en jeu à l'armée à ce stade. L'objectif était de mener l'opération en faisant le nombre le plus faible de victimes possibles parmi les soldats, sans même se demander quel serait le prix à payer pour l'autre camp »¹⁵.

¹⁵ Breaking the Silence est une organisation d'anciens combattants israéliens qui recueille les témoignages de soldats qui ont servi dans les territoires occupés au cours la Deuxième Intifada. La publication Breaking the Silence: Operation Cast Lead est disponible sur le site www.breakingthesilence.org.il.

31. Les témoignages étant anonymes, il a été impossible à ce jour de contacter les soldats pour obtenir des précisions. En même temps, rien n'indique que ces témoignages manquaient de véracité. La plupart des observations formulées dans Breaking the Silence soulignaient que les Forces ne respectaient ni les Conventions de Genève ni les restrictions au combat qu'imposait le droit de la guerre. Certains observateurs considèrent également que le rapport donne une description plus fiable de la situation que la réaction officielle des Forces de défense israéliennes et des Israéliens en général aux allégations de crimes de guerre, consistant à tout nier en bloc, en reconnaissant toutefois que certains soldats s'étaient peut-être écartés du code de conduite militaire sous le coup du stress du champ de bataille. Les Israéliens affirment, pour l'essentiel, que leurs Forces ont pris dans l'ensemble des risques exceptionnels pour accorder une protection morale et juridique à la population civile de Gaza au cours de l'opération Plomb durci et ont agi correctement et avec professionnalisme dans des situations de combat difficiles.

32. Bien plus importante que cet autre son de cloche au sujet du comportement des Forces de défense israéliennes au cours de l'opération Plomb durci et du droit international humanitaire est la question de savoir si l'utilisation de la technologie militaire moderne dans la bande de Gaza, zone fortement peuplée, peut dans l'absolu être conforme aux exigences du droit international humanitaire. Un des soldats a exprimé sa préoccupation de la manière suivante : « Dans une guerre urbaine, l'ennemi est partout. Il n'y a pas d'innocents. C'était une guerre urbaine dans tous les sens du terme »¹⁵. Ou « Il n'y a aucun compte à rendre dans cette zone. Quoi qu'on fasse, c'est bien [...] les fils de la lumière contre les fils des ténèbres » et « [...] on suppose que n'importe qui est un terroriste et qu'on peut en toute légitimité faire ce que bon nous semble »¹⁵. Dans cet esprit, par exemple, il était commun de traiter un Gazaoui vu de loin tenant un téléphone portable comme un terroriste. Ce qui transparaît, c'est que le cadre militaire sur le terrain, au cours de l'opération Plomb durci, était tel que les crimes de guerre étaient impossibles à distinguer de la logique des opérations militaires.

33. Il est vrai que des militants de Hamas pouvaient se faire passer pour des civils, qu'il fallait se méfier de tout le monde et qu'il était normal qu'une opération militaire cherche à réduire au minimum ses pertes. Il ressort des témoignages des soldats que ce faisant, elle inflige des dégâts disproportionnés aux civils et ravage le milieu urbain. En d'autres termes, il s'agit moins de l'écart de comportement par rapport aux normes du droit international humanitaire au cours d'opérations militaires que des questions concernant la rupture intrinsèque entre le droit international humanitaire et la guerre urbaine à aussi grande échelle, surtout dans des conditions où la population civile est privée de l'option de fuir ou de s'abriter. Il y a eu toutefois des écarts précis, comme dans le cas de l'utilisation de bombes au phosphore blanc et de fléchettes stockées dans des obus dans des zones à forte densité de population. Ces pratiques sont des attaques aveugles et semblent constituer des violations flagrantes du paragraphe 2 de l'article 35 du Protocole I additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux : « Il est interdit d'employer des armes, des projectiles et des matières ainsi que des méthodes de guerre de nature à causer des maux superflus »¹⁶.

34. Il existe au minimum la charge de persuasion pour ceux qui ont recours à une telle puissance militaire. D'après Israël, cette opération était nécessaire pour éliminer une grave menace à la sécurité. Ici, on est frappé par le fait que les commandants israéliens ne déployaient relativement aucun effort pour éliminer la menace d'attaques futures à la roquette. Comme l'a fait valoir un rapport antérieur, la diplomatie offrait à Israël un moyen prometteur de résoudre la question des impératifs de sécurité dans le cadre d'une diminution, voire d'une élimination des tirs de roquettes visant le sud d'Israël à partir de la frontière de Gaza. Les commandants s'étaient bornés à dire à leurs soldats que l'opération Plomb durci était en quelque sorte une riposte aux roquettes ou, plus précisément, qu'ils allaient créer les conditions propices à la négociation pour obtenir le retour de Gilad Shalit¹⁵.

35. Le Rapporteur spécial estime que l'opération Plomb durci révèle que la guerre urbaine, menée par voie terrestre, aérienne ou maritime, ne permet pas d'observer les normes en matière de contraintes associées au droit international humanitaire et plus précisément aux exigences spécifiques de la quatrième Convention de Genève et du Protocole I, relatives à la protection des civils, notamment dans des situations d'occupation prolongée. À cet égard, le fait qu'Israël affirme qu'il tient compte des contraintes du droit international n'est guère convaincant, comme en témoignent les pratiques de combat et les consignes d'ouverture du feu de facto; tout aussi peu convaincants sont les arguments selon lesquels l'enquête devrait principalement viser les soldats israéliens qui étaient présents sur le terrain et établir leur responsabilité éventuelle. Il faudrait plutôt s'intéresser au haut commandement militaire et aux dirigeants politiques qui ont conçu une telle opération et, avant tout, aux limites de la puissance militaire.

36. Certains des cadres juridiques les plus célèbres sur la façon de mener une guerre figurent à l'article 22 de l'annexe à la deuxième Convention de la Haye concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre : « Les belligérants n'ont pas un droit illimité quant au choix des moyens de nuire à l'ennemi ». Le paragraphe 1 de l'article 35 du Protocole I reflète le même sentiment général : « Dans tout conflit armé, le droit des Parties au conflit de choisir des méthodes ou moyens de guerre n'est pas illimité »¹⁶. La guerre urbaine du type mené à Gaza au cours de l'opération Plomb durci semble dépasser ces limites; bien que la formulation ait semblé vague en 1899, le moment est peut-être venu en 2009 de donner une application concrète à ces limites en tenant compte des conditions de la guerre urbaine moderne. En d'autres termes, il est très important de se concentrer sur la guerre elle-même plutôt que de restreindre l'enquête aux allégations de pratiques et de tactiques illégales.

¹⁶ Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 1125, n° 17512.

III. Les implantations en territoire palestinien et leur impact sur la jouissance effective des droits de l'homme

37. Les implantations israéliennes en Palestine occupée ont fait l'objet ces derniers temps d'une grande attention, à la suite de l'appel très médiatisé lancé par le Président Barack Obama en faveur d'un gel de l'extension des colonies de peuplement comme mesure essentielle pour relancer les négociations en vue d'une solution au conflit sous-jacent. Le Président Obama a également demandé aux gouvernements arabes de récompenser Israël si ce dernier acceptait d'imposer un gel, laissant entendre qu'Israël, en prenant une mesure politique constructive, mériterait de recevoir des encouragements par voie de réciprocité. Jusqu'à présent, le Premier Ministre israélien, Benjamin Netanyahu, ne s'est résolu qu'à s'opposer à la création de nouvelles colonies ou à l'accroissement des territoires qui sont sous le contrôle des implantations existantes. Il a cependant insisté pour qu'on permette la « croissance naturelle » des implantations en Cisjordanie, ajoutant que les colonies à Jérusalem-Est ne seront pas traitées comme faisant partie d'un gel partiel. Il faut noter que cette polémique bat son plein sans la moindre référence aux droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit international humanitaire, comme si le droit importait peu et si les implantations étaient un problème purement politique entre les parties.

38. Il importe, pour cette raison, de rappeler ce qu'on avait fait valoir dans plusieurs rapports antérieurs du Rapporteur spécial, à savoir que les implantations en tant que telles sont illégales au regard du paragraphe 6 de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui énonce clairement que « la Puissance occupante ne pourra procéder à la déportation ou au transfert d'une partie de sa propre population civile dans le territoire occupé par elle »¹⁷. Cette évaluation juridique largement partagée a été confirmée avec autorité par la Cour pénale internationale dans l'avis consultatif qu'elle a rendu le 9 juillet 2004 sur la construction du mur de sécurité : « Les colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, sont illégales et constituent un obstacle à la paix et au développement économique [...] [et] ont été installées en méconnaissance du droit international »¹. On fait état à l'heure actuelle de 121 implantations en Cisjordanie, dont 12 sur des terres annexées après 1967 par la ville de Jérusalem et une centaine d'« avant-postes » de peuplement, qui sont des présences physiques établies par le mouvement des colons sans autorisation légale du Gouvernement israélien.

39. D'un point de vue juridique, le fait de reconnaître la pertinence des droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit, ainsi que tout accord bilatéral entre les États-Unis d'Amérique et Israël – tel que l'échange de lettres officielles entre MM. Bush et Sharon du 14 avril 2004 ou encore d'assurer à Israël que de grands blocs d'implantations seront incorporés dans les frontières futures de l'État israélien – n'a aucun fondement juridique. Le paragraphe le plus important dans la lettre du Président Bush est le suivant : « Compte tenu des nouvelles réalités sur le terrain et notamment des principaux centres existants de peuplement israélien, il est irréaliste de s'attendre à ce que les négociations sur le statut définitif débouchent sur un retour total aux lignes d'armistice de 1949 ». Cela est encore plus vrai s'agissant de l'effet d'accords officieux que les États-Unis et Israël auraient conclus sur la croissance naturelle des implantations, malgré les promesses de gel faites officiellement dans la Déclaration d'Annapolis de décembre 2007. D'après les organisations de surveillance, en réalité, les « soumissions pour la construction de nouvelles implantations ont augmenté de 55 % depuis 2007 ». Les constructions réelles de colonies de peuplement ont augmenté de 30 % depuis le début du nouveau cycle de pourparlers de paix. Les constructions de colonies autour de Jérusalem ont été multipliées par 38 »¹⁸.

¹⁷ Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 75, n° 973.

40. Un principe élémentaire du droit et de la justice est que tout accord entre deux parties ne peut pas modifier les droits juridiques d'une tierce partie. Tout au plus, cet accord, même sous forme de contrat, n'a d'incidence que sur les attentes politiques qui existent entre les deux parties, en l'occurrence Israël et les États-Unis. Il est également vrai qu'en Israël, l'appel américain à un gel des implantations a suscité des formes d'opposition virulente et notamment des efforts renouvelés de la part du mouvement des colons d'établir en Cisjordanie des « avant-postes » qui sont illégaux au regard du droit israélien¹⁹. Le rabbin Ovadia Yosef, chef spirituel du parti ultra-orthodoxe Shas en Israël, qui fait partie de la coalition au pouvoir, a répudié avec colère l'idée d'un gel des implantations, disant : « Les Américains nous disent insidieusement de construire ici et pas là-bas, comme si nous étions des esclaves à leur service ».

41. En fait, pendant toute la période d'occupation, Israël a augmenté la population et le territoire des implantations : « De 1972 à 1993, si l'on exclut Jérusalem, Israël a augmenté le nombre de colons en Cisjordanie, qui sont passés de 800 à 110 600. Au cours des dix années suivantes – qui coïncident en gros avec le processus de paix d'Oslo – leur nombre a augmenté deux fois plus vite, dépassant 234 000 en 2004. À Jérusalem-Est, le nombre de colons est passé de 124 400 en 1992 à près de 176 000 en 2002 »²⁰. D'après les estimations les plus récentes, les colons en Cisjordanie étaient au nombre de 300 000 environ, avec 200 000 de plus à Jérusalem-Est.

42. Hormis la question du gel qui est liée à la reprise des négociations de paix, l'extension des colonies constitue un empiètement constant sur les droits des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination, ainsi qu'une violation manifeste de l'obligation fondamentale qui incombe à l'occupant, aux termes de la quatrième Convention de Genève, de protéger les biens et l'avenir d'une population occupée. Ainsi donc, à un moment où la feuille de route était censée mettre un frein au développement des colonies, les Israéliens ont eu le comportement inverse.

43. Comme le résume la lettre que les organisations palestiniennes de défense des droits de l'homme ont adressée au Ministre suédois des affaires étrangères, Carl Bildt : « Le taux de croissance de la population des colons israéliens en Cisjordanie occupée, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, est de 4,7 %, contre un taux de croissance annuelle de 1,7 % de la population juive dans l'État d'Israël. Ainsi, on recourt à l'écran de fumée de la "croissance naturelle" pour occulter la poursuite de l'émigration des colons juifs-israéliens en Cisjordanie et essentiellement la création de nouvelles colonies annexées aux colonies existantes »⁸. Certains observateurs font valoir que ce chiffre exagère la menace que fait peser la croissance des colonies, arguant que la majeure partie de la croissance a lieu dans les implantations haredim non sionistes, tels que Modi'in Illit et Beitar Illit, qui comptent actuellement 45 000 habitants qui sembleraient prêts à déménager si on leur fournissait d'autres logements à l'intérieur des frontières israéliennes d'avant 1967 dans le cadre d'une solution au conflit sous-jacent.

¹⁸ Palestine Monitor, « Israeli Settlements », mis à jour le 17 décembre 2008. À consulter sur le site <http://www.palestinemonitor.org/spip/spip.php?article7>.

¹⁹ Voir Ethan Bronner, « West Bank Settlers Send Defiant Message to Obama », The New York Times, 30 juillet 2009.

²⁰ Voir Ali Abunimah, One Country: A Bold Proposal to End the Israeli-Palestinian Impasse (Metropolitan Books, novembre 2006).

44. D'autres s'interrogent sur cette élasticité, et l'aile militante du mouvement des colons s'oppose résolument à tout repli par rapport à la forme actuelle du phénomène de la colonisation, et considère ouvertement et délibérément l'extension des colonies comme la meilleure assurance contre la création dans l'absolu par les Palestiniens de leur propre État ou au moins d'un État viable souverain et indépendant.

45. Les démolitions d'habitations qui ne sont pas liées aux prétentions en matière de sécurité ont servi principalement à étendre le contrôle israélien sur la Cisjordanie tout en portant atteinte aux droits des Palestiniens. Au total, 277 habitations ont été démolies en 2008 à l'intérieur du territoire palestinien occupé, Jérusalem-Est étant la plus touchée. Entre janvier et juillet 2009, le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires a enregistré la démolition de 221 habitations appartenant à des Palestiniens, ce qui a entraîné le déplacement de plus de 500 personnes²¹. Outre le fait d'être incroyablement inhumaines, ces démolitions portent atteinte aux perspectives d'autodétermination des Palestiniens. Une technique complémentaire utilisée à Jérusalem est le refus d'accorder des permis de construire, même aux Palestiniens qui sont des résidents de longue date, dans le cadre d'un effort persistant visant à modifier la composition démographique de la ville en faveur d'Israël.

46. Les implantations posent également un problème supplémentaire au respect des droits de l'homme et de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Du fait de l'emplacement du mur israélien illégal de sécurité, environ 385 000 colons sont coincés entre celui-ci et la Ligne verte et quelque 93 000 Palestiniens se retrouvent enclavés du côté israélien du mur, voire séparés de leurs terres agricoles et d'une partie de leurs villages, ainsi que de la Cisjordanie en général.

47. Plusieurs questions sont imbriquées, s'agissant du mandat : a) les implantations et toute nouvelle extension des colonies constituent un obstacle illégal grave à la jouissance effective par les Palestiniens de leur droit à l'autodétermination; b) si Israël accepte de geler l'extension illégale des colonies, il semble déraisonnable que les gouvernements arabes fassent un geste réciproque en retour, c'est-à-dire qu'Israël soit récompensé pour ce qu'il est tenu de faire de toute façon sur le plan juridique; c) les accords entre Israël et les États-Unis n'ont pas d'effet juridique en ce qui concerne les colonies, du fait que les Gouvernements d'Israël et de l'Autorité palestinienne sont seuls habilités à en déterminer le statut dans le cadre de négociations de paix; d) Israël, en tant que Puissance occupante, a une obligation juridique fondamentale de démanteler les implantations existantes, y compris celles de Jérusalem-Est, et de ne pas s'immiscer dans la croissance et le développement des Palestiniens. C'est la conclusion à laquelle est également parvenue B'Tselem, organisation israélienne respectée de défense des droits de l'homme, qui recommande un démantèlement « humain » dans le respect des droits des colons tout en préconisant également des dédommagements pour toute perte subie²².

²¹ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « The Humanitarian Monitor », juillet 2009. À consulter à www.ochaopt.org.

IV. Le mur et ses conséquences juridiques

48. Le 9 juillet 2009 a marqué le cinquième anniversaire de la publication de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice relatif au mur de sécurité, dont la construction se poursuit, principalement en Cisjordanie occupée. En effet, 86 % du mur sera construit sur le territoire cisjordanien. À terme, le mur devrait s'étendre sur 723 kilomètres, soit deux fois la longueur de la Ligne verte, alors que construire le mur de sécurité le long de cette ligne aurait permis à Israël d'économiser 1,7 milliard de dollars des États-Unis. À ce jour, les travaux ne seraient achevés qu'à 60 % environ alors qu'ils durent depuis sept ans. D'après les dernières informations recueillies, les travaux ont été suspendus pour des raisons budgétaires malgré les impératifs de sécurité invoqués. Selon le Ministère israélien de la défense et l'opinion publique israélienne, le mur a contribué au renforcement de la sécurité en Israël; la diminution sensible des actes terroristes observée ces dernières années est mise en avant pour étayer cette conclusion. Les opposants à cette politique, dont les dirigeants de l'Autorité palestinienne, réclament le démantèlement du mur, estimant, d'une part, que cette confiscation de terres ne tient pas à des raisons de sécurité et qu'elle porte grandement préjudice aux Palestiniens vivant à l'ouest du mur ou à proximité, et, d'autre part, que l'emplacement du mur est illégal.

Occupation illégale de territoires par Israël : crise d'autorité du droit international

49. Après avoir examiné les principales questions de droit international soulevées, les 15 juges de la Cour internationale de Justice ont, malgré leurs origines diverses, décidé à 14 voix contre une ce qui suit : « [...] l'édification du mur qu'Israël, puissance occupante, est en train de construire dans le territoire palestinien occupé [...] [est contraire] au droit international. [...] Israël est tenu de cesser immédiatement les travaux d'édification du mur [...], de démanteler immédiatement l'ouvrage situé dans ce territoire [...] de réparer tous les dommages causés par la construction du mur »¹. À la dixième session extraordinaire d'urgence tenue le 20 juillet 2004, l'Assemblée générale a décidé à une écrasante majorité²³ qu'Israël devait donner suite à la décision rendue par la Cour internationale de Justice. Faisant sien l'avis consultatif de la Cour, elle a par ailleurs demandé à l'Assemblée générale et au Conseil de sécurité d'examiner quelles nouvelles mesures devaient être prises afin de mettre un terme à la situation illicite découlant de la construction du mur. Dans sa résolution ES-10/15, l'Assemblée priait également les États Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies de s'acquitter de leurs obligations juridiques telles qu'énoncées dans l'avis rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice, ²² Voir « Land Expropriation and Settlements ». À consulter à <http://www.btselem.org/English/settlements>.

²³ 150 États Membres ont voté pour et 6 contre (Australie, Micronésie, Israël, Îles Marshall, Palaos et États-Unis).

organe judiciaire principal de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Elle appelait plus particulièrement l'attention sur l'obligation qu'ont les États de ne pas prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de la situation créée par cette construction. Bon nombre des résolutions adoptées ensuite à une très large majorité par l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil des droits de l'homme appelaient de nouveau Israël à s'acquitter de ses obligations juridiques, conformément à l'avis consultatif²⁴.

50. Comme nul ne le conteste, Israël a rejeté les conclusions de la Cour internationale de Justice, précisant qu'il n'exécuterait que les décisions rendues par ses juridictions nationales. De fait, il a exécuté plusieurs arrêts de la Cour suprême israélienne lui ordonnant de déplacer le mur de façon à en atténuer les effets néfastes pour la population palestinienne. S'il est vrai que, contrairement aux arrêts, les avis consultatifs de la Cour ne sont pas « contraignants », ils n'en constituent pas moins une interprétation faisant autorité du droit international applicable. De même, ils énoncent un ensemble de conclusions quant aux règles de droit international applicables en l'espèce. Lorsque les conclusions recueillent une aussi large adhésion, on ne saurait contester « le droit » ou le juger non concluant. L'avis consultatif en question est d'autant plus solide que le seul juge dissident, le juge américain, a précisé dans sa déclaration qu'il souscrivait en grande partie à l'analyse juridique exposée par la majorité. Selon lui toutefois, il n'était pas possible de trancher la question définitivement sans examiner plus avant les raisons de sécurité invoquées par Israël pour construire le mur sur le territoire occupé.

51. S'agissant de cas avérés de crimes de guerre, ne pas donner suite aux conclusions de la Cour internationale de Justice porte très gravement atteinte à l'autorité du droit international, de la Cour, et de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en général. Ce que l'on retient de cette situation, c'est malheureusement que l'autorité de la communauté internationale est bafouée par un État Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, que des civils, qui sont censés être protégés par le droit international, sont victimes d'un préjudice, et que ni les États ni les organes de l'ONU ne réagissent. Comme pour d'autres aspects du conflit, le fait que les droits des Palestiniens ne soient pas défendus et que les avis de la Cour restent lettre morte constitue une crise d'autorité et renforce chez les Palestiniens l'idée qu'il ne sert à rien d'avoir le droit international pour soi.

52. Israël peut passer outre à ses obligations juridiques internationales en toute impunité. Les Palestiniens, eux, font face à un dilemme : d'un côté, on leur demande avec insistance de renoncer à toute forme de résistance armée; de l'autre, leurs droits ne sont pas respectés et l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne fait rien pour y remédier. Que peuvent donc faire les Palestiniens? Le chroniqueur israélien Gideon Levy relève le cynisme avec lequel les Israéliens envisagent aujourd'hui les négociations de paix du fait de cette situation. Selon lui, les Israéliens ne paient absolument pas le prix de l'injustice causée par l'occupation. La vie est douce en Israël. Les cafés sont bondés. Les restaurants ne désemplassent pas. Les gens partent en vacances. Pourquoi penser à la paix, aux négociations, au retrait des forces – au « prix » qu'il faudrait peut-être payer? L'été 2009 est délicieux. À quoi bon changer²⁵?

²⁴ Voir, par exemple, résolution 63/97 de l'Assemblée générale (adoptée le 5 décembre 2008 à 171 voix contre 6, et 2 abstentions), par. 6; voir aussi résolution 10/18 du Conseil des droits de l'homme (adoptée le 26 mars 2009 à 46 voix contre une, sans abstention), par. 8.

53. Il est à noter que la question de l'illégalité procède quasi exclusivement du fait que le mur est bâti sur le territoire palestinien occupé. S'il avait été monté le long de la Ligne verte ou à l'intérieur des frontières israéliennes d'avant 1967, on aurait pu adresser à Israël des critiques d'ordre moral et politique liées à la nature coercitive et hostile de cette forme de séparation, mais pas lui opposer des arguments juridiques. Le mur de Berlin n'était pas contesté sur le plan juridique, mais il montrait à quel point la conception qu'avaient l'Allemagne de l'Est et l'Union soviétique de l'ordre mondial était erronée. Si l'Union soviétique avait osé dépasser la ligne divisant Berlin ne serait-ce que de quelques mètres et élever le mur du côté occidental, cela aurait fort bien pu déclencher une troisième guerre mondiale. Il est intéressant de remarquer que, quoique controversé, le mur que les États-Unis construisent actuellement le long de la frontière mexicaine respecte scrupuleusement la souveraineté territoriale du Mexique. Lorsqu'un État ou une entité politique n'est pas aussi impuissant que la Palestine, la loi et ses droits territoriaux sont généralement respectés.

54. Les Palestiniens continuent de manifester contre le mur dans plusieurs localités de Cisjordanie. Notons en particulier les manifestations organisées chaque semaine près des villages de Bil'in et de Nil'in, auxquelles Israël répond par des tirs de balles en caoutchouc et de gaz lacrymogène, qui ont causé plusieurs morts et de nombreux blessés, et par des arrestations. Il semblerait que les forces de sécurité israéliennes fassent un usage excessif de la force, en violation des obligations fondamentales imposées au pays par le droit international humanitaire en tant que Puissance occupante.

V. Recommandations

55. Les recommandations formulées ci-après, qui sont extraites du corps du présent rapport, revêtent un caractère d'urgence :

a) Il conviendrait que l'Assemblée générale adresse à la Cour internationale de Justice une requête pour avis consultatif concernant les obligations et devoirs qui incombent aux États Membres de l'ONU en matière de coopération avec l'Organisation et ses représentants;

b) Il faudrait encourager les États Membres à recourir à leurs instruments nationaux, y compris les tribunaux, pour s'acquitter des obligations que leur imposent les articles 146 à 149 de la quatrième Convention de Genève en matière d'application du droit pénal international en ce qui concerne le territoire palestinien occupé;

c) Il conviendrait que le respect du droit international et des droits des Palestiniens par Israël fasse dorénavant partie intégrante des négociations de paix;

²⁵ Voir Kessel, Jerrold et Klochendler, Pierre, « Mideast: Building Peace on an Incomplete Wall » (Inter Press Service, 27 juillet 2009).

d) Il conviendrait d'envisager d'imposer des restrictions à la fourniture d'armes aux parties au conflit israélo-palestinien;

e) Il conviendrait d'établir le caractère illégal des colonies de peuplement israéliennes et de prendre des mesures en faveur du déblocage de la situation et du démantèlement du mur, dans le respect des droits fondamentaux de toutes les personnes concernées;

f) Il conviendrait d'envisager de demander au Comité international de la Croix-Rouge ou à quelque autre instance désignée d'étudier les problèmes particuliers découlant de l'occupation prolongée et de formuler des recommandations à cet égard.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
30 août 2010
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-cinquième session

Point 69 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme
et rapports des rapporteurs
et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux Membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Richard Falk, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/65/150.

 Le présent document a été soumis après la date limite afin que des renseignements sur les faits les plus récents puissent y figurer.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport examine les faits nouveaux concernant le respect par Israël des obligations que lui impose le droit international, ainsi que la situation des personnes vivant dans les territoires palestiniens occupés. Une importance particulière est accordée aux effets cumulés des politiques d'Israël en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est, découlant de la poursuite d'une occupation présentant toutes les caractéristiques du colonialisme et de l'apartheid, et tendant à transformer un état d'occupation de jure en situation d'annexion de facto.

Ces faits portent atteinte de manière fondamentale au droit inaliénable des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination. Le rapport rend compte des préoccupations habituelles causées par la croissance des colonies en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est, des problèmes posés par la poursuite de la construction du mur de séparation, des châtiments collectifs et d'autres préoccupations concernant les droits de l'homme. Le rapport se penche notamment sur les préoccupations concernant la santé et d'autres effets néfastes de la poursuite du blocus imposé aux 1,5 million d'habitants de la bande de Gaza, l'examen de l'incident de la flottille de la liberté survenu le 31 mai 2010 et la poursuite des efforts en vue de déterminer si Israël et les autorités palestiniennes responsables ont enquêté de façon satisfaisante au sujet des allégations de crimes de guerre portées dans le cadre du conflit à Gaza en 2008-2009.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction et aperçu général	4
II. Politiques d'occupation en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est	9
A. Généralités	9
B. Pauvreté et enfants en Cisjordanie	11
C. Colonies de peuplement	13
D. Gel de la construction de colonies	15
E. Actes de violence commis par les colons	17
F. Nettoyage ethnique à Jérusalem-Est occupée	18
G. Le mur	20
III. Gaza	21
A. Observation générale	21
B. Incident de la « flottille pour la liberté »	23
C. Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza (« rapport Goldstone »)	24
IV. Recommandations	26

I. Introduction et aperçu général

1. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 a une nouvelle fois préparé ce rapport sans avoir bénéficié de la coopération du Gouvernement israélien, ce qui ne lui a pas permis d'accéder aux territoires palestiniens occupés et d'entrer en contact avec les Palestiniens vivant sous occupation. Dans les rapports à venir, on cherchera à compenser ce manque en essayant d'accéder à la bande de Gaza grâce à la coopération du Gouvernement égyptien et en rencontrant des personnalités concernées dans les pays bordant les territoires palestiniens occupés. Il faut noter une fois de plus qu'Israël, en tant que Membre des Nations Unies, agit en violation de son obligation de coopérer avec l'Organisation dans l'accomplissement de ses fonctions officielles. Ce manquement est d'autant plus grave, que la Cour internationale de Justice a indiqué, dans son avis consultatif¹ rendu le 9 juillet 2004, que les Nations Unies avaient une responsabilité permanente concernant la résolution pacifique du conflit entre Israël et la Palestine. Le Rapporteur spécial continuera à chercher à obtenir la coopération du Gouvernement israélien, mais il serait également utile que le Conseil des droits de l'homme, l'Assemblée générale et le Secrétariat des Nations Unies s'acquittent de leurs obligations en prenant des mesures visant à obtenir la coopération d'Israël autant que l'y oblige le droit international.

2. Au cours des derniers mois, de nombreux événements ont aggravé le calvaire des Palestiniens vivant sous l'occupation en Cisjordanie, à Jérusalem-Est et dans la bande de Gaza dont certains seront abordés de façon plus détaillée dans les principales sections du présent rapport. Il importe toujours d'appeler l'attention sur les atteintes répétées aux normes internationales fondamentales et inaliénables des droits de l'homme, commises par Israël en particulier sur la dimension du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination se rapportant à l'intégrité territoriale. Le droit à l'autodétermination est la base même de tous les autres droits de l'homme. Il est ainsi consacré dans l'article 1 commun aux deux pactes internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme et constitue une norme impérative dans le droit international coutumier. Ce droit inaliénable appartient à tous les peuples, y compris les peuples non autonomes, et on considère qu'il est bafoué dès lors qu'un peuple vit dans les conditions dures, oppressives et qui lui sont étrangères, à travers une domination imposée de l'extérieur, ce qui est le cas de l'occupation militaire de la Cisjordanie, de Jérusalem-Est et de la bande de Gaza depuis 1967. La nature oppressive de l'occupation israélienne pendant plus de 43 ans ressort avec évidence des très nombreuses violations par Israël de la quatrième Convention de Genève et du droit international des droits de l'homme, ainsi que de son mépris de la Cour internationale de Justice et des nombreuses résolutions et décisions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité.

3. À ces caractéristiques générales d'illégalité attachées à l'occupation s'ajoute la dureté de ses conditions, décrites par mon prédécesseur, John Dugard, dans son rapport au Conseil des droits de l'homme de janvier 2007². Le professeur Dugard a relevé que des « traits distinctifs du colonialisme et de l'apartheid » caractérisaient l'occupation israélienne, ce qui aggravait les accusations d'illégalité pesant sur elle et créait des obligations et responsabilités supplémentaires pour Israël en tant que Puissance occupante, pour les États tiers, et pour les Nations Unies³. Le colonialisme constitue un déni des droits légaux essentiels à l'intégrité territoriale et à l'autodétermination, et l'apartheid est désormais officiellement reconnu comme un crime contre l'humanité⁴. La gravité de ces affirmations souligne le fait que l'occupation constitue une atteinte grave et sans précédent au droit à l'autodétermination, qui aurait dû, depuis longtemps, être corrigée et réparée d'urgence⁵. L'illégalité du régime colonial et la nature criminelle de l'apartheid ont en outre le statut de normes impératives en droit international⁶. L'opinion du Rapporteur spécial actuel est que la nature de l'occupation en 2010 justifie en fait et en droit les allégations antérieures de colonialisme et d'apartheid encore plus largement que ce n'était le cas il y a trois ans. Les caractéristiques coloniales et d'apartheid de l'occupation israélienne se sont enracinées de façon progressive. Plus l'occupation se perpétuera, plus il sera difficile d'y mettre un terme et plus l'exercice des droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens sera restreint.

¹ Voir A/ES-10/273 et Corr.1; voir également Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J Recueil 2004, p. 136, et résolution ES-10/15 de l'Assemblée générale.

² Voir A/HRC/4/17.

4. On comprend mieux que l'occupation par Israël soit taxée de colonialisme si l'on considère le processus généralisé et permanent des implantations qui comptent actuellement les 121 colonies officielles (et les 102 « avant-postes » illégaux au regard de la législation israélienne) ainsi que le vaste réseau de routes, réservées aux juifs seulement, qui relie les colonies de peuplement les unes aux autres et à Israël, de l'autre côté de la Ligne verte⁷. L'empiètement total sur le territoire de la Cisjordanie est estimé à 38 %, si l'on prend en compte toutes les restrictions imposées au contrôle et au développement palestiniens. Cette annexion de fait du territoire palestinien est renforcée par le fait que le mur de séparation est construit à 85 % sur le territoire palestinien occupé d'une manière que l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice de 2004 a déclaré illégale à la quasi-unanimité (14-1). Selon une opinion largement répandue, les blocs de colonies et le territoire situé à l'ouest du mur (soit 9,4 % de la Cisjordanie) ont été intégrés de façon permanente à l'État d'Israël, de sorte que la situation est irréversible pour les négociations internationales. Le Gouvernement des États-Unis, principal maître d'œuvre des négociations entre les parties, serait d'avis qu'Israël pourrait garder certaines de ses colonies en Cisjordanie dans le cadre de tout règlement du conflit⁸. Cette position

³ Ibid, par. 62.

⁴ Voir art. 7 du Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 2187, N° 38544; et résolution n° 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale « Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et peuples coloniaux », 14 décembre 1960.

⁵ Ces conclusions légales découlent des textes suivants, qui font autorité en matière de doctrine du droit international : Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et peuples coloniaux (1960) et Convention internationale sur l'élimination et la répression du crime d'apartheid, (1973). L'apartheid est un des crimes contre l'humanité visés à l'article 7 du Statut de Rome de la Cour internationale de Justice.

⁶ L'article 53 de la Convention de Vienne sur le droit des traités (1969) définit une norme impérative comme une norme acceptée et reconnue par la communauté internationale des États dans son ensemble en tant que norme à laquelle aucune dérogation n'est permise et qui ne peut être modifiée que par une nouvelle norme du droit international général ayant le même caractère.

⁷ Voir par exemple Canadiens pour la justice et la paix au Moyen-Orient, « Fiche-info : Colonies israéliennes illégales dans les territoires palestiniens occupés », avril 2010, à l'adresse suivante : <http://www.cjpme.org/DisplayDocument.aspx?DocumentID=760&SaveMode=0>.

⁸ Voir Matthew Lee, « US Readies New Mideast Peace Push », Associated Press, 7 janvier 2010.

affiche avec une insistance incessante que les négociations doivent intégrer « les réalités du terrain », alors même que bon nombre de ces réalités sont en violation manifeste du droit international humanitaire. En effet, « la paix » serait fondée non pas sur un retrait inconditionnel des territoires occupés en 1967, comme le prescrit la résolution 242 (1967) du Conseil de sécurité, mais sur un ensemble de conditions illégales créées par la suite qui empiètent sur les droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit international et réduisent les perspectives territoriales d'un éventuel État palestinien. Les ambitions et politiques colonialistes d'Israël se manifestent également par son appropriation des ressources du territoire palestinien occupé, notamment de l'eau, et par la distribution inégale et discriminatoire qu'il fait de cette ressource mise à la disposition des colonies illégales en quantité bien plus abondante que ce qu'il concède aux habitants et réfugiés palestiniens légitimes (les colons reçoivent une quantité d'eau quatre à cinq fois supérieure par personne, pour un prix estimé à un cinquième de ce qui est facturé aux Palestiniens)⁹. Cela signifie que l'occupation est devenue une forme d'annexion colonialiste qui compromet gravement l'intégrité territoriale de toute future entité palestinienne indépendante. Israël a déclaré ses intentions annexionnistes sur Jérusalem-Est et les a mises en pratique dès la fin de la guerre de juin 1967, prenant des mesures pour consolider son contrôle administratif sur une Jérusalem unifiée et agrandie. Ainsi, il s'est efforcé de réduire le nombre de Palestiniens vivant à Jérusalem-Est et a encouragé et subventionné la création et l'expansion d'importantes zones d'installation illégales dans les quartiers de la ville occupés en 1967, qui étaient depuis toujours très majoritairement palestiniens et devaient constituer au plan international la capitale d'un futur État palestinien¹⁰. Ce processus d'implantation, en violation du sixième paragraphe de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui interdit à la Puissance occupante de procéder au transfert de sa propre population dans le territoire temporairement occupé par elle, relève d'un effort politique déterminé de la part d'Israël pour transformer un ensemble de conditions qui sont juridiquement et politiquement temporaires en une réalité permanente. Après plus de quatre décennies, il y a lieu de conclure que l'occupation des territoires palestiniens par Israël cesse d'être temporaire et de reconnaître qu'elle est devenue pour ainsi dire permanente.

5. Bien qu'associé aux circonstances particulières de racisme qui ont prévalu en Afrique du Sud jusqu'en 1994, l'apartheid, en vertu de la Convention internationale sur l'élimination et la répression du crime d'apartheid et du fait qu'il est défini comme un crime contre l'humanité par le Statut de Rome, est applicable à d'autres situations dans lesquelles les lois en vigueur imposent à une population réduite à un rôle subalterne des pratiques de discrimination raciale fondées sur un double système de droits et de devoirs. La Convention contre l'apartheid érige en crimes « les actes inhumains commis en vue d'instituer ou d'entretenir la domination d'un groupe racial d'êtres humains sur n'importe quel autre groupe racial d'êtres humains et d'opprimer systématiquement celui-ci »¹¹. Le Statut de Rome criminalise les ⁹ Voir Badil Resource Center for Palestinian Residency and Refugee Rights, Al Majal, n° 39/40 (automne 2008/hiver 2009) et Amnesty International, Troubled Waters – Palestinians Denied Fair Access to Water, 2009.

¹⁰ Voir résolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002), 1515 (2003) et 1850 (2008) du Conseil de sécurité : Jérusalem-Est est considérée par la communauté internationale comme un territoire palestinien occupé.

¹¹ Voir Convention internationale sur l'élimination et la répression du crime d'apartheid, art. 2 (résolution 3068 (XXVIII), 30 novembre 1973).

« actes inhumains » « commis dans le cadre d'un régime institutionnalisé d'oppression systématique et de domination d'un groupe racial sur tout autre groupe racial ou tous autres groupes raciaux et dans l'intention de maintenir ce régime »¹². C'est cette structure générale d'apartheid, manifeste dans le territoire palestinien occupé, qui rend l'allégation de plus en plus crédible malgré les différences entre les caractéristiques propres à l'apartheid sud-africain et celles du régime imposé dans le territoire palestinien occupé. On peut se poser la question de savoir si les juifs et les Palestiniens sont des « groupes raciaux », au sens où l'entendent ces instruments juridiques. Nous allons exposer quelques traits saillants d'apartheid, même s'il n'est pas possible, faute de place, de donner un compte rendu détaillé de ces caractéristiques de l'occupation. Il existe d'ailleurs un rapport d'experts, fiable et convaincant, qui expose en détail le caractère d'apartheid de l'occupation israélienne¹³. Les traits d'apartheid les plus saillants de l'occupation israélienne sont les suivants : une citoyenneté préférentielle, les perquisitions et des lois et pratiques en matière de lieu de résidence qui empêchent les Palestiniens résidant en Cisjordanie ou à Gaza de recouvrer leurs biens ou d'acquérir la citoyenneté israélienne, alors que le droit des juifs au retour donne à tout juif, où qu'il soit dans le monde et même sans attache préalable avec Israël, le droit de se rendre dans ce pays, d'y résider et de devenir citoyen israélien; des lois différenciées en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est, favorisant les colons juifs qui relèvent de la justice civile israélienne et jouissent de la protection de la Constitution alors que les résidents palestiniens relèvent de l'administration militaire; des dispositions inégales et discriminatoires appliquées aux déplacements en Cisjordanie et à destination ou en provenance de Jérusalem; des politiques discriminatoires en matière de propriété foncière, d'occupation et d'utilisation des sols; des restrictions considérables imposées aux déplacements des Palestiniens, en particulier des postes de contrôle qui limitent différemment les mouvements des Palestiniens et ceux des colons israéliens, des conditions d'obtention de permis d'entrée et de documents d'identité extrêmement pénibles pour les seuls Palestiniens; des démolitions de maisons en représailles, des expulsions et des restrictions imposées à l'entrée et à la sortie des trois parties du territoire palestinien occupé.

6. Il convient également de noter que les conditions de l'occupation continue de Gaza par Israël reposent sur la réalité opérationnelle d'un contrôle effectif, malgré le « dégageant » israélien de 2005 comprenant le retrait de ses forces terrestres et le démantèlement des colonies. À cet égard, la situation à Gaza, bien que juridiquement et moralement déplorable, n'est caractérisée ni par des ambitions coloniales sur le territoire ou quant à la permanence ni par une structure d'apartheid. Une telle affirmation n'est pas faite pour minimiser l'illégalité et la criminalité apparente du blocus de Gaza, imposé depuis la mi-2007 en violation de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève qui interdit les peines collectives, mais plutôt pour la mettre à part. Le Premier Ministre britannique, David Cameron, a récemment qualifié Gaza de « prison à ciel ouvert »¹⁴. La persistance d'une telle situation d'abus systématisés semble relever du niveau de responsabilité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et de ses États Membres, comme l'a souligné l'ancien Secrétaire général, Kofi Annan. La principale « raison d'être » de chaque État, a-t-il observé, est de protéger sa population « mais si les autorités nationales ne peuvent ou ne veulent pas protéger leurs citoyens, il appartient alors à la communauté internationale » d'utiliser tous les moyens nécessaires « y compris une action coercitive » si des méthodes de moindre envergure s'avèrent insuffisantes¹⁵. Il semblerait que les habitants de Gaza, bien que n'étant pas citoyens de l'État occupant, jouissent du statut de « personnes protégées » en vertu du droit international humanitaire. Ils ont été laissés sans protection pendant bien des années en ce qui concerne leurs droits fondamentaux, en violation de l'esprit et de la lettre de ce que le Secrétaire général Annan a reconnu comme une « nouvelle norme prescrivant une obligation collective internationale de protection »; « nous devons assumer (cette) responsabilité, a-t-il déclaré, et, lorsque c'est nécessaire, prendre les mesures qui s'imposent »¹⁶. Gaza pose depuis longtemps un défi de ce genre, étant dans une situation de souffrances humanitaires aiguës et généralisées qui résultent des politiques appliquées par la Puissance occupante.

¹² Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, art. 7.2 h).

¹³ Human Sciences Research Council of South Africa, « Occupation, Colonialism, Apartheid?: A re-assessment of Israel's practices in the occupied Palestinian territories under international law », Le Cap, 2009.

¹⁴ BBC News, « David Cameron describes blockaded Gaza as a "prison" », 27 juillet 2010, voir www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-10778110.

7. Il importe de noter la pertinence de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur la Conformité au droit international de la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance du Kosovo¹⁷. La conclusion juridique rendue par une majorité de 10 contre 4 était que la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance faite par le Kosovo le 17 février 2008 ne constituait pas une violation du droit international. Bien qu'une telle procédure juridique soit formellement considérée comme un « avis consultatif », pour la plupart des juristes, ces avis sont l'appréciation faisant le plus autorité au sein de la communauté internationale quand il s'agit de questions juridiques internationales litigieuses. Une opinion aussi autorisée, émise par le tribunal le plus élevé des Nations Unies, peut présenter un intérêt pour l'exercice par les Palestiniens de leur droit à l'autodétermination. La Cour internationale de Justice a noté que l'échec des négociations entre les représentants gouvernementaux à Pristina et à Belgrade, qui n'avaient pas réussi après des années à trouver un accord acceptable concernant le statut juridique du Kosovo, faisait de la déclaration unilatérale du Kosovo une manière de procéder raisonnable¹⁸. Cette question n'est pas sans incidence sur la situation des droits de l'homme des Palestiniens qui vivent depuis si longtemps sous occupation. Il est généralement accepté que le droit à l'autodétermination est le droit le plus fondamental d'un peuple et s'applique particulièrement à ceux qui sont soumis à toute forme de domination étrangère compromettant leur autonomie, leur développement économique, leurs droits fondamentaux et le contrôle de leur destin collectif. L'existence d'un droit palestinien à l'autodétermination, comme mode d'établissement d'un État indépendant, a été acceptée par un consensus de gouvernements et par l'Organisation des Nations Unies et c'est le principe opérationnel de la « Feuille de route » dont s'inspire le Quatuor¹⁹. Au cours des décennies, les négociations internationales bilatérales n'ont pas réussi à établir un statut définitif pour la Palestine ou à insister pour qu'Israël se retire des territoires palestiniens occupés en

¹⁵ Voir A/59/2005, par. 135.

¹⁶ Ibid.

¹⁷ Voir A/64/881.

¹⁸ Ibid., par. 105.

¹⁹ Voir S/2003/529, où figure le texte intégral de la Feuille de route qui vise à concrétiser la vision de deux États, Israël et la Palestine, vivant côte à côte dans la paix et la sécurité, telle qu'affirmée par le Conseil de sécurité dans sa résolution 1397 (2002).

1967 (comme l'avait prescrit en 1967 la résolution 242 du Conseil de sécurité, inconditionnellement et à l'unanimité), créant ainsi un contexte qui évoque à bien des égards – quand il ne la dépasse pas – la situation à laquelle était confronté le Gouvernement du Kosovo. Il existe des preuves écrasantes, depuis bien des années, que le contrôle par Israël des territoires palestiniens occupés est oppressif au regard du droit international, comme en témoignent les politiques d'occupation illégales, compte tenu des exigences du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme. Les longues négociations n'ont pas résolu la question du statut de la Palestine et ne permettent guère d'espérer raisonnablement qu'un règlement sera bientôt atteint par la négociation ou par un retrait unilatéral. Dans ces conditions, il semblerait que la seule possibilité qui reste à l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine, qu'elle agisse en son nom propre ou par le biais de l'Autorité palestinienne, serait de proclamer une déclaration unilatérale de statut, demandant l'indépendance, la reconnaissance diplomatique et son adhésion en qualité de membre des Nations Unies. L'avis consultatif sur le Kosovo crée un précédent juridique bien raisonné pour une telle initiative, bien que le Statut de la Cour internationale de Justice stipule clairement à l'article 59 que même dans ses « décisions » plus obligatoires, « la décision de la Cour n'est obligatoire que pour les parties en litige et dans le cas qui a été décidé ». En même temps, la similarité des situations vécues par l'Autorité palestinienne ou l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine d'une part, et le Gouvernement du Kosovo d'autre part, suggère que le résultat serait similaire si la Cour internationale de Justice était consultée. De plus, si l'on adoptait cette ligne de conduite, il serait d'autant plus raisonnable de reconnaître la légalité de la déclaration unilatérale palestinienne qu'il existe le précédent du Kosovo. Ce développement éventuel ne manque pas d'intérêt pour une évaluation des violations des droits de l'homme par Israël dans le territoire palestinien occupé car il touche à l'exercice différé par les Palestiniens de leur droit à l'autodétermination, dans des circonstances extrêmement éprouvantes. Comme l'a déclaré le Premier Ministre de l'Autorité palestinienne, M. Fayyad, à mesure que les Palestiniens « voient ce qui se passe sur le terrain, l'État de Palestine évolue et, de simple notion dont on parle, il rentre dans le domaine du possible – puis dans celui de la réalité »²⁰. L'avis consultatif sur le Kosovo donne à cette aspiration palestinienne un élan vers une réalité politique mais aussi vers une réalité juridique.

II. Politiques d'occupation en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est

A. Généralités

8. Ces dernières années, l'Organisation des Nations Unies s'est préoccupée, on le conçoit aisément, de la crise humanitaire qu'ont entraînée les attaques israéliennes de fin 2008 contre Gaza (opération « Plomb durci ») et le blocus israélien, ainsi que des initiatives prises par la société civile pour s'opposer à ce blocus en vertu du droit international et de la morale. Ces problèmes et leurs conséquences continuent d'occuper une place importante sur la liste des priorités de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, mais il faut bien comprendre que les événements en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est peuvent avoir sur l'avenir de l'ensemble du peuple palestinien des répercussions plus durables que la situation, aussi extrême et difficile soit-elle, des 1,5 million de Palestiniens de Gaza. La bande de Gaza ne suscite pas les craintes d'annexion, de colonialisme et d'apartheid susmentionnées, les violations des droits de l'homme y étant perpétrées par les Israéliens semblant motivées par d'autres raisons. Pour reprendre la formule de l'ancien Commissaire de l'Union européenne, Chris Patten, le but d'Israël est notamment « de paralyser l'économie et de pousser les Gazaouis dans les bras de l'Égypte, bien malgré elle »²¹. Au point de vue de l'autodétermination, une telle politique porte une nouvelle fois atteinte à l'intégrité et à l'unité des Palestiniens en tant que peuple occupé, Gaza étant coupée de la Cisjordanie au mépris de la volonté des Palestiniens (aussi bien de ceux vivant en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est qu'à Gaza) et en violation de nombreuses résolutions de l'ONU qui consacrent l'intégrité du territoire palestinien occupé en tant qu'entité unique²². Pour l'Autorité palestinienne, la position israélienne exclut une grande partie des territoires palestiniens occupés du bénéfice d'une future politique palestinienne d'ensemble, qui est à la base de la solution reposant sur la création de deux États distincts et de l'application de la résolution 242 (1967) du Conseil de sécurité. Du fait d'un ensemble de politiques adoptées en parallèle par Israël, il est de plus en plus difficile pour les Palestiniens de se déplacer entre Jérusalem et la Cisjordanie, et il leur est quasiment impossible de se rendre à Gaza ou d'en sortir²³. La situation divise le peuple palestinien d'une manière telle qu'il en devient presque impossible d'envisager l'émergence d'un État palestinien viable. Par conséquent, la solution de deux États n'apparaît guère comme un moyen vraisemblable de parvenir à l'autodétermination palestinienne, ce qui amène les commentateurs éclairés à penser que l'avenir de la Palestine est de former un État aux côtés d'Israël – option qui laisse entière la question de savoir s'il s'agira d'un État démocratique et laïque (autre formule possible pour l'autodétermination palestinienne) ou si l'« occupation » israélienne, savant mélange de colonialisme et d'apartheid, continuera de prévaloir, faisant indéfiniment obstacle à l'exercice par le peuple palestinien de son droit à l'autodétermination.

²⁰ Financial Times, entrevue avec Salam Fayyad, 30 juillet 2010.

9. Cette orientation se heurte à certaines oppositions, sous l'effet de la nouvelle prise de conscience collective israélienne de la nécessité d'instaurer un nouveau régime légitime pour régir les relations entre Israël et la Palestine. Depuis peu, en Israël, on commence implicitement à reconnaître que l'image donnée par l'occupation n'est plus tenable et qu'il n'est plus possible de prétendre être parvenu à un consensus sur la création de deux États, comme en témoignent les appels à la création unilatérale d'un État unique et unifié qui intégrerait la Cisjordanie et Jérusalem-Est et abandonnerait toute revendication à l'égard de Gaza. D'éminentes personnalités du monde politique israélien, dont Moshe Arens, ancien Ministre de la défense et des affaires étrangères, Reuven Rivlin, membre et actuel Président de la Knesset, Tzipi Hotovely, membre de la Knesset, et Uri Elitzur, ancien Président du Conseil de Yesha des colonies ont, chacun de leur côté, appelé à choisir une telle option. Pour l'essentiel, la solution israélienne d'un état unique implique de légaliser l'annexion de facto du territoire, en continuant de le revendiquer comme un État juif – une citoyenneté israélienne, clairement de seconde classe, étant proposée a posteriori aux Palestiniens vivant actuellement sous occupation. Ce type de « solution » tente d'édulcorer les réalités actuelles de l'occupation – qui relèvent de l'apartheid et du colonialisme – sans changer la véritable nature de l'oppression. Sa mise en œuvre constituerait un déni total des droits conférés aux Palestiniens par le droit international, en particulier du droit à l'autodétermination. La proposition émise en juillet 2010 par le Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères, Avigdor Lieberman, qui préconise la levée du blocus imposé à Gaza et la création immédiate d'un État gazaoui, va entièrement dans ce sens. Lieberman invoque plusieurs raisons pour justifier une telle proposition, notamment les avantages qu'il y aurait à relâcher les pressions extérieures exercées contre l'expansion des colonies israéliennes en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est. Il semblerait que son idée ait notamment pour objectif de maintenir le Quatuor et George Mitchell occupés à l'élaboration d'un régime d'indépendance de Gaza dont le fonctionnement ne menacerait pas les intérêts d'Israël en matière de sécurité²⁴. Du côté palestinien, on observe une évolution analogue en faveur de la solution de l'État unique, en particulier parmi les grandes figures de l'exil, mais ces dernières envisagent la création d'un État palestinien/israélien unifié, laïque et démocratique, dans lequel les deux peuples auraient les mêmes droits, et qui n'aurait pas une identité juive. En revanche, d'autres signes montrent que le fait de compter sur la réactivation du « processus de paix » pour parvenir à la résolution du conflit et mettre fin à l'occupation ne constitue pas une option satisfaisante, notamment les appels qui sont lancés aux États-Unis pour qu'ils imposent une solution aux parties. Une telle démarche est compréhensible face à l'échec des négociations, mais une solution imposée reste inacceptable pour les deux parties et a peu de chances de prendre correctement en compte les droits bafoués des Palestiniens. Se pose en outre un problème de crédibilité, étant donné que les États-Unis se sont proclamés alliés inconditionnels d'Israël, celui-ci étant généralement considéré comme ayant illégalement abusé de son rôle de puissance occupante.

²¹ Financial Times, « To avert disaster, stop isolating Hamas », 28 juillet 2010.

²² Voir les résolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002) et 1402 (2002) du Conseil de sécurité.

²³ Voir A/HRC/13/54 (rapport du Haut-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme sur la mise en œuvre des résolutions S-9/1 et S-12/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme).

B. Pauvreté et enfants en Cisjordanie

10. Il semble que le confort matériel des Palestiniens vivant en Cisjordanie se soit très largement amélioré ces dernières années. Il est vrai que, dans certains secteurs géographiques et économiques de Cisjordanie, l'emploi et l'investissement ont récemment connu une grande expansion, comme le montre la croissance économique globale, qui aurait été de 8,5 % en 2009²⁵. Les efforts d'édification de l'État déployés par le Premier Ministre Fayyad ont par ailleurs reçu un accueil favorable, ceux-ci ayant été perçus comme des avancées concrètes allant dans le sens de la réalisation de l'autodétermination. Salam Fayyad s'est exprimé en ces termes : « l'essence de notre action est de nous préparer, par tous les moyens possibles, à devenir un État – en développant notre capacité de nous gouverner nous-mêmes, en améliorant nos institutions et en disposant des infrastructures adéquates »²⁰. Cependant, sur le plan matériel, les conditions de vie des populations ne sont pas idéales, en particulier pour les habitants qui vivent dans la zone C, entièrement régie par l'administration militaire israélienne, qui couvre 60 % du ²⁴ Voir à ce sujet les remarques intéressantes d'Henry Siegman, « An Immodest and Dangerous Proposal », The Middle East Channel, Foreign Policy, 9 août 2010.

²⁵ Fonds monétaire international, « Macroeconomic and Fiscal Framework for the West Bank and Gaza: Fifth Review of Progress », rapport établi par le personnel pour la réunion du Comité de liaison ad hoc, 13 avril 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.inf.org/wbg.

territoire cisjordanien et abrite environ 40 000 Palestiniens : les démolitions y ont fortement augmenté et des villages palestiniens y ont été détruits²⁶. « Life on the Edge », rapport publié par Save the Children UK en 2009 et récemment mis à jour, brosse un sinistre tableau de la vie dans la zone C²⁷. La principale conclusion à laquelle aboutit le rapport est que les politiques israéliennes de confiscation des terres, l'expansion des colonies, l'absence de services de base – tels que l'approvisionnement en nourriture et en eau –, de logements et d'établissements médicaux ont conduit à une situation critique où les problèmes de sécurité alimentaires sont encore plus graves qu'à Gaza²⁸. D'après le rapport, 79 % des communautés récemment étudiées ne disposent pas de suffisamment d'aliments nutritifs, ce taux étant supérieur à celui de la bande de Gaza soumise au blocus, où il est de 61 %²⁹. Dans ce rapport, Israël est accusée d'avoir créé une situation où les enfants palestiniens qui grandissent dans la zone C souffrent deux fois plus de malnutrition et de retards de croissance que ceux de la bande de Gaza. Quarante-quatre pour cent de ces enfants sont atteints de diarrhée, dont les effets sont souvent mortels. Save the Children UK indique que du fait des restrictions imposées par Israël aux Palestiniens en ce qui concerne l'accès aux terres agricoles et l'exploitation de celles-ci (dans une région où presque toutes les familles s'adonnent à l'élevage), des milliers d'enfants ont faim et sont vulnérables à des maladies mortelles telles que la diarrhée et la pneumonie. Jihad al-Shommali, militant de Défense des enfants International, a récemment évoqué le problème des enfants dans la zone C : « ces enfants sont contraints de traverser les colonies, au risque d'être battus et harcelés par les colons, ou de marcher des heures, simplement pour se rendre à l'école. Nombre d'entre eux perdent tout espoir d'améliorer leur sort »³⁰. Cette situation d'ensemble donne à penser qu'Israël viole systématiquement l'article 55 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et l'article 69 du Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux (Protocole I), adopté en 1977, qui définissent l'obligation d'Israël de garantir la satisfaction des besoins essentiels des personnes vivant sous son occupation, en particulier dans la zone C qu'elle contrôle entièrement. Aux termes de l'article 55, « dans toute la mesure de ses moyens, la Puissance occupante a le devoir d'assurer l'approvisionnement de la population en vivres et en produits médicaux; elle devra notamment importer les vivres, les fournitures médicales et tout autre article nécessaire lorsque les ressources du territoire occupé seront insuffisantes ». Ce devoir fait l'objet d'une description plus détaillée à l'article 69 du Protocole I, intitulé « Besoins essentiels dans les ²⁶ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Special Focus: Lack of Permit Demolitions and Resultant Displacement in Area C », mai 2008.

²⁷ Save the Children UK, « Life on the Edge: The Struggle to Survive and the Impact of Forced Displacement in High-Risk Areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory », octobre 2009.

²⁸ Ibid., p. 65.

²⁹ Ibid., p. 24.

³⁰ Jihad al-Shommali, de la section palestinienne de défense des enfants International, The Electronic Intifada, « Israeli colonization means life of poverty for West Bank children », 12 juillet 2010; voir <http://electronicintifada.net/v2/article11386.shtml>

territoires occupés »³¹. La protection des enfants vivant sous occupation reçoit une attention particulière à l'article 50 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et aux articles 77 et 78 du Protocole I. En conclusion, Israël ne respecte pas ses obligations de puissance occupante à l'égard des enfants palestiniens vivant dans la zone C.

C. Colonies de peuplement

11. D'après les chiffres les plus récents, il y a 121 colonies de peuplement israéliennes, parfois appelées « colonies » et approximativement 102 « avant-postes » qui ont été établis en violation de la loi israélienne³². Le nombre de colons dépasse aujourd'hui 462 000, dont 271 400 vivent en Cisjordanie et 191 000 dans Jérusalem-Est³³. Fait révélateur, la population des colons s'est accrue au rythme de 4,9 % par an depuis 1990, alors que le taux de croissance démographique en Israël était moins rapide, s'établissant à 1,5 %³⁴. Quelques-unes des grosses colonies de peuplement ont enregistré une croissance démographique encore plus forte³⁵. D'après une étude actualisée de B'Tselem, entre 2001 et 2009, les trois colonies de peuplement les plus importantes en Cisjordanie ont affiché une croissance démographique rapide : 78 % à Modi'in Illit, 55 % à Betar Illit, et 34 % à Ma'ale Adummim³⁶. Comme indiqué dans les rapports précédents, toutes les colonies de peuplement israéliennes en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est violent le droit international humanitaire, ce que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a maintes fois établi par des avis juridiques et souligné de manière édifiante dans l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé : « [...] les colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, sont illégales et constituent un obstacle à la paix et au développement économique et social [et] ont été installées en méconnaissance du droit international »³⁷. Ce consensus juridique a été récemment réaffirmé par le Secrétaire général Ban Ki-moon, lorsqu'il a déclaré : « Soyons clairs, toute activité en matière de peuplement est illégale où que ce soit dans le territoire occupé et doit cesser »³⁸. Le caractère illégal des colonies de peuplement se fonde sur une interprétation du paragraphe 6 de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui énonce que « La Puissance occupante ne pourra procéder à la déportation ou au transfert d'une partie

³¹ L'article 69 du Protocole I est ainsi libellé : « 1. En plus des obligations énumérées à l'article 55 de la quatrième Convention relatives à l'approvisionnement en vivres et en médicaments, la Puissance occupante assurera aussi dans toute la mesure de ses moyens et sans aucune distinction de caractère défavorable la fourniture de vêtements, de matériel de couchage, de logements d'urgence, des autres approvisionnements essentiels à la survie de la population civile du territoire occupé et des objets nécessaires au culte ».

³² Voir B'Tselem, « By Hook and by Crook: Israeli Settlement Policy in the West Bank », juillet 2010, p. 9.

³³ Voir Palestinian Monitor Factsheet, consacré aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes, actualisé le 15 mars 2010, à l'adresse www.palestinemonitor.org/spip/spip.php?article7.

³⁴ Jerusalem Post, « Settler population rose 4.9 % in 2009 », 10 mars 2010.

³⁵ Ibid.

³⁶ Voir B'Tselem, « By Hook and by Crook: Israeli Settlement Policy in the West Bank », p. 11.

³⁷ Cour internationale de Justice, The Wall (voir note n° 1).

³⁸ The Times, « Israel to ask US for bombs in the fight against Iran's nuclear sites », 21 mars 2010; disponible à l'adresse : www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/world/middle_east/article7069724.ece.

de sa propre population civile dans le territoire occupé par elle ». Israël conteste le statut de territoire occupé de la Cisjordanie, déclarant qu'il est l'objet de revendications de souveraineté concurrentes et qu'il se situe donc en dehors du champ d'application du droit régissant l'occupation de guerre³⁹. Au détriment de l'autorité du droit international, il existe une certaine ambiguïté concernant le statut qu'occuperaient ces colonies de peuplement dans un processus de paix israélo-palestinien, qui amène à se demander si, malgré leur illégalité, la plupart d'entre elles seront intégrées à Israël dans le cas où les parties conviennent de régler leur différend. Cette possibilité a été évoquée dans une lettre adressée en 2004 par le Président George W. Bush au Premier Ministre Ariel Sharon, dans laquelle il soulignait : « Compte tenu des nouvelles réalités sur le terrain et notamment des principaux centres existants de peuplement israélien, il est irréaliste de s'attendre à ce que les négociations sur le statut définitif débouchent sur un retour total aux lignes d'armistice de 1949; tous les efforts précédemment entrepris pour parvenir à la solution des deux États ont abouti à la même conclusion. Il serait réaliste de s'attendre à ce que tout accord sur le statut final ne pourra être obtenu que sur la base de changements mutuellement convenus qui reflèteraient ces réalités. »⁴⁰ Il est bien entendu que cette lettre est d'une importance politique considérable s'agissant de l'influence qu'elle peut exercer sur les attentes des parties, mais qu'elle n'a aucune valeur juridique puisque le Gouvernement américain ne peut en aucun cas restreindre les droits palestiniens. Au sens large, cela signifie qu'Israël garderait les grands blocs de colonies où vivent la plupart des colons et qu'en échange il donnerait à une entité palestinienne naissante une superficie équivalente de terres afin de compenser la perte de territoire. En fait, c'est devenu une profession de foi implicite, autant dans la feuille de route que pour les Palestiniens – alors que ces derniers demandent encore officiellement le retrait d'Israël de tous les territoires occupés en 1967 – que les Israéliens conservent les blocs de colonies dans tout plan de paix, ce qui légitimerait quelque 385 000 colons illégaux répartis sur 80 colonies. Il s'agit de colonies de peuplement situées entre le mur et la Ligne verte, ce qui, selon bon nombre d'observateurs, indique que l'emplacement du mur a été choisi avec l'objectif explicite d'une intégration territoriale à Israël proprement dit. Cette ambiguïté, associée au fait que les colonies de peuplement, tout en étant illégales créent des attentes légitimes – c'est-à-dire qu'il convient de les faire peser dans la balance éventuelle des négociations – prend d'autant plus d'ampleur que, selon certains rapports, des donations exonérées d'impôts importantes ont servi à la construction de colonies de peuplement illégales au cours de la dernière décennie pour un montant de 200 millions de dollars des États-Unis⁴¹. L'injection de fonds revêt une importance particulière s'agissant des efforts menés dans Jérusalem-Est, qui visent à accroître la présence juive au moyen du financement du déplacement des Palestiniens, souvent par le recours à des stratégies cruelles. Par exemple, la Jewish Reclamation Project of Ateret Cohanim s'emploie à transférer les titres de propriété de maisons arabes à des familles juives dans Jérusalem-Est occupée et ³⁹ La position israélienne est récapitulée dans un texte diffusé par le Ministère des affaires étrangères, intitulé « Israeli Settlements and International Law », 20 mai 2001; disponible à l'adresse : www.mfa.gov.il/MFA/Peace+Process/Guide+to+the+peace+Process/Israel+Settlements+and+International+Law.htm.

⁴⁰ Lettre du Président Bush au Premier Ministre Sharon datée du 14 avril 2004, disponible à l'adresse : <http://georgewbush-whitehouse.archives.gov/news/releases/2004/04/20040414-3.html>.

⁴¹ New York Times, « Tax-exempt Funds Aid Settlements in West Bank », 5 juillet 2010.

reçoit 60 % de son financement d'une organisation à but non lucratif établie aux États-Unis d'Amérique⁴². La question fondamentale, notamment pour l'Organisation des Nations Unies, demeure la suivante : comment peut-on remédier par la voie diplomatique à des faits illégaux sur le terrain? Car si ces actions acquièrent un poids politique certain, conformément aux attentes exprimées jusqu'à présent, on aura incité de façon perverse à continuer à bafouer le droit international humanitaire et, ainsi, compromis directement la régulation des agissements d'une Puissance occupante afin de protéger le présent et le futur d'un peuple vivant sous occupation. Israël a agi de manière à créer de nouvelles attentes qui lui sont favorables grâce à des dizaines d'années d'occupation, ce qui a réduit comme une peau de chagrin les attentes raisonnables qu'entretient le côté palestinien au sujet de l'ampleur et de la portée de tout accord de paix, quel qu'il soit, et affaibli progressivement l'autorité du droit international. Car lorsqu'on accorde une légitimité à des « faits » illégaux, ils acquièrent un statut juridique de fait : le droit en est fragilisé, les droits sont bafoués et on aboutit à un processus qui contrevient à la primauté du droit et même à son application.

D. Gel de la construction de colonies

12. Le principe du gel de la construction de colonies souligne toute l'ambiguïté du processus d'établissement des colonies. Le fait de considérer le gel de ces activités comme contribution au processus de paix fait disparaître toute sensibilité à l'illégalité intrinsèque des colonies de peuplement; les parrains du processus de paix, notamment le Gouvernement des États-Unis d'Amérique, l'abordent sous l'angle d'une concession judicieuse faite par Israël, qui doit être suivie d'une concession palestinienne similaire. Israël a accepté à la fin de 2007 le principe d'un « gel de la construction de colonies », mais ne l'a jamais mis en œuvre. La construction de colonies, en particulier à Jérusalem-Est, s'est accélérée et Israël n'a même pas honoré son engagement de démanteler des avant-postes. Au cours des premiers mois de sa présidence, le Président Obama a pesé de tout son poids en faveur du gel total des activités d'expansion et de construction des colonies de peuplement, dont on espérait qu'il durerait au moins le temps d'un processus de paix. Une fois encore, cette prise de position a permis d'éviter de remettre en cause l'illégalité du mouvement des colons israéliens, le but recherché étant de se ménager une pause propice à la reprise des négociations. Il ne faut pas oublier qu'Israël n'a jamais eu à répondre de la violation incessante du droit international humanitaire qu'impliquent la construction et l'expansion de chaque colonie de peuplement. Lorsque Israël a refusé d'accepter un gel complet, l'administration du Président Obama s'est accommodée d'un gel d'une durée de 10 mois qui excluait Jérusalem-Est et a accepté la construction d'unités d'habitation et d'autres bâtiments qui avait commencé avant l'entrée en vigueur du gel⁴³. Plusieurs initiatives autorisant la construction d'unités d'habitation spécifiques ont été prises à la suite du gel : 3 000 de ces unités d'habitation ont bénéficié d'une clause d'exemption dans le cadre d'une autorisation préalable et un certain nombre d'entre elles ont été approuvées à ⁴² Voir Haaretz, « US group invests tax-free millions in East-Jerusalem land », 17 août 2009, et IPS News, « Anger Rises Over U.S. Tax Dollars for Settlements », 24 juillet 2010.

⁴³ Voir « Remarks with Israeli Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu », Hillary Rodham Clinton, 31 octobre 2009; disponible à l'adresse : <http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2009a/10/131145.htm>.

la hâte afin de devancer la date limite comme ce fut le cas pour des colonies de peuplement situées dans le nord de la Cisjordanie où le Conseil régional de Shomron a autorisé la construction de 1 600 unités d'habitation, soit 10 fois plus qu'en 2008. Il semblerait, d'après des sources dignes de foi, que la construction se soit poursuivie dans de nombreuses colonies de la Cisjordanie pendant la période de 10 mois susmentionnée. Ethan Bronner indique que « dans de nombreuses colonies de peuplement de la Cisjordanie, la construction se poursuit de manière soutenue. Des dizaines de chantiers, où travaillent des légions d'ouvriers palestiniens, sont en cours »⁴⁴. Le gel devrait normalement prendre fin le 26 septembre 2010 et il semblerait qu'Israël ne le prorogera pas⁴⁵. Le Premier Ministre Nétanyahou a toujours appuyé le gel avec beaucoup de réticence, déclarant qu'il s'agissait d'une mesure « exceptionnelle » et « extraordinaire » qui ne devait être conçue que comme un arrêt temporaire (ce qui, on l'a bien vu, n'a jamais été le cas) des activités d'implantation de colonies de peuplement normales⁴⁴. Il y a eu de nombreux appels réclamant une reprise immédiate et accélérée des activités de construction dès le coucher du soleil le 26 septembre⁴⁶. Un membre du cabinet de M. Nétanyahou, qui est également un colon, M. Youli-Yoël Edelstein, Ministre de l'information et de la diaspora, a déclaré publiquement : « Débarrassons-nous du gel et revenons à la construction [...] Après tout, c'est notre terre »⁴⁷. Comme nous l'avons laissé entendre auparavant, l'expansion des colonies rend pour ainsi dire improbable la réalisation d'un consensus en faveur de la solution des deux États, en expropriant les terres indispensables à l'établissement d'un État palestinien viable. Le retrait de terres par le biais de la confiscation des biens fonciers palestiniens est aggravé par le fait que les colonies de peuplement sont érigées sur les terres agricoles les plus fertiles ou à proximité de sources d'eau (85 % de l'eau de la Cisjordanie est utilisée soit par les colonies, soit pompée par Israël, violant de ce fait l'article 147 de la quatrième Convention de Genève de 1949, qui se réfère à « la destruction et l'appropriation de biens non justifiées par des nécessités militaires et exécutées sur une grande échelle de façon illicite et arbitraire »). Il faut comprendre que les colonies de peuplement représentent quelque 3 à 4 % de la Cisjordanie, mais que si on prend en compte les routes (794 kilomètres), le mur, les zones tampons et les zones de sécurité israéliennes, l'expansion territoriale se chiffre alors à 38 à 40 %; il conviendrait également de se rappeler qu'en cas de retrait complet des Israéliens de la Cisjordanie dans sa totalité, les Palestiniens ne disposeraient toujours que de 22 % seulement de l'ancien territoire de la Palestine, tel qu'il existait à l'époque où il avait été placé sous mandat britannique⁴⁸.

⁴⁴ New York Times, « Despite Settlement Freeze, Buildings Rise », 14 juillet 2010.

⁴⁵ Au cours d'une réunion au Conseil des relations étrangères, M. Nétanyahou a déclaré « Je crois qu'on en a assez fait. Poursuivons les pourparlers »; voir à l'adresse : www.reuters.com/article/idUSTRE66709920100708; pour le texte intégral de son allocution, veuillez vous reporter à : www.pmo.gov.il/PMOEng/Communication/PMSpeaks/speechCFR080710.htm.

⁴⁶ Par exemple, un membre de la Knesset, M. Danny Danon, tel que cité par le Jerusalem Post, a déclaré : « Les colons commenceront à construire dès que le gel prendra fin », 21 juillet 2010; disponible à l'adresse : www.jpost.com/Israel/Article.aspx?182062.

⁴⁷ M. Youli-Yoël Edelstein, le 6 mai 2010, à la Radio nationale israélienne, tel que cité lors d'une entrevue avec le journaliste d'enquête Max Blumenthal, « Le gel de la construction de colonies : un phénomène qui n'a jamais existé et qui n'existera jamais », à <http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/07/the-settlement-freeze-that-never-was-and-never-will-be/>.

⁴⁸ Comité israélien contre la destruction de maisons, « The Key to Peace: Dismantling the Matrix of Control », disponible à l'adresse : www.icaHD.org/?page_id=79, et B'Tselem, rapport annuel « Human Rights in The Occupied Territories », du 1^{er} janvier 2009 au 30 avril 2010, p. 22 à 25.

E. Actes de violence commis par les colons

13. On a signalé au cours des derniers mois de nombreux actes de violence commis par des colons à l'encontre de Palestiniens, dont quelques-uns sont dus à la colère provoquée par la mise en œuvre du gel partiel et temporaire par le Gouvernement israélien. Les pires incidents, qui relèvent de la politique dite « du prix à payer » ont pris la forme de châtiments collectifs à l'encontre des Palestiniens et de leurs biens par des colons, en réponse à des interventions ponctuelles de l'État à la suite de l'établissement d'avant-postes, alors que, tout bien considéré, les avant-postes sont tolérés et qu'ils disposent souvent de services tels que l'électricité, l'eau et l'assainissement. Fin juillet 2010, dans le cadre de représailles dites du « prix à payer », occasionnées par l'enlèvement d'habitations mobiles implantées dans un nouvel avant-poste du village de Yithar, dans les collines situées au sud d'Hébron, des colons ont détruit les terres agricoles du village bédouin voisin d'Um Al-Kher⁴⁹. Les conséquences ont été catastrophiques pour les 85 personnes vivant dans cette communauté, qui tiraient l'essentiel de leur subsistance des produits de la terre. Dans d'autres cas, des Palestiniens ont été attaqués alors qu'ils cultivaient leurs terres ou lorsqu'ils passaient à proximité d'une colonie sur le chemin de l'école ou du travail. Le village de Saffa, près de Ramallah, a été le théâtre d'incidents en juillet 2010 au cours desquels des colons ont mis le feu à des oliviers plantés sur une propriété privée palestinienne, sous la protection manifeste des soldats israéliens, qui ont empêché les habitants du village et les pompiers de se rendre sur les lieux afin d'éteindre l'incendie. Des organisations indépendantes font état régulièrement du fait que les soldats israéliens n'offrent aucune protection aux Palestiniens face aux actes de violence commis par les colons, même lorsqu'ils sont présents lors de ces incidents et qu'ils s'abstiennent de protéger les Palestiniens même lorsqu'ils sont informés à l'avance d'attaques imminentes⁵⁰. On reproche également aux autorités militaires israéliennes leur manque d'empressement à enquêter sur les réclamations palestiniennes relatives aux dommages causés aux personnes ou aux biens⁵¹. Une telle complicité passive face aux actes de violence commis par les colons contrevient à l'obligation faite à la Puissance occupante de protéger les personnes et les biens de la population civile vivant sous l'occupation de guerre. L'article 53 de la quatrième Convention de Genève interdit expressément « à la Puissance occupante de détruire des biens mobiliers ou immobiliers, appartenant individuellement ou collectivement à des personnes privées, à l'État ou à des collectivités publiques, à des organisations sociales ou coopératives, sauf dans les cas où ces destructions seraient rendues absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires ». Cet acquiescement face aux actes de violence commis par les colons est particulièrement déplorable si l'on se place sous l'angle du droit international humanitaire, puisque les colons sont déjà présents illégalement sur le territoire occupé et que par l'effet d'un glissement pervers, on persécute ceux qui devraient être protégés (les Palestiniens) tout en offrant une protection à ceux qui enfreignent la loi (les colons).

⁴⁹ Ma'an News Agency, « Report: Settler violence continues in south Hebron hills », 30 juillet 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.maannews.net/eng/ViewDetails.aspx?ID=303761.

⁵⁰ Voir B'Tselem, « Settler violence »; disponible à l'adresse : www.btselem.org/english/Settler_violence/Index.asp.

⁵¹ B'Tselem, « Human Rights in the Occupied Territories », 1^{er} janvier 2009 au 30 avril 2010, p. 26 à 29.

F. Nettoyage ethnique à Jérusalem-Est occupée

14. Le militant israélien pour la paix et ancien membre de la Knesset, Uri Avnery, a fait la remarque suivante : « Le nettoyage ethnique peut se pratiquer au grand jour (comme ce fut le cas dans ce pays en 1948 et au Kosovo en 1998) ou d'une manière discrète et systématique, selon des méthodes sophistiquées très nombreuses, comme cela se passe en ce moment à Jérusalem-Est. »⁵² Ce qui ressort de ces méthodes, à part l'expansion des implantations, c'est un éventail de procédés pour faire partir les Palestiniens résidents : les expulsions pour cause d'affiliations politiques supposées, les manipulations de titres de propriété et, ce qui est le plus spectaculaire, les démolitions (on relève 15 000 ordres de démolition en attente d'exécution à Jérusalem-Est, et 3 000 en Cisjordanie, aucun d'entre eux n'ayant trait à la sécurité)⁵³. Depuis 1967, Israël rejette la position défendue avec insistance par les Nations Unies, selon laquelle Jérusalem-Est fait partie des territoires palestiniens occupés, et revendique l'appartenance de la ville entière à Israël. Donnant une nouvelle dimension à cette revendication, Israël prévoit d'étendre de manière importante la superficie de Jérusalem en annexant des terres à la ville, notamment les colonies établies sur les collines voisines. L'impression de nettoyage ethnique naît des mesures délibérées prises pour accroître la présence juive à Jérusalem-Est tout en faisant reculer la présence palestinienne, modifiant ainsi l'équilibre démographique de façon à donner corps à l'affirmation selon laquelle Jérusalem dans son ensemble est une ville juive. L'établissement et le développement illicites des implantations constituent la pierre angulaire de cette politique menée par la puissance occupante. L'importance en a été soulignée par le refus d'Israël d'étendre le gel des implantations jusqu'à Jérusalem-Est, même à titre provisoire, en dépit des pressions ouvertes exercées par les États-Unis⁵⁴. Insistant sur ce refus, les autorités municipales de Jérusalem ont pris la décision provocante d'approuver la construction de 1 600 logements supplémentaires dans la colonie de Ramat Shlomo (en vue d'accueillir 20 000 Juifs de plus)⁵⁵. Ce qui s'est passé à Ramat Shlomo est emblématique d'une tendance plus globale. Comme la remarque en a été faite à propos de Ramat Shlomo, « On parle d'une zone qui, au début du processus de paix [en 1993] était une terre délaissée (une colline inhabitée dépendant du village palestinien de Shuafat) – sans Israéliens, appartenant principalement à des Palestiniens et entièrement contiguë à des zones palestiniennes – une terre que quiconque, traçant une délimitation logique, aurait située du côté palestinien. »⁵⁶ La zone de Ramat Shlomo n'est devenue juive et israélienne qu'à la suite des expropriations de 1973, et ce n'est qu'en 1993 que le terrain fut déclaré constructible pour accueillir une nouvelle colonie, l'ironie du sort voulant que cet événement coïncide avec le début du processus de paix d'Oslo. Les défenseurs de la ⁵² Uri Avery, « Rosemary's Baby », 24 juillet 2010.

⁵³ « Israël doit éviter toutes nouvelles violations du droit international à Jérusalem-Est », déclaration à la presse du 29 juin 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=10189&LangID=E.

⁵⁴ Voir à ce sujet la réaction de l'envoyé spécial américain George Mitchell à l'annonce du gel décidé par Israël : « Israeli Settlement Moratorium Helps Move Talks Forward, U.S. Says », 25 novembre 2009, disponible à l'adresse : www.america.gov/st/peacesec-english/2009/November/20091125151758esnamfuak0.7892725.html.

⁵⁵ Voir le Jerusalem Post, « We'll prevent future embarrassments », 14 mars 2010.

⁵⁶ Lara Friedmann et David Seidmann, « Jerusalem, settlements, and the "everybody knows" fallacy », The Middle East Channel, Foreign Policy, 19 mars 2010.

colonie arguent que « tout le monde sait » que Ramat Shlomo fera partie d'Israël dans le cadre d'un accord de paix et qu'il est inutile, à ce stade, de faire des histoires autour de son développement⁵⁷. Telle est la logique de la « réalité de terrain » qui rogne les droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit international. Les auteurs de l'article démontrent l'illusion sur laquelle repose cette partialité en faisant ressortir que la démarche du « tout le monde sait » sous-entend qu'il doit y avoir d'autres parties de la ville dont tout le monde sait qu'elles seront palestiniennes, mais qu'en fait, ces autres parties n'existent pas. Au contraire, Israël choisit de manière croissante des quartiers à prédominance palestinienne, surtout autour de la vieille ville tels que Ras al-Amud et Jebel al-Mukabber, pour procéder à la construction de logements juifs parallèlement à la démolition des logements palestiniens et l'expulsion de leurs occupants⁵⁸. Particulièrement provocante a été l'approbation de permis de construire pour 20 logements destinés à des Juifs dans le vieux quartier palestinien de Sheikh Jarrah, sur le site de l'hôtel Sheppherd qui appartenait précédemment à des Palestiniens. Aggravant la situation du point de vue des droits de l'homme, deux grosses familles palestiniennes réunissant 54 personnes au total ont été expulsées sur ordre d'un tribunal israélien, bien qu'elles aient résidé à cet endroit depuis les années 1950. L'ordre d'expulsion a été reconnu judiciairement fondé en vertu du fait que le bien avait été légalement racheté à ses anciens propriétaires dans le but d'y installer des logements juifs. Plusieurs familles palestiniennes ont été forcées de vivre dans la rue pendant des périodes prolongées, ne disposant ni de ressources ni de solutions de rechange pour se loger. Selon certaines informations, des familles palestiniennes victimes d'expulsion ont été ciblées à cette fin par Ateret Conahim, une organisation privée représentant un courant juif ultra-orthodoxe, qui lève des fonds à l'étranger pour racheter des biens palestiniens et mettre en œuvre des stratégies juridiques aboutissant à l'expulsion de familles résidant de longue date à Jérusalem-Est, dans le cadre des efforts déployés pour accentuer le caractère juif des zones situées près de la vieille ville⁵⁹. Ces activités sont facilitées par le système judiciaire et la police d'Israël. L'expérience vécue par les Karresh et les Al-Kurd, deux familles palestiniennes nombreuses, illustre ce procédé consistant à mettre à la rue des Palestiniens vivant dans un quartier musulman, avec l'appui de la police palestinienne, pour installer à leur place des familles de colons⁵⁸. Le Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, Robert Serry, a déclaré que ce dernier déplacement de résidents palestiniens de longue date par des colons israéliens armés était « inacceptable » et constituait des « actes provocateurs » encouragés par Ateret Cohanim. M. Serry a demandé à Israël d'« évacuer les colons » occupant neuf bâtiments à proximité de la vieille ville, et de « rétablir la situation antérieure »⁶⁰. Dans le même contexte, le Comité israélien contre la destruction des maisons a appelé l'attention sur un déferlement de démolitions, de dépossession et de révocations du droit de résidence qui s'est abattu dans la Vallée du Jourdain. Fin juillet 2010, ce comité s'est opposé aux activités de démolition massive qui ont provoqué le déplacement de 107 personnes, dont 53 enfants, dans le village

⁵⁷ Ibid.

⁵⁸ Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « Human Rights in East Jerusalem: Facts and Figures », mai 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.acri.org.il/pdf/eastjer2010.pdf.

⁵⁹ Voir Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, Weekly Report on Israeli Human Rights Violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (29 juillet-4 août 2010).

⁶⁰ Ma'an News Agency, news release, 30 juillet 2010.

d'Al-Farisyeh⁶¹. Ce sont au total 74 structures qui ont été détruites par les bulldozers israéliens, dont 26 tentes d'habitation, 22 refuges pour animaux, 7 fours en argile, 8 cuisines, 10 salles de bain et 1 abri agricole, sans compter 4 citernes à eau, des logis, des possessions diverses et de grandes quantités de nourriture⁶².

G. Le mur

15. Comme de précédents rapports l'ont souligné, le mur de séparation, construit à 85 % sur territoire palestinien, est à la fois une entorse au devoir fondamental d'Israël de respecter l'intégrité territoriale de la surface occupée depuis 1967 et une violation grave du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination⁶³. Ce jugement a été confirmé par l'avis consultatif rendu en 2004 par la Cour internationale de Justice, puis accepté à une forte majorité dans une résolution de l'Assemblée générale et il est étayé par l'avis indépendant de la plupart des spécialistes du droit international⁶⁴. Le tracé du mur a été visiblement conçu pour ouvrir la voie à une annexion future du territoire occupé situé entre le mur et la Ligne verte et, parallèlement, à incorporer à Israël les implantations les plus importantes, regroupant jusqu'à 98 % de la population des colons de Cisjordanie ainsi que les principaux aquifères. En 2010, pour le sixième anniversaire du jugement de la Cour internationale de Justice, Saeb Erakat, le négociateur en chef de l'Autorité palestinienne, a déclaré : « Pour dire les choses simplement, le mur fait partie intégrante de la politique d'un régime résolu à s'engager dans la voie de l'apartheid. »⁶⁵ Le mépris du droit international manifesté par Israël à l'égard du mur est flagrant et continu, et le fait que les Nations Unies ne prennent pas les mesures qui conviennent pour assurer la mise en œuvre de la conclusion essentielle de la Cour internationale de Justice ne fait que saper l'autorité de la Cour et des Nations Unies et bafouer le droit international en général. En de nombreux endroits, le mur coupe l'accès des Palestiniens à leurs propres terres, sauf là où ils peuvent passer par des barrières contrôlées par les Israéliens, ce qui nécessite des permis délivrés par l'administration militaire en Cisjordanie, ceux-ci s'étant révélés excessivement difficiles à obtenir. La construction du mur demeure incomplète, n'étant achevée que sur 434 des 707 kilomètres prévus (61,4 %)⁶⁶. Elle s'est ralentie au cours des dernières années, apparemment en raison de son coût. Des manifestations non violentes organisées chaque semaine en divers points du chantier, principalement dans les villages de Bil'in, Nil'in et Nabi Saleh, sont ⁶¹ ICAHD, « Mass demolitions in the Jordan Valley », 22 juillet 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.icahd.org/?p=5179.

⁶² Stephen Lendman, « In Palestine, Demolitions and Disposessions », Palestine Chronicle, 31 juillet 2010.

⁶³ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires : « West Bank Movement and Access », juin 2010, p. 2.

⁶⁴ Voir la résolution ES-10/14 de l'Assemblée générale, et « Par un vote massif, l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies exige qu'Israël respecte l'avis de la Cour internationale de Justice », 20 juillet 2004, disponible à l'adresse : www.un.org/apps/newsFr/storyF.asp?NewsID=8501&Cr=middle&Cr1=east.

⁶⁵ Voir Organisation de libération de la Palestine (OLP), Département des affaires de négociations, communiqué de presse du 8 juillet 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.nad-plo.org/view_area_page.php?view=news-updates_080710&css=1.

⁶⁶ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « West Bank Barrier Route Projections », juillet 2010, disponible à l'adresse : www.ochaopt.org/documents/ocha_opt_route_projection_july_2010.pdf.

dispersées par les forces militaires et de police israéliennes usant d'une force excessive, à l'aide de gaz lacrymogène, de bombes à percussion, de bombes à gaz et de balles en caoutchouc qui ont causé de nombreuses blessures ainsi que plusieurs morts⁶⁷. Par ailleurs, au cours des derniers mois, des organisateurs de manifestations, des journalistes et des observateurs internationaux ont été arrêtés et détenus, souvent selon des procédés conçus pour terrifier non seulement la personne appréhendée mais également des membres de sa famille, ce qui se traduit par des incursions de nuit dans les foyers et par l'humiliation des personnes. Des responsables très respectés de la Campagne populaire contre le mur, dont Jamal Juma, Mohammed Othman et Abdallah Abu Rahmah, ont été arrêtés de cette façon, soit sans motif, soit sur des accusations montées de toutes pièces⁶⁸. C'est ainsi que Rahmah a été accusé d'être « en possession d'armes », les armes en question étant finalement des munitions lacrymogènes usées qui avaient été tirées contre les manifestants. Juma a été accusé de provocation. Ces atteintes aux droits civiques des Palestiniens sous occupation sont une entorse à l'obligation fondamentale qui incombe à Israël de défendre les droits d'un peuple occupé. La sécurité ne peut être raisonnablement invoquée dans le cas de manifestations palestiniennes non violentes contre le mur qui est manifestement illégal et envahissant.

III. Gaza

A. Observation générale

16. Bien que le blocus ait été quelque peu assoupli, la population civile de Gaza continue d'être persécutée de diverses manières illégales par un régime d'occupation qui lui impose systématiquement des sanctions collectives en contravention de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Tzipi Livni, qui était la Ministre israélienne des affaires étrangères au moment de la guerre de Gaza de 2008-2009, a récemment déclaré que le blocus ne visait pas à punir le peuple palestinien. Selon elle, le blocus de Gaza a été établi non pas pour punir le peuple palestinien mais pour ôter sa légitimité au Hamas⁶⁹. Indépendamment de l'objectif visé, en imposant un blocus pour ôter sa légitimité à un opposant politique, on fait inévitablement souffrir la population et cet objectif ne pouvait en aucun cas justifier sur le plan juridique qu'on ait interdit à une population démunie, qui vivait sous une occupation de guerre, de s'approvisionner en nourriture, en carburants et en matériaux de construction et de mener des activités normales en temps de paix. En outre, au nom de la sécurité, Israël fait un usage excessif de la force pour étouffer dans l'œuf toute velléité d'agitation et de résistance et oblige toute la population de la bande de Gaza à vivre dans une atmosphère de terreur et d'appréhensions. Le fait d'enfermer 1,5 million d'habitants de Gaza et de ne leur accorder de permis de sortie que dans de rares cas est une atteinte à leurs droits fondamentaux dans les domaines de la santé et de l'éducation et les empêche d'avoir des relations sociales normales avec la famille et les amis. Le blocus a entraîné

⁶⁷ Les organisations non gouvernementales locales telles que Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, rendent compte chaque semaine des violents incidents intervenant à la suite des manifestations contre le mur.

⁶⁸ Voir Jonathan Cook, « Israel's war on protest », agence Ma'an News Agency, 13 février 2010.

⁶⁹ Deborah Solomon, « Questions for Tzipi Livni », New York Times, 24 juin 2010; cet article peut être consulté à l'adresse www.nytimes.com/2010/06/27/magazine/27FOB-Q4-t.html.

l'écroulement de l'économie de Gaza, accroissant ainsi sa dépendance vis-à-vis de l'aide humanitaire fournie par les Nations Unies et aggravant la pauvreté et le chômage. Dix lauréats israéliens de distinctions académiques et des universitaires israéliens ont lancé, dans une lettre adressée au Ministère israélien de la défense, un appel lui demandant de mettre fin à l'interdiction de voyager, en vigueur depuis 2000, visant les étudiants palestiniens de Gaza qui étudient en Cisjordanie⁷⁰. Rédigée sous les auspices de l'organisation Gisha : Centre juridique pour la liberté de mouvement, cette lettre attirait l'attention sur le fait que la Puissance occupante n'avait pas respecté une décision de la Haute Cour de justice datant de 2007, selon laquelle les étudiants de Gaza souhaitant étudier en Cisjordanie devraient être autorisés à le faire sous la seule réserve qu'il soit tenu compte des préoccupations légitimes d'Israël en matière de sécurité⁷¹. Cette lettre soulignait qu'une formation académique et professionnelle était indispensable au bien-être et au développement de la société palestinienne et de chacun des individus, hommes et femmes, la composant qui souhaitaient évoluer⁷². Dans une affaire très médiatisée, la Haute Cour de justice a décidé en juin 2010 que Fatma Sharif, une avocate de Gaza âgée de 29 ans, pouvait ne pas être autorisée à préparer un master dans le domaine des droits de l'homme à l'Université Bir Zeit⁷³. Sa demande de permis de voyager a été rejetée car, en vertu de la stricte réglementation relative au blocus, seuls les besoins humanitaires spéciaux ou les besoins médicaux urgents sont considérés comme des raisons valables d'autoriser une personne à sortir de Gaza. À l'unanimité, la Haute Cour de justice a présenté son avis juridique comme suit : « Nous ne sommes pas convaincus que, dans la situation qui prévaut sur les plans de la politique et de la sécurité, la situation personnelle [de la requérante] justifie une intervention quant à la décision du défendeur, [le Ministère de la défense] ». Ainsi, même après un prétendu assouplissement du blocus de Gaza à la suite de l'incident de la flottille, cette demande d'autorisation de voyage à des fins éducatives a été rejetée par l'administration, puis confirmée par la justice. Même en tenant compte des rigueurs de l'occupation, refuser d'autoriser tout déplacement visant à établir des rapports sociaux et ayant Gaza comme destination ou point de départ revient à entraver cruellement un développement personnel sain et des conditions de vie normales. Sur le plan de la sécurité, rien ne justifie un tel déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme relatifs au voyage et à l'éducation. De fait, Israël ne semble pas accorder de l'intérêt à l'amélioration de la situation en matière de sécurité. Ces dernières années, il n'a manifesté aucune volonté d'étudier les possibilités de négocier un cessez-le-feu durable avec les autorités de facto de Gaza. C'est décevant, compte tenu du fait qu'un cessez-le-feu temporaire instauré au second semestre de 2008 avait réduit les violences transfrontières à presque zéro et avait duré jusqu'à ce qu'Israël lance, le 4 novembre 2008, une attaque meurtrière contre Gaza, tuant six ⁷⁰ Jerusalem Post, « Israel Prize winners to Barak: Let Gazans study in West Bank », 29 avril 2010.

⁷¹ Gisha : Centre juridique pour la liberté de mouvement, « Held Back: Students Trapped in Gaza », juin 2008; disponible à l'adresse <http://www.gisha.org/UserFiles/File/Students%20report%20Eng%20-%20Online%20Version.pdf>.

⁷² Gisha : Centre juridique pour la liberté de mouvement, « 10 Israel Prize laureates and dozens of academics urge the Defense Minister »; 28 avril 2010, disponible à l'adresse www.gisha.org/index.php?intLanguage=2&intItemId=1745&intSiteSN=113.

⁷³ Gisha : Centre juridique pour la liberté de mouvement, « Israel refuses to allow a lawyer to leave Gaza to reach her studies in democracy and human rights in the West Bank », 1^{er} juillet 2010; disponible à l'adresse www.gisha.org/index.php?intLanguage=2&intItemId=1832&intSiteSN=113.

Palestiniens⁷⁴. La partie palestinienne a proposé à maintes reprises de lier des prorogations à long terme du cessez-le-feu à la levée du blocus et à l'ouverture des frontières, mais Israël n'en a pas tenu compte. Il y a également lieu de s'interroger sur l'emploi du terme « blocus ». Depuis la première occupation, en 1967, Israël a toujours surveillé les entrées d'armes à Gaza et, à cet égard, les mesures qui ont été imposées au second semestre 2007 s'inscrivaient dans une action globale destinée à empêcher les biens, les services et les personnes d'entrer à Gaza ou d'en sortir. Ces mesures, loin de constituer un blocus traditionnel, visaient donc davantage à faire de Gaza une vaste prison ou à instituer ce qu'on appelait l'état de siège au Moyen Âge.

B. Incident de la « flottille pour la liberté »

17. Le 31 mai 2010, les Forces de défense israéliennes ont attaqué six navires de la « flottille pour la liberté de Gaza »⁷⁵. La flottille avait été réunie à l'initiative des sociétés civiles du monde entier. Sous la direction du Free Gaza Movement et d'une organisation turque, la Foundation for Human Rights and Freedoms and Humanitarian Relief, ces navires transportaient 10 000 tonnes de produits humanitaires à la population de Gaza. À leur bord, se trouvaient 718 personnes ressortissantes de 37 pays⁷⁶. En pleine nuit, alors qu'ils se trouvaient dans les eaux internationales, les navires ont été violemment interceptés, entre autres, par 13 commandos d'opérations spéciales des Forces de défense israéliennes, qui, depuis des hélicoptères, ont pris d'assaut le premier navire, qui battait pavillon turc. Lors des combats, neuf militants de la paix ont été tués et des dizaines ont été blessés, puis des centaines de militants ont été arrêtés⁷⁷. Il est clair que le droit maritime international interdit toute intervention militaire contre une opération humanitaire dans les eaux internationales, en particulier si elle est menée avec une telle violence, mais, pour disposer d'évaluations fiables, il faudra attendre le résultat de plusieurs enquêtes qui sont en cours. S'agissant de la manière dont les violences ont éclaté, les faits n'ont pas encore été établis et sont étudiés par plusieurs commissions d'enquête, créées notamment par le Président du Conseil des droits de l'homme⁷⁸ et par le Secrétaire général de l'ONU⁷⁹. Israël fait partie de la commission d'enquête établie par le Secrétaire général et a nommé un Israélien pour l'y représenter. Comme l'ont souligné à maintes reprises les organisateurs de cette opération de secours humanitaire, qui avait été menée pour venir en aide à la population de Gaza victime du blocus, leur objectif symbolique était de fournir des ⁷⁴ The Guardian, « Gaza truce broken as Israeli raid kills six Hamas gunmen », 5 novembre 2008; disponible à l'adresse www.guardian.co.uk/world/2008/nov/05/israelandthepalestinians.

⁷⁵ « Gaza aid convoy killings: Those responsible must be held accountable », communiqué de presse, 31 mai 2010; disponible à l'adresse www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=10080&LangID=E.

⁷⁶ On peut lire des récits des participants aux adresses www.freegaza.org/ et www.ihh.org.tr/.

⁷⁷ Pour un point de vue israélien, lire la déclaration du Premier Ministre Netanyahu datée du 1^{er} juin 2010 à l'adresse www.pmo.gov.il/PMOEng/Communication/Spokesman/2010/06/spokehatshara010610.htm; pour un échantillon des articles parus dans la presse internationale, lire l'article du New York Times intitulé « Israel intercepts Gaza Flotilla; Violence reported », 30 mai 2010.

⁷⁸ Voir résolution 14/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, 2 juin 2010.

⁷⁹ Centre d'actualités de l'ONU, « Flottille pour Gaza : les membres israélien et turc du panel annoncés », 7 août 2010; disponible à l'adresse www.un.org/apps/newsFr/storyF.asp?NewsID=22640&Cr=gaza&Cr1=&Kw1=flottille&Kw2=&Kw3=.

denrées alimentaires, du matériel médical, des matériaux de construction et du matériel pédagogique. Leur principal objectif de fond était de mettre fin au blocus en lançant un appel à l'opinion publique mondiale. De ce point de vue, bien que les navires n'aient pas été autorisés à se rendre à leur port de destination et que les citoyens militants qui se trouvaient à leur bord aient payé un lourd tribut, l'opération a été une réussite spectaculaire sur le plan politique. Pour la première fois depuis sa mise en place, il y a trois ans, le blocus a été au centre de l'attention au niveau mondial en raison des souffrances graves et illégales sur le plan humanitaire qu'il inflige à la population civile de Gaza. Face à ces réactions, les autorités israéliennes ont accepté de limiter le blocus⁸⁰. Il est trop tôt pour savoir si cet assouplissement du blocus atténuera la crise humanitaire à Gaza. À ce jour, rien n'indique qu'Israël permettra le retour à des conditions de vie humaines à Gaza, ce qui supposerait d'autoriser le libre passage des habitants souhaitant étudier ou travailler à l'extérieur de Gaza et d'autoriser les journalistes et les parents et amis de ces habitants à se rendre à Gaza sans être obligés d'obtenir une autorisation ni d'attendre longtemps ou de subir des procédures de sécurité contraignantes. Selon certaines sources, la constitution d'une deuxième flottille d'aide humanitaire serait envisagée⁸¹ dans le cadre d'une mission organisée et financée par des citoyens de différents pays, l'objectif étant d'acheminer de l'aide directement à Gaza. Israël a prévenu qu'il empêcherait tout navire de forcer le blocus et, dans un communiqué officiel, le Secrétariat des Nations Unies a également appelé la société civile à ne pas tenter de contourner la législation israélienne relative à l'occupation de Gaza. En même temps, de nombreux signes montrent que, dans le monde entier, le soutien aux actions de solidarité avec le peuple palestinien a augmenté, sous la forme notamment de boycottage, de cession de certains actifs et d'une campagne de sanctions⁸². Les comparaisons avec la campagne de lutte contre l'apartheid menée dans les années 80 et au début des années 90, qui avait pesé de façon décisive sur la manière dont l'Afrique du Sud envisageait le règlement du conflit entre le maintien du droit constitutionnel et le racisme dans ce pays, sont de plus en plus fréquentes.

C. Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza (« rapport Goldstone »)

18. Comme je l'avais souligné dans mon précédent rapport, les informations figurant dans le rapport Goldstone étayaient fortement les allégations de crimes de guerre commis pendant le conflit de Gaza de 2008-2009 et les conclusions qui y sont formulées méritent le plus grand respect. Il est recommandé dans le rapport Goldstone que, dans une première étape, Israël et les autorités palestiniennes ⁸⁰ Voir la décision du Cabinet de sécurité israélien du 17 juin 2010; disponible à l'adresse www.mfa.gov.il.

⁸¹ Voir Press TV, « Activists planning new Gaza flotilla », 4 août 2010, à l'adresse www.presstv.com/detail.aspx?id=137483§ionid=351020202; et New York Times, « American activists plan Gaza Flotilla ship named for Obama book », 20 juillet 2010, à l'adresse <http://thelede.blogs.nytimes.com/2010/07/20/american-activists-plan-gaza-flotilla-ship-named-for-obama-book/>.

⁸² Voir U.S. Campaign for the Academic and Cultural Boycott of Israel, « Global boycotts of Israel intensify after bloody Flotilla attack », 5 juin 2010; disponible à l'adresse <http://usacbi.wordpress.com/2010/06/05/global-boycotts-of-israel-intensify-after-bloody-flotilla-attack/>.

concernées, assumant leurs responsabilités respectives, aient la possibilité d'enquêter eux-mêmes sur ces allégations et de prendre des mesures conformes aux normes internationales⁸³. Il existe bien des raisons de mettre en doute la capacité d'un État, quel qu'il soit, d'enquêter sur des agissements qui sont reprochés à sa propre armée. Renforçant l'importance qu'il accorde au principe de responsabilité, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a créé un comité d'experts indépendants dont les membres ont été nommés par la Haut-Commissaire aux droits de l'homme, conformément à la résolution 13/9 du Conseil⁸⁴. La Haut-Commissaire, Navi Pillay, a indiqué que le Comité d'experts indépendants veillerait en priorité à ce que les auteurs de toutes les violations du droit international humanitaire commises pendant le conflit de Gaza soient comptables de leurs actes afin de lutter contre l'impunité, de garantir la justice, de prévenir de nouvelles violations et de promouvoir la paix⁸⁵. Il importera de prendre au sérieux les conclusions du Comité d'experts indépendants, qui doivent être présentées à la quinzième session du Conseil des droits de l'homme, car elles s'inscrivent dans l'action menée pour faire respecter l'obligation de rendre des comptes. Si le Comité d'experts indépendants conclut que les deux parties ont mené des enquêtes donnant satisfaction, il y aura des raisons d'aller de l'avant et d'encourager Israël et les autorités palestiniennes concernées à appliquer les recommandations issues de leurs enquêtes nationales respectives. Toutefois, s'il conclut que l'une ou l'autre des parties n'a pas mené des enquêtes satisfaisantes, il appartiendra à la communauté internationale de prendre des mesures conformes aux recommandations formulées dans le rapport Goldstone. On notera que, dans un deuxième rapport, le Ministère israélien des affaires étrangères reconnaît plusieurs des conclusions les plus graves du rapport Goldstone, concernant notamment les tirs d'obus au phosphore blanc dans des zones où la présence de civils était connue, l'utilisation de civils palestiniens comme boucliers humains et les attaques menées contre des civils et des cibles prohibées⁸⁶. Selon certaines déclarations, les Forces de défense israéliennes auraient l'intention de prendre des mesures disciplinaires motivées par quatre incidents qui ont attiré leur attention⁸⁷. Ces faits permettent de penser qu'Israël a effectivement pris des mesures pour donner suite au rapport Goldstone, mais n'indiquent en rien que les autorités israéliennes se soient intéressées aux crimes les plus graves, dus à un plan de bataille qui reposait sur un recours excessif et aveugle à la force; or, si tel est le cas et que seuls les soldats qui appliquaient divers plans de guerre sur le terrain ont été tenus pour responsables, les principaux responsables des crimes de guerre et des violations du droit international humanitaire jouissent de l'impunité.

⁸³ Voir A/HRC/12/48.

⁸⁴ Voir « Progress report of the High Commissioner on the follow-up to the report of the United Nations Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict » (A/HRC/14/CRP.4).

⁸⁵ Centre d'actualités de l'ONU, « L'ONU désigne trois experts pour contrôler les enquêtes sur le conflit de Gaza », 14 juin 2010.

⁸⁶ Ministère israélien des affaires étrangères, « Gaza Operation Investigations: Second Update », juillet 2010.

⁸⁷ Voir Yaniv Reich, « New Israeli report on Operation Cast Lead confirms Goldstone report's main findings », 22 juillet 2010; à l'adresse www.hybridstates.com/2010/07/new-israeli-report-on-operation-cast-lead-confirm-goldstone-reports-main-findings/.

IV. Recommandations

19. Il faudrait que le Conseil des droits de l'homme entreprenne une étude des effets de l'occupation prolongée sur les plans juridique, politique, social, culturel et psychologique, éventuellement en concertation avec le Gouvernement suisse, qui envisagerait de mener une étude sur cette question.

20. Il faudrait que toutes les tentatives de règlement pacifique du conflit entre les deux peuples respectent pleinement et appliquent les droits juridiques des Palestiniens, dont le droit à l'autodétermination.

21. Il faudrait que les recommandations formulées dans le rapport Goldstone soient appliquées sans plus tarder, en se conformant aux conclusions du Comité d'experts indépendants créé en application de la résolution 13/9 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

22. Il faudrait que l'Organisation des Nations Unies appuie les actions de boycottage et de cession d'actifs et la campagne de sanctions qui sont menées dans le monde entier aussi longtemps qu'Israël occupera illégalement les territoires palestiniens et qu'elle reconnaisse qu'une « guerre non violente pour la légitimité » est une solution à la fois à l'échec des négociations de paix et aux conflits armés, car il s'agit de la meilleure stratégie dont on dispose pour promouvoir les droits de la population civile du territoire palestinien occupé, comme le prévoit le droit international humanitaire.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
13 septembre 2011
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-sixième session

Point 69 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme
et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Richard Falk, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/66/150.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Dans le présent rapport, soumis en application de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, une attention particulière est accordée au droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination, à la situation des prisonniers palestiniens détenus par Israël, aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé, à la violence qu'exercent les colons israéliens contre les Palestiniens et leurs biens, à la situation particulièrement vulnérable des enfants dans les territoires palestiniens occupés et aux effets du blocus israélien de Gaza.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	3
II. Questions concernant la non-application des recommandations	3
III. Le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination	6
IV. Protection de la population civile vivant sous occupation	7
V. Détention et emprisonnement	9
VI. Colonies de peuplement israéliennes	11
VII. Enfants palestiniens, droits de l'homme et droit international humanitaire	15
VIII. Recommandations	21

I. Introduction

1. Le Rapporteur spécial n'est toujours pas parvenu à obtenir le concours d'Israël dans l'accomplissement des tâches qui lui incombent en vertu de son mandat. Il continue de penser qu'à cet égard, Israël ne s'acquitte pas de ses obligations d'État Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Il rappelle que lorsqu'il a tenté d'entrer en Israël le 14 décembre 2008, aux fins de l'application de son mandat, il a été détenu dans un établissement pénitentiaire proche de l'aéroport, s'est vu refuser l'entrée sur le territoire israélien et été expulsé. Comme le seul moyen d'accéder régulièrement à la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, consiste à passer par l'aéroport Ben Gourion à Tel-Aviv et par les points de franchissement de la frontière avec la Jordanie qui sont contrôlés par les forces israéliennes, il ne dispose pas des mêmes moyens que ses prédécesseurs pour se rendre dans les zones susmentionnées du territoire palestinien occupé.

2. Les changements survenus en Égypte ont créé la possibilité d'accéder à Gaza par le point de franchissement de la frontière de Rafah, que les autorités officielles égyptiennes ont affirmé vouloir maintenir ouvert à la circulation des personnes tant à l'entrée qu'à la sortie. Autre fait nouveau encourageant, le Comité spécial chargé d'enquêter sur les pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme du peuple palestinien et des autres Arabes des territoires occupés a pu entrer à Gaza pour la première fois depuis sa création il y a 43 ans.

3. C'est dans ce contexte qu'une mission au titre du mandat du Rapporteur spécial avait été prévue pour la période allant du 25 avril au 3 mai 2011. Malheureusement, le Rapporteur spécial a été contraint d'annuler sa visite à Gaza en raison des conclusions formulées par l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur la situation en matière de sécurité qui régnait dans le territoire. Le Rapporteur spécial prévoit de tenter de nouveau de se rendre à Gaza. Bien qu'il n'ait pu visiter le territoire occupé durant sa mission, il a poursuivi celle-ci en se rendant en Égypte et en Jordanie où il s'est entretenu avec des responsables officiels, des universitaires, des représentants d'organisations de la société civile ainsi que d'organismes des Nations Unies, des défenseurs des droits de l'homme et des journalistes qui connaissent bien la situation dans le territoire occupé. Même si sa mission portait sur l'ensemble des problèmes de droits de l'homme soulevés par la poursuite de l'occupation israélienne, le Rapporteur spécial s'est tout particulièrement intéressé à la façon dont la perpétuation de l'occupation, le blocus imposé à Gaza et la situation à long terme des réfugiés portaient atteinte aux droits fondamentaux des enfants. Le présent rapport accorde une place de premier plan à ces préoccupations. La mission a permis de recueillir des informations qui, même si elles ne peuvent remplacer les renseignements de première main obtenus lors de visites sur le terrain dans le territoire palestinien occupé, ont été très utiles dans l'établissement de tous les chapitres du présent rapport.

II. Questions concernant la non-application des recommandations

4. Comme toujours, les graves préoccupations en matière de droits de l'homme que suscite l'occupation israélienne sont bien plus nombreuses que celles qui peuvent être traitées dans le présent rapport, lequel, en vertu des directives de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ne peut dépasser une certaine longueur. Pour éviter de donner l'impression que les préoccupations précédemment exprimées n'ont plus lieu d'être, le Rapporteur spécial tient à insister sur le caractère persistant des violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit relatif aux droits de l'homme, qui découle notamment des problèmes examinés ci-après.

5. Les recommandations contenues dans le rapport de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza¹ (le « Rapport Goldstone »), n'ont pas été appliquées, en dépit des rapports de suivi établis par le Comité d'experts indépendants². Ces rapports prennent note en particulier du fait qu'Israël n'a pas enquêté sur les allégations de crimes de guerre de manière conforme aux normes internationales.

6. Les conclusions et recommandations de la mission d'établissement des faits sur l'incident de la flottille humanitaire du 31 mai 2010³, au cours duquel Israël a lancé, dans les eaux internationales, des attaques navales qui ont causé la mort de neuf militants pour la paix à bord du Mavi Marmara, un navire turc, n'ont pas encore donné lieu à l'adoption de mesures appropriées⁴. On notera que le fait de ne pas donner suite aux initiatives recommandées par des experts internationaux compétents agissant sous les auspices de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, revient en quelque sorte à se dégager de toute responsabilité pour ce qui concerne les graves allégations de crimes de guerre et de violations des droits de l'homme. Cette attitude est particulièrement regrettable vu l'impact qu'elle a sur ceux qui, depuis des années, vivent sous un régime d'occupation belliqueux qui les a systématiquement privés des droits et des recours auxquels peuvent normalement prétendre les membres d'une société respectueuse des lois. Sans protection internationale résolue et efficace, ceux qui vivent sous un régime d'occupation prolongé sont exposés aux excès et aux abus de l'occupant, comme en attestent de multiples façons les faits réels qui se déroulent dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

7. L'inquiétude que suscite le refus de donner suite aux recommandations est d'autant plus vive qu'Israël a rejeté l'avis consultatif concernant la construction du mur de séparation dans le territoire palestinien occupé⁵ que la Cour internationale de Justice a rendu à la quasi-unanimité en 2004. Cette interprétation judiciaire des obligations internationales incombant à Israël, qui fait autorité et que l'Assemblée générale a entériné dans sa résolution ES-10/15, a été rejetée par Israël sans susciter la moindre réaction internationale concrète. Bien que les avis consultatifs n'aient pas force obligatoire au sens propre du terme, ils ont des effets juridiques importants car ils donnent une interprétation juridique des questions à l'examen qui fait autorité et qui est fondée sur le raisonnement juridique du plus haut organe judiciaire traitant

¹ A/HRC/12/48.

² A/HRC/15/50 et A/HRC/16/24.

³ A/HRC/15/21. Voir également A/HRC/16/73 et A/HRC/17/47.

⁴ On notera que le groupe que le Secrétaire général a chargé d'enquêter sur ces mêmes incidents a reporté à la fin d'août 2011 la date de publication de son rapport.

⁵ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J., rapports 2004 (voir également A/ES-10/273 et Corr.1)]. Dans son avis consultatif, la Cour internationale de Justice a conclu que la quatrième Convention de Genève était applicable dans les territoires palestiniens qui étaient avant le conflit de 1967 à l'est de la Ligne verte et qui ont, à l'occasion de ce conflit, été occupés par Israël.

du droit international dans le monde⁶. L'avis consultatif est particulièrement important dans le cas qui nous intéresse dans la mesure où il a été adopté par 14 voix contre une, vote qui reflète un rare consensus entre des juges issus des principaux systèmes juridiques et horizons culturels du monde. On notera que le juge dissident était lui-même d'accord sur le fond avec une grande partie du raisonnement juridique formulé dans l'avis consultatif, dont les conclusions deviennent de ce fait quasi unanimes. Tout en refusant de reconnaître l'autorité des avis et opinions formulés, à l'échelle internationale, à propos de ce qui devait être considéré comme illégal, le Gouvernement israélien a accepté de se conformer aux dispositions du droit israélien applicables à la construction du mur. Dans la pratique cependant, Israël tarde à se conformer aux décisions judiciaires pertinentes des juges israéliens qui lui ordonnent de démanteler certains segments du mur et de les transférer ailleurs. Dans certains cas, ces directives judiciaires sont restées lettre morte pendant des années, imposant de très vives souffrances aux communautés palestiniennes qui sont isolées de leurs terres agricoles ou interdites d'accès à ces terres⁷. Les manifestations hebdomadaires contre le mur se sont poursuivies, en particulier dans certains villages palestiniens proches de Naplouse, notamment les villages de Ni'lin et de Bil'in. Comme pour toutes les autres questions touchant aux violations du droit international commises par Israël, il continue d'y avoir, au sein de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et plus particulièrement parmi ses États Membres, une absence de volonté de remettre en question l'existence du mur et la poursuite de la construction de cet édifice qui empiète de façon si préjudiciable sur l'existence de nombreux Palestiniens vivant sous occupation en Cisjordanie, et plus particulièrement à Jérusalem-Est.

8. À l'heure présente, deux problèmes conjoints se posent : le refus d'Israël de s'acquitter des obligations en matière d'administration du territoire palestinien occupé qui lui incombent en vertu du droit international et le fait que l'Organisation des Nations Unies n'a pas pris de mesures efficaces face aux violations persistantes, flagrantes et systématiques des droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens vivant sous l'occupation. Il semblerait toutefois que de telles mesures se voient accorder une importance accrue, le Conseil de sécurité ayant fait sien le principe de la responsabilité de protéger en adoptant la résolution 1624 (2006), principe qu'il a récemment appliqué par la voie de sa résolution 1973 (2011), qui prescrit la protection des civils en Lybie.

9. Il convient de rappeler les termes de la Déclaration Balfour du 2 novembre 1917 – laquelle, même aujourd'hui, près de 100 ans après sa publication, demeure le fondement de l'État d'Israël –, qui insistent sur les notions de réciprocité et de droits, stipulant notamment ceci : « ...étant clairement entendu que rien ne sera fait qui puisse porter atteinte [...] aux droits civils et religieux des collectivités non juives existant en Palestine ». La proclamation expresse de soutien, dans la déclaration contestée, à la création de ce que l'on appelait alors « un foyer national pour le peuple juif » constitue le fondement de la revendication de droit qui fonde la création, la reconnaissance et l'admission à l'ONU en qualité d'État Membre de l'État d'Israël en 1948. Bien que la Déclaration Balfour constitue un empiètement colonialiste sur le droit à l'autodétermination qui a été ultérieurement reconnu par le droit international, les passages de ce texte qui insistent sur la nécessité de respecter les droits réciproques des communautés non juives touchées, en particulier des Palestiniens, devraient continuer de guider, sur les plans tant politique que moral, la recherche d'une solution pacifique et juste du conflit.

⁶ Voir Bekkar, « The United Nations General Assembly Requests a World Court Advisory Opinion on Israel's Separation Barrier », Insights, décembre 2003.

⁷ En juin 2011, Israël a commencé à démanteler une partie du mur située à proximité du village de Bil'in en Cisjordanie, en application d'une décision rendue quatre ans auparavant par la Haute Cour de justice israélienne. Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires « Protection of Civilians, Weekly report, 8-21 June 2011 », 24 juin 2011. Consultable à l'adresse suivante : <http://unispal.un.org>.

III. Le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination

10. Comme cela a été souligné dans les rapports antérieurs, de tous les droits de l'homme compromis en raison de l'occupation prolongée du territoire palestinien par Israël, le plus fondamental est le droit à l'autodétermination. Il s'agit d'un droit inaliénable du peuple palestinien, comme de tout autre peuple dans le monde. Cependant, depuis 1967, Israël lui dénie la réalisation de ce droit dans le territoire palestinien occupé. En outre, divers événements survenus pendant l'occupation ont entraîné des atteintes qui diminuent la portée de l'autodétermination plus encore que ne l'avaient envisagé les Palestiniens lors de leur acceptation historique de la dimension territoriale d'un règlement du conflit fondé sur la coexistence de deux États, acceptation qui a pris la forme de la décision de 1988 du Conseil national palestinien, par laquelle celui-ci acceptait les paramètres des résolutions 267 (1969) et 338 (1973) du Conseil de sécurité. Il faut bien peser le fait que ce compromis territorial représentait une concession importante de la part de la direction palestinienne, car il réduisait à 22 % de la Palestine historique les quelque 45 % attribués aux Palestiniens par l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans sa résolution 181 (II), alors que cette formule de partition avait été rejetée en 1947 à la fois par les dirigeants de la population résidente palestinienne et par les gouvernements arabes voisins, qui la jugeaient injuste et inacceptable. Une grande partie de la communauté internationale continue de se représenter l'autodétermination palestinienne comme devant être fondée sur l'établissement d'un État viable et d'un seul tenant comprenant l'ensemble des territoires délimités par les frontières d'avant 1967, sous réserve d'ajustements mineurs et d'échanges de territoires équivalents mutuellement consentis. Cette position a été réaffirmée en mai 2011 par le Président des États-Unis d'Amérique, Barack Obama⁸. Les échecs successifs d'innombrables tentatives visant à transformer ce consensus en une solution, par voie de négociations directes entre les parties, ont alimenté chez les Palestiniens et leurs dirigeants une profonde déception. Il faut en outre faire observer que la lenteur mise à trouver une solution n'a cessé d'éroder, pour les Palestiniens, la perspective d'aboutir à un État viable, notamment en raison de l'expansion des colonies israéliennes et de la construction du mur ainsi que du réseau de routes réservées aux colons israéliens qui les accompagne.

11. C'est dans ce contexte qu'il faut apprécier plusieurs événements récents en rapport avec la recherche intergouvernementale d'une solution pacifique et négociée, car ils sont liés à la lutte pour la protection et la réalisation des droits des

⁸ Barack Obama, Président des États-Unis, « Remarks by the President on the Middle East and North Africa », conférence de presse tenue à la Maison-Blanche, Washington, 19 mai 2011. Consultable sur la page Web www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2011/05/19/remarks-president-middle-east-and-north-africa.

Palestiniens en application du droit international. La signature, à la fin du mois d'avril 2011, d'un accord de réconciliation ou d'union entre l'Autorité palestinienne et les autorités de facto de Gaza a entériné la création d'un gouvernement intérimaire chargé d'organiser des élections générales dans un avenir prochain sur tout le territoire palestinien. Cet accord entre Palestiniens a été critiqué par les Gouvernements d'Israël et des États-Unis comme compromettant les perspectives de négociations directes, en raison de leurs objections à inclure dans celles-ci des représentants appartenant à ce qu'ils désignent comme une « organisation terroriste ». Lors d'une réunion du Quatuor pour le Moyen-Orient qui s'est tenue à Washington le 11 juillet 2011, un appel général à la reprise de négociations directes entre Israël et les Palestiniens a été lancé, mais aucun accord sur les conditions préalables à ces négociations n'a pu être atteint⁹. Le Président Mahmoud Abbas a réitéré à plusieurs reprises sa position selon laquelle les négociations ne reprendraient pas sans un arrêt complet de l'expansion des colonies israéliennes, y compris à Jérusalem-Est. Il semble qu'il n'y ait aucune chance que le Gouvernement d'Israël satisfasse à cette condition. Au contraire, l'expansion accélérée des colonies de peuplement en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, a fait l'objet d'annonces régulières au cours des derniers mois¹⁰, et le Président Abbas a annoncé que l'Autorité palestinienne avait l'intention de s'adresser à l'Assemblée générale dans le but d'obtenir la reconnaissance de l'État palestinien sur la base des frontières d'avant 1967, et peut-être aussi de solliciter son adhésion à l'Organisation des Nations Unies par l'intermédiaire du Conseil de sécurité. Ce projet d'initiative diplomatique est présenté comme une solution de rechange à des négociations directes, et pour cette raison, entre autres, est condamné comme une démarche « unilatérale » par les Gouvernements d'Israël et des États-Unis, qui s'y opposent vigoureusement.

IV. Protection de la population civile vivant sous occupation

12. Il est malheureusement nécessaire de rappeler les obligations fondamentales d'Israël en vertu du droit international humanitaire en tant que Puissance occupante de la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et de la bande de Gaza. La plupart de ces obligations figurent dans la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève), à laquelle Israël est partie, et en particulier dans sa section III (art. 47 à 78), qui aborde les questions relatives aux territoires occupés. Un document plus détaillé et plus récent est le Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux (Protocole I), entré en vigueur en 1978, et en particulier son titre IV, qui établit la législation applicable à la population civile. Cent soixante et onze États sont parties au Protocole I. Israël n'en fait pas partie, mais il est lié par ses dispositions, car elles sont désormais ancrées dans le droit international coutumier, qui n'a pas besoin, pour être contraignant, du consentement explicite des États. D'autres instruments juridiques internationaux particulièrement pertinents relativement à la situation dans le territoire palestinien occupé sont la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant, à laquelle sont parties 193 États (y compris Israël), et la Convention internationale sur l'élimination et la répression du crime d'apartheid, à laquelle sont parties 107 États. Il n'est pas possible d'examiner en détail l'applicabilité de ces différents instruments juridiques, et n'en seront décrits ici que quelques traits saillants.

⁹ Voir Bureau du Représentant du Quatuor, « Quartet principals meet with Tony Blair in Washington, D.C., to promote direct negotiations », 11 juillet 2011. Consultable sur la page Web : www.tonyblairoffice.org/quartet/news-entry/quartet-meet-in-washington-dc-to-promote-direct-negotiations.

¹⁰ Voir A/66/364.

13. L'un des objectifs essentiels du droit international humanitaire, qu'il procède de traités ou de la coutume, est de garantir que la population civile n'ait pas à souffrir inutilement d'une occupation de guerre – une situation présumée temporaire –, et que la Puissance occupante ne profite pas de la situation d'occupation pour en tirer des avantages pour son gouvernement et sa société. La législation concernée a été négociée par les États, notamment des diplomates expérimentés et des conseillers militaires, et tient la balance égale entre les considérations de sécurité et ces objectifs humanitaires. Ayant ces considérations à l'esprit, on peut observer que les violences systématiques à l'encontre des civils, en tant qu'individus ou dans leur identité communautaire, constituent des atteintes particulièrement graves contre le régime juridique international de l'occupation, ce qui fait du projet de colonisation israélienne en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, un sujet de préoccupation constant, d'autant plus qu'il va de pair avec des tentatives incessantes, de la part d'Israël et des États-Unis, de modifier les frontières d'avant 1967 pour incorporer à Israël des blocs de colonies, en dépit de la reconnaissance presque universelle de leur illégalité.

14. De nombreux autres sujets de préoccupation illustrent la violation de la législation par la politique d'occupation israélienne. On mentionnera par exemple l'annexion – et ce que même des sources israéliennes appellent la « judaïsation » – de Jérusalem-Est¹¹; la prétendue expansion géographique des limites de la ville de Jérusalem¹²; l'incapacité de plus de 10 000 enfants palestiniens à se faire enregistrer légalement à Jérusalem-Est, ce qui oblige des familles palestiniennes à choisir entre rester ensemble, au risque de perdre leur permis de résidence à Jérusalem, ou accepter une séparation forcée de leurs membres¹³; l'appropriation des ressources en eau de plus en plus rares des aquifères de Gaza pour les utiliser en Israël ou au bénéfice des colons israéliens; l'imposition et l'application d'un blocus pendant plus de quatre ans à l'ensemble de la population de Gaza, limitant dramatiquement les droits fondamentaux de celle-ci à l'éducation, au logement et à la santé; la perpétuation, en Cisjordanie, d'un double système juridique et administratif privilégiant les colons israéliens et défavorisant ouvertement les Palestiniens; et les mauvais traitements systématiques à l'encontre des Palestiniens – y compris de jeunes enfants – arrêtés et détenus par les forces de sécurité israéliennes¹⁴.

¹¹ Voir, par exemple, Nir Hasson, « The Orthodox Jews Fighting the Judaization of East Jerusalem », Haaretz (Tel-Aviv), 24 juin 2010. Consultable à l'adresse : www.haaretz.com/weekend/magazine/the-orthodox-jews-fighting-the-judaization-of-east-jerusalem-1.298113.

¹² Voir les résolutions 252 (1968), 446 (1979) et 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité.

¹³ Cette information a été fournie au cours de la mission par l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient et le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires. Voir aussi Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, Special Focus: East Jerusalem: Key Humanitarian Concerns, mars 2011.

¹⁴ Voir, par exemple, Défense des enfants International – Section de Palestine, « In their own words: a report on the situation facing palestinian children detained in the Israeli military court system », février 2011. Consultable à l'adresse : http://www.dci-pal.org/English/Doc/Press/EastJerusalem_JANUARY2011.pdf.

15. Tout autant que les formes de violations du droit international humanitaire mises en évidence au paragraphe précédent, il est important, d'un point de vue moral, de prendre en compte les effets de la dimension temporelle sur les fondements mêmes de la santé psychologique et physique du peuple subissant l'occupation. Comme il a été indiqué, une occupation de guerre est censée être de courte durée et être menée de façon à n'avoir qu'un impact limité, suivant les modèles que constituent, à l'époque moderne, les occupations de l'Allemagne et du Japon après la Seconde Guerre mondiale, où les peuples occupés ont été restaurés dans leurs droits souverains le plus rapidement possible, et, surtout, où les civils ont été protégés avec diligence pendant toute la durée de l'occupation. Ici, sans s'engager dans une explication de la prolongation de l'occupation, qui a pris une dimension de plus en plus annexionniste, la durée de l'occupation, plus de 44 ans, est un motif urgent et indépendant de préoccupation et d'action. Cette préoccupation est aggravée par l'absence de toute perspective prévisible de fin de l'occupation à court terme.

16. Israël a prétendu que son « désengagement » de Gaza en 2005 avait mis fin à l'occupation de la bande de Gaza, et donc aux responsabilités israéliennes en tant que Puissance occupante. Cette affirmation est généralement rejetée dans les milieux du droit international, étant donné la poursuite du contrôle israélien sur les frontières, l'espace aérien et les eaux territoriales de Gaza, contrôle qui, de pair avec le blocus (qui limite gravement l'industrie de la pêche gazaouie), a provoqué une crise des droits de l'homme persistante. Même s'il n'y avait pas les menaces de violences transfrontalières israéliennes, le calvaire que représente de vivre, de nombreuses années durant, dans des conditions d'enfermement, de surpeuplement, d'appauvrissement et d'impuissance totale sur son propre destin serait incompatible avec l'objectif fondamental du droit international, qui est de protéger la dignité et le bien-être des populations civiles occupées. Vivre sous un régime d'état de siège a des effets délétères démontrés sur les enfants et les jeunes¹⁵. Entre autres privations, les étudiants sont empêchés d'exercer leur droit à l'éducation en dehors des limites de la bande de Gaza, où ne leur sont offertes que des possibilités restreintes. Comme cela a été souligné dans les rapports précédents, le droit international humanitaire doit être réexaminé de façon à prendre en compte la détresse particulière dans laquelle une occupation prolongée plonge la population civile, ce qui demande des dispositions spéciales afin de permettre aux civils une vie décente en termes d'éducation, de déplacements, d'emploi et de normalité sociale. Depuis trois générations, à des degrés divers, le peuple palestinien a été privé de ces éléments de la dignité humaine. Il est temps que l'Organisation des Nations Unies, le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge et les principaux États Membres relèvent ce défi.

V. Détention et emprisonnement

17. Une question lourde de conséquences du point de vue des droits de l'homme est le non-respect par Israël des droits fondamentaux – définis par le droit international – des personnes qu'il détient dans le territoire palestinien occupé, dont beaucoup sont ensuite emprisonnées en Israël. Selon des rapports datant de mars

¹⁵ Voir, par exemple, Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance, « UNICEF oPt monthly update », juillet-août 2011. Consultable à l'adresse : http://www.unicef.org/oPt/UNICEF_Monthly_Update_July_and_August2011.pdf.

2009, 8 171 Palestiniens se trouvaient en détention à cette date. Parmi eux, 1 052 étaient détenus à la base militaire d'Ofer, au sud de Ramallah, en Cisjordanie. Les 7 119 autres prisonniers et détenus palestiniens sont actuellement détenus sur le territoire israélien. Le nombre des prisonniers est variable, mais, bien que leur nombre total ait actuellement légèrement baissé, des milliers de Palestiniens sont encore détenus par Israël dans des conditions qui violent le droit international. Selon l'organisation non gouvernementale Addameer-Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, en juin 2011 Israël détenait 5 554 prisonniers politiques palestiniens, dont 229 étaient maintenus en détention administrative sans avoir été reconnus coupables d'aucun délit. Parmi ces prisonniers se trouvaient 211 enfants, dont 39 avaient moins de 16 ans.

18. La politique israélienne consistant à transférer des prisonniers palestiniens en territoire israélien viole les obligations d'Israël en tant que Puissance occupante. L'article 76 de la quatrième Convention de Genève est sans équivoque : « Les personnes protégées inculpées seront détenues dans le pays occupé et si elles sont condamnées, elles devront y purger leur peine ». Il ne s'agit pas seulement d'une disposition technique; elle procède aussi de la souffrance qu'endure une personne emprisonnée pendant une longue durée. Il est accordé très peu de droits de visite aux membres de leur famille, et la plupart de ceux qui sont officiellement accordés sont inutilisables en raison du système onéreux d'autorisations et de permis imposé par Israël. Les jeunes hommes palestiniens se voient presque toujours refuser l'entrée en Israël, et n'ont donc pratiquement jamais la possibilité de visiter leurs proches emprisonnés. En conséquence, les prisonniers palestiniens perdent souvent tout contact pendant des années avec les membres de leur famille¹⁶.

19. L'article 74 du Protocole I, qui est consacré à la situation particulière des « familles dispersées », impose à Israël l'obligation de « faciliter dans toute la mesure du possible le regroupement des familles dispersées en raison de conflits armés », et demande instamment de coopérer avec les organisations humanitaires qui tentent de favoriser les relations familiales dans les conditions difficiles de l'occupation. Israël continue de violer cette obligation.

20. La question importante de savoir si les Palestiniens qui sont membres d'organisations de résistance armée devraient avoir droit au statut de prisonnier de guerre demeure inexplorée. La Convention de Genève relative au traitement des prisonniers de guerre ne semble applicable que si le territoire palestinien occupé peut être considéré comme un État, ce qui pourrait être une des conséquences de l'octroi, par l'Assemblée générale, du statut d'État à la Palestine, même si, en raison de la large reconnaissance diplomatique dont bénéficie l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine, il est possible de soutenir que la Palestine jouit déjà du statut d'État¹⁷.

¹⁶ Pour un exposé utile des profondes souffrances que provoque la séparation des prisonniers d'avec leur famille pendant de longues périodes, voir l'article de l'avocat israélien Michael Sfar, « Devil's Island: the transfert of Palestinian detainees into prisons within Israel », in Abeer Barker et Anat Matar, éd., Threat: Palestinian Political Prisoners in Israel (Londres, Pluto Press, 2011). Ce livre, qui contient un précieux aperçu de ces problèmes, présente les résultats d'une conférence qui s'est tenue en Israël, un hommage aux libertés démocratiques qu'Israël réserve à ses propres citoyens.

¹⁷ Voir John Quigley, The Statehood of Palestine: International Law in the Middle East Conflict (Cambridge University Press, 2010).

21. De plus, il a été soutenu que, en vertu du Protocole I, les membres de groupes de la résistance armée palestinienne pourraient, en principe, avoir droit au statut de prisonnier de guerre sans avoir à prouver qu'ils appartiennent à un État, dans la mesure où il s'agit d'un combat mené par un groupe organisé luttant contre une occupation étrangère dans l'exercice de son droit à l'autodétermination¹⁸. S'il fallait accorder le statut de prisonnier de guerre aux personnes détenues pour des raisons de sécurité qui se trouveraient appartenir à des milices de résistance armée, les Palestiniens engagés dans la résistance depuis le début de l'occupation israélienne devraient bénéficier de toute une série de protections qu'Israël leur a jusqu'ici refusées.

VI. Colonies de peuplement israéliennes

22. Même si cela a été écrit à de nombreuses reprises dans des rapports précédents, il ne faut pas oublier que toutes les activités israéliennes d'implantation sont illégales. Cette affirmation se fonde sur l'interprétation acceptée du sixième alinéa de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui stipule que : « [l]a Puissance occupante ne pourra procéder à la déportation ou au transfert d'une partie de sa population civile dans le territoire occupé par elle ». Cette obligation s'applique indépendamment du fait que la Palestine bénéficie ou non du statut d'État. Le texte est rédigé d'une manière qui est loin d'être parfaite et permet à Israël de prétendre qu'il ne procède ni à la déportation ni au transfert d'Israéliens vers les colonies de peuplement mais qu'il se contente tout au plus d'aider à la concrétisation de décisions volontaires fondées sur des motifs religieux et économiques divers. Mais les subventions que le Gouvernement israélien accorde depuis de nombreuses années (pour les constructions, l'eau, l'électricité, les écoles et autres) et qui encouragent les colons et les implantations de colonies montrent bien l'implication de l'État. Israël maintient que la Cisjordanie est un territoire « contesté » plutôt qu'un territoire « occupé » et donc que le droit international humanitaire ne s'applique pas de jure, alors qu'Israël a ouvertement annexé Jérusalem-Est en 1967 et refuse depuis lors de qualifier cette partie de la ville d'« occupée ». Le Gouvernement israélien a récemment cherché à obtenir de la part du Président américain Barack Obama la confirmation d'une lettre d'avril 2004 adressée par son prédécesseur, George W. Bush, au Premier Ministre d'alors, Ariel Sharon, dans laquelle il indiquait que le Gouvernement américain espérait que les blocs de peuplement israéliens (« les grands centres de population israélienne » à l'est des frontières d'avant 1967) seraient considérés comme faisant partie intégrante d'Israël dans tout accord de règlement du conflit qui pourrait être négocié dans l'avenir¹⁹. Nous n'examinerons pas ces questions dans le détail, mais il existe un fort consensus international, renforcé par d'innombrables résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale ainsi que par un avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice de 2004 concernant l'édification du mur, qui estime que la ¹⁸ Les aspects juridiques sont utilement explorés par Smadar Ben-Natan, « Are there prisoners in this war? », in Barker et Matar, op. cit.

¹⁹ Lettre du Président George W. Bush au Premier Ministre Ariel Sharon datée du 14 avril 2001, consultable à l'adresse suivante : <http://georgewbush-whitehouse.archives.gov/news/releases/2004/04/20040414-3.html>. Voir aussi Ethan Bronner, « Netanyahu responds icily to Obama remarks », New York Times, 19 mai 2011, consultable à l'adresse : www.nytimes.com/2011/05/20/world/middleeast/20mideast.html?_r=1.

Cisjordanie et Jérusalem-Est sont « occupés » et que le droit international humanitaire s'applique. En outre, il semble évident que la lettre du Président George W. Bush sur les colonies peut avoir un certain poids politique mais, du point de vue des droits des Palestiniens découlant du droit international, cette lettre n'a aucune valeur. Elle enfreint également les principes fondamentaux d'équité du droit international coutumier, qui ne permet pas que des tiers réduisent la portée juridique des demandes des parties sans leur participation et leur consentement²⁰.

23. Dans le contexte des objectifs globaux du droit international humanitaire visant la protection des droits d'une population occupée, il est évident que l'implantation de plus de 100 colonies de peuplement israéliennes et plus de 500 000 colons s'appropriant certains des meilleurs terrains et des meilleures ressources en eau, qui plus est à l'emplacement de la capitale qu'ils revendiquent, est une violation manifeste des droits des Palestiniens et a des incidences négatives sur les aspirations de ceux-ci à un État souverain viable. Un certain nombre de responsables politiques européens et américains considèrent que l'expansion des colonies par Israël fait reculer la perspective de parvenir à un règlement pacifique du conflit. Le 5 avril 2001, William Hague, Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, a publié un communiqué de presse pour répondre à l'annonce faite par Israël de son intention de poursuivre le développement d'une grande colonie de peuplement à Jérusalem-Est, dans lequel il déclarait : « Je condamne la décision prise par Israël d'approuver la construction de plus de 900 logements à Gilo (banlieue de Jérusalem-Est) et l'accord rétroactif qui a été donné à la construction de cinq colonies en Cisjordanie. »²¹ Les dirigeants de l'Autorité palestinienne ne cessent de répéter que sans un gel complet des implantations, ils ne reprendront pas les négociations directes, et ont expressément lié leur décision de demander la reconnaissance de l'État palestinien à l'ONU à la politique de colonisation d'Israël.

24. Il faut également souligner que les manifestations vigoureuses de la société civile israélienne contre l'envolée des prix de l'immobilier en Israël ont accentué la pression sur le Gouvernement israélien pour qu'il propose plus de logements abordables. Or, une des manières pour y parvenir, comme l'ont largement suggéré les médias israéliens, consiste à développer les colonies²². Rien ne permet de dire avec certitude que c'est la voie que choisira Israël mais tout laisse à penser que l'opinion publique israélienne et certains responsables considèrent les colonies de peuplement comme une soupape de sécurité essentielle face à la situation sociale et politique explosive qui grandit en Israël.

²⁰ Il est noté que même les traités, qui sont une forme plus contraignante d'accord que cet échange de lettres entre les dirigeants israélien et américain, ne peuvent affecter les droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit international. Ce principe est clairement exposé dans l'article 34 de la Convention de Vienne sur le droit des traités, selon lequel : « Un traité ne crée ni obligations ni droits pour un État sans son consentement. » Même si la Palestine ne devenait pas un État, elle n'en est pas moins une partie et elle a été considérée comme telle par tous les gouvernements concernés.

²¹ Déclaration consultable en ligne à l'adresse suivante : www.fco.gov.uk/en/news/lastest-news/?view=News&id=579904682.

²² Voir, par exemple, Martin Sherman, « Into the fray: come to the carnival, comrade! », Jerusalem Post, 8 mai 2011. Consultable à l'adresse suivante : www.jpost.com/Opinion/Columnists/Article.aspx?id=232543.

25. L'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) a souligné que les restrictions de zonage en vigueur à Jérusalem-Est entravent sérieusement le développement de la Palestine. Les autorités israéliennes ont autorisé l'implantation de colonies de peuplement juives sur 35 % de la partie arabe occupée de la ville, alors que les constructions palestiniennes sont autorisées sur seulement 13 % de la zone arabe²³.

26. Il est largement admis que l'on ne peut espérer la fin de l'occupation de la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, tant que le développement des colonies d'occupation israéliennes se poursuivra. Plus cette dynamique persistera et plus les chances de voir la solution à deux États se concrétiser s'amenuiseront.

A. Violence des colons

27. En 2011, on a observé une forte hausse du nombre d'actes de violence commis par les colons. Le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires signale une augmentation de près de 50 % des incidents visant des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie, avec des blessures documentées sur 178 Palestiniens pendant le premier semestre de 2011 contre 176 pour l'ensemble de l'année 2010²⁴. Selon l'UNRWA, 12 enfants ont été blessés lors d'affrontements avec les colons pendant le seul premier trimestre de 2011, victimes de jets de pierres, d'attaques et de tirs de la part de colons israéliens. Toutefois, ces incidents ne sont qu'une partie des problèmes. Presque chaque jour sont rapportés des actes de vandalisme commis par les colons contre des terres agricoles et des villages appartenant aux Palestiniens, et certains incidents ont été filmés par des personnes travaillant avec B'Tselem, la très réputée organisation israélienne de défense des droits de l'homme²⁵. De nombreuses terres agricoles et oliveraies ont été incendiées, notamment dans les villages autour de Naplouse²⁶. Parmi les derniers faits inquiétants, les forces de sécurité et la police des frontières israéliennes semblent soutenir passivement les activités des colons, notamment en procédant à des tirs de gaz lacrymogène et de grenades étourdissantes en direction des Palestiniens tout en n'intervenant pas pour stopper les actes de violence et de vandalisme commis par les colons. Ces faits ont également été filmés par B'Tselem²⁷. Les actes de violence prennent aussi souvent la forme d'actes de harcèlement commis contre des enfants palestiniens sur le chemin de l'école, contre lesquels les forces israéliennes ne font rien. De nombreux enfants ont ainsi renoncé à aller à l'école ou leur famille ont décidé de ne plus les y envoyer, ce qui constitue une forme de violation de leur droit à l'éducation. Dans certaines zones, le plus souvent à Hébron, où les violences commises par les colons sont fréquentes et graves, des organisations internationales de la société civile telles que Christian ²³ Information fournie par l'UNRWA et le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires pendant la mission. Voir également la publication Special focus: East Jerusalem du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires.

²⁴ Information fournie par le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires pendant la mission.

²⁵ Les vidéos sont disponibles à l'adresse suivante : www.btselem.org/video/search/22. Voir également Mundi Nadder, éd., An Unjust Settlement: A Tale of Illegal Settlements in the West Bank (Geneva, Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel, 2010).

²⁶ Information fournie par l'UNRWA et le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires pendant la mission.

²⁷ Voir, par exemple, www.btselem.org/video-channel/east-jerusalem-six-voices.

Peacemaker Teams et Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israël ont tenté d'intervenir, protégeant directement les jeunes écoliers quand les forces israéliennes faillent à empêcher les violences²⁸. Globalement, le fait qu'Israël manque à empêcher et à punir les actes de violence commis par les colons demeure une violation grave et permanente de son obligation la plus fondamentale en vertu du droit international humanitaire de protéger une population civile vivant sous occupation et d'accorder une protection spéciale aux enfants, comme il est prévu à l'article 77 du Protocole I.

B. L'avenir des colonies de peuplement israéliennes

28. Plusieurs explications ont été données à cette intensification des actes de violence et de harcèlement commis à l'égard de civils palestiniens. Elle pourrait être une réaction à un incident sanglant s'étant produit dans la colonie d'Itamar, au cours duquel cinq colons israéliens, dont trois enfants, ont été tués pendant leur sommeil²⁹; une tentative de la part de colons ayant des motivations religieuses d'inciter le Gouvernement israélien à appuyer une politique de nettoyage ethnique, notamment à Jérusalem-Est, et la revendication de droits bibliques imprescriptibles sur l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie³⁰; un signal à l'intention du Gouvernement qu'à l'avenir, toute mesure hostile aux colons prise par Tel-Aviv, comme la fermeture des avant-postes de colonies implantés sans autorisation officielle, serait suivie par des représailles, que les colons nomment eux-mêmes le « prix à payer », contre les Palestiniens et leurs biens³¹. Maher Ghoneim, le Ministre de l'Autorité palestinienne chargé du suivi des activités d'implantation de colonies, a déclaré : « Il s'agit d'un gouvernement de colons et son programme est un programme de colonisation, ce qui incite naturellement cette arrogance et ces attaques. »³². Les responsables politiques israéliens désignent la Cisjordanie sous le nom de « Judée-Samarie », ce qui encourage indirectement les colons religieux à persister dans l'idée que ce territoire devrait être incorporé à Israël dans sa totalité ou annexé par Israël, et que ce sont les Palestiniens les usurpateurs des droits historiques et religieux des colons juifs.

29. Il se peut que la violence accrue des colons israéliens soit la conséquence des divergences entre la vision des colons et celle des Palestiniens quant à l'avenir, qui ont atteint leur paroxysme. Nabil Abu Rudaineh, porte-parole de l'Autorité palestinienne, a déclaré le 8 juillet 2011 que « toutes les colonies de peuplement ²⁸ Voir Mundi Nadder, ed., An Unjust Settlement: A Tale of Illegal Settlements in the West Bank (Geneva, Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel, 2010).

²⁹ Voir « Terror attack in Itamar: 5 family members murdered », Jerusalem Post, 12 mars 2011. Consultable à l'adresse : www.jpost.com/NationalNews/Articles.aspx?id=211780.

³⁰ Voir, de manière générale, B'Tselem, « By book and by crook: Israeli settlement policy in the West Bank », juillet 2010; et B'Tselem, « Dispossession and exploitation: Israel's policy in the Jordan Valley and northern Dead Sea », mai 2011. Consultables à l'adresse suivante : www.btselem.org/publications.

³¹ Voir, par exemple, YNet, « Settlers: We're launching "price tag" policy across the West Bank », 4 décembre 2008. Consultable à l'adresse suivante : www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-3633599,00.html.

³² Tom Perry, « In West Bank, settler violence seen on the rise », Reuters, 14 juillet 2011. Consultable à l'adresse suivante : <http://uk.mobile.reuters.com/article/worldNews/idUKTRE76D30220110714>.

sont illégales et doivent être détruites.»³³. Pendant la même période, des responsables des colons ont répété qu'aucun colon ne quitterait la Cisjordanie, peu importe les accords que le Gouvernement israélien passerait.

30. Au cours des derniers mois, des visions très polarisées des relations futures ont ainsi été exprimées, allant de la destruction inconditionnelle des colonies comme élément du retrait israélien et de la fin de l'occupation à l'intégration complète de la Cisjordanie dans Israël pour former un « grand Israël » d'un seul État comme alternative à la proposition de deux États. Bien entendu, les résultats d'un tel débat ont une incidence directe sur la question de savoir si le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination sera reconnu comme faisant partie intégrante du processus de résolution du conflit.

VII. Enfants palestiniens, droits de l'homme et droit international humanitaire

31. Au cours d'une série de réunions avec des représentants de l'Autorité palestinienne, des institutions des Nations Unies s'occupant du territoire palestinien occupé et d'un certain nombre d'organisations non gouvernementales de défense des droits de l'homme tenues pendant la mission du Rapporteur spécial prévue à Gaza, puis redirigée vers Le Caire et Amman, une attention toute particulière a été accordée aux incidences de l'occupation prolongée sur les droits et le bien-être des enfants palestiniens. Les résultats de ces consultations, renforcés par des informations obtenues auprès de diverses sources secondaires, étaient préoccupants pour trois raisons principales :

a) L'occupation prolongée exerce une contrainte pesante sur les civils, et celle-ci est encore plus marquée pour les enfants, dont le développement est perturbé par des privations ayant des conséquences sur la santé, l'éducation et la sécurité de manière générale. L'insécurité des enfants palestiniens est aggravée en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, par les actes de violence commis par les colons et les raids nocturnes des forces d'occupation israéliennes, les destructions de maisons, les menaces d'expulsion, et de nombreuses autres pratiques. Par ailleurs à Gaza, les civils subissent un blocus, des incursions périodiques violentes et traumatisantes et des bangs soniques résultant du survol par des avions de chasse, et les camps de réfugiés, les quartiers résidentiels et les bâtiments publics détruits par les forces israéliennes pendant l'opération Plomb durci n'ont pas encore été remis en état;

b) Les renseignements disponibles montrent une augmentation de la violence, non seulement à cause des conditions difficiles sous occupation, mais aussi à cause de politiques qui entraînent des violations plus graves et systématiques des droits des enfants, pourtant garantis par les normes du droit international humanitaire;

c) Les spécialistes du développement de l'enfant s'accordent pour dire que les enfants souffrent plus des violations de leurs droits que les adultes, et que la communauté internationale devrait se préoccuper tout particulièrement de leur protection. Dans un rapport de l'UNRWA sur les conséquences des destructions de maisons en date du 12 juin 2011, il est écrit que « Les destructions des maisons peuvent avoir sur les enfants un impact particulièrement dévastateur. De nombreux enfants concernés par des destructions montrent des signes de troubles post-traumatiques, de dépression et d'anxiété. »³⁴.

³³ « EU: New settlement building units are obstacle to peace », Jerusalem Post, 9 juillet 2011. Consultable à l'adresse suivante : www.jpost.com/DiplomacyAndPolitics/Article.aspx?id=230096.

32. Le sort des enfants palestiniens est en fin de compte lié à la recherche d'une solution au conflit qui apporterait la paix aux deux peuples et reconnaîtrait leurs droits fondamentaux. Comme le disait Gandhi : « Si nous voulons instaurer la paix véritable dans le monde, c'est par les enfants qu'il faut commencer ». Selon les renseignements qui sont disponibles et ce que nous avons appris pendant la mission, toute tentative de parvenir à une paix durable dans ce conflit devrait accorder la priorité au respect des droits des enfants palestiniens, notamment en leur permettant de se développer normalement et de progresser malgré les contraintes imposées par l'occupation.

33. Pour illustrer les négations des droits des enfants, le présent rapport évoque les procédures d'arrestation et de détention appliquées aux enfants en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est et les conséquences néfastes de l'insalubrité de l'eau à Gaza sur la santé des enfants.

A. Arrestation et détention d'enfants palestiniens

34. La Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant, qui de tous les instruments de droit international est le plus largement ratifié, constitue un cadre détaillé pour la protection particulière que les parties sont tenues en droit d'accorder aux enfants, et notamment aux enfants vivant sous occupation militaire. Au paragraphe 1 de l'article 3, la Convention exprime l'approche générale adoptée dans cet instrument, et qui est à présent inscrite dans le droit international des droits de l'homme : « [d]ans toutes les décisions qui concernent les enfants, qu'elles soient le fait des institutions publiques ou privées de protection sociale, des tribunaux, des autorités administratives ou des organes législatifs, l'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant doit être une considération primordiale ». En son article 38, la Convention stipule, au paragraphe 1, que « [l]es États parties s'engagent à respecter et à faire respecter les règles du droit humanitaire international qui leur sont applicables en cas de conflit armé et dont la protection s'étend aux enfants ». En son article 40, elle énonce, au paragraphe 1, l'obligation, en cas de poursuites pénales engagées contre un enfant, de reconnaître que celui-ci a « droit à un traitement qui soit de nature à favoriser son sens de la dignité et de la valeur personnelle, qui renforce son respect pour les droits de l'homme et les libertés fondamentales [...] et qui tienne compte de son âge ainsi que de la nécessité de faciliter sa réintégration dans la société et de lui faire assumer un rôle constructif au sein de celle-ci ». Cette approche s'inspire du principe général retenu à l'article 77 du Protocole I aux Conventions de Genève, qui stipule, au paragraphe 1, que « [l]es enfants doivent faire l'objet d'un respect particulier ». Dans ce contexte, l'on peut affirmer que le type de traitement néfaste qui est réservé aux enfants palestiniens vivant sous occupation – que confirment de nombreux témoignages entendus à l'occasion de la mission du Rapporteur spécial ainsi que les rapports publiés par des organisations non gouvernementales respectées – constitue une violation persistante par Israël du droit international en général, et du droit international humanitaire en particulier.

³⁴ UNRWA, « Demolition watch », 12 juin 2011. Consultable en ligne à l'adresse suivante : http://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Full_Report_1154.pdf.

35. Les arrestations d'enfants palestiniens font très souvent suite à des allégations les accusant d'avoir jeté des pierres aux forces de sécurité ou aux colons israéliens en Cisjordanie³⁵. Contrairement aux enfants israéliens vivant en Cisjordanie, les accusés tombent sous le coup du droit militaire israélien, qui offre aux mineurs une protection bien moindre que celle que leur accorde le droit pénal israélien. En particulier, le droit militaire ne permet pas la présence d'un parent aux séances d'interrogatoire, ne régleme pas les horaires des interrogatoires et ne garantit pas non plus le respect de la dignité de l'enfant lors de son arrestation. Des organismes des Nations Unies et des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme dignes de foi rapportent, documents à l'appui, que des enfants sont arrêtés en pleine nuit sans préavis, enlevés à leurs parents à des fins d'interrogatoire et victimes de mauvais traitements en détention et d'inculpations entachées d'un parti pris de culpabilité. Au cours de notre mission, on nous a souvent dit que ces procédés semblaient systématiquement conçus pour effrayer et humilier les personnes arrêtées et pour les inciter à collaborer avec l'occupant en dénonçant les dirigeants des manifestations et à s'abstenir, à l'avenir, de se livrer à des actes de contestation.

36. Entre 2005 et 2010, 835 enfants – 34 âgés de 12 ou 13 ans, 255 âgés de 14 ou 15 ans et 546 âgés de 16 ou 17 ans – ont été poursuivis pour jets de pierres³⁶. Depuis 2007, le nombre de poursuites n'a cessé d'augmenter chaque année. La longueur des peines tenait compte de l'âge de l'accusé : de quelques semaines pour les plus jeunes à plus d'une année pour les plus âgés. Israël a instauré en 2010 un tribunal militaire pour mineurs qui a toujours prononcé, jusqu'ici, des peines plus légères pour les enfants âgés de 12 ou 13 ans – la sanction la plus longue qui ait été infligée étant une peine de neuf jours, ce qui est bien inférieur à celles qui étaient prononcées avant cette date. Cela dit, l'existence même d'un tribunal militaire pour mineurs est incompatible avec l'obligation fondamentale, énoncée en droit international humanitaire, de favoriser le « sens de la dignité et de la valeur personnelle » de l'enfant, comme le prescrit, au paragraphe 1 de son article 40, la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant. L'organisation B'Tselem conclut dans son rapport sur la question, en particulier, que « [...] les droits des mineurs sont gravement violés, que le droit militaire n'assure pratiquement pas la protection de leurs droits, et que les rares droits qui leur sont reconnus en droit ne sont pas respectés »³⁶. Ce traitement réservé aux jeunes Palestiniens accusés d'infractions se traduit, notamment, par un déni de leur droit à l'éducation lorsqu'ils sont en garde à vue ou en prison, et par la distension du lien familial, et ce en violation des règles du droit international. Ce traitement abusif est également source d'inquiétude et de souffrances pour les parents et autres proches qui assistent à ces arrestations et qui ne sont pas même informés du lieu de détention de l'enfant.

37. Les récits faisant état de maltraitements lors d'interrogatoires et d'arrestations d'enfants ne manquent pas³⁷. Le Programme de protection de l'enfance dans les territoires palestiniens occupés, du Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance (UNICEF), recoupe et confirme, dans son résumé, de nombreux autres récits dignes de foi, dénonçant des séances d'interrogatoire qui donneraient lieu à des pratiques telles que la prise d'empreintes digitales, des examens hématologiques, des actes d'humiliation ou l'utilisation de chiens pour effrayer les enfants; de même, les parents seraient contraints de s'agenouiller dans la rue, des garçons et des filles seraient arrêtés, et des femmes âgées et des personnes handicapées seraient soumises à des interrogatoires. La même source rapporte des cas extrêmes qui seraient survenus dans le village d'Awarta. Ainsi, une fillette de 3 ans aurait été emmenée hors de chez elle, sous la menace d'une arme à feu, à 3 heures du matin. On lui aurait dit qu'elle serait tuée et son foyer familial détruit si elle n'indiquait pas où se trouvait son frère. Depuis, comme l'a expliqué sa mère, elle souffre d'insomnies et d'énurésie. Une autre fillette, âgée de 9 ans, aurait tenté de suivre son père lorsqu'il avait été arrêté; saisie par le cou, elle en souffrait encore et craignait de sortir dans la rue³⁸.

³⁵ Voir, en général, B'Tselem, « No minor matter: violation of the rights of Palestinian minors arrested by Israel on suspicion of stone-throwing », juillet 2011, et B'Tselem, « Caution: children ahead: the illegal behavior of the police towards minors in Silwan suspected of stone-throwing », décembre 2010. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : www.btselem.org/publications.

³⁶ B'Tselem, « No minor matter: violation of the rights of Palestinian minors arrested by Israel on suspicion of stone-throwing », juillet 2011.

³⁷ Voir, par exemple, Défense des enfants International – Section Palestine, « In their own words ».

38. L'Association for Civil Rights in Israel explique, dans un rapport, que la loi israélienne sur la protection des mineurs est souvent violée lorsque des enfants palestiniens sont arrêtés à Jérusalem-Est et interrogés. L'Association est très précise dans ses propos. Selon elle, des enfants ont été détenus pendant de longues heures, menottes aux poings; ils ont subi, pendant leur interrogatoire, des menaces, des cris et des actes de coercition destinés à leur faire révéler des informations sur des faits survenus dans leur quartier. À ce propos, il importe de préciser que l'enfant qui subit de tels traitements est d'autant plus susceptible aux traumatismes et aux troubles psychiques qu'il est jeune³⁹. L'expansion des colonies israéliennes à Jérusalem-Est bénéficie de l'encadrement d'agents de sécurité privés, qui s'octroient, à l'égard des enfants palestiniens, encore plus de libertés que ne le fait la police israélienne. Cet encadrement est particulièrement présent dans le quartier de Silwan, où les ambitions des colons ont violemment mis à mal la sécurité des Palestiniens qui y habitaient depuis longtemps. Selon Sahar Francis, Directrice générale de l'association de soutien aux prisonniers et de protection des droits de l'homme Addameer, les arrestations d'enfants sont censées intimider et effrayer les jeunes afin de décourager le « militantisme politique en général »⁴⁰ – ce qui constitue un déni par Israël du droit, reconnu par l'Assemblée générale, de résister face aux politiques d'occupation illégale, qui ne peut que susciter la perplexité.

39. L'on ne s'étonnera donc guère, face à cette situation, que l'organisation Médecins sans frontières et l'UNICEF aient récemment signalé une augmentation considérable du nombre d'enfants souffrant de troubles post-traumatiques⁴¹. Le colonel Desmond Travers, membre de la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, qui est à l'origine du fameux « rapport Goldstone », a déclaré dans une interview récente que « si les Anglais [dans l'Ulster] avaient traité les enfants qui leur lançaient des pierres de la ³⁸ Ibid., « Awarta Update », 18 avril 2011.

³⁹ Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « Violations of the "Youth Law (Adjudication, Punishment Methods of Treatment)" – 1971 by the Israeli Police in East Jerusalem », mars 2011. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : www.acri.org.il/en/?p=2428.

⁴⁰ J. Kestler-D'Amours, « The tactic of arresting Palestinian children »; Al Jazeera, 8 juillet 2011.

⁴¹ Voir « Trauma of Palestinian children increasing, say health groups »; The Electronic Intifada, 27 juillet 2011. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : <http://electronicintifada.net/content/trauma-palestinian-children-increasing-say-health-groups/10212>.

manière dont les enfants de Cisjordanie sont généralement traités par les forces de sécurité israéliennes – c'est-à-dire subissant des rafles en pleine nuit, emmenés dans des lieux de détention, encagoulés, battus et parfois torturés – le conflit en Irlande du Nord ne serait toujours pas réglé à ce jour, et la région serait encore le théâtre d'affrontements »⁴².

40. Pour lutter contre ces formes de violations, l'organisation B'Tselem recommande, dans son rapport susmentionné, les mesures suivantes :

1. Aligner sans tarder l'âge de la minorité en droit militaire sur l'âge de la minorité fixé en Israël et dans le reste du monde;
2. Interdire les arrestations nocturnes de mineurs;
3. Réserver les séances d'interrogatoire aux heures de la journée, y autoriser la présence des parents et permettre aux mineurs de s'entretenir avec un avocat, en bonne et due forme, dans le respect des droits de l'enfant;
4. Interdire l'emprisonnement des enfants de moins de 14 ans;
5. Promouvoir des solutions autres que la détention et l'emprisonnement;
6. Mettre en place des programmes d'éducation dans toutes les prisons et offrir des possibilités d'étudier toutes les matières pour réduire au minimum le préjudice subi dans leur formation par les mineurs détenus et emprisonnés;
7. Faciliter l'octroi d'autorisations de visite des mineurs détenus et emprisonnés³⁶.

B. Blocus de Gaza, punition collective et enfants palestiniens

41. Comme il est souligné d'un bout à l'autre du rapport, les enfants sont les victimes les plus vulnérables et les plus cruellement touchées par les violations par Israël des dispositions du droit international humanitaire conçues pour protéger les populations civiles sous occupation. Le blocus de Gaza durant depuis plus de quatre ans et l'occupation dans son ensemble depuis plus de 44 ans, les effets de ces violations s'accroissent considérablement. L'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA), qui d'ordinaire s'interdit de commenter la nature de l'occupation, a publié le 14 juillet 2011 un communiqué de presse dans lequel il exprime une inquiétude accrue et appelle l'attention sur la situation critique des enfants de Gaza en ces termes : « Aujourd'hui, la vie à Gaza est difficile dans tous ses aspects. En matière d'éducation, il est nécessaire de construire 100 nouvelles écoles en trois ans pour ces enfants. »⁴³ Le porte-parole de l'Office, Chris Gunness, a noté que « depuis que le blocus a été imposé, le nombre de personnes vivant dans une misère noire, avec à peine plus d'un dollar par jour, a triplé pour atteindre 300 000 et, compte tenu des ⁴² Philip Weiss, « Col. Travers: Israel's treatment of Palestinian children shows that it does not seek peace », 11 juillet 2011. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : <http://mondoweiss.net/2011/07/col-travers-israels-treatment-of-palestinian-children-shows-that-it-does-not-seek-peace.html>.

⁴³ UNRWA, « A goal for Gaza: at 2011 Summer Games, 2,011 children set football world record », 14 juillet 2011. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : <http://unispal.un.org/UNISPAL.NSF/0/E014A7DE55B9E6B0852578CD0065C530>.

nombreux projets de reconstruction en attente d'approbation, l'avenir reste sombre »⁴⁴. Plus de la moitié des habitants de Gaza étant âgés de moins de 18 ans, ceux qui sont confrontés à cet avenir sombre sont dans leur immense majorité des enfants. L'Office rappelle la condamnation du blocus par le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, qui le qualifie de « sanction collective en violation flagrante [...] du droit international humanitaire » et exhorte la communauté internationale à « faire en sorte que les appels répétés des États et des organisations internationales visant à lever le blocus soient enfin entendus ». Le communiqué de presse de l'Office se concluait par l'appel suivant : « Nous approuvons ces appels à la responsabilité car il est nécessaire de lever le blocus pour donner aux enfants de Gaza une chance de réaliser leur véritable potentiel. »⁴⁵ Illustrant l'aspect multidimensionnel de la crise que subit Gaza, l'Office lui-même connaît une pénurie de fonds qui affecte sa capacité de continuer de pourvoir, même au niveau actuel, aux besoins de 80 % de la population de Gaza, toujours dépendante de l'aide internationale pour sa survie, et ne lui permet pas de satisfaire les autres besoins des familles gazaouies ni, bien sûr, ceux des enfants.

42. La situation de Gaza est à peine plus grave que celle de la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, où l'épreuve d'une occupation prolongée pèse lourdement sur l'avenir des enfants, qui vivent dans une atmosphère de peur et d'intimidation depuis leur naissance. Les récents événements survenus dans la zone C, qui représente 60 % de la Cisjordanie, ont d'une certaine façon des effets aussi graves en matière de privation des droits que ceux produits par la situation à Gaza. En particulier, l'expulsion des Bédouins de leurs villages et leur déplacement a suscité peur et appréhension, en particulier chez les enfants⁴⁵. Selon le personnel de l'Office que le Rapporteur spécial a rencontré durant sa mission, les 155 communautés pastorales restées dans la zone C, qui est entièrement contrôlée par Israël, comprennent de nombreux réfugiés bédouins en situation de déplacement forcé. Ces communautés, qui comptent de nombreux enfants désormais privés pour la plupart d'une scolarité régulière, ont connu une dégradation dramatique de leurs conditions de vie depuis 2000, la moitié de leurs membres ayant été forcés à quitter les pâturages de Cisjordanie et à abandonner leurs troupeaux pour aller s'installer, contre leur gré, dans des villages et de petites villes. Ce déplacement et cette urbanisation forcés résultent en partie de la politique israélienne de démolition systématique des dispositifs traditionnels d'approvisionnement en eau par citerne, sans lesquels la population bédouine ne peut plus pratiquer ni le nomadisme ni l'agriculture, que la Puissance occupante juge non autorisés et s'emploie donc à faire disparaître. Les enfants bédouins, dont les familles ont déjà connu la condition de réfugié dans le passé, se retrouvent dans une situation particulièrement difficile en perdant à la fois leur foyer et leur mode de vie du fait de l'abandon forcé de leurs traditions pastorales, et en étant privés de la protection inhérente à la citoyenneté qui va de pair avec le respect de la dignité et des droits individuels.

⁴⁴ UNRWA, « Gaza blockade anniversary report », 13 juin 2011. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : <http://www.unrwa.org/etemplate.php?id=1007>.

⁴⁵ Voir Harriet Sherwood, « Bedouin children hope their West Bank school will be spared Israel's bulldozers », Guardian, 12 juin 2011.

C. Santé des enfants palestiniens et pollution de l'eau à Gaza

43. Les enfants sont particulièrement vulnérables à l'insalubrité de l'eau qui sévit à Gaza. On estime à 54 % la proportion d'enfants et de jeunes âgés de moins de 18 ans dans la population civile gazaouie, qui compte 1,6 million de personnes; 20 % d'entre eux sont âgés de moins de 5 ans. Dans cette tranche d'âge, près de 300 000 enfants sont en très grand danger. Les tout-petits enfants sont les plus vulnérables aux maladies dont l'eau est le vecteur, et représentent 90 % des décès annuels causés par les maladies diarrhéiques, choléra y compris⁴⁶. Des études ont montré que les différences observées en matière de santé et de survie (mortalité infantile) entre les enfants vivant à Gaza et ceux vivant en Cisjordanie s'expliquent principalement par l'insalubrité de l'eau à Gaza. L'étude susmentionnée éclaire ce constat en indiquant que la seule source d'eau à Gaza est un aquifère contaminé chimiquement par des chlorures, des nitrates et d'autres substances polluantes dont les taux dépassent parfois les seuils fixés par l'Organisation mondiale de la Santé. La rareté de l'eau aggrave le problème. Près des deux tiers de la population gazaouie interrogée a indiqué que l'eau était de mauvaise qualité car trop salée et polluée, notamment à cause de la contamination par les eaux usées. La Banque mondiale et la Compagnie de distribution d'eau des municipalités côtières ont déclaré que « 5 à 10 % seulement de l'aquifère était propre à la consommation humaine et que les réserves pourraient être épuisées d'ici cinq à 10 ans si les contrôles n'étaient pas renforcés »⁴⁶.

44. La qualité de l'eau consommée à Gaza est au cœur du droit à la vie et à la santé des enfants. Les effets du blocus illégal imposé par Israël, en empêchant l'importation des outils et des matériaux nécessaires à la réparation et à la restauration du système de purification de l'eau partiellement détruit lors de l'opération Plomb durci, exacerbent la crise.

VIII. Recommandations

45. Compte tenu de ce qui précède, le Rapporteur spécial recommande au Gouvernement israélien de prendre les mesures ci-après :

a) Adopter immédiatement, dans les politiques et dans la pratique, les directives établies par B'Tselem en ce qui concerne la protection des enfants vivant sous le régime d'occupation qui sont arrêtés ou détenus, afin de se conformer, sur une base minimale, au droit international humanitaire et aux normes fixées par le droit international en matière de droits de l'homme;

b) Autoriser d'urgence l'entrée dans Gaza des matériaux nécessaires à la réparation des équipements de distribution de l'eau et de l'électricité afin d'éviter que la situation déjà critique de la population civile, et particulièrement des enfants, en matière de santé ne se détériore encore;

c) Élaborer et mettre en œuvre des politiques et des pratiques de détention et d'emprisonnement applicables à la population palestinienne qui soient appropriées, notamment respecter strictement l'interdiction de transférer des prisonniers du territoire palestinien occupé vers le territoire israélien;

⁴⁶ Voir UNICEF, « Protecting children from unsafe water in Gaza: strategy, action plan and project resources », mars 2011. À consulter à l'adresse suivante : http://www.unicef.org/oPt/FINAL_Summary_Protecting_Children_from_unsafe_Water_in_Gaza_4_March_2011.pdf.

d) Lever immédiatement le blocus illégal imposé à Gaza, en considération de ses effets préjudiciables sur tous les aspects de la vie civile, des atteintes qu'il porte aux droits fondamentaux de la population qui vit sous occupation et de ses graves répercussions sur les enfants.

46. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que l'Assemblée générale demande à la Cour internationale de Justice de publier un avis consultatif sur la légalité de l'occupation prolongée, qui est aggravée par le transfert interdit d'un grand nombre de personnes par la Puissance occupante et par l'assujettissement à un double système administratif et juridique discriminatoire en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
19 septembre 2012
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-septième session

Point 70 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire* **

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme : situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Richard Falk, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/67/150.

 La présentation tardive du présent rapport est due à la mise à jour des informations capitales reçues d'interlocuteurs se trouvant en Israël ou dans les territoires palestiniens occupés. À cet égard, le Rapporteur spécial note que le Gouvernement israélien persiste à refuser de coopérer avec lui, l'empêchant ainsi de rencontrer directement ses interlocuteurs dans les territoires palestiniens occupés.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport traite du respect par Israël des obligations que lui impose le droit international en ce qui concerne la situation dans les territoires palestiniens qu'il occupe. Le Rapporteur spécial met en lumière la responsabilité juridique des entreprises, sociétés et acteurs non étatiques prenant part à des activités liées aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans les territoires palestiniens occupés.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	3
II. Méthode de travail employée pour établir le présent rapport.	4
III. Situation générale dans les colonies	4
IV. Cadre juridique	7
A. Généralités : droit des droits de l'homme et droit international humanitaire.	7
B. Obligations et principes relatifs aux droits de l'homme et au droit international humanitaire applicables aux sociétés privées dans le territoire palestinien occupé.	8
V. Études de cas	13
VI. Conclusion	25
VII. Recommandations	26
Annexes
I. Terres allouées aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes, janvier 2012	29
II. Conséquences humanitaires des politiques de colonisation israéliennes, janvier 2012.	30

I. Introduction

1. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 sollicite à nouveau la coopération du Gouvernement israélien pour pouvoir s'acquitter des obligations découlant du mandat que lui a confié l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Cette coopération constitue une obligation juridique fondamentale attachée au statut de Membre de l'Organisation et doit permettre au Rapporteur spécial d'engager un dialogue constructif avec le Gouvernement israélien, les victimes, les témoins et les acteurs de la société civile susceptibles de présenter un intérêt aux fins de l'exécution de son mandat.

2. L'Article 104 de la Charte des Nations Unies dispose que l'Organisation « jouit, sur le territoire de chacun de ses Membres, de la capacité juridique qui lui est nécessaire pour exercer ses fonctions et atteindre ses buts ». Selon le paragraphe 2 de l'Article 105, les personnes représentant l'Organisation jouissent, sur le territoire de chacun des États Membres, des privilèges et immunités qui leur sont nécessaires pour exercer en toute indépendance leurs fonctions en rapport avec l'Organisation. Ces dispositions ont été développées dans la Convention sur les privilèges et immunités des Nations Unies, adoptée par l'Assemblée générale le 13 février 1946. La section 22 de l'article VI de l'Accord intitulé « Experts en missions pour l'Organisation des Nations Unies » est particulièrement pertinent car il énonce les obligations qu'ont les Membres de coopérer avec les représentants de l'ONU, tels que les rapporteurs spéciaux, et d'éviter de faire obstacle à leur indépendance.

3. Il convient de souligner que le Gouvernement israélien n'a pas apporté sa coopération dans le cadre de maintes autres initiatives importantes prises récemment par l'Assemblée générale et par le Conseil des droits de l'homme concernant les territoires palestiniens occupés, notamment la Mission d'établissement des faits de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le conflit de Gaza, le Comité d'experts indépendants chargé de donner suite au rapport de la mission internationale indépendante d'établissement des faits sur le conflit de Gaza, la mission internationale indépendante d'établissement des faits concernant l'incident de la flottille humanitaire, la Mission de haut niveau chargée d'établir les faits à Beit Hanoun, la Commission d'enquête sur le Liban et le Comité spécial chargé d'enquêter sur les pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme du peuple palestinien et des autres Arabes des territoires occupés. Face à cette attitude de non-coopération à l'égard des initiatives officielles de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil des droits de l'homme, les États Membres, l'Assemblée générale, le Conseil de sécurité et le Secrétaire général devraient faire des efforts concertés pour obtenir la coopération du Gouvernement israélien.

4. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 a mené des recherches, pour établir le présent rapport, en partant du principe fondamental selon lequel les entreprises doivent respecter le droit international humanitaire et les droits de l'homme, et doivent s'abstenir de porter atteinte aux droits humains d'autrui et remédier aux incidences négatives sur les droits de l'homme dans lesquelles elles ont une part¹. Le Rapporteur spécial serait heureux de pouvoir compter sur la collaboration du

¹ Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme (A/HRC/17/31, annexe).

Gouvernement israélien, ainsi que des entreprises et sociétés opérant à l'intérieur des colonies israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé ou traitant avec elles, sur les questions soulevées dans le présent rapport.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial appelle l'attention sur la situation dramatique du peuple palestinien, qui vit sous occupation prolongée et n'a aucune perspective réaliste d'en voir la fin dans un avenir proche, et rappelle que, dans ces conditions, il incombe au premier chef à l'ONU de tout mettre en œuvre pour éviter l'exploitation économique, politique et culturelle des Palestiniens ainsi que la confiscation de leurs ressources naturelles.

II. Méthode de travail employée pour établir le présent rapport

6. En dépit de ses demandes répétées adressées au Gouvernement israélien, le Rapporteur spécial n'a pas été autorisé à se rendre dans le territoire palestinien occupé; il a donc établi le présent rapport sur la base des renseignements communiqués, à sa demande, par des acteurs de la société civile, des organismes des Nations Unies, des entreprises et sociétés, des entités non étatiques et d'autres parties prenantes, en particulier celles qui sont bien renseignées sur la participation des entreprises à la construction et à la vie des colonies de peuplement israéliennes. Le Rapporteur spécial mentionne un certain nombre d'entreprises qui sont implantées à l'intérieur de colonies israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé, qui traitent avec elles ou en tirent des gains quelconques. Il formule des recommandations préconisant que les entreprises ayant des liens avec des colonies de peuplement israéliennes prennent rapidement des mesures pour mettre leurs activités en conformité avec le droit international et les règles et normes applicables, y compris le droit international des droits de l'homme. Le Rapporteur spécial note que, depuis l'élaboration du présent rapport, il en a porté le contenu à l'attention des entreprises dont il est question ici. Il demande des précisions et de plus amples informations au sujet des allégations contenues dans le présent rapport, pour poursuivre en particulier la mise en œuvre rapide des recommandations qui y figurent.

III. Situation générale dans les colonies

7. Entre 1967 et 2010, Israël a implanté environ 150 colonies de peuplement en Cisjordanie. S'y ajoutent une centaine d'implantations « sauvages » – des colonies construites sans autorisation officielle israélienne, mais avec la protection, le soutien en équipement et l'aide financière du Gouvernement israélien. Ces implantations non autorisées sont depuis peu l'objet de débats dans le Gouvernement israélien pour savoir s'il y a lieu ou non de les légaliser en droit israélien. C'est là une grave accélération du mouvement de colonisation, incompatible avec le discours politique d'Israël, qui dit appuyer les négociations tendant à instaurer un État palestinien viable, indépendant, souverain et d'un seul tenant.

8. Jérusalem compte 12 colonies, implantées avec l'aide financière et l'assistance du Gouvernement sur des terres illégalement annexées par Israël et intégrées à la ville. Les colonies ont la mainmise sur plus de 40 % de la Cisjordanie, y compris des ressources agricoles et hydriques essentielles. De nombreuses implantations sont très étendues et forment des grands lotissements fermés ou des petites localités. Israël n'autorise pas les Palestiniens – sauf s'ils ont un permis de travail – à y pénétrer ou à en utiliser les terres.

9. Les colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé comptent de 500 000 à 650 000 habitants, dont quelque 200 000 vivant à Jérusalem-Est. Les statistiques révèlent que le nombre de colons (à l'exclusion de la population de Jérusalem-Est) a augmenté, au cours de la dernière décennie, à un rythme annuel moyen de 5,3 %, contre 1,8 % pour la population israélienne en général. Au cours des 12 derniers mois, cette population a augmenté de 15 579 personnes. Le Gouvernement israélien offre aux colons des prestations et des incitations dans les domaines de la construction, du logement, de l'éducation, de l'industrie, de l'agriculture et du tourisme, ainsi que des routes à usage exclusif et un accès privilégié à Israël. L'effort financier, juridique et administratif déployé par Israël dans son entreprise de colonisation a transformé de nombreuses colonies en opulentes enclaves pour citoyens israéliens, et cela dans une zone où les Palestiniens vivent sous régime militaire et dans des conditions de pauvreté généralisée.

10. Cette aide financière, juridique et administrative apportée aux zones de peuplement offre aux colons des privilèges qu'ils n'auraient pas en tant que citoyens israéliens vivant sur le territoire israélien. Ces privilèges ajoutent un contexte éloquent aux grandes manifestations qui ont rassemblé librement à Tel-Aviv, à Jérusalem et à Haïfa, des centaines de milliers d'Israéliens descendus dans la rue pour exiger la justice sociale, la baisse du coût de la vie et l'action du Gouvernement face à la détresse économique des classes moyennes israéliennes.

11. L'implantation de colonies constitue une violation patente du droit international humanitaire au sens de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève) et du règlement figurant en annexe de la quatrième Convention de La Haye de 1907. La quatrième Convention de Genève interdit, en son article 49, les déportations hors du territoire occupé dans le territoire de la Puissance occupante. Le Règlement de La Haye interdit à toute puissance occupante d'entreprendre des changements à caractère permanent dans le territoire qu'elle occupe, à moins que ces changements répondent à des besoins militaires au sens étroit du terme ou qu'ils soient entrepris au profit de la population locale.

12. En implantant des colonies et leurs infrastructures, Israël viole en outre le droit international en ce qu'il s'approprie des biens palestiniens sans nécessité militaire et qu'il restreint fortement la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens. Ces restrictions violent les droits de l'homme qui sont tributaires de la liberté de circulation, tels que le droit à la santé, à l'éducation, à la vie de famille, au travail et à la liberté de culte. En outre, le projet de colonies de peuplement israéliennes, associé aux investissements financiers massifs dont il bénéficie, a pris des proportions telles qu'il semble confirmer l'intention d'Israël de conserver la mainmise sur les zones visées, contrevenant ainsi au principe fondamental de la Charte des Nations Unies, figurant au paragraphe 4 de l'Article 2, qui interdit l'acquisition de territoire par le recours à la force. Qui plus est, les colonies morcellent la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, en en faisant une série d'enclaves isolées, limitant fortement la possibilité pour le peuple palestinien d'avoir un territoire d'un seul tenant et de disposer librement de ses ressources naturelles – conditions pourtant essentielles à l'exercice véritable de son droit fondamental et inaliénable à l'autodétermination.

13. Israël a créé un régime de séparation et de discrimination appliquant deux régimes de droit différents dans le territoire palestinien : l'un, qui s'applique aux colons, considère les colonies comme des extensions de facto d'Israël, et accorde aux colons les droits des citoyens et les protections d'un État quasi démocratique. Avec l'autre, les Palestiniens sont soumis à un régime d'administration militaire qui les prive de protection juridique et du droit de participer à l'élaboration des politiques concernant la terre sur laquelle ils vivent. Cette dualité ne fait que renforcer un système dans lequel les droits dépendent de l'identité nationale et de la citoyenneté. Un double réseau de routes – l'un pour les colons, l'autre pour les Palestiniens – vient encore accentuer la séparation discriminatoire entre les deux communautés.

14. Le mur construit en Cisjordanie est un des aspects les plus notables de l'entreprise de colonisation. Une grande partie de son tracé se situe à l'intérieur de la Cisjordanie et prend en compte les nouvelles visées expansionnistes des communautés de colons. Les restrictions d'accès aux terres agricoles palestiniennes situées à proximité des colonies israéliennes construites à l'est du mur sont nombreuses. Si, dans certains cas, ces restrictions sont établies et appliquées unilatéralement par les colons, dans d'autres, les militaires israéliens érigent des clôtures autour des colonies et déclarent que la zone en question est une « zone de sécurité spéciale ». Dans son avis consultatif quasiment unanime – par 14 voix contre 1 – rendu en 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice a déclaré sans équivoque que le mur de séparation était contraire au droit international, et qu'il fallait le démanteler et indemniser les Palestiniens pour le préjudice subi.

15. Dans la zone C, constituée de 60 % de la Cisjordanie, le régime de zonage appliqué par Israël est encore plus bénéfique à l'implantation et à l'expansion de colonies alors qu'il empêche le développement des communautés palestiniennes. Il interdit en effet aux Palestiniens de construire dans quelque 70 % de la zone C, soit environ 44 % de la Cisjordanie. Dans les 30 % qui restent, tout un arsenal de restrictions fait qu'il est quasiment impossible aux Palestiniens d'obtenir un permis de construire. En fait, les autorités israéliennes n'autorisent les constructions palestiniennes que dans les limites d'un plan approuvé par Israël, qui couvre moins de 1 % de la zone C. Les Palestiniens n'ont donc d'autre choix que de construire illégalement et de s'exposer aux ripostes inhumaines des Israéliens, telles que les démolitions et les déplacements.

16. Depuis qu'Israël prétend avoir annexé Jérusalem-Est, le Gouvernement israélien a créé des conditions démographiques et géographiques destinées à contrecarrer les propositions de paix faisant de Jérusalem la capitale de la Palestine. Israël a cherché à accroître la population israélienne et à réduire la présence palestinienne dans la ville. Il a pour ce faire cherché à isoler physiquement Jérusalem-Est du reste de la Cisjordanie, notamment en y construisant le mur, opéré des discriminations dans les expropriations de terres, les plans et les constructions ainsi que les démolitions de maisons, supprimé les allocations-logement et les prestations sociales versées aux Palestiniens et a affecté des parts inégales du budget municipal aux deux parties de la ville. L'expulsion forcée des Palestiniens de leur foyer par des colons soutenus par le Gouvernement, a contribué à changer la donne démographique de la ville. Des Palestiniens ont perdu leur maison et beaucoup d'autres restent sous la menace constante d'une expulsion, d'une dépossession ou d'un déplacement forcé. Le Gouvernement soutient les actions des colons, notamment en leur donnant des vigiles privés, en envoyant des policiers pour accompagner les confiscations de maisons palestiniennes et en finançant des projets de développement israéliens dans les colonies de Jérusalem.

IV. Cadre juridique

A. Généralités : droit des droits de l'homme et droit international humanitaire

17. L'État d'Israël est partie à la plupart des principales conventions internationales relatives aux droits de l'homme et présente régulièrement des rapports aux organes conventionnels des droits de l'homme². Une situation de conflit armé ou d'occupation ne dispense pas un État de ses obligations en matière de droits de l'homme. La Cour internationale de Justice, les organes conventionnels des droits de l'homme, les hauts-commissaires aux droits de l'homme successifs, les procédures spéciales de la Commission des droits de l'homme et le Conseil des droits de l'homme qui lui a succédé ont régulièrement indiqué que le droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire s'appliquaient l'un et l'autre dans l'ensemble du territoire palestinien occupé.

18. Israël est tenu de respecter le droit international humanitaire inscrit dans les traités qu'il a ratifiés ainsi que dans le droit international coutumier. Dans le territoire palestinien occupé, il est notamment tenu de respecter les dispositions du droit international ayant trait aux territoires occupés. Les règles du droit international humanitaire qui concernent l'occupation militaire, en particulier la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève³), et le Règlement de La Haye annexé à la Convention de 1907 concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre⁴, doivent être appliquées par Israël, en tant que Puissance occupante, en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et dans la bande de Gaza. Bien qu'Israël ait contesté l'application formelle de la Convention de Genève, et n'ait accepté d'en appliquer que les dispositions « humanitaires » qu'elle a déterminées elle-même, la situation demeure celle d'une occupation militaire hostile, ainsi que l'ont reconnu le Conseil de sécurité, l'Assemblée générale, le Conseil des droits de l'homme et, de façon éminemment concluante, la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif de 2004 sur l'édification du mur. Outre la quatrième Convention de Genève, le Règlement de La Haye, considéré comme relevant du droit international coutumier, s'applique également⁵.

19. En tant que Puissance occupante, l'État israélien est tenu de faire respecter et d'appliquer le droit des droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire dans ² <http://tb.ohchr.org/default.aspx?country=il>.

³ Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 75, n° 973.

⁴ Règlement concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre, adopté le 18 octobre 1907, entré en vigueur le 26 janvier 1910. Voir Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

⁵ Voir A/HRC/12/37.

le territoire palestinien occupé. Il lui incombe également de veiller à ce que les sociétés privées opérant dans le territoire palestinien occupé soient tenues responsables de toute activité dont les conséquences nuiraient aux droits fondamentaux du peuple palestinien.

B. Obligations et principes relatifs aux droits de l'homme et au droit international humanitaire applicables aux sociétés privées dans le territoire palestinien occupé

1. Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme

20. Le 16 juin 2011, dans sa résolution 17/4, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a entériné à l'unanimité les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme⁶ pour mettre en œuvre le cadre de référence « protéger, respecter et réparer » des Nations Unies, ces principes imposant pour la première fois une norme mondiale de respect des droits de l'homme dans le cadre de l'activité industrielle et commerciale. Ces principes ont été élaborés par John Ruggie, ancien Représentant spécial du Secrétaire général chargé de la question des droits de l'homme et des sociétés transnationales et autres entreprises. Ils fournissent un cadre normatif faisant autorité, précisent les rôles et les responsabilités des entreprises au regard des droits de l'homme ainsi que les mesures juridiques et les politiques que doivent instituer les États en raison de leurs obligations en matière de droits de l'homme. Il s'agit du premier document normatif concernant les entreprises et les droits de l'homme à être adopté par un organe intergouvernemental spécialisé dans les droits de l'homme.

21. Le Principes directeurs dégagent les mesures que les États doivent prendre afin de promouvoir le respect des droits de l'homme dans les entreprises. Ils offrent un cadre dans lequel les entreprises doivent démontrer qu'elles respectent les droits de l'homme et réduisent les risques de violation. Ils constituent également un ensemble de critères permettant de déterminer dans quelle mesure les entreprises respectent les droits de l'homme. Les Principes directeurs sont organisés selon les trois piliers du cadre :

a) L'obligation faite à l'État d'offrir une protection, au moyen de politiques, de réglementations et de procédures judiciaires, contre les atteintes aux droits de l'homme commises par des tiers, dont les entreprises;

b) La responsabilité qu'ont les entreprises de respecter les droits de l'homme, ce qui signifie qu'elles doivent prendre, avec la diligence voulue, les mesures nécessaires pour ne pas porter atteinte aux droits d'autrui et pour remédier aux effets nuisibles qu'elles contribuent à produire;

c) La nécessité d'offrir aux victimes de violations commises par des entreprises un meilleur accès aux recours, tant judiciaires qu'extrajudiciaires.

22. Les Principes directeurs contiennent des recommandations concrètes et pratiques pour la mise en œuvre du cadre. Ils ne créent pas de nouvelles obligations au regard du droit international mais précisent et articulent les implications des normes existantes, notamment celles du droit international des droits de l'homme, ainsi que des pratiques, tant pour les États que pour les entreprises, en les intégrant dans un cadre cohérent⁷. Outre qu'ils font partie des obligations actuelles des États en matière de droit international des droits de l'homme, des éléments importants des Principes directeurs sont de plus en plus présents dans les lois nationales, et dans les normes et initiatives non contraignantes existant à l'échelle mondiale, régionale et dans les branches industrielles, ainsi que dans les obligations contractuelles.

⁶ A/HRC/17/31, annexe.

23. Selon la situation et le contexte de leurs activités, les entreprises peuvent avoir une influence sur l'ensemble des droits de l'homme. Il est donc impératif qu'elles mettent en place, avec la diligence voulue, des procédures visant à évaluer les risques et les conséquences possibles et réelles de leurs activités au regard des droits de l'homme, qu'elles intègrent les conclusions de ces évaluations et en tiennent compte dans leurs activités, fassent un suivi de l'efficacité des solutions apportées et communiquent tant sur les évaluations que sur les solutions. Elles doivent par ailleurs prendre des engagements publics clairs de responsabilité en matière de droits de l'homme, d'action corrective pour toute conséquence nuisible de leurs activités ou de coopération à toute solution apportée aux dommages qu'elles ont causés.

24. Les droits de l'homme sont peut-être plus menacés dans certaines industries ou certains contextes, notamment les situations humanitaires difficiles, et devraient par conséquent y faire l'objet d'une attention plus soutenue, mais dans tous les cas les entreprises doivent être encouragées à procéder à un examen périodique de tous les droits de l'homme mis à mal par leurs activités. Les normes internationales des droits de l'homme, notamment la Charte internationale des droits de l'homme⁸, et les huit conventions fondamentales de l'Organisation internationale du Travail (OIT), définies dans la Déclaration de l'OIT relative aux principes et droits fondamentaux au travail, constituent un corpus de textes faisant autorité pour évaluer l'impact des activités des entreprises sur les droits de l'homme. Selon les circonstances, les évaluations doivent aussi tenir compte d'autres normes, concernant par exemple les droits des peuples autochtones, des femmes, des minorités nationales, ethniques, religieuses et linguistiques, des enfants, des personnes handicapées et des travailleurs migrants et de leur famille, s'il y a lieu. Les entreprises doivent respecter les normes du droit international humanitaire quand elles opèrent dans des situations de conflit armé. Les États doivent mieux surveiller les entreprises qu'ils possèdent ou dirigent.

25. Les Principes directeurs font converger les normes et initiatives mondiales relatives aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme, comme il ressort des rapports du Groupe de travail sur la question des droits de l'homme et des sociétés transnationales et autres entreprises et de l'ancien Représentant spécial du Secrétaire général⁹. Parmi les initiatives régionales, on compte notamment les suivantes : a) l'Organisation internationale de normalisation (ISO) a inclus un chapitre sur les droits de l'homme dans ses principes directeurs relatifs à la responsabilité d'entreprise, qui sont alignés sur le cadre de référence « protéger, respecter et réparer » des Nations Unies sur lequel sont fondés les Principes directeurs; b) la Commission européenne a fait une communication sur la responsabilité sociale des entreprises, dans laquelle elle indique que toutes les entreprises doivent assumer leurs responsabilités en matière de droits de l'homme, dans le respect des Principes directeurs¹⁰. Elle a aussi annoncé son intention de publier des rapports périodiques sur l'avancement de la mise en œuvre des Principes directeurs dans l'Union européenne et a invité les États membres de l'Union européenne à élaborer des plans nationaux de mise en œuvre des Principes directeurs d'ici à la fin 2012¹¹; c) l'Association des nations de l'Asie du Sud-Est (ASEAN) a annoncé que le premier examen thématique effectué par la nouvelle Commission intergouvernementale des droits de l'homme serait axé sur l'entreprise et les droits de l'homme, conformément aux Principes directeurs¹²; et d) les Principes directeurs pour les entreprises multinationales de l'Organisation de coopération et de développement économiques (OCDE), mis à jour en 2011, sont à présent pleinement harmonisés avec les Principes directeurs de l'ONU concernant la responsabilité des entreprises en matière de droits de l'homme.

⁷ A/HRC/17/31, par. 14.

⁸ La Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels.

⁹ L'application du cadre et des Principes directeurs des Nations Unies a été documentée par le Groupe de travail dans ses premiers rapports au Conseil des droits de l'homme (A/HRC/20/29) et à l'Assemblée générale (A/67/285), par le Secrétaire général dans son rapport au Conseil des droits de l'homme (A/HRC/21/21 et Corr.1) et par l'ancien Représentant spécial du Secrétaire général; voir www.business-humanrights.org/media/documents/applications-of-framework-jun-2011.pdf.

2. Pacte mondial

26. Le Pacte mondial¹³ est la principale initiative volontaire mondiale concernant la responsabilité sociale des entreprises qui traite aussi de la question de l'entreprise et des droits de l'homme. Elle a été lancée par le Secrétaire général en l'an 2000 en vue de convaincre les chefs d'entreprise de promouvoir et d'appliquer volontairement dans leurs secteurs d'activité respectifs les 10 principes relatifs aux droits de l'homme, aux normes de travail, à l'environnement et à la lutte contre la corruption. Sept organismes des Nations Unies travaillent en collaboration permanente avec le Bureau du Pacte mondial du Secrétaire général, à savoir le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, l'Office des Nations Unies contre la drogue et le crime, le Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement, le Programme des Nations Unies pour l'environnement, ONU-Femmes, l'Organisation internationale du Travail et l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour le développement industriel. Il a été indiqué que le premier principe du Pacte mondial était inspiré des Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme, qui faisaient donc partie de l'engagement souscrit par les quelque 8 700 entreprises ayant adhéré au Pacte dans plus de 130 pays¹⁴.

¹⁰ Consultable à l'adresse : http://ec.europa.eu/entreprise/policies/sustainable-business/corporate-social-responsibility/index_en.htm.

¹¹ http://ec.europa.eu/enterprise/newsroom/cf/_getdocument.cfm?doc_id=7010.

¹² Observations de Rafendi Djamin, représentant de l'Indonésie auprès de la Commission intergouvernementale des droits de l'homme de l'Association des nations de l'Asie du Sud-Est, au forum Asie-Pacifique des institutions nationales de protection des droits de l'homme, Conférence régionale sur les entreprises et les droits de l'homme, Séoul, du 11 au 13 octobre 2011.

¹³ Voir www.unglobalcompact.org/.

¹⁴ Pacte mondial et Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « The UN 2011 Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Relationship to UN Global Compact Commitments », juillet 2011; consultable à l'adresse www.unglobalcompact.org/docs/issues_doc/human_rights/Resources/GPs_GC%20note.pdf.

27. Le Pacte mondial vise deux grands objectifs complémentaires :

a) Inscrire les 10 principes dans les activités des entreprises dans le monde entier;

b) Catalyser les mesures prises à l'appui des objectifs plus généraux des Nations Unies, dont les objectifs du Millénaire pour le développement. Les 10 principes universellement acceptés couvrent des questions relatives aux droits de l'homme, aux conditions de travail, à l'environnement et à la lutte contre la corruption. Les deux principes qui concernent le respect des droits l'homme sont particulièrement pertinents :

Principe 1 : Les entreprises sont invitées à promouvoir et à respecter la protection du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme dans leur sphère d'influence; et Principe 2 : Les entreprises doivent veiller à ne pas se rendre complice de violations des droits de l'homme.

28. Le Pacte mondial contient une politique de transparence et responsabilité appelée Communication sur les progrès réalisés. La publication annuelle d'une communication sur les progrès réalisés représente une preuve importante de l'attachement du participant au Pacte mondial et à ses principes. Il est demandé aux entreprises participantes d'appliquer cette politique, car la volonté de transparence et de communication est fondamentale pour la réussite de l'initiative. Le fait de ne pas appliquer cette règle peut entraîner un déclassement du participant, voire son expulsion.

29. À la suite de l'adoption des Principes directeurs par le Conseil des droits de l'homme, le Pacte mondial a fait savoir à ses membres que l'engagement souscrit par les entreprises au titre du premier principe correspond aux obligations en matière de responsabilité d'entreprises figurant dans les Principes directeurs. Tous les outils et documents d'orientation sur les droits de l'homme destinés aux entreprises participant au Pacte mondial seront harmonisés avec les Principes directeurs.

3. Entreprises opérant dans les situations de conflit armé et d'occupation

30. Dans les situations de conflit armé, les normes du droit international humanitaire s'appliquent aux entreprises comme aux autres entités¹⁵. Le droit international humanitaire protège le personnel de l'entreprise, à condition qu'il ne participe pas directement aux combats armés, ainsi que les biens et les équipements. Il impose également au personnel et à leurs entreprises d'en respecter les dispositions, sous peine de poursuites pénales ou civiles. Le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR) a élaboré un guide des droits et obligations des entreprises au titre du droit international humanitaire¹⁶.

31. Les graves violations des droits de l'homme impliquant des entreprises se produisent souvent dans des conflits autour du contrôle de territoires, de ressources ou d'un État, là où les mécanismes de protection et de respect des droits de l'homme ne fonctionnent pas comme ils le devraient. Les entreprises qui cherchent à éviter de se rendre complices de violations des droits de l'homme sollicitent de plus en plus les conseils des autorités des pays dans lesquels elles opèrent.

¹⁵ Voir www.ohchr.org/Documents/Issues/Business/RtRInterpretativeGuide.pdf, p. 12.

¹⁶ Entreprise et droit international humanitaire : introduction aux droits et obligations des entreprises au titre du droit international humanitaire (Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, 2006). Voir aussi Éric Mongelard, « Responsabilité civile des entreprises privées en cas de violations du droit international humanitaire », Revue internationale de la Croix-Rouge, vol. 88, n° 863, septembre 2006.

32. L'exploitation d'une entreprise dans une région en proie à un conflit peut s'avérer hautement risquée et les autorités doivent par conséquent mettre en garde contre l'éventualité que l'activité soit contraire aux droits de l'homme. Les États devraient examiner leurs politiques, lois, réglementations et mesures de mise en œuvre afin de vérifier si elles sont efficaces face à ces risques accrus, et notamment encourager les entreprises à faire preuve de la diligence qui s'impose pour évaluer leur propre situation. Ils doivent prendre les mesures appropriées pour remédier aux lacunes observées, à savoir par exemple étudier les responsabilités civiles, administratives et pénales des entreprises domiciliées ou opérant dans leur territoire et/ou leur juridiction qui se rendent responsables ou complices de violations du droit international.

33. Les entreprises et sociétés qui ne respectent pas le droit international humanitaire payent un prix considérable, comme par exemple la détérioration de leur image publique et les conséquences sur les décisions des actionnaires et la valeur des actions, sans compter l'incrimination pénale de leurs employés pour atteinte aux droits de l'homme. Selon le CICR, le droit international humanitaire dispose que les auteurs, mais aussi leurs supérieurs hiérarchiques et leurs complices, peuvent être tenus pénalement responsables pour la commission de crimes de guerre. Pour ce type de crimes, la complicité est très probablement l'incrimination la plus pertinente en ce qui concerne les entreprises¹⁷.

34. Les employés d'une entreprise ne peuvent pas demander l'immunité au seul motif qu'ils agissent au nom de leur employeur. Ils peuvent faire l'objet d'enquêtes et de poursuites pour violations des droits de l'homme, quel que soit le lieu où ces violations ont été commises. Les États sont par conséquent tenus de prendre les mesures qui s'imposent. Le CICR avertit ainsi les entreprises qu'elles ne devraient pas écarter la possibilité de faire l'objet de procédures judiciaires du simple fait que les pays où elles opèrent n'ouvriront probablement pas d'enquête criminelle ou sont incapables de le faire. Lorsqu'elles évaluent les risques liés à leurs activités en situation de conflit armé, elles doivent donc tenir de plus en plus compte du fait qu'elles-mêmes ou leurs employés sont passibles de poursuites pour les crimes commis dans ce contexte¹⁸.

35. Le recours à la responsabilité civile est également un moyen de mettre en évidence les violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire commises par les entreprises, et d'offrir de réelles indemnisations aux victimes. Les entreprises collaborent parfois avec les auteurs étatiques, dont les forces militaires, pour protéger et/ou extraire les ressources naturelles, donnant lieu à ce qu'on appelle une « action conjointe ».

36. L'affaire Doe v. Unocal est un exemple de procédure civile pour violations graves des droits de l'homme, notamment la torture, le viol, le travail forcé et le déplacement de population¹⁹. La Cour d'appel des États-Unis pour le neuvième circuit²⁰ a retenu une théorie de la complicité tirée du droit pénal (aide et assistance), et a donc jugé qu'il existait des preuves suffisantes de la culpabilité d'Unocal, notamment au vu du fait qu'Unocal avait connaissance des violations des droits de l'homme commises avant de devenir partie à l'activité. L'affaire du conseil de village de Bil'in²¹ contre la société canadienne Green Park International est une affaire portée devant les tribunaux canadiens. Les plaignants reprochaient à Green Park International de participer à la construction et à la promotion d'une colonie implantée sur les terres de la communauté de Bil'in. Les tribunaux canadiens ont accepté le fait que les entreprises étaient tenues d'éviter de participer, même indirectement, aux infractions commises par Israël au regard de ses obligations au titre de la quatrième Convention de Genève, et que les obligations découlant de la quatrième Convention ne liaient pas seulement les États parties. La Cour supérieure a cependant refusé de poursuivre l'examen du dossier au motif que les tribunaux israéliens étaient une juridiction plus appropriée (doctrine du *forum non conveniens*²²). Le Rapporteur spécial fait observer, au sujet de cette affaire, la longue liste de décisions de l'appareil judiciaire israélien en défaveur des plaignants palestiniens, qui équivaut à une impunité presque totale d'Israël et des colons israéliens en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est. Dans ce contexte, il remet en question la validité de la décision de la Cour supérieure.

¹⁷ www.icrc.org/eng/assets/files/other/icrc_002_0882.pdf, p. 26.

¹⁸ Ibid.

¹⁹ www.icrc.org/eng/assets/files/other/irrc_863_mongelard.pdf, p. 15.

V. Études de cas

37. Le Rapporteur spécial note que les entreprises citées dans le présent rapport ne représentent qu'un petit échantillon du large éventail d'entreprises dont les activités sont liées aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Le Rapporteur spécial ayant reçu des parties prenantes une grande quantité d'informations au sujet des pratiques commerciales des entreprises qui traitent avec les colonies israéliennes, des recherches plus poussées seront faites pour savoir si ces allégations sont fondées et justifient que des rapports futurs les examinent de plus près. Les entreprises en question sont notamment des détaillants et des chaînes de supermarchés, des prestataires de services de restauration rapide, des producteurs de vins et des fabricants de produits qui, bien que souvent étiquetés « produits d'Israël », sont en fait produits dans le territoire palestinien occupé ou extraits de son sol; il s'agit de petites, moyennes et grandes entreprises appartenant à des Israéliens et de sociétés multinationales. Le Rapporteur spécial n'a choisi qu'un certain nombre de cas ayant valeur d'exemple, car il a fallu, à ce stade, exclure un grand nombre d'informations dignes de foi à cause, surtout, de la limite imposée par l'Organisation des Nations Unies au nombre de mots que doit contenir le présent rapport.

1. Caterpillar Incorporated

38. Caterpillar²³, l'un des principaux fabricants mondiaux d'équipement de construction et d'extraction minière et le plus grand fabricant au monde de moteurs au gazole et au gaz naturel et de turbines à gaz industrielles, a affirmé contribuer au ²⁰ Cour d'appel des États-Unis pour le neuvième circuit, société Doe v. Unocal, arrêt du 18 septembre 2002.

²¹ Le Conseil de village de Bil'in est l'autorité municipale du village palestinien de Bil'in.

²² www.eilfe.com/online-courses/doc.../282-yassin-v-greenpark.html.

²³ www.caterpillar.com/home.

développement durable sur tous les continents²⁴. À la fin du deuxième trimestre de 2012, il employait 132 825 personnes dans le monde entier et, le 25 juillet 2012, il annonçait un bénéfice trimestriel record de 2,54 dollars par action, les ventes et recettes s'établissant à 17,37 milliards de dollars, autre record historique, et les bénéfices réalisés au cours du même trimestre s'élevant à 1,699 milliard de dollars²⁵. Le Président-Directeur général de Caterpillar, Doug Oberhelman, s'est dit très satisfait des résultats de l'entreprise au deuxième trimestre, lesquels avaient battu tous les records, et a déclaré que ses salariés, ses concessionnaires et ses fournisseurs de par le monde exécutaient la stratégie de l'entreprise de main de maître.

39. Caterpillar a été publiquement critiqué par divers intervenants, notamment des organisations religieuses, des organisations non gouvernementales (ONG) et certains mécanismes des Nations Unies, pour avoir fourni au Gouvernement israélien du matériel, tel que bulldozers et engins de chantier, utilisé pour démolir ou détruire des maisons, des écoles, des vergers, des oliveraies et des cultures palestiniens. Amnesty International a fait état de ces violations²⁶ en 2004 et a relevé que les produits fabriqués par Caterpillar servaient à construire le mur, jugé contraire au droit international par la Cour internationale de Justice²⁷. Human Rights Watch dénonce régulièrement l'utilisation de produits fabriqués par Caterpillar dans des actes attentatoires aux droits de l'homme et l'ONG War on Want a établi un rapport consacré exclusivement aux relations de l'entreprise avec le Gouvernement israélien²⁸. Morgan Stanley Capital International (MSCI) a récemment radié Caterpillar de plusieurs des indices²⁹ relatifs à l'environnement, à la société et à la gouvernance d'entreprise (indices World ESG, MSCI USA ESG et MSCI USA IMI ESG) qu'il a mis au point en expliquant son geste par la dégradation, le 1^{er} mars 2012, de la note attribuée à l'entreprise dans ces domaines à la suite de l'examen qui a eu lieu en février³⁰. Faisant observer que Caterpillar était depuis longtemps « impliqué dans la controverse suscitée par l'utilisation de ses bulldozers par les Forces de défense israéliennes dans les territoires palestiniens occupés », MSCI a déclaré que son service des études, qui s'occupe des questions d'environnement, de société et de gouvernance d'entreprise, avait pris la mesure de cette controverse autour des droits de l'homme depuis 2004 et qu'il en était depuis lors tenu compte dans la note qui lui était attribuée, mais que cela n'avait pas, en soi, provoqué l'abaissement de celle-ci en février 2012. MSCI a ajouté que la note attribuée à Caterpillar sur le plan communautaire et social, laquelle comporte une évaluation des résultats dans le domaine des droits de l'homme et représente 10% de la note qu'elles obtiennent en matière d'environnement, de société et de gouvernance, tenait compte de cette controverse.

²⁴ www.energyst.fr/france/a-propos-d-energyst-nos-partenaires.aspx.

²⁵ www.caterpillar.com/cda/files/3801914/7/Final%20%20Q2%202012%20Cat%20Inc%20Release%20V2.pdf, p. 1

²⁶ www.amnesty.org/fr/library/asset/MDE15/033/2004/fr/24cc1bb1-d5f6-11dd-bb24-1fb85fe8fa05/mde150332004fr.html.

²⁷ www.icj-cij.org/docket/index.php?pr=71&code=mwp&p1=3&p2=4&p3=6&case=131&k=5a.

²⁸ www.waronwant.org/campaigns/justice-for-palestine/hidden/inform/17109-caterpillar-the-alternative-report.

²⁹ www.aljazeera.com/news/middleeast/2012/06/201262711732387905.html.

³⁰ www.msci.com/resources/pdfs/ESG_Indices_General_QA_July_2012.pdf.

40. Le 28 mai 2004, le Rapporteur spécial sur le droit à l'alimentation de l'époque a écrit à Caterpillar en insistant sur les observations qu'il avait pu faire au cours d'une récente mission dans le territoire palestinien occupé³¹ et en faisant part de ses préoccupations concernant l'utilisation de bulldozers blindés fournis par l'entreprise pour détruire des exploitations agricoles, des serres, de très vieilles oliveraies et des champs cultivés ainsi que de nombreuses habitations, voire parfois des vies palestiniennes. Le Rapporteur spécial notait en outre que le nombre de plus en plus élevé de Palestiniens sans abri et privés de moyens de subsistance limitait leurs possibilités de se procurer de la nourriture, droit consacré à l'article 11 du Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels. La mort, le 16 mars 2003, de Rachel Corrie, militante pour la paix âgée de 23 ans et originaire des États-Unis, dont la presse s'est largement fait l'écho, a mis en évidence l'utilisation qui était faite des produits Caterpillar et a appelé l'attention du monde entier sur la destruction des biens palestiniens. M^{me} Corrie manifestait en effet pour empêcher la démolition d'une habitation palestinienne à Gaza et, bien qu'elle eut revêtu une tenue orange vif très visible, elle a été tuée quand le bulldozer de Caterpillar l'a renversée, lui fracturant les bras, les jambes et le crâne³².

41. Malgré de nombreux rapports, déclarations et plaidoyers concernant Caterpillar, l'entreprise continue de faire fi des conséquences pour les droits de l'homme de ses activités en territoire palestinien occupé. Il y a quelques années, le Mission Responsibility through Investment Committee de l'Église presbytérienne, après avoir tenté d'entrer en contact avec Caterpillar³³, a dit que ses dirigeants lui avaient clairement fait comprendre que l'entreprise n'était en rien responsable de l'usage qui était fait de ses produits, même par ses concessionnaires (les seuls à être considérés comme des clients), qu'elle n'avait aucune procédure en place pour assurer le suivi ou le respect de ses attentes déclarées, même dans une situation où le recours à un tel matériel pour perpétrer des violations des droits de l'homme est historiquement attesté, et qu'elle ne souhaitait aucunement mettre au point une telle procédure. Ces mêmes dirigeants avaient en outre indiqué que, bien qu'étant une entreprise mondiale active dans la quasi-totalité des pays, sauf là où la loi en vigueur aux États-Unis l'interdit, Caterpillar n'était pas en mesure d'évaluer si ses actions étaient conformes aux conventions relatives aux droits de l'homme ou au droit international humanitaire³⁴.

42. Caterpillar a un code de conduite détaillé³⁵ et affirme que : « notre entreprise est en perpétuel changement, à l'image de la société. Mais s'il est une chose véritablement immuable, c'est bien notre engagement à défendre les valeurs éthiques les plus strictes. Notre réputation est l'une de nos plus grandes richesses. Il est de la responsabilité de chacun d'entre nous de la protéger au quotidien »³⁶. Dans l'énoncé de sa mission, il affirme en outre que « notre valeur se mesure à notre réaction à l'adversité. Nos décisions et les actes qui en découlent sont le reflet de ce que nous sommes ».

³¹ Documents-dds-ny.un.org/doc/UNDOC/GEN/G03/164/90/pdf/G0316490.pdf?OpenElement.

³² <http://www.ohchr.org/FR/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=12470&LangID=FR>.

³³ www.pcusa.org/media/uploads/mrti/pdfs/2012-mrti-report-9-9-11.pdf.

³⁴ www.pcusa.org/media/uploads/mrti/pdfs/2012-mrti-report-9-9-11.pdf, p. 5 et 6.

³⁵ www.caterpillar.com/cda/files/3028042/7/French_OVIA_v05.pdf.

³⁶ www.caterpillar.com/cda/files/3028042/7/French_OVIA_v05.pdf, p. 2.

2. Veolia Environnement

43. Veolia Environnement est une multinationale française active dans les secteurs de l'eau, de la gestion des déchets, des services énergétiques et du transport. L'entreprise a été créée sous le nom de Compagnie Générale des Eaux le 14 décembre 1853³⁷. Dans son Rapport d'activité et de développement durable 2011, Veolia fait état d'une croissance de 3,1 % de son chiffre d'affaires, ce qui en a porté le montant à 29,6 milliards d'euros. L'entreprise emploie 331 266 personnes dans le monde et est présente dans 77 pays³⁸.

44. Veolia détient 5 % du consortium CityPass par l'intermédiaire de sa filiale Connex Israel, chargée par Israël de gérer le projet de tramway mis en place à Jérusalem pour relier cette ville aux colonies israéliennes illégales. Veolia possède environ 80 % de Connex Jerusalem, l'entreprise qui exploite les services de tramway³⁹. En outre, par le biais de la filiale du groupe en Israël, Veolia Environmental Services Israël⁴⁰, elle possède et exploite la décharge Tovlan dans la vallée du Jourdain, en territoire palestinien occupé, qui accueille les déchets israéliens provenant d'Israël et de ses colonies. Veolia exploite également des services d'autocar reliant Modi'in à Jérusalem par la route 443 et desservant par voie de conséquence les colonies israéliennes de Giva'at Ze'ev et Mevo Horon.

45. En 2011, Veolia a publié son Cahier de la performance RSE (responsabilité sociale des entreprises) 2011, document dans lequel l'entreprise déclare sans ambiguïté : « Quel que soit le contexte géographique, le métier de Veolia Environnement doit s'exercer dans le respect des normes nationales et des recommandations des organisations internationales telles que l'OIT et l'OCDE, notamment pour ce qui concerne les principes fondamentaux, la prise en compte des diversités culturelles et la préservation de l'environnement. »⁴¹

46. Veolia est membre du Pacte mondial et met en avant les 10 principes qu'il renferme dans son Cahier de la performance RSE, notamment les deux qui ont trait aux droits de l'homme.

3. Group4Security

47. Group4Security (G4S) est une multinationale britannique qui offre des services de sécurité. G4S est spécialisé dans les processus opérationnels et les services aux entreprises là où les risques en matière de sûreté et de sécurité sont jugés élevés. L'entreprise, qui se targue d'avoir des compétences dans l'évaluation et la gestion de ce type de risque appliqué aux bâtiments, aux infrastructures, aux matériels, aux objets de valeur et aux personnes, est le plus gros employeur (avec plus de 657 000 salariés et des activités dans plus de 125 pays) coté à la Bourse de Londres. En 2011, l'entreprise a affiché un chiffre d'affaires de 7,5 milliards de livres sterling, dont 30 % réalisés sur les marchés des pays émergents.

48. G4S Israel (Hashmira), la filiale de G4S en Israël, fournit des ressources et du matériel aux postes de contrôle israéliens ainsi que des services de sécurité aux ³⁷ www.veolia.com/fr/groupe/historique/.

³⁸ www.veolia.com/veolia/ressources/documents/2/11872,RA_VEOLIA_2011_FR_72dpi.pdf, p. 5.

³⁹ Who Profits: Exposing the Israeli Occupation Industry (www.whoprofits.org/company/veolia-environnement).

⁴⁰ www.veolia-es.co.il/he/.

⁴¹ veolia.com/veolia/ressources/files/3/11911,Cahier-de-la-Performance-RSE-2011.pdf.

entreprises implantées dans les colonies, y compris du matériel et des agents de sécurité destinés aux magasins et aux supermarchés des colonies cisjordaniennes de Modi'in Illit, Ma'ale Adumim et Har Adar ainsi que des colonies de peuplement de Jérusalem-Est. De plus, elle a racheté Aminut Moked Artzi, compagnie de sécurité privée israélienne et a repris l'intégralité de ses activités dont la prestation de services de sécurité aux entreprises installées dans la zone industrielle de Barkan, près de la colonie d'Ariel⁴².

49. En 2002, Lars Nørby Johansen, alors administrateur⁴³, a déclaré que l'entreprise se retirait de Cisjordanie en expliquant que, dans certains cas, d'autres critères entraient en ligne de compte et que pour éviter de susciter le moindre doute quant au respect par Group 4 Falck [G4S]⁴⁴ des conventions internationales et des droits de l'homme, elle avait décidé de quitter la Cisjordanie. Hashmira a toutefois poursuivi ses activités dans le domaine de la sécurité en créant une autre entreprise appelée Shalhevet. Lars Nørby Johansen a ajouté que le partenariat de Hashmira et Group 4 Falck n'accepterait aucun nouveau contrat dans le domaine de la sécurité en Cisjordanie mais qu'en tant que partenaire à égalité dans Hashmira, l'entreprise devait bien admettre que les actionnaires israéliens avaient un fort sentiment de responsabilité vis-à-vis des citoyens israéliens, qu'elle était tenue par contrat de protéger⁴⁵.

50. En mars 2011, G4S a fait une déclaration publique à propos de ses activités dans les colonies israéliennes⁴⁶ déclarant notamment être parvenu à la conclusion que, pour garantir à l'avenir la conformité de ses pratiques commerciales avec sa propre politique en matière d'éthique des affaires, il s'emploierait à mettre fin à plusieurs contrats d'entretien et de réparation de matériel de sécurité destiné aux postes de contrôle, aux prisons et aux commissariats de Cisjordanie⁴⁷. L'entreprise concluait en ajoutant que plusieurs de ses contrats passés avec le secteur privé dans le domaine des services traditionnels de sécurité et de surveillance d'installations d'alarme n'étaient ni discriminatoires ni sujets à controverse et contribuaient en fait à la sûreté et à la sécurité des membres du public quelle que soit leur origine⁴⁸, et que, par conséquent, elle ne mettrait pas fin à toutes ses activités dans les colonies israéliennes.

51. G4S s'est affilié au Pacte mondial, ce qui a donné à son administrateur, Nick Buckles, l'occasion de déclarer que les principes énoncés dans le Pacte étant déjà très largement mis en œuvre dans les grandes orientations suivies par l'entreprise, « le moment était venu de s'engager publiquement en faveur de cette excellente initiative ». Il a ajouté que cela serait un stimulant supplémentaire pour G4S qui prendrait encore plus soin de mener toutes ses activités de par le monde dans le respect des droits de l'homme, de l'environnement et de l'éthique⁴⁹.

⁴² www.whoprofits.org/company/g4s-israel-hashmira.

⁴³ En 2005, Nick Buckles a succédé à Lars Nørby Johansen en tant qu'administrateur.

⁴⁴ En 2004, la fusion de Securicor avec Group 4 Falck (activités dans le domaine de la sécurité) a donné naissance à Group 4 Securicor, qui a commencé à être coté à la Bourse de Londres et à celle de Copenhague.

⁴⁵ <http://politiken.dk/erhverv/ECE54474/falck-forlader-vestbredden/> (en danois).

⁴⁶ <http://corporateoccupation.files.wordpress.com/2011/03/g4s-israel-statement-march-11-1-1.pdf>.

⁴⁷ Ibid.

⁴⁸ Ibid.

⁴⁹ www.g4s.com/en/Media%20Centre/News/2011/02/23/G4S%20joins%20the%20UN%20Global%20Compact%20for%20responsible%20business/.

4. Groupe Dexia

52. Le groupe Dexia est un groupe bancaire européen qui, en 2011, a exercé ses activités dans les domaines de la banque de détail et commerciale, de l'offre de prêts et de services au secteur public, de la gestion d'actifs et des services aux investisseurs. Dexia SA, sa société mère, est une société anonyme de droit belge dont l'action est cotée sur Euronext Bruxelles et Paris et à la Bourse de Luxembourg⁵⁰.

53. Dexia Israel Bank Limited est une société anonyme cotée à la Bourse de Tel-Aviv. Le groupe Dexia, qui détient 65 % de ses actions, en est l'actionnaire majoritaire. Dexia Israel Bank Limited a son siège social à Tel-Aviv et a régulièrement octroyé des prêts aux Israéliens vivant dans des colonies illégales⁵¹. Son administrateur, David Kapah, a indiqué quelles colonies du territoire palestinien occupé en ont bénéficié : il s'agit d'Alfei Menasheh, d'Elkana, de Beit-El, de Beit Aryeh, de Giva'at Ze'ev et de Kedumim, situées dans les régions de la vallée du Jourdain, d'Hébron et de la Samarie⁵². L'entreprise a consenti des prêts hypothécaires à un certain nombre de colonies. Grâce à ses contacts avec la loterie israélienne, Dexia Israel a mis à disposition des fonds pour la construction et l'expansion de colonies⁵³.

54. Le groupe Dexia est membre du Pacte mondial depuis février 2003. D'après le site Web du Pacte, il lui a été demandé, au début de l'année 2012, de présenter une communication sur ses progrès réalisés dans l'application des critères fixés par les membres du Pacte, ce qui aurait maintenant dû être fait il y a déjà plusieurs mois⁵⁴.

5. Ahava

55. Ahava⁵⁵ est une société israélienne de cosmétique spécialisée dans les produits de beauté haut de gamme élaborés à partir de ressources naturelles provenant de la mer Morte. Elle a été fondée en 1988 et son chiffre d'affaires annuel serait de 142 millions de dollars. Elle est détenue à 37 % par la colonie de Kibboutz Mitzpe Shalem, à 37 % par Hamashbir Holdings⁵⁶, à 18,5 % par Shamrock Holdings⁵⁷ et à 7,5 % par la colonie de Kibboutz Kalia. Son usine et son centre d'accueil des visiteurs se trouvent à Kibboutz Mitzpe Shalem, colonie installée dans la vallée du Jourdain. Ahava exporte ses produits dans 32 pays et une région administrative spéciale⁵⁸.

⁵⁰ www.dexia.com/FR/le_groupe/profil/Pages/default.aspx.

⁵¹ www.knesset.gov.il/mmm/data/pdf/m01630.pdf (en hébreu).

⁵² www.knesset.gov.il/protocols/data/rtf/ksafim/2007-06-19-02.rtf (en hébreu).

⁵³ www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/WhoProfits-IsraeliBanks2010.pdf.

⁵⁴ www.unglobalcompact.org/Languages/french/communication_progres.html.

⁵⁵ www.ahava.co.il/ et www.ahava.com/.

⁵⁶ www.whoprofits.org/company/hamashbir-holdings.

⁵⁷ Société d'investissements établie aux États-Unis, qui vaut plusieurs millions de dollars; www.shamrock.com/.

⁵⁸ Afrique du Sud, Albanie, Allemagne, Australie, Autriche, Azerbaïdjan, Belgique, Canada, Croatie, Chypre, Estonie, États-Unis d'Amérique, Finlande, Fédération de Russie, France, Géorgie, Grèce, Hongrie, Italie, Japon, Kirghizistan, Lituanie, Maurice, Norvège, Pays-Bas, Philippines, République tchèque, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Singapour, Slovaquie, Suisse, Ukraine et Hong Kong (Chine).

56. Ahava est critiquée par des gouvernements, des organisations non gouvernementales et des acteurs de la société civile, qui accusent les colonies propriétaires de l'entreprise d'exploiter les ressources naturelles palestiniennes et d'utiliser les bénéfices tirés de leur activité commerciale pour se financer et se maintenir sur place. La société Ahava est aussi accusée de publicité mensongère et de tromperie puisque ses produits portent la mention « produit d'Israël » alors qu'ils proviennent en réalité du territoire palestinien occupé. Plusieurs pays européens commencent à prendre des mesures contre Ahava. Les Gouvernements néerlandais⁵⁹ et britannique⁶⁰ ont ouvert des enquêtes sur l'étiquetage trompeur des produits Ahava. Des militants des droits de l'homme ont engagé une action en justice contre la société française Séphora⁶¹, qui commercialise les produits Ahava.

57. Le rapport d'avril 2012 de la Coalition des femmes pour la paix intitulé « Ahava : retracer la filière commerciale des produits des colonies de peuplement »⁶² examine la chaîne logistique de ces produits et explique comment des ressources naturelles palestiniennes sont exploitées au profit de colons israéliens.

6. Groupe Volvo

58. Le groupe Volvo⁶³ est l'un des principaux constructeurs mondiaux de camions, d'autocars, d'engins de chantier, de systèmes de propulsion pour la marine et l'industrie et de pièces pour l'aéronautique. Il propose aussi des services de financement et autres. Il emploie environ 100 000 personnes, a des usines dans 20 pays et est présent sur plus de 190 marchés. En 2011, les ventes du Groupe ont progressé de 17 %, pour s'établir à 310 367 millions de couronnes suédoises contre 264 749 millions en 2010.

59. Du matériel et des engins Volvo sont utilisés pour démolir des maisons palestiniennes et construire le mur et les colonies israéliennes. Volvo détient en outre 27 % des parts de la société israélienne Merkavim⁶⁴, qui fabrique des autocars servant à transporter des prisonniers politiques palestiniens du territoire palestinien occupé aux prisons israéliennes. Les 73 % de parts de Merkavim restants sont détenus par le concessionnaire exclusif de Volvo en Israël, Mayer's Cars and Trucks.

60. En juillet 2007, Mårten Wikforss, Vice-Président de Volvo chargé des relations médias et de la communication, a répondu⁶⁵ comme suit aux critiques formulées au sujet de la démolition d'une maison palestinienne à Beit Hanina (Jérusalem-Est)⁶⁶ : « Bien entendu, nous déplorons et regrettons que nos engins soient utilisés à des fins de destruction. Nous n'approuvons pas ces actes, mais nous n'avons aucune prise sur l'utilisation de nos produits hormis notre volonté de promouvoir dans notre activité commerciale un code de bonne conduite qui condamne les comportements contraires à l'éthique. Une pelleuse peut servir aussi bien à construire une maison

⁵⁹ www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-3806790,00.html.

⁶⁰ www.westendextra.com/news/2010/aug/pro-palestinian-protesters-claim-covent-garden-storeahava-are-mislabelling-products.

⁶¹ www.sephora.com/.

⁶² www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/ahava_report_final.pdf.

⁶³ www.volvogroup.com/group/global/en-gb/Pages/group_home.aspx.

⁶⁴ www.whoprofits.org/company/merkavim-transportation-technologies.

⁶⁵ www.business-humanrights.org/Links/Repository/553890.

⁶⁶ <http://electronicintifada.net/content/volvo-symbol-safety-or-human-rights-abuses/7040>.

qu'à la détruire⁶⁷ [...] Volvo ne peut absolument pas contrôler l'utilisation finale de ses engins [...] exception faite seulement quand l'acheteur est un État visé par des sanctions commerciales impératives décidées par des organisations gouvernementales internationales [...]. Comme les autres multinationales, nous comptons sur les gouvernements et certaines organisations gouvernementales internationales pour apprécier la situation. »

61. Volvo produit des rapports d'évaluation de ses activités commerciales au regard des principes de responsabilité économique, sociale et environnementale. Son code de conduite insiste sur trois domaines jugés particulièrement importants : les questions sociales et les droits de l'homme, le respect de l'environnement et l'éthique des affaires. L'entreprise est membre du Groupe du Pacte mondial depuis 2001 et déclare vouloir s'engager « à respecter et intégrer 10 principes concernant les droits de l'homme, les conditions de travail et l'environnement dans ses activités, à les promouvoir et à encourager d'autres entreprises à soutenir le Pacte mondial »⁶⁸.

7. Groupe Riwal Holding

62. Le groupe Riwal Holding, fondé en 1968 et établi aux Pays-Bas, est spécialisé dans la location internationale de nacelles élévatrices. Il emploie 800 personnes et est présent dans 16 pays. C'est l'une des principales entreprises européennes de location et de vente de flèches télescopiques, de plates-formes ciseaux, de chariots télescopiques, de nacelles élévatrices et autre matériel d'accès. Le groupe a des activités et des coentreprises en Europe, en Amérique du Sud, au Moyen-Orient et en Asie centrale.

63. En mars 2010, l'ONG palestinienne des droits de l'homme Al-Haq⁶⁹ a engagé une action pénale contre les autorités néerlandaises, accusant Riwal d'être complice de crimes de guerre et de crimes contre l'humanité en raison de l'utilisation de son matériel et de ses activités liées à la construction du mur et aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes⁷⁰. L'ONG United Civilians for Peace⁷¹ a aussi mené une enquête sur les activités de Riwal et lui a demandé instamment de cesser toutes activités dans le territoire palestinien occupé. En octobre 2010, à la suite de ces accusations, la brigade nationale néerlandaise de lutte contre la criminalité a perquisitionné les bureaux de Riwal⁷². Riwal a également été critiquée par des parlementaires néerlandais et surtout par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'époque, qui a indiqué que la participation d'une entreprise néerlandaise à la construction du mur n'était pas souhaitable⁷³.

⁶⁷ www.reports-and-materials.org/Volvo-response-to-Israel-OT-article-6-Jul-2007.doc (intégralité de la déclaration).

⁶⁸ www.volvogroup.com/group/global/en-gb/responsibility/Pages/responsibility.aspx.

⁶⁹ www.alhaq.org/.

⁷⁰ www.alhaq.org/images/stories/PDF/accountability-files/Complaint%20-%20English.pdf.

⁷¹ www.unitedcivilians.nl/.

⁷² <http://electronicintifada.net/content/dutch-company-raided-over-involvement-occupation/9076>.

⁷³ www.haaretz.com/news/dutch-gov-t-warns-company-to-stop-work-on-w-bank-fence-1.225134.

8. Elbit Systems

64. Elbit Systems⁷⁴ est une société israélienne spécialisée dans l'électronique de défense. Ses activités portent sur les systèmes aérospatial, terrestre et naval (commandes, contrôle, communications, ordinateurs et suivi et reconnaissance d'informations), les systèmes d'avion sans pilote, l'électro-optique avancée, les systèmes d'électro-optique spatiale, les systèmes d'alerte aéroportés, la surveillance électronique des signaux, la liaison télématique et les systèmes de communication et radio militaires. En 2010, Elbit employait 12 317 personnes dans le monde et son chiffre d'affaires annuel s'élevait à 2 670 millions de dollars⁷⁵.

65. Elbit est critiquée non seulement parce qu'elle vend des drones et autres armes au Gouvernement israélien⁷⁶, mais aussi parce qu'elle a mis au point le dispositif de surveillance électronique du mur⁷⁷ et qu'elle a fourni du matériel de surveillance utilisé dans des colonies israéliennes⁷⁸. En 2009, le Ministère norvégien de la défense⁷⁹ a exclu Elbit du fonds de pension norvégien, sur la recommandation du Conseil d'éthique du Gouvernement norvégien⁸⁰. Cette recommandation était fondée sur l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice relatif au mur. Kristin Halvorsen, Ministre norvégienne des finances, a déclaré que la Norvège ne souhaitait pas « financer des entreprises qui contribuent si directement aux violations du droit international humanitaire ». En 2010, la Deutsche Bank et les fonds de pension suédois AP-funds⁸¹ ont vendu toutes les parts d'Elbit Systems⁸² qu'ils détenaient, à l'exemple du Ministère norvégien de la défense⁸³.

66. Dans son rapport intégral de responsabilité sociale, Elbit Systems affirme « veiller à être une entreprise citoyenne et à défendre la responsabilité sociale et environnementale »⁸⁴.

9. Hewlett Packard

67. Hewlett Packard (HP)⁸⁵ est le plus gros fournisseur mondial de matériel, logiciels et services informatiques⁸⁶. HP est une société d'informatique américaine dont le siège social se trouve en Californie⁸⁷. En 2011, l'entreprise affichait un chiffre d'affaires net de 127 245 millions de dollars et employait environ 349 600 ⁷⁴ www.elbitsystems.com/elbitmain/default.asp.

⁷⁵ www.media.corporate-ir.net/media_files/IROL/61/61849/20_F.pdf, p. 11.

⁷⁶ www.grassrootsonline.org/; www.bdsmovement.net/; www.amnesty.org.uk/news_details.asp?NewsID=18004.

⁷⁷ www.bdsmovement.net/files/2011/08/STW-research-green-paper-consultation.pdf.

⁷⁸ www.globalexchange.org/economicactivism/elbit/why; <http://wedivest.org/learn-more/elbit/>; www.bdsmovement.net/files/2011/08/STW-research-green-paper-consultation.pdf; www.stophthewall.org/divest-elbit.

⁷⁹ www.regjeringen.no/en/dep/fin/press-center/Press-releases/2009/supplier-of-surveillance-equipment-for-t.html?id=575444.

⁸⁰ www.regjeringen.no/pages/2236685/Elbit_engelsk.pdf.

⁸¹ www.stophthewall.org/divest-elbit.

⁸² www.reuters.com/article/2010/05/30/us-deutsche-elbit-idUSTRE64T10W20100530.

⁸³ www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/137762#.UCOBVlaTspo.

⁸⁴ www.elbitsystems.com/elbitmain/pages/FullReport.asp.

⁸⁵ www8.hp.com/us/en/home.html.

⁸⁶ Rapport annuel 2011, p. 2 : <http://h30261.www3.hp.com/phoenix.zhtml?c=71087&p=irol-reportsAnnual>.

⁸⁷ www8.hp.com/us/en/hp-information/about-hp/headquarters.html.

personnes dans le monde⁸⁸. Elle compte plus d'un milliard de clients dans 170 pays et s'est classée en cinquième position dans la liste Fortune 500 en 2012⁸⁹.

68. HP a signé des contrats avec les Ministères israéliens de la défense et de l'intérieur pour la fourniture du système de surveillance et d'identification biométrique⁹⁰ dit de Bâle, du système de cartes d'identité israélienne (cartes d'identité biométriques introduites en vertu de la loi sur les fichiers biométriques) mis en place dans les colonies de peuplement et aux postes de contrôle⁹¹, et est prestataire de services et de technologies pour l'armée israélienne. Le système de Bâle est un système de contrôle automatisé des accès par lecture biométrique⁹².

69. On a accusé les systèmes technologiques fournis par HP de donner lieu à des violations des droits de l'homme, en restreignant par exemple la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens. Des ONG comme Who Profits⁹³ se sont renseignées en détail sur les produits fournis par HP au Gouvernement israélien et sur leur rôle dans les violations commises, et le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires⁹⁴ a analysé les répercussions humanitaires de la construction du mur. HP a également été critiqué pour avoir fourni des services de sécurité et des technologies aux colonies de Modi'in Illit et Ariel.

70. En 2010, HP a pourtant été désigné par l'Ethisphere Institute comme l'une des sociétés d'informatique les plus éthiques au monde⁹⁵. La même année, l'entreprise a été numéro deux du « classement vert » des 500 entreprises américaines et 100 multinationales les plus écologiques établi par *Newsweek*⁹⁶. HP participe activement au Pacte mondial depuis 2002⁹⁷.

71. HP indique dans sa déclaration de responsabilité sociale intitulée « Citoyenneté mondiale »⁹⁸ que « chaque individu doit se voir accorder un certain nombre de droits fondamentaux, de libertés et de normes de traitement. Respecter ces droits humains est au cœur des valeurs partagées de HP et fait partie intégrante de notre manière de travailler »⁹⁹. Dans le cadre de sa « politique mondiale pour les droits de l'homme »¹⁰⁰, l'entreprise se dit déterminée à intégrer le respect des droits de l'homme dans ses activités et à « respecter les lois et règlements et les normes internationales ».

10. Mehadrin

72. Mehadrin est l'un des géants israéliens de l'agro-industrie. L'entreprise produit des agrumes, des fruits et des légumes qu'elle exporte dans le monde entier. Elle détient 4 184 hectares de vergers et utilise 11 948 autres hectares appartenant à des ⁸⁸ Rapport annuel 2011, p. 23 (en anglais).

⁸⁹ www8.hp.com/us/en/hp-information/facts.html.

⁹⁰ www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/hp_report_final_for_web.pdf.

⁹¹ <http://abna.ir/data.asp?lang=3&Id=331748>.

⁹² www.whoprofits.org/company/hewlett-packard-hp.

⁹³ www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/hp_report_final_for_web.pdf.

⁹⁴ www.ochaopt.org/documents/Pages1-23_Jerusalem_30July2007.pdf.

⁹⁵ <http://ethisphere.com/past-wme-honorees/wme2010/>.

⁹⁶ www.hp.com/hpinfo/newsroom/hp360_wv.pdf.

⁹⁷ www.unglobalcompact.org/participant/4833-Hewlett-Packard-Company.

⁹⁸ www.hp.com/hpinfo/globalcitizenship/.

⁹⁹ www.hp.com/hpinfo/globalcitizenship/society/ethics.html.

¹⁰⁰ www.hp.com/hpinfo/globalcitizenship/humanrights.html.

clients extérieurs¹⁰¹. Elle possède 50 % de STM Agricultural Export Limited (exportation de légumes) et 50 % de Mirian Shoham (exportation de mangues). Elle a également racheté Agrexco, l'un des principaux exportateurs vers l'Europe. Le groupe Mehadrin a des succursales en France, aux Pays-Bas, au Royaume-Uni et en Suède.

73. Alors qu'ils proviennent dans leur grande majorité de colonies de peuplement implantées dans le territoire palestinien occupé, les produits Mehadrin sont étiquetés « origine Israël ». De plus, Mehadrin participe à l'application des mesures discriminatoires imposées dans le domaine de l'eau par Israël, qui fournit des millions de mètres cubes d'eau aux agriculteurs israéliens mais refuse d'en donner des quantités suffisantes aux Palestiniens¹⁰².

74. La société Mehadrin déclare qu'elle entend par qualité « les pratiques écoresponsables, les critères rigoureux d'assurance qualité, la responsabilité sociale de l'entreprise et l'amélioration permanente par la recherche et l'innovation »¹⁰³ et que « la transparence est pour Mehadrin une valeur de base qu'elle applique en mettant ses connaissances et ses données à la libre disposition de ses clients »¹⁰⁴.

11. Motorola Solutions Inc.

75. Motorola Solutions Inc. est une multinationale américaine d'électronique et de télécommunication. Elle compte plus de 23 000 employés dans 65 pays, vend ses produits et services dans 100 pays et a réalisé un chiffre d'affaires de 2,1 milliards de dollars au deuxième trimestre 2012¹⁰⁵.

76. Motorola Solutions Israël, première filiale de Motorola à l'extérieur des États-Unis, a engrangé au total 505 millions de dollars en 2010. La société se spécialise dans « la commercialisation et la vente de solutions et de systèmes de communication pour les forces armées, les services de sécurité, les services d'urgence et les forces de l'ordre, les gouvernements, les établissements publics et les entités commerciales privées »¹⁰⁶.

77. Motorola Israël fournit des systèmes de surveillance aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes et aux postes de contrôle établis le long du mur. Il semblerait que Motorola Solutions Inc. a livré en 2005¹⁰⁷ des radars de détection aux colonies israéliennes d'Hébron, Karnei Tzur et Bracha. Le système de radars de détection MotoEagle Surveillance et un système de communication par téléphone cellulaire baptisé Mountain Rose auraient été fournis à des colonies israéliennes. S'ils aident les colonies de peuplement, ces systèmes de sécurité limitent pourtant un peu plus la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens dans leur territoire.

78. Motorola Solutions Inc. a une politique de responsabilité d'entreprise très détaillée¹⁰⁸, et une section de son rapport annuel de responsabilité sociale pour 2011, consacrée aux droits de l'homme, précise : « notre politique en matière de ¹⁰¹ www.whoprofits.org/content/mehadrin-group-update.

¹⁰² www.blueplanetproject.net/documents/RTW/RTW-Palestine-1.pdf.

¹⁰³ www.mehadrin.co.il/docs/P124/.

¹⁰⁴ www.mehadrin.co.il/docs/P200/.

¹⁰⁵ <http://investing.businessweek.com/research/stocks/earnings/earnings.asp?ticker=99186>.

¹⁰⁶ http://duns100.dunb.co.il/ts.cgi?tsscript=comp_eng&duns=600020978.

¹⁰⁷ www.whoprofits.org/company/motorola-solutions-israel.

¹⁰⁸ <http://responsibility.motorolasolutions.com/>.

droits de l'homme est fondée depuis toujours sur notre attachement sans faille aux valeurs d'intégrité et de respect constant de la personne, et elle cadre avec les préceptes fondamentaux des grandes conventions de l'Organisation internationale du Travail et de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme »¹⁰⁹. L'entreprise insiste par ailleurs sur sa volonté de travailler avec la communauté des ONG, qualifiée de « partie prenante essentielle », et d'exercer son devoir de diligence.

12. Mul-T-Lock/Assa Abloy

79. Mul-T-Lock est une entreprise israélienne créée en 1973¹¹⁰. En 2000, elle a été rachetée par la société suédoise Assa Abloy, qui est membre du Pacte mondial. Mul-T-Lock se décrit comme « un leader mondial dans la conception, la fabrication, la commercialisation et la distribution de solutions de haute sécurité pour les applications institutionnelles, commerciales, industrielles, résidentielles et automobiles ».

80. Mul-T-Lock fabrique des serrures et des produits de sécurité. Son usine se trouve dans la zone industrielle de Barkan, située dans la colonie israélienne d'Ariel¹¹¹.

81. Dans un rapport conjoint, l'Église de Suède et les ONG Diakonia et SwedWatch ont signalé quelques activités d'Assa Abloy et ont accusé l'entreprise d'être complice du torpillage du processus de paix en raison de son investissement massif dans son usine, construite sur des terres palestiniennes confisquées.

82. Assa Abloy a révisé son code de conduite en janvier 2007 en y intégrant des considérations sur la liberté d'association, la discrimination, les pratiques environnementales, la santé et la sécurité. La version révisée du Code s'appuie sur la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et les conventions des Nations Unies pertinentes, la Déclaration de principes tripartite sur les entreprises multinationales et la politique sociale adoptée par l'OIT, les Principes directeurs de l'OCDE à l'intention des entreprises multinationales, le Pacte mondial et la norme ISO 14001. Assa Abloy a une politique de code de conduite depuis 2004 et est devenue membre du Pacte mondial en mai 2008.

83. Assa Abloy relève que certaines circonstances peuvent appeler des prescriptions en matière de droits de l'homme autres que celles qui figurent dans le Code : « Même si de telles circonstances sont très peu courantes, Assa Abloy n'ignore pas qu'elles ont potentiellement des répercussions sur les droits de l'homme et agit en fonction du droit international ou des lois locales applicables. Si les textes officiels font défaut, l'entreprise cherchera d'autres sources afin de choisir la meilleure approche compte tenu des circonstances en question. »¹¹².

¹⁰⁹ Ibid., p. 11.

¹¹⁰ www.mul-t-lock.com/87.html.

¹¹¹ www.diakonia.se/documents/public/IN_FOCUS/Israel_Palestine/Report_Illegal_Ground/Report_Mul-T-lock_081021.pdf.

¹¹² Assa Abloy Code of Conduct, sect. 3.9; www.diakonia.se/documents/public/IN_FOCUS/Israel_Palestine/Report_Illegal_Ground/Report_Mul-T-lock_081021.pdf.

13. Cemex

84. La société mexicaine Cemex¹¹³ est un leader mondial de l'industrie des matériaux de construction. Elle fabrique, distribue et vend du ciment, du béton, des agrégats et autres matériaux. Son chiffre d'affaires annuel est de 15,1 milliards de dollars. Elle emploie 44 104 personnes dans le monde¹¹⁴.

85. Cemex est propriétaire de Readymix Industries. Cette entreprise israélienne, qui possède des usines en Cisjordanie (Mevo Horon et zones industrielles d'Atarot et Mishor Edomim)¹¹⁵, a fourni des éléments pour construire les habitations des colonies de peuplement¹¹⁶. Elle a également fourni du béton à Israël pour la construction du mur et des postes de contrôle militaires en Cisjordanie.

86. À travers ReadyMix Industries, Cemex est également propriétaire à 50 % de la carrière de la colonie israélienne de Yatir, où l'industrie israélienne des matériaux de construction extrait et exploite les ressources naturelles palestiniennes. En 2009, l'ONG Yesh Din a saisi la Haute Cour israélienne pour dénoncer ce qu'elle a appelé « l'exploitation coloniale des terres » et « le pillage » et demander à la Cour d'intervenir. Les juges ont décidé en décembre 2011 de ne pas suspendre les activités étant donné qu'elles emploient des Palestiniens. Ils ont toutefois recommandé qu'Israël s'abstienne de mettre de nouvelles carrières en exploitation en Cisjordanie¹¹⁷.

87. Le Code de déontologie de Cemex¹¹⁸ stipule ce qui suit : « Nous devons nous employer à parfaire notre réputation d'entreprise responsable et durable soucieuse d'attirer et de fidéliser ses employés, ses consommateurs, ses fournisseurs et ses investisseurs, et entretenir de bonnes relations avec les communautés au sein desquelles nous conduisons notre activité. »

VI. Conclusion

88. L'incapacité de mettre fin à 45 ans d'occupation accentue l'obligation faite à la communauté internationale de défendre les droits du peuple palestinien, privé de facto de la protection de l'état de droit. Dans ce contexte, le Rapporteur spécial rappelle que, dès 1982¹¹⁹, l'Assemblée générale a demandé aux États Membres d'appliquer des sanctions économiques contre l'État d'Israël en raison de ses activités de colonisation illégales.

89. Les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme exigent que toutes les entreprises respectent les droits de l'homme, ce qui signifie en premier lieu qu'elles doivent s'abstenir de porter atteinte aux droits humains d'autrui et lutter contre les violations de ces droits. Le Rapporteur spécial demande aux États ainsi qu'aux entreprises de veiller à l'application pleine et entière des ¹¹³ Ibid.

¹¹⁴ www.cemex.com/AboutUs/CompanyProfile.aspx.

¹¹⁵ www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/cemex_corporate_watch_may_2011.pdf.

¹¹⁶ www.whoprofits.org/company/cemex.

¹¹⁷ www.whoprofits.org/content/israeli-high-court-justice-legalizes-exploitation-natural-resources-opt.

¹¹⁸ www.cemex.com/AboutUs/files/HighlightsCoE.pdf.

¹¹⁹ Résolution ES-9/1 (5 février 1982); voir également résolution 38/180 A (19 décembre 1983).

Principes directeurs dans le cadre de leurs opérations industrielles et commerciales liées aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

90. Le Rapporteur spécial réitère que les entreprises mentionnées dans le présent rapport ne représentent qu'une petite fraction des nombreuses sociétés qui traitent avec les colonies israéliennes implantées dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Il est déterminé à chercher des éclaircissements auprès des entreprises citées dans son rapport et à continuer de suivre leurs activités. Parallèlement, il réunira d'autres informations et fera rapport sur la participation d'entreprises aux activités de colonisation israéliennes.

91. Le Rapporteur spécial considère en outre que toutes les entreprises qui opèrent dans les colonies de peuplement israéliennes ou traitent avec elles d'une manière ou d'une autre devraient être boycottées jusqu'à ce que leurs activités soient pleinement conformes aux normes et pratiques du droit international humanitaire. À cet égard, les efforts faits par la société civile pour poursuivre l'application des Principes directeurs établissent un espace particulier entre mesure volontaire et mesure obligatoire dans la lutte engagée pour protéger les personnes vulnérables aux violations des droits de l'homme.

VII. Recommandations

92. Le Rapporteur spécial demande au Gouvernement israélien de s'abstenir d'implanter ses populations dans le territoire palestinien occupé, de commencer à démanteler ses colonies de peuplement et de réinstaller les citoyens israéliens dans leur propre territoire, à savoir du côté israélien de la Ligne verte, conformément au droit international, à de nombreuses résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale et à l'avis consultatif rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice au sujet du mur.

93. Le Rapporteur spécial demande au Gouvernement israélien d'informer publiquement toutes les entreprises opérant dans ses colonies de peuplement ou traitant avec elles des ramifications juridiques internationales de leurs opérations, y compris en termes de responsabilité civile dans des pays tiers.

94. Le Rapporteur spécial demande au Gouvernement israélien de procéder immédiatement à l'indemnisation du peuple palestinien – par l'octroi de terres, des réparations financières ou autres moyens – en consultant pleinement et dans la transparence les Palestiniens lésés, en dédommagement de toutes les activités liées à son entreprise de colonisation depuis 1967, et de s'assurer également que les terres utilisées par les entreprises sont restituées dans leur état antérieur, à moins qu'elles aient été améliorées.

95. Le Rapporteur spécial demande aux entreprises mentionnées dans le présent rapport de prendre de toute urgence et dans la transparence les mesures qui s'imposent pour appliquer les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme, le Pacte mondial, le droit international et les normes existantes en ce qui concerne leurs activités ayant un lien avec le Gouvernement d'Israël, ses colonies de peuplement et le mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est. Elles devraient pour commencer suspendre immédiatement toutes leurs opérations, y compris la fourniture de produits et services, qui contribuent à la création et au maintien des colonies de peuplement israéliennes.

96. Le Rapporteur spécial demande aux entreprises mentionnées dans le présent rapport qui ont déjà souscrit au Pacte mondial de se familiariser pleinement avec les principes d'intégrité qui y figurent, notamment en cas d'allégations d'utilisation abusive systématique ou flagrante¹²⁰. Les plans d'entreprise pour le retrait du territoire palestinien occupé devraient identifier et traiter tout effet adverse sur les droits de l'homme découlant de ces départs et de la fin de l'activité.

97. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à toutes les entreprises mentionnées dans son rapport et qui maintiennent une activité dans le territoire palestinien occupé de renforcer leur devoir de diligence conformément aux Principes directeurs et au droit international humanitaire. Elles devraient être à même de prouver qu'elles font des efforts pour atténuer tout effet adverse et être préparées à assumer toute conséquence – en termes réputationnels, financiers ou juridiques – de la poursuite de leurs opérations.

98. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à la société civile d'engager activement des actions judiciaires et politiques à l'encontre des entreprises en infraction, si nécessaire en s'adressant aux institutions judiciaires et politiques nationales, surtout si des activités de colonisation se prêtent à des allégations de crimes de guerre et de crimes contre l'humanité.

99. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à la société civile de mener dans le cadre national de vigoureuses campagnes de boycottage, de désinvestissement et de sanctions à l'encontre des entreprises mentionnées dans le présent rapport, jusqu'à ce qu'elles alignent leurs politiques et leurs pratiques sur les normes et le droit internationaux, ainsi que sur le Pacte mondial.

100. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à la société civile de mutualiser ses ressources et ses informations, y compris en créant des réseaux de collaboration transnationaux et par d'autres initiatives, de manière à promouvoir la transparence et la responsabilité des entreprises ayant des liens avec le programme de colonisation israélien.

101. Le Rapporteur spécial demande aux membres de la communauté internationale d'enquêter dans la transparence sur les activités des entreprises enregistrées dans leurs pays respectifs, notamment celles qui sont mentionnées dans le présent rapport et qui font commerce avec les colonies de peuplement israéliennes, et de veiller à l'indemnisation appropriée des Palestiniens lésés.

102. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à la communauté internationale d'envisager de solliciter l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice au sujet de la responsabilité des entreprises impliquées dans les activités économiques des colonies de peuplement établies en violation de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

103. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à la communauté internationale d'exhorter l'Assemblée générale à produire un document articulant l'application des Principes directeurs du Pacte mondial avec le droit international des droits de l'homme dans les situations d'occupation hostile, en prêtant attention aux obligations morales, politiques et juridiques associées aux activités industrielles et commerciales dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

¹²⁰ www.unglobalcompact.org/AboutTheGC/IntegrityMeasures/index.html.

Annexe I

Terres allouées aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes, janvier 2012

Source : Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires.

Annexe IIConséquences humanitaires des politiques de colonisation israéliennes, janvier 2012*Les faits en bref

- Depuis 1967, Israël a établi environ 150 colonies (résidentielles et autres) en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, auxquelles viennent s'ajouter une centaine d'implantations sauvages créées par des colons sans autorisation officielle.
- Il y aurait environ 500 000 colons; leur nombre a augmenté en moyenne de 5,3 % par an (sauf à Jérusalem-Est) dans la dernière décennie, contre 1,8 % pour l'ensemble de la population israélienne (Bureau central des statistiques israélien).
- Alors que les colonies de peuplement fermées par des clôtures ou gardées par des patrouilles couvrent 3 % de la Cisjordanie, 43 % du territoire cisjordanien est hors limite pour les Palestiniens parce qu'il est alloué au conseil local ou régional des colonies.
- Pratiquement toutes les terres considérées par Israël comme des terres publiques ou « terres de l'État » (27 % de la superficie de la Cisjordanie) ont été allouées aux colonies de peuplement et non pas au profit de la population locale (B'Tselem).
- Environ un tiers des terres situées en bordure des colonies sont des propriétés privées appartenant à des Palestiniens, selon le registre foncier officiel d'Israël (La paix maintenant).
- Plus de 60 % des constructions appartenant à des Palestiniens démolies en 2011 pour défaut de permis étaient situées dans les zones allouées aux colonies.
- En 2011, cinq Palestiniens (dont deux enfants) ont été tués et plus d'un millier ont été blessés (près d'un cinquième étaient des enfants) par des colons ou des agents de sécurité israéliens lors d'incidents directement ou indirectement liés aux colonies de peuplement, y compris dans des manifestations.
- Plus de 90 % des enquêtes de la police israélienne au sujet des violences commises par les colons dans les six dernières années (2005-2010) ont été closes sans mise en examen (Yesh Din).
- Plus de 500 postes de contrôle intérieurs, barrages routiers et autres obstacles physiques entravent la circulation des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie, en particulier l'accès des enfants aux écoles; ils ont surtout pour fonctions de protéger les colons et de faciliter leurs déplacements, notamment les allers et retours entre les colonies et Israël.

– L'emplacement des colonies a été la considération majeure ayant dicté la décision de dévier le tracé du mur par rapport à la Ligne verte; une fois que la déviation sera faite, environ 80 % des colons vivront dans des colonies situées du côté ouest (israélien) du mur.

Source : Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
10 septembre 2013
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-huitième session

Point 69 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme
et rapports des rapporteurs
et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre aux membres de l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Richard Falk, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/68/150.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés par Israël depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport développe les arguments exposés dans le précédent rapport du Rapporteur spécial à la soixante-septième session de l'Assemblée générale, qui mettait l'accent sur les entreprises qui réalisent des gains grâce aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes et décrivait l'implication de 13 entreprises dans les activités menées par Israël dans le Territoire palestinien occupé en se référant aux Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme. Il fixe les contours d'un modèle d'analyse juridique en étudiant les cas de deux entreprises représentatives choisies pour les façons particulières dont leurs activités peuvent les impliquer dans des infractions internationales. Le rapport aborde aussi d'autres questions, notamment la question urgente des droits relatifs à l'eau et à l'assainissement.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	3
II. Méthodologie	6
III. Cadres normatifs	7
A. Droit international humanitaire	7
B. Droit international des droits de l'homme	9
C. Droit pénal international	10
D. Conclusions relatives à un cadre normatif	14
IV. Études de cas	14
A. Groupe Dexia	15
B. Re/Max International	20
C. Conclusions sur les études de cas	23
V. Eau et assainissement en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza	23
VI. Recommandations	26

I. Introduction

1. Comme pour les précédents rapports que le Rapporteur spécial a établis en cette qualité, il n'a pas pu bénéficier de la coopération du Gouvernement israélien, qui notamment ne l'a pas autorisé à entrer sur le territoire de l'État de Palestine. Il a bien pu tirer parti d'une mission effectuée à Gaza en décembre 2012, qui a été facilitée par le Gouvernement égyptien d'alors qui lui a fait emprunter le point de passage de Rafah. Cette visite a été extrêmement utile en ce sens qu'elle a permis d'avoir un accès direct à la population vivant sous occupation. En effet, rien ne remplace ce type de contact direct sur le terrain pour évaluer les allégations faisant état de violations des droits de l'homme commises par Israël en qualité de Puissance occupante. Ce rapport à l'Assemblée générale étant le dernier qu'il établit durant son mandat, le Rapporteur spécial souhaite souligner qu'il importe de ne pas laisser cette tendance à ne pas coopérer devenir la norme, car cela entraverait les efforts déployés par les prochains rapporteurs spéciaux pour enquêter le plus efficacement possible sur les prétentions relatives à la situation des droits de l'homme. J'ai été déçu par le fait que l'Organisation des Nations Unies n'ait pas fait plus pour obtenir des États Membres qu'ils s'acquittent de l'obligation qui leur incombe en vertu du droit international de coopérer avec l'Organisation.

2. Le mandat du Rapporteur spécial a été institué en 1993 lorsqu'il était encore approprié de désigner la Cisjordanie, Jérusalem-Est et la bande de Gaza par l'expression « territoires occupés ». Continuer d'utiliser cette expression à l'heure actuelle semble de nature à induire en erreur. Le 29 novembre 2012, la présence palestinienne au sein du système des Nations Unies a été élevée par la résolution 67/19 au statut d'État observateur non membre. Il semble donc plus approprié en parlant des territoires administrés par Israël d'utiliser le terme « Palestine » tout en réaffirmant les responsabilités qui continuent d'incomber à Israël en tant que Puissance occupante en vertu du droit international humanitaire, en particulier la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève). Outre cette question de statut, il y a des questions de fond. Le processus cumulatif de la construction et de l'expansion de colonies de peuplement illégales a atteint le point où une annexion rampante en partie irréversible s'est produite, qui doit être reconnue comme telle et qui sape le postulat central d'« occupation militaire » constituant une réalité temporaire. Cette modification des territoires occupés avec le temps a été reconnue de façon perverse, voire validée à titre provisoire, par la présupposition largement partagée selon laquelle les blocs de colonies israéliens ne seront pas démantelés même si un accord de paix est conclu entre l'Autorité palestinienne et Israël.

3. Il est plus important que jamais d'insister sur les responsabilités qui incombent à Israël en qualité de Puissance occupante en vertu du droit international. Les Conventions de Genève et les Protocoles facultatifs I et II, ainsi qu'un grand nombre d'instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme, sont indispensables pour identifier et évaluer les diverses allégations faisant état de pratiques touchant à l'administration par Israël de la vie quotidienne en Cisjordanie, à Jérusalem-Est et dans la bande de Gaza. Ce cadre juridique est important pour évaluer des politiques et pratiques telles que celles liées à la construction du mur sur des terres palestiniennes, l'appropriation illicite de ressources en eau palestiniennes, la confiscation de terres, les procédures d'arrestation et de détention, les violations des droits des enfants, la violence des colons qui s'exerce avec la complicité des forces de sécurité israéliennes, les démolitions de maisons et les châtiments collectifs sous forme de blocages, de couvre-feux et de restrictions à la circulation. Toutes ces politiques et pratiques méritent l'attention de la communauté internationale, mais le Rapporteur spécial appelle l'attention dans le présent rapport sur l'utilisation illicite de ressources en eau, aspect de l'occupation israélienne qui a été quelque peu négligé.

4. La reprise de négociations directes ayant pour objectif de régler le conflit entre Israël et la Palestine appelle particulièrement l'attention en ce moment sur l'accent qu'il convient de mettre sur la protection des droits du peuple palestinien au cours d'un processus diplomatique qui depuis 20 ans nie la pertinence du droit international. Cela est particulièrement vrai du droit inaliénable des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination qui n'est même pas mentionné dans le cadre convenu dans la Déclaration de principes sur des arrangements intérimaires d'autonomie de 1993. Ce mandat aura été vain si la solution à laquelle aboutiront les voies diplomatiques ne fait pas respecter le droit collectif à l'autodétermination et les droits individuels de ceux qui vivent privés de leurs droits sous l'administration militaire israélienne depuis 1967. D'autres sujets de préoccupation concernent la population de Gaza, dont l'autorité exécutive de facto depuis 2007 ne participe pas aux négociations relancées, ce qui amène à se demander si les droits et intérêts des Palestiniens à Gaza sont dûment représentés.

5. La situation dans la bande de Gaza est particulièrement difficile, ses habitants, au nombre de 1,7 million, étant contraints de vivre dans une situation de blocus depuis 2007. La bande de Gaza semble être menacée de subir des épreuves encore plus difficiles pour sa population du fait de l'évolution récente de la situation en Égypte. Alors qu'Israël est la Puissance occupante et qu'à ce titre des obligations juridiques continuent de lui incomber à l'égard des Palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza, la population – à l'heure actuelle – doit pouvoir continuellement utiliser le point de passage de Rafah pour se rendre en Égypte et en revenir, et aussi, pour assurer sa survie, doit pouvoir accéder au réseau de tunnels grâce auquel la bande de Gaza a pu être approvisionnée en produits de première nécessité. Il convient de rappeler qu'un rapport de l'ONU publié il y a un an, avant les récents faits nouveaux qui compliquent la situation, a conclu que l'on peut se demander si la bande de Gaza sera habitable après 2020¹. Durant la mission du Rapporteur spécial, plusieurs spécialistes des infrastructures menacées de la bande de Gaza ont fait remarquer qu'une telle prédiction, aussi noire fût-elle, était trop optimiste et qu'il était plus réaliste de considérer 2016 comme échéance. Ce qui est en jeu ici dans cette situation de total dénuement, ce sont les droits économiques et sociaux de la population de la bande de Gaza, qui sont consacrés dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels auquel Israël est partie et qui subissent une attaque généralisée. Le maintien du blocus est une violation persistante de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui interdit les peines collectives de façon absolue.

6. Le présent rapport, comme celui présenté à la soixante-septième session de l'Assemblée générale, en 2012 (A/67/379), sur les questions de responsabilité des entreprises et de l'obligation éventuelle pour elles de rendre des comptes en ce qui concerne les colonies de peuplement israéliennes, donne suite à la recommandation formulée à l'issue de la mission d'établissement des faits menée sur les colonies de peuplement sous les auspices du Conseil des droits de l'homme². Il constitue aussi une réponse au refus d'Israël de respecter l'obligation qui lui incombe en vertu de l'article 49 6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui interdit à la Puissance occupante de procéder au transfert d'une partie de sa propre population civile dans le territoire occupé par elle. Cette disposition a été largement interprétée comme étendant explicitement les colonies de peuplement qu'Israël construit et étend sans discontinuer depuis 1967 au mépris de ce consensus et du droit international. Lorsqu'il n'est pas possible d'assurer la conformité au droit international au moyen de l'autoréglementation ou de la persuasion, il est approprié de recourir à des moyens coercitifs non violents pour assurer celle-ci et contribuer ce faisant à la protection des droits des victimes, en l'occurrence les Palestiniens.

¹ Équipe de pays des Nations Unies, « Gaza in 2020: a liveable place? » (Jérusalem, Bureau du Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, août 2012).

7. Depuis l'adoption des résolutions 242 \(1967\) et 338 \(1973\) du Conseil de sécurité, il est largement admis dans la communauté internationale que le conflit entre Israël et la Palestine ne peut être réglé que par la création d'un État palestinien viable et indépendant à l'intérieur des frontières de facto de 1967, quelque peu modifiées par accord mutuel. Il ne fait pas de doute que la portée territoriale de l'autodétermination pour le peuple palestinien qu'aurait ce scénario prévoyant deux États a été continuellement diminuée par l'activité illégale d'implantation de colonies de peuplement. Cela fait longtemps qu'il incombe à la communauté internationale, en particulier à l'ONU, de prendre des mesures pour préserver les droits territoriaux palestiniens. L'étendue globale des colonies de peuplement dispersées met de plus en plus en danger l'idée même de création d'un État palestinien souverain qui soit indépendant et viable.

8. Il existe de nombreuses formes d'abus qui appellent une attention et une condamnation urgentes. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à en souligner trois à titre prioritaire : les abus commis par les membres des services de sécurité, qui prennent la forme d'arrestations et de détentions auxquelles ils procèdent en faisant un usage excessif de la force et en recourant à l'humiliation, y compris à l'encontre des enfants; la violence des colons ciblant les Palestiniens, qui touche également leurs biens et leur milieu; et la complicité dont font preuve les Forces de défense israéliennes à l'égard de la violence des colons, protégeant ces derniers lorsqu'ils se livrent à des actes de violence au lieu de les arrêter, tout en imposant des sanctions aux Palestiniens qui sont les victimes de ces actes, manquant ainsi à la responsabilité première qui leur incombe en vertu de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Le Rapporteur spécial, en collaboration avec cinq autres rapporteurs spéciaux, a publié un communiqué de presse concernant les mauvais traitements et le harcèlement dont a été victime Issa Amro, un défenseur des droits de l'homme à Hébron qui, après avoir participé à la table ronde du Conseil des droits de l'homme consacrée à la Palestine occupée en juin 2013, a été détenu et frappé à son retour, apparemment à titre de représailles³.

² A/HRC/22/63.

³ « Israel must stop harassment, intimidation and abusive treatment of rights defender Issa Amro », 13 août 2013. Disponible à l'adresse : ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=13626&LangID=E.

II. Méthodologie

9. Il est reconnu quasi universellement que la création et l'expansion de colonies de peuplement en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est constituent des violations du droit humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme. De plus, l'expansion continue des colonies s'est avérée être un obstacle essentiel aux négociations de paix et à un règlement négocié entre Israéliens et Palestiniens.

10. À ce jour, Israël a refusé de se conformer au droit international en ce qui concerne ses activités de colonisation, et les initiatives de l'ONU visant à amener Israël à respecter le droit en condamnant ces activités n'ont pas eu d'effet perceptible. Entre-temps, les colonies de peuplement, du fait de leur nature et de leur expansion, portent atteinte de façon quasi permanente aux droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens. C'est dans ce contexte que nous examinons les responsabilités juridiques internationales des entreprises non israéliennes qui tirent profit de l'existence des colonies de peuplement et les conséquences éventuelles pour ces entreprises.

11. Le rapport du Rapporteur spécial à la soixante-septième session de l'Assemblée générale a soulevé des questions relatives aux droits de l'homme qui découlent du fait que des entreprises tirent profit des affaires qu'elles font avec les colonies. Il a pris note de l'utilité des Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme⁴ et, à titre d'illustration concrète, a décrit la participation de 13 entreprises aux activités d'Israël en Palestine. Le présent rapport développe des arguments exposés dans le rapport précédent et présente un modèle possible d'analyse juridique en mettant l'accent sur deux sociétés qui ont été choisies pour les façons particulières dont leurs activités pourraient les mettre en cause dans des violations du droit international qui, dans certains cas, semblent constituer des crimes internationaux. Le rapport est présenté dans l'espoir que l'analyse juridique qui y figure encouragera les entreprises qui tirent profit à l'heure actuelle des colonies de peuplement à changer leur politique. Le Rapporteur spécial s'est continuellement déclaré prêt à travailler avec les responsables des entreprises pour veiller à ce qu'ils respectent les principes de responsabilité des entreprises. Le Rapporteur spécial souhaite au premier chef inciter à agir volontairement, et ce n'est que si cette démarche n'aboutit pas qu'il est recommandé de prendre des initiatives plus contraignantes telles que des boycottages, des désinvestissements et des sanctions.

12. Le rapport a été établi par le Rapporteur spécial sur la base des renseignements communiqués, à sa demande, par des acteurs de la société civile, des organismes des Nations Unies, des entreprises et sociétés, des entités non étatiques et d'autres parties prenantes. Le Rapporteur spécial formule une série de recommandations pour encourager les entreprises qui tirent profit des colonies de peuplement d'Israël à prendre des mesures sans tarder pour mettre leurs activités en conformité avec le droit international pertinent et les règles et normes connexes. Le Rapporteur spécial fait observer que depuis l'achèvement du présent rapport, il en a porté le contenu à l'attention des entreprises dont il est question ici. Il demandera des précisions et de plus amples informations au sujet des prétentions pertinentes exposées dans le présent rapport en vue d'obtenir des réponses rapides et effectives à ses recommandations.

⁴ A/HRC/17/31, annexe.

III. Cadres normatifs

13. Le présent rapport vise à porter la question de la responsabilité des entreprises à l'attention du monde des affaires qui entretient ou pourrait entretenir à l'avenir des relations commerciales avec les colonies de peuplement. Il a été solidement établi que le droit international reconnaît la personnalité juridique des sociétés⁵. L'analyse de la responsabilité des entreprises mettra l'accent sur les cadres normatifs pertinents, dont le droit international humanitaire, le droit international des droits de l'homme et le droit pénal international. La création de colonies de peuplement constitue une violation des devoirs d'une puissance occupante en vertu du droit international humanitaire et porte atteinte aux droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens. Le droit pénal international établit la responsabilité pénale individuelle de l'auteur principal ainsi que de ses complices dans la commission de crimes internationaux. Le Rapporteur spécial espère que la prise en compte du droit pénal international peut faire avancer le débat sur les entreprises et les droits de l'homme, en particulier du fait des mécanismes judiciaires matériels qui existent, tels que la Cour pénale internationale, et de la compétence universelle qu'exercent les juridictions nationales, et que cela contribuera à orienter la prise de décisions par les dirigeants d'entreprise. En expliquant un modèle d'analyse juridique, le Rapporteur spécial espère que celui-ci sera utilisé par d'autres entreprises qui rencontrent les mêmes problèmes et qu'il leur sera utile.

A. Droit international humanitaire

14. Le droit international humanitaire s'applique aux situations de conflit armé et d'occupation, comme énoncé à l'article 2 commun aux quatre Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949. Les règles qui régissent l'occupation de guerre, en particulier le Règlement concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre de 1907 (Règlement de La Haye) et la quatrième Convention de Genève, sont universellement acceptées comme reflétant le droit international coutumier et par conséquent comme s'appliquant à Israël en qualité de Puissance occupante. Cela a été reconnu et confirmé par le Conseil de sécurité, l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil des droits de l'homme, ainsi que la Cour internationale de Justice dans l'avis consultatif qu'elle a rendu en 2004 sur le mur⁶.

15. La quatrième Convention de Genève interdit à une puissance occupante de procéder au transfert d'une partie de sa propre population civile dans le territoire occupé par elle. Il est largement admis que cette interdiction inclue l'installation volontaire de ressortissants de la Puissance occupante dans le territoire occupé⁷. Le

⁵ Voir, par exemple : Barcelona Traction, Light and Power Company, Limited, arrêt, C.I.J. Recueil 1970, p. 3, et Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (République de Guinée c. République démocratique du Congo), exceptions préliminaires, arrêt, C.I.J. Recueil 2007, p. 582.

⁶ Voir les résolutions 6 (XXIV), 6 (XXV) et 2001/7 de la Commission des droits de l'homme; les résolutions 7/18, 10/18 et 19/17 du Conseil des droits de l'homme; les résolutions 271 (1969), 446 (1979), 641 (1989), 681 (1990) et 799 (1992) du Conseil de sécurité; et les résolutions 2546 (XXIV), ES-10/2, 36/147 C, 54/78, 58/97, ES-10/18 et 66/225 de l'Assemblée générale; l'avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004 rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice sur les Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé (voir A/ES-10/273 et Corr.1), par. 109 à 113.

⁷ Voir résolution 446 (1979) du Conseil de sécurité et l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice du 9 juillet 2004, par. 120.

Règlement de La Haye interdit à toute puissance occupante d'entreprendre des changements à caractère permanent dans le territoire qu'elle occupe, à moins que ces changements répondent à des besoins militaires ou qu'ils soient entrepris au profit de la population locale. Le caractère prolongé de l'occupation israélienne qui perdure depuis 46 ans semble être incompatible avec l'interprétation juridique acceptée selon laquelle une occupation a un caractère temporaire. Le Rapporteur spécial a précédemment souligné les limites du droit humanitaire international dans le contexte d'une occupation prolongée, en particulier eu égard au fait que ce droit n'a pas bien rendu compte de la mesure dans laquelle il est porté atteinte aux intérêts permanents et au bien-être de la population civile⁸. La réunion d'experts sur l'occupation et d'autres formes d'administration de territoires étrangers, organisée par le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR), a discuté du fait que ni le Règlement de La Haye ni la quatrième Convention de Genève ne fixe des limites à la durée effective du contrôle exercé sur un territoire étranger et elle a noté que de nombreux participants avaient fait valoir qu'une occupation prolongée nécessitait des règles particulières pour orienter les réponses à apporter aux problèmes concrets qui découlent d'une occupation de longue durée⁹. Le Rapporteur spécial est d'avis que de telles règles sont nécessaires, y compris des mesures visant à établir des régimes juridiques reconnaissant des droits lorsqu'une occupation dure plus de cinq ans.

16. Malgré les insuffisances du droit existant face à l'occupation prolongée, l'accent mis sur le caractère temporaire et l'objectif conservatoire sous-jacent du droit relatif à l'occupation établissent clairement et indiscutablement que le cadre juridique applicable rend illégales la création et l'expansion des colonies de peuplement israéliennes. Les modifications permanentes apportées de façon délibérée en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est vont à l'encontre de l'objectif fondamental du droit international humanitaire qui est de préserver les droits de tout peuple occupé.

17. Les obligations qui naissent du droit international humanitaire sont contraignantes non seulement pour les États mais aussi pour les entités non étatiques, comme énoncé dans les Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 et le Protocole II (relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés non internationaux) et réaffirmé par les tribunaux militaires internationaux de Nuremberg (Allemagne) et pour l'Extrême-Orient (Tribunal de Tokyo). En conséquence, les entreprises commerciales qui sont directement ou indirectement impliquées dans des conflits armés peuvent être tenues responsables de violations du droit international humanitaire. Selon le CICR :

Le droit international humanitaire est contraignant non seulement pour les États, les groupes armés organisés et les soldats, mais aussi pour tous les autres acteurs dont les activités sont étroitement liées à un conflit armé. En conséquence, bien que les États et les groupes armés organisés portent la responsabilité la plus lourde dans l'application du droit international humanitaire, une société commerciale qui mène des activités étroitement liées à un conflit armé doit aussi respecter les dispositions du droit international humanitaire¹⁰.

⁸ A/HRC/23/21.

⁹ Voir CICR : « Occupation and other forms of administration of foreign territory: expert meeting » (Genève, 2012). Disponible à icrc.org/eng/assets/files/publications/icrc-002-4094.pdf.

L'obligation de rendre des comptes pour les violations du droit international humanitaire ressort clairement de la lecture du droit pénal international, une branche du droit qui comprend de graves violations du droit international humanitaire.

B. Droit international des droits de l'homme

18. En vertu du droit international des droits de l'homme, l'obligation est faite aux États de protéger les droits des individus et des groupes. L'application extraterritoriale des droits de l'homme a été avalisée par différentes instances¹¹. La création de colonies de peuplement en Palestine occupée entraîne de nombreuses violations du droit international des droits de l'homme. Les colons portent atteinte notamment au droit de la propriété, au droit à l'égalité, au droit à un niveau de vie adéquat et au droit à la liberté de circulation¹². Les colonies de peuplement entravent directement l'exercice par Israël de sa responsabilité de protéger les droits de l'homme de la population civile palestinienne.

19. Les obligations incombant aux États comprennent le devoir de protéger la population contre les atteintes aux droits de l'homme commises par des tiers. Les États sont tenus de prendre les mesures voulues pour prévenir les atteintes par des acteurs privés et, lorsque celles-ci se produisent, enquêter à leur sujet et punir les auteurs, et faire en sorte que les victimes obtiennent réparation. De plus, des normes ont été élaborées qui étendent l'applicabilité du droit des droits de l'homme aux entités non étatiques, y compris les entreprises¹³. En conséquence, l'obligation qui incombe aux États et aux entreprises, ainsi qu'à ceux qui agissent au nom de ces entités, de respecter les normes du droit pénal constitue une responsabilité sociale essentielle des entreprises dans le cadre juridique en faveur du respect des droits de l'homme, qui évolue.

20. Des mécanismes d'autorégulation ont été incorporés par de nombreuses entreprises pour assurer le respect des normes éthiques et du droit international¹⁴. L'Organisation des Nations Unies prend des initiatives pour amener les entreprises à prendre en compte les droits de l'homme, par exemple le Pacte mondial, qui a été lancé par le Secrétaire général en 2000. Le Pacte mondial encourage les entreprises ¹⁰ « Business and international humanitarian law » (2006). Disponible à icrc.org/eng/assets/files/other/icrc_002_0882.pdf (en anglais).

¹¹ Voir, par exemple, l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice du 9 juillet 2004, par. 109 à 113; « La nature de l'obligation juridique générale imposée aux États parties au Pacte », Observation générale n° 31, CCPR/C/21/Rev.1/Add.13, par. 15 et 18; et Commission publique pour l'examen de l'incident maritime du 31 mai 2010 (la Commission Turkel), « Israel's mechanisms for examining and investigating complaints and claims of violations of the laws of armed conflict according to international law » (février 2013), p. 64. Disponible à turkel-committee.gov.il/files/newDoc3/The%20Turkel%20Report%20for%20website.pdf.

¹² Voir résolution 2200 A (XXI) de l'Assemblée générale, annexe.

¹³ Voir, par exemple, le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels et la résolution 60/147 de l'Assemblée générale.

¹⁴ Voir, par exemple, OCDE (2011), Les principes directeurs de l'OCDE à l'intention des entreprises multinationales, éd. OCDE, disponible à <http://www.oecd.org/fr/daf/inv/mne/48004355.pdf>.

à l'échelle mondiale à volontairement promouvoir et respecter les 10 principes touchant aux droits de l'homme, aux normes du travail, à l'environnement et à la lutte contre la corruption. De plus, en 2011, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a approuvé à l'unanimité les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme qui donnent des conseils concernant les responsabilités des entreprises commerciales et les mesures nécessaires que les États doivent prendre du fait des obligations qui leur incombent en matière de droits de l'homme.

21. Les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme sont utiles en tant que cadre d'analyse parce qu'ils « soulignent les mesures que les États doivent prendre pour inciter les entreprises à respecter les droits de l'homme; pour fournir aux entreprises un schéma directeur pour gérer le risque d'incidence négative; et enfin pour offrir une série de repères à l'intention des acteurs afin d'évaluer le respect des droits de l'homme par les entreprises »¹⁵. Une notion essentielle dans les Principes directeurs est celle de diligence raisonnable, qui décrit une procédure de gestion continue, qu'une entreprise raisonnable et prudente se doit de réaliser pour s'acquitter de sa responsabilité en matière de respect des droits de l'homme. Les Principes directeurs décrivent aussi les obligations correspondantes des États, qui comprennent le respect des droits de l'homme (s'abstenir de s'opposer à la jouissance des droits de l'homme, ou de la restreindre); la protection des droits de l'homme (protéger les individus et les groupes contre les violations des droits de l'homme, notamment par des entreprises commerciales) et la mise en œuvre des droits de l'homme (prendre des mesures de discrimination positive pour faciliter l'exercice des droits de l'homme élémentaires)¹⁶. Les Principes directeurs ont été et continueront d'être une référence qui fait autorité pour les gouvernements et les entreprises qui s'intéressent aux droits de l'homme. À ce propos, le Groupe de travail sur la question des droits de l'homme et des sociétés transnationales et autres entreprises a été créé par le Conseil des droits de l'homme¹⁷. Il joue un rôle central pour ce qui est d'élaborer des conseils opérationnels concernant les Principes directeurs, de promouvoir et d'appuyer les efforts déployés pour les appliquer, de faire des recommandations, de conduire des visites de pays et de travailler en étroite coopération avec les organismes compétents des Nations Unies.

C. Droit pénal international

22. Le droit pénal international établit la responsabilité pénale individuelle pour les crimes de guerre, les crimes contre l'humanité et les actes de génocide. Les crimes internationaux prennent en considération la dimension collective de l'infraction, ce qui peut aider à en attribuer certains aspects aux individus impliqués. L'attribution de la responsabilité a été étendue aux entreprises multinationales compte tenu de leur capacité de perpétrer de telles violations. Les entreprises qui investissent dans des gouvernements ou groupes qui sont actifs dans des zones de conflit, qui sont en relation d'affaires avec ceux-ci ou sont impliquées avec ceux-ci d'une autre manière peuvent se retrouver à commettre un crime international ou à faciliter la commission de celui-ci. À ce jour, seules des personnes physiques ont été

¹⁵ Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « La responsabilité des entreprises de respecter les droits de l'homme : Guide interprétatif » (2012); disponible à http://www.ohchr.org/Documents/Publications/HR_PUB_12_2_fr.pdf.

¹⁶ A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 1 à 10.

¹⁷ Voir A/HRC/17/4.

poursuivies pour complicité pour crime international¹⁸. Il convient d'être prudent lorsqu'on envisage d'étendre la responsabilité pénale individuelle aux responsables ou employés d'une entreprise. Appliquer le droit pénal international aux entreprises est une nouvelle tendance en droit international¹⁹.

1. Tribunaux spéciaux

23. La jurisprudence des tribunaux pénaux internationaux est utile pour comprendre la notion de complicité. L'affaire Furundzija jugée par le Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie a fait jurisprudence pour ce qui est d'établir la complicité par aide et assistance. L'assistance apportée doit avoir un effet important sur la perpétration du crime, et la personne aidant ou encourageant doit avoir connaissance que l'assistance fournie contribue à la perpétration d'un crime, même si elle ne partageait pas un objectif commun avec les auteurs²⁰. Le Tribunal a récemment changé la façon dont il aborde la question de la complicité dans l'affaire Procureur c. Momčilo Perišić, dans laquelle elle a fait valoir que « le fait que l'aide vise précisément » à faciliter les crimes est à présent un élément constitutif de la complicité par aide et assistance, même s'il n'est pas clairement établi dans quelle mesure cette décision constitue un précédent pour des affaires analogues dont d'autres tribunaux seraient saisis²¹.

2. Cour pénale internationale

24. En vertu de l'article 25 1) du Statut de Rome, la Cour pénale internationale est compétente à l'égard des personnes physiques. Elle n'a pas compétence à l'égard des personnes morales. Toutefois, la Cour pourrait connaître de la participation d'entreprises à des crimes internationaux en jugeant les personnes qui agissent au nom d'une entreprise. Lorsqu'un État devient partie au Statut de Rome, il relève de sa compétence pour les crimes énoncés dans le Statut. La Cour peut exercer sa compétence dans les situations où l'auteur présumé est un ressortissant d'un État partie ou lorsque le crime a été commis sur le territoire d'un État partie. Un État qui n'est pas partie au Statut de la Cour peut accepter la compétence de celle-ci, comme énoncé à l'article 12 3) du Statut de Rome. La Palestine l'a fait en janvier 2009, mais le Procureur alors en exercice a déclaré que la Cour était compétente uniquement à l'égard des États et s'est référé aux décisions de l'Assemblée générale relatives au statut d'État pour déterminer quelles entités constituent un État. Il n'est pas établi clairement si le fait que l'Assemblée ait accordé depuis à la Palestine le statut d'État non membre observateur auprès de l'ONU changera le statut de la Palestine auprès de la Cour²². Israël n'est pas partie au Statut de Rome.

¹⁸ Voir, par exemple, United States of America v. Carl Krauch et al. (the I. G. Farben case), affaire, 29, 30 juillet 1948, Trials of War Criminals before the Nuernberg Military Tribunals, United States Government Printing Office, 1952, vol. VIII.

¹⁹ Voir Antje K.D. Heyer, « Corporate complicity under international criminal law: a case for applying the Rome Statute to business behaviour », Human Rights and International Legal Discourse, vol. 6 (2012).

²⁰ Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie, Procureur c. Furundzija, affaire n° IT-95-17/1-T, Chambre de première instance II, 10 décembre 1998, par. 249.

²¹ Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie, Procureur c. Momčilo Perišić, Chambre d'appel, affaire n° IT-04-81-A, 28 février 2013.

²² Résolution 67/19 de l'Assemblée générale.

25. Le Statut de Rome est la meilleure source d'autorité pour les éléments de complicité dans les crimes internationaux. Les alinéas c) et d) de l'article 25 3) décrivent la responsabilité pour complicité par aide et assistance, aux termes desquels toute personne qui apporte son aide, son concours ou toute autre forme d'assistance à la commission ou à la tentative de commission de crimes visés dans le Statut est individuellement responsable de ces crimes. Une double condition doit être remplie : 1) une contribution substantielle au crime; 2) il faut qu'il y ait eu connaissance de cause et un dessein.

26. En conséquence, les possibilités d'attribuer une responsabilité pénale internationale à des entreprises sont limitées. Selon le Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie et la Cour pénale internationale, cette responsabilité doit être attribuée à une personne et non à une entreprise, et cette personne doit savoir que ses actes, du fait du lien de causalité avec le crime international, ont contribué à la perpétration de celui-ci. L'assistance en connaissance de cause (c'est-à-dire la connaissance par une personne du fait que ses actes aident à perpétrer un crime donné) est nécessaire.

27. Le Statut de Rome interdit « le transfert, direct ou indirect, par une puissance occupante d'une partie de sa population civile, dans le territoire qu'elle occupe »²³. Cela fait longtemps que cette information est dans le domaine public, par exemple dans les rapports et résolutions de l'ONU, argument convaincant pour établir que les entreprises menant des activités commerciales avec les colonies de peuplement devraient à présent être pleinement conscientes du fait que les colonies israéliennes violent le droit international. L'argument qu'il convient de développer est la mesure dans laquelle il y a un lien de causalité entre les activités des entreprises et les crimes internationaux perpétrés. Le Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie a introduit la notion selon laquelle les activités en question doivent viser expressément à aider à perpétrer un crime. Si l'on décide de suivre la jurisprudence du Tribunal en matière de complicité en ce qui concerne les colonies de peuplement israéliennes, les questions pertinentes concernant une partie des entreprises visées dans le présent rapport et dans le rapport précédent du Rapporteur spécial à l'Assemblée générale sont les suivantes : est-ce que la fourniture de matériel ou de matières premières devant expressément servir à construire des colonies et/ou les infrastructures connexes établit un lien de causalité suffisant avec le transfert de civils israéliens vers la Palestine occupée? Est-ce que l'octroi de prêts ou des transactions financières analogues qui doivent servir expressément à la construction, la rénovation ou l'achat de colonies établit un tel lien de causalité? Est-ce que la publicité, la promotion de la vente et/ou l'identification d'acheteurs de logements dans une colonie établit un tel lien? On ne sait pas à l'heure actuelle si la conception de la complicité que le Tribunal a énoncée dans l'affaire Perišić fera autorité dans d'autres affaires à l'avenir.

28. Ce qui est clair, c'est que poursuivre des entreprises pour complicité au niveau international offrirait un moyen d'obtenir réparation. Bien sûr, les conditions de compétence doivent être remplies. Ainsi, l'État à partir duquel l'entreprise et ses employés mènent leurs activités doit être partie au Statut de Rome pour que le tribunal puisse connaître de l'affaire. La notion de complicité ne se limite pas toutefois au droit pénal international. D'autres mécanismes judiciaires tels que les juridictions internes pourraient éventuellement poursuivre les entreprises ou leurs employés pour leur implication dans des crimes internationaux.

²³ L'article 8 2) b) viii) du Statut de Rome interdit un éventail d'actes plus large que l'article 49 6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

3. Responsabilité civile

29. Le droit interne peut constituer un moyen d'obliger les entreprises à rendre des comptes pour des violations du droit international. La responsabilité civile est conforme au principe de complémentarité, qui souligne le rôle des régimes juridiques internes dans le respect du droit international. La responsabilité civile des entreprises présente l'avantage d'offrir réparation et compensation aux victimes des violations²⁴. Nonobstant le fait que les procédures judiciaires devant les juridictions internes ont de manière générale peu progressé dans le domaine de la complicité des entreprises, notamment en ce qui concerne les colonies de peuplement, il est établi que la responsabilité civile des entreprises peut être engagée pour le comportement illicite des agents de sociétés²⁵. Il ne fait aucun doute qu'à l'avenir les juridictions nationales connaîtront d'affaires sur cette question²⁶. Le Haut-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme a énoncé plusieurs raisons pour lesquelles la responsabilité civile est un moyen important d'engager la responsabilité d'une entreprise pour complicité :

Premièrement, le droit international oblige les États à fournir un recours effectif aux victimes de violations des droits de l'homme. Deuxièmement, la responsabilité civile des entreprises contribue à faire respecter le principe juridique international de responsabilité en assurant que les auteurs de violations des droits de l'homme rendent compte de leurs actes. Troisièmement, conformément au principe de complémentarité, le droit international s'appuie nécessairement sur des mécanismes juridictionnels internes pour assurer la protection effective des droits de l'homme. Enfin, engager la responsabilité civile des entreprises qui sont complices de graves violations des droits de l'homme est un moyen qui permet de régler les griefs de façon ordonnée. Sans des mécanismes juridiques efficaces permettant aux victimes de graves violations des droits de l'homme d'obtenir réparation, ces victimes seraient susceptibles de recourir à des mesures extrajudiciaires pour régler des torts perçus, menaçant ce faisant l'ordre juridique et social établi²⁷.

4. Tribunaux de la société civile

30. Des initiatives de la société civile contribuent grandement à informer le public du non-respect par Israël du droit international. Ainsi, le Tribunal Russell sur la Palestine a consacré sa session de 2010 tenue à Londres à la responsabilité des ²⁴ Commission internationale de juristes, Complicité des entreprises et responsabilité juridique, vol. 3 (2008), p. 4.

²⁵ Concernant des actions en justice récentes, voir Cour suprême des États-Unis, Kiobel v. Royal Dutch Petroleum, 569 U.S. ____ (2013) pour les limitations du Alien Tort Statute; le classement sans suite par le bureau du Procureur général des Pays-Bas de l'action intentée contre Riwal; et la décision de la Cour d'appel de Versailles qui a rejeté la responsabilité des sociétés françaises participant à la construction du tramway traversant la ville de Jérusalem, disponible à www.volokh.com/wp-content/uploads/2013/04/French-Ct-decision.pdf.

²⁶ Les sociétés et autres personnes morales peuvent être poursuivies pour génocide et crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 213-3 du Code et de la loi canadienne sur les crimes contre l'humanité et les crimes de guerre.

²⁷ Exposé d'amicus curiae Navi Pillay, p. 3, in Kiobel c. Royal Dutch Petroleum.

entreprises. De telles initiatives permettraient d'exercer des pressions de façon constructive en vue de faire respecter les normes relatives à la responsabilité des entreprises si les modes préférés de respect volontaire ne permettent pas de faire respecter les normes juridiques et morales²⁸.

D. Conclusions relatives à un cadre normatif

31. Il convient de noter que les voies de recours qu'offrent le droit pénal et le droit civil n'exigent pas que la responsabilité de l'auteur principal soit engagée avant qu'un auteur secondaire puisse être poursuivi. Les difficultés rencontrées pour engager la responsabilité des gouvernements ou des groupes armés pour de graves violations du droit international font que l'entreprise, dans la plupart des affaires d'implication présumée d'entreprises dans ces violations, est poursuivie indépendamment de l'acteur principal²⁹.

32. Une grande partie de l'analyse juridique a abouti à une discussion portant sur le droit pénal international et son concept de complicité des entreprises³⁰. L'importance de la complicité, toutefois, transcende la justice pénale internationale. Elle a été étendue au respect de la responsabilité sociale des entreprises et des normes relatives aux droits de l'homme. Les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme se réfèrent au droit pénal international en ce qu'il traite de la complicité des entreprises du fait des violations des droits de l'homme. Ce type d'initiative contribue à traduire les normes relatives à la responsabilité pénale internationale par des directives à l'intention des entreprises visant à ce qu'elles mènent leurs activités de façon à éviter que leur responsabilité ne soit engagée du fait de violations et d'atteintes, par exemple en exerçant une diligence raisonnable.

IV. Études de cas

33. Comme noté dans le rapport précédent du Rapporteur spécial sur cette question, des entreprises fort diverses opèrent dans les colonies de peuplement. Le Rapporteur spécial a enquêté sur 13 entreprises, dont plusieurs israéliennes et d'autres internationales, certaines liées à l'occupation de manière générale, d'autres aux colonies de peuplement en particulier. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial met l'accent sur deux domaines distincts qui touchent aux colonies, le premier étant les institutions bancaires qui sont impliquées dans les transactions financières telles que l'octroi de prêts pour construire ou acquérir des colonies de peuplement israéliennes. L'entreprise que le Rapporteur spécial a étudiée est le groupe Dexia, un groupe bancaire européen. Cette étude s'appuie sur l'analyse du groupe Dexia que le Rapporteur spécial a présentée dans son précédent rapport. Le second domaine sur lequel le Rapporteur spécial appelle l'attention, ce sont les sociétés immobilières qui font de la publicité pour des biens immobiliers dans les colonies et qui vendent ces biens. Les activités de Re/Max International, une entreprise basée aux États-Unis, sont l'objet d'une analyse dans le présent rapport. Ces deux études de cas visent à déterminer si le groupe Dexia et Re/Max International, en octroyant des crédits et des prêts hypothécaires et en faisant de la publicité pour des biens immobiliers dans les colonies et en vendant ces biens, fournissent une assistance en connaissance de cause qui revient à aider à commettre des crimes internationaux liés au transfert de ressortissants de la Puissance occupante dans le territoire occupé. Le Rapporteur spécial réitère que les entreprises retenues le sont à titre d'exemple et qu'il existe d'autres entreprises qui tirent profit des activités de colonisation israéliennes, tant dans le secteur des services économiques dans lequel le groupe Dexia et Re/Max International travaillent que dans d'autres secteurs liés aux biens et services.

²⁸ www.russelltribunalonpalestine.com/en/sessions/london-session.

²⁹ Commission internationale des juristes, Complicité des entreprises et responsabilité juridique, vol. 1 (Genève, 2008), p. 22.

³⁰ Afin de respecter la taille limite des rapports, la présente analyse se limite à la responsabilité des entreprises du fait des activités liées aux colonies de peuplement. Cependant, l'analyse pourrait être étendue à tous les aspects de l'occupation.

A. Groupe Dexia

34. Le groupe Dexia mène ses activités dans les domaines de la banque de détail et commerciale, du financement du secteur public et des activités bancaires de gros, de la gestion d'actifs et des services aux investisseurs. Le Rapporteur spécial a déjà parlé des activités de Dexia Israël Bank Limited (Dexia Israël), dont le groupe Dexia est l'actionnaire majoritaire, qui consistent à octroyer des prêts aux Israéliens qui vivent dans des colonies situées en Cisjordanie.

35. Depuis le rapport précédent du Rapporteur spécial, le groupe Dexia a continué d'appliquer son plan révisé de résolution ordonnée, qui a été mis en place du fait de la crise de la dette souveraine en Europe. En janvier 2013, la Belgique, la France et le Luxembourg ont signé une convention de garantie de liquidité tripartite en faveur de Dexia Crédit Local. Le capital du groupe Dexia est à présent détenu à hauteur de 94 % par la Belgique et la France (50,02 % par la Belgique et 44,38 % par la France)³¹. En 2012, le groupe Dexia a déclaré que sa participation dans Dexia Israël devrait être cédée dans les 12 mois suivant une décision définitive sur les différentes actions judiciaires engagées contre Dexia Israël et Dexia Crédit Local en tant qu'actionnaires³². Il est déclaré dans un communiqué de presse publié en mai 2013 qu'aucun développement important n'était survenu dans ce dossier, et dans le rapport sur le premier semestre que les litiges opposant les actionnaires minoritaires et Dexia Israël ne sont pas réglés, mais les activités bancaires de celle-ci ne sont pas mentionnées³³.

36. Le Rapporteur spécial a déjà noté que le groupe Dexia était membre du Pacte mondial et qu'au début de l'année 2012, il n'avait pas présenté une communication sur ses progrès réalisés dans l'application des critères fixés par les membres du Pacte. Le Rapporteur spécial a appris qu'en avril 2013, le groupe Dexia s'était retiré du Pacte, fait inquiétant dans l'optique des efforts déployés pour assurer l'application des directives du Pacte³⁴.

³¹ Communiqué de presse du groupe Dexia du 3 juillet 2013, disponible à www.dexia.com/FR/Journaliste/communiques_de_presse/Documents/20130703_CP_Dexia_emission_dette_garantie_FR.pdf.

³² Groupe Dexia, « Rapport annuel 2012 » (Bruxelles, 2012), p. 76. Disponible à www.dexia.com/FR/actionnaires_investisseurs/actionnaires_individuels/publications/Documents/RA_2012_FR.pdf.

³³ Communiqué de presse du groupe Dexia du 8 mai 2013. Disponible à www.dexia.com/FR/Journaliste/communiques_de_presse/Documents/20130508_CP_resultats_1T_FR.pdf; communiqué de presse du groupe Dexia du 7 août 2013. Disponible à <http://hugin.info/152020/R/1721539/573366.pdf>.

37. Depuis plusieurs années, l'ancien président et le président en exercice du groupe Dexia (Jean-Luc Dehaene et Karel De Boeck) déclarent qu'aucun nouveau contrat touchant aux colonies de peuplement n'a été signé. L'organisation non gouvernementale belge Intal, mouvement de solidarité internationale, remet en question l'exactitude de cette position. Il ressort des recherches effectuées par Intal que de nouveaux prêts continuent d'être accordés aux fins de la construction et de l'expansion de colonies de peuplement, portant le montant total des prêts à 35 millions d'euros³⁵. Selon Intal, en novembre 2012, Dexia Israël a réalisé un audit financier positif pour les colonies Elkanah et Karnai Shomron et continue à fournir des services pour faciliter le développement des colonies. Ainsi, les colonies Ariel et Kedumim peuvent ouvrir des comptes auprès de Dexia Israël pour recevoir les subventions de la Loterie nationale israélienne (Mifal Hapais)³⁶. Mifal HaPais utilise les recettes tirées de la loterie pour apporter un appui à différents projets publics dans les domaines de la santé, de l'éducation et des arts. Les colonies sont un de ces projets publics et reçoivent à ce titre des subventions de la loterie qui sont transférés par l'intermédiaire de Dexia Israël. Who Profits, une organisation non gouvernementale israélienne, a elle aussi effectué des recherches sur Dexia Israël. Selon leurs conclusions, Mifal HaPais a accordé des subventions en 2012 à des municipalités et des conseils régionaux israéliens, qui visaient expressément à fournir un appui à la construction d'installations dans les colonies, telles que des écoles et des centres communautaires, fonds qui ont dans leur totalité été transférés par l'intermédiaire de Dexia Israël³⁷. Il convient de noter que les activités de Dexia Israël ont aussi compris la gestion de comptes bancaires de particuliers et de prêts hypothécaires accordés à des acheteurs de logements³⁸.

38. La responsabilité du groupe Dexia peut-elle être engagée pour les prêts hypothécaires et les crédits accordés par Dexia Israël à des colonies de peuplement israéliennes? En tant que filiale du groupe Dexia (le groupe Dexia possède la totalité des actions de Dexia Crédit Local, qui possède 65 % de Dexia Israël), il existe de solides arguments pour imputer les activités de Dexia Israël au groupe Dexia. La méthodologie de l'analyse juridique énoncée plus haut sera appliquée à cette étude de cas en vue d'évaluer si cette argumentation est fondée. L'analyse en question considèrerait les entreprises de manière générale, mais on constate qu'il est accepté que la responsabilité pénale des fournisseurs de services financiers soit engagée pour aide et assistance à la commission de crimes. La Commission internationale des juristes a déclaré que :

La responsabilité pénale d'un financier va dépendre de ce qu'il savait sur la manière dont ses services et prêts allaient être utilisés et de l'influence effective de ces services sur la commission du crime. La responsabilité pénale d'un banquier ou d'un financier qui soutient de manière générale un projet ou ³⁴ Voir unglobalcompact.org/participant/2887-Dexia-Group.

³⁵ Voir intal.be/files/20101121_written_statement_RToP_Dexia_-_mario_franssen.pdf et intal.be/fr/article/dexia-et-son-principal-actionnaire-la-belgique-se-portent-garant-pour-couvrir-un-projet-de-l.

³⁶ Voir intal.be/files/20101121_written_statement_RToP_Dexia_-_mario_franssen.pdf.

³⁷ Rapport de recherche de Who Profits communiqué au Rapporteur spécial, juillet 2013.

³⁸ Who Profits, « Financing the Israeli occupation » (2010). Disponible à whoprofits.org/content/financing-israeli-occupation.

son organisation risque moins d'être engagée que celle d'un financier qui facilite des activités criminelles en connaissance de cause, en les finançant ou en gérant les bénéfices tirés de ces crimes³⁹.

1. Droit international humanitaire

39. Les transactions de Dexia Israël avec les colonies de peuplement israéliennes font du groupe Dexia une entreprise commerciale impliquée dans l'occupation de la Palestine et sa responsabilité peut donc être engagée pour violation du droit international humanitaire. Les colonies sont illégales parce qu'elles sont construites sur des terres occupées. Elles sont étroitement liées au conflit qui perdure et à l'occupation de guerre. Les activités de Dexia Israël facilitent la croissance des colonies, ce qui prouve que le groupe Dexia, actionnaire majoritaire, est complice d'une violation du droit international parce qu'en transférant des éléments de la population israélienne en Palestine occupée, Israël viole l'article 49 6) de la quatrième Convention de Genève, ce qui, du fait de son échelle et de l'intention, constitue un crime de guerre à première vue.

40. De plus, en tant qu'États parties aux Conventions de Genève, il incombe à la Belgique et à la France de respecter et de faire respecter les Conventions. À l'heure actuelle, elles sont les actionnaires majoritaires d'une entreprise qui accorde des crédits et des prêts hypothécaires à des colonies de peuplement en Palestine occupée et, en tant que telles, manquent à leur obligation de faire respecter les Conventions.

2. Droit international des droits de l'homme

41. Dexia Israël, par les transactions avec les colonies, est complice par aide et assistance de la commission d'atteintes aux droits de l'homme touchant au droit à la propriété, au droit à l'égalité, au droit à un niveau de vie suffisant, au droit à la liberté de circulation, entre autres droits de l'homme. Les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme traitent du rapport qui existe entre la complicité et la notion de diligence raisonnable : « Il peut y avoir complicité lorsque l'entreprise commerciale contribue, ou paraît contribuer, à des incidences négatives sur les droits de l'homme causées par des tiers⁴⁰. » Le groupe Dexia étant actionnaire majoritaire, sa responsabilité est engagée. La Belgique et la France assument aussi la responsabilité de prendre des mesures pour prévenir et sanctionner les activités d'acteurs privés au sein du groupe Dexia qui ont violé la loi¹⁶. De plus, en tant que propriétaires du groupe Dexia, la Belgique et la France ont expressément le devoir de prendre les mesures nécessaires en réponse aux atteintes aux droits de l'homme, y compris concernant les activités de sa filiale Dexia Israël qui apporte un appui à la croissance des colonies. En manquant à ce devoir, ces États n'exécutent pas les obligations qui leur incombent en vertu des traités relatifs aux droits de l'homme, tels que le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels. Ce devoir est reconnu par les Principes directeurs, qui soulignent que lorsqu'un État contrôle une entreprise, une violation commise par celle-ci peut constituer aussi une violation par l'État des obligations qui lui incombent en vertu du droit international⁴¹. Si un État possède ou contrôle une entreprise, il a les moyens directs de veiller à ce que les politiques, législations et règlements concernant le respect des droits de l'homme soient appliqués⁴².

³⁹ Commission internationale de juristes, Complicité des entreprises et responsabilité juridique, vol. 2 (Genève, 2008), p. 45.

⁴⁰ A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 17.

⁴¹ A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 4.

42. Les mécanismes d'autorégulation au sein des entreprises sont utiles pour évaluer la responsabilité qui pourrait être engagée du fait de violations éventuelles des droits de l'homme⁴³. Il est regrettable que le groupe Dexia se soit retiré du Pacte mondial. L'observation du Rapporteur spécial mentionnée dans son rapport précédent faisant état du fait que le groupe était en retard dans la présentation de ses informations visait à l'inciter à se conformer à ses obligations, mais il semblerait que le groupe ait malheureusement choisi une ligne de conduite opposée.

3. Droit pénal international

43. La responsabilité pénale individuelle du fait d'activités de Dexia Israël pourrait s'étendre à des employés du groupe Dexia. La Belgique et la France étant parties au Statut de Rome, leurs nationaux relèvent de la compétence de la Cour pénale internationale. En conséquence, les employés du groupe Dexia pourraient faire l'objet de poursuites pour complicité des crimes de guerre consistant en la création de colonies de peuplement dans le territoire occupé de Palestine. À titre d'exemple, considérons la proposition de Dexia Israël d'accorder un prêt d'un montant de 2,5 millions de shekels à la colonie Ariel. Ariel est l'une des colonies les plus anciennes et les plus connues de Cisjordanie. Si Dexia Israël octroie des prêts hypothécaires aux acheteurs de logements ou au conseil régional, ou si elle offre des services pour des dons effectués par Mifal HaPais, ces formes d'assistance contribuent directement à la croissance de la colonie et, partant, facilitent matériellement le transfert de citoyens israéliens dans le territoire occupé. Sur la base des informations dont dispose le Rapporteur spécial, il y a une base raisonnable pour conclure que les activités de Dexia Israël fournissent une assistance financière aux fins de la construction, de la viabilité et de l'entretien de colonies telles qu'Ariel et Kedumim. Il est raisonnable de supposer que Dexia Israël est pleinement consciente des activités pour lesquelles elle fournit un appui financier et en conséquence elle aide en connaissance de cause à créer et à entretenir des colonies. À son tour, on peut considérer qu'en étant propriétaire de la banque à hauteur de 65 %, le groupe Dexia a connaissance des prêts accordés par sa filiale, et par conséquent la responsabilité pénale individuelle des employés du groupe qui ont connaissance des activités de la filiale en Israël peut être engagée.

4. Responsabilité de l'État

44. Outre la responsabilité pénale individuelle, la question de la responsabilité de l'État se pose dans le cadre de la présente analyse. Lorsqu'un État commet un acte internationalement illicite (complicité d'un crime de guerre), il est obligé de mettre fin à cet acte et d'offrir des assurances de non-répétition. En l'occurrence, il semblerait que la Belgique et la France devraient veiller à ce que Dexia Israël cesse d'accorder ces prêts et de transférer les subventions du Gouvernement israélien aux colonies et aux activités liées aux colonies. En outre, l'État responsable est tenu de réparer intégralement le préjudice causé par le fait illicite. Dans ce cas précis, la Belgique et la France pourraient devoir réparer le préjudice subi par les Palestiniens résultant de la réception par les colonies de peuplement de crédits et de prêts hypothécaires accordés par Dexia Israël. La réparation du préjudice prend la forme de restitution, d'indemnisation et de satisfaction. Le fait qu'à présent Dexia appartienne à des États signifie que la responsabilité de l'État et la responsabilité pénale individuelle sont des formes de responsabilité à envisager. Vu l'inquiétude et les objections exprimées par l'Union européenne à l'égard des activités de peuplement, l'exercice de pressions par le monde politique et la société civile sur les Gouvernements belge et français pour les inciter à vendre la participation de l'État dans Dexia Israël pourrait être la mesure la plus appropriée à prendre pour obtenir le respect tardif des règles⁴⁴.

⁴² Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « La responsabilité des entreprises de respecter les droits de l'homme : guide interprétatif » (2012), p. 25; voir aussi A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 14.

⁴³ A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 15 et 16.

5. Responsabilité civile

45. Des actions ont été intentées auprès des juridictions internes contre des institutions financières, mais elles ont abouti à des verdicts différents⁴⁵. Dans la plupart des juridictions, il faut prouver que les banques étaient au courant de l'activité illicite de l'emprunteur qu'elles finançaient et qu'elles pouvaient prévoir les effets du prêt et les conséquences préjudiciables qui résulteraient de la transaction⁴⁶. Il serait par conséquent possible d'engager la responsabilité civile du groupe Dexia en tant qu'institution, de particuliers travaillant au sein de la société et/ou de la Belgique et/ou de la France en qualité de propriétaires. La récente décision de la cour d'appel de Versailles concernant le tramway traversant la ville de Jérusalem indique qu'il est difficile, en France au moins, d'établir la responsabilité civile devant une juridiction. Toutefois, l'acceptation par les juridictions belges de la notion de compétence universelle donne à penser que la Belgique est mieux à même de répondre favorablement à une telle initiative⁴⁷.

46. S'agissant de la responsabilité civile, certaines entités financières ont fait preuve d'une prise de conscience accrue de la responsabilité sociale de l'entreprise et des ramifications juridiques potentielles liées aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes. Le Fonds de pension gouvernemental-Étranger norvégien a retiré de son portefeuille d'investissements l'entreprise de construction Shikun & Binui à cause de la participation de celle-ci à la construction de colonies de peuplement. Le Conseil d'éthique de quatre des principaux fonds de pension suédois a retiré ses investissements de la société Elbit Systems du fait de son implication dans la construction et l'entretien du mur. La caisse de retraite néo-zélandaise a retiré ses

⁴⁴ Voir Union européenne, « Statement by the Spokesperson of the High Representative Catherine Ashton on renewed plans for Israeli settlements in and around East Jerusalem », 31 mai 2013. Disponible à consilium.europa.eu/uedocs/cms_Data/docs/pressdata/EN/foraff/137350.pdf.

⁴⁵ Voir, par exemple, South African Apartheid Litigation, 617 F. Supp. 2d 228, p. 260 à 262 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) et Almog c. Arab Bank, 471 F. Supp. 2d at 257 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

⁴⁶ Voir Juan Pablo Bohoslavsky et Veerle Openhaffen, « The past and present of corporate complicity: financing the Argentinean dictatorship », Harvard Human Rights Journal, vol. 23 (2010).

⁴⁷ Il convient de noter que du fait de questions soulevées dans le cadre de l'affaire Sharon (arrêt de la Cour de Cassation du 24 septembre 2003), dont la Cour était alors saisie, les législateurs en Belgique ont abrogé la loi belge du 16 juin 1993 et adopté une nouvelle loi concernant la répression des infractions graves au droit humanitaire (loi du 5 août 2003), qui nécessite un lien de rattachement direct avec la Belgique pour que les juridictions belges soient compétentes pour connaître d'une affaire.

investissements des sociétés Elbit Systems, Africa Israel et sa filiale Danya Cebus, et Shikun & Binui, à cause de leur participation à la construction de colonies de peuplement ou du mur⁴⁸.

47. Des comités d'investissement ont recommandé que les grandes banques européennes refusent d'accorder une assistance financière aux entreprises israéliennes qui fabriquent, construisent ou vendent des produits en Palestine et aux banques qui accordent des prêts hypothécaires aux constructeurs ou aux acheteurs de logements qui y sont situés. Dexia rentrerait dans cette dernière catégorie. Selon le journal israélien Ha'aretz, ces recommandations ont été suspendues à la suite des pressions exercées par Israël dans le cadre d'une initiative conduite par les États-Unis⁴⁹. Néanmoins, les recommandations, la réaction du Gouvernement israélien et les articles parus dans la presse israélienne indiquent que les institutions financières sont de plus en plus préoccupées par leurs responsabilités juridiques et éthiques liées aux transactions ayant un lien avec les colonies de peuplement.

B. Re/Max International

48. Re/Max International est une société immobilière privée sise aux États-Unis qui est dotée d'un réseau international d'agences détenues et exploitées par des franchisés. Re/Max International perçoit 1 % des revenus et un montant forfaitaire par associé⁵⁰. Re/Max International fournit au titre de franchises l'affiliation à sa marque internationale et la reconnaissance de celle-ci, une formation au démarrage, une formation continue, des ressources technologiques et un appui en matière de publicité et de marketing⁵¹. Re/Max Israël est une franchise de Re/Max International. Elle a ouvert en 1995 et compte plus de 100 agences, y compris dans des colonies de peuplement situées en Cisjordanie. Les agences israéliennes font de la publicité pour des biens immobiliers et se chargent de la vente de logements dans les colonies en Cisjordanie⁵². L'agence à Jérusalem de la franchise Re/Max Israël, appelée Re/Max Vision, cible les clients internationaux susceptibles de vouloir acheter un logement à l'intérieur et autour de Jérusalem⁵³. Re/Max International assure la promotion des mêmes biens sur son site Web. Une recherche effectuée en juin 2013 sur son site Web a révélé que 51 habitations situées dans neuf colonies faisaient ainsi l'objet d'une annonce⁵⁴.

49. Re/Max International peut-elle être tenue responsable des biens immobiliers situés dans des colonies de peuplement vendus par Re/Max Israël? En fournissant l'affiliation à sa marque internationale et la reconnaissance de celle-ci, une formation au démarrage, une formation continue, des ressources technologiques et ⁴⁸ Jan Willem van Gelder, Barbara Kuepper et Ewoud Nijhof, « Dutch economic links with the occupation », research paper prepared for Cordaid (Amsterdam, Profundo, 2013), p. 17. Disponible à cordaid.org/media/publications/Report_Dutch_economic_links_with_the_occupation_1.pdf; voir également Norwegian People's Aid, « Dangerous liaisons: Norwegian ties to the Israeli occupation » (2012). Disponible à npaid.org/Media/20_Files/Om-oss/Annual-reports/Dangerous-liaisons.

⁴⁹ « Danger ahead: an Israel boycott », éditorial de Ha'aretz, 14 juillet 2013.

⁵⁰ Voir remax-franchise.com/fs/home/general_content/faqs.

⁵¹ Voir emax-franchise.com/fs/helping-you-succeed/training-and-support.

⁵² Voir remax-israel.com/OfficeProfile.aspx?OfficeID=5012.

⁵³ Voir remax-capital.com/new/html/project_2_about.php.

⁵⁴ <http://global.remax.com>.

un appui en matière de publicité et de marketing, ainsi qu'en tirant profit de ces ventes, Re/Max International entretient des relations constantes avec ses franchises et exerce une influence continuelle sur celles-ci. Comme pour l'étude de cas concernant le groupe Dexia, la méthodologie utilisée dans le cadre de l'analyse juridique énoncée ci-dessous visera à évaluer si l'argumentation est fondée du point de vue juridique.

1. Droit international humanitaire

50. Promouvoir la vente, par exemple en faisant de la publicité, de biens immobiliers qui sont situés sur une colonie de peuplement ou en font partie, ou vendre ces biens contribue à la commission du crime international qui consiste à transférer des citoyens d'une puissance occupante dans le territoire occupé. En fait, faire de la publicité sur ces biens ou les vendre à des nationaux de la puissance occupante constituent par excellence des cas de participation à ces transferts.

2. Droit international humanitaire

51. La responsabilité de respecter les droits de l'homme exige des entreprises qu'elles évitent de contribuer à des incidences négatives sur les droits de l'homme et qu'elles atténuent ces incidences si elles sont directement liées à leurs activités⁵⁵. Re/Max International, en vendant des biens immobiliers situés sur des terres palestiniennes, contribue directement à des incidences négatives sur les droits de l'homme, telles que les restrictions imposées à la liberté de circulation qui entravent l'accès des Palestiniens aux terres, qui sont souvent utilisées à des fins agricoles, et des immixtions arbitraires et illégales dans la vie privée, la famille et le domicile des Palestiniens⁵⁶. Les États parties au Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques sont tenus de réglementer la conduite des groupes privés et de veiller à ce que cette conduite n'entraîne pas des violations des droits de l'homme et, lorsque cela se produit, d'assurer l'accès à un recours effectif.

52. Le code déontologique de Re/Max International énonce que ses affiliés s'engagent à éliminer toute pratique suivie par des professionnels de l'immobilier dans leur communauté susceptible de porter préjudice au public⁵⁷. Cette déclaration révèle deux choses. Premièrement, si la population palestinienne est considérée comme faisant partie du public en Israël (étant donné qu'Israël exerce le contrôle effectif de la population), alors la création de colonies de peuplement porte clairement préjudice à ce segment du public. Deuxièmement, le code déontologique s'étend aux affiliés de Re/Max International, qui font partie de sa « communauté », ce qui confirme une fois encore le lien existant entre la société internationale et ses franchises locales.

3. Droit pénal international

53. Ni les États-Unis ni Israël ne sont parties au Statut de Rome, donc il serait difficile de porter plainte contre un employé de Re/Max International pour complicité, sauf si ledit employé est un ressortissant d'un État partie au Statut de ⁵⁵ A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 13.

⁵⁶ Voir résolution 2200 A (XXI) de l'Assemblée générale, annexe, art. 12 et 17, et la plainte individuelle déposée par le Conseil norvégien des réfugiés au Comité des droits de l'homme le 28 février 2013.

⁵⁷ Voir, par exemple, remax.lu/agence-immobiliere-qualite/.

Rome. S'agissant du lien de causalité entre Re/Max International et ses franchises, le fait que sur son site Web sont affichées des annonces concernant la vente de ces biens immobiliers qui sont situés dans les colonies de peuplement prouve que l'entreprise est au courant de ces ventes et qu'elle perçoit 1 % des revenus tirés de chaque vente. Une fois encore, en fournissant l'affiliation à sa marque internationale et la reconnaissance de celle-ci, une formation au démarrage, une formation continue, des ressources technologiques et un appui en matière de publicité et de marketing, Re/Max International entretient des relations constantes avec ses franchises et exerce une influence continue sur celles-ci. Le Rapporteur spécial considère qu'il est possible de solidement argumenter que cela constitue une assistance en connaissance de cause à la commission d'un crime. De plus, le lien explicite existant entre différents vendeurs et la promotion et la vente des logements situés dans les colonies de peuplement israéliennes accroît fortement les chances d'engager la responsabilité individuelle de ces personnes pour les crimes considérés.

4. Responsabilité civile

54. La responsabilité civile des entreprises pour complicité pourrait s'avérer être un moyen plus difficile d'obtenir réparation dans ce cas. La décision de la Cour suprême des États-Unis dans l'affaire Kiobel c. Royal Dutch Petroleum Co. entrave l'engagement de poursuites judiciaires contre des entreprises sur le fondement de l'Alien Tort Statute, qui avait constitué un mécanisme précieux pour engager la responsabilité des entreprises pour violation du droit international⁵⁸. Il serait donc difficile de poursuivre Re/Max International aux États-Unis pour complicité des entreprises. Toutefois, il serait possible d'intenter une action en justice afin d'engager la responsabilité civile de personnes au sein de l'entreprise Re/Max International pour le rôle qu'elles jouent en fournissant une aide en connaissance de cause à la commission d'un crime sous forme de publicité et d'autres formes d'appui administratif aux fins de la vente par Re/Max Israël de biens immobiliers situés en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est. En outre, les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme soulignent que les États doivent prendre des mesures appropriées pour assurer, par le biais de moyens judiciaires, administratifs ou législatifs, l'accès à un recours effectif⁵⁹.

55. Les agents immobiliers qui promeuvent ou vendent des biens immobiliers situés dans les colonies de peuplement en Palestine à des citoyens de la Puissance occupante peuvent être tenus responsables pour complicité dans la commission du crime consistant à faciliter les activités de colonisation dans un territoire occupé. La présente étude de cas a porté sur Re/Max International, mais la même analyse s'appliquerait à d'autres sociétés immobilières. L'inexistence à l'heure actuelle d'une voie de recours devant un tribunal des États-Unis ne signifie pas qu'il n'en n'existe pas dans d'autres systèmes juridiques nationaux.

⁵⁸ L'Alien Tort Statute est un instrument juridique qui permet aux plaignants d'intenter une action civile auprès de tribunaux fédéraux de première instance (tribunaux de district) des États-Unis contre des personnes, y compris des étrangers qui ont agi en dehors du territoire américain, pour avoir violé le droit international.

⁵⁹ A/HRC/17/31, annexe, par. 25 et 26.

C. Conclusions sur les études de cas

56. Le présent rapport a proposé un modèle d'analyse juridique en mettant l'accent sur deux entreprises retenues pour les raisons particulières pour lesquelles leurs activités pourraient engager leur responsabilité dans des crimes internationaux. Ce modèle juridique peut s'appliquer à d'autres situations et à d'autres entreprises. Le Rapporteur spécial souligne une fois encore que les entreprises dont il est question ici ne sont que des exemples; toutefois, il est possible de tirer des conclusions de ces études.

57. Les institutions financières et les agents immobiliers peuvent être tenus responsables pour les liens qu'ils entretiennent avec des colonies de peuplement en Palestine occupée. Les pressions exercées par la communauté internationale en vue de faire respecter le droit international ne se limitent plus aux États en tant que responsables au premier chef. Les entreprises, les particuliers et les groupes peuvent être impliqués pour un comportement qui contribue à la commission d'actes illicites. Le groupe Dexia et Re/Max International, chacun à sa façon, contribuent à la croissance des colonies de peuplement : Dexia en fournissant des services financiers liés aux colonies, Re/Max International en vendant des biens immobiliers. Quant à l'évaluation du lien de causalité avec la politique et la pratique suivies par Israël consistant à transférer des nationaux en Palestine, elle doit être largement fondée sur le lien entre les entreprises internationales et les activités de peuplement. Est-ce que les activités des entreprises internationales contribuent directement aux violations du droit international que constituent les colonies de peuplement? Jouer volontairement un rôle causal dans la commission d'un crime peut dans certains cas suffire pour établir la complicité du crime.

V. Eau et assainissement en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza

58. Au cours de la mission effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la bande de Gaza en décembre 2012, un certain nombre d'interlocuteurs se sont déclarés gravement préoccupés par le manque d'eau potable et d'installations d'assainissement adéquates dans la bande de Gaza. Une partie de ces questions ont été traitées brièvement dans le précédent rapport du Rapporteur spécial au Conseil des droits de l'homme⁸. Eu égard au contrôle quasi exclusif qu'exerce Israël sur l'ensemble des ressources en eau souterraine et en eau de surface en Palestine, le Rapporteur spécial se déclare à nouveau préoccupé par la crise de l'eau et de l'assainissement engendrée par l'occupation.

La situation dans la bande de Gaza

59. Dans la bande de Gaza, 90 % de l'eau située dans l'aquifère côtier sous la bande de Gaza est impropre à la consommation humaine du fait de la pollution causée par les eaux brutes d'égouts et à l'infiltration d'eau de mer. En 2012, l'ONU a indiqué que l'aquifère côtier, dont la bande de Gaza dépend presque complètement, pourrait devenir inutilisable dès 2016, cette détérioration devenant irréversible d'ici à 2020. L'eau de distribution polluée a contraint de nombreuses familles à acheter de l'eau coûteuse à des vendeurs extérieurs ou à recourir à de l'eau de mer dessalée fournie par la Compagnie de distribution d'eau des municipalités côtières, ce qui constitue un fardeau déraisonnable vu le revenu moyen des ménages, qui sont déjà en difficulté à un niveau de subsistance ou en dessous. Dans ces circonstances, la plupart des Gazaouis consomment en moyenne 70 à 90 litres d'eau par personne et par jour, soit nettement moins que la norme mondiale de l'Organisation mondiale de la santé¹.

60. Le blocus israélien de la bande de Gaza a aggravé la pénurie d'eau et l'insuffisance des installations d'assainissement. Les retards et les restrictions qui touchent l'entrée des matériaux par le point de passage Kerem Chalom contrôlé par les Israéliens ont ralenti l'exécution d'un certain nombre de projets d'infrastructure dans le secteur de l'eau et de l'assainissement. De plus, non seulement Israël tire une part disproportionnée de l'eau provenant de l'aquifère côtier pour son propre usage, mais il empêche la population gazaouie d'accéder à l'eau du Wadi Gaza, un cours d'eau naturel qui a sa source dans les montagnes d'Hébron et se jette dans la mer Méditerranée.

61. La pénurie d'eau à Gaza a été aggravée par la destruction répétée des infrastructures hydriques et d'assainissement lors des opérations militaires israéliennes⁶⁰. Israël a détruit au moins 306 puits dans les zones d'accès restreint depuis 2005⁶¹. Dans ce contexte, le Rapporteur spécial condamne vigoureusement le fait que les installations d'approvisionnement en eau et d'assainissement ont été ciblées lors des opérations militaires israéliennes, ce qui est injustifiable d'un point de vue militaire et ne peut s'expliquer comme étant dû à des accidents.

La situation en Cisjordanie

62. Les Palestiniens en Cisjordanie se voient refuser la part qui leur revient de l'eau provenant de l'aquifère de la montagne et l'accès à l'eau du Jourdain, l'un et l'autre étant classés comme des ressources en eau partagées qui doivent être partagées équitablement conformément au droit international coutumier⁶². Les colons israéliens vivant en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est, dont le nombre est estimé à 500 000, consomment environ six fois plus d'eau que l'ensemble des Palestiniens, qui sont 2,6 millions⁶³. Les colons israéliens bénéficient de larges volumes d'eau directement acheminée jusqu'aux colonies de peuplement, ce qui leur permet d'irriguer les terres agricoles et de cultiver des cultures à forte utilisation d'eau. Par contre, les agriculteurs palestiniens dépendent largement de l'eau acheminée dans des camions-citernes ou recueillie dans des citernes, ce qui accroît le coût des cultures et réduit la majeure partie de l'agriculture palestinienne à de petites exploitations non rentables qui s'adonnent aux cultures pluviales, qui sont en moyenne 15 fois moins rentables que les cultures irriguées. Ainsi, seulement 6,8 % des terres cultivées par des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie sont irriguées⁶⁴.

⁶⁰ Voir A/HRC/22/35/Add.1 (en anglais).

⁶¹ Emergency Water and Sanitation-Hygiene Group, « Fact sheet 13: Water and sanitation in the Access Restricted Areas of the Gaza Strip » (décembre 2012). Disponible à [ewash.org/files/library/factsheet%20jan%2021\[1\].pdf](http://ewash.org/files/library/factsheet%20jan%2021[1].pdf).

⁶² Régie palestinienne des eaux, « Palestinian water sector: status summary report », rapport établi pour la réunion du Comité de liaison ad hoc (septembre 2012). Disponible à <http://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Water%2520summary%2520for%2520AH%2520report%2520FINAL.pdf>.

⁶³ Elizabeth Koek, Water for One People Only: Discriminatory Access and « Water-Apartheid » in the OPT, (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2013).

⁶⁴ Emergency Water and Sanitation-Hygiene Group, « Fact sheet 14: Water for agriculture in the West Bank » (mars 2013). Disponible à [ewash.org/files/library/WB%20factsheet%20final%20march%2009\[1\].pdf](http://ewash.org/files/library/WB%20factsheet%20final%20march%2009[1].pdf).

63. La répartition inégale des ressources en eau a été maintenue par le Comité mixte de l'eau qui a été créé en application de l'Accord intérimaire israélo-palestinien sur la Rive occidentale et la bande de Gaza. Ce comité, chargé d'accorder les autorisations de forage et de remise en état de puits et des réseaux d'égouts, fixe aussi les quotas d'extraction d'eau. Le droit de veto dont Israël peut faire usage lors de la prise de décisions par le Comité lui a permis de limiter le développement des infrastructures hydriques pour les communautés palestiniennes, en particulier dans la zone C de la Cisjordanie. De plus, tous les projets hydriques palestiniens situés dans la zone C doivent obtenir l'approbation de l'administration civile israélienne. Le Rapporteur spécial juge alarmant qu'entre 1995 et 2008, le Comité ait approuvé des propositions israéliennes pour trois puits et 108 réseaux d'approvisionnement et rejeté seulement l'une des 24 propositions de projet d'évacuation des eaux usées tandis qu'il n'a approuvé que la moitié de tous les projets relatifs à des puits présentés par les Palestiniens⁶³.

64. La perte de rares ressources en eau palestiniennes se produit non seulement du fait des démolitions opérées par les autorités israéliennes des installations « illicites » de collecte de l'eau, y compris des puits et des citernes de collecte de l'eau, mais aussi du fait des activités de forage en eau profonde effectuées par des entreprises israéliennes. Le Rapporteur spécial juge inquiétants aussi les actes de violence commis par des colons proches de communautés palestiniennes; plusieurs cas ont été signalés où des colons avaient pris le contrôle de sources palestiniennes et les avaient clôturées⁶⁵.

65. Israël bloque systématiquement le développement du secteur palestinien de l'évacuation des eaux usées et de l'assainissement au moyen de contraintes administratives imposées par le Comité mixte de l'eau et l'administration civile israélienne. Entre 1995 et 2011, seules 4 des 30 propositions relatives à une station d'épuration des eaux usées ont été approuvées par le Comité et leur construction a été retardée à de multiples reprises. Le Rapporteur spécial juge fort préoccupant qu'il n'y ait qu'une station d'épuration qui fonctionne en Cisjordanie, dont la capacité de traitement est inférieure à 3 % des besoins⁶².

66. Entre-temps, les autorités israéliennes tirent parti de la crise induite par l'occupation pour traiter jusqu'à 21 % des eaux usées palestiniennes dans des stations situées en Israël et financées par les recettes fiscales palestiniennes retenues par Israël. Les eaux usées ainsi traitées sont recyclées pour le profit exclusif du secteur agricole israélien⁶². Le contraste existant entre les difficultés rencontrées par les localités palestiniennes pour obtenir des installations d'épuration des eaux et la situation des colonies qui bénéficient de stations d'épuration rend ridicule le rôle que joue le droit international humanitaire dans la protection d'un peuple occupé.

Le droit des Palestiniens à l'eau et au développement

67. Considérant les politiques et pratiques illégales d'Israël qui engendrent une crise dans le secteur de l'eau et de l'assainissement en Palestine occupée, le Rapporteur spécial souligne que l'Autorité palestinienne n'a pas été en mesure de faire respecter le droit à l'eau des Palestiniens ni le droit à la création d'installations de traitement de l'eau et d'assainissement⁶⁶. L'appui de la communauté internationale des donateurs en faveur de solutions ponctuelles, telles que le financement d'usines de dessalement de l'eau et d'assainissement pour répondre aux besoins immédiats de la population palestinienne doit aller de pair avec l'exercice de pressions sur les autorités israéliennes pour les amener à mettre fin à leurs politiques discriminatoires. En un mot, les pratiques discriminatoires systématiques dont il est fait état sont aggravées par le fait que tandis que les Palestiniens se voient dénier leur droit à accéder aux ressources situées en Palestine, les colonies de peuplement bénéficient de ces politiques israéliennes. Dans les faits, à l'illégalité s'ajouter l'illégalité, le résultat étant le risque de rétrodéveloppement qui menace les Palestiniens dans la bande de Gaza et dans une moindre mesure en Cisjordanie.

⁶⁵ Voir A/HRC/22/63 et Oxfam, On the Brink: Israeli Settlements and Their Impact on Palestinians in the Jordan Valley (Oxford, 2012).

VI. Recommandations

68. Si les négociations diplomatiques en cours ne débouchent pas sur un règlement du conflit sous-jacent, le Rapporteur spécial recommande que l'Assemblée générale sollicite un avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur les conséquences juridiques de l'occupation prolongée de la Palestine.

69. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le Gouvernement israélien cesse d'étendre et de créer des colonies de peuplement en Palestine occupée, qu'il commence à démanteler les colonies existantes et à assurer le retour de ses nationaux du côté israélien de la Ligne verte et qu'il indemnise de façon adéquate pour les dommages dus aux colonies et aux activités connexes depuis 1967.

70. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le Gouvernement israélien informe les entreprises israéliennes qui sont des franchises ou des filiales d'entreprises internationales tirant profit d'activités menées dans les colonies de leurs responsabilités en tant qu'entreprises et des ramifications juridiques internationales de ces activités commerciales, en particulier de leur responsabilité pour complicité qui pourrait être engagée par des juridictions internes à l'étranger.

71. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que la Belgique et la France indemnisent les Palestiniens qui ont été directement lésés par les colonies auxquelles Dexia Israël a accordé des prêts hypothécaires ou pour lesquelles elle a géré des subventions.

72. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande qu'un exemplaire du présent rapport soit communiqué à Robert de Metz (Président du conseil d'administration du groupe Dexia) et à David L. Liniger (Président et fondateur de Re/Max International). Il est vivement recommandé que chacune de ces entreprises entreprenne sans délai un examen de la situation de façon à rendre ses politiques et pratiques ainsi que celles de ses affiliés et employés pleinement conformes aux lois et normes énoncées dans le présent rapport.

⁶⁶ Le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, la Convention sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination à l'égard des femmes, la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant et la Convention relative aux droits des personnes handicapées créent des obligations à la charge des États parties concernant l'accès à l'eau potable et à l'assainissement. Israël a ratifié les Conventions susmentionnées sauf la Convention relative aux droits des personnes handicapées, dont il est signataire.

73. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le groupe Dexia et Re/Max International acceptent d'adopter et de respecter des directives claires relatives à la responsabilité sociale de l'entreprise fondées sur les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme.

74. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que la société civile en Belgique et en France soit invitée à exercer des pressions sur son gouvernement pour qu'il vende sa participation dans le groupe Dexia et encourage la société civile à exiger que toutes les entreprises cessent leurs activités qui ont trait aux colonies de peuplement et insistent dorénavant pour que les entreprises agissent conformément aux Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme.

75. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que toutes les entreprises entretenant des relations avec les colonies de peuplement comparables à celles du groupe Dexia et de Re/Max International révisent leurs engagements en vue d'assurer le respect du droit international et des Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme.

76. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande qu'Israël mette fin immédiatement à ses politiques et pratiques discriminatoires qui ont pour objet de dénier aux Palestiniens la part des ressources qui leur revient dans les ressources en eau en Cisjordanie et dans la bande de Gaza. En particulier, Israël doit cesser de démolir les installations de collecte d'eau, y compris les puits et les réservoirs d'eau sous prétexte qu'ils ont été mis en service sans autorisation valable.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
5 novembre 2013
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-huitième session

Point 69 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Rectificatif

Paragraphe 33

La dixième phrase doit se lire comme suit :

Ces deux études de cas visent à déterminer si le groupe Dexia et Re/Max, en octroyant des prêts et en faisant de la publicité pour des biens immobiliers dans les colonies et en vendant ces biens, fournissent une assistance en connaissance de cause qui revient à aider à commettre des crimes internationaux liés au transfert de ressortissants de la Puissance occupante dans le territoire occupé.

Paragraphe 34

La dernière phrase doit se lire comme suit :

Le Rapporteur spécial a déjà parlé des activités de Dexia Israël Bank Limited (Dexia Israël), dont le groupe Dexia est l'actionnaire majoritaire, qui consistent à octroyer des prêts aux colonies situées en Cisjordanie.

Paragraphe 37

La dernière phrase doit être supprimée.

Paragraphe 38

La première phrase doit se lire comme suit :

La responsabilité du groupe Dexia peut-elle être engagée pour les prêts accordés par Dexia Israël à des colonies de peuplement israéliennes?

Paragraphe 40

Le paragraphe doit se lire comme suit :

De plus, conformément à l'article premier commun aux Conventions de Genève, il incombe à la Belgique et à la France, en tant qu'États parties, de respecter et de faire respecter les Conventions. À l'heure actuelle, elles sont les actionnaires majoritaires d'une entreprise qui accorde des prêts à des colonies de peuplement en Palestine occupée et, en tant que telles, manquent à leur obligation de faire respecter les Conventions.

Paragraphe 43

La sixième phrase doit se lire comme suit :

Si Dexia Israël octroie des prêts au conseil régional, ou si elle offre des services pour des dons effectués par Mifal HaPais, ces formes d'assistance contribuent directement à la croissance de la colonie et, partant, facilitent matériellement le transfert de citoyens israéliens dans le territoire occupé.

Paragraphe 44

La cinquième phrase doit se lire comme suit :

Dans ce cas précis, la Belgique et la France pourraient devoir réparer le préjudice subi par les Palestiniens résultant de la réception par les colonies de peuplement de prêts accordés par Dexia Israël.

Paragraphe 47

La deuxième phrase doit être supprimée.

Paragraphe 71

Le paragraphe doit se lire comme suit :

Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que la Belgique et la France indemnisent les Palestiniens qui ont été directement lésés par les colonies auxquelles Dexia Israël a accordé des prêts ou pour lesquelles elle a géré des subventions.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
11 août 2014
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-neuvième session

Point 69 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme : situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Makarim Wibisono, présenté conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* A/69/150.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le premier présenté à l'Assemblée générale par Makarim Wibisono, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Dans ce rapport technique succinct, élaboré à la suite de consultations tenues avec les États concernés et d'autres parties prenantes à Genève en juin 2014, le Rapporteur donne un aperçu des étapes à venir dans l'accomplissement des tâches prescrites dans la résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme et dans la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

I. Introduction

1. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Makarim Wibisono, a été nommé le 8 mai 2014, en application de la résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme et de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, et a pris ses fonctions le 2 juin 2014. Il est le sixième à se voir confier ce mandat.

2. Ce rapport technique succinct a été élaboré sur la base de consultations tenues avec les États concernés et d'autres parties prenantes à Genève en juin 2014. Le Rapporteur spécial a l'intention d'effectuer une mission en Israël et dans le Territoire palestinien occupé dès que possible en vue de préparer son premier rapport de fond, qui sera présenté au Conseil des droits de l'homme à sa vingt-huitième session, en mars 2015.

II. Mandat

3. Le mandat du Rapporteur spécial, décrit dans la résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme, a été renouvelé par le Conseil des droits de l'homme dans sa résolution 5/1.

4. Plus précisément, le Rapporteur spécial est chargé des tâches suivantes :

a) Enquêter sur les violations, par Israël, des principes et des fondements du droit international, du droit international humanitaire et de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, du 12 août 1949, dans les territoires palestiniens qu'il occupe depuis 1967;

b) Recevoir des communications, entendre des témoins et utiliser les procédures qui peuvent lui paraître nécessaires pour s'acquitter de son mandat;

c) Faire rapport à la Commission des droits de l'homme à ses sessions à venir, en lui présentant ses conclusions et recommandations, jusqu'à la fin de l'occupation de ces territoires par Israël.

5. Le Conseil des droits de l'homme¹ a donc clairement pour mission d'enquêter sur les violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qui auraient été commises par Israël en tant que Puissance occupante dans le cadre de son occupation prolongée des territoires palestiniens depuis 1967.

III. Coopération

6. Par le passé, Israël a pleinement coopéré avec le titulaire du mandat. En 1993, le Rapporteur spécial a été invité par le Ministre des affaires étrangères alors en poste, Shimon Pérès, à se rendre en Israël et dans le Territoire palestinien occupé en 1994, et a donc effectué deux visites au cours de son mandat. À chaque fois, il a rencontré des responsables israéliens et palestiniens, des représentants d'organisations non gouvernementales et d'organismes des Nations Unies dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, ainsi que des victimes et des témoins de violations présumées des droits de l'homme. Au cours de ses missions, il a bénéficié d'une entière liberté de mouvement et a notamment pu se rendre dans un centre de détention israélien dans le but de conduire des entretiens non surveillés avec des détenus palestiniens (voir E/CN.4/1994/14 et E/CN.4/1995/19).

¹ En application de la résolution 60/251 de l'Assemblée générale, le Conseil des droits de l'homme assume le rôle et les responsabilités de la Commission des droits de l'homme vis-à-vis des activités du Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme.

7. En raison de ses réserves concernant le mandat, Israël a cessé de coopérer avec les Rapporteurs spéciaux suivants, mais il a continué à les autoriser, à l'exception du cinquième, à se rendre dans le pays et dans le Territoire palestinien occupé². Cette situation est regrettable car la pleine coopération et la participation du Gouvernement israélien sont nécessaires à la mise en œuvre efficace, juste et équitable du mandat. Les autorités palestiniennes ont toujours apporté leur pleine coopération au titulaire actuel.

8. En tant qu'ancien journaliste et diplomate, le Rapporteur spécial est bien conscient que toute histoire se compose de deux éléments : les faits et l'interprétation qu'on en fait. Les informations contenues dans des rapports de seconde, voire de troisième main font forcément l'objet d'une interprétation et peuvent être influencées par le point de vue de la personne ou de l'organisation qui en est l'auteur, et ne sont jamais aussi fiables que les témoignages ou les renseignements recueillis lors de rencontres en personne avec des particuliers, des représentants de la société civile et des représentants des gouvernements palestinien et israélien.

9. Le Rapporteur spécial estime que la crédibilité des rapports soumis au Conseil des droits de l'homme et à l'Assemblée générale serait également renforcée s'il pouvait transmettre comme il se doit et de façon objective les points de vues et les positions officiels concernant la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il juge donc essentiel, lors de chaque visite de pays, de pouvoir s'entretenir avec des responsables israéliens et palestiniens.

10. Le Rapporteur spécial demandera officiellement aux Gouvernements d'Israël et de l'État de Palestine de faciliter une visite dans les deux pays avant la fin de l'année 2014 dans le but de préparer son premier rapport de fond, qui doit être présenté au Conseil des droits de l'homme à sa vingt-huitième session, en mars 2015.

11. Il faut espérer qu'Israël, en toute bonne foi, offrira au Rapporteur spécial actuel le même niveau de coopération qu'il a offert au premier et, plus récemment, au Rapporteur spécial sur le logement convenable (2012) et au Rapporteur spécial sur la promotion et la protection du droit à la liberté d'opinion et d'expression (2011) dans le cadre de leurs visites respectives en Israël et dans le Territoire palestinien occupé (voir A/HRC/22/46/Add.1, A/HRC/20/17/Add.2, E/CN.4/1994/14 et E/CN.4/1995/19). Le Rapporteur spécial compte que les Gouvernements israélien et palestinien prendront les mesures nécessaires à cet égard.

² Israël a expulsé le Rapporteur spécial en poste de 2008 à 2014 à son arrivée à l'aéroport Ben Gourion, en décembre 2008, alors qu'il essayait de se rendre dans le pays dans le cadre d'une mission, et a refusé tout contact avec lui par la suite (voir A/HRC/25/67).

12. Le Rapporteur spécial attend également avec intérêt des réponses constructives de la part du Gouvernement israélien sur les conclusions et recommandations qu'il formulera dans les rapports de fond qui seront présentés au Conseil des droits de l'homme et l'Assemblée générale au cours de son mandat.

IV. Consultations à Genève

13. Du 23 au 27 juin 2014, le Rapporteur spécial a effectué une mission à Genève pour tenir des consultations avec les États concernés. Le principal objectif de cette visite était d'établir des contacts et d'examiner la question de l'exécution du mandat avec le Représentant permanent d'Israël et l'Observateur permanent de l'État de Palestine auprès de l'Office des Nations Unies à Genève.

14. Le Rapporteur a rencontré l'Observateur permanent de l'État de Palestine et le Représentant permanent d'Israël les 24 et 26 juin respectivement, et s'est entretenu avec eux de façon ouverte et franche, dans un esprit de transparence et de confiance mutuelle. La réunion avec le Représentant israélien était particulièrement remarquable, puisque cela faisait six ans que son gouvernement avait cessé tout contact avec le prédécesseur du Rapporteur spécial. Le Représentant permanent a indiqué au Rapporteur spécial que son pays avait des réserves concernant la formulation partielle et la nature indéterminée du mandat qui, selon Israël, dispose que les violations doivent faire l'objet d'enquêtes du Rapporteur spécial. L'Observateur permanent de l'État de Palestine a affirmé qu'il appuyait sans réserve le Rapporteur spécial dans l'accomplissement de son mandat.

15. Le Rapporteur spécial a également rencontré d'autres interlocuteurs concernés, y compris le Président du Conseil des droits de l'homme, la Haut-Commissaire adjointe des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme et d'autres membres du personnel du Haut-Commissariat ainsi que des représentants d'organisations non gouvernementales, afin de s'informer de la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé et de demander conseil sur la façon de s'acquitter efficacement de son mandat. Il a aussi participé à un débat tenu au titre du point 7 de l'ordre du jour de la vingt-sixième session du Conseil des droits de l'homme, intitulé « La situation des droits de l'homme en Palestine et dans les autres territoires arabes occupés », afin d'en observer le déroulement.

16. Au cours de ces entretiens, le Rapporteur spécial a fait part de son souhait d'engager un dialogue constructif et de commencer à travailler avec les mécanismes relatifs aux droits de l'homme dont disposent les titulaires de mandat relevant des procédures spéciales, y compris par le biais de communications confidentielles, afin de mieux faire connaître les problèmes relatifs à la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Il a réaffirmé que son unique objectif était d'effectuer une évaluation objective de la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé et de faire des recommandations en vue d'améliorer cette situation pour les Palestiniens qui continuent de vivre sous l'occupation militaire d'Israël. Il a noté que la possibilité de se rendre en Israël et dans le Territoire palestinien occupé serait un bon point de départ et manifesté son vif désir d'effectuer au plus tôt une visite de pays.

17. Plusieurs interlocuteurs ont informé le Rapporteur spécial, au cours de ses consultations à Genève, qu'Israël avait transmis les assurances de sa coopération et de son engagement, y compris pour ce qui était de l'autoriser à effectuer une visite de pays.

V. Exécution du mandat et étapes à venir

18. Pour le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial a pour objectif de donner un aperçu de son mandat, d'examiner la question de la coopération et de rendre compte brièvement des consultations tenues avec les parties concernées à Genève en juin 2014. Il lui faut plus de temps pour réfléchir aux questions qui se posent et pour collecter, de première main, des informations crédibles et suffisantes dans le cadre d'une visite de pays avant de pouvoir élaborer un rapport de fond.

19. Le Rapporteur est toutefois gravement préoccupé par la tragédie qui se déroule dans la bande de Gaza. Depuis le début de l'opération militaire « Bordure protectrice », lancée par Israël dans la nuit du 7 juillet 2014, le nombre de civils palestiniens, y compris des enfants, tombés sous les frappes aériennes, les obus de char et les obus navals lancés par Israël sur les logements, les hôpitaux et les écoles de la bande de Gaza, y compris ceux dirigés par l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA), et d'autres infrastructures civiles, n'a cessé d'augmenter³. Le nombre de morts a continué de s'accroître encore plus rapidement avec le début de l'offensive terrestre, le 17 juillet.

20. Des milliers de familles dans l'ensemble de Gaza ont vu leur maison détruite. Des centaines de milliers de personnes ont dû fuir de chez elles et se réfugier dans des écoles, des bâtiments administratifs, des hôpitaux ou chez des membres de leur famille. Le nombre de déplacés hébergés par l'UNRWA serait déjà plus important que celui relevé lors de l'opération militaire « Plomb durci », menée par Israël du 27 décembre 2008 au 18 janvier 2009, épisode le plus meurtrier enregistré à Gaza depuis 1967. La gravité de la situation dans la bande de Gaza est exacerbée par le fait que la population civile manque de carburant, d'électricité, d'eau, de fournitures médicales et autres produits de première nécessité.

21. Le Rapporteur spécial a reçu des douzaines de rapports faisant état de violations du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire qu'aurait commises Israël, élaborés sur la base des activités de suivi et de documentation menées par de courageux défenseurs des droits de l'homme gazaouis, qui travaillent sans relâche et font face à des risques considérables pour appeler l'attention de la communauté internationale sur ces atrocités.

22. Au vu de la gravité de la situation, le Rapporteur spécial a effectué une mission spéciale à Genève, le 23 juillet, afin d'assister à la vingt et unième session extraordinaire du Conseil des droits de l'homme sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est. Il a prononcé une déclaration au nom du Comité de coordination des procédures spéciales et demandé que des enquêtes approfondies, indépendantes et efficaces soient menées rapidement sur tous les cas de morts et de blessures survenus parmi les civils ainsi que sur les destructions de logements civils et d'infrastructures essentielles causés par l'opération militaire israélienne à Gaza et par les tirs de roquettes lancés par des groupes armés palestiniens en Israël.

³ Bureau de la coordination de l'assistance humanitaire, compte rendu de la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé au 7 août 2014. Disponible à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/documents/ocha_opt_sitrep_07_08_2014_.pdf.

23. Le Rapporteur spécial est conscient des défis auxquels il devra faire face afin de s'acquitter de son mandat. Néanmoins, il fera tout ce qui est en son pouvoir pour enquêter en toute impartialité et objectivité sur les violations qu'aurait commises Israël et pour en rendre compte, en évitant tout préjugé et en comparant les faits aux dispositions du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire.

24. Dans ses prochains rapports, le Rapporteur spécial présentera des conclusions et recommandations qui pourront apporter un éclairage sur les violations présumées de droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Il espère que ces rapports contribueront, sous une forme ou sous une autre, à ce que les auteurs de ces violations en soient tenus responsables de façon à éviter qu'elles ne se reproduisent. Il est fermement convaincu que l'instauration d'une paix durable passe nécessairement par le respect des droits de l'homme et de la dignité humaine.

25. Le Rapporteur spécial prend note de la résolution S-21/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, adoptée le 23 juillet 2014, et compte pouvoir se rendre librement en Israël et dans le Territoire palestinien occupé et bénéficier de la pleine coopération des autorités des deux États dans le cadre de la réalisation de son mandat.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
28 octobre 2014
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-neuvième session

Point 68 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme : situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Rectificatif

Paragraphe 5

Remplacer le texte actuel par ce qui suit :

5. La mission¹ est donc claire : enquêter sur les violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qui auraient été commises par Israël en tant que Puissance occupante dans le cadre de son occupation prolongée des territoires palestiniens depuis 1967.

¹ En application de la résolution 60/251 de l'Assemblée générale, le Conseil des droits de l'homme assume le rôle et les responsabilités de la Commission des droits de l'homme vis-à-vis des activités du Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
25 septembre 2015
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-dixième session

Point 72 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Makarim Wibisono, conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le deuxième présenté à l'Assemblée générale par Makarim Wibisono, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il est basé essentiellement sur les informations communiquées par des victimes, témoins, représentants de la société civile, représentants des Nations Unies et responsables palestiniens à Amman lors de la mission effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juin 2015. Il traite d'un certain nombre de problèmes en relation avec la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza.

Table des matières

	Page
I. Introduction	4
II. La situation des droits de l'homme à Gaza	6
A. Vue d'ensemble	6
B. Le blocus	8
C. Le droit à la santé	9
III. Situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est	11
A. Les implantations israéliennes et leurs incidences	11
B. Usage excessif de la force	15
C. Le droit à la santé	17
D. Jérusalem-Est	18
IV. Prisonniers et détenus	20
V. Établissement des responsabilités	22
VI. Conclusions et recommandations	26

I. Introduction

1. Le présent rapport est le troisième établi par Makarim Wibisono, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, et le deuxième qu'il présente à l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies.

2. Comme l'accès au Territoire palestinien occupé demeurait impossible, le Rapporteur spécial a effectué sa deuxième mission dans la région à Amman, où du 9 au 12 juin 2015, il s'est entretenu avec des victimes, des témoins, des organisations non gouvernementales, des représentants des Nations Unies, des responsables palestiniens et d'autres parties intéressées, afin de recueillir des informations sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Le Rapporteur spécial exprime sa gratitude envers le Gouvernement jordanien pour l'appui que celui-ci a apporté à sa mission.

3. Des communications écrites ont été reçues, outre des informations recueillies oralement depuis la présentation des rapports précédents du Rapporteur spécial (A/HRC/28/78, A/69/301 et Corr.1). Le Rapporteur spécial est très reconnaissant pour tous les informations, témoignages et documents qui lui ont été fournis et qui, dans une large mesure, constituent les bases du présent rapport. Les effets des activités commerciales sur les droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris dans les implantations, demeurent préoccupants mais ne peuvent être traités dans le présent rapport, faute de place.

4. En ce qui concerne la mission, en raison de la restriction des déplacements imposée par le Gouvernement israélien, certains membres des organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes n'ont pas pu rencontrer le Rapporteur spécial. Plusieurs entretiens se sont déroulés par visioconférence, notamment avec les représentants d'organisations non gouvernementales palestiniennes se trouvant à Gaza. Ces difficultés sont un exemple typique des obstacles auxquels se heurtent les Palestiniens qui souhaitent aller à l'étranger, ou seulement se déplacer entre Gaza et la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à remercier le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine qui a coopéré sans réserve à l'exécution de son mandat, notamment en acceptant de faciliter l'accès au Territoire palestinien occupé.

6. Malgré certains échanges positifs qui ont eu lieu par l'intermédiaire de la Mission permanente d'Israël auprès de l'Office des Nations Unies à Genève, notamment des réponses à quelques-unes des communications qu'il avait adressées au Gouvernement israélien au sujet de problèmes relatifs aux droits de l'homme, le Rapporteur spécial n'a pas obtenu la coopération et l'accès au Territoire palestinien occupé auxquels il s'attendait. Il engage Israël à participer plus activement au dialogue bilatéral, notamment au moyen de communications.

7. Le Rapporteur spécial est prêt à se rendre dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, et demande encore une fois à Israël de lui ménager un accès sans entrave, ainsi que la possibilité de rencontrer les responsables israéliens compétents. En coopérant avec le Rapporteur spécial, Israël servirait ses propres intérêts tout en permettant au Rapporteur spécial d'accomplir sa tâche en toute efficacité et impartialité. Le Rapporteur spécial rappelle qu'à sa nomination des assurances lui ont été données en matière d'accès. Il est fort regrettable de constater que, plus d'un an plus tard, ces promesses n'ont pas été tenues. Il incombe à Israël, tout comme à n'importe quel État Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, de coopérer avec les titulaires de mandat des Nations Unies. S'il est toujours impossible d'obtenir l'accès au Territoire, le Rapporteur spécial sera obligé d'envisager d'autres moyens de s'acquitter au mieux de son mandat.

8. Comme on le verra dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial estime que pour bien rendre compte des allégations concernant des violations du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire commises par Israël dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, comme le veut son mandat, il doit parfois prendre en compte des facteurs contextuels, comme le rôle joué par des acteurs autres qu'Israël. Le Rapporteur spécial réaffirme sa ferme intention de rendre compte des faits en toute indépendance et objectivité aussi longtemps qu'il est titulaire du mandat.

9. Le Rapporteur spécial souhaite tout d'abord faire deux observations générales concernant la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Il s'agit premièrement de la situation extrêmement précaire qui règne à Gaza à la suite de l'escalade des hostilités qui a duré du 7 juillet au 26 août 2014. Durant cette période, Israël a lancé sur Gaza des milliers d'attaques aériennes et les Forces de défense israéliennes ont mené une opération terrestre du 17 juillet au 5 août¹. Le Rapporteur spécial est informé que le Hamas et d'autres groupes armés palestiniens ont tiré des milliers de roquettes et de mortier en direction d'Israël durant l'escalade des hostilités². L'opération militaire israélienne a causé d'immenses dégâts et de nombreux morts et blessés et a aggravé une situation humanitaire déjà fragile, ce qui a eu des répercussions en matière de droits de l'homme. La situation actuelle résulte des effets cumulatifs d'une lente asphyxie de l'économie et des sources de revenus en raison du blocus maintenu par Israël depuis plus de huit ans; de la détérioration de l'état de bien-être physique et psychologique de la population survivante de Gaza, après trois vagues d'hostilités successives en six ans; et de la dévastation de l'infrastructure, y compris des équipements collectifs essentiels comme les réseaux de distribution d'eau et d'électricité, ainsi que des logements³.

10. Plusieurs organisations de défense des droits de l'homme à Gaza ont estimé que la situation désespérée à Gaza était un terreau fertile de l'extrémisme et de la violence. Une nouvelle dégradation des conditions de vie et de la situation des droits de l'homme à Gaza ne fera que rendre la situation encore plus instable. Des améliorations rapides doivent être faites au regard du droit international, et des droits de l'homme en particulier, afin de parer à cette menace à la sécurité des Palestiniens et des Israéliens⁴.

11. Deuxièmement, l'existence et l'extension des implantations israéliennes en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, continuent d'avoir de graves répercussions

¹ Voir le rapport de la Commission d'enquête internationale indépendante créée en vertu de la résolution S-21/1 (A/HRC/28/79 et A/HRC/29/CRP.4).

² Israël a fait état de la mort de six civils en Israël. The 2014 Gaza Conflict (7 July–26 August 2014): Factual and Legal Aspects, résumé, mai 2015, par. 31 à 36.

³ En contravention des dispositions du droit international des droits de l'homme, dont les articles 6, 11, 12 et 13 du Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, et les articles 6, 9 et 12 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques.

⁴ « We must not fail in Gaza », déclaration commune de 30 organismes d'aide internationaux, publiée le 26 février 2015.

sur les droits de l'homme des Palestiniens. Il s'agit notamment de l'expulsion et du transfert forcés de Palestiniens en relation avec la confiscation des terres; des atteintes aux droits au logement, à l'eau, à la santé et à la libre circulation; de la commission d'actes de violence par les colons et de l'emploi abusif de la force par les forces de sécurité israéliennes⁵.

12. Selon plusieurs représentants du Gouvernement et de la société civile palestiniens, 2014 a été une année catastrophique pour les Palestiniens. Beaucoup ont souligné l'augmentation du nombre de morts et de blessés chez les Palestiniens. L'escalade dramatique des hostilités à Gaza a entraîné une hausse exponentielle des chiffres, mais le nombre de morts et de blessés a aussi fortement augmenté en Cisjordanie, notamment à la suite des affrontements avec les forces de sécurité israéliennes.

13. En ce qui concerne le droit à l'autodétermination consacré à l'article 1 des Pactes internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme, d'après les informations reçues par le Rapporteur spécial, il y a tout lieu de craindre que l'incidence des implantations, notamment sur la continuité des terres palestiniennes occupées et sur l'environnement et les ressources naturelles, est arrivée à un point tel que beaucoup des dégâts causés risqueraient d'être irréversibles.

14. Dans le contexte du conflit israélo-palestinien qui dure depuis longtemps, l'inaction relative de la communauté internationale risque fort de favoriser la poursuite désastreuse des violations des droits de l'homme et des violences. En se fondant sur les informations reçues, le Rapporteur spécial pense pouvoir affirmer que la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ne fait qu'empirer et que les violations des droits de l'homme des Palestiniens vivant sous l'occupation israélienne deviennent constantes.

15. L'impunité générale pour les violations des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire commises par le passé dans le Territoire palestinien occupé est une indication troublante que l'inaction ne peut que donner lieu à de nouvelles injustices. D'innombrables résolutions et de rapports des Nations Unies témoignent d'une situation caractérisée par un mépris persistant du droit international, y compris du droit international des droits de l'homme. Il est impossible d'accepter tacitement que cette réalité perdure, avec toutes les conséquences qu'elle peut avoir pour les générations futures.

II. La situation des droits de l'homme à Gaza

A. Vue d'ensemble

16. La lenteur des travaux de reconstruction à Gaza se voit dans le fait qu'au mois de juin 2015, pas une seule des maisons complètement détruites lors des hostilités de 2014 n'avait encore été reconstruite, en dépit du Mécanisme pour la reconstruction de Gaza qui a été mis en place grâce à la médiation de l'ONU. Un an après que quelque 19 000 logements avaient été complètement détruits ou gravement endommagés, environ 100 000 personnes étaient toujours déplacées⁶. En

⁵ Voir note 3 plus haut.

⁶ Antenne du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, « Internal displacement in the context of the 2014 hostilities », Gaza One Year On:

juillet 2015, le Coordonnateur spécial pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient a signalé une reprise de la coordination israélo-palestinienne visant à permettre aux Palestiniens de Gaza d'acheter les matériaux nécessaires à la reconstruction des logements détruits et à la construction de nouveaux logements⁷.

17. Beaucoup des annonces de contribution faites à la Conférence internationale sur la Palestine, intitulée « Reconstruire Gaza », tenue au Caire en octobre 2014, ne sont toujours pas concrétisées. Or, il est indispensable que les 3,5 milliards de dollars des États-Unis promis soient effectivement versés afin de soulager la situation à Gaza et d'améliorer l'accès aux services collectifs essentiels comme l'alimentation en eau et en électricité et l'assainissement, grâce à la reconstruction des logements et de l'infrastructure civile.

18. Compte tenu des effets du blocus, les hostilités de 2014 ont aggravé l'état déjà catastrophique de l'infrastructure de distribution d'eau et d'assainissement et rendu l'alimentation en électricité encore plus aléatoire⁸. Comme une organisation basée à Gaza l'a décrit, les habitants de Gaza se lèvent tous les jours pour se laver à l'eau salée et se couchent le soir sans électricité. Selon plusieurs interlocuteurs, Gaza se trouve dans un état de non-développement. Le taux de chômage déjà important a monté en flèche après la fin des hostilités pour atteindre 43 % à la fin de l'année⁹. Chacun a droit à un niveau de vie suffisant, mais les habitants de Gaza ont toutes les peines du monde à se procurer des articles de première nécessité et sont sans espoir ni perspectives d'avenir.

19. Les zones d'accès restreint imposées par Israël compromettent les moyens d'existence et les informations reçues font fréquemment état de l'emploi abusif de la force par les forces israéliennes qui contrôlent ces zones. Les limites exactes de ces zones d'accès interdit, qui sont contiguës à la frontière avec Israël et à la mer au large des côtes de Gaza, sont mal définies¹⁰. Les terres agricoles, les écoles et les maisons situées à des centaines de mètres de la clôture délimitant la frontière avec Israël en subissent le contrecoup. Il est interdit aux pêcheurs de pousser au-delà de six milles marins bien que de nombreux accrochages se soient produits en deçà de cette limite¹¹. Selon le Groupe de la protection, le nombre d'accrochages qui se sont soldés par la mort ou la détention arbitraire de pêcheurs a augmenté en 2014 par rapport à l'année précédente¹².

Humanitarian Concerns in the Aftermath of the 2014 Hostilities, juillet 2015. Disponible à l'adresse : gaza.ochaopt.org.

⁷ Exposé au Conseil de sécurité sur la situation au Moyen-Orient, 23 juillet 2015.

⁸ La centrale électrique de Gaza fournissait environ un tiers de l'électricité à Gaza avant d'être frappée par plusieurs attaques israéliennes en juillet 2014 (A/HRC/29/52/CRP.4, par. 450 à 455 et 580 à 584).

⁹ Fonds monétaire international, « West Bank and Gaza: Report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee », 18 août 2015, p. 5.

¹⁰ Antenne du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, Humanitarian Bulletin: Monthly Report, mai 2015, p. 10.

¹¹ Les Accords d'Oslo accordent aux Palestiniens le droit de pêcher jusqu'à une distance de 20 milles marins.

¹² « Update on access restricted areas in the Gaza Strip », janvier-décembre 2014, publié par le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme (HCDH) au nom du Groupe de la protection.

20. Les effets des hostilités de 2014 sur le droit à l'éducation continuent de se faire sentir à Gaza¹³. Le Ministère palestinien de l'éducation a signalé que des centaines d'écoles – écoles publiques et écoles de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) – ainsi que des établissements d'enseignement supérieur et des écoles maternelles étaient endommagés. De nouveaux travaux de réparation et de reconstruction sont nécessaires. Le Rapporteur spécial a appris avec soulagement que les graves difficultés financières de l'UNRWA avaient été suffisamment allégées pour permettre aux écoles de l'Office à Gaza d'accueillir la rentrée des classes le 24 août 2015¹⁴.

B. Le blocus

21. Le blocus imposé par Israël en 2007 a eu des effets fortement préjudiciables sur les droits de l'homme des Palestiniens de Gaza, notamment les droits à l'éducation, à la santé, au travail, au logement et à la libre circulation. Dans ses déclarations faites au moment de l'imposition du blocus, le Gouvernement israélien a invoqué le contrôle du Hamas à Gaza et des tirs de roquettes sur Israël depuis Gaza¹⁵. En maintenant le blocus, Israël continue d'invoquer des problèmes d'insécurité. Le blocus restreint fortement les importations et exportations et la circulation des biens entre la Cisjordanie et Gaza et vise explicitement à réduire l'approvisionnement en carburant et en électricité¹⁶. De plus, Israël a restreint encore les déplacements des Palestiniens à l'intérieur et en provenance de Gaza.

22. Le blocus constitue un châtement collectif de la population de Gaza et contrevient à l'article 33 of de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève) (voir A/69/327 et A/HRC/28/78). Par ailleurs, en termes de sécurité pour les Israéliens et les Palestiniens, alors même que le blocus était en vigueur, il y a eu trois flambées d'hostilités. Il est clair que le blocus a surtout compromis les droits fondamentaux des habitants de Gaza et intensifié leurs souffrances. Le Rapporteur spécial n'est pas convaincu par les arguments sécuritaires invoqués contre la levée du blocus, au vu des conséquences préjudiciables inadmissibles et contraires au droit international que son maintien fait subir à Gaza. Israël devrait recourir à d'autres mesures, qui sont conformes à ses obligations au regard du droit international, comme le contrôle des marchandises, pour résoudre les problèmes d'insécurité sans porter gravement atteinte aux droits de l'homme des Palestiniens et, comme la CNUCED l'a noté, sans mettre en danger la viabilité de Gaza (TD/B/62/3, par. 60).

23. Au moment de l'imposition du blocus, Israël a déclaré qu'il s'attachait à prendre en compte les problèmes humanitaires dans la bande de Gaza et à éviter une crise humanitaire¹⁷. Il est à présent évident que le blocus est un des principaux facteurs contribuant à enfoncer Gaza dans la crise humanitaire actuelle, avec un

¹³ Antenne du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, « Repair and reconstruction of schools in Gaza », Gaza One Year On, avril 2015.

¹⁴ Déclaration de l'UNRWA, 19 août 2015. Disponible à l'adresse : www.unrwa.org/newsroom/official-statements/unrwa-declares-school-year-open.

¹⁵ Ministère israélien des affaires étrangères, « Security Cabinet declares Gaza hostile territory », 19 septembre 2007.

¹⁶ Ibid.

¹⁷ Voir note 15 plus haut.

grand nombre de personnes déplacées en 2014 toujours sans foyer, une pénurie d'électricité avec des coupures de 12 à 16 heures par jour¹⁸, plus de 90 % de l'eau impropre à la consommation, environ 80 % de sa population recevant de l'aide et un taux de pauvreté de 39 %. Les efforts de coordination israélo-palestinienne en faveur de la reconstruction existent certes mais ils sont insuffisants pour régler les problèmes. Seul Israël peut soulager cette situation en levant le blocus et le Rapporteur spécial l'engage instamment à le faire.

C. Le droit à la santé

24. Environ 2 250 Palestiniens ont été tués à Gaza durant les hostilités de 2014, et deux tiers d'entre eux étaient des civils (A/HRC/29/52, par. 20). Selon les estimations, 10 % des 11 200 et quelques Palestiniens blessés, dont un millier d'enfants, seront handicapés à vie (A/69/926-S/2015/409, par. 88). Un membre d'une organisation médicale internationale a signalé au Rapporteur spécial que, au lendemain des hostilités, de nombreux civils blessés ont essayé désespérément de reconstruire leur vie mais ont été confrontés à la dure réalité de l'immobilisation totale (du moins temporairement jusqu'à ce que le traitement et la physiothérapie aient été terminés), sans logement et sans source de revenus.

25. La vague d'hostilités de 2014 a été sans précédent par sa durée et par le nombre de morts et de blessés et l'ampleur de la destruction causée à Gaza. Cela étant, son incidence sur l'état de santé de la population ne peut pas être dissociée de celle des vagues d'hostilités antérieures, les opérations militaires lancées par Israël en 2008/09 et 2012 ayant fait des milliers de victimes à Gaza et détruit ou endommagé des logements et l'infrastructure civile. La situation sanitaire se ressent aussi fortement des effets paralysants du blocus sur l'économie et sur l'état de l'infrastructure essentielle à Gaza. Un médecin palestinien d'un grand hôpital de Gaza a estimé que la situation sanitaire à Gaza empirait de jour en jour, ce qu'il a attribué notamment au blocus, à la pauvreté et au chômage, en signalant la détérioration de la plupart des indicateurs de la santé, voire de tous¹⁹.

26. Un représentant du Ministère palestinien de la santé a parlé des effets imperceptibles de la répétition des hostilités sur la population, en particulier sur les enfants. Selon une organisation médicale internationale, même avant les événements de 2014, beaucoup d'enfants à Gaza étaient déjà en état de stress post-traumatique à cause des attaques et des affrontements politiques antérieurs. Après les événements de 2014, près de 425 000 enfants auraient besoin d'un soutien psychosocial immédiat après avoir connu la guerre, échappé ou survécu aux attaques lancées contre leur maison, reçu des blessures et perdu des proches et des amis²⁰. Les collectivités à Gaza qui doivent aider ces enfants victimes de traumatismes physiques et psychologiques à recouvrer la santé sont elles-mêmes dévastées.

¹⁸ Antenne du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, « The humanitarian impact of Gaza's electricity and fuel crisis », Gaza One Year On, juillet 2015.

¹⁹ Interview menée par une organisation médicale internationale environ un an après les événements de 2014.

²⁰ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, Humanitarian Bulletin: Monthly Report, octobre 2014.

27. De graves problèmes de santé publique sont engendrés par les conditions dans lesquelles vivent un grand nombre de personnes déplacées, notamment le déversement de l'eau contaminée, de l'eau d'égout et des eaux usées dans l'environnement en raison d'une infrastructure d'assainissement déficiente et endommagée, ce qui aggrave les risques de maladies²¹. De plus, des milliers de restes explosifs de guerre gisent dans les débris des maisons et autres infrastructures détruites et sont de véritables menaces larvées (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, par. 575).

28. Le Groupe sectoriel pour la santé dans le Territoire palestinien occupé a noté que dès le premier jour du conflit (de 2014), les équipements sanitaires n'avaient pas échappé à la destruction²². Treize équipements sanitaires, publics et privés, ont été détruits et 104 autres, dont des hôpitaux, des cliniques et des pharmacies, ont été endommagés durant l'intensification du conflit²³. Le Rapporteur spécial a reçu des informations détaillées sur plusieurs cas de violation par Israël du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme lors des attaques dirigées contre des hôpitaux et des ambulances, et d'obstruction d'évacuations médicales. La remise en état des installations médicales a été ralentie par le manque de matériaux de construction et de fonds. Rien que pour le secteur de la santé, les pertes en infrastructure et en matériel se sont chiffrées à 23 983 168 dollars des États-Unis²⁴.

29. La pénurie d'eau salubre fait qu'il est difficile de stériliser les instruments médicaux et l'alimentation électrique aléatoire abîme le matériel médical sensible. Environ 50 % du matériel médical ne fonctionne pas pour des raisons diverses, notamment l'impossibilité de se procurer des pièces de rechange ou d'entretenir correctement le matériel. Le Ministère palestinien de la santé a indiqué au Rapporteur spécial qu'il s'efforçait de fournir chaque mois des milliers de litres de carburant pour faire fonctionner le matériel permettant de sauver des vies, comme les appareils de dialyse. Des pénuries chroniques de produits médicaux ont été signalées vers la fin du premier semestre de 2015, y compris le manque d'environ 30 % de médicaments essentiels et de près de 40 % d'articles médicaux jetables, notamment des gants et des aiguilles. Selon l'article 55 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, en tant que Puissance occupante, Israël « a le devoir d'assurer l'approvisionnement de la population [...] en produits médicaux [...] lorsque les ressources du territoire occupé sont insuffisantes ».

30. C'est avec des installations endommagées ou détruites et un manque cruel de matériel et de médicaments que le secteur de la santé à Gaza doit faire face à un nombre accru de cas de traumatismes physiques et mentaux causés par les hostilités. L'aide internationale²⁵ et la ténacité du personnel de santé palestinien sont ce qui maintient le secteur de la santé de Gaza à flot. Le manque de produits médicaux et le non-paiement des traitements de plus de 4 500 agents sanitaires à Gaza, qui en ²¹ Groupe sectoriel de la santé, Gaza Strip: Joint Health Sector Assessment Report, septembre 2014, section 5.8.

²² Ibid., section 4.1 concernant la coordination dans le Groupe sectoriel pour la santé.

²³ Antenne du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, « Reconstruction of health sector facilities impaired by shortages of materials and funding », Gaza One Year On, avril 2015.

²⁴ Exposé de l'Organisation mondiale de la Santé, juin 2015, renvoyant à la Stratégie d'analyse détaillée des besoins et de relèvement, avril 2015.

²⁵ OMS, « Report of a field assessment of health conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory », document WHO-EM/OPT/006/E, p. 15 et 16.

général ont continué à travailler, sont liés à la situation financière et politique des autorités palestiniennes en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, qui est affaiblie par le blocus et d'autres politiques d'occupation, notamment la retenue des recettes fiscales par Israël²⁶. S'il est vrai que la coordination – notamment de l'aide étrangère, des traitements et des fournitures – pose aussi des problèmes aux autorités palestiniennes, le Groupe sectoriel de la santé dans le Territoire palestinien occupé estime néanmoins qu'il ne sera pas possible de remettre sur pied le secteur de la santé de Gaza si Israël maintient le blocus²⁷.

31. L'état du secteur de la santé de Gaza oblige le Ministère palestinien de la santé et les hôpitaux de Gaza à aiguiller les patients qui ont besoin de soins spécialisés vers la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et vers Israël, ainsi que vers l'étranger. Les efforts faits par les coordinateurs israéliens (Groupe de coordination des activités gouvernementales dans les territoires) pour faciliter les transferts de patients au point de passage d'Erez vers Israël ont été notés²⁸. Les chiffres fournis par l'Organisation mondiale de la Santé (OMS) montrent que le nombre de demandes de permis de sortie du territoire pour des raisons médicales a augmenté de 33 % entre 2013 et 2014²⁹. Cela étant, la proportion des demandes de permis d'emprunter le point de passage d'Erez pour des raisons médicales qui ont été approuvées par les autorités israéliennes a diminué, passant de 88,7 % en 2013 à 82,4 % en 2014 et 81,6 % en 2015. Le Rapporteur spécial est préoccupé par le pourcentage relativement élevé de personnes qui n'ont pas pu recevoir des soins adéquats en dehors de Gaza en raison de la restriction des déplacements imposée par Israël, d'autant plus que la détresse dans laquelle se trouve le secteur de la santé à Gaza est due dans une large mesure à des décisions prises par Israël.

32. Si aussi bien les Palestiniens que les Israéliens ont subi des pertes tragiques lors des flambées d'hostilités de ces dernières années, le peuple qui est indéniablement le plus gravement touché en termes de nombre de morts et de blessés et d'ampleur des destructions n'est pas près d'être en voie de guérison. C'est un fait que le blocus rend le secteur de la santé de Gaza tributaire de l'aide de la communauté internationale.

III. Situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est

A. Les implantations israéliennes et leurs incidences

33. Les politiques et pratiques d'Israël en matière d'implantations demeurent à l'origine de la plupart des violations des droits de l'homme dont sont victimes les Palestiniens en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, et elles les poussent à abandonner leurs maisons et leurs terres, tout particulièrement dans la zone C et à Jérusalem-Est, où se concentrent la majorité des implantations. Ainsi, en 2014, la construction de quelque 1 300 logements aurait débuté. Même si ce chiffre est

²⁶ Susan Power et Nada Kiswanson van Hooydonk, Divide and Conquer: A Legal Analysis of Israel's 2014 Military Offensive Against the Gaza Strip (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2015).

²⁷ Gaza Strip: Joint Health Sector Assessment Report, p. 4.

²⁸ WHO-EM/OPT/006/E, p. 9.

²⁹ Un des facteurs est que le nombre de patients orientés vers l'Égypte a diminué depuis que l'accès par le point de passage de Rafah a commencé à être restreint ou interdit en 2013.

inférieur à celui des années précédentes, le nombre d'appels d'offres lancés en 2014 pour la construction de nouvelles implantations (près de 4 500 logements) est en augmentation par rapport aux années précédentes, ce qui indique que l'expansion va se poursuivre³⁰.

34. Selon les dispositions de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, la Puissance occupante ne peut procéder au transfert de sa propre population civile dans le territoire qu'elle occupe. De même, les transferts forcés, en masse ou individuels, de personnes protégées sont interdits, sauf si leur sécurité ou d'impérieuses raisons militaires exigent leur évacuation à l'intérieur du territoire occupé. Par conséquent, le caractère illégal des implantations israéliennes et des transferts forcés des Palestiniens au regard du droit international humanitaire est bien établi.

35. Le découpage de la Cisjordanie en zones A, B et C en application des Accords d'Oslo s'est accompagné de différents niveaux de contrôle israélo-palestinien, d'un contrôle principalement palestinien dans la zone A à un contrôle israélien total dans la zone C, qui recouvre plus de 60 % de la Cisjordanie. Le Ministère palestinien de l'intérieur a informé le Rapporteur spécial que dans certaines situations d'urgence, telles que des incendies ou des accidents de la circulation, les autorités israéliennes n'étaient pas intervenues et avaient empêché la défense civile palestinienne d'intervenir, principalement quand ces événements se produisaient dans la zone C.

36. On ne connaît pas le nombre exact de colons implantés en Cisjordanie, mais ils seraient selon les estimations entre 500 000 et 600 000, dont environ un tiers à Jérusalem-Est. À titre de comparaison, les Palestiniens seraient environ 320 000 à Jérusalem-Est et 300 000 dans la zone C, où Israël exerce un contrôle presque exclusif sur le maintien de l'ordre, l'urbanisme, l'allocation de l'eau et la construction. On ne peut que constater la vulnérabilité des Palestiniens vivant dans ces secteurs.

37. La destruction des maisons et des structures utilisées dans les activités de subsistance est l'une des raisons qui incitent les Palestiniens à partir et à déménager dans les zones A et B, où le contrôle d'Israël est moindre. Les pratiques israéliennes en matière d'urbanisme et de zonage sont largement critiquées pour leur caractère discriminatoire envers les Palestiniens. La majorité des terrains situés dans la zone C sont réservés à la construction d'implantations ou ont été déclarés domaine de l'État, zones militaires fermées, réserves naturelles ou autres. Alors que les Palestiniens pourraient construire sur 30 % des terrains restants, les chantiers doivent recevoir l'autorisation d'Israël et, dans les faits, moins de 1 % des terrains est disponible. Par conséquent, de nombreux Palestiniens n'ont d'autre choix que de construire sans permis palestiniennes, y compris des maisons, des écoles, des citernes à eau et des enclos pour animaux, ont été démolies par les autorités israéliennes dans la zone C et à Jérusalem-Est. Au premier trimestre de 2015, les destructions de structures financées par des donateurs au bénéfice des Palestiniens dans le cadre de l'assistance humanitaire auraient connu une augmentation de 37 %. Ces démolitions constituent des atteintes aux droits de l'homme, y compris le droit à un niveau de vie suffisant, à l'alimentation, au logement, au travail et à l'éducation.

38. L'existence ou non d'un permis de construire ne change rien au fait qu'Israël n'a pas le droit de détruire des propriétés privées palestiniennes³¹. Certaines informations indiquent qu'entre juin 2014 et juin 2015, 524 structures

³⁰ Informations extraites du rapport du bureau local du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le territoire palestinien occupé, reprenant les chiffres du Bureau central israélien de statistique sur les ouvertures de chantiers et du mouvement La paix maintenant, sur les appels d'offres.

³¹ Cette interdiction s'applique sauf dans le cas où les destructions seraient rendues absolument nécessaires par les opérations militaires (art. 53 de la quatrième Convention de Genève).

39. Malheureusement, les Palestiniens dont les biens font l'objet d'un ordre de destruction semblent bénéficier d'une protection juridique minimale. Le village de Soussiya, dans le gouvernorat de Hébron, est un bon exemple. Les 170 structures situées dans la zone C³², qu'il s'agisse de maisons, d'abris pour animaux, d'écoles ou même de latrines, sont sous le coup d'un ordre de démolition. Alors que le projet d'extension de l'implantation voisine de Soussiya a été approuvé, tous les projets de construction présentés aux autorités israéliennes par les villageois palestiniens en vue d'obtenir des permis de construire ont été rejetés. Bien que la Haute Cour de justice israélienne n'ait pas encore rendu de décision concernant une requête déposée contre le rejet du plan d'urbanisation du village, la Cour a refusé de prononcer une injonction provisoire de suspendre les démolitions.

40. Les disparités entre les quantités d'eau allouées aux Palestiniens et celles qui sont allouées aux colons restent l'une des principales raisons expliquant l'extension des implantations et le déplacement des Palestiniens. En moyenne, les colons israéliens consomment 369 litres par personne et par jour pour leur usage domestique, contre 70 litres pour les Palestiniens (A/68/513, par. 38). Certains interlocuteurs ont souligné le fait que les implantations étaient généralement situées à proximité des points d'eau. Un groupe de jeunes de la vallée du Jourdain a expliqué qu'Israël contrôlait la majorité des ressources en eau, y compris les formations aquifères et les puits de Cisjordanie, et qu'il utilisait des pompes puissantes pour puiser de l'eau en profondeur, asséchant les puits et les sources palestiniens. Selon l'organisation non gouvernementale Monitor, l'allocation de l'eau est conforme aux Accords d'Oslo et les projets hydriques sont soumis à l'approbation de la Commission mixte de l'eau. Toutefois, comme l'a signalé le Secrétaire général, malgré l'existence de cette commission, « dans la pratique, le système de gestion de l'eau et les politiques existantes d'Israël sont discriminatoires à l'égard des Palestiniens » (A/68/513, par. 38). Cette constatation recoupe les informations reçues selon lesquelles les implantations, en particulier celles de la vallée fertile du Jourdain, sont amplement alimentées en eau et peuvent pratiquer des cultures exigeant beaucoup d'eau, alors que les récoltes palestiniennes dans le même secteur souffrent du manque d'eau. Par ailleurs, le Ministère palestinien de l'agriculture a informé le Rapporteur spécial que des colons et les autorités israéliennes avaient détruit ou démoli certaines installations agricoles, dont des puits et des systèmes d'irrigation.

41. Dans un rapport précédent (A/HRC/28/78) et un communiqué de presse³³, le Rapporteur spécial a souligné que les Bédouins de la zone C constituaient un groupe particulièrement vulnérable. L'Administration civile israélienne prévoit l'expulsion d'individus et de familles appartenant aux quelque 46 communautés implantées ³² Une partie du village se trouve dans la zone B.

³³ « UN human rights expert urges Israel to abandon plans to transfer Bedouins in the occupied West Bank », 5 juin 2015.

dans le centre de la Cisjordanie, y compris en périphérie de Jérusalem-Est, et leur transfert vers trois sites imposés par le Gouvernement dans les gouvernorats de Jérusalem et de Jéricho, à Fasayil, à Noueima et à el-Jabal, ce dernier site présentant des risques sanitaires du fait de sa proximité avec une décharge. Le 5 mai 2015, des représentants de l'Administration civile israélienne sont entrés dans le village d'Abou Nawar et ont essayé de convaincre ses habitants de signer un accord de transfert à el-Jabal, tout en les informant qu'ils seraient déplacés, qu'ils signent ou non.

42. Le 19 août 2015, des fonctionnaires des Nations Unies ont appelé à la suspension immédiate des démolitions en Cisjordanie après que 22 structures eurent été démolies dans 4 des 46 villages concernés par le projet, soulignant les implications stratégiques et le lien avec le projet d'implantation E1 : « Ces démolitions interviennent parallèlement au développement des implantations. L'application du plan de réinstallation de ces communautés aurait pour effet de réduire la présence palestinienne dans et autour du site prévu pour le projet d'implantation E1 »³⁴.

43. Un représentant de Khan el-Ahmar, un village touché par les démolitions d'août 2015, a expliqué au Rapporteur spécial qu'en avril un drone avait été aperçu en train d'effectuer des survols de surveillance au-dessus du village plusieurs fois par semaine. Certains résidents ont également eu le sentiment d'être épiés par des colons qui entraient dans le village et parfois dirigeaient les projecteurs de leurs voitures vers des maisons en pleine nuit. La conjugaison du projet de transfert, de l'absence de réelles consultations, des menaces de démolition et de leur mise à exécution, des restrictions imposées aux déplacements, de la surveillance et des violences exercées par les colons, participe à créer un environnement coercitif qui incite les Palestiniens à partir. Bien que les expulsions et les transferts forcés soient contraires au droit international, les villageois se rendent compte que, dans la réalité, toute résistance aux exigences israéliennes se traduit par des violations de leurs droits à la sécurité, à la santé, à la protection de leur vie privée, à avoir une famille et un foyer, à se déplacer et à choisir leur lieu de résidence librement, et à avoir un niveau de vie satisfaisant pour eux-mêmes et leur famille, y compris à un logement, à l'accès à l'eau et à l'assainissement.

44. Malgré les appels clairs, répétés et sans équivoque de la communauté internationale, y compris du Secrétaire général (A/69/348), demandant à Israël de ne pas violer le droit international humanitaire ni le droit international des droits de l'homme, le Rapporteur spécial se déclare profondément choqué qu'Israël ait refusé d'obtempérer et ait mis ses plans à exécution, avec des conséquences terribles pour les communautés concernées.

45. Le Rapporteur spécial a également entendu un exposé sur l'expansion des implantations dans le secteur de Gush Etzion et ses incidences pour plusieurs villages de la région de Bethléem. Le tracé prévu pour le mur de séparation, déclaré illégal par la Cour internationale de justice³⁵, pénètre dans le gouvernorat de Bethléem sur 56 kilomètres. Au cours de sa visite, le Rapporteur spécial a été abasourdi de constater qu'en 2015 la construction du mur menace de couper à ³⁴ UNRWA, « UN officials call for an immediate demolitions freeze in the West Bank », 19 août 2015.

³⁵ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J., Rapports 2004, p. 136.

travers le village de Wadi Foukine, situé dans les zones B et C, et dont la population est composée en majorité de réfugiés. En 2014, les autorités israéliennes ont confisqué 1 500 dounoums de la superficie de ce village agricole connu pour son système d'irrigation, soit la moitié de ce qui lui restait.

46. Les 22 000 habitants palestiniens de Wadi Foukine et de trois autres villages sont concernés par les trois implantations voisines, qui comptent au total quelque 50 000 colons. Selon l'UNRWA, les travaux préparatoires pour la construction de 218 logements ont débuté sur les terres confisquées à Wadi Foukine. Le Rapporteur spécial a vu des photographies montrant l'implantation de Betar Illit qui domine désormais Wadi Foukine situé plus bas dans la vallée, alors qu'en 2000 la colline était encore nue. Il a également vu des photographies et des vidéos montrant les eaux usées de l'implantation se déverser dans le village, et le maire du village lui a expliqué que les terres et les sources d'eau avaient été polluées, polluant de ce fait les récoltes devenues invendables. La pollution serait en outre responsable de maladies chez les habitants du village. L'UNRWA a signalé plusieurs cas de harcèlement visant des habitants de Wadi Foukine, y compris de la part de colons armés se rendant sur les bassins d'irrigation pour les intimider. L'Office a noté que « les autorités israéliennes étaient incapables de prévenir ou de réduire » ces incidents.

47. La violence des colons est un autre facteur incitant les Palestiniens à partir. Le Rapporteur spécial sait que les relations entre colons et Palestiniens sont très tendues et il abhorre tout acte de violence. Le 31 juillet 2015, dans le village cisjordanien de Douma, la maison de la famille Dawabsha a été volontairement incendiée, causant la mort d'un enfant et de ses parents et laissant un petit garçon de 4 ans orphelin. Cette tragédie semble être la conséquence de l'expansion d'une implantation et de l'impunité dont bénéficient les colons commettant des actes violents, ainsi que du comportement illégal de son responsable.

48. Au cours des six premiers mois de 2015, on a dénombré en moyenne chaque mois 7 victimes palestiniennes et 11 propriétés endommagées du fait des violences commises par des colons. En 2014, 331 actes de violence envers des personnes ou des biens avaient été commis par des colons³⁶.

B. Usage excessif de la force

49. Courant 2014, l'intensification des tensions et des affrontements en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, ont accentué les préoccupations au sujet de l'usage excessif de la force contre les Palestiniens de la part des forces de sécurité israéliennes (A/HCR/28/78, par. 41 à 47). On a pu observer une montée de la violence à la suite des meurtres de jeunes Palestiniens et Israéliens en juin et juillet 2014 et dans le contexte de l'escalade des hostilités à Gaza. En 2014, 56 Palestiniens auraient été tués et près de 6 000 autres blessés lors d'affrontements avec les forces israéliennes en Cisjordanie, particulièrement violents pendant les mois de juin, juillet et août³⁷. En 2014, il y a eu deux fois plus de morts qu'en 2013 et six fois plus qu'en 2012. Pour le premier trimestre de 2015, les chiffres semblent comparables à ceux des années précédentes, bien que de graves préoccupations subsistent quant aux morts et aux blessés graves du fait des actions menées par les forces de sécurité israéliennes, y compris du nombre croissant de tirs à balles réelles pendant les manifestations, dans des circonstances ne paraissant pas poser de menace imminente³⁸.

³⁶ Bureau local du Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires dans le territoire palestinien occupé, Humanitarian Bulletin: Monthly Report, juillet 2015, annexe.

³⁷ Ibid.

50. Il a été expliqué au Rapporteur spécial qu'au cours d'affrontements survenus le 27 février 2015 lors de la manifestation non violente organisée chaque année à Hébron, « Open Shuhada Street », les forces de sécurité israéliennes auraient utilisé des munitions réelles ainsi que du gaz lacrymogène, des grenades étourdissantes et des balles de caoutchouc. Parmi les blessés se trouvaient six Palestiniens atteints par des balles réelles. L'UNRWA a fait savoir qu'il « continuait de recenser régulièrement les cas de manifestants palestiniens blessés par les munitions réelles utilisées par les forces de sécurité israéliennes ». Les camps de réfugiés situés à proximité d'implantations et du mur, des zones où les forces israéliennes sont très présentes, sont particulièrement exposés. L'Office a exprimé son inquiétude concernant les accrochages intervenus dans le camp de réfugiés de Jalazone, au cours desquels des adolescents ont été grièvement blessés par des balles réelles tirées par les forces de sécurité israéliennes. Le 18 mars 2015, au cours d'une manifestation dans le camp de réfugiés de Jalazone, le jeune Ali Safi (21 ans) a été atteint par des balles réelles qui auraient été tirées par un soldat israélien situé à environ 70 mètres. Le jeune homme a fini par succomber à ses blessures.

51. Le Rapporteur spécial s'inquiète également de l'utilisation des armes dites « moins létales », qui peuvent être et ont été utilisées avec des effets létaux. Plusieurs interlocuteurs ont mentionné le cas du médecin palestinien à Abu Dis, décédé en mai 2014 après avoir inhalé du gaz lacrymogène qui aurait été utilisé par les forces de sécurité israéliennes.

52. Selon l'Association for Civil Rights in Israel, les militaires israéliens utilisent depuis juin 2014 un nouveau type de balles dites « éponge » au cours des émeutes et des manifestations à Jérusalem-Est. Les témoignages recueillis sur 10 incidents de ce type intervenus entre juillet 2014 et mai 2015 font état de blessures graves. Bien que la réglementation interdise l'usage des balles éponge contre les mineurs, six enfants figurent parmi les victimes, dont un âgé seulement de 6 ans. Ils souffriraient de fractures faciales et l'un d'eux a perdu un œil.

53. L'un de ces accidents s'est produit en mars 2015 à Jérusalem-Est, un jeune garçon d'environ 12 ans ayant été pris pour cible par les forces de sécurité israéliennes tirant avec des balles éponge alors qu'il rentrait de l'école. Dans la déposition transmise par Al-Haq, le jeune garçon raconte qu'il s'est caché entre des voitures et que des militaires israéliens auraient tiré à au moins 25 reprises pour empêcher les écoliers d'approcher des parties du mur en cours de construction. Après être sorti de sa cachette, il a été atteint à l'œil gauche et a dû subir une ablation chirurgicale.

54. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande une nouvelle fois fermement à Israël de respecter les Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois de 1990. L'usage excessif de la force ne doit bénéficier d'aucune impunité.

³⁸ Concernant le recours accru aux munitions réelles, y compris dans le cadre du maintien de l'ordre, voir également A/HRC/29/52, par. 70.

55. Le recours à l'eau « puante » en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, a des incidences préoccupantes sur les droits à la santé et au travail, la liberté d'expression et le droit de réunion pacifique³⁹. Ce liquide à l'odeur fétide composé d'eau, de levure et de carbonate de sodium, peut provoquer des irritations oculaires et cutanées, des nausées et des douleurs abdominales⁴⁰. L'odeur stagnante, qui rappelle celle des égouts, est également une source de gêne pour les personnes ou les propriétés arrosées. Bien qu'elle soit destinée à l'origine à disperser la foule en l'aspergeant à distance, certaines sources expliquent que les forces de sécurité israéliennes aspergent l'eau puante directement sur les maisons et les commerces à des fins semble-t-il punitives. Au cours des périodes de tension entre juillet et décembre 2014, l'Association for Civil Rights in Israel a expliqué que « les rues de presque chaque quartier de Jérusalem-Est avaient été arrosées de grandes quantités de liquide puant, les épandages visant principalement les résidences, des voitures et des boutiques ».

C. Le droit à la santé

56. Les restrictions à la liberté de mouvement imposées par Israël constituent le principal obstacle rencontré par les Palestiniens qui souhaitent accéder aux services de santé dans les centres urbains, notamment à Jérusalem-Est où se trouvent plusieurs hôpitaux. La zone A, où les déplacements sont particulièrement difficiles du fait de la présence de points de passage, de barrières ou de barrages, entoure souvent des « poches » des zones A et B.

57. Les Palestiniens de la zone C, principalement des membres de tribus bédouines rurales qui connaissent un niveau de pauvreté élevé et ne disposent pas d'installations sanitaires sur place, sont particulièrement vulnérables aux conséquences négatives sur leur droit à la santé. Le problème est particulièrement marqué dans la vieille ville de Hébron, où les Palestiniens vivent en étroite proximité avec une nombreuse population de colons. En 2011, une enquête menée par l'OMS auprès de 102 foyers de la vieille ville de Hébron a montré que 63 % de ceux-ci devaient passer les points de contrôle israéliens pour accéder aux services de santé. Un habitant de Hébron a raconté au Rapporteur spécial ses expériences personnelles, les ambulances palestiniennes étant soit empêchées de pénétrer dans la zone pour intervenir en urgence, soit retardées le temps d'obtenir une autorisation d'accès d'Israël.

58. L'accès à la santé ne se heurte pas uniquement à des barrières physiques, mais également à des barrières administratives. Après avoir été orientés vers un médecin, les Palestiniens doivent déposer une demande auprès des bureaux palestiniens de coordination afin d'obtenir d'Israël l'autorisation d'accéder aux services de santé, souvent situés à Jérusalem-Est. Selon l'OMS, quelque 20 % des patients se voient refuser cet accès, soit parce que leur demande est rejetée, soit parce qu'ils ne reçoivent aucune réponse. Une étude de 2014 a révélé que pour 4 patients sur 10, ainsi que leurs accompagnants, la demande avait été rejetée par les autorités israéliennes pour « raisons de sécurité » ou sans motif. Les autres victimes de ce système sont les quelque 1 000 travailleurs sanitaires palestiniens qui travaillent à ³⁹ Who Profits Research Center, Proven Effective: Crowd Control Weapons in the Occupied Palestinian Territories (Tel Aviv, avril 2014).

⁴⁰ Voir http://www.skunk-skunk.com/image/users/121755/ftp/my_files/MSDS_Skunk.pdf?id=3225191.

Jérusalem-Est mais habitent ailleurs en Cisjordanie, et qui doivent régulièrement renouveler leur demande de permis pour accéder à leur lieu de travail.

59. Parmi les autres incidences des politiques et pratiques de la Puissance occupante sur le droit à la santé des Palestiniens, on peut citer les blessures et les décès provoqués par les colons ou résultant des affrontements avec les forces de sécurité israéliennes. Des préoccupations ont également été exprimées concernant les incidences sanitaires de la pollution des cultures palestiniennes par les déchets non traités des implantations et des usines israéliennes. Le Ministère palestinien de l'environnement a particulièrement insisté sur les déchets dangereux, y compris les produits chimiques et les déchets électroniques provenant d'Israël et des implantations, et qui étaient « déversés » en Cisjordanie.

60. Depuis près d'un demi-siècle, les pratiques de la Puissance occupante, qui sont une source d'humiliation et de perte de contrôle sur les activités de la vie quotidienne, ont également des répercussions négatives sur la santé mentale et le bien-être de la population palestinienne. Les personnes vivent dans un climat d'insécurité entretenu par l'expansion des implantations, les menaces de destruction de leurs maisons et la mise à exécution de ces menaces, la violence des colons, l'usage excessif de la force de la part des forces israéliennes, la présence du mur de séparation, les restrictions imposées à la liberté de mouvement et à l'accès à l'éducation, au travail, à la terre et à l'eau, ainsi que le pouvoir exercé par la justice militaire israélienne sur les enfants et les adultes.

D. Jérusalem-Est

61. Pour les Palestiniens, Jérusalem-Est incarne l'espoir d'une capitale pour l'État de Palestine et la concrétisation de leur droit à l'autodétermination. Bien qu'Israël ait annexé Jérusalem-Est, en violation du droit international (résolutions 476 (1980) et 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité), des représentants du Département des affaires relatives aux négociations de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine ont désigné Jérusalem-Est, dans le cadre de la solution des deux États, comme le cœur politique, socioéconomique, culturel et spirituel de la Palestine, faisant le lien géographique entre les parties nord et sud des Territoires palestiniens occupés.

62. La capacité des Palestiniens à conserver leur statut de « résident permanent » à Jérusalem-Est est continuellement remise en question. Selon les représentants palestiniens, la population palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est représentait 36 % de la population totale de la ville à la fin de 2014. Plusieurs interlocuteurs ont expliqué que la politique démographique d'Israël consistait à maintenir un ratio d'environ 70 % de Juifs et 30 % de Palestiniens à Jérusalem. Le plan directeur de la ville, appelé « Jérusalem 2000 », prévoit un ratio de 60/40. Ce plan, proposé à l'origine en 2004, présente notamment les politiques pour l'ensemble de Jérusalem. Il est révélateur des intentions troublantes de l'administration israélienne en ce qu'il ne comporte aucune référence aux Palestiniens ni à Jérusalem-Est, mais mentionne uniquement les « habitants arabes de la partie est de la ville »⁴¹.

63. Depuis 1967, Israël aurait retiré le statut de résident permanent à plus de 14 000 Palestiniens, dont environ la moitié entre 2007 et 2013. Aux termes de la politique « centre de vie », les Palestiniens doivent régulièrement fournir des justificatifs de domicile et présenter par exemple des avis de taxes foncières ou des factures d'eau et de téléphone au Ministère israélien de l'intérieur pour conserver leur statut. Selon le Ministère palestinien chargé des affaires relatives à Jérusalem, de nombreux habitants de Jérusalem-Est connaissent de gros problèmes financiers, Israël imposant 72 taxes différentes aux Palestiniens. Par ailleurs, le statut de résident ne s'obtient pas automatiquement par le mariage et il n'est pas non plus accordé d'office aux enfants de résidents permanents. Ainsi, de nombreux Palestiniens vivent à Jérusalem-Est sans statut officiel et ne bénéficient donc d'aucun avantage. Selon Al-Haq, entre 2002 et juin 2015, le Ministère israélien de l'intérieur a rejeté plus de 3 300 demandes de regroupement familial à Jérusalem-Est sur les 11 000 reçues. En outre, environ un quart des demandes concernant des enfants ont été rejetées par les autorités israéliennes entre 2002 et mars 2005, et plusieurs milliers d'enfants palestiniens se retrouvent sans statut de résident.

⁴¹ Voir http://pcc-jer.org/arabic/Publication/jerusalem_master_plan/engchapt/Intro.pdf.

64. À cause des implantations israéliennes, du mur de séparation et du régime de permis, Jérusalem-Est est de plus en plus isolée du reste de la Cisjordanie. Quelque 140 kilomètres du mur auraient été construits dans la municipalité de Jérusalem. De ce fait, des quartiers de certains villages se trouvant à Jérusalem-Est se retrouvent isolés du reste de la ville, du côté cisjordanien du mur, et leurs habitants sont obligés de passer les points de contrôle israéliens pour accéder à des services essentiels tels que la santé et l'éducation. Plusieurs villages cisjordanien et certaines banlieues de Jérusalem-Est, auparavant reliés à la ville, se trouvent désormais « de l'autre côté du mur ».

65. Les politiques israéliennes en matière d'urbanisation et de zonage restreignent les possibilités des Palestiniens à construire à Jérusalem-Est. Dans les limites de la municipalité de Jérusalem, telles que définies par Israël, seulement 13 % de la surface de Jérusalem-Est peuvent être utilisés par les Palestiniens, 35 % étant réservés aux implantations, 30 % étant non urbanisés et 22 % étant réservés pour des « zones vertes ». Même si des terrains sont disponibles, le prix des permis de construire ou d'agrandir sont trop chers pour la majorité des Palestiniens. Nombre d'entre eux se voient obligés de construire sans permis et risquent donc être sous le coup d'un ordre de démolition des autorités israéliennes. Selon les représentants palestiniens, environ 220 000 colons israéliens vivent dans les quelque 55 000 logements construits à Jérusalem-Est, tandis que 321 000 Palestiniens vivent dans quelque 50 000 logements. La présence d'implantations israéliennes à Jérusalem-Est participe à exacerber les tensions et le risque d'actes de violence commis par les colons.

66. Les maisons palestiniennes risquent non seulement d'être démolies mais elles peuvent également être confisquées au bénéfice des colons. Ainsi, le Rapporteur spécial, dans un communiqué commun du 30 avril 2015 (voir A/HCR/30/27, affaire n° ISR 1/2015), a fait part de ses préoccupations au Gouvernement israélien concernant la situation d'une famille palestinienne risquant être expulsée de sa maison située dans la vieille ville de Jérusalem-Est. L'ordre d'expulsion avait été délivré à la suite d'une procédure engagée par des colons, selon lesquels la famille avait abandonné sa propriété. Or, la famille n'a pas bénéficié d'une procédure régulière qui lui aurait permis de réfuter ces allégations et a été victime de plusieurs tentatives d'expulsion de force, en violation du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme. Le Rapporteur spécial regrette de n'avoir toujours pas reçu de réponse à ce jour et il prie instamment le Gouvernement israélien de cesser les expulsions forcées.

67. Du fait de l'urbanisme et du zonage discriminatoires, il manque environ 1 500 classes pour accueillir les élèves palestiniens, ce qui oblige les écoles palestiniennes à louer des appartements pour faire la classe⁴². La loi israélienne garantit l'éducation gratuite aux enfants résidant à Jérusalem-Est, mais plusieurs milliers d'enfants ne sont inscrits dans aucune école. Certains parents paient des écoles privées, les écoles palestiniennes étant surpeuplées et les installations de mauvaise qualité. D'autres inscrivent leurs enfants dans des écoles israéliennes où ils doivent suivre les programmes israéliens. Bien qu'aux termes de l'article 50 de la quatrième Convention de Genève et de l'article 13 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, Israël soit dans l'obligation d'assurer un accès à l'éducation, plusieurs écoles et installations palestiniennes, telles que des terrains de jeux, sont sous la menace d'ordres de démolition ou ne peuvent être construites faute d'avoir obtenu le permis nécessaire.

68. Le Rapporteur spécial est gravement préoccupé par les politiques relatives aux implantations israéliennes et par les mesures visant à atteindre un ratio démographique précis à Jérusalem, qui participent à ralentir la croissance de la population palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est, à éliminer les possibilités de s'y installer pour la plupart des Palestiniens et les incitent à partir. Tous les aspects de la vie des Palestiniens sont ainsi concernés, y compris leurs droits à la liberté de mouvement, à un logement suffisant, à l'accès à l'éducation et aux services de santé, au respect de la vie de famille et leur droit de ne pas être discriminés.

IV. Prisonniers et détenus

69. Selon Addameer, une association de défense des droits de l'homme et de soutien aux prisonniers, en avril 2015, 414 Palestiniens se trouvaient placés en détention administrative, sans inculpation ni jugement, en vertu d'ordonnances de détention administrative valables pour six mois et pouvant être reconduites indéfiniment. Au nombre de ces détenus, figuraient sept membres du Conseil législatif palestinien dont Khalida Jarrar qui, selon plusieurs organisations non gouvernementales, aurait été placée en détention en raison de ses activités politiques et de son rôle important dans la défense des droits humains des Palestiniens. À la date à laquelle le présent rapport a été établi, à savoir le 15 avril 2015, M^{me} Jarrar était toujours détenue mais avait été inculpée bien que l'on continue d'avoir des doutes quant au respect de ses droits à une procédure régulière⁴³.

70. Il convient d'appeler l'attention sur deux mesures législatives israéliennes qui concernent la situation des prisonniers et des détenus palestiniens. Le 30 juillet 2015, bien qu'averti par plusieurs experts indépendants⁴⁴ notamment, que ce type de mesures était incompatible avec les normes en matière de droits de l'homme, la Knesset a adopté une loi autorisant les autorités pénitentiaires à alimenter par la force les prisonniers et détenus qui font la grève de la faim. Cette mesure qui devrait toucher les prisonniers palestiniens, notamment les détenus administratifs, constitue une forme de traitement cruel et inhumain dans la mesure où elle prive de leur autonomie personnelle ceux qui risquent leur vie en protestant pacifiquement.

⁴² Chiffres fournis par le Ministère palestinien de l'éducation. Voir également <http://www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/Jerusalem-Infographic-Acri-English-3.png>.

⁴³ Amnesty International, communiqué de presse, 28 août 2015. Peut être consulté à l'adresse suivante : www.amnesty.org/download/Documents/MDE1523502015FRENCH.pdf.

⁴⁴ Haut-Commissariat aux droits de l'homme, « UN experts urge Israël to halt legalization of force-feeding of hunger-strikers in detention », communiqué de presse du 28 juillet 2015 et « Force-feeding is cruel and inhuman – UN experts urge Israel not to make it legal », communiqué de presse du 25 juin 2014.

71. En vertu d'un amendement au Code pénal adopté le 20 juillet 2015, les personnes convaincues d'avoir jeté des pierres ou d'autres projectiles⁴⁵ sur des véhicules en mouvement risquent jusqu'à 20 ans de prison⁴⁶. Bien qu'il réprovoie le lancement de pierres, tant par les colons que par les Palestiniens, le Rapporteur spécial est d'autant plus préoccupé par la sévérité des peines encourues qu'il y a tout lieu de s'interroger sur le degré d'adhésion aux principes du droit à un procès équitable et sur les garanties de procédure régulière offertes aux accusés Palestiniens traduits devant les tribunaux militaires israéliens. Même lorsqu'il n'est pas prouvé que les pierres ont été lancées dans l'intention de nuire, la loi telle qu'amendée prévoit des peines pouvant aller jusqu'à 10 ans d'emprisonnement. Le Rapporteur spécial craint les effets que ces nouvelles dispositions pourraient avoir sur les mineurs, dans la mesure où la plupart des personnes inculpées pour avoir lancé des pierres sont des enfants. Dans les deux dispositions susmentionnées, il semblerait que l'on ait invoqué de manière générale des considérations de sécurité pour justifier la consécration, sur le plan juridique, de dispositions qui conduisent à des violations des droits humains des Palestiniens.

72. Le Rapporteur spécial s'est entretenu avec un jeune homme de 19 ans originaire d'Hébron, qui affirme avoir été injustement accusé d'avoir jeté des pierres et soutient que les forces israéliennes ont refusé de visionner un enregistrement fait par les caméras de surveillance qui pourrait corroborer la véracité de ses dénégations. Le Rapporteur spécial a été touché par la situation apparemment désespérée de ce jeune homme qui n'a aucune possibilité réelle de réfuter les charges portées contre lui et dont l'avenir risque d'être ainsi compromis. Ce jeune homme était membre du groupe Youth Against Settlements, qui prône le recours à des méthodes non violentes pour protester contre l'occupation et les colonies de peuplement. Dans l'exposé qu'ils ont fait au Rapporteur spécial, d'autres membres de ce groupe ont souligné qu'ils croyaient au droit à la vie des Israéliens et des Palestiniens et étaient opposés à toutes les attaques violentes quels qu'en fussent les auteurs.

73. En juin 2015, plus de 5 400 Palestiniens étaient détenus par Israël⁴⁷. La majorité d'entre eux étaient incarcérés dans des prisons situées à l'intérieur d'Israël et non dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, ce qui est contraire à l'article 76 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, ce qui complique encore les visites familiales, déjà soumises à de nombreuses restrictions. Si la plupart des prisonniers et des détenus sont des hommes adultes, les femmes et les enfants sont eux aussi touchés, soit parce qu'ils sont eux-mêmes placés en détention parce qu'un des membres de leur famille est incarcéré. On a constaté que la rareté ou l'absence de contacts avec ⁴⁵ Knesset, « Knesset passes law to prevent damages caused by hunger strikes », communiqué de presse du 30 juillet 2015.

⁴⁶ Knesset, « Knesset approves harsher punishments for stone throwers », communiqué de presse du 21 juillet 2015.

⁴⁷ Personnes emprisonnées et détenues pour « raisons de sécurité ». En outre, près d'un millier de Palestiniens étaient incarcérés pour séjour illégal en Israël. Statistiques obtenues en août 2015 auprès de l'organisation B'tselem et pouvant être consultées à l'adresse suivante : www.btselem.org/statistics/detainees_and_prisoners des parents, des proches et des amis nuisait sensiblement à la santé mentale des prisonniers⁴⁸. Selon Addameer, depuis 1967, jusqu'à 20 % de la population palestinienne a été à un moment ou un à autre détenue par les autorités israéliennes.

74. Les rapports relatifs au traitement des Palestiniens emprisonnés et détenus par Israël appellent l'attention sur le fait que la torture ou les traitements cruels, inhumains ou dégradants sont interdits par le droit international, et font état de l'infliction de différents types de sévices (obligation de conserver des postures douloureuses, passages à tabac, isolement cellulaire, privation de sommeil, etc.). Les informations relatives aux prisonnières et détenues palestiniennes exposent en détail les agressions physiques et verbales dont ces captives sont victimes. En outre, il a été allégué que les autorités israéliennes soumettaient, à titre de mesure punitive, les prisonnières et détenues à des fouilles à nu intégrales ou partielles.

75. Le Rapporteur spécial demeure préoccupé par la façon dont sont traités les centaines d'enfants palestiniens qui, chaque année, sont arrêtés, détenus et emprisonnés par Israël (A/HRC/28/78), et il rappelle qu'en vertu de l'article 37 de la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant, un enfant ne peut être privé de sa liberté qu'à titre de mesure de dernier ressort. Le Rapporteur spécial reconnaît qu'Israël a coopéré avec le Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance (UNICEF) au sujet des recommandations contenues dans le rapport publié en février 2013 par le Fonds et dans lequel celui-ci concluait que les mauvais traitements infligés aux enfants soumis au système de détention militaire étaient généralisés, systématiques et institutionnalisés⁴⁹. Toutefois, le Rapporteur spécial déplore que si peu de progrès aient été accomplis, le nombre d'allégations selon lesquelles des enfants auraient subi des mauvais traitements lors de leur arrestation, de leur transfert, de leur interrogatoire et de leur détention n'ayant pas diminué de façon sensible en 2013 et 2014⁵⁰. Il est regrettable que le plan pilote introduit en février 2014, qui prévoyait d'adresser des citations à comparaître aux enfants au lieu de procéder à des arrestations nocturnes, qui ont pour effet de les terrifier, ait été abandonné au début de 2015. Ce plan n'a semble-t-il fait l'objet d'aucune évaluation qui aurait permis de déterminer s'il était possible de remplacer la pratique nuisible des arrestations de nuit par des citations à comparaître devant être délivrées, durant le jour, aux enfants⁵¹.

V. Établissement des responsabilités

76. Nombreux sont les rapports qui rendent compte chaque année des préoccupations que suscitent les violations par Israël du droit international dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Ces documents font le point de l'expansion des colonies de peuplement illégales, et fournissent des informations sur la démolition d'habitations, les violences commises par les colons et l'usage excessif de la force par les forces de sécurité israéliennes, de même qu'ils décrivent les effets du blocus, le mur, et les violations perpétrées lorsqu'il y a escalade de la violence. Le Rapporteur spécial, bien qu'il se concentre sur son mandat, a connaissance des ⁴⁸ Organisation mondiale de la Santé (OMS), document WHO-EM/OPT/006/E, p. 11.

⁴⁹ Children in Israeli Military Detention: Observations and Recommendations (Jérusalem, février 2013), résumé analytique.

⁵⁰ Ibid., Bulletin n° 2, février 2015, p. 2.

⁵¹ Military Court Watch, « Pilot study to end night arrests suspended », 29 janvier 2015.

rapports établis par la société civile⁵² et par l'Organisation des Nations Unies, notamment le rapport de la Commission d'enquête internationale indépendante créée en vertu de la résolution S-21/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme en 2014 (A/HRC/29/52 et A/HRC/29/CRP.4), le résumé du rapport de la commission du Siège de l'Organisation des Nations Unies chargée d'enquêter sur certains faits survenus dans la bande de Gaza entre le 8 juillet et le 26 août 2014 (S/2015/286), et le rapport du Haut-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme relatif à l'application des résolutions S-9/1 et S-12/1 (A/HRC/28/80 et Add.1), qui rendent compte des allégations de violations du droit international commises par des acteurs tant israéliens que palestiniens.

77. Après les périodes d'escalade des hostilités survenues en 2008/09 ainsi qu'en 2012, il y a eu manquement général à l'obligation d'établir les responsabilités. Le Rapporteur spécial rappelle qu'au lendemain de son opération militaire à Gaza en 2014, Israël s'était engagé à enquêter sur les allégations de comportement répréhensible et à ce que les auteurs de tels comportements fassent l'objet de poursuites judiciaires ou de mesures disciplinaires⁵³. Le Rapporteur spécial sait que certaines organisations de la société civile ont soumis des allégations de violations et ont parfois été tenues régulièrement informées des décisions relatives aux enquêtes, mais constate un manque général de confiance dans le processus.

78. Selon les informations publiées en juin 2015 plus de la moitié des 190 dossiers d'allégations de violations avaient été examinés puis déférés à l'Avocat général de l'armée pour décision. Dix-neuf de ces dossiers ont été classés sans suite, faute de « motifs raisonnables de soupçonner qu'il y avait eu comportement criminel ». Sur les 22 enquêtes ouvertes, 7 l'ont été après des examens préliminaires effectués par le mécanisme d'examen aux fins de l'établissement des faits et 15 sur la base de commencements de preuve.

79. Deux des 22 enquêtes ouvertes ont été classées sans suite. L'une portait sur l'attaque du 16 juillet 2014 ayant entraîné la mort de quatre garçons âgés de 9 à 11 ans, qui jouaient sur la plage. Selon Israël, cette attaque aurait visé un complexe naval du Hamas exclusivement utilisé par des militants. Les autorités israéliennes soutiennent en outre qu'il était impossible aux unités des Forces de défense israéliennes de déterminer que « les figures humaines qu'elles avaient repérées par surveillance aérienne étaient celles d'enfants », et affirment que la présence de ces figures dans la zone du complexe naval laissait supposer qu'il s'agissait de militants⁵⁴. Plusieurs journalistes internationaux séjournant dans des hôtels surplombant la plage ont été témoins de l'attaque. La présence même de correspondants de presse sur les lieux atteste que la zone ciblée n'était pas utilisée exclusivement par des militants. En outre, le Rapporteur spécial constate que les articles de presse consacrés à l'incident ne donnent pas l'impression que cette zone était un complexe militaire fermé au public. Un journaliste et témoin oculaire de l'attaque a fait observer qu'une petite baraque en tôle sans électricité ni eau courante posée sur une jetée brûlée par le soleil ne paraissait pas être le type d'endroit que fréquentaient les militants du Hamas et que des enfants, en tenue d'été, dont la taille avoisinait 1,20 mètre et qui couraient pour échapper à une explosion ne correspondaient pas vraiment à l'image que l'on se faisait des combattants du Hamas⁵⁵.

⁵² Par exemple, B'tselem, « Black Flag: The Legal and Moral Implications of the Policy of Attacking Residential Buildings in the Gaza Strip, Summer 2014 » (Jérusalem 2015); Breaking the Silence: This is How We Fought in Gaza: Soldiers' Testimonies and Photographs from Operation « Protective Edge » (2014); Amnesty International, Attaques illégales et mortelles : des tirs de roquettes et d'obus par des groupes armés palestiniens lors du conflit Gaza/Israël en 2014 (Londres .2015).

⁵³ State of Israel, The 2014 Gaza Conflict: Factual and Legal Aspects, 7 July-26 August 2014: Factual and Legal aspects, mai 2015, résumé analytique, par. 59

⁵⁴ Israel Defense Forces Military Advocate General, « Decisions regarding exceptional incidents that allegedly occurred during Operation "Protective Edge" », Update n° 4, 11 juin 2015, par. 7.

80. Le Rapporteur spécial juge préoccupant le fait que l'Avocat général de l'armée ait accepté l'argument selon lequel la qualité des images aériennes n'avait pas permis de faire la distinction entre des groupes de jeunes enfants jouant sur la plage et des groupes armés se livrant à des activités militaires. La Commission d'enquête internationale indépendante créée en vertu de la résolution S-21/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme a estimé que, comme le complexe se trouvait dans le centre-ville, entre une plage publique et une zone utilisée par les pêcheurs locaux, on ne pouvait y exclure la présence de civils, y compris d'enfants (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, par. 630 à 633). De même que la Commission, le Rapporteur spécial est préoccupé par le fait que les Forces de défense israéliennes aient inversé la présomption de caractère civil en s'appuyant simplement sur le fait que les personnes prises pour cibles se trouvaient dans la zone pour affirmer qu'il s'agissait de militaires, et que l'Avocat général de l'armée ait validé cette application incorrecte du droit international humanitaire lorsqu'il a décidé que l'affaire serait classée sans suite.

81. Le Rapporteur spécial craint que cette affaire n'ait des incidences sur les perspectives d'ensemble en matière d'établissement des responsabilités qu'offrent les enquêtes internes menées par Israël. Il est peu probable que les enquêtes portant sur d'autres cas moins bien connus de violations présumées imputables aux Forces de défense israéliennes soient examinées de manière aussi approfondie. Jusqu'en juin 2015, seuls trois soldats avaient été inculpés dans une affaire de pillage survenu dans la région de Shuja'iyya le 20 juillet 2014.

82. Le Mécanisme d'enquête aux fins de l'établissement des faits se limite à l'examen des « incidents exceptionnels », ce qui peut s'interpréter comme supposant en préalable que l'opération israélienne a respecté de manière générale les règles du droit international. Pour la Commission d'enquête internationale indépendante créée en vertu de la résolution S-21/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, le fait qu'Israël n'ait pu modifier sa stratégie de frappes aériennes, même lorsque ses effets désastreux sur la population civile sont devenus apparents, amenait à se demander si ces frappes ne participaient pas d'une politique plus générale approuvée, au moins tacitement, aux échelons les plus hauts du Gouvernement⁵⁶.

83. En réponse au rapport de la Commission d'enquête, le Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères a déclaré que l'armée israélienne respectait les normes internationales les plus strictes, ce qui avait été confirmé par un examen détaillé effectué par des experts militaires et juridiques israéliens ainsi que par des rapports établis par des spécialistes militaires de renommée internationale⁵⁷. Le Rapporteur spécial constate que ces affirmations ne sont guère étayées par les communications reçues ni par les rapports publiés par l'Organisation des Nations Unies ou par des organisations de la société civile. Néanmoins, il invite Israël à prouver son attachement au principe de responsabilité en adhérant au Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale. Cette dernière n'intervient, entre autres cas, que lorsque les mécanismes internes sont dans l'incapacité ou n'ont pas la volonté d'enquêter sur les crimes les plus graves et d'en poursuivre les auteurs⁵⁸.

⁵⁵ Tyler Hicks, « Through lens, 4 boys dead by Gaza shore », New York Times, 16 juillet 2014.

⁵⁶ Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « UN Gaza Inquiry finds credible allegations of war crimes committed in 2014 by both Israel and Palestinian armed groups », communiqué de presse du 22 juin 2015. Voir également A/HRC/29/52, par. 44.

84. Comme l'a fait remarquer la Commission d'enquête internationale indépendante à propos des actions au civil suite à des violations du droit international, les victimes palestiniennes se heurtent à des obstacles de taille qui les empêchent d'exercer leur droit à des recours efficaces, notamment à des réparations (A/HRC/29/52, par. 72). Un de ces obstacles consiste en l'ensemble des dispositions qui, en vertu de la loi sur la responsabilité de l'État, dispensent l'État de l'obligation de réparer les préjudices causés par les mesures qu'il aurait prises dans le cadre de la lutte contre la terreur, les actes hostiles ou les insurrections (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, par. 646 à 649). En outre, les frais de procédure élevés, les restrictions à la liberté de mouvement et les délais de prescription font que les victimes n'ont pratiquement aucune possibilité de demander réparation. En décembre 2014, la Cour suprême israélienne a rejeté une requête contre la politique israélienne qui consistait à refuser l'accès aux tribunaux israéliens aux plaignants et témoins originaires de Gaza visant à obtenir réparation en cas de décès, blessures et dommages matériels causés par les opérations militaires d'Israël⁵⁹. Selon les informations reçues, cette décision, qui soulève des problèmes de conflits d'intérêts évidents, reconnaît que l'État a toute latitude pour interdire, en invoquant des raisons de sécurité, l'entrée sur le territoire israélien à des plaignants ayant intenté des actions en réparation contre lui. De ce fait, l'organisation Adalah (centre juridique pour la défense des droits de la minorité arabe en Israël) a affirmé que pour ces plaignants les moyens de recours étaient pour ainsi dire inexistantes.

85. En Cisjordanie également, et d'une manière générale lorsque les actes dont ils ont été victimes ont été commis en dehors de périodes d'hostilités actives, les Palestiniens ont très difficilement accès aux tribunaux israéliens et au système de justice militaire. De nombreuses sources font état de l'impunité dont jouissent les colons qui se livrent à des actes de violence. De même, les forces de sécurité israéliennes qui font un usage excessif de la force sont rarement tenues de répondre de leurs actes et plusieurs interlocuteurs ont indiqué que les victimes étaient soit convaincues qu'elles n'obtiendraient jamais justice, soit trop effrayées pour porter plainte. Comme l'a indiqué l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) : « Les familles des victimes et des survivants s'abstiennent généralement de déposer des plaintes officielles auprès des autorités israéliennes, craignant des représailles. Les enquêtes internes sur les décès de Palestiniens que mènent les Forces de sécurité israéliennes ⁵⁷ Ministère des affaires étrangères d'Israël, « Israeli response to the UNHRC Commission of Inquiry », communiqué de presse du 22 juin 2015, par. 5.

⁵⁸ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, art. 1 et 17.

⁵⁹ Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, Palestinian Centre for Human Rights et Adalah, « Israeli Supreme Court approves regulations that ban Palestinians from Gaza from entering Israel for their compensation cases against the Israeli military », communiqué de presse du 18 décembre 2014.

[...] sont classées sans suite dans l'écrasante majorité des cas [...] ». Qu'il s'agisse d'élever des plaintes contre les violences perpétrées par les colons ou contre l'usage excessif de la force par les Forces de sécurité israéliennes, de se défendre contre certaines allégations comme le lancement de pierres ou de contester la légalité des menaces d'expulsion forcée, des ordres de démolition, des confiscations de terres ou de la construction du mur, le sentiment qui prévaut est celui du caractère profondément injuste d'un système qui apparaît comme irrémédiablement hostile à la population qu'il est censé protéger⁶⁰.

VI. Conclusions et recommandations

86. Les effets cumulés des politiques et pratiques suivies par l'occupant israélien, notamment de l'expansion des colonies de peuplement et des conséquences qui en découlent, du blocus, des entraves à la liberté de circulation, et du système de justice militaire pèsent lourdement sur la société palestinienne. Pour éviter que la situation ne devienne encore plus instable, il est essentiel de remédier aux violations régulières des droits humains de la population palestinienne vivant sous occupation. En effet, 48 ans d'occupation ont montré que les politiques et pratiques israéliennes qui contreviennent au droit international des droits de l'homme et au droit international humanitaire perdureront tant que les responsables de ces politiques et pratiques ne seront pas tenus de répondre de leurs actes.

87. En conséquence, le Rapporteur spécial réitère les recommandations qu'il a précédemment formulées (A/HRC/28/78) et adresse au Gouvernement israélien les recommandations ci-après sur lesquelles il tient à mettre l'accent :

a) Lever le blocus imposé à Gaza qui constitue l'un des principaux obstacles à la reconstruction, porte atteinte aux droits de l'homme et constitue une forme de châtement collectif;

b) Veiller à ce que les enquêtes menées au niveau interne établissent les responsabilités, et notamment à ce qu'elles s'étendent à l'examen de la légalité au regard du droit international des décisions ayant guidé l'action des Forces de défense israéliennes lors de l'opération menée contre Gaza en 2014;

c) Mettre fin à l'expansion des colonies de peuplement et s'abstenir de procéder à des démolitions en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est. En particulier, renoncer définitivement au plan qui prévoit l'expulsion et le transfert forcés de communautés bédouines dans la zone C;

d) Veiller au respect des Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois adoptés par l'Organisation des Nations Unies en 1990, et enquêter pleinement sur les cas où les forces de sécurité israéliennes auraient fait un usage excessif de la force ainsi que sur les allégations de violences commises par des colons;

e) Supprimer les obstacles de caractère procédural et de nature physique, dont le mur, qui empêchent les Palestiniens de la bande de Gaza et de la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, d'avoir accès aux services de santé;

⁶⁰ Voir les articles 2 et 14 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques.

f) Faire en sorte que tous les enfants palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est en âge d'être scolarisés aient accès à l'éducation, notamment en leur permettant de suivre le programme d'enseignement mis en place par le Ministère palestinien de l'éducation et en remédiant à la pénurie de salles de classe;

g) Mettre fin à la pratique des détentions administratives et respecter le droit des prisonniers et détenus palestiniens de protester pacifiquement, en s'abstenant d'alimenter par la force ceux qui font la grève de la faim;

h) Redoubler sans plus attendre d'efforts en vue d'appliquer les recommandations de l'UNICEF relatives à la détention des enfants, et en particulier de s'assurer que ces derniers ne soient détenus qu'à titre de mesure de dernier ressort;

i) Coopérer avec le Rapporteur spécial et avec tout organe mandaté par les Nations Unies, ainsi qu'il incombe à chaque État Membre de l'ONU, et faciliter l'accès au Territoire palestinien occupé.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
19 octobre 2016
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante et onzième session

Point 68 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme : situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux*Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent rapport a été présenté après la date limite afin de prendre en compte l'évolution récente de la situation.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le premier présenté à l'Assemblée générale par Michael Lynk, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il a été établi principalement à partir d'informations communiquées par des victimes, des témoins, des représentants de la société civile, des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies et des responsables palestiniens à Amman lors de la mission effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juillet 2016. Il analyse un certain nombre de problèmes touchant à la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. Le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, a été nommé le 24 mars 2016, en application de la résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme et de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme, et a pris ses fonctions le 1^{er} mai 2016. Il est le septième à se voir confier ce mandat.

2. Le présent rapport est le premier présenté par le Rapporteur spécial. Ce dernier souhaite attirer l'attention sur le fait que, s'il se tient prêt à effectuer une mission dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, il n'a pas été autorisé à le faire par les autorités israéliennes. Après avoir pris ses fonctions, le Rapporteur spécial a officiellement demandé aux autorités israéliennes et aux autorités palestiniennes le 3 juin 2016 l'autorisation de se rendre dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. À la date de l'établissement du présent rapport, cette demande n'avait reçu aucune suite de la part des autorités israéliennes. Le Rapporteur spécial relève que ses deux prédécesseurs se sont heurtés au même refus. Il a rencontré l'Observateur permanent de l'État de Palestine auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies le 7 juin lors de sa première visite à Genève. Il a également demandé à s'entretenir avec le Représentant permanent d'Israël, mais sa demande est restée sans réponse. Ce défaut systématique de coopération avec le Rapporteur spécial est très préoccupant. Une compréhension complète et exhaustive de la situation fondée sur l'observation directe serait extrêmement utile aux travaux du Rapporteur spécial¹.

3. Le présent rapport repose principalement sur des communications écrites ainsi que sur des consultations menées avec des représentants de la société civile, des victimes, des témoins, des responsables palestiniens et des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies à Amman lors de la première mission du Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juillet 2016.

4. La Commission des droits de l'homme a chargé le Rapporteur spécial d'enquêter sur les violations, par Israël, des principes et des fondements du droit international, du droit international humanitaire et de la Convention de Genève du 12 août 1949 relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, dans les territoires palestiniens qu'il occupe depuis 1967². En conséquence, le présent rapport est axé sur les violations commises par Israël au cours de près de 50 ans d'occupation. Israël étant tenu en qualité de Puissance occupante de faire respecter et de protéger les droits des Palestiniens se trouvant sous son contrôle³, le mandat du Rapporteur spécial se concentre sur les responsabilités israéliennes. Il convient néanmoins de préciser que les violations des droits de l'homme commises par tout État ou toute organisation non étatique sont condamnables et ne font que compromettre les perspectives de paix.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à remercier le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine de la coopération sans réserve qu'il lui a apportée dans le cadre de l'exécution de son mandat. Il souhaite également adresser ses remerciements à tous ceux qui sont venus à sa rencontre à Amman ainsi qu'à tous ceux qui n'ont pas pu faire le déplacement mais qui lui ont fait parvenir des observations écrites ou orales. Il salue l'action essentielle que mènent les groupes qui cherchent à instaurer un environnement propice au respect des droits de l'homme et à faire en sorte que les violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire ne soient pas commises avec impunité et sans témoin. Le Rapporteur spécial entend bien apporter son soutien à ce travail dans toute la mesure possible.

¹ A/HRC/23/21 par. 1.

² Voir résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme.

³ Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre, 12 août 1949 (quatrième Convention de Genève), art. 47.

6. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à souligner que plusieurs groupes ont été empêchés de venir le rencontrer à Amman par des restrictions de déplacement imposées par les autorités israéliennes. Ces mesures ayant tout particulièrement visé les personnes venant de Gaza, tous les groupes y opérant ont été consultés par vidéoconférence.

7. Le présent rapport est divisé en deux parties. La première partie est consacrée à la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est. Le Rapporteur spécial y analyse les problèmes actuels liés aux droits de l'homme en les replaçant dans le contexte de près de 50 années d'occupation. Par conséquent, cette partie ne se limite pas aux faits intervenus pendant une période donnée, même si l'accent est mis sur les questions revêtant une importance particulière à la date de l'établissement du rapport à la lumière des informations recueillies par le Rapporteur spécial lors de ses conversations avec les personnes et les organisations rencontrées dans le cadre de sa mission en juillet 2016.

8. Dans la deuxième partie du rapport, le Rapporteur spécial revient sur la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé sous l'angle du droit au développement, en particulier du développement comme droit de l'homme, et examine les répercussions que les violations des droits de l'homme ont sur le développement dans le Territoire palestinien occupé.

II. Situation actuelle des droits de l'homme

9. Plusieurs évolutions et tendances inquiétantes se sont fait jour depuis le début de la flambée de violence qui a commencé en octobre 2015 en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est. Plus de 230 Palestiniens et au moins 32 Israéliens ont été tués en 2015 et en 2016 dans le cadre de manifestations organisées par des Palestiniens, d'agressions commises ou présumées commises par des Palestiniens et d'interventions souvent mortelles des forces de sécurité israéliennes⁴. Si le nombre d'actes de violence a reculé ces derniers mois⁵, la poursuite du recours aux détentions administratives, aux démolitions punitives, aux restrictions de mouvement et autres mesures continue de porter atteinte aux droits de l'homme du peuple palestinien.

10. Toute agression violente, quelle qu'en soit la forme et quel qu'en soit l'auteur, est inacceptable. Le fait que les agressions commises ou présumées commises par des Palestiniens contre des Israéliens donnent lieu, bien souvent, à un emploi disproportionné et meurtrier de la force n'a pour effet que d'aggraver les violences. Bon nombre des attaques en question ont été commises par des mineurs, ce qui est particulièrement inquiétant compte tenu du désespoir que ces actes semblent manifester. Un nombre remarquable de personnes travaillant dans le Territoire palestinien occupé que le Rapporteur spécial a rencontrées au cours de sa mission ont systématiquement rapporté avoir relevé un sentiment de désolation et de désespoir chez les enfants, sentiment qui se manifeste non seulement par des accès de violence mais également par des souffrances physiques et psychologiques (énurésie, anxiété, dépression). La détresse des enfants est souvent un symptôme de la gravité d'une situation. Malheureusement, dans les circonstances actuelles, les enfants qui naissent aujourd'hui dans le Territoire palestinien occupé grandissent sans l'espoir d'un avenir pacifique.

⁴ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, rapport hebdomadaire sur la protection des civils, 16 au 22 août 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.ochaopt.org/content/protection-civilians-weekly-report-16-22-august-2016.

⁵ Gili Cohen, « After six months of terror wave, attacks decreasing, says Israeli army », Haaretz, 1^{er} avril 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/premium-1.712123.

A. Violence et impunité

11. Le nombre de victimes de la flambée de violence observée en 2015 est le plus élevé chez les Israéliens et les Palestiniens en Cisjordanie depuis 2005⁶. La grande majorité des personnes tuées sont des Palestiniens, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ayant souvent fait un usage disproportionné et meurtrier de la force. Selon des représentants de la société civile, sur l'ensemble des personnes tuées en Cisjordanie entre octobre 2015 et janvier 2016, 88 étaient des Palestiniens soupçonnés par les autorités israéliennes d'être les auteurs d'agressions ou de tentatives d'agression. Ces cas soulèvent deux problèmes. Le premier tient au fait qu'ils se soient produits et que la force létale soit si souvent utilisée et fréquemment sans justification⁷; le second au fait que, dans la majorité des cas où un agent des forces de sécurité israéliennes a fait un usage meurtrier de la force, aucune enquête n'ait été ouverte ou que l'enquête menée n'ait donné lieu à aucune sanction.

12. Dans plusieurs affaires dont les circonstances sont bien établies, il apparaît clairement que les personnes tuées ne présentaient pas, au regard des normes internationales, une menace justifiant un emploi disproportionné de la force. Selon les Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois⁸, les armes et la force létale ne doivent être utilisées qu'en dernier recours⁹. Les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme ont recensé un certain nombre de cas où cette condition n'était à l'évidence pas remplie¹⁰.

13. L'un des exemples les plus emblématiques, dont les médias ont beaucoup parlé, est le meurtre de Abd al-Fatah al-Sharif à Hébron le 24 mars 2016. Après

⁶ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Israel opened 24 criminal investigations into the killing and injury of Palestinians since October 2015, leading to one indictment », Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (juillet 2016). Consultable à l'adresse : www.ochaopt.org/content/israel-opened-24-criminal-investigations-killing-and-injury-palestinians-october-2015.

⁷ Voir Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme (HCDH), « Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois ». Consultable à l'adresse : www.ohchr.org/FR/ProfessionalInterest/Pages/UseOffForceAndFirearms.aspx.

⁸ Voir Huitième Congrès des Nations Unies pour la prévention du crime et le traitement des délinquants, La Havane, 27 août-7 septembre 1990 : rapport établi par le Secrétariat (publication des Nations Unies, numéro de vente : F.91.IV.2), chap. I, sect. B.

⁹ Voir HCDH, « Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois ».

¹⁰ Betsalem, « Unjustified use of lethal force and execution of Palestinians who stabbed or were suspected of attempted stabbings », 16 décembre 2015. Consultable à l'adresse : www.btselem.org/gunfire/20151216_cases_of_unjustified_gunfire_and_executions.

avoir semble-t-il poignardé et blessé un soldat israélien, Al-Sharif a été abattu par un soldat israélien alors qu'il était couché au sol, blessé¹¹. La scène a été filmée et la vidéo, mise en ligne sur YouTube par l'organisation de défense des droits de l'homme Betsalem, a fait la une de la presse internationale. Le Rapporteur spécial sur les exécutions extrajudiciaires, sommaires ou arbitraires a déclaré que les faits montrés par la vidéo présentaient tous les signes d'une exécution extrajudiciaire¹².

14. Il ne s'agit là que d'un exemple de ce qui semble constituer une tendance alarmante. Comme l'a déclaré le porte-parole du Haut-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, ce n'est pas le premier incident filmé qui soulève des problèmes d'emploi excessif de la force¹³. Ces quelques cas ne rendent pas compte de l'ampleur réelle du phénomène. Par ailleurs, les règles d'ouverture du feu mises à jour en décembre 2015 qui ont été récemment publiées par les autorités israéliennes abaissent le seuil du recours à la force meurtrière à un niveau contraire aux normes internationales¹⁴. Alors que les Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois disposent que les armes à feu ne doivent être utilisées qu'en cas de « menace imminente de mort ou de blessure grave », les nouvelles règles encadrant l'ouverture du feu autorisent l'usage de balles réelles contre les personnes qui semblent lancer ou sont sur le point de lancer des bombes incendiaires, des feux d'artifice ou des pierres. Cette évolution donne à penser que le Gouvernement cherche à créer un environnement dans lequel le recours à la force meurtrière est moins mis en question et plus accepté. Il y a donc tout lieu de craindre que l'usage excessif de la force va augmenter.

15. Le problème est encore aggravé par le fait que, dans la majorité des cas, rien ou presque n'a été fait pour établir les responsabilités. Entre octobre 2015 et juin 2016, les autorités israéliennes ont ouvert 24 enquêtes judiciaires pour faire la lumière sur les actes des forces de sécurité israéliennes ayant porté atteinte à l'intégrité physique ou à la vie de Palestiniens¹⁵. Jusqu'à présent, seul le meurtre d'Abd al-Fatah al-Sharif à Hébron a débouché sur la mise en examen d'un soldat et son renvoi devant la justice. Alors que le procès se poursuit, le Ministre israélien de la défense, Avigdor Lieberman, s'exprimant sur l'affaire, aurait déclaré qu'Israël ne pouvait pas en arriver au point où un soldat ait besoin de consulter un avocat avant de partir en mission, avant d'ajouter que toute personne avait droit à la présomption d'innocence¹⁶. De telles déclarations ont pour effet implicite de favoriser le laxisme

¹¹ Voir www.youtube.com/watch?v=S8WK2TgruMo.

¹² HCDH, « Hebron killing: "All the signs of an extrajudicial execution" – United Nations expert expresses outrage », 30 mars 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=18544&LangID=E.

¹³ HCDH, « Comment by the Spokesperson for the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Rupert Colville, on the killing of a Palestinian man in Hebron », 30 mars 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=18540&LangID=E.

¹⁴ « Israeli police reveal new open-fire regulations in response to Adalah's court petition », Adalaha, 5 juillet 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.adalah.org/en/content/view/8845.

¹⁵ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Israel opened 24 criminal investigations into the killing and injury of Palestinians since October 2015, leading to one indictment ».

¹⁶ Isabel Kershner, « Israeli military investigating soldier's killing of unarmed Palestinian », The New York Times, 29 août 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.nytimes.com/2016/08/30/world/middleeast/israeli-military-investigating-soldiers-killing-of-unarmed-palestinian.html.

à l'égard des soldats qui font un usage meurtrier de la force et, partant, de compromettre l'action menée pour sanctionner les responsables.

16. Le problème de l'impunité est loin d'être nouveau. On en trouve une illustration récente et éclatante dans la décision annoncée en mai 2016 par l'organisation Betsalem de ne plus collaborer avec la police judiciaire militaire israélienne¹⁷. Au bout de 25 ans de travail, l'organisation est arrivée à la conclusion qu'il ne servait plus à rien de chercher à obtenir justice et de défendre les droits de l'homme en collaborant avec un système dont la fonction véritable se mesure à son aptitude à camoufler des actes illicites et à en protéger les auteurs¹⁸. Selon Betsalem, sur les 739 affaires que l'organisation a portées à la connaissance de l'avocat général de l'armée depuis 1989, les autorités n'ont ouvert aucune enquête dans 182 cas et ont classé l'enquête sans suite dans près de la moitié des cas (343). En 25 ans, seules 25 affaires ont débouché sur l'engagement de poursuites contre les soldats mis en cause. Début 2015, l'organisation de défense des droits de l'homme Yesh Din a publié des chiffres sur les inculpations prononcées en 2014 et constaté que la part des enquêtes ayant débouché sur une mise en examen était de 8 sur 229 en 2014 et de 9 sur 199 en 2013. Dans son analyse, Yesh Din a observé que ces statistiques faisaient apparaître une incapacité profonde de mener des enquêtes exhaustives débouchant sur des poursuites. Il s'ensuit une quasi-impunité judiciaire pour les soldats des forces de défense israéliennes¹⁹.

17. L'impunité est un problème systémique et profondément enraciné. Elle contribue à alimenter le cycle des violences : tandis que les soldats paraissent pouvoir agir en toute impunité et que s'installe dans les esprits l'idée que la vie des Palestiniens est sans importance, la peur et le désespoir montent au sein de la population palestinienne.

B. Détention

18. La montée des violences s'accompagne d'une augmentation des arrestations et du nombre de Palestiniens incarcérés dans les centres de détention israéliens et notamment du nombre de placements en détention administrative. Le mois d'octobre 2015 a été marqué par une forte hausse du nombre de Palestiniens en détention, lequel se maintient à un niveau inédit en près de 10 ans. À la date de l'établissement du présent rapport, si l'on en croit les chiffres recueillis par Betsalem et l'organisation de défense des droits de l'homme Addameer, plus de 6 000 personnes se trouvaient détenues pour des raisons de sécurité, dont environ 700 en détention administrative. Ces chiffres sont stupéfiants et semblent www.betsalem.org/publications/summaries/201605_occupations_fig_leaf.

¹⁷ Betsalem, The Occupation's Fig Leaf: Israel's Military Law Enforcement System as a Whitewash Mechanism (mai 2016). Consultable à l'adresse:

¹⁸ Ibid.

¹⁹ Yesh Din, « December 2015 data sheet: law enforcement on IDF soldiers suspected of harming Palestinians – Summary of 2014 data », 12 février 2015. Consultable à l'adresse : www.yesh-din.org/en/december-2015-data-sheet-law-enforcement-on-idf-soldiers-suspected-of-harming-palestinians-summary-of-2014-data/.

révélateurs d'une politique générale visant à intimider et à restreindre considérablement les libertés des Palestiniens²⁰.

Détention administrative

19. L'augmentation du nombre de personnes placées en détention administrative est particulièrement alarmante. Environ 700 Palestiniens font actuellement l'objet d'une mesure de détention administrative²¹. Il s'agit du nombre de personnes en détention administrative le plus élevé depuis 2008²². Comme l'a relevé le Comité contre la torture en 2016 lors de l'examen du cinquième rapport périodique d'Israël, ces détenus sont souvent privés des garanties juridiques fondamentales : placés en détention sur le fondement d'éléments de preuve secrets auxquels ni eux ni leurs avocats n'ont accès, ils ne sont ni inculpés ni jugés²³. Les mesures de détention administrative pouvant être renouvelées indéfiniment, certains militants des droits de l'homme estiment que l'angoisse psychologique causée par l'incertitude peut être constitutive de torture²⁴.

20. Pour justifier le recours généralisé aux détentions administratives, Israël invoque des raisons de sécurité. Le Gouvernement israélien s'est ainsi prévalu de l'article 78 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, aux termes duquel : « Si la puissance occupante estime nécessaire, pour d'impérieuses raisons de sécurité, de prendre des mesures de sûreté à l'égard de personnes protégées, elle pourra tout au plus leur imposer une résidence forcée ou procéder à leur internement. » En droit international, l'internement se définit comme la détention non pénale d'une personne présentant par son activité une menace grave pour la sécurité des autorités détentrices dans le cadre d'un conflit armé²⁵. Il résulte de cette définition que l'internement ne peut être utilisé que dans un cadre non pénal et ne saurait se substituer à une condamnation pénale ou à une forme de sanction²⁶. Le fait que les mesures de détention administrative soient souvent prononcées contre des individus que les autorités israéliennes ont d'abord tenté de poursuivre sans succès semble indiquer qu'un grand nombre de ces arrestations sont contraires à cette règle²⁷. Selon le commentaire de la quatrième Convention de Genève, cet article doit être

²⁰ Un grand nombre de règlements militaires encadrent les conditions d'arrestation et de détention des Palestiniens dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Voir Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, « Palestinian political prisoners in Israeli prisons », juin 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.addameer.org/sites/default/files/briefings/general_briefing_paper_-_june_2016_1.pdf.

²¹ Addameer, Statistics, août 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.addameer.org/statistics.

²² Betsalem, Statistics on administrative detention, 12 septembre 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.btselem.org/administrative_detention/statistics.

²³ CAT/C/ISR/CO/5, par. 22.

²⁴ Addameer, « Induced Desperation: The Psychological Torture of Administrative Detention », 26 juin 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.addameer.org/publications/induced-desperation-psychological-torture-administrative-detention.

²⁵ Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, « Internment in armed conflict: basic rules and challenges », prise de position, novembre 2014.

²⁶ Voir Commentaire (1958) de l'article 78 de la quatrième Convention de Genève : « Les personnes faisant l'objet de ces mesures sont théoriquement hors du combat; aussi les précautions prises à leur égard ne sauraient-elles avoir le caractère de sanctions. »

²⁷ Voir, par exemple, Amnesty International, « Israel/OPT: Human rights defender administratively detained: Hasan Ghassan Ghaleb Safadi », 4 juillet 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.amnesty.org/en/documents/mde15/4376/2016/en/.

interprété comme ne s'appliquant que dans des circonstances très limitées²⁸. L'internement est l'une des mesures les plus graves qu'une puissance occupante puisse prendre à l'égard de la population civile d'un territoire occupé.

21. Le recours par Israël à la détention d'individus sur le fondement de preuves secrètes constitue une violation manifeste non seulement du droit international humanitaire mais également du droit international des droits de l'homme et excède les limites de l'internement envisagées par la quatrième Convention de Genève. Lors de l'examen du rapport d'Israël, le Comité contre la torture a exhorté l'État israélien à mettre fin à la pratique des détentions administratives, au motif que les détenus peuvent être privés des garanties juridiques fondamentales dans la mesure notamment où ils peuvent être maintenus indéfiniment en détention sans inculpation sur la base d'éléments de preuve secrets auxquels ni eux ni leurs avocats n'ont accès^{23,29}.

22. Le cas de Hasan Safadi, journaliste et coordonnateur pour les médias de l'organisation Addameer qui œuvre en faveur de la protection et de la promotion des droits des détenus, est un exemple caractéristique des défaillances du système israélien. Arrêté le 1^{er} mai 2016, Hassan Safadi se trouvait, à la date de l'établissement du présent rapport, en détention administrative depuis cinq mois. Selon les renseignements fournis par Addameer, le journaliste a été arrêté puis interrogé pendant 40 jours. Aucun élément de preuve susceptible de justifier son maintien en détention n'ayant été trouvé, il devait être remis en liberté le 10 juin en application d'une décision du tribunal de police. Le jour où Hasan Safadi devait être remis en liberté, le Ministre de la défense a ordonné son placement en détention administrative pour une période de six mois. Pour Addameer, cet exemple met en évidence comment la détention administrative est utilisée pour maintenir une personne en détention en l'absence de preuves à charge³⁰.

Enfants en détention

23. Le nombre d'enfants actuellement détenus par les autorités israéliennes est particulièrement préoccupant. À la date de l'établissement du présent rapport, Addameer avait recensé au moins 350 mineurs palestiniens en détention³¹. À la fin de 2015, ce chiffre était de 422, dont au moins 116 mineurs âgés de 12 à 15 ans³². La majorité de ces mineurs avaient été arrêtés pour avoir jeté des pierres³³. Dans le ²⁸ Voir <https://ihldatabases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=D794403E436F0823C12563CD0042CF9A>.

²⁹ L'article 43 de la quatrième Convention de Genève dispose que toute personne internée « aura le droit d'obtenir qu'un tribunal ou un collège administratif compétent [...] reconsidère dans le plus bref délai la décision prise à son égard ». L'article 78 prévoit un droit d'appel. Voir également Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques (art. 9, par. 2), dans la résolution 2200 A (XXI) de l'Assemblée générale, annexe.

³⁰ Information publiée par Addameer, consultable à l'adresse : www.addameer.org/prisoner/hasan-safadi.

³¹ Addameer, Statistics, août 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.addameer.org/statistics.

³² Defense for Children International – Palestine, « No way to treat a child: Palestinian children in the Israeli military detention system », avril 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.dci-palestine.org/palestinian_children_in_the_israeli_military_detention_system.

³³ Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA), « Children in distress: raising the alarm for 2016 and beyond », note d'information, avril 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.unrwa.org/sites/default/files/content/resources/children_in_distress_briefing_note.pdf.

cadre du système juridique mixte en vigueur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, les enfants palestiniens arrêtés en Cisjordanie sont passibles de la législation militaire israélienne (tout comme les adultes palestiniens), tandis que les colons israéliens vivant dans la même zone géographique sont du ressort de la justice civile et pénale israélienne. Malgré les nombreux appels lancés pour attirer l'attention sur les protections devant être accordées aux enfants, le recours à l'arrestation et au placement en détention des mineurs demeure extrêmement problématique. Il ressort des informations recueillies et des documents consultés que les parents ne sont souvent informés de l'arrestation de leurs enfants qu'au bout de plusieurs jours. Dans bien des cas, les aveux sont obtenus sous la contrainte et souvent rédigés en hébreu, langue que la plupart des enfants palestiniens ne savent pas lire. Les mineurs sont souvent privés d'accès à un avocat au stade de l'arrestation et beaucoup déclarent avoir été victimes de mauvais traitements³⁴. Des enfants ont rapporté avoir eu les yeux bandés, les mains menottées ou ligotées, et avoir été battus et mis à l'isolement³⁵.

24. Ces pratiques ne sont pas seulement contraires aux normes juridiques fondamentales; elles ne tiennent pas non plus compte de l'état d'extrême vulnérabilité des jeunes enfants. La vulnérabilité des enfants est une notion bien admise par la communauté internationale et les protections spéciales accordées aux enfants sont consacrées par un certain nombre d'instruments juridiques, à commencer par la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant. Selon un rapport établi en 2012 par une équipe d'avocats indépendants, l'argument avancé par les autorités israéliennes selon lequel la Convention ne s'applique pas au-delà des frontières d'Israël est factuellement et juridiquement sans fondement³⁶. Dans son avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, la Cour internationale de Justice a jugé que la Convention, le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels étaient en réalité applicables³⁷. Seules 2,5 % des recommandations formulées dans le rapport « Children in military custody » avaient été mises en œuvre en juillet 2016³⁸.

C. Punitions collectives

25. Les autorités israéliennes ont couramment recours à un certain nombre de mesures qui constituent souvent une forme de punition collective. Ces mesures, prises au nom de la sécurité et généralement en réponse aux agissements d'une seule

³⁴ Defense for Children International – Palestine, « No way to treat a child: Palestinian children in the Israeli military detention system », avril 2016.

³⁵ Département d'État des États-Unis d'Amérique, rapport 2015 sur les pratiques en matière de droits de l'homme en Israël et dans les territoires occupés, consultable à l'adresse : www.state.gov/j/drl/rls/hrrpt/humanrightsreport/index.htm?dynamic_load_id=252929&year=2015#wrapper.

³⁶ « Children in military custody », juin 2012, par. 30. Consultable à l'adresse : www.childreninmilitarycustody.org.uk/.

³⁷ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, par. 102 à 113.

³⁸ Military Court Watch, Monitoring the treatment of children in Israeli military detention, note d'information, juillet 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.militarycourtwatch.org/files/server/MCW%20BRIEFING%20PAPER%20-%20JUL%202016.pdf.

personne ou d'un seul groupe de personnes, ont une incidence considérable sur le quotidien de la quasi-totalité des Palestiniens à un moment ou à un autre. La fermeture des routes et l'installation de points de contrôle et de barrages ont pour effet de restreindre la liberté des Palestiniens de se rendre au travail et à l'école, de rendre visite à leur famille et de voyager pour raisons médicales. La démolition des maisons prive de logement des familles entières à raison des actes présumés d'une seule personne.

26. La pratique des peines collectives consiste à punir un groupe entier pour les actes d'un seul individu. Posée par l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, l'interdiction des peines collectives a été déclarée insusceptible de dérogation par le Comité des droits de l'homme³⁹.

Démolitions punitives

27. En 2014, les autorités israéliennes ont repris la pratique des démolitions punitives de maisons⁴⁰. Depuis, le nombre de démolitions ne fait qu'augmenter. En 2015, 11 maisons ont été démolies, entraînant le déplacement de 85 personnes. En juillet 2016, 16 maisons avaient déjà été détruites, provoquant le déplacement de 92 personnes⁴¹. Les démolitions punitives, dont le but est de causer du tort aux membres de la famille d'une personne soupçonnée d'une infraction, constitue une violation flagrante des principes fondamentaux du droit international⁴².

28. Lors de l'examen du quatrième rapport périodique d'Israël en 2014, le Comité des droits de l'homme a également engagé l'État israélien à mettre fin à sa politique de démolitions punitives, la déclarant incompatible avec les obligations mises à sa charge par le Pacte⁴³. En plus de constituer une forme de châtement collectif interdit, les démolitions punitives sont une violation de l'interdiction de la destruction de biens de caractère civil⁴⁴.

Fermetures, points de contrôle et permis

29. Le droit à la liberté d'aller et venir est régulièrement compromis par les fermetures de routes, les points de passage et les lourds régimes de permis qui touchent des villes et des villages entiers. Ces pratiques sont de plus en plus utilisées dans les villages et les régions dont sont originaires les personnes soupçonnées d'attaques⁴⁵. À la fin de 2015, le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires a recensé 543 fermetures de routes au total en Cisjordanie. Hébron est particulièrement visé par ce type de mesures. Les restrictions y ont été considérablement renforcées après une série de manifestations et d'affrontements

³⁹ Voir observation générale n° 29 (CCPR/C/21/Rev.1/Add.11).

⁴⁰ HCDH, « Punitive demolitions destroy more than homes in occupied Palestinian territory », 28 décembre 2015. Consultable à l'adresse : www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/PunitiveDemolitionsinOPT.aspx.

⁴¹ Betsalem, Statistics on punitive house demolitions, 31 août 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.btselem.org/punitive_demolitions/statistics.

⁴² Al-Haq, « Punitive house demolitions », 31 octobre 2015. Consultable à l'adresse : www.alhaq.org/advocacy/topics/population-transfer-and-residency-right/983-punitive-house-demolitions.

⁴³ Voir CCPR/C/ISR/CO/4.

⁴⁴ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 53.

⁴⁵ Voir Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2015 », juin 2016.

ainsi qu'à la suite des agressions qui auraient été commises dans la région en novembre 2015. Ainsi, aux 109 obstacles existants, 53 nouveaux ont été ajoutés au total⁴⁶. Israël affirme qu'il s'agit là de mesures de sécurité. Toutefois, le caractère général de ces obstacles et leur incidence majeure sur l'ensemble de la population palestinienne de plusieurs villes et agglomérations en font non seulement une violation du droit à la liberté de mouvement⁴⁷ mais également, dans de nombreux cas, une forme de punition collective.

30. Un incident récent offre un exemple particulièrement illustratif. Le 8 juin 2016, quatre Israéliens ont été tués dans un attentat odieux commis dans un centre commercial très fréquenté de Tel-Aviv. Après l'attentat, la police a identifié deux suspects palestiniens originaires d'Hébron⁴⁸. Les autorités israéliennes ont alors révoqué les 83 000 permis accordés aux résidents de la Cisjordanie et de Gaza pour leur permettre de voyager pendant le Ramadan, suspendu 204 permis de travail délivrés à des personnes appartenant à la famille élargie des suspects et bouclé toute la ville dont ces derniers étaient originaires⁴⁹.

31. Le blocus de Gaza constitue actuellement la plus longue peine collective infligée au peuple palestinien⁵⁰. Imposé en 2007, le bouclage empêche la grande majorité du 1,8 million d'habitants de Gaza de partir. Cette mesure a été qualifiée de punition collective par le Secrétaire général et le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge⁵¹.

32. Une annonce faite récemment par le Ministre de la défense donne tout lieu de craindre que ce type de mesures va se poursuivre. Dans la logique de la méthode dite « de la carotte et du bâton », le Ministre propose de continuer à employer des mesures rigoureuses (fermetures, présence renforcée des forces de sécurité, démolitions) dans les régions où vivent les suspects, tout en construisant des infrastructures dans les zones qui, de l'avis des autorités israéliennes, recherchent la coexistence. Il convient de noter que c'est principalement avec les implantations illégales qu'il s'agit de coexister. Le Ministre aurait déclaré que cette politique

⁴⁶ Ibid.

⁴⁷ Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, art. 12, Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, art. 13, quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 27 et commentaire de cet article, et Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif du 9 juillet 2004, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, par. 135 à 137.

⁴⁸ Peter Beaumont, « Four dead in Tel Aviv market shooting », The Guardian, 8 juin 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.theguardian.com/world/2016/jun/08/tel-aviv-market-shooting-sarona-complex.

⁴⁹ HCDH, Press briefing note on Yemen and Israel/Occupied Palestinian Territory, 10 juin 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.ohchr.org/FR/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=20082&LangID=E.

⁵⁰ A/HRC/24/30, par. 21 à 23.

⁵¹ Centre d'actualités de l'ONU, « In Jerusalem and Gaza, Ban urges "courageous steps" for lasting two-State solution », 28 juin 2016, consultable à l'adresse : www.un.org/apps/news/story.asp?NewsID=54341#.V81iTJN95E4, et Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, « Gaza closure: not another year! », communiqué de presse n° 10/103, 14 juin 2010, consultable à l'adresse : www.icrc.org/eng/resources/documents/update/palestine-update-140610.htm.

visait à continuer de donner des avantages à ceux qui aspirent à la coexistence tout en compliquant la vie de ceux qui cherchent à s'en prendre aux Juifs⁵².

D. Environnement coercitif et transferts forcés

33. Au cours des derniers mois, les activités d'implantation de colonies se sont fortement intensifiées : multiplication des permis de construire, autorisation rétroactive de constructions considérées illégales au regard même du droit israélien, démolition de maisons palestiniennes, poursuite des pratiques et des politiques discriminatoires de planification urbaine qui rendent extrêmement difficile la construction par les Palestiniens. Ces politiques et pratiques sont particulièrement employées dans la zone C et à Jérusalem-Est, au point que le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires a qualifié la situation d'environnement coercitif compromettant la présence physique des Palestiniens et exacerbant le risque de transferts forcés individuels et en masse⁵³.

34. Le transfert forcé est clairement interdit par l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève. Ce même article fait également interdiction à la puissance occupante de procéder au transfert de sa propre population dans le territoire occupé. Le transfert forcé est également érigé en crime de guerre et en crime contre l'humanité par le Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale⁵⁴. Dans le contexte du Statut de Rome, le terme « de force » ne se limite pas à la force physique et peut comprendre « un acte commis en usant à l'encontre de ladite ou desdites ou de tierces personnes de la menace de la force ou de la coercition, telle que celle causée par la menace de violences, contrainte, détention, pressions psychologiques, abus de pouvoir, ou bien à la faveur d'un climat coercitif »⁵⁵.

35. Les communautés bédouines de Cisjordanie sont particulièrement vulnérables, car elles sont souvent l'objet de plans de réinstallation établis par les autorités israéliennes. Pour justifier ces mesures, les autorités israéliennes font notamment valoir que les structures et les emplacements existants ne seraient pas « viables »⁵⁶. Dans le cadre de la mise en œuvre de ces plans de réinstallation, les autorités ont démoli des maisons et autres constructions palestiniennes en se prévalant souvent du fait que ces structures sont construites sans permis délivrés par Israël. Toutefois, il est notoire que ces permis sont difficiles à obtenir en raison du coût élevé des demandes, des rejets fréquents et de la lourdeur des procédures, autant d'éléments qui, ensemble, constituent une forme de régime de permis discriminatoire qui rend quasi impossible toute construction « légale » par les Palestiniens. Le 8 janvier ⁵² Yossi Melman, « Liberman unveils new “carrot and stick” policy for West Bank Palestinians », Jerusalem Post, 17 août 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.jpost.com/Arab-Israeli-Conflict/Liberman-unveils-new-carrot-and-stick-policy-for-West-Bank-Palestinians-464360.

⁵³ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2015 », juin 2016.

⁵⁴ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, art. 8.2) a) vii) et 7.1) d), Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 2187, n° 38544.

⁵⁵ Cour pénale internationale, Éléments des crimes (La Haye, 2011). Consultable à l'adresse : www.icc-cpi.int/NR/rdonlyres/7730B6BF-308A-4D26-9C52-3E19CD06E6AB/0/ElementsOfCrimesFra.pdf.

⁵⁶ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « At risk of forcible transfer », Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (mai 2016). Consultable à l'adresse : www.ochaopt.org/content/risk-forcible-transfer.

2016, l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) a noté, au sujet de la démolition de maisons de Bédouins menée par les autorités israéliennes en Cisjordanie le 6 janvier, que la démolition de structures résidentielles exacerbe un climat déjà coercitif et a pour effet de chasser les communautés bédouines de terres où elles habitent depuis des dizaines d'années⁵⁷.

36. Le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires a également observé que la situation en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, exposait de nombreuses familles et communautés palestiniennes au risque de transfert forcé, dans la mesure où l'environnement coercitif créé par les pratiques israéliennes, et notamment la quasi-impossibilité d'obtenir des permis de construire, les pousse à partir⁵⁸. Dans une lettre, les Ambassadeurs en Israël de l'Allemagne, de la Belgique, de l'Espagne, de l'Irlande, de l'Italie, de la Norvège, de la Suède et de la Suisse ont reproché aux forces israéliennes de confisquer les abris appartenant à la communauté bédouine de Cisjordanie et déclaré que ces confiscations et les démolitions antérieures, ajoutées à l'impossibilité pour les organismes humanitaires d'acheminer des articles de secours aux familles touchées, créaient un environnement coercitif susceptible de les pousser à partir contre leur gré⁵⁹.

37. La destruction des maisons et des biens ne se limite pas aux structures construites par les Palestiniens mais s'étend également, et de plus en plus souvent, aux constructions financées grâce à l'aide humanitaire internationale. Ainsi, le 16 mai 2016, les autorités israéliennes ont démoli sept maisons et confisqué les matériaux de trois autres constructions qui avaient été fournis par les organismes humanitaires, laissant sans abri 49 réfugiés palestiniens, dont 22 enfants⁶⁰. Depuis le début de 2016, selon les chiffres de la société civile, 187 des structures détruites ou saisies par les autorités israéliennes avaient été fournies dans le cadre de l'assistance humanitaire financée par les donateurs, contre 108 sur l'ensemble de 2015. La destruction d'infrastructures essentielles fournies par le biais de l'aide humanitaire constitue une violation directe des obligations imposées à Israël par le droit international. Aux termes de l'article 59 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, la puissance occupante doit, « dans toute la mesure de ses moyens », faciliter les actions de secours faites en faveur d'une population dans le besoin. Le premier alinéa de l'article 55 fait en outre obligation à la puissance occupante d'assurer l'approvisionnement de la population civile en vivres et en produits

⁵⁷ UNRWA, « UNRWA condemns demolition of the homes of Palestine refugee bedouins families at risk of forcible transfer; decries desperate humanitarian consequences », 8 janvier 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.unrwa.org/newsroom/official-statements/unrwa-condemns-demolition-homes-palestine-refugee-bedouins-families.

⁵⁸ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « At risk of forcible transfer », Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (mai 2016). Consultable à l'adresse : www.ochaopt.org/content/risk-forcible-transfer#_ftn3.

⁵⁹ Peter Beaumont, « Ambassadors protest at Israel's confiscation of West Bank shelters », The Guardian, 18 juillet 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.theguardian.com/world/2016/jul/18/ambassadors-protest-israel-confiscation-west-bank-bedouin-shelters.

⁶⁰ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Humanitarian Coordinator calls on Israeli authorities to stop destruction of humanitarian aid and respect international law », 18 mai 2016. Consultable à l'adresse : www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-coordinator-calls-israeli-authorities-stop-destruction-humanitarian-aid-and.

médicaux⁶¹. Si elle n'est pas mesure de s'acquitter de cette obligation, la puissance occupante a l'obligation inconditionnelle d'accepter les actions de secours faites en faveur de la population⁶².

III. Le droit au développement et le Territoire palestinien occupé

38. Il y a 30 ans, l'Assemblée générale adoptait la Déclaration sur le droit au développement⁶³. La Déclaration, et les instruments adoptés par la suite, dispose que tous les êtres humains et tous les peuples ont le droit inaliénable à bénéficier d'un développement économique et social qui soit équitable et juste, durable, participatif, inclusif, non discriminatoire, fondé sur l'état de droit et pleinement respectueux de tous les droits de l'homme et des libertés. Il a été reconnu que le droit au développement est un droit de l'homme en soi, ce qui lui confère une portée universelle et le rend inviolable⁶⁴. Si la Déclaration n'est pas en soi juridiquement contraignante, elle comporte bon nombre des droits et des obligations juridiques – civils, politiques, économiques, sociaux et culturels – qui sont contraignants pour tous les États parties du fait des divers instruments relatifs aux droits de l'homme qui ont été adoptés par la communauté internationale au cours des soixante-dix dernières années⁶⁵. Il a été tenu compte de la Déclaration dans le Programme de développement durable à l'horizon 2030⁶⁶.

39. La Déclaration sur le droit au développement est un instrument particulièrement utile pour comprendre la situation des droits de l'homme qui règne dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Elle énonce expressément, entre autres droits, les droits de l'homme ayant force obligatoire en droit international, à savoir :

- a) Le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes (art. 1);
- b) L'élimination de la domination et de l'occupation étrangères (art. 5);
- c) L'interdiction de la discrimination et des atteintes flagrantes aux droits de l'homme (art. 6);

⁶¹ Felix Schwendimann, « The legal framework of humanitarian access in armed conflict », in International Review of the Red Cross: The future of Humanitarian Action, vol. 93, n° 884 (Cambridge et New York, Cambridge University Press, décembre 2011), p. 1001.

⁶² Ibid., p. 1002.

⁶³ Résolution 41/128, annexe. Ce droit a été réaffirmé dans les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'homme qui ont été adoptés par la suite, notamment la Déclaration et le Programme d'action de Vienne (1993).

⁶⁴ Déclaration sur le droit au développement, art. 1, par. 1; Arjun Sengupta, « On the theory and practice of the right to development », Human Rights Quarterly, vol. 24, n° 4, p. 837 (Baltimore, Johns Hopkins University Press, 2002).

⁶⁵ La Déclaration sur le droit au développement repose sur le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels (Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 993, n° 14531) et le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques (Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 999, n° 4668). Le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme propose sur son site un tableau établissant un lien entre les droits énoncés dans la Déclaration et les instruments contraignants en vertu du droit international. Voir le document d'information 37 sur la page du Haut-Commissariat consacrée aux questions fréquemment posées sur le droit au développement (Genève, 2016).

⁶⁶ Résolution 70/1, paragraphe 10.

- d) La pleine jouissance de tous les droits de l'homme et de toutes les libertés fondamentales, y compris les droits socioéconomiques (art. 6 et 8);
- e) La pleine souveraineté sur ses ressources naturelles (art. 1);
- f) La participation à la prise de décision publique (art. 2 et 8).

Ces droits sont au cœur des obligations contraignantes imposées par le droit des droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire qui s'appliquent pleinement au Territoire palestinien occupé⁶⁷. Elles établissent non seulement des droits pour le peuple palestinien, mais créent également des obligations pour Israël, Puissance occupante, qui doit respecter et protéger ces droits. Le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination est largement accepté par la communauté internationale⁶⁸. La Cour internationale de Justice a déclaré ce qui suit : « Israël doit observer l'obligation qui lui incombe de respecter le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien et les obligations auxquelles il est tenu en vertu du droit international humanitaire et du droit international relatif aux droits de l'homme »⁶⁹. Si la question du développement est forcément complexe dans un contexte d'occupation, il est essentiel que le droit des droits de l'homme et le droit humanitaire soient interprétés d'une manière qui soit compatible avec le droit au développement, quelle que soit la durée de l'occupation.

40. La Déclaration sur le droit au développement établit une approche privilégiant les droits de l'homme en faveur de la croissance économique et du progrès social. Les droits de l'homme doivent faire partie intégrante de tous les aspects du développement économique et social et constituer une condition préalable à la réalisation de progrès réels et durables et au développement des capacités et des libertés pour l'ensemble de la population. Tout le monde a le droit de jouir de ces droits, à titre individuel ou collectif, et les États parties ont la responsabilité de créer les conditions qui permettent d'assurer la jouissance de ces droits et de lever les obstacles qui pourraient l'entraver. Le droit au développement suppose à la fois l'application de procédures transparentes et participatives ainsi que la réalisation effective de l'égalité des chances pour tous en ce qui concerne l'accès aux ressources de base et aux droits socioéconomiques⁷⁰.

A. Développement économique et social du Territoire palestinien occupé

41. L'économie palestinienne n'est comparable à aucune autre économie du monde moderne. Ses composantes territoriales – la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et Gaza – sont séparées physiquement l'une de l'autre. Sa plus ⁶⁷ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, par. 86 à 114 et par. 149. Ces droits sont également énoncés dans des instruments contraignants relatifs aux droits de l'homme, notamment la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels.

⁶⁸ Résolution 70/141.

⁶⁹ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, par. 149.

⁷⁰ Résolution 41/128, annexe, art. 8, par. 1; Paul Gready et al., « What do human rights mean in development? », dans The Palgrave Handbook of International Development, Jean Grugel et Daniel Hammett, eds. (Palgrave Macmillan UK, 2016), p. 453.

grande entité géographique – la Cisjordanie – a été divisée par Israël en un archipel d'îlots densément peuplés, isolés les uns des autres par le mur ou par des colonies de peuplement; les routes les contournent pour relier les colonies de peuplement les unes aux autres d'une part et au système de transport israélien d'autre part et il y a des barrages routiers. L'occupation des sols est régie par des lois restrictives et il y a des zones d'accès réservé et des zones militaires d'accès interdit. Dans ces zones occupées par Israël, les autorités politiques locales sont elles aussi morcelées : l'Autorité palestinienne exerce un pouvoir limité sur une partie de la Cisjordanie fragmentée; Gaza est régie par une autorité politique distincte qui ne relève pas de l'Autorité palestinienne et Israël a annexé illégalement Jérusalem-Est⁷¹, sans compter qu'Israël impose un blocus complet – terrestre, maritime et aérien – sur Gaza depuis 2007. À l'intérieur de la Cisjordanie, Israël a pleine autorité civile et assure la sécurité sur la « zone C », qui représente plus de 60 % de cette partie du territoire et qui entoure complètement et divise l'archipel de villes et villages palestiniens, une situation hybride qu'un groupe de défense des droits de l'homme a appelé « occunexion »⁷². Le Territoire palestinien occupé n'a aucun accès sûr vers le monde extérieur, que ce soit par voie terrestre, maritime ou aérienne. Toutes ses frontières, à une exception près, sont contrôlées par Israël⁷³. Aucune autre société dans le monde ne fait face à une telle accumulation de difficultés; elle connaît en effet une occupation de guerre, un morcellement de son territoire, des différends politiques et administratifs et un isolement à la fois géographique et économique.

42. Les Accords d'Oslo de 1993 et le Protocole relatif aux relations économiques entre le Gouvernement de l'État d'Israël et l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine (Protocole de Paris de 1994) devaient être des dispositions transitoires; la Palestine les considérait comme la voie diplomatique et économique vers son indépendance, qui devait intervenir au plus tard en 1999. Au cours de cette période de transition, les Accords d'Oslo n'ont pas touché au vaste projet de colonies de peuplement israéliennes et ont d'autre part laissé à Israël toute latitude sur les mesures à prendre face aux problèmes d'insécurité dans l'ensemble du Territoire palestinien occupé. Le Protocole de Paris a créé un cadre économique reposant fortement sur Israël (devises, dispositions commerciales établies sur le modèle d'une union douanière, modalités de change et capacités de perception des impôts) qui, dans les faits, a instauré une dépendance palestinienne à l'égard d'Israël. Il n'y a jamais eu d'accord de paix définitif entre Israël et la Palestine, et ces dispositions transitoires sont désormais solidement établies. L'Autorité palestinienne a développé une grande partie des capacités administratives et institutionnelles nécessaire à la gouvernance nationale, mais elle manque des ressources économiques qui pourraient lui permettre de se développer de manière souveraine⁷⁴. Depuis 2000, l'économie palestinienne a connu une croissance économique instable. Lorsqu'il y a eu croissance, elle a été jugée non viable car a) elle était fortement tributaire de l'aide étrangère et des importations pour la consommation des particuliers⁷⁵; b) l'occupation israélienne a éloigné de plus en plus les différentes régions du territoire palestinien et en a réduit la taille, créant ainsi une base économique dysfonctionnelle privée de capacité de développement autonome⁷⁶.

⁷¹ Le Conseil de sécurité a déclaré que l'annexion par Israël de Jérusalem-Est était contraire au droit international et que Jérusalem-Est était réputée faire partie du Territoire palestinien occupé. Voir résolutions 476 (1980) et 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁷² Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « 49 years of control without rights: human rights of the Palestinians in the West Bank and East Jerusalem – what has changed? », 1^{er} juin 2016. Disponible sur le site suivant: www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2016/06/49years2016-en.pdf.

⁷³ Le seul poste-frontière qui n'est pas directement contrôlé par Israël est le point de passage de Rafah entre Gaza et l'Égypte. Rafah est utilisé presque exclusivement comme point de passage pour les civils, pas comme carrefour commercial. L'Égypte a maintenu ce point de passage fermé pendant la majeure partie des trois dernières années.

43. Tenter de bâtir une économie souveraine sous une occupation prolongée sans aucune perspective de voir se réaliser une véritable autodétermination dans un avenir prévisible comporte des contradictions manifestes. Une économie palestinienne étouffée et dysfonctionnelle offre une base non viable pour le développement social équitable et durable du Territoire palestinien occupé. Certes, la Palestine n'a cessé de faire des progrès dans plusieurs domaines sociaux importants, notamment la mortalité maternelle, les niveaux d'alphabétisation et d'enseignement, et les taux de vaccination. Cependant, d'autres indicateurs clefs témoignent d'une situation grave et montrent que la situation sociale et les conditions de vie stagnent ou empirent :

a) L'économie palestinienne n'a pas progressé. En 2014, le produit intérieur brut (PIB) réel par habitant était pratiquement au même niveau qu'en 1999, le PIB réel par habitant de Gaza s'établissant à 71 % du niveau auquel il se situait en 1999⁷⁷;

b) Le chômage est devenu un véritable fléau social. En 2016, il s'établissait à 27 % dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, contre 12 % en 1999; à Gaza, la crise du chômage est particulièrement grave, puisque les taux de chômage et de chômage des jeunes (âgés de 15 à 29 ans) y sont parmi les plus élevés dans le monde, soit 42 % et 58 % respectivement⁷⁸;

c) La pauvreté de la population palestinienne ne cesse de s'accroître depuis 2012 : 26 % des Palestiniens sont maintenant jugés pauvres et, selon les estimations, 13 % souffrent d'extrême pauvreté⁷⁹. L'insécurité alimentaire est endémique : on

⁷⁴ Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement/Banque mondiale, « West Bank and Gaza: Towards Economic Sustainability of a Future Palestinian State – promoting private sector-led growth » (Washington) (Groupe de la Banque mondiale, 2012).

⁷⁵ La Banque mondiale a estimé que l'aide des bailleurs de fonds extérieurs au Territoire palestinien occupé avait diminué, passant de 32 % du PIB en 2008 à 6 % en 2015, et indiqué que ce modèle de croissance impulsée par les donateurs était intenable. Voir Banque mondiale, « Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee » (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, avril 2016).

⁷⁶ Voir Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement/Banque mondiale, « West Bank and Gaza: towards economic sustainability of a future Palestinian State — promoting private sector-led growth » et UNCTAD/APP/2016/1.

⁷⁷ En 2014, le PIB réel par habitant dans le Territoire palestinien occupé (Cisjordanie et Gaza, à l'exception de Jérusalem-Est) était de 1 737 dollars. En 1999, il était de 1 723 dollars. En 2014, le PIB réel par habitant de Gaza était de 971 dollars, contre 1 372 dollars en 1999. Tous les chiffres sont en dollars constants de 2004; le PIB par habitant en valeur nominale est plus élevé. Voir les données publiées par le Bureau central palestinien de statistique, disponibles à l'adresse suivante : www.pcbs.gov.ps/Portals/_Rainbow/Documents/e-napcapitacon-1994-2014.htm.

⁷⁸ Banque mondiale, « Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee » (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, septembre 2016).

⁷⁹ Organisation des Nations Unies pour l'éducation, la science et la culture (UNESCO), document de programme pour la Palestine (2014-2017).

estime que, en 2016, 2,4 millions de personnes en Cisjordanie et à Gaza (57 % de la population) auront besoin d'une aide humanitaire, sous une forme ou une autre⁸⁰;

d) La part qu'occupent les secteurs de l'industrie, de l'agriculture et des ressources naturelles dans l'économie et en termes d'emploi ne cesse de diminuer, notamment en raison des restrictions imposées par Israël à l'accès aux marchés; du manque de confiance des investisseurs potentiels qui s'explique par l'incertitude politique; des pertes importantes de terres arables prises par la Puissance occupante; de l'absence de pouvoir véritable de planification économique; du manque de contrôle palestinien sur les ressources naturelles importantes (eau, sols, carrières de pierre et réserves de pétrole et de gaz); de l'accès limité aux ressources halieutiques⁸¹. L'économie s'est désindustrialisée et sa capacité d'exportation a été mise à mal par le déclin des secteurs agricole et manufacturier⁸²;

e) Le Territoire palestinien occupé continue d'être un marché captif pour Israël, comme il l'est depuis le début de l'occupation: ces dernières années, quelque 85 % de ses exportations étaient destinées à Israël et 70 % de ses importations provenaient d'Israël. Les restrictions et les déséquilibres dans les relations commerciales ont contribué à maintenir le déficit chronique de la balance commerciale palestinienne, à savoir 5,2 milliards de dollars en 2015, soit environ 41 % du PIB⁸³;

f) Du fait des accords de partage et de perception des recettes conclus avec Israël, des recettes budgétaires considérables partent vers Israël et ne bénéficient jamais au Gouvernement palestinien ni à l'économie palestinienne, élément symptomatique de la précarité du pouvoir que le Gouvernement palestinien exerce sur la gestion économique. La Banque mondiale et la CNUCED estiment que ces arrangements font perdre à l'économie palestinienne au moins 640 millions de dollars par an (soit 5 % du PIB)⁸⁴;

g) La CNUCED a estimé que, si le Territoire palestinien n'était pas occupé, son PIB passerait du simple au double, le chômage et la pauvreté diminueraient considérablement et les déficits commerciaux et budgétaires chroniques se réduiraient⁸⁵.

44. Israël, Puissance occupante, contrôle effectivement le développement économique et social du territoire palestinien, mais elle le fait de différentes ⁸⁰ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Humanitarian dashboard: 2nd quarter 2016 », 18 août 2016. Disponible à l'adresse suivante: www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-dashboard-2nd-quarter-2016. L'UNRWA a indiqué que, en mars 2016, 70 % de la population réfugiée à Gaza – plus de 930 000 personnes – étaient tributaires de l'aide alimentaire, ce qui représente une augmentation spectaculaire, puisqu'en 2000, elle s'établissait à 10 %. Voir www.unrwa.org/newsroom/emergency-reports/gaza-situation-report-137.

⁸¹ Voir UNCTAD/APP/2016/1. La Banque mondiale a constaté, en 2015, que la compétitivité de l'économie palestinienne s'était réduite progressivement depuis la signature des Accords d'Oslo, en particulier celle de l'industrie et de l'agriculture. Voir Banque mondiale, « Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee » (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, septembre 2015).

⁸² Banque mondiale, « Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee » (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, septembre 2016).

⁸³ Voir UNCTAD/APP/2016/1. Tous les montants sont exprimés en dollars des États-Unis.

⁸⁴ Voir Banque mondiale, « Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee » (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, avril 2016) et UNCTAD/APP/2016/1.

⁸⁵ Voir UNCTAD/APP/2016/1.

manières dans chaque région. Les mesures qui constituent des violations du droit au développement, notamment le blocus de Gaza et l'effondrement subséquent de son économie, la fragmentation et la partition de la Cisjordanie, y compris la séparation et l'abandon de Jérusalem-Est concernant les services, l'exploitation et l'appropriation des ressources naturelles palestiniennes, le régime de dépendance économique, le contrôle unilatéral exercé sur les frontières extérieures de la Palestine, les entraves à la mobilité personnelle et professionnelle, les restrictions imposées à l'utilisation des terres agricoles, les restrictions imposées aux pêches, le caractère inéquitable des accords de partage des recettes et de collecte des impôts, et les arrangements commerciaux déséquilibrés. La nature particulière de la domination israélienne est décrite région par région dans les sections ci-après.

Gaza

45. Israël poursuit son occupation de Gaza et impose un blocus militaire, économique et social de grande ampleur qui maintient le territoire isolé du monde et du reste du Territoire palestinien occupé. Or, ce blocus est contraire aux dispositions du droit international en ce qu'il impose une forme de peine collective à toute une population⁸⁶. En 2007, lorsque Israël a imposé le blocus complet, l'économie gazaouie était déjà affaiblie par les fermetures qui avaient commencé au début des années 90. Elle s'est depuis complètement effondrée, de même que le niveau de vie dans le territoire. La misère dans laquelle le blocus a plongé la population a été accentuée par les trois épisodes d'escalade de la violence entre Israël et Gaza – en 2008-2009, 2012 et 2014 – au cours desquels quelque 2 500 civils palestiniens ont été tués et des dizaines de milliers blessés, et les infrastructures de Gaza ont été lourdement endommagées. L'entrée de tous les matériaux de reconstruction dans la bande de Gaza doit recevoir l'autorisation d'Israël, qui a soit limité, soit interdit l'importation de béton, de bois et d'autres matériaux pourtant indispensables, rendant les tentatives de reconstruction lentes, compliquées et coûteuses⁸⁷. En 2016, soit deux ans après la fin des plus récents affrontements, seuls 45 % des besoins en énergie de Gaza sont satisfaits, ce qui se traduit par des coupures d'électricité pendant 16 à 18 heures chaque jour. Par ailleurs, 70 % de la population gazaouie est approvisionnée en eau courante pendant seulement 6 à 8 heures tous les 2 à 4 jours, et 65 000 Gazaouis déplacés depuis les événements violents de 2014 n'ont toujours pas pu reconstruire leur maison. On estime que 80 % de la population dépend dans une certaine mesure de l'aide humanitaire pour survivre. Il est toutefois encourageant de souligner que de nombreux hôpitaux et de nombreuses écoles endommagés ou détruits par les événements les plus récents ont pu être réparés ou reconstruits grâce à l'aide financière de la communauté internationale⁸⁸.

⁸⁶ A/69/347, par. 30 à 34 et A/HRC/25/40, par. 24 à 30. Le Rapporteur spécial prend note de la conclusion de la Commission d'enquête du Secrétaire général sur les événements du 31 mai 2010 concernant la flottille (« rapport Palmer ») (septembre 2011), pour laquelle le blocus est légal, mais il est d'avis que les observations formulées par le groupe d'experts indépendants des droits de l'homme des Nations Unies, qui a critiqué la conclusion du rapport Palmer, constituent une interprétation plus convaincante du droit international.

⁸⁷ Gisha : Centre juridique pour la liberté de mouvement, « Two years later: the long road to reconstruction and recovery » (2016). Consultable en ligne à l'adresse suivante : www.gisha.org/UserFiles/File/publications/2_years_later/Reconstruction_EN.pdf (en anglais).

⁸⁸ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Gaza: two years after », 26 août 2016. Consultable en ligne à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/sites/default/files/gaza_war_2_years_after_english.pdf (en anglais).

46. Au cours des dix dernières années, Israël a imposé à Gaza un « dé-développement », suivant une politique consistant à répondre essentiellement aux besoins humanitaires de base⁸⁹. Une étude de premier plan réalisée en 2012 par l'ONU posait la question de savoir si, dans les conditions d'alors, il serait toujours possible de vivre durablement à Gaza en 2020⁹⁰. En 2015, la Banque mondiale a étudié ce qu'elle a appelé « le coût incommensurable de la violence et du blocus sur l'économie et le niveau de vie de Gaza ». Après avoir constaté des niveaux de chômage et de pauvreté peu encourageants, la Banque mondiale a expliqué que les quelque 70 % de Palestiniens qui travaillent dans le secteur privé réduit de Gaza gagnent en moyenne 174 dollars par mois, soit moins que le salaire minimum légal fixé à 400 dollars. Bien qu'Israël ait récemment autorisé la vente en Cisjordanie et en Israël de quantités limitées de marchandises produites à Gaza, les exportations de Gaza ne représentent que 11 % de leur niveau d'avant 2007 et l'imposition du blocus. Selon la Banque mondiale, le PIB de Gaza aurait été de 51 % supérieur à ce qu'il a été entre 2007 et 2012 sans les effets combinés du blocus et du conflit armé. Aujourd'hui, l'économie dépend pour environ 90 % de son PIB des dépenses du Gouvernement palestinien, des Nations Unies et d'autres envois de fonds de l'étranger ou de projets financés par des donateurs⁹¹.

47. En ce qui concerne l'agriculture, Israël a décrété unilatéralement qu'une bande de terre de 300 mètres sur le territoire de Gaza, le long de la clôture marquant la frontière, serait une zone tampon et que son accès serait interdit ou limité, interdisant de ce fait l'utilisation de quelque 35 % des terres arables de la bande. Israël a également imposé des limitations très strictes à la zone maritime dans laquelle les pêcheurs gazaouis sont autorisés à travailler, ne leur laissant que 3 milles nautiques. Même dans cette zone limitée, les pêcheurs font régulièrement l'objet d'arrestations arbitraires, leur équipement est confisqué et ils essuient parfois des tirs⁹². Ces restrictions ont bridé les capacités des deux secteurs économiques précités de générer croissance économique et emploi⁹³.

48. La précarité de la situation économique est une source d'angoisse pour les Palestiniens de Gaza. Selon un rapport publié par la Banque mondiale en mai 2015, « la qualité de vie de la grande majorité des habitants de Gaza est à peine supportable »⁹⁴. Très peu de Gazaouis obtiennent l'autorisation d'Israël ou de l'Égypte de sortir de la bande, que ce soit pour des raisons professionnelles, familiales, sanitaires ou encore pour étudier. Dans le même rapport, la Banque mondiale a expliqué que compte tenu de la situation de confinement et des affrontements armés, même les taux très élevés de pauvreté et de chômage « ne pouvaient rendre compte des souffrances endurées par les habitants de Gaza résultant de l'insuffisance des réseaux d'alimentation en électricité et en eau ou des ⁸⁹ Sara Roy, The Gaza Strip: The Political Economy of De-development, 3^e éd. (Washington, Institute for Palestine Studies, 2016).

⁹⁰ UNRWA, « Gaza in 2020: A Liveable Place? » (Jérusalem, Bureau du Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, 2012).

⁹¹ Banque mondiale, rapports de suivi économique au comité ad hoc de liaison (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, mai 2015, septembre 2015 et avril 2016).

⁹² Centre Al-Mezan pour les droits de l'homme, « Israeli violations against Palestinian fishermen in the naval part of the access restricted area », rapport du premier trimestre, 2016, p. 11.

⁹³ Voir: Gisha, features.gisha.org/ten-years-later/; Diakonia, Within Range: An Analysis of the Legality of the Land « Buffer Zone » in the Gaza Strip (2011).

⁹⁴ Banque mondiale, « Rapport de suivi économique au comité ad hoc de liaison » (Washington, Groupe de la Banque mondiale, mai 2015).

réseaux d'assainissement, du traumatisme psychologique dû à la guerre, des restrictions imposées à la liberté de mouvement, et des autres conséquences délétères des guerres et du blocus ». Les nappes aquifères, qui alimentent Gaza en eau, sont surexploitées et seuls 5 % à 10 % de l'eau est encore potable. Le peu de fiabilité du réseau électrique est non seulement préjudiciable pour l'économie mais également pour la qualité de vie. Du fait des dommages non réparés occasionnés aux usines d'épuration, de l'absence d'électricité pour les faire fonctionner correctement, et des infrastructures défectueuses, une grande partie des eaux usées de Gaza sont déversées directement dans la Méditerranée, ce qui représente quelque 100 millions de litres chaque jour et augmente le risque de maladies infectieuses⁹⁵. La qualité des services de santé continue de se détériorer : les médicaments et fournitures de base viennent à manquer, les équipes soignantes sont peu ou pas payées, et la pénurie de carburant compromet la prestation des soins. Cette situation est particulièrement inquiétante dans la mesure où des milliers de Gazaouis souffrent de handicaps physiques graves et que l'on estime que 20 % de la population présenterait des troubles psychologiques du fait des récents conflits⁹⁶. Face à la détérioration des conditions de vie à Gaza, une grande organisation de défense des droits de l'homme a déclaré que « Vivre à Gaza, c'est comme vivre dans un pays du Tiers-Monde qui s'effondre – une situation qui ne résulte pas d'une catastrophe naturelle mais qui est entièrement d'origine humaine »⁹⁷.

La Cisjordanie

49. L'économie de la Cisjordanie n'est pas aussi catastrophique que celle de Gaza, mais elle n'en est pas florissante pour autant. Entre 1999 et 2014, elle a connu une croissance de seulement 14 % en valeur réelle, en grande partie du fait du découpage du territoire sous occupation et de l'incertitude politique et économique généralisée planant sur l'avenir du Territoire palestinien occupé⁹⁸. Le découpage actuel de la Cisjordanie remonte à 1995 et à l'Accord intérimaire israélo-palestinien sur la Rive occidentale et la bande de Gaza (Oslo II) qui a prévu trois zones (et annexé illégalement Jérusalem-Est) :

a) Zone A : regroupe les principales grandes villes et villes de taille moyenne de Palestine (à l'exception de certaines parties de Hébron) et représente 18 % de la Cisjordanie. L'Autorité palestinienne assure la gouvernance de la vie civile et de la sécurité, mais Israël fait régulièrement des intrusions pour des raisons de sécurité, sans nécessairement s'être coordonnée avec l'Autorité palestinienne;

b) Zone B : comprend quelque 400 villages palestiniens et les terres arables adjacentes, et représente 22 % de la Cisjordanie. Elle est placée sous l'autorité ⁹⁵ Ibid.

⁹⁶ Voir Office pour la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Humanitarian dashboard: 2nd quarter 2016 », 18 août 2016, consultable en ligne à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-dashboard-2nd-quarter-2016 (en anglais), et « Gaza two years on: the impact of the 2014 hostilities on the health sector », Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (juin 2016), consultable en ligne à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/content/gaza-two-years-impact-2014-hostilities-health-sector (en anglais).

⁹⁷ Betsalem – Centre israélien d'information pour les droits de l'homme dans les territoires occupés, « Reality check: almost fifty years of occupation », 5 juin 2016. Consultable à l'adresse www.btselem.org/publications/201606_reality_check (en anglais).

⁹⁸ En 2014, la part réelle du PIB par habitant de la Cisjordanie s'élevait à 2 269 dollars, contre 1 948 dollars en 1999. Bureau central palestinien de statistique, Rapport statistique sur la Palestine.

civile palestinienne mais sous le contrôle exclusif d'Israël en ce qui concerne la sécurité. La vaste majorité des 2,4 millions de Palestiniens de Cisjordanie vivent dans les zones A et B;

c) Zone C : représente 60 % de la Cisjordanie et Israël assure entièrement le contrôle de la vie civile et de la sécurité. La zone C englobe quelque 225 zones de peuplement israéliennes dans lesquelles habitent de 370 000 à 400 000 colons, et quelque 180 000 Palestiniens. La zone C ceinture complètement les villages palestiniens des zones A et B.

50. Au cours des vingt années qui se sont écoulées depuis Oslo II, la division n'a cessé de s'accroître. Tous les Palestiniens souhaitant passer d'une zone à l'autre, pour voyager ou commercer, soit pour se rendre en Israël, soit pour aller dans d'autres pays, doivent se soumettre aux dispositions en matière de sécurité imposées par Israël. Bien que l'Autorité palestinienne exerce, dans une certaine mesure, une juridiction civile sur les zones A et B, toutes les grandes décisions relatives aux forces armées, à la sécurité et à l'économie concernant le Territoire occupé sont prises par Israël. Dans le même temps, Israël a confié l'aspect financier et administratif de presque toutes les fonctions de gouvernance économique et sociale de la Cisjordanie à l'Autorité palestinienne, qui est financée en partie par la communauté des donateurs.

51. La zone C est essentielle à la santé économique de la Palestine car elle possède des sites d'extraction de minéraux, des carrières, des terres arables productives, des zones à potentiel touristique, des infrastructures de télécommunications, des logements récents, et sa situation géographique, au voisinage d'un autre territoire, est propice à la liberté et au mouvement en Cisjordanie. Selon les estimations de la Banque mondiale, le PIB de la Palestine aurait pu être de 35 % supérieur à ce qu'il est actuellement – soit 3,4 milliards (en dollars des États-Unis de 2011) – et le taux d'emploi pourrait également être de 35 % supérieur si Israël ne limitait pas l'accès des Palestiniens à la zone C⁹⁹. Or, plutôt que d'intégrer la zone C au reste de la Cisjordanie pour préparer la Palestine à une indépendance durable, Israël la considère comme sa base arrière économique et politique, et comme le principal espace géographique où implanter ses colonies illégales. Bien que les dispositions du droit international humanitaire interdisent clairement à la Puissance occupante de piller la zone occupée, Israël exploite pour son propre compte les ressources naturelles de la zone C, y compris les carrières, les minéraux de la mer Morte et l'eau¹⁰⁰.

52. Israël a décidé unilatéralement de destiner 70 % de la zone C à l'implantation de ses colonies de peuplement ainsi qu'aux terres adjacentes et à leur infrastructure routière, militaire et de sécurité dense – autant de zones où la Palestine ne peut se développer. Il a également élaboré un système d'aménagement complet pour faciliter la confiscation des terrains situés en Cisjordanie et favoriser l'expansion des colonies. Ce système exclut la participation des Palestiniens ou le moindre égard pour leurs intérêts. En conséquence, dans la zone C, moins de 1 % du territoire est disponible à la construction pour les Palestiniens; la grande majorité des demandes de permis de construire déposées par les Palestiniens, que ce soit pour des logements ou pour l'infrastructure, sont refusées; les démolitions de maisons palestiniennes par les militaires israéliens sont fréquentes et se multiplient; et des milliers de Palestiniens, pour la plupart des Bédouins, sont chassés de leurs maisons et de leurs terres ancestrales¹⁰¹. Comme l'a fait observer une organisation de défense des droits de l'homme : « des dizaines de milliers d'hectares, y compris des pâturages et des terres arables, ont été confisquée aux Palestiniens au fil des ans et généreusement donnés aux colonies... Toutes les terres ainsi données aux zones de peuplement sont considérées comme étant des zones militaires fermées dans lesquelles les Palestiniens ne peuvent pénétrer sans autorisation »¹⁰². Ce développement indépendant et inégal de la Cisjordanie, en particulier de la zone C, a favorisé la création de deux univers obéissant à des normes juridiques, économiques et politiques différentes à l'intérieur d'un même territoire, les colons israéliens bénéficiant de conditions nettement plus favorables par rapport à celles des Palestiniens de Cisjordanie parmi lesquels ils vivent, s'agissant aussi bien du système légal, routier et juridique que de la possibilité de se déplacer, des conditions de sécurité, des possibilités économiques, des droits civiques et politiques et de niveaux de vie nettement supérieurs. Certains observateurs informés se demandent si Israël ne prépare pas l'annexion officielle de la zone C¹⁰³, le Gouvernement israélien ayant de toute évidence déjà préparé le fondement juridique d'une telle revendication¹⁰⁴.

⁹⁹ Orhan Niksic, Nur Nasser Eddin et Massimiliano Cali, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Washington, Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement/Banque mondiale, 2014) (en anglais).

¹⁰⁰ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 33 (2), 47 et 53; Betsalem – Centre israélien d'information pour les droits de l'homme dans les territoires occupés, Acting the Landlord: Israel's Policy in Area C, the West Bank (Jérusalem, 2013) (en anglais).

Jérusalem-Est

53. Ces dernières années, Jérusalem-Est a perdu peu à peu les liens naturels qu'elle entretenait sur le plan économique et social avec le reste de la Cisjordanie, en raison de la construction, par Israël, de blocs de colonies qui l'ont encerclée et du mur. Elle pâtit également de ce que la municipalité israélienne de Jérusalem la néglige de longue date. À la suite de son annexion de Jérusalem-Est et de zones adjacentes de Cisjordanie en 1967, Israël a construit 12 colonies sur les terres confisquées, de façon à ériger une barrière physique entre la ville et le reste de la Cisjordanie et à créer de toutes pièces les bases de la revendication de sa souveraineté sur Jérusalem-Est dont la population, en 2014, se composait de 315 000 Palestiniens et de 210 000 colons israéliens. Les organisations de défense ¹⁰¹ Voir Orhan Niksic et al., Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy; Diakonia, « Planning to fail: the planning regime in Area C of the West Bank — an international law perspective » (Jérusalem, Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Resource Centre, 2013) (en anglais); Bureau pour la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Increase in West Bank demolitions during July-August », Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (août 2016). Consultable en ligne à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/content/increase-west-bank-demolitions-during-july-august (en anglais).

¹⁰² Betsalem – Centre israélien d'information pour les droits de l'homme dans les territoires occupés, « Reality Check: almost fifty years of occupation ».

¹⁰³ Al-Monitor, « Is Israel annexing West bank Area C? », 14 août 2016. Consultable en ligne à l'adresse www.al-monitor.com/pulse/originals/2016/08/oslo-accords-area-c-annexation-economic-development-settlers.html (en anglais).

¹⁰⁴ Voir « Report on the Legal Status of Building in Judea and Samaria » (Jérusalem, juin 2012). Consultable en ligne à l'adresse <http://israelipalestinian.procon.org/sourcefiles/The-Levy-Commission-Report-on-the-Legal-Status-of-Building-in-Judea-and-Samaria.pdf> (en anglais); Ministère israélien des affaires étrangères, Israeli Settlements and International Law, consultable à l'adresse www.mfa.gov.il/mfa/foreignpolicy/peace/guide/pages/israeli%20settlements%20and%20international%20law.aspx (en anglais).

des droits de l'homme ont fait observer qu'Israël avait cherché à freiner la croissance de la population palestinienne à Jérusalem en usant de toute une série de mesures discriminatoires dans le domaine de la planification, des services sociaux et du droit de résidence¹⁰⁵.

54. Du fait de son isolement géographique, Jérusalem-Est a vu sa position de centre marchand et commercial en Cisjordanie considérablement décliner. En 2013, il a été noté dans une étude réalisée par la CNUCED que les pertes économiques subies par les habitants palestiniens de Jérusalem depuis la construction du mur, avaient été estimées à plus d'un milliard de dollars, et que le préjudice découlant de la perte de débouchés économiques avait été évalué à 200 millions de dollars par an. Comme la CNUCED l'indique, l'occupation nuit de multiples façons à l'économie de Jérusalem-Est, touchant le marché du travail, le marché des produits, le commerce et les investissements, ce qui fait baisser la contribution de la ville au PIB palestinien. Seuls 13 % de la superficie de Jérusalem-Est sont prévus pour le logement des Palestiniens, alors qu'un espace trois fois plus étendu est réservé aux colons israéliens¹⁰⁶.

55. Sur le plan social, la partie palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est a été largement ignorée par les autorités municipales, d'où des conditions de vie qui sont nettement en-dessous de celles prévalant à Jérusalem-Ouest et dans les colonies israéliennes de Jérusalem-Est. Les infrastructures, négligées d'année en année, sont en mauvais état, et des défaillances et insuffisances affectent la voirie, les parcs publics, les transports dont le réseau est très insuffisant, les services d'urgence, l'eau, la collecte des déchets, la police et l'éclairage public; il est à noter que certains quartiers ne sont toujours pas raccordés au réseau municipal d'égouts¹⁰⁷. Fait très préoccupant, en 2014, 82 % des habitants palestiniens de Jérusalem vivaient au-dessous du seuil de pauvreté, soit trois fois plus que les habitants israéliens et un taux supérieur de 6 % à celui de 2013¹⁰⁸. La construction du mur a relégué quelque 80 000 Palestiniens dans la partie est de la ville, les contraignant à franchir des points de contrôle à l'intérieur du périmètre urbain pour accéder à leur lieu de travail et aux services sociaux. Bien que continuant à payer des impôts municipaux, la plupart d'entre eux ne bénéficient que d'un nombre très restreint de services de base, voire d'aucun¹⁰⁹.

¹⁰⁵ Voir Betsalem – Centre israélien d'information pour les droits de l'homme dans les territoires occupés, « Reality check: almost fifty years of occupation »; voir aussi Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies, Statistical Yearbook (2016), tableau III/4, consultable à l'adresse www.jiis.org.il/.upload/yearbook/2016/shnaton_C0416.pdf.

¹⁰⁶ CNUCED, « L'économie palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est : face à l'annexion, à l'isolement et au risque de désintégration » (Genève, 2013).

¹⁰⁷ Voir Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « East Jerusalem 2015: facts and figures », consultable à l'adresse www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/EJ-Facts-and-Figures-2015.pdf (en anglais); voir également Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies, « Explosive reality and proposals for de-escalation », consultable à l'adresse www.jiis.org/.upload/East Jerusalem summary_Sept24_2015_Final.pdf (en anglais).

¹⁰⁸ Jerusalem Institute for Israel Studies, Statistical Yearbook (2016), tableau 6.1.

¹⁰⁹ Voir CNUCED, « L'économie palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est: face à l'annexion, à l'isolement et au risque de désintégration »; voir également Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « Ten years of unfulfilled promises in East Jerusalem », consultable à l'adresse www.acri.org.il/en/2015/08/09/ej-10years/ (en anglais).

B. Évaluation du respect par Israël du droit au développement dans le Territoire palestinien occupé

56. Une puissance occupante administrant un territoire occupé dans le respect du droit au développement s'assurerait qu'elle se conforme aux divers obligations et principes juridiques internationaux découlant de ce droit. En particulier, elle respecterait et encouragerait le droit à l'autodétermination et considérerait le territoire comme une entité à part entière. Sa mission consisterait à faire en sorte que celui-ci soit intégralement restitué à la puissance souveraine, c'est-à-dire à sa population, une fois la sécurité et l'ordre rétablis. Elle aiderait activement à la mise en place d'une administration souveraine à même d'exercer son autorité et ne revendiquerait pas sa souveraineté sur quelque partie du territoire pas plus qu'elle ne procéderait au transfert de sa population civile dans ledit territoire. Sous le régime d'occupation, elle administrerait le territoire de bonne foi et dans l'intérêt de la population placée sous sa protection, en tant que dépositaire et usufruitière, et elle en respecterait les lois, les bâtiments et infrastructures publics, l'ordre politique, l'économie, le régime de propriété, les coutumes culturelles et la structure sociale. Elle encouragerait le développement économique autonome du territoire en favorisant la pleine valorisation de son potentiel, et elle s'abstiendrait d'imposer toute pratique économique discriminatoire ou barrière inutile. Elle ne se livrerait pas au pillage, ne viserait pas à s'enrichir et ne créerait pas de dépendance économique. Elle considérerait que les ressources naturelles du territoire occupé appartiennent à la puissance souveraine, agirait en vue de les préserver et utiliserait seulement celles qui sont vraiment utiles à l'administration efficace du territoire tout au long du régime d'occupation. Elle garantirait et favoriserait le plein exercice des droits de l'homme, sous réserve des restrictions s'imposant pour protéger la sécurité et la vie publique. Elle ne tolérerait pas la souffrance sur le plan humanitaire et serait encore moins disposée à l'infliger. Elle interdirait les lois et pratiques discriminatoires et tout traitement de même nature. En outre, elle encouragerait, autant que faire se peut, la prise de décisions participative de la population placée sous sa protection en tant que mesure essentielle à la restauration du pouvoir politique de la puissance souveraine.

57. Durant quarante-neuf années d'occupation, Israël a failli gravement au respect des principes et obligations juridiques découlant du droit au développement. Par une série de mesures, il a fondamentalement fait obstruction au droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination; il a illégalement annexé Jérusalem-Est; il a transféré quelque 570 000 civils israéliens dans des colonies construites aux frais de l'État dans le territoire occupé; il a isolé l'économie et la population gazaouies du reste du Territoire palestinien occupé; il s'est approprié une grande partie de la Cisjordanie à des fins de développement économique et d'expansion démographique. La durée de l'occupation est allée bien au-delà de la limite raisonnable que toute puissance occupante agissant de bonne foi ne s'autoriserait pas à dépasser. La portion diminuée de territoire qui échoit aux Palestiniens résulte directement du projet de colonisation à grande échelle mené par Israël dont le réseau autoroutier, les terres adjacentes et le vaste dispositif militaire et de sécurité sont des composantes; sans ce projet, il ne fait pas de doute qu'il n'y aurait plus aucune raison de poursuivre l'occupation.

58. Qui plus est, l'occupation, du fait de son enracinement et du déni d'autodétermination qui lui est intrinsèque, a créé des conditions favorables à une multitude d'autres violations des droits de l'homme telles qu'une insécurité alimentaire généralisée, le refus de délivrer des permis de construire et la destruction de logements, la confiscation de biens, l'imposition permanente de peines collectives, la conduite d'attaques aériennes arbitraires, la création d'une juridiction et d'un système pénitentiaire répressifs et une situation de crise humanitaire à Gaza. L'une des plus graves violations des droits fondamentaux dont Israël s'est rendu coupable a consisté à instituer dans le Territoire palestinien occupé un régime de type colonial fonctionnant selon deux systèmes distincts et inégaux pour ce qui est de la législation, du réseau routier, des régimes juridiques, de l'accès à l'eau, des services sociaux, de la liberté de mouvement, des droits politiques et civils, de la sécurité et du niveau de vie. Dans l'ensemble, Israël a ignoré l'obligation qui lui incombait de respecter le droit au développement et le droit du peuple palestinien de jouir pleinement et sur un pied d'égalité de tous les droits fondamentaux.

59. Bien que le Gouvernement palestinien soit investi d'une certaine autorité en matière de planification et d'investissement, ses pouvoirs dépendent de la capacité sans restriction d'Israël de contrôler les principales mesures économiques prises dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ou d'y opposer son veto. Le régime de planification discriminatoire instauré par Israël à Jérusalem-Est et dans la zone C réduit au minimum la participation palestinienne quand il ne l'exclut pas. L'économie ne donne pas la pleine mesure de ses capacités et de son potentiel et demeure largement dépendante du financement des donateurs internationaux. De nombreux organismes internationaux imputent la faiblesse de l'économie palestinienne essentiellement à l'occupation et aux multiples barrières qui vont de pair avec elle. Les conséquences sociales de l'asphyxie de l'économie palestinienne sont d'une extrême gravité : taux de chômage très élevé, pauvreté quasi généralisée, délitement des infrastructures, grave pénurie de logements, conditions de vie précaires et, à Gaza, misère omniprésente. Au lieu de développer une économie viable comme voie nécessaire à la réalisation de l'autodétermination et à l'exercice du droit au développement, l'occupation s'ancre toujours plus profondément et la perspective de voir naître une économie autonome s'éloigne.

IV. Recommandations

60. Le Rapporteur spécial demande au Gouvernement israélien de mettre un terme à l'occupation longue de presque cinquante ans du Territoire palestinien occupé qui dure depuis 1967. Il lui recommande également de prendre immédiatement les mesures suivantes :

a) Faire en sorte que la législation interne soit conforme aux normes internationales telles que mentionnées dans les Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois, et soit appliquée strictement selon ces règles;

b) Conduire des enquêtes approfondies, efficaces, indépendantes et impartiales dans tous les cas où les forces de sécurité israéliennes auraient eu recours à la force meurtrière ou auraient fait un usage excessif de la force ou auraient commis des actes illégaux, de sorte que les responsabilités soient véritablement établies;

c) Mettre immédiatement fin à la pratique de la détention administrative et à l'utilisation de preuves secrètes, et relâcher ou inculper les détenus;

d) Prendre des mesures efficaces pour réduire le nombre d'enfants placés en détention et s'assurer que les conditions de détention respectent pleinement les dispositions relatives à la protection qui figurent dans la Convention relative aux droits de l'enfant et les autres instruments juridiques applicables en la matière;

e) Mettre fin immédiatement à la pratique de la peine collective sous toutes ses formes, notamment les démolitions punitives et les restrictions non fondées à la liberté de mouvement;

f) Mettre immédiatement fin à la pratique du transfert forcé de population et à la destruction d'habitations et de biens, dont ceux des groupes de Bédouins palestiniens;

61. En ce qui concerne les obligations internationales figurant dans la Déclaration sur le droit au développement, le Rapporteur spécial recommande au Gouvernement israélien :

a) De permettre la libre circulation des personnes et des biens dans tout le Territoire palestinien occupé;

b) De mettre un terme au blocus de Gaza et de lever toutes les restrictions aux importations et aux exportations, compte dûment tenu des préoccupations justifiables sur le plan de la sécurité;

c) De permettre à l'Autorité palestinienne de prendre en charge le contrôle de la sécurité dans la zone B et ce même contrôle ainsi que le contrôle civil dans la zone C, afin que le Territoire palestinien occupé ne soit plus géographiquement divisé;

d) De prendre des mesures propres à favoriser une relation commerciale équilibrée avec le Territoire palestinien occupé, à savoir des dispositions visant à renforcer la capacité productive de l'industrie manufacturière palestinienne et le développement des ressources;

e) De cesser immédiatement d'utiliser les ressources naturelles du Territoire palestinien occupé pour son bénéfice propre;

f) De faire tomber le mur et de réparer intégralement le préjudice économique qu'il a causé;

g) De mettre fin à la pratique punitive consistant à ne pas verser les impôts indirects collectés au bénéfice du Gouvernement palestinien;

h) De s'acquitter pleinement des obligations juridiques internationales sur le droit au développement.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
23 octobre 2017
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-douzième session

Point 72 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967*

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent document a été soumis après la date limite afin que des renseignements sur les faits les plus récents puissent y figurer.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le deuxième soumis à l'Assemblée générale par Michael Lynk, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il a été établi principalement à partir d'informations communiquées par des victimes, des témoins, des représentants de la société civile, des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies et des responsables palestiniens à Amman lors de la mission effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en mai 2017. Il analyse un certain nombre de problèmes touchant à la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 donne un bref aperçu des préoccupations qui lui sont apparues, à l'issue de ses conversations et rencontres avec des représentants de la société civile, comme étant les plus pressantes en matière de droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé au moment de la présentation du rapport. Il fait ensuite une analyse détaillée du contexte juridique international d'une occupation qui est entrée dans sa 51^{ème} année.

2. Le Rapporteur spécial souhaite attirer l'attention sur le fait qu'il se tient prêt à effectuer une mission dans le territoire palestinien occupé mais qu'il n'y a pas été autorisé par les autorités israéliennes. Il a demandé à plusieurs reprises à accéder depuis Israël au Territoire palestinien occupé, sa dernière demande en date remontant au 24 mars 2017. Au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport, il n'avait pas encore reçu de réponse. Il rappelle que ses deux prédécesseurs les plus récents à ce poste n'avaient pas non plus eu accès au Territoire palestinien occupé. Il souligne en outre qu'un libre dialogue entre toutes les parties est essentiel à la protection et à la promotion des droits de l'homme et qu'il est tout disposé à y participer. Il fait par ailleurs remarquer que l'accès au territoire est important pour une compréhension globale de la situation, que le défaut systématique de coopération avec le Rapporteur spécial est très préoccupant et qu'une compréhension complète et exhaustive de la situation fondée sur l'observation directe est extrêmement utile à ses travaux.

3. Le présent rapport repose principalement sur des communications écrites ainsi que sur des consultations menées avec des représentants de la société civile, des victimes, des témoins, des responsables palestiniens et des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies à Amman lors de la mission annuelle du Rapporteur spécial dans la région en mai 2017.

4. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial met l'accent, comme le prévoit son mandat¹, sur les violations des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire commises par Israël. Il affirme que les violations des droits de l'homme par tout État partie ou acteur non étatique sont déplorables et ne peuvent qu'entraver les perspectives de paix.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à remercier le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine pour la coopération sans réserve qu'il lui a apportée dans le cadre de l'exécution de son mandat. Il souhaite également adresser ses remerciements à tous ceux qui sont venus à sa rencontre à Amman ainsi qu'à tous ceux qui n'ont pas pu faire le déplacement mais qui lui ont fait parvenir des observations écrites ou orales. Il salue le travail essentiel accompli par les défenseurs des droits de l'homme et la société civile et s'engage à faire tout son possible pour soutenir cette action.

6. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à souligner que plusieurs groupes ont été empêchés de venir le rencontrer à Amman par des restrictions de déplacement imposées par les autorités israéliennes. Ces mesures ayant tout particulièrement visé des personnes venant de Gaza, tous les individus et organisations concernés ont été consultés par vidéoconférence.

¹ Comme il est précisé dans le mandat du Rapporteur spécial énoncé dans la résolution E/CN.4/RES/1993/2.

II. Situation actuelle des droits de l'homme

7. Alors que l'occupation est entrée dans sa cinquante et unième année, la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé s'est gravement détériorée. Les violations du droit humanitaire et des droits de l'homme liées à l'occupation ont des répercussions sur tous les aspects de la vie des Palestiniens vivant en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et dans la bande de Gaza. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial ne dresse pas de tableau exhaustif de l'ensemble des sujets de préoccupation mais insiste plutôt sur certaines des questions qui sont à l'heure actuelle les plus pressantes.

A. La bande de Gaza

8. Depuis avril 2017, Gaza est confrontée à une sévère crise en matière d'alimentation électrique, qui s'est encore aggravée au cours du mois de juin. Au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport, aucune solution durable n'avait été trouvée et la population devait bien souvent se contenter de quatre heures d'électricité par jour². Gaza a continué de subir des coupures de courant pendant 18 à 20 heures par jour, ce qui a nui à la fourniture des services de base³. Cette crise soulève la question particulièrement préoccupante du droit des Palestiniens à la santé, les hôpitaux et structures médicales étant gravement touchés par le manque d'électricité. Les hôpitaux diffèrent les interventions chirurgicales non indispensables et sont contraints de renvoyer prématurément les patients chez eux. L'approvisionnement en eau est en outre menacé, puisque la plupart des logements sont alimentés par le biais du réseau de canalisations quelques heures seulement tous les trois à cinq jours et que les installations de dessalement ne fonctionnent qu'à 15 % de leur capacité. Plus de 108 millions de litres d'eaux usées non traitées seraient déversés dans la Méditerranée chaque jour⁴. L'Organisation mondiale de la Santé (OMS) a fait remarquer que les interventions humanitaires ciblées prévenaient « l'effondrement complet du secteur de la santé » pendant la crise⁵.

9. Il est à noter que la crise humanitaire à Gaza, qu'il s'agisse de la brutale dégradation de la situation ces derniers temps ou des difficultés que connaît ce territoire depuis 10 ans, est entièrement causée par l'homme. Les actuels problèmes de courant, qui découlent de la réduction par Israël de son approvisionnement en électricité de Gaza suite à une décision de l'Autorité palestinienne motivée par la fracture politique interne entre le Hamas et le Fatah, étaient tout à fait évitables. En tant que Puissance occupante (A/HRC/34/38, par. 10 à 12), Israël est en outre tenu de veiller à ce que des normes d'hygiène et de santé publique adéquates s'appliquent dans le territoire occupé, ainsi que d'assurer la fourniture de nourriture et de soins médicaux à la population occupée⁶. Le Rapporteur spécial demande à toutes les parties de remplir les obligations qui sont les leurs à l'égard de la

² Voir www.haaretz.com/middle-east-news/palestinians/1.800735.

³ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires « Humanitarian Bulletin : Occupied Palestinian Territory » (août 2017). Consultable à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/sites/default/files/hummonitor_august_2017_2.pdf.

⁴ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Gaza crisis : urgent funding appeal » (juillet 2017). Consultable à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/sites/default/files/gaza_urgent_humanitarian_funding_v5_3july2017_10am_1.pdf.

⁵ Organisation mondiale de la Santé (OMS), « WHO situation report : Gaza, Occupied Palestinian Territory–July to August 2017 ». Consultable à l'adresse www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/WHO-Special-Situation-Report-on-Gaza_July_-_August_.pdf?ua=1 population de Gaza en vertu du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire.

⁶ Convention de Genève du 12 août 1949 relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève), art. 55 et 56.

10. Les difficultés croissantes rencontrées par les patients qui cherchent à sortir de Gaza par le point de passage d'Erez pour recevoir un traitement médical ajoutent aux problèmes de santé causés par le manque d'électricité. Le taux de demandes de permis rejetées ou ajournées par Israël a augmenté pendant le deuxième semestre de 2016 (A/HRC/34/70, par. 21). En juillet 2017, la situation restait préoccupante. Sur les 787 demandes de permis déposées au mois de juillet, 42,6 % ont été rejetées ou ajournées⁷. Les délais de réponse prolongés peuvent conduire certains patients à manquer des rendez-vous et à retarder des soins vitaux. En août 2017, cinq patients atteints d'un cancer sont décédés alors qu'ils attendaient l'autorisation de voyager pour recevoir les soins nécessaires⁸.

B. La Cisjordanie

11. Dans son précédent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial soulignait la forte augmentation des annonces de nouvelles création de colonies observée au début de l'année 2016 (A/HRC/34/70, par. 9 à 12). D'après le mouvement La paix maintenant, des appels d'offres ont été passés pour la construction de 2 858 logements depuis le début de 2017, ce qui représente une augmentation importante par rapport à l'année 2016 (42 logements) et un chiffre inégalé au cours des dix dernières années au moins⁹. Le Premier Ministre israélien Benjamin Nétanyahou a en outre annoncé, pour la première fois depuis 25 ans, la création d'une nouvelle colonie, dont le premier coup de pioche a été porté en juin¹⁰.

12. Parallèlement aux annonces évoquées ci-dessus, plusieurs dirigeants politiques ont appelé à la poursuite de l'expansion des colonies et, dans bien des cas, à des annexions¹¹. Au début de l'année, M. Nétanyahou aurait déclaré, lors d'une réunion avec les principaux membres du cabinet de sécurité israélien, qu'il avait levé toutes les restrictions relatives aux constructions à Jérusalem-Est et qu'il allait poursuivre les constructions dans les colonies de Cisjordanie¹².

13. Ces déclarations, qui s'ajoutent à la réalité objective de l'expansion des colonies et aux nombreuses annonces de nouvelles constructions, mettent gravement en péril la solution des deux États et conduisent à la poursuite des violations des droits de l'homme associées aux colonies, y compris les restrictions à la liberté de

⁷ OMS, « Health access for referral patients from the Gaza Strip », rapport mensuel (juillet 2017). Consultable à l'adresse http://www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/documents/WHO_monthly_Gaza_access_report_July_2017.pdf?ua=1.

⁸ Ibid., (août 2017). Consultable à l'adresse www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/documents/WHO_monthly_Gaza_access_report_Aug_2017_Final.pdf?ua=1.

⁹ Voir <http://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/construction>.

¹⁰ Peter Beaumont, « Israel begins work in first settlement in 25 years as Jared Kushner flies in », The Guardian, 20 juin 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.theguardian.com/world/2017/jun/20/israel-new-settlement-benjamin-netanyahu-jared-kushner-amichai-amona; et Maayan Lubell, « Israel cabinet approves first West Bank settlement in 20 years », Reuters, 30 mars 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.reuters.com/article/us-israel-palestinians-settlement/israeli-cabinet-approves-first-west-bank-settlement-in-20-years-idUSKBN1711K6.

¹¹ Amnesty International, « Israël/Territoires palestiniens occupés : Cesser de soutenir les colonies illégales », déclaration publique, 7 juin 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.amnesty.be/infos/actualites/article/israel-territoires-palestiniens-occupes-cesser-de-soutenir-les-colonies.

¹² Barak Ravid, « Netanyahu pledges unrestricted construction in East Jerusalem, settlement blocs », Haaretz, 22 janvier 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-1.766796.

circulation qui limitent l'exercice des droits à l'éducation et à la santé, le risque accru d'arrestation et de détention arbitraire, l'utilisation de terres et de ressources naturelles limitant ainsi le droit des Palestiniens au développement, et de nombreuses autres violations. En outre, comme le souligne le Rapporteur spécial dans son rapport au Conseil des droits de l'homme en 2017, les Palestiniens et Israéliens qui tentent d'appeler l'attention sur ces violations sont de plus en plus pris pour cible, que ce soit en Cisjordanie avec les arrestations et détentions arbitraires ou en Israël avec des campagnes et des lois visant à délégitimer les activités des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme (voir A/HRC/34/70).

C. Jérusalem-Est

14. À Jérusalem-Est comme dans le reste de la Cisjordanie, les colonies de peuplement ainsi que la démolition de logements et le déplacement de Palestiniens sont sources de profonde préoccupation. Le 2 octobre 2017, M. Nétanyahou a annoncé son soutien au projet de loi dit du Grand Jérusalem qui, selon certaines sources, prévoirait l'expansion de la municipalité de Jérusalem pour y englober un certain nombre de colonies¹³. Parallèlement à ce type d'initiatives, les démolitions et les expulsions d'habitants palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est se poursuivent à un rythme soutenu, avec 116 démolitions complètes répertoriées entre janvier et mi-septembre 2017 qui ont entraîné le déplacement de 202 personnes¹⁴. La puissance occupante justifie les démolitions à Jérusalem-Est par des motifs d'ordre administratif (lorsque les bâtiments sont construits sans une autorisation en bonne et due forme, même si cette dernière est pratiquement impossible à obtenir pour les Palestiniens) (A/HRC/34/38, para. 26) ou les présente comme des mesures punitives contre les familles d'agresseurs réels ou supposés (A/HRC/34/36, par. 31, et A/HRC/34/38, par. 30 à 33).

III. Le contexte juridique de l'occupation

15. Le mois de juin 2017 a marqué le cinquantième anniversaire de l'occupation par Israël du territoire palestinien (Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et Gaza). Il s'agit de l'occupation militaire continue la plus longue de l'histoire moderne¹⁵. Alors que la communauté internationale affirme avec insistance, comme elle l'a encore fait en 2016, que l'occupation israélienne doit prendre totalement fin¹⁶, que beaucoup de ses caractéristiques constituent de graves violations du droit international¹⁷ et que sa perpétuation dresse un obstacle grave à l'exercice par le peuple palestinien de son droit fondamental à l'autodétermination¹⁸ et met en péril la solution des deux États¹⁹, cette occupation est plus enracinée et plus dure que

¹³ Peter Beaumont, « Netanyahu backs annexation of 19 West Bank settlements », The Guardian, 3 octobre 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.theguardian.com/world/2017/oct/03/netanyahu-backs-annexation-of-west-bank-settlements.

¹⁴ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, Territoire palestinien occupé « Protection of civilians, reporting period : 12-25 September 2017 ». Consultable à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/content/protection-civilians-report-12-25-september-2017.

¹⁵ Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR), 2 juin 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.icrc.org/fr/document/cinquante-ans-doccupation-et-maintenant.

¹⁶ Voir la résolution 71/23 de l'Assemblée générale.

¹⁷ Ibid. Voir également la résolution 71/97.

¹⁸ Voir la résolution 71/184 de l'Assemblée générale.

¹⁹ Voir la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

jamais. L'occupation israélienne est en effet devenue un oxymore juridique et humanitaire : une occupation illimitée dans le temps²⁰.

16. Lorsque ces résolutions ont été adoptées par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale en 2016, la communauté internationale s'était déjà exprimée à maintes reprises, de manière pressante, sur la fin de l'occupation israélienne. Il y a 37 ans, en juin 1980, le Conseil, alarmé par la durée et la gravité de l'occupation et le mépris par Israël des résolutions antérieures, a adopté la résolution 476 (1980). À l'époque, l'occupation durait depuis déjà 13 ans. Dans cette résolution, le Conseil réaffirmait la nécessité impérieuse de mettre fin à l'occupation prolongée des territoires arabes occupés par Israël et déplorait vivement le refus continu d'Israël de se conformer aux résolutions pertinentes du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale.

17. L'incapacité à mettre fin à l'occupation israélienne constitue un échec cuisant pour la diplomatie internationale, une tache sombre sur l'efficacité du droit international et la source de maintes promesses non tenues au peuple palestinien. La perpétuation de cette occupation n'est pas non plus dans l'intérêt des Israéliens, en ce qu'elle mine leur société et leurs institutions qui se voient impliquées dans la volonté du Gouvernement d'hypothéquer toute solution juste et viable à un demi-siècle d'occupation et à un siècle de conflit, et fait d'eux, qu'ils le veuillent ou non, les bénéficiaires d'une relation profondément inégale et injuste.

18. En 1980, l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël avait déjà été prolongée, constituait déjà une situation à laquelle il fallait absolument mettre fin et Israël avait déjà montré sa réticence à respecter les orientations explicites de la communauté internationale. Dès lors, comment qualifier cette occupation en 2017? La démarche qui a prévalu au sein de la communauté internationale a consisté à traiter Israël en occupant légitime du territoire palestinien, et ce malgré les graves violations du droit international qu'a entraîné sa conduite de l'occupation, y compris les activités de peuplement²¹, l'édification du mur²², l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est²³ et les violations systématiques des droits de l'homme des Palestiniens²⁴. De l'avis du Rapporteur spécial, si le concept de l'occupant légitime était peut-être la représentation diplomatique et juridique adéquate de l'occupation dans ses premières années, il est depuis devenu totalement inapproprié à la fois comme qualification juridique de ce qu'est devenue l'occupation et comme catalyseur politique, diplomatique et juridique viable pour inciter Israël à enfin mettre un terme à l'occupation, conformément à ses obligations juridiques internationales.

19. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial examine la question de savoir si le rôle d'Israël en tant qu'occupant inflexible et provocateur du territoire palestinien a maintenant atteint le stade de l'illicéité en vertu du droit international. Pour tenter d'y répondre, il recense les principes fondamentaux qui régissent le déroulement licite d'une occupation en vertu des principes pertinents du droit international et, à la lumière de ces principes, examine l'administration par Israël du territoire

²⁰ John Kerry, Secrétaire d'État des États-Unis d'Amérique, dans ses remarques sur la paix au Moyen-Orient le 28 décembre 2016, a mis en garde contre « l'occupation permanente », « l'occupation perpétuelle » et « l'occupation apparemment sans fin » du territoire palestinien par Israël; voir <https://2009-2017.state.gov/secretary/remarks/2016/12/266119.htm>.

²¹ Voir la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

²² Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, CIJ, &&&&Recueil 2004, p. 136, par. 142.

²³ Voir la résolution 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité; voir également la résolution 71/25 de l'Assemblée générale.

²⁴ Voir la résolution 71/98 de l'Assemblée générale.

palestinien occupé et détermine si le rôle d'Israël en tant que puissance occupante demeure légal ou non.

A. Principes généraux du droit international et de l'occupation

20. Près de 20 ans après le début du XXI^{ème} siècle, la norme qui guide notre communauté mondiale veut que les gens soient citoyens, et non sujets, de l'État qui les régit. Ils ont en conséquence le droit d'exprimer leur identité juridique et leurs droits inaliénables par le biais d'un État souverain. Le colonialisme, l'occupation et les autres formes de domination étrangère font exception à cette norme et ne peuvent se justifier, du point de vue du droit et de la pratique internationale, que comme une situation transitoire anormale avant une marche résolue vers l'autodétermination ou la souveraineté. La plupart des autres formes de domination étrangère seraient, ipso facto, contraires à l'ordre juridique.

21. Dans notre monde moderne, les protections et droits fondamentaux, y compris les protections en vertu du droit international humanitaire, les droits civils et politiques tels que le droit à l'autodétermination, et les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, doivent faire l'objet d'une interprétation large fondée sur l'objet visé et d'une application libérale. Ils incarnent en effet les droits et libertés qui touchent les aspects fondamentaux de notre humanité et doivent être universellement accessibles et concrètement applicables pour chacun d'entre nous²⁵. Inversement, les exceptions à ces droits fondamentaux, comme les nécessités militaires, de graves menaces contre la sécurité nationale ou des dangers publics exceptionnels, doivent être interprétées et appliquées de manière étroite et mesurée afin de ne pas entraver indûment le champ de ces droits fondamentaux ni leur accessibilité et leur jouissance par tous les peuples²⁶.

22. Créé au lendemain des tragiques expériences de guerre totale et d'extrême souffrance des civils au cours des XIX^e et XX^e siècles, le droit international humanitaire est inscrit, entre autres instruments, dans le Règlement annexé à la Convention concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre de 1907 (Règlement de La Haye), la Convention relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre du 12 août 1949 (quatrième Convention de Genève) et le Protocole additionnel aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 relatif à la protection des victimes des conflits armés internationaux de 1977 (Protocole I), ainsi que dans les pratiques du monde moderne. Trois des objectifs fondamentaux du droit international humanitaire moderne relatifs à l'occupation militaire étrangère sont les suivants : a) régler étroitement une occupation pour faire en sorte que le territoire atteigne ou retrouve une situation de souveraineté, b) empêcher que le territoire devienne un objet de conquête et c) sauvegarder les personnes protégées sous occupation. Comme d'autres domaines du droit international, le droit international humanitaire évolue constamment, au sein du champ naturel de ses instruments, principes et objectifs fondateurs, pour relever les nouveaux défis auxquels est confrontée la protection humanitaire dans les situations pour lesquelles les réponses ne sont pas toujours expressément énoncées dans ces documents initiaux²⁷.

²⁵ Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels.

²⁶ Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, art. 4 [« (...) les États parties au présent Pacte peuvent prendre, dans la stricte mesure où la situation l'exige, des mesures dérogeant aux obligations prévues dans le présent Pacte ... »]; et Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, art. 4.

23. L'une des plus importantes évolutions du droit international de ces dernières années réside dans la reconnaissance du fait que le droit international des droits de l'homme, y compris le droit fondamental à l'autodétermination, fait partie intégrante de l'application du droit de l'occupation. La Cour internationale de Justice a affirmé que le droit international des droits de l'homme continuait de s'appliquer en temps de conflit et pendant une occupation²⁸. Dans la pratique, cela signifie que le droit humanitaire et le droit des droits de l'homme sont complémentaires et ne s'excluent pas mutuellement lorsqu'ils s'appliquent à une occupation²⁹, et que les populations protégées sous occupation jouissent de l'ensemble des droits de l'homme, sous réserve uniquement de dérogations légitimes pleinement justifiées par des situations d'urgence ou par les prescriptions du régime militaire dans le cadre de l'occupation³⁰.

24. Autre grande évolution récente : le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, reconnu en droit international comme un droit opposable à tous³¹, s'applique à tous les peuples vivant sous occupation ou sous une autre forme de domination étrangère³². La Déclaration relative aux principes du droit international touchant les relations amicales et la coopération entre les États conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies prévoit que « Tout État a le devoir de s'abstenir de recourir à toute mesure de coercition qui priverait les peuples ... de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes, de leur liberté et de leur indépendance »³³. Dans son avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, la Cour internationale de Justice a expressément affirmé que le peuple palestinien avait droit à l'autodétermination, qu'Israël avait le devoir de respecter ce droit et qu'un certain nombre de caractéristiques de l'occupation israélienne dressaient un obstacle grave à l'exercice de ce droit³⁴. En outre, avec l'évolution du droit de l'occupation et l'application à ce droit à l'autodétermination, la souveraineté revient désormais au peuple qui vit sur le territoire occupé et non à son gouvernement. La puissance occupante est donc tenue de respecter les intérêts politiques du dépositaire de la souveraineté populaire : le peuple³⁵.

²⁷ Eyal Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (Princeton, New Jersey, Princeton University Press, 2004) (... il ne s'agit pas simplement de rechercher les articles pertinents dans le Règlement de La Haye ou dans la quatrième convention de Genève. Le droit international a largement évolué depuis l'époque où ces deux instruments ont été élaborés.).

²⁸ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 106 à 113; Activités armées sur le territoire du Congo (République démocratique du Congo c. Ouganda), arrêt de la CIJ, Recueil 2005, p. 168, par. 178 et 179.

²⁹ Vaios Koutroulis, « The application of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in situations of prolonged occupation : only a matter of time? », Revue internationale de la Croix-Rouge, vol. 94, n° 885 (printemps 2012).

³⁰ Noam Lubell, Les obligations relatives aux droits de l'homme dans le cadre de l'occupation militaire, Revue internationale de la Croix-Rouge, vol. 94, n° 885 (Sélection française, printemps 2012/1).

³¹ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 88. Tout État est donc tenu de faire tout ce qui est en son pouvoir pour assurer l'autodétermination du peuple sous domination étrangère.

³² Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 88.

³³ Voir la résolution 2625 (XXV) de l'Assemblée générale.

³⁴ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 122.

³⁵ Benvenisti, (1967).

25. Israël occupe le territoire palestinien (Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et Gaza) depuis juin 1967. La quatrième Convention de Genève s'applique donc dans son intégralité. Ce point de vue a été exprimé par le Conseil de sécurité de manière constante et régulière dès le premier mois de l'occupation³⁶ et réaffirmé, encore tout récemment, en décembre 2016³⁷. C'est également la position exprimée lors d'une Conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève, en 2014 (A/69/711-S/2015/1, annexe, par. 4). Les Palestiniens vivant sur le territoire occupé sont donc des « personnes protégées » en vertu du droit international humanitaire et ont droit à toutes les protections prévues par la quatrième Convention de Genève³⁸. Israël refuse l'application de cette Convention et ne reconnaît pas le territoire palestinien comme étant occupé³⁹, position que la communauté internationale a largement rejetée⁴⁰.

26. Partant de ces principes et observations, quatre critères d'appréciation sont proposés en vue de déterminer si un occupant administre l'occupation de manière conforme au droit international et au droit de l'occupation, ou s'il outrepassa sa capacité juridique et si sa domination est illicite.

B. Critères tendant à déterminer si un belligérant occupant demeure un occupant légal

27. Étant donné la durée de l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël, qui a été jugée à bien des égards contraire au droit international, certains spécialistes du droit international se sont demandé s'il existait un seuil au-delà duquel une occupation autrefois considérée comme licite pouvait cesser de l'être. Eyal Benvenisti considère ainsi qu'un occupant qui, par mauvaise foi, fait échec aux efforts de paix visant à mettre un terme à son autorité doit être considéré comme un agresseur, ce qui rendrait illicite ladite autorité. MM. Ben-Naftali, Gross et Michaeli soutiennent plus généralement que toute occupation exercée en violation de l'une des règles juridiques fondamentales en la matière, telles qu'énumérées ci-dessous, se trouve de ce fait entachée d'illicéité⁴¹. Plus récemment, M. Gross a élargi la portée de l'argument en faisant valoir qu'il importait d'autant plus de savoir si une occupation indéfinie ou permanente devenait de ce fait illicite, que celle-ci risquait autrement, sous couvert d'une durée fictive, de dissimuler une conquête ou une nouvelle forme de colonialisme⁴². Les critères proposés ci-après s'inspirent des travaux de ces juristes.

³⁶ Voir la résolution 237 (1967) du Conseil de sécurité.

³⁷ Voir la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

³⁸ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art 4.

³⁹ Israël, Ministère des affaires étrangères : « Israel settlements and international law », 30 novembre 2015 (« Juridiquement parlant, la Cisjordanie doit être considérée comme un territoire faisant l'objet de revendications concurrentes qui devraient être résolues grâce aux négociations du processus de paix »). Consultable à l'adresse <http://www.mfa.gov.il/mfa/foreignpolicy/peace/guide/pages/israeli%20settlements%20and%20international%20law.aspx>. Voir également Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 90 et 93.

⁴⁰ Voir la résolution 71/96 réaffirmant l'applicabilité de la quatrième Convention de Genève au Territoire palestinien occupé, adoptée par un vote de 168 voix contre 6 et 6 abstentions. Voir également Aeyal Gross, The Writing on the Wall : Rethinking the International Law of Occupation (Cambridge : Cambridge University Press, 2017).

⁴¹ Orna Ben-Naftali, Aeyal Gross et Keren Michaeli, « Illegal occupation : framing the Occupied Palestinian Territory », Berkeley Journal of International Law, vol. 23, no 3 (2005).

⁴² Gross, The Writing on the Wall. Voir également Ardi Imseis, « Prolonged occupation of Palestine : The case for a second advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice », conférence donnée le 7 octobre 2015. Consultable à l'adresse www.youtube.com/watch?v=X2ijqm1m2Ak.

28. Les quatre critères de licéité d'une occupation sont les suivants:

a) L'occupant belligérant ne peut annexer aucune partie du territoire occupé.

29. Aucune circonstance ne confère à l'occupant belligérant le droit de conquête ou d'annexion ni aucun droit souverain ou autre sur aucune partie du territoire qui lui est soumis. C'est l'un des principes les mieux établis du droit international moderne, et il est universellement admis. Il découle du paragraphe 4 de l'article 2. de la Charte des Nations Unies, en vertu duquel les Membres « s'abstiennent de recourir à la menace ou à l'emploi de la force, soit contre l'intégrité territoriale ou l'indépendance politique de tout État ». Les plus éminents spécialistes du droit international s'accordent à reconnaître que le principe de non-annexion fait partie des règles contraignantes admises par la doctrine⁴³. L'Assemblée générale, s'exprimant d'une voix unanime, a interdit l'acquisition d'un droit territorial fondé sur la conquête dans la Déclaration relative aux principes du droit international touchant les relations amicales et la coopération entre les États.

30. La puissance occupante ne peut imposer des conditions ou modifier la situation sur le terrain pour étayer sa prétention à un titre sur le territoire. Ce principe se fonde sur la prescription bien établie en droit international humanitaire qui interdit à la puissance occupante de procéder au transfert de civils dans le territoire qu'elle occupe, conformément à la quatrième Convention de Genève et du Protocole additionnel I (article 85). Un tel acte constitue en outre un crime de guerre au titre du Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale de 1988 (A/CONF.183/9, art. 8, par. 2 b) viii). Cet interdit strict a pour but d'éviter qu'un occupant ne modifie la démographie d'un territoire pour en revendiquer la souveraineté et, en même temps, pour empêcher la population protégée de jouir de son droit à l'autodétermination⁴⁴.

31. En ce qui concerne en particulier l'occupation par Israël, en juin 1967, des territoires arabes, y compris le territoire palestinien, le Conseil de sécurité a entériné, dans sa résolution 242 de novembre (1967), le principe de « l'inadmissibilité de l'acquisition de territoire par la guerre ». Il a depuis lors réaffirmé ce principe à au moins sept reprises concernant les annexions par Israël du territoire arabe⁴⁵. C'est également en ce sens que se prononce de longue date l'Assemblée générale⁴⁶. La Cour internationale de Justice a jugé que l'« illicéité de toute acquisition de territoire résultant de la menace ou de l'emploi de la force » ressortissait désormais au droit international coutumier⁴⁷. La proscription absolue de toute acquisition de territoire par la force ne fait aucune distinction entre les ⁴³ Malcolm N. Shaw, International Law, 8^e éd., (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2017) (« Il est toutefois clair aujourd'hui que l'acquisition d'un territoire par la seule force est illégale au regard du droit international »); et Antonio Cassese, International Law, 2^e éd. (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2005) (« ...la conquête, même suivie d'une occupation de fait et de l'exercice de l'autorité sur le territoire, ne vaut pas transmission du droit de souveraineté. »).

⁴⁴ Rapport à la Sous-Commission de la lutte contre les mesures discriminatoires et de la protection des minorités de la Commission des droits de l'homme (E/CN.4/Sub.2/1993/17), par. 17, (« Certains transferts de populations ont pour but ou pour effet de modifier la composition démographique d'un territoire en fonction d'objectifs politiques ou d'une idéologie dominante, surtout si cette politique ou cette idéologie affirment la dominance de tel ou tel groupe sur un autre. »).

⁴⁵ Voir résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 2334 (2016), 497 (1981), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 298 (1971), 267 (1969) et 252 (1968).

⁴⁶ Voir, de manière générale, la résolution 71/23 de l'Assemblée générale.

⁴⁷ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif.

territoires occupés lors d'une guerre en légitime défense ou lors d'une guerre d'agression; l'annexion est interdite dans toutes les circonstances⁴⁸.

b) L'occupation belligérante est de nature provisoire; elle ne saurait s'étendre de manière permanente ou indéfinie. L'occupant est tenu de chercher à mettre fin à l'occupation et à remettre le territoire au dépositaire de sa souveraineté qu'il est raisonnablement possible de le faire.

32. L'occupation belligérante est par nature un état de fait provisoire et exceptionnel, dans lequel la puissance occupante assume de facto l'administration du territoire jusqu'à ce que les circonstances permettent de le remettre au dépositaire de sa souveraineté⁴⁹, à savoir son peuple. En raison de l'interdiction absolue d'acquérir un territoire par la force, il est défendu à la puissance occupante d'exercer son autorité sur le territoire de manière permanente ou même indéfinie, ou de tenter de le faire⁵⁰. Comme le note Aeyal Gross, c'est la notion de durée, outre les principes d'autodétermination et de non-acquisition de territoire par la force, qui distingue l'occupation de la conquête, distinction qui s'évanouirait si l'on voulait donner à l'occupation un caractère indéfini⁵¹.

33. Le droit de l'occupation ne conditionne la licéité de l'occupation à aucune durée spécifique. Il découle toutefois de la règle générale selon laquelle l'occupation est une forme de domination étrangère faisant provisoirement exception aux principes d'autodétermination et de souveraineté que la puissance occupante est tenue de remettre le territoire à la puissance souveraine dans un délai aussi raisonnable et bref que possible⁵², sous réserve uniquement des éléments suivants: a) la sûreté et la sécurité publiques du territoire; b) l'instauration ou la restauration des institutions publiques et la bonne marche de l'économie et c) la sécurité de l'armée d'occupation. La puissance occupante, étant tenue d'œuvrer de bonne foi à la réalisation de ces objectifs dans le respect des principes du droit de l'occupation, ne serait pas légitimement fondée à demeurer sur le territoire occupé une fois les conditions réunies pour que le territoire soit intégralement remis à la puissance souveraine⁵³. En effet, plus l'occupation dure, plus la puissance occupante est sommée de justifier la prolongation de sa présence.

c) Pendant la durée de l'occupation, l'occupant belligérant agit dans l'intérêt de la population sous occupation.

34. La puissance occupante doit pendant toute la durée de l'occupation gouverner dans l'intérêt de la population sous occupation, sous réserve uniquement des ⁴⁸ Sharon Korman, The Right of Conquest: The Acquisition of Territory by Force in International Law and Practice (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1996) (De nombreux avis s'accordent à tenir pour illicite l'incorporation par Israël de Jérusalem-Est, au motif que l'acquisition de territoires par la guerre, qu'il s'agisse d'une guerre de défense ou d'agression, est inadmissible...).

⁴⁹ Jean S. Pictet, dir. publ., Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre: Commentaire (Genève, CICR, 1958) (« L'occupation de guerre, [...], est un état de fait essentiellement provisoire, qui n'enlève à la Puissance occupée ni sa qualité d'État, ni sa souveraineté; elle entrave seulement l'exercice de ses droits. »).

⁵⁰ Ben-Naftali Gross et Michaeli « Illegal occupation » (« L'occupation est provisoire. Elle ne saurait s'étendre de manière permanente ou indéfinie. »).

⁵¹ Gross, The Writing on the Wall.

⁵² Dans sa résolution 1483 (2003) concernant l'occupation de l'Iraq en 2003, le Conseil de sécurité a pris acte du fait que les puissances occupantes s'étaient engagées à rendre aux Iraquiens le contrôle de leur pays « le plus tôt possible ».

⁵³ Ben-Naftali, Gross and Michaeli, « Illegal occupation » (« La nature provisoire de l'occupation, par opposition à une durée indéfinie, est donc l'élément le plus déterminant du régime réglementaire de l'occupation, puisque c'est d'elle que dépend le sens et l'effet, en fait comme en droit, des libertés et du droit à l'autodétermination. »).

conditions de sécurité légitimes de l'autorité militaire occupante. Ce principe a été comparé à une relation de tutelle ou de fiducie en droit interne ou international, relation dans laquelle l'autorité dominante est tenue d'agir en tenant compte avant toute chose des intérêts de la personne ou entité protégée⁵⁴. Ce principe interdit donc à l'autorité en place d'exercer sa tutelle à son propre avantage ou à des fins d'accaparement, et va de pair avec la stricte obligation, de la part de la puissante occupante, de respecter dans toute la mesure possible les droits fondamentaux de la population sous occupation.

35. Le principe du respect de l'intérêt supérieur de la population est inscrit dans les normes sous-jacentes du droit de l'occupation, en particulier dans les dispositions du Règlement de La Haye et de la quatrième Convention de Genève, qui garantissent les droits des personnes protégées et réglementent strictement les actes de la puissance occupante. Ce constat va de pair avec l'évolution dudit droit, qui était principalement axé sur les droits des États et des élites politiques, mais qui, sous sa forme contemporaine, en est venu à s'intéresser davantage à la protection des populations sous occupation⁵⁵. L'article 43 du Règlement de La Haye fait obligation à la puissance occupante « de rétablir et d'assurer, autant qu'il est possible, l'ordre et la vie publics en respectant, sauf empêchement absolu, les lois en vigueur dans le pays ». La quatrième Convention de Genève a élargi ces prescriptions en imposant sur de nombreux plans à la puissance occupante un devoir de protection, notamment celui de protéger les enfants, de maintenir les hôpitaux, de préserver les ressources naturelles et de fournir des médicaments et des vivres. Elle interdit également à l'occupant les peines collectives, le pillage, les sévices corporels ainsi que les transferts forcés, en masse ou individuels, et les déportations⁵⁶. Ces protections et interdictions, prises conjointement avec le droit international des droits de l'homme, montrent bien que le respect de l'intérêt supérieur de la population est un principe primordial et que les responsabilités de la puissance occupante relèvent d'un rapport de tutelle.

d) L'occupant belligérant doit administrer de bonne foi le territoire occupé, dans le plein respect de ses devoirs et obligations découlant du droit international et de sa qualité de Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

36. La bonne foi est un principe fondamental de l'ordre juridique international et fait partie intégrante de presque tout rapport juridique en droit international moderne⁵⁷. Cette « règle d'or de l'interprétation des traités », comme elle a parfois été décrite, domine et sous-tend l'ensemble du processus d'interprétation⁵⁸. Elle suppose que l'État s'acquitte de ses devoirs et obligations de manière honnête, loyale, raisonnable, diligente et équitable, dans le souci de respecter l'objet sous-jacent de sa responsabilité juridique, y compris celle contractée au titre d'un accord ⁵⁴ Gross, The Writing on the Wall.

⁵⁵ E. Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (Lorsque le Conseil de sécurité a jugé que la situation de l'Iraq en 2003 ressortissait au droit de l'occupation, il a dû adapter un droit fondé à l'origine sur la souveraineté du monarque et la protection de ses possessions en temps de guerre en vertu du droit international, pour y intégrer une nouvelle doctrine – le droit international humanitaire – fondée au contraire sur la souveraineté du peuple et la protection de ses droits fondamentaux.).

⁵⁶ On trouvera dans Gross, The Writing on the Wal, un résumé des droits et interdictions prévus dans la quatrième Convention de Genève.

⁵⁷ Andreas R. Ziegler et Jorun Baumgartner, « Good faith as a general principle of (international) law », dans Andrew D. Mitchell, M. Sornarajah et Tania Voo (dir. publ.), Good Faith and International Economic Law (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2015).

⁵⁸ Eirik Bjorge, The Evolutionary Interpretation of Treaties, (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2014).

ou traité⁵⁹. Ce principe interdit aux États de prendre part à tout acte contraire au but et à l'objet de l'obligation, ou de commettre tout abus de droit masquant un acte illicite ou le manquement à une obligation⁶⁰.

37. Le devoir d'agir de bonne foi est inscrit dans une bonne partie des textes fondateurs du droit international, notamment la Charte (art. 2, par. 2), la Convention de Vienne sur le droit des traités et la Déclaration relative aux principes du droit international touchant les relations amicales et la coopération entre les États. Ainsi, dans l'affaire des essais nucléaires, en 1974, la Cour internationale de Justice a reconnu la primauté de la bonne foi en droit international en estimant que « l'un des principes de base qui présid[ai]ent à la création et à l'exécution d'obligations juridiques, quelle qu'en soit la source, [était] celui de la bonne foi ».⁶¹

38. Ainsi, le droit international fait obligation à l'occupant belligérant de gouverner de bonne foi le territoire qu'il occupe. Cette bonne foi peut être appréciée en fonction du respect par la puissance occupante des trois principes essentiels régissant l'occupation, tels qu'énoncés ci-dessus : a) non-annexion du territoire occupé; b) exercice de l'autorité à titre provisoire uniquement; c) gouvernance dans l'intérêt des personnes protégées. Par ailleurs, un occupant belligérant qui gouverne de bonne foi doit également : d) se conformer à toute orientation spécifique de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ou autre autorité compétente en ce qui concerne l'occupation⁶² et e) respecter les préceptes du droit international, y compris du droit humanitaire et du droit des droits de l'homme, régissant l'occupation.

C. Applicabilité de l'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur la Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain)⁶³

39. En juin 1971, la Cour internationale de Justice a rendu un avis consultatif sur requête du Conseil de sécurité au sujet des conséquences juridiques de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie. La Cour a estimé que l'administration sud-africaine du territoire namibien sous mandat avait été assurée de manière contraire à plusieurs obligations fondamentales au titre du droit international, que l'Organisation des Nations Unies avait bien mis fin audit mandat et que la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud sur ce territoire était donc illégale. L'avis consultatif de la Cour sur les conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie contient un certain nombre de précédents qui ⁵⁹ Markus Kotzur, « I Good faith (bona fide), dans Rüdiger Wolfrum (dir. publ.) Max Planck Encyclopedia of Public International Law (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2009).

⁶⁰ Steven Reinhold, « I Good faith in international law », UCL Journal of Law and Jurisprudence, vol.2, (2013).

⁶¹ Essais nucléaires (Australie c. France), arrêt, CIJ, Recueil 1974, p. 253, par. 46.

⁶² L'Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies dispose que « les Membres de l'Organisation conviennent d'accepter et d'appliquer les décisions du Conseil de sécurité conformément à la présente Charte ».

⁶³ Conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain) nonobstant la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité, avis consultatif, CIJ, Recueil 1971, p. 16. Le rapporteur spécial est intellectuellement redevable dans son interprétation de la décision sur la Namibie aux ouvrages suivants : John Dugard, « A tale of two sacred trusts : Namibia and Palestine », dans Tiyanjana Maluwa (dir. publ.), Law, Politics and Rights : Essays in Memory of Kader Asmal, (Leyde, Pays-Bas, Martinus Nijhoff Publishers, 2014); Norman Finkelstein, Gaza : An Inquest into its Martyrdom (Oakland, University of California Press, 2018) (à paraître); et Stephanie Koury, « I Legal strategies at the United Nations : a comparative look at Namibia, Western Sahara and Palestine », dans Susan Akram et collaborateurs (dir. publ.), International Law and the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict : A Rights-Based Approach to Middle East Peace, (Abingdon, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Routledge, 2011).

corroborent les quatre critères de licéité proposés et l'analyse de la licéité du rôle continu d'Israël en tant qu'occupant.

40. Après la Première Guerre mondiale, la Société des Nations avait investi l'Afrique du Sud d'un mandat sur le Sud-Ouest africain sous le régime de l'article 22 du Pacte de la Société des Nations. Au titre du paragraphe 1 de l'article 22, l'Afrique du Sud était chargée, au nom d'une « mission sacrée de civilisation », d'administrer le territoire jusqu'à ce que celui-ci soit prêt à l'indépendance. En tant que mandataire, l'Afrique du Sud était tenue d'administrer le Sud-Ouest africain dans l'intérêt du territoire et de sa population. Le mandataire devait rendre compte de son administration devant la Société des Nations.

41. Après la Seconde Guerre mondiale, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a repris la responsabilité du régime de mandats, rebaptisé régime international de tutelle. L'Afrique du Sud a refusé de placer le Sud-Ouest africain sous la tutelle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et y a procédé à une forme d'apartheid ainsi qu'à l'annexion de fait du territoire. En 1966, l'Assemblée générale a révoqué le mandat de l'Afrique du Sud sur le Sud-Ouest africain et déclaré que l'Afrique du Sud n'avait aucun autre droit d'administrer le territoire⁶⁴. En janvier 1970, le Conseil de sécurité a déclaré « illégale » la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie et a jugé que l'« attitude de défi » de l'Afrique du Sud envers les décisions du Conseil « sap[ait] l'autorité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies »⁶⁵. En juillet 1970, le Conseil de sécurité a demandé à la Cour internationale de Justice un avis consultatif⁶⁶.

42. L'avis consultatif de la Cour internationale de Justice sur la Namibie est un précédent solide et pertinent concernant l'occupation continue par Israël du territoire palestinien. Alors que la Namibie était un territoire sous mandat dans le cadre du régime international de tutelle, régi par l'article 22 du Pacte, dans le cas du territoire palestinien, l'administration relève du droit de l'occupation; il n'en demeure pas moins que ces deux situations sont voisines. L'Afrique du Sud (en tant que puissance mandataire) et Israël (en tant que puissance occupante) sont deux exemples clairs de domination étrangère; dans les deux cas, la puissance administrante est garante du droit des personnes protégées à l'autodétermination et, aujourd'hui comme alors, l'annexion est strictement interdite, les puissances sont tenues de gouverner dans l'intérêt des personnes protégées et de s'abstenir de toute pratique favorisant au contraire leur propre intérêt, et la communauté internationale est chargée de surveiller étroitement la domination étrangère et d'œuvrer à l'extinction du mandat.

43. Dans son avis consultatif, la Cour internationale de Justice a abouti aux sept conclusions et principes juridiques exposés ci-après au sujet du territoire sous mandat de la Namibie. Le Rapporteur spécial estime que ces conclusions et principes sont directement applicables à l'appréciation de la licéité dans le temps de l'occupation par Israël.

a) L'annexion est interdite; le mandataire se voit confier une tutelle qu'il est tenu d'exercer au profit des populations du territoire, celles-ci étant appelées, à l'issue du mandat, à exercer leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance⁶⁷.

⁶⁴ Voir la résolution 2145 (XXI) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁶⁵ Voir la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁶⁶ Voir la résolution 284 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁶⁷ Conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie, avis consultatif, par. 45 à 47, 50, 53 et 83.

b) Toutes les puissances mandataires doivent se conformer de bonne foi à leurs obligations. Tout manquement aux obligations fondamentales du mandat signifierait un manquement à l'obligation de bonne foi⁶⁸.

c) Les garanties strictes imposées par la communauté internationale au mandataire visent à éviter que les territoires sous mandat ne deviennent « l'objet de cessions déguisées ». Le mandataire ne peut invoquer aucun des droits dont il est le dépositaire pour motiver un retard ou un ajournement de l'établissement d'un rapport de tutelle. De même, la puissance mandataire ne saurait se prévaloir d'une occupation prolongée pour revendiquer l'annexion de tout ou partie du territoire sous mandat⁶⁹.

d) Le droit international n'est pas statique mais évolutif et son interprétation doit tenir compte de l'évolution que le droit a connue dans le cadre de la Charte des Nations Unies et du droit international coutumier. Dès lors qu'un droit fait partie des principes juridiques généraux, il peut être présumé faire partie intégrante de tout traité ou accord⁷⁰.

e) La violation délibérée et persistante de ses obligations par une partie détruit l'objet même et le but du rapport établi ou du pouvoir qui lui était confié, et la partie ne saurait revendiquer les droits qu'elle prétend tirer de ce rapport⁷¹.

f) La violation par un mandataire de ses obligations fondamentales au titre du droit international peuvent frapper d'illégalité le maintien de sa présence sur le territoire sous mandat. Il convient de mettre fin à toute situation illicite, et les États Membres, qui ont l'obligation de reconnaître l'illégalité et le défaut de validité de la situation, ont à cet égard un devoir de non-reconnaissance⁷².

g) Le constat d'une violation fondamentale, par une puissance mandataire, de ses obligations internationales, de la révocation de son mandat et de l'illégalité de son maintien sur le territoire sous mandat est sans incidence sur l'application des garanties juridiques protégeant la population sous mandat. Le mandataire demeure donc responsable de toute violation de ses obligations internationales et assujetti au devoir de protéger les droits de la population sous mandat.⁷³

44. L'avis consultatif de 1971 sur la Namibie conserve toujours sa pertinence et sa force de raisonnement. En 2004, la Cour internationale de Justice, dans son avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, s'est appuyé sur l'avis rendu au sujet de la Namibie pour conclure à l'applicabilité du droit à l'autodétermination aux territoires non autonomes, y compris au Territoire palestinien occupé⁷⁴. Le rapprochement entre ces deux situations similaires – une puissance étrangère qui, sous couvert d'un régime de supervision international, s'assure un contrôle permanent dans le cadre d'un rapport de tutelle – suppose que les principes juridiques applicables au maintien illégal d'un mandat par son mandataire valent aussi, mutatis mutandis, pour la question de savoir si le maintien d'une occupation par la puissance occupante est devenu illégal.

⁶⁸ Ibid, par. 53, 84, 90, 115, 116 et 128.

⁶⁹ Ibid, par. 54, 55, 66, 82 et 83.

⁷⁰ Ibid, par. 52, 53, 96, 98, 100 et 133.

⁷¹ Ibid, par. 84, 91, 95, 96, 98, 100 et 102.

⁷² Ibid, par. 108, 109, 111, 115, 117, 122 et 123.

⁷³ Ibid., par. 118 et 125.

⁷⁴ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 88.

D. Application des critères de licéité à l'occupation israélienne

L'interdiction de l'annexion

45. L'annexion officielle par Israël de Jérusalem-Est en 1967 et 1980 et son annexion de facto de parties importantes de la Cisjordanie sont destinées à consolider ses revendications de souveraineté. Cela constitue une violation flagrante de l'interdiction absolue de l'annexion et des obligations d'Israël en vertu du droit international.

46. Après s'être emparé des territoires palestiniens (la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et Gaza) durant la guerre de juin 1967, Israël a annexé Jérusalem-Est et certaines parties de la Cisjordanie à la fin de juin 1967 par décision du Gouvernement. En juillet 1967, l'Assemblée générale a unanimement dénoncé l'annexion et appelé Israël à rapporter les mesures tendant à modifier le statut de Jérusalem⁷⁵. Par la suite, en juillet 1980, la Knesset a adopté la Loi fondamentale sur Jérusalem, proclamant Jérusalem capitale « entière et réunifiée » d'Israël. En août 1980, le Conseil de sécurité a « censuré dans les termes les plus énergiques » l'adoption par Israël de la Loi fondamentale, et affirmé que la loi constituait une violation du droit international, et que l'annexion israélienne était « nulle et non avenue » et devait « être rapportée immédiatement »⁷⁶. Israël ne respecte toujours pas l'ensemble des résolutions de l'ONU sur la question de Jérusalem. Quelque 210 000 colons israéliens vivent actuellement à Jérusalem-Est occupée qu'Israël a déclaré n'avoir aucune intention de quitter⁷⁷.

47. En dehors de Jérusalem, Israël s'emploie activement à établir l'annexion de facto de certaines parties de la Cisjordanie occupée. La Cour internationale de Justice, dans son avis consultatif de 2004 concernant l'édification du mur, a averti que la réalité du mur et le régime de colonisation créaient sur le terrain un « fait accompli » et une annexion de facto⁷⁸. L'Association for Civil Rights in Israel a qualifié le régime en Cisjordanie d'« occupation-annexion »⁷⁹. M. Omar Dajani a fait observer que, vu l'interdiction absolue du principe de l'annexion inscrite dans le droit international, les États annexants sont incités à occulter la réalité de l'annexion⁸⁰. En Cisjordanie, Israël exerce un contrôle total de la zone C (qui représente 60 % de la Cisjordanie), où 400 000 colons sont établis dans quelque 225 colonies. Ces colons vivent conformément à la loi israélienne dans des colonies peuplées uniquement d'israéliens, conduisent sur un système routier destiné uniquement aux israéliens, et bénéficient largement des énormes sommes d'argent public dépensées par Israël pour consolider, défendre et étendre les colonies. Peu de ces avantages bénéficient aux Palestiniens de la zone C, si ce n'est indirectement. Seul 1 % de la zone C est attribué aux Palestiniens, bien qu'ils soient quelque ⁷⁵ Voir les résolutions 2253 (ES-V) et 2254 (ES-V) de l'Assemblée générale.

⁷⁶ Voir la résolution 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité. Voir également la résolution 476 (1980) du Conseil.

⁷⁷ Le Premier Ministre israélien, Benjamin Nétanyahou en 2015 : « il y a quarante-huit ans, la division de Jérusalem a pris fin et nous sommes revenus à l'unité [...] Nous maintiendrons Jérusalem unie sous autorité israélienne ». Consultable à l'adresse www.cnn.com/2015/05/17/middleeast/israel-netanyahu-united-jerusalem/.

⁷⁸ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, par. 121.

⁷⁹ Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « 49 years of control without rights : human rights of the Palestinians in the West Bank and East Jerusalem—what has changed? », consultable à l'adresse www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2016/06/49years2016-en.pdf.

⁸⁰ Omar M. Dajani, « Israel's creeping annexation », American Journal of International Law Unbound, vol. 111 (2017).

300 000 à y vivre⁸¹. Quel pays investirait aussi lourdement pendant tant d'années pour créer autant de réalités immuables dans un territoire occupé s'il n'avait l'intention d'y demeurer en permanence⁸² ?

Les occupations doivent être temporaires et non permanentes ou de durée indéfinie

48. L'occupation israélienne dure depuis maintenant cinquante ans. La durée de cette occupation est sans précédent ni parallèle dans le monde d'aujourd'hui⁸³. M. Adam Roberts a déclaré qu'une occupation devenait prolongée si elle durait plus de cinq ans et présentait de grandes ressemblances avec la situation en temps de paix, en période d'hostilités réduites⁸⁴. Les occupations du monde moderne qui ont largement respecté les stricts principes applicables en ce qui concerne la durée, la non-annexion, la tutelle et la bonne foi n'ont pas dépassé 10 ans, y compris l'occupation américaine du Japon, l'occupation de l'Allemagne de l'Ouest par les Alliés et l'occupation de l'Iraq par la coalition dirigée par les États-Unis d'Amérique⁸⁵.

49. Si l'on part du principe que plus l'occupation est longue, plus la puissance occupante doit justifier la situation, l'on peut conclure qu'Israël n'a aucune raison convaincante, après 50 années, de maintenir cette occupation. Le pays a signé avec l'Égypte (1981) et la Jordanie (1994) des traités de paix qui ont résisté à l'épreuve du temps, et l'absence d'accords de paix avec ses deux autres voisins (la République arabe syrienne et le Liban), ne peut être invoquée pour justifier son occupation continue du territoire palestinien. Contrairement aux déclarations répétées de nombreux dirigeants israéliens, l'Autorité palestinienne est acceptée par la communauté internationale comme partenaire de négociations légitimes en faveur de la paix. Le principal moteur de la poursuite de l'occupation israélienne, qui est l'entreprise de colonisation, loin de renforcer la sécurité d'Israël, l'affaiblit⁸⁶. M. Gershon Shafir a écrit : Israël utilise ici une logique circulaire, en invoquant le caractère temporaire de l'occupation pour modifier durablement la situation au motif que sa sécurité serait exposée à de grands risques, dont beaucoup sont en fait le résultat de violations du droit de l'occupation⁸⁷.

50. La seule explication crédible de la poursuite de l'occupation israélienne et du renforcement du régime de colonisation est la volonté d'Israël d'ancrer ses revendications de souveraineté sur une partie ou la totalité du territoire palestinien, ambition coloniale par excellence. Depuis 1967, tous les gouvernements israéliens

⁸¹ Orhan Niksic, Nur Nasser Eddin et Massimiliano Cali Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Washington, Banque mondiale, 2014); et Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Resource Centre, « Planning to fail : the planning regime in Area C of the West Bank ».

⁸² Le Premier Ministre israélien Benjamin Nétanyahou en août 2017 : « Nous sommes ici pour y rester pour toujours. Les colonies sur les terres d'Israël ne seront plus démantelées. C'est notre terre ». Consultable à l'adresse www.latimes.com/world/middleeast/la-fg-israel-netanyahu-settlements-20170828-story.html.

⁸³ Yoram Dinstein, The International Law of Belligerent Occupation (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2009).

⁸⁴ Adam Roberts, « Prolonged military occupation : the Israeli-Occupied Territories since 1967 », American Journal of International Law, vol. 84, n° 1 (janvier 1990).

⁸⁵ Ces trois occupations sont parfois citées comme exemples d'occupations « transformatrices », ce qui soulève des questions juridiques distinctes qui ne sont pas traitées dans le présent rapport. Voir, de manière générale : Gregory H. Fox, « Transformative occupation and the unilateralist impulse », International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 94, n° 885 (printemps 2012).

⁸⁶ Conseil israélien de paix et de sécurité (juin 2012), cité dans Gershon Shafir, A Half Century of Occupation : Israel, Palestine, and the World's Most Intractable Conflict (Oakland, University of California Press, 2017) par. 98.

⁸⁷ Shafir, A Half Century of Occupation.

ont continué à développer les colonies, et l'importance des ressources financières, militaires et politiques allouées à cette entreprise dément toute intention de rendre l'occupation temporaire⁸⁸. Depuis 1967, le nombre de colons vivant dans les territoires occupés a toujours augmenté entre la prise de fonction et la cessation de fonction de chacun des gouvernements ayant assumé le pouvoir en Israël. (certes, lors de différents cycles de négociation de paix dans les années 1990 et 2000, des dirigeants israéliens ont proposé de se retirer d'une partie de la Cisjordanie, mais même dans les plus avancées de ces négociations, sous le gouvernement d'Ehud Olmert entre 2006 et 2008, Israël a insisté dans tous les accord finals pour conserver un grand nombre de ses colonies à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie⁸⁹). Le Gouvernement israélien actuel est fermement résolu à approfondir les activités de colonisation⁹⁰. M. Shafir fait observer que l'aspect temporaire reste un subterfuge israélien pour créer des réalités de terrain permanentes. En effet Israël peut mettre à profit le caractère apparemment indéterminé de la fin de l'occupation pour créer une situation temporaire « permanente » qui empêche intentionnellement les Palestiniens d'exercer véritablement leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance⁹¹.

51. L'occupation israélienne a depuis longtemps outrepassé le principe du droit international concernant le caractère temporaire d'une occupation. Israël n'a pas agi conformément à l'obligation de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour mettre un terme à l'occupation dans un délai aussi raisonnable et rapide que possible. Loin de là. Que l'on dise de l'occupation qu'elle est permanente ou de durée indéfinie, l'absence de justification convaincante expliquant cette durée exceptionnelle fait qu'Israël, en tant que puissance occupante, viole le droit international.

Le principe de l'intérêt supérieur/de la confiance

52. En vertu du droit international, Israël doit administrer le territoire palestinien occupé dans l'intérêt supérieur du peuple palestinien, à savoir le peuple protégé sous occupation, et doit nécessairement justifier ses préoccupations en matière de sécurité. Il lui est interdit d'administrer le territoire occupé de manière acquisitive ou intéressée. Ignorant ces exigences, Israël a agi dans son propre intérêt expansionniste, en négligeant la plupart des responsabilités incombant à un belligérant occupant.

53. Les répercussions sociales et économiques de l'occupation sur les Palestiniens vivant dans le territoire occupé, qui avaient toujours été dommageables, sont devenues de plus en plus désastreuses au cours des dernières années. D'après des rapports récents de la Banque mondiale⁹² et de l'Organisation des Nations Unies⁹³, l'entreprise d'expansion des colonies israéliennes et le dispositif d'appui à l'occupation ont aggravé les conditions économiques et les conditions de vie de la ⁸⁸ Idith Zertal et Akiva Eldar, Lords of the Land : the War Over Israel's Settlements in the Occupied Territories, 1967-2007 (New York, Nation Books, 2007).

⁸⁹ Dajani, « Israel's creeping annexation ».

⁹⁰ Samantha Power, Représentante permanente des États-Unis d'Amérique auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, « Intervention après l'abstention des États-Unis concernant le vote contre l'implantation de colonies », New York, 23 décembre 2016 : « le Premier Ministre israélien a récemment dit que son gouvernement était plus attaché aux colonies qu'aucun autre gouvernement de l'histoire d'Israël ». Consultable à l'adresse www.timesofisrael.com/full-text-of-us-envoy-samantha-powers-speech-after-abstention-on-anti-settlement-vote/.

⁹¹ Shafir, A Half Century of Occupation.

⁹² Banque mondiale, « West Bank and Gaza : Area C and the future of the Palestinian economy » rapport n° AUS2922 (2013).

⁹³ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, territoire palestinien occupé – « Fragmented lives : humanitarian overview 2106 » (2017).

population, déjà distinctes et nettement inférieures à celles des Israéliens, imposées aux Palestiniens en Cisjordanie. Les Palestiniens sont soumis à un système juridique arbitraire et sévère, très différent de celui dont bénéficient les colons israéliens⁹⁴. La plus grande partie de la Cisjordanie est interdite aux Palestiniens, et ceux-ci font régulièrement l'objet de restrictions importantes à leur liberté de circulation en raison de bouclages, de barrages routiers et de l'obligation de posséder une autorisation de déplacement, au demeurant difficile à obtenir⁹⁵.

54. Les colons israéliens bénéficient d'un accès aux ressources naturelles du territoire occupé, en particulier à l'eau, de manière disproportionnée⁹⁶. De même, le système de planification administré par la puissance occupante en matière de logement et de développement commercial dans l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, est profondément discriminatoire et favorise la construction de colonies, tout en créant de gros problèmes aux Palestiniens⁹⁷, comme en témoignent notamment la poursuite des confiscations de terres⁹⁸, la démolition de maisons et les refus de permis de construire⁹⁹. Israël emploie des pratiques qui peuvent dans certains cas être qualifiées de transfert forcé de Palestiniens, en particulier ceux vivant dans les zones rurales, afin de confisquer des terres pour y implanter des colonies, des zones militaires pour l'entraînement aux armes et d'autres utilisations servant exclusivement les intérêts de la puissance occupante et qui n'ont que peu ou pas de lien avec ses besoins légitimes en matière de sécurité¹⁰⁰.

55. Pour ce qui est de Jérusalem-Est, l'occupation l'a de plus en plus détachée de ses liens traditionnels nationaux d'ordre économique, culturel et familial avec la Cisjordanie, en raison du mur, de son encerclement croissant par des colonies et les points de contrôle qui y sont associés et du régime de permis discriminatoire. Elle est négligée par la municipalité en termes de services et d'infrastructures¹⁰¹, l'occupation a épuisé son économie, et les Palestiniens ne disposent que d'une faible superficie pour construire leurs logements¹⁰².

56. Dans la bande de Gaza, Israël a mis fin à sa présence officielle en 2005, mais conserve ses responsabilités en tant que puissance occupante du fait de son contrôle effectif sur les frontières terrestres et maritimes de ce territoire et sur son espace aérien. Tamir Pardo, ancien chef du Mossad, a récemment déclaré qu'Israël était responsable de la situation humanitaire dans la bande de Gaza, et que c'était là que ⁹⁴ Limor Yehuda et collaborateurs, « One rule, two legal systems : Israel's regime of laws in the West Bank » (Association for Civil Rights in Israel, 2014).

⁹⁵ Voir Human Rights Watch, World Report 2017 : Events of 2016. Consultable à l'adresse www.hrw.org/world-report/2017/country-chapters/israel/palestine.

⁹⁶ Amnesty International, « Troubled waters – Palestinians denied fair access to water » (Londres, 2009).

⁹⁷ Human Rights Watch, « Separate and unequal : Israel's discriminatory treatment of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territories » (19 décembre 2010). Consultable à l'adresse www.hrw.org/report/2010/12/19/separate-and-unequal/israels-discriminatory-treatment-palestinians-occupied.

⁹⁸ Adam Aloni, Expel and Exploit : The Israeli Practice of Taking Over Rural Palestinian Land (B'Tselem, 2016).

⁹⁹ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Fragmented Lives ».

¹⁰⁰ Simon Reynolds, Coercive Environments : Israel's Forcible Transfer of Palestinians in the Occupied Territory (Badil Resource Centre for Palestinian Residency and Refugee Rights, 2017).

¹⁰¹ Association for Civil Rights in Israel, East Jerusalem, facts and figures, 2017, 21 mai 2017. Consultable à l'adresse <http://www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2017/05/Facts-and-Figures-2017-1.pdf>.

¹⁰² Conférence des Nations Unies sur le commerce et le développement (CNUCED), L'économie palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est : face à l'annexion, à l'isolement et au risque de désintégration, document UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2012/1.

se posait le plus grand problème dans le monde d'aujourd'hui¹⁰³. Depuis 2007, Israël maintient un blocus étouffant sur l'économie et les voyages, qui a renvoyé la bande de Gaza à l'ère de l'obscurantisme. Plus de 60 % de la population de Gaza est tributaire de l'aide humanitaire, n'est pas en mesure d'obtenir plus d'un tiers de l'électricité dont elle a besoin, ses sources d'eau potable seront bientôt épuisées et, situation pratiquement unique au monde, son produit intérieur brut est inférieur à ce qu'il était en 2006¹⁰⁴.

57. Toutes ces restrictions dans la vie civile et commerciale des Palestiniens ont disloqué l'espace économique, d'où une économie fortement dépendante et étranglée, une paupérisation croissante, des pressions et humiliations quotidiennes, et un recul de l'espoir d'un réel retournement de situation dans un avenir prévisible¹⁰⁵.

58. Comme il ressort à l'évidence, Israël, puissance occupante a administré le territoire palestinien comme une colonie interne, s'attachant avec détermination à exploiter ses terres et ressources pour son propre bénéfice, tout en restant profondément indifférent, dans le meilleur des cas, aux droits et à l'intérêt supérieur des personnes protégées¹⁰⁶. Israël enfreint donc son obligation d'administrer l'occupation comme un mandataire pour le bien-être des personnes protégées sous occupation.

Bonne foi

59. Pour qu'une puissance occupante administre un territoire occupé en toute bonne foi, elle doit non seulement respecter les trois principes énoncés ci-dessus, mais également se conformer pleinement aux orientations spécifiques de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ou d'autres autorités compétentes concernant l'occupation. Elle doit en outre respecter les préceptes du droit international, y compris du droit humanitaire et du droit des droits de l'homme, qui s'appliquent à une occupation.

60. Depuis 1967, le Conseil de sécurité a adopté, dans un langage clair et direct, plus de 40 résolutions concernant l'occupation du Territoire palestinien par Israël. S'agissant des colonies, le Conseil a déclaré à diverses reprises que ces dernières n'avaient aucune validité légale, qu'elles devaient être démantelées, qu'elles constituaient une violation flagrante du droit international, que les activités de peuplement devaient être arrêtées immédiatement et complètement, et qu'elles mettaient gravement en péril la viabilité de la solution des deux États¹⁰⁷. De même, le Conseil a affirmé, en se référant expressément à l'occupation israélienne, que ¹⁰³ Gili Cohen, « Ex-Mossad chief says occupation is Israel's only existential threat », Haaretz, 22 mars 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.haaretz.com/israel-news/1.778650.

¹⁰⁴ Équipe de pays des Nations Unies dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. « Gaza ten years later », juillet 2017. Consultable à l'adresse https://unsco.unmissions.org/sites/default/files/gaza_10_years_later_-_11_july_2017.pdf.

¹⁰⁵ CNUCED, « Rapport sur l'assistance de la CNUCED au peuple palestinien : évolution de l'économie du Territoire palestinien occupé », document UNCTAD/APP/2016/1. Dans ce rapport, la CNUCED estime que l'économie palestinienne aurait à ce jour doublé de volume s'il n'y avait pas eu l'occupation israélienne.

¹⁰⁶ D. Kretzmer, The Occupation of Justice : The Supreme Court of Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories (Albany, State University of New York Press, 2002) (« Sur le plan politique, le Gouvernement fait référence aux Territoires occupés comme s'il s'agissait de colonies, avec tout ce que cela implique : l'exploitation de leurs ressources et marchés dans l'intérêt de la mère patrie et de ses citoyens, et une nette distinction entre le statut des " autochtones " et celui des colons. »).

¹⁰⁷ Voir les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 2334 (2016), 465 (1980), 452 (1979) et 446 (1979).

l'acquisition de territoires par la guerre ou par la force était inadmissible¹⁰⁸. Il a censuré « dans les termes les plus énergiques » l'annexion par Israël de Jérusalem-Est, déploré qu'Israël « persiste à modifier le caractère physique, la composition démographique [...] et le statut de la Ville sainte de Jérusalem », qualifié ces modifications de « violation flagrante » de la quatrième Convention de Genève, et déclaré que ces changements devaient être annulés¹⁰⁹. Il a affirmé à plusieurs reprises que la quatrième Convention de Genève s'appliquait au Territoire palestinien occupé et a appelé Israël à la respecter « scrupuleusement »¹¹⁰.

61. Face au refus persistant d'Israël d'accepter et d'appliquer l'une quelconque de ces résolutions, le Conseil de sécurité a vivement déploré « le refus continu d'Israël, puissance occupante, de se conformer aux résolutions pertinentes du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale »¹¹¹. Immédiatement après l'adoption par le Conseil, en décembre 2016, de la résolution 2334 (2016), condamnant l'entreprise de colonisation et le fait qu'Israël n'appliquait pas la quatrième Convention de Genève, M. Nétanyahou a vivement critiqué la résolution, et annoncé qu'Israël ne s'y soumettrait pas¹¹². En octobre 2017, le Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient a informé le Conseil qu'Israël ne se conformait pas à ladite résolution et que, de fait, ses activités de colonisation se poursuivaient à un rythme soutenu¹¹³.

62. On considère qu'Israël a violé bon nombre des grands préceptes du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme. Son entreprise de colonisation a été qualifiée d'illégale par le Conseil de sécurité¹¹⁴. Les peines collectives, dont l'usage est interdit, ont été régulièrement employées par Israël, comme en témoignent la démolition de maisons appartenant à des familles palestiniennes de personnes soupçonnées de terrorisme ou d'atteintes à la sécurité, et le bouclage prolongé de communautés palestiniennes (qui a repris en 2014, après un moratoire qui durait depuis 2006)¹¹⁵. Les communautés bédouines de Cisjordanie et de Jérusalem-Est sont les dernières communautés palestiniennes exposées à un risque de transfert forcé fomenté par la puissance occupante¹¹⁶. Le droit à la liberté, et le droit qui en découle de ne pas être soumis à une arrestation arbitraire, est violé par les nombreuses détentions arbitraires, y compris administrative, et la révocation du droit de résidence de nombreux milliers de Palestiniens¹¹⁷. La liberté de circulation est entravée par un système complexe de contraintes administratives, ¹⁰⁸ Voir les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 2334 (2016), 497 (1981), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 298 (1971), 267 (1969), 252 (1968) et 242 (1967).

¹⁰⁹ Voir les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 2334 (2016), 478 (1980) et 476 (1980).

¹¹⁰ Voir les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 2334 (2016), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 471 (1980), 465 (1980), 452 (1979) et 446 (1979).

¹¹¹ Voir les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 478 (1980), 476 (1980) et 446 (1979).

¹¹² Isabel Kershner, « Netanyahu promises retribution for 'biased' U.N. resolution », New York Times, 24 décembre 2016. Consultable à l'adresse <https://www.nytimes.com/2016/12/24/world/middleeast/israel-benjamin-netanyahu-united-nations.html>

¹¹³ Nickolay Mladenov, Coordonnateur spécial pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, exposé sur la situation au Moyen-Orient présenté au Conseil de sécurité : rapport sur la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil, 25 septembre 2017. Consultable à l'adresse <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/nickolay-mladenov-special-coordinator-middle-east-peace-3>

¹¹⁴ Voir les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité 2334 (2016), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 471 (1980), 465 (1980), 452 (1979) et 446 (1979).

¹¹⁵ Voir www.btselem.org/topic/punitive_demolitions.

¹¹⁶ Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Demolition and seizure of service infrastructure in Palestinian communities in Area C exacerbates risk of forcible transfer », 11 octobre 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.ochaopt.org/content/demolition-and-seizure-service-infrastructure-palestinian-communities-area-c-exacerbates.

¹¹⁷ Human Rights Watch, « Israel : 50 years of occupation abuses », 4 juin 2017. Consultable à l'adresse www.hrw.org/news/2017/06/04/israel-50-years-occupation-abuses.

bureaucratiques et physiques qui touche pratiquement tous les aspects de la vie quotidienne des Palestiniens¹¹⁸. Mais surtout, l'occupation persistante et irresponsable, qui traduit le refus de reconnaître l'intégrité territoriale, une véritable autonomie, une économie durable et une voie viable vers l'indépendance, sape et viole gravement le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination, droit de base qui permet la réalisation de nombreux autres droits.

63. Qu'il s'agisse du respect des résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ou du respect de ses obligations en tant que puissance occupante dans le cadre du droit international, Israël n'a pas administré le territoire palestinien occupé de bonne foi. En tant qu'État Membre de l'ONU tenu à certaines obligations, Israël a défié à maintes reprises l'autorité de surveillance de la communauté internationale concernant l'occupation. En tant qu'occupant, Israël a délibérément manqué à bon nombre des grands préceptes du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qui régissent une occupation.

IV. Conclusion

64. Le droit international est la promesse que les États se font mutuellement, et font à leur peuple, de respecter les droits, d'honorer les protections, de se conformer aux accords et obligations et de rechercher la paix et la justice. Il est tout à l'honneur de la communauté internationale d'avoir maintenu cette vision du droit international tout au long de sa supervision de l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël. Mais il n'est pas honorable, alors que l'occupation s'aggravait, que les intentions de l'occupant devenaient parfaitement claires et que celui-ci se montrait de plus en plus provocateur, que la communauté internationale, malgré les solides outils que lui donnaient le droit international et la diplomatie, ait rechigné à faire face à l'éclatement du territoire palestinien provoqué par Israël et à ses violations du droit de l'occupation. Le droit international, ainsi que les peuples de Palestine et d'Israël, ont tous souffert de cette situation.

65. Les États qui administrent un autre territoire sous supervision internationale, que ce soit comme occupant ou puissance mandataire, franchissent la ligne rouge de l'illégalité s'ils violent leurs obligations fondamentales en tant que dirigeants étrangers. Dans son avis consultatif sur la Namibie, la Cour internationale de Justice a confirmé cette conclusion. Le Rapporteur spécial affirme qu'Israël a franchi cette ligne dans son rôle d'occupant. Aujourd'hui, le défi que doit relever la communauté internationale consiste à évaluer cette analyse et, si elle est acceptée, à élaborer et appliquer les mesures diplomatiques et juridiques appropriées qui permettront, peu à peu, de mettre complètement et définitivement fin à l'occupation. Comme l'a écrit Amos Schocken, éditeur de Ha'aretz, au sujet des dirigeants de son propre pays, la pression internationale est précisément la force qui les pousse à faire ce qui est juste¹¹⁹.

66. La reconnaissance du fait que le rôle d'Israël en tant qu'occupant est désormais illégal servirait plusieurs objectifs importants. Premièrement, cela encouragerait les États Membres à prendre toutes les mesures raisonnables pour empêcher ou décourager les institutions, organisations et sociétés nationales relevant de leur juridiction de se livrer à des activités qui investissent dans l'occupation ou la maintiennent. Deuxièmement, cela encouragerait les tribunaux nationaux et internationaux à appliquer les lois appropriées relevant de leur compétence, qui permettraient d'empêcher ou de décourager la coopération avec des entités qui investissent dans l'occupation ou la maintiennent. Troisièmement, cela inciterait la communauté internationale à revoir ses diverses formes de coopération avec la puissance occupante tant qu'elle continue d'administrer l'occupation de manière illégale. Quatrièmement, cela fournirait un précédent solide à la communauté internationale pour porter un jugement sur d'autres occupations de longue durée. Mais surtout, une telle décision confirmerait l'importance morale du respect de l'état de droit international dans l'aide aux peuples assiégés et vulnérables.

¹¹⁸ Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « Freedom of movement : human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem » (février 2016). Consultable à l'adresse www.ohchr.org/Documents/Countries/PS/SG_Report_FoM_Feb2016.pdf; (voir également en français le document A/HRC/31/44).

¹¹⁹ Amos Schocken, « Only international pressure will end Israeli apartheid », Haaretz, 22 janvier 2016. Consultable à l'adresse <https://www.haaretz.com/opinion/premium-1.698874>.

V. Recommandations

67. Le Rapporteur spécial demande au Gouvernement israélien de mettre un terme à l'occupation longue de cinquante ans des territoires palestiniens dans un délai aussi rapide que possible, sous supervision internationale.

68. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande à l'Assemblée générale :

a) De faire réaliser une étude des Nations Unies sur la licéité de la poursuite de l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël;

b) D'examiner s'il y aurait intérêt à demander à la Cour internationale de Justice un avis consultatif sur la question de la licéité de l'occupation;

c) D'envisager de faire réaliser une étude juridique sur les moyens par lesquels les États Membres peuvent et doivent s'acquitter de leurs obligations et devoirs pour assurer le respect du droit international, y compris le devoir de non reconnaissance, le devoir de coopérer pour mettre fin à une situation illégale et le devoir d'enquêter et de poursuivre les infractions graves aux Conventions de Genève;

d) D'envisager d'adopter, conformément à la résolution 377 (V) de l'Assemblée générale intitulée "L'union pour le maintien de la paix", une résolution relative à la question de Palestine, au cas où il serait établi que le rôle d'Israël en tant qu'occupant n'est plus légal.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
22 octobre 2018
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-treizième session

Point 74 b) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
questions relatives aux droits de l'homme, y compris les divers moyens de mieux assurer l'exercice effectif des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967*

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, présenté en application de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent rapport a été soumis après la date limite afin que puissent y figurer les faits les plus récents.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le troisième soumis à l'Assemblée générale par le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk. Il se fonde principalement sur les informations communiquées par des victimes, des témoins, des membres de la société civile, des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies et des responsables palestiniens à Amman, lors de la mission effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juin 2018. Ce dernier y analyse un certain nombre de problèmes ayant trait à la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 donne un bref aperçu des problèmes les plus pressants en matière de droits de l'homme qu'il a recensés à l'issue de ses conversations et rencontres avec des membres de la société civile dans le Territoire palestinien occupé au moment de l'établissement du rapport. Il procède ensuite à une analyse détaillée de la question de l'annexion en examinant les contextes juridiques pertinents ainsi que la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, en particulier la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est.

2. Le Rapporteur spécial tient une nouvelle fois à souligner qu'en dépit de ses requêtes, il n'a pas encore reçu l'autorisation d'Israël de se rendre dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Sa dernière demande d'accès au Territoire remonte au 24 avril 2018 et au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport, le Gouvernement israélien n'y avait pas donné suite. Le Rapporteur souligne de nouveau qu'un dialogue ouvert entre toutes les parties est essentiel à la protection et à la promotion des droits de l'homme et rappelle à Israël qu'il est prêt et résolu à y participer. Il souligne une fois encore que l'accès au Territoire palestinien occupé serait essentiel pour comprendre la réalité fondamentale de la situation des droits de l'homme sur le terrain. Le défaut systématique de coopération avec le Rapporteur suscite une vive préoccupation et contrevient aux obligations qui sont celles d'Israël en tant qu'État Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

3. Le présent rapport se fonde principalement sur des communications écrites ainsi que sur les consultations menées avec des représentants de la société civile, des victimes, des témoins, des responsables palestiniens et des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies à Amman, à l'occasion de la mission annuelle effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juin 2018. Ce dernier tient à souligner que plusieurs groupes n'ont pas pu se rendre à Amman pour l'y rencontrer en raison des restrictions de déplacement imposées par les autorités israéliennes. Ces mesures ayant tout particulièrement visé les Gazaouites, toutes les personnes et organisations basées à Gaza ont été consultées par visioconférence.

4. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial met l'accent, comme le prévoit son mandat¹, sur les obligations qu'imposent à Israël le droit international des droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire. Il souligne également que ces obligations ne se limitent nullement à Israël, exhorte tous les acteurs à assurer le respect du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire, conformément à leurs obligations, et réaffirme que les violations de ces droits par quiconque sont déplorables et ne peuvent que compromettre les perspectives de paix.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à remercier le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine de la coopération sans réserve qu'il lui a apportée dans l'exécution de son mandat. Il souhaite également adresser ses remerciements à toutes les personnes qui se sont rendues à Amman pour le voir ainsi qu'à toutes celles qui n'ont pas pu faire le déplacement mais qui lui ont fait parvenir des observations oralement ou par écrit. Il remercie une nouvelle fois la Jordanie de son appui et de l'offre de tenir des réunions à Amman.

¹ Comme énoncé dans la résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme.

6. Le Rapporteur spécial redit son appui aux organisations palestiniennes, israéliennes et internationales de défense des droits de l'homme ainsi que son admiration pour le travail vital qu'elles accomplissent. Ces activités qui sont indispensables à l'exécution de son mandat profitent également à la communauté internationale tout entière. Il importe de reconnaître l'action qu'elles mènent pour faciliter l'accès à des informations exactes et complètes sur la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Comme le Rapporteur l'a souligné dans le rapport qu'il a présenté au Conseil des droits de l'homme en mars 2017 (A/HRC/34/70), ces organisations rencontrent souvent des obstacles considérables dans l'exercice de leurs activités. Il note que, depuis son dernier rapport, les difficultés qu'elles connaissent ont augmenté et se sont exacerbées. Il demande à la communauté internationale de veiller à ce que les droits des personnes entreprenant ce dur exercice, parfois périlleux, soient respectés et protégés et que toute tentative visant à discrédibiliser ou à discréditer de quelque manière le travail de ces organisations soit condamnée.

II. Situation actuelle des droits de l'homme

7. Depuis le précédent rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial à l'Assemblée générale (A/72/556), la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé n'a cessé de se dégrader, en particulier à Gaza. Dans la déclaration qu'il a publiée à l'issue de sa mission dans la région en juin 2018, le Rapporteur a noté, à l'occasion de cette troisième visite, que jamais la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire ne lui avait été décrite de manière aussi sombre². Parmi les principales difficultés répertoriées dans le cadre de cette mission figuraient la poursuite de l'extension et du développement des implantations, la proposition de loi visant à officialiser l'annexion de certaines parties de la Cisjordanie, le risque de transfert forcé de populations bédouines vulnérables, la persistance d'un climat d'oppression un peu partout en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, au moyen de points de contrôle, de bouclages, de révocations de permis de résidence et de restrictions à la liberté de circulation, la dégradation constante des conditions de vie à Gaza dans pratiquement tous les domaines ainsi que l'emploi d'une force manifestement excessive contre des manifestants gazaouites, qui s'est soldé par un grand nombre de morts et de blessés.

8. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial ne dresse pas la liste exhaustive de l'ensemble des préoccupations, faute de place, mais insiste sur certaines des questions qui étaient les plus pressantes, au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport. Cet état des lieux sera suivi d'une analyse approfondie de la question de l'annexion, pour examiner à la fois le cadre juridique applicable et la situation actuelle dans le Territoire palestinien occupé.

Gaza

9. La situation humanitaire et des droits de l'homme à Gaza continue de se dégrader progressivement. La crise de l'électricité, qui s'était aggravée l'an dernier, a perduré sans changement notable et a fortement restreint l'accès de la population palestinienne à des soins médicaux, à l'éducation et à des moyens de subsistance. Depuis le début de 2018, la population gazaouite n'a eu accès qu'à six heures d'électricité par jour au plus. La majeure partie du temps, le courant n'était disponible que quatre ou cinq heures par jour³. Ces derniers mois, l'ONU a demandé à maintes reprises que du carburant soit fourni à Gaza pour parer aux urgences et éviter l'effondrement complet et catastrophique des services essentiels, en particulier après l'imposition par Israël de restrictions à l'entrée de carburant sur le territoire⁴. La Banque mondiale a signalé que l'économie était en « chute libre » à Gaza, avec une croissance négative de 6 % au premier trimestre de 2018, estimant que le blocus était au cœur du problème mais que d'autres facteurs avaient également concouru à cette situation, notamment la réduction importante du budget de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) et la décision prise par l'Autorité palestinienne de réduire les salaires à Gaza⁵.

² Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme (HCDH), « Occupied Palestinian Territory: bleakest picture yet, says UN expert after regional visit », 29 juin 2018. D. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=23298&LangID=E.

Manifestations et emploi de la force

10. Lors des manifestations qui ont débuté le 31 mars 2018 le long de la clôture d'enceinte de Gaza, les Palestiniens ont revendiqué le droit de retour dans leur foyer et réclamé la fin du blocus dans le cadre d'une « Grande Marche du retour ». La majeure partie de la population y est constituée de personnes qui ont été expulsées par la force de leur foyer et de leur terre à partir de 1948. Gaza est soumise depuis 11 ans à un blocus terrestre, maritime et aérien complet, et nombreux sont les habitants qui n'ont jamais eu la possibilité de sortir du territoire. L'accès à des moyens de subsistance ainsi qu'à des services essentiels en matière de santé et d'éducation est fortement restreint. La réduction sans précédent des contributions au budget de l'UNRWA, qui fournit des services recouvrant aussi bien les soins médicaux que la protection et l'éducation, aura des conséquences dévastatrices pour la population gazaouite⁶. Face à ces difficultés, les habitants se réunissent devant la barrière séparant Gaza d'Israël, chaque vendredi depuis le 30 mars, en nombre variable, pour dénoncer ces conditions.

11. Au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport, plus de 200 personnes avaient été tuées par les forces de sécurité israéliennes à Gaza, dont 150 dans le cadre des manifestations. Parmi les victimes figuraient 38 enfants. Le 14 mai, 42 personnes au

³ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, base de données de l'approvisionnement en électricité dans la bande de Gaza. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/page/gaza-strip-electricity-supply.

⁴ Voir, par exemple, Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Funding for emergency fuel needed immediately to avoid catastrophic breakdown in essential services », 5 septembre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/content/funding-emergency-fuel-needed-immediately-avoid-catastrophic-breakdown-essential-services ; « Entry of emergency fuel urgently needed to avoid closure of hospitals and overflow of sewage in Gaza streets », 8 août 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/content/entry-emergency-fuel-urgently-needed-avoid-closure-hospitals-and-overflow-sewage-gaza.

⁵ Banque mondiale, « Cash-strapped Gaza and an economy in collapse put Palestinian basic needs at risk », communiqué de presse du 25 septembre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.worldbank.org/en/news/press-release/2018/09/25/cash-strapped-gaza-and-an-economy-in-collapse-put-palestinian-basic-needs-at-risk.

⁶ Stéphane Dujarric, Porte-parole du Secrétaire général, déclaration faite au nom du Secrétaire général au sujet de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient, 31 août 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.un.org/sg/en/content/sg/statement/2018-08-31/statement-attributable-spokesman-secretary-general-unrwa.

moins, dont 6 enfants, ont trouvé la mort dans ces circonstances⁷. Outre le nombre élevé de décès, plus de 21 000 personnes ont été blessées, dont plus de 5 300 par balles réelles, soit un bilan extrêmement lourd. Les autres blessures ont notamment été provoquées par des balles en métal recouvertes de caoutchouc et l'inhalation de gaz lacrymogène. Durant la même période, on déplorait 1 mort et 37 blessés du côté israélien⁸. Les manifestations se poursuivent et le nombre de victimes ne cesse de croître. À titre d'exemple, le 28 septembre 2018, sept Palestiniens, dont deux enfants, ont été tués par les forces de sécurité israéliennes⁹. On ne saurait trop insister sur les préjudices subis par les enfants qui continuent d'être tués et blessés en dépit des appels lancés par la communauté internationale en faveur du respect de ces droits¹⁰.

12. Si ces manifestations ont été largement pacifiques, des incidents se sont produits du côté palestinien, des cocktails Molotov ayant été lancés en direction de la frontière et des cerfs-volants enflammés ayant mis le feu aux récoltes en territoire israélien. Des manifestants auraient également tenté de forcer la barrière entre Gaza et Israël. Tous les actes de violence sont déplorables et doivent être condamnés. Le fait que certains manifestants se soient livrés à de tels actes ne diminue cependant en rien les graves préoccupations que suscite la réaction d'Israël face à ces manifestations¹¹. Conformément au cadre juridique applicable, le critère n'est pas le recours à la violence mais le fait de se demander si la vie des agents de l'ordre est immédiatement menacée. Comme l'a noté le Haut-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, il est difficile de concevoir que des pneus en flamme et des jets de pierres, voire des cocktails Molotov lancés en direction de forces de sécurité lourdement protégées et en position défensive, situées à une grande distance, soient perçus comme constituant une menace¹².

13. Le Gouvernement israélien a qualifié les manifestations de « campagne d'affrontement » lancée par le Hamas, auquel il a imputé la responsabilité des morts provoquées par les forces israéliennes¹³. Il a également établi un lien entre les

⁷ Jamie McGoldrick, Coordonnateur des Nations Unies pour les activités humanitaires et le développement dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, déclaration sur le nombre de victimes à Gaza, 29 septembre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/content/statement-humanitarian-coordinator-occupied-palestinian-territory-mr-jamie-mcgoldrick ; voir également <https://www.ochaopt.org/content/fifty-five-palestinians-killed-and-thousands-injured-gaza>.

⁸ Pour tous les chiffres mentionnés dans le présent paragraphe, voir Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Humanitarian snapshot: casualties in the context of demonstrations and hostilities in Gaza », 30 mars-4 octobre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-snapshot-casualties-context-demonstrations-and-hostilities-gaza-30-march-4.

⁹ McGoldrick, déclaration sur le bilan des morts et des blessés dans la bande de Gaza.

¹⁰ Jamie McGoldrick, Coordonnateur des Nations Unies pour les activités humanitaires et le développement dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, James Heenan, Chef du HCDH dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, et Genevieve Boutin, Représentante spéciale du Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance dans l'État de Palestine, communiqué de presse conjoint, 1^{er} août 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/content/children-s-rights-must-be-put-first.

¹¹ Sari Bashi, « Don't blame Hamas for the Gaza bloodshed », Human Rights Watch, 22 mai 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.hrw.org/news/2018/05/22/dont-blame-hamas-gaza-bloodshed.

¹² HCDH, « Gaza deaths: Israel must address excessive use of force, Zeid says », 27 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22995&LangID=E>.

¹³ Israël, Ministère des affaires étrangères, « Hamas launches confrontation campaign on Israel's border », 6 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <http://mfa.gov.il/MFA/ForeignPolicy/Issues/Pages/Hamas-launches-confrontation-campaign-on-Israel's-border.aspx> ; Noa Landau, « Netanyahu on Gaza protesters: Israel tried non-lethal methods, but Hamas wants them to die », événements en cours à Gaza et la précédente escalade de violence en Cisjordanie, qui avait débuté en octobre 2015 et s'était prolongée plusieurs mois, qualifiant la période écoulée depuis 2015 de « vague de terreur »¹⁴. Le Rapporteur spécial note que nombre des préoccupations qu'il avait exprimées dans le rapport présenté à l'Assemblée générale en 2016 (A/71/554), dans lequel il avait également examiné la recrudescence des violences en Cisjordanie, sont plus que jamais d'actualité, notamment en ce qui concerne l'emploi apparemment excessif de la force par des agents israéliens. Comme le Rapporteur l'a signalé dans le rapport susmentionné, plus de 230 Palestiniens ont été tués en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, durant une période d'un an environ, dans le cadre des manifestations ou à la suite d'agressions avérées ou présumées par des Palestiniens contre des Israéliens (voir A/71/554, par. 9 à 14). Le nombre de morts enregistré à Gaza, ces derniers mois, est tout aussi important, et celui des blessés très élevé. La pratique consistant à réprimer les manifestations en faisant usage d'une force létale est totalement contraire au droit international des droits de l'homme et aux droits à la liberté d'expression, de réunion et d'association, valeurs reconnues internationalement.

14. Selon les Principes de base sur le recours à la force et l'utilisation des armes à feu par les responsables de l'application des lois, les armes et la force létales ne doivent être utilisées qu'en dernier recours, et uniquement en cas de menace imminente de mort ou de blessure grave. Ces Principes sont utiles dans le cas qui nous occupe, puisque les forces israéliennes postées le long de la clôture entre Israël et Gaza agissent en qualité d'agents de maintien de l'ordre. Les manifestants palestiniens font face à des forces de sécurité israéliennes bien équipées et lourdement armées, qui tiennent des positions défensives souvent situées à des centaines de mètres. D'après les nombreux éléments de preuve réunis par plusieurs organisations de défense des droits de l'homme et examinés par le Rapporteur spécial, les personnes ayant jeté des pierres ou des cocktails Molotov ou s'étant approchées des forces israéliennes ne semblaient pas, dans la plupart des cas, représenter une menace crédible pour la vie de ces agents lourdement armés, ou leur faire courir un risque de blessure grave pouvant justifier le recours à la force létale aux termes des dispositions applicables du droit international des droits de l'homme¹⁵. En effet, la plupart des victimes étaient apparemment désarmées et auraient été tuées par des balles réelles dans le dos, à la tête ou au thorax.

15. Dans ce contexte, un message plus inquiétant encore (supprimé par la suite), posté sur le réseau social Twitter depuis le compte officiel du porte-parole des Forces de défense israéliennes le 31 mars, au début des manifestations, affirmait que rien n'avait été laissé au hasard ; que tout était précis et mesuré, et qu'elles savaient où Haaretz, 7 juin 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/netanyahu-on-gaza-protesters-hamas-wants-them-to-die-1.6156392.

¹⁴ Israël, Ministère des affaires étrangères, « Wave of terror 2015–2018 », 17 octobre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <http://mfa.gov.il/MFA/ForeignPolicy/Terrorism/Palestinian/Pages/Wave-of-terror-October-2015.aspx>.

¹⁵ Voir, par exemple, Human Rights Watch, « Israël : Les tirs mortels à Gaza ont été illégaux et planifiés », 3 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://www.hrw.org/fr/news/2018/04/03/israel-les-tirs-mortels-gaza-ont-ete-illegaux-et-planifies> ; B'Tselem, « If the heart be not callous, on the unlawful shooting of unarmed demonstrators in Gaza », note d'information, avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.btselem.org/publications/summaries/201804_if_the_heart_be_not_callous ; Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, « Child killed and 112 protestors injured on the 16th Friday of demonstrations », communiqué de presse, 15 juillet 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.mezan.org/en/post/23073/Child+Killed+and+112+Protesters+Injured+on+the+16th+Friday+of+Demonstrations.

chaque balle avait atterri¹⁶. Il convient de noter que, dans une situation d'occupation comme à Gaza, les meurtres résultant de l'emploi illicite de la force pourraient être considérés comme des homicides intentionnels constituant une violation grave de l'article 147 de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève). À l'article 8 du Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, les infractions graves aux Conventions de Genève sont assimilées à des crimes de guerre¹⁷.

Restrictions d'accès et de circulation dans le cadre des manifestations

16. Outre l'emploi de la force, Israël a réagi aux manifestations en imposant des restrictions d'accès et de circulation qui ont eu des conséquences extrêmement préjudiciables pour la population gazaouite. Comme je l'ai souligné dans mon rapport au Conseil des droits de l'homme en mars 2018 (voir A/HRC/37/75, par. 36 à 60), les habitants se heurtent à de graves difficultés pour ce qui est d'exercer leur droit à la santé, en raison du délabrement des infrastructures résultant de 11 années de blocus et du bouclage imposés par Israël, ainsi que du refus des autorités de délivrer des visas de sortie permettant aux malades de se faire soigner hors de Gaza, ou des retards constatés dans la délivrance de ces documents. Ces difficultés persistent et ont été encore exacerbées par les besoins de plus en plus pressants en la matière, compte tenu du grand nombre de blessés durant les manifestations. En juin 2018, le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires et l'Organisation mondiale de la Santé ont appelé l'attention sur la situation désespérée dans laquelle se trouvait le secteur de la santé de Gaza, citant la pénurie d'électricité et de médicaments essentiels ainsi que la réduction des salaires des fonctionnaires parmi les problèmes qui avaient le plus affaibli le secteur durant les années et les mois précédents¹⁸. Outre le nombre élevé de blessés, il a également été signalé que la complexité du traitement des blessures par balle aurait des effets majeurs sur la récupération de nombreux patients à plus long terme¹⁹.

17. Compte tenu du grand nombre de blessés et de la complexité des besoins, beaucoup de victimes ont nécessité des soins médicaux qui n'étaient pas disponibles à Gaza. Toutefois, les difficultés liées à l'obtention de permis ou à leur délivrance en temps et en heure se sont révélées très préoccupantes. En cas de blessure par balle, un traitement rapide s'impose souvent pour éviter l'amputation. Dans un cas, deux jeunes âgés de 17 et 20 ans se sont vu refuser des visas de sortie et ont dû subir une amputation de la jambe. Les autorités israéliennes ont indiqué que les visas leur

¹⁶ Hazem Balousha et Oliver Holmes, « The Gaza Strip mourns its dead after protest is met with bullets », The Guardian, 31 mars 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.theguardian.com/world/2018/mar/31/weary-angry-gazans-bury-dead-after-deadly-border-conflict.

¹⁷ Voir également Fatou Bensouda, Procureure de la Cour pénale internationale, déclaration relative à la dégradation de la situation à Gaza, en date du 8 avril 2018, dans laquelle celle-ci a noté que « les violences perpétrées contre des civils dans une situation comme celle qui [régnait] à Gaza pourraient constituer des crimes visés au Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale [...] à l'instar de l'utilisation de civils pour protéger des activités militaires ». Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.icc-cpi.int/Pages/item.aspx?name=180408-otp-stat&ln=fr.

¹⁸ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Gaza's health sector struggles to cope with massive influx of casualties amid pervasive shortages », Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, mai 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/content/gaza-s-health-sector-struggles-cope-massive-influx-casualties-amid-pervasive-shortages.

¹⁹ Médecins sans frontières, « Gaza: a long ordeal awaits hundreds of wounded from the march of return », 8 août 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.msf.org/gaza-long-ordeal-awaits-hundreds-wounded-march-return.

avaient été refusés du fait de leur participation aux manifestations²⁰. Le 8 avril, deux organisations de défense des droits de l'homme, Adalah et Al Mezan, ont déposé une requête au nom de ces patients devant la Haute Cour de justice d'Israël. Tous deux ont été amputés tandis qu'ils attendaient la décision de la Cour. Le 16 avril, celle-ci a jugé que l'un d'eux (Youssef Kronz) devait être autorisé à sortir de Gaza pour subir une nouvelle intervention chirurgicale, son autre jambe risquant également d'être amputée²¹. Le déni d'accès à des traitements médicaux est injustifiable et contrevient aux obligations d'Israël découlant du droit international des droits de l'homme et à ses obligations en tant que Puissance occupante au regard du droit international humanitaire.

18. Outre les restrictions imposées à la circulation des personnes, Israël a également limité, ces derniers mois, l'entrée de biens essentiels à Gaza. Les autorités israéliennes ont clairement indiqué que ces mesures avaient été prises à la suite de l'utilisation de cerfs-volants enflammés au-dessus du territoire israélien, lesquels avaient considérablement endommagé les cultures²². Ces restrictions ont entraîné de graves pénuries, notamment de carburant destiné à parer aux urgences. Comme susmentionné, l'ONU a signalé à plusieurs reprises que les services essentiels risquaient de s'effondrer totalement si l'entrée de carburant n'était pas autorisée à Gaza. Le fait que l'ensemble de la population gazaouite puisse voir ses conditions de vie se dégrader encore davantage en raison d'actes commis par une minorité porte à croire qu'il pourrait s'agir là d'une peine collective interdite aux termes de l'article 33 de la quatrième Convention de Genève.

Établissement des responsabilités

19. Dès le début des manifestations, le Secrétaire général a demandé que les faits susmentionnés fassent l'objet d'enquêtes indépendantes et transparentes²³. Cet appel a été repris à maintes occasions par le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme et plusieurs titulaires de mandats relevant des procédures spéciales du Conseil des droits de l'homme, y compris le Rapporteur spécial²⁴. Sachant que l'application du principe de responsabilité est indispensable à toute initiative visant à ²⁰ Jack Khoury, « Israel denied passage for medical treatment to two Palestinians who protested in Gaza – and their legs were amputated », Haaretz, 12 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/two-gazan-protesters-legs-amputated-after-israel-denies-entry-1.5993161.

²¹ Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, « Israel Supreme Court rules on Adalah-Al Mezan petition: Israel must let Palestinian youth wounded by Israeli gunfire at protests leave Gaza for urgent care », communiqué de presse, 16 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.mezan.org/en/post/22707.

²² BBC, « Israel closes main Gaza goods crossing in response to arson attacks », 10 juillet 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.bbc.com/news/world-middle-east-44777297.

²³ Farhan Haq, Porte-parole adjoint du Secrétaire général, déclaration faite au nom du Secrétaire général concernant la situation à Gaza, 30 mars 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.un.org/sg/en/content/sg/statement/2018-03-30/statement-attributable-spokesman-secretary-general-situation-gaza.

²⁴ HCDH, « UN human rights experts condemn killings of Palestinians near Gaza fence by Israeli security forces », 17 avril 2018, « UN rights experts condemn Israel's response to Palestinian protests in Gaza », 6 avril 2018, « Press briefing note on Gaza and Guatemala », 17 avril 2018, « Gaza deaths: Israel must address excessive use of force, Zeid says », 27 avril 2018. Disponibles aux adresses suivantes, respectivement : www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22950, www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22924, www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22925&LangID=E et www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22995&LangID=E.

instaurer la paix et à prévenir de nouvelles violations du droit international, le Rapporteur spécial se félicite de la décision prise par le Conseil des droits de l'homme, dans sa résolution S-28/1, de créer une commission d'enquête indépendante, comme un moyen important de lutter contre l'impunité et de permettre aux victimes d'accéder à des voies de recours plus efficaces.

20. Dans la résolution susmentionnée, le Conseil a décidé de dépêcher cette commission, notant « le refus systématique d'Israël de mener, comme l'exige le droit international, de véritables enquêtes impartiales, indépendantes, rapides et efficaces sur les violences et les exactions perpétrées contre des Palestiniens par les forces d'occupation, et de soumettre à un examen judiciaire ses opérations dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est ».

21. En avril 2018, le Ministre de la défense israélien, Avigdor Lieberman, a déclaré qu'aucune enquête ne serait ouverte sur les meurtres commis le long de la frontière avec Gaza²⁵. En août, le Général de brigade Sharon Afek a décidé d'ouvrir une enquête sur le décès de deux jeunes Palestiniens : un garçon de 15 ans, dont les images vidéo montrent qu'il a reçu une balle dans le dos à proximité de la clôture en mars, et un autre de 18 ans, qui a été tué pendant les manifestations près de la clôture en juillet.

22. En avril, des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme israéliennes et palestiniennes ont déposé deux requêtes devant la Haute Cour de justice d'Israël pour lui demander de se prononcer sur la légalité des règles d'ouverture du feu appliquées par les Forces de défense israéliennes²⁶. En mai, la Cour a rendu une décision s'appuyant largement sur l'analyse des faits communiquée par l'État et renvoyé les questions juridiques devant le mécanisme d'enquête interne des Forces de défense sans avoir examiné les règles d'engagement et de comportement de ces dernières²⁷. Cette décision a suscité de graves préoccupations, notamment parmi les juristes, quant au laxisme du contrôle exercé par l'appareil judiciaire sur la conduite de l'armée israélienne, la Cour semblant accepter les arguments avancés par l'État pour justifier l'utilisation potentielle de la force létale contre des manifestants ne représentant aucune menace pour la vie ou l'intégrité physique des membres des Forces de défense²⁸. Cela provoque de nouvelles inquiétudes quant à la possibilité d'obtenir que les responsabilités soient établies dans le système de justice militaire.

²⁵ Loveday Morris et Hazem Balousha, « No inquiry into Gaza border deaths, says Israeli defense minister », Washington Post, 1^{er} avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante :

www.washingtonpost.com/world/middle_east/no-inquiry-into-gaza-border-deaths-says-israeli-defense-minister/2018/04/01/f2562ca2-352d-11e8-b6bd-0084a1666987_story.html?utm_term=.cdab7561d170.

²⁶ Adalah, « Adalah and Al Mezan petition supreme court: order Israeli army to stop using snipers, live ammunition against Gaza protests », 24 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante :

www.adalah.org/en/content/view/9488 ; Gisha, « HCJ petition: revoke open-fire regulation permitting live fire on demonstrators not endangering human life », 15 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <http://gisha.org/updates/8804> ; Yesh Din, « HCJ petition: revoke rules of engagement permitting live fire at non-dangerous demonstrators near Gaza fence », 15 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.yesh-din.org/en/hcj-petition-revoke-rules-engagement-permitting-live-fire-non-dangerous-demonstrators-near-gaza-fence/.

²⁷ Yesh Din, « HCJ petition: revoke rules of engagement permitting live fire at non-dangerous demonstrators near Gaza fence ».

²⁸ Voir, par exemple, Eliav Lieblisch, « Collectivizing threat: an analysis of Israel's legal claim for resort to force on the Gaza border », Just Security, 16 mai 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.justsecurity.org/56346/collectivizing-threat-analysis-israels-legal-claims-resort-force-gaza-border/ ; Elena Chachko et Yuval Shany, « The Supreme Court of Israel dismisses a petition

23. L'existence d'un système dans lequel les affaires peuvent être soumises à l'examen de l'avocat général de l'armée est nécessaire mais insuffisante pour faire appliquer le principe de responsabilité. Encore faut-il établir que ce système fonctionne de façon indépendante, impartiale, transparente et dans le respect des normes internationales. Le Rapporteur spécial partage le sentiment du Haut-Commissaire, selon lequel les manquements de l'Avocat général de l'armée à ses obligations en la matière compromettent les efforts actuels ou futurs visant à établir les responsabilités en ce qui concerne ces faits en « donnant la fausse impression que ces affaires ont effectivement été traitées par le système de justice militaire » (voir A/HCR/37/41, par. 14).

III. Annexion

24. L'annexion de territoire est strictement interdite dans le droit international moderne. Cette interdiction a en effet acquis le statut de norme de jus cogens en droit international ; la communauté internationale l'accepte donc comme principe de droit fondamental n'admettant aucune exception ni dérogation²⁹. On considère aujourd'hui les conquêtes et annexions de territoire comme des fléaux intolérables de périodes plus sombres de notre histoire, puisqu'elles provoquent inmanquablement des guerres dévastatrices, une instabilité politique, la ruine économique, des discriminations systématiques et des souffrances humaines à grande échelle³⁰. Bien que des annexions de territoire subsistent dans le monde actuel, elles sont nettement plus rares depuis la création de l'ONU, la communauté internationale ayant dans de nombreux cas refusé d'admettre toute revendication en la matière.

25. Toutefois, l'annexion de territoire demeure une question brûlante dans le conflit israélo-palestinien. Par deux fois, Israël, Puissance occupante, a officiellement annexé des territoires qu'il tenait : Jérusalem-Est (en 1967 et en 1980) et le plateau du Golan syrien en 1981³¹. Son refus d'y renoncer malgré la condamnation générale de la communauté internationale a concouru à l'instabilité régionale et gravement entravé l'efficacité du droit international. Tout au long des années d'occupation, depuis la guerre de juin 1967, Israël n'a cessé de consolider son annexion de facto de la Cisjordanie en imposant sciemment aux territoires occupés des changements irréversibles, qui sont proscrits au regard du droit international humanitaire : établissement de 230 implantations peuplées de plus de 400 000 colons israéliens ; confinement physique et politique des 2,6 millions de Palestiniens de Cisjordanie ; extension des lois israéliennes à la Cisjordanie et mise en place d'un régime juridique discriminatoire ; inégalité d'accès aux ressources naturelles, aux services sociaux, à la propriété et à la terre pour les Palestiniens de la Cisjordanie occupée ; et appels explicites, de la part d'un large cercle de dirigeants politiques israéliens de haut rang, à l'annexion officielle de la Cisjordanie, en partie ou en totalité. Cette propension à l'annexion de territoire n'a fait que s'accroître ces deux dernières années. Ainsi, comme l'a récemment affirmé un avocat israélien des droits de l'homme, le against Gaza rules of engagement », Law Fare, 26 mai 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.lawfareblog.com/supreme-court-israel-dismisses-petition-against-gaza-rules-engagement.

²⁹ Rainer Hofmann, « Annexation », in Max Planck Encyclopedia of Public International Law (Oxford University Press, 2013), par. 21 et 38.

³⁰ Robert Yewdall Jennings, The Acquisition of Territory in International Law (Manchester, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Manchester University Press, 1963, 2017).

³¹ Annexions de jure condamnées par le Conseil de sécurité dans ses résolutions 478 (1980) et 497 (1981).

Gouvernement israélien abandonne progressivement le peu qu'il lui restait d'attachement à la notion d'occupation comme étant provisoire et à l'obligation de négocier avec les Palestiniens. Et de conclure : l'objectif est clair : un seul État où vivent deux peuples, dont l'un seulement possède la citoyenneté et jouit de droits civils³².

26. Ainsi, la deuxième partie du présent rapport est essentiellement axée sur les tendances relatives à l'annexion de jure de Jérusalem-Est et à celle, de facto, de la Cisjordanie par Israël, sur l'incompatibilité de ces actes avec les normes juridiques internationales et sur leur effet, à savoir priver le peuple palestinien de son droit à l'autodétermination.

A. L'annexion au regard du droit international moderne

27. Après 1945 et l'expérience amère de plusieurs décennies de guerres à l'échelle planétaire, alimentées par des velléités d'expansionnisme territorial, la communauté internationale a décidé de proscrire la guerre, les conquêtes et les annexions comme instruments de politique nationale. Aux alinéas 3 et 4 de son Article 2, la Charte des Nations Unies impose aux États Membres de l'ONU de régler leurs différends par des moyens pacifiques, rendant de fait toute annexion illicite³³. Adoptée à l'unanimité par l'Assemblée générale en 1970, la Déclaration relative aux principes du droit international touchant les relations amicales et la coopération entre les États conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies (Déclaration sur les relations amicales) dispose que nulle acquisition territoriale obtenue par la menace ou l'emploi de la force ne sera reconnue comme légale. À au moins huit occasions depuis 1967, le Conseil de sécurité a expressément affirmé l'inadmissibilité de l'acquisition de territoire par la guerre ou par la force³⁴. Qui plus est, l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil des droits de l'homme ont, à plusieurs reprises, réaffirmé le principe de l'inadmissibilité³⁵, dont la Cour internationale de Justice a déclaré en 2004 qu'il avait acquis le statut de règle de droit international coutumier³⁶. Nombre d'éminents spécialistes du droit international s'accordent à voir dans l'interdiction des conquêtes et des annexions une des pierres angulaires du droit international contemporain³⁷. L'annexion de territoire est incompatible avec les principes fondateurs du droit de l'occupation, selon lesquels la puissance occupante, dont le mandat est par définition provisoire et non permanent ou de durée indéterminée, doit administrer le territoire occupé non pas à des fins d'expansion mais dans l'intérêt de la population qui y vit et qu'elle protège³⁸. De plus, l'annexion porte gravement atteinte au droit fondamental ³² Michael Sfard, « Israel and annexation by lawfare », The New York Review of Books, 10 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.nybooks.com/daily/2018/04/10/israel-and-annexation-by-lawfare/.

³³ Hofmann, « Annexion », par. 14.

³⁴ Le cas le plus récent est l'adoption de la résolution 2334 (2016) par le Conseil de sécurité.

³⁵ Le plus récemment, dans la résolution 72/14 de l'Assemblée générale et la résolution 37/36 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

³⁶ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, par. 87.

³⁷ Par exemple, Malcolm N. Shaw, International Law, 8^e éd. (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, 2017), p. 372. « No territorial acquisition resulting from the threat or use of force shall be recognized as legal » ; Jennings, The Acquisition of Territory in International Law, p. 56 : « Conquest as a title to territorial sovereignty has ceased to be a part of the law. ».

³⁸ Orna Ben-Naftali, Michael Sfard et Hedi Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT: A Legal Lexicon of the Israeli Control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2018), p. 399. Ce cadre normatif limite les pouvoirs de la puissance occupante dans l'espace et le à l'autodétermination, dont le respect relève d'une obligation qui s'applique à tous au regard du droit international³⁹.

B. Efficacité de l'interdiction

28. Des spécialistes ont récemment affirmé que l'interdiction, sur les plans juridique et diplomatique, des conquêtes et annexions de territoire avait permis d'en réduire sensiblement la fréquence depuis 1945. De 1816 à 1928, date de la signature du Traité général de renonciation à la guerre comme instrument de politique nationale (Pacte Briand-Kellogg), en moyenne 1,21 conquête territoriale a été consignée par an, s'accompagnant de l'annexion de 295 486 kilomètres carrés. De 1928 à 1948, durant la période ayant suivi la conclusion du Pacte, un léger fléchissement de la tendance aux conquêtes et aux annexions a été observé, la moyenne annuelle s'élevant alors à 1,15 conquête par an pour 240 739 kilomètres carrés de territoire. Cependant, grâce à la création de l'ONU et au renforcement des interdictions imposées par le droit international, ces chiffres ont enregistré depuis 1948 une baisse spectaculaire, avec une moyenne annuelle de seulement 0,26 conquête portant sur 14 950 kilomètres carrés de territoire. Qui plus est, beaucoup de ces conquêtes et annexions en l'époque moderne n'ont pas été reconnues par les États. Par conséquent, si elle permet encore d'obtenir une victoire militaire, la guerre aboutit rarement à une victoire juridique durable⁴⁰.

C. Qu'entend-on par annexion de facto ?

29. En droit international, on parle communément d'annexion de jure lorsqu'un État revendique officiellement la souveraineté permanente sur un territoire qu'il a acquis par la force aux dépens d'un autre État⁴¹. Par annexion de fait, on décrit généralement les mesures prises par un État pour s'attacher, souvent indirectement et par des mesures progressives, à renforcer un cadre législatif, politique, institutionnel et démographique dont il entend se prévaloir par la suite pour revendiquer la souveraineté sur un territoire acquis par la force ou la guerre, mais sans déclaration officielle d'annexion.

30. Au vu du large consensus international entourant le caractère illicite des annexions, les États expansionnistes désireux d'annexer des territoires ont tout intérêt à occulter la véritable nature de leur projet⁴². En général, ils s'emploient donc assidûment à créer, sur le terrain, une situation irréversible susceptible d'étayer une revendication de souveraineté, remettant à plus tard toute déclaration officielle par crainte de la réaction diplomatique et politique de la communauté internationale. Compte tenu de ce qui précède, le Rapporteur spécial estime que l'interdiction des annexions, notamment s'agissant du territoire palestinien occupé, ne peut être logique et efficace que si le droit international garantit l'interdiction totale des annexions au temps en lui interdisant d'agir dans l'intention d'obtenir des résultats permanents. L'occupation ne confère aucun titre de propriété sur le territoire. Sa gestion s'apparente à un régime de fiducie. Elle est temporaire.

³⁹ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, par. 88 et 155.

⁴⁰ Oona Hathaway et Scott J. Shapiro, The Internationalists: How a Radical Plan to Outlaw War Remade the World (New York : Simon et Schuster, 2017), chap. 13.

⁴¹ Hofmann, « Annexion », par. 1.

⁴² Omar M. Dajani, « Israel's creeping annexation » (2017), American Journal of International Law, vol. n° 111, p. 52.

regard des mesures progressives mais néanmoins concrètes que prennent certains États en violation du droit international humanitaire afin d'ouvrir la voie à une future revendication de souveraineté sur un territoire conquis, occupé ou les deux⁴³.

31. Fort de l'argumentation juridique élaborée par Omar Dajani, le Rapporteur propose d'utiliser les critères ci-après pour déterminer si un État qui se livre à une annexion de fait a franchi la limite au-delà de laquelle son action devient illicite :

a) Contrôle effectif : l'État exerce un contrôle effectif sur le territoire d'un autre État, acquis par la force⁴⁴ ;

b) Exercice de la souveraineté : l'État a pris des mesures concrètes confortant sa présence permanente et sa revendication de souveraineté sur tout ou partie du territoire occupé, ou apporté des modifications proscrites en droit international à la législation locale en y appliquant par exemple ses propres lois, transformé la composition démographique du territoire ou procédé à des transferts de population, prolongé son occupation ou attribué sa citoyenneté aux habitants du territoire⁴⁵ ;

c) Manifestations d'intention : on entend par là notamment les déclarations émanant de hauts responsables politiques ou d'institutions publiques, dans lesquelles est évoquée ou prônée l'annexion permanente du territoire occupé, en partie ou en totalité⁴⁶ ;

d) Droit international et voie indiquée par la communauté internationale : l'État a refusé l'application du droit international, y compris les lois de l'occupant, dans le territoire ou ne suit pas les orientations données par la communauté internationale concernant le statut actuel et futur du territoire⁴⁷.

32. Cet exercice vise à déterminer, au vu des caractéristiques propres à chaque conquête ou occupation particulière, si le comportement de l'État justifie que l'on parle d'annexion et d'infraction au droit à l'autodétermination et aux principes fondamentaux de l'occupation, parmi lesquels son caractère temporaire ainsi que le rapport de tutelle et la bonne foi de la puissance occupante (voir A/72/556). Si tel est le cas, l'État viole l'interdiction internationale de l'annexion de territoire, même s'il n'a pas fait de déclaration officielle à ce sujet.

33. Ayant ce fondement juridique à l'esprit, nous pouvons à présent examiner la conduite d'Israël, Puissance occupante, à l'égard de Jérusalem-Est et de la Cisjordanie.

⁴³ Ibid. p. 53. Si un acte formel d'annexion est une incontestable preuve d'intention, on ne saurait tirer aucune conclusion de l'absence d'un tel acte.

⁴⁴ Ibid. p. 52, ce critère était autrefois utilisé en droit international pour déterminer si une annexion avait eu lieu.

⁴⁵ Ibid. p. 53. A moins d'une déclaration en ce sens, on conçoit difficilement une mesure qui trahirait davantage l'intention d'un État d'annexer un territoire que l'implantation de colonies civiles sur ce dernier. Voir Ben-Naftali, Sfard et Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT.

⁴⁶ Dajani, « Israel's creeping annexation », p. 52, ce critère était autrefois utilisé en droit international pour déterminer si une annexion avait eu lieu. Voir également Shaw, International Law, p. 371: « Intention to annex was a crucial aspect of the equation. ».

⁴⁷ Dajani, ibid., p. 53. Il semblerait que le refus de la puissance occupante de reconnaître l'applicabilité du droit de l'occupation justifie cette conclusion [qu'elle agit en souveraine], de même que son refus de s'acquitter des obligations que lui impose ce droit en ce qui concerne notamment la distinction entre les droits d'une puissance occupante et ceux d'une puissance souveraine.

D. Annexion : le cas de Jérusalem-Est

34. Plusieurs semaines après avoir occupé militairement, entre autres territoires, Jérusalem-Est et la Cisjordanie lors de la guerre de juin 1967, Israël a officiellement commencé d'administrer, en y appliquant sa loi, Jérusalem-Est et 28 villages palestiniens alentours, en Cisjordanie, agrandissant ainsi considérablement la municipalité de Jérusalem. À l'issue de l'annexion de 1967, Israël avait absorbé non seulement Jérusalem-Est (6 400 dounoums), jusqu'alors sous administration jordanienne, mais également 65 000 dounoums en Cisjordanie, qui se sont ajoutés à Jérusalem-Ouest (38 000 dounoums). Par les résolutions 2253 (ES-V) et 2254 (ES-V) de l'Assemblée générale, la communauté internationale a immédiatement et massivement rejeté cette annexion de jure. Refusant de se conformer à ces résolutions, Israël a entrepris de créer, sur le terrain, une situation démographique, structurelle et institutionnelle irréversible en vue d'étayer sa revendication de souveraineté.

35. Par la suite, en juillet 1980, la Knesset israélienne a promulgué la Loi fondamentale, quasi-constitutionnelle, faisant de Jérusalem « entière et unifiée » la capitale d'Israël. Là encore, la communauté internationale a, par l'entremise cette fois du Conseil de sécurité, condamné cette annexion dans les termes les plus énergiques et déclaré que cette loi constituait une violation du droit international et une menace contre la paix et la sécurité. Dans sa résolution 478 (1980), le Conseil de sécurité a considéré en outre que toutes les mesures et dispositions législatives et administratives prises par Israël, la Puissance occupante, qui avaient modifié ou visaient à modifier le caractère et le statut de Jérusalem étaient nulles et non avenues et devaient être rapportées.

36. Dans la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité et la résolution ES-10/19 de l'Assemblée générale, l'ONU a récemment réaffirmé ces déclarations, qui établissent le caractère illicite de l'annexion officielle de Jérusalem-Est par Israël.

37. S'employant à garantir l'irréversibilité de son annexion de jure de Jérusalem-Est, Israël a, pendant le demi-siècle écoulé, étendu sa législation nationale et son autorité civile à la partie occupée de la ville, proclamé sa souveraineté permanente à de multiples occasions, transformé l'aspect physique et le caractère historique de Jérusalem-Est, transféré certaines de ses institutions nationales, dont le Ministère de la justice, et lancé un programme intensif d'implantation et d'extension de colonies israéliennes⁴⁸. Deux tendances en particulier, nées de la volonté d'Israël d'inscrire son annexion de Jérusalem-Est dans la durée, se dessinent clairement.

38. Premièrement, Israël a toujours eu pour politique, depuis 1967, d'installer des colons et de procéder à des manœuvres démographiques afin d'assurer la présence d'une écrasante majorité de Juifs israéliens à Jérusalem. Dès les premiers temps de l'occupation, les responsables israéliens ont officiellement pris, aux niveaux national et municipal, deux orientations pour pérenniser l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est : étendre les limites de la ville afin d'accroître sa capacité d'absorption de colonies juives israéliennes⁴⁹ ; parvenir à un « équilibre démographique » dans la ville, avec 70 % de ⁴⁸ En novembre 2000, le Premier Ministre Ehud Barak a déclaré que le maintien de la souveraineté d'Israël sur Jérusalem et le renforcement de sa majorité juive étaient ses principaux objectifs et que c'était à cette fin qu'Israël avait édifié, dans la partie est de la ville, de vastes quartiers juifs comptant 180 000 habitants, ainsi que de grandes colonies en périphérie de Jérusalem, telles que la ville de Maalé Adoumim et Giv'at Ze'ev. Voir : <http://mfa.gov.il/MFA/PressRoom/2000/Pages/Address%20by%20PM%20Barak%20on%20the%20Fifth%20Anniversary%20of%20th.aspx>.

⁴⁹ Bimkom – Planners for Planning Rights, Trapped by Planning: Israeli Policy, Planning and Development in the Palestinian Neighbourhoods of East Jerusalem (2014).

Juifs israéliens et 30 % de Palestiniens⁵⁰. Ils ont rajouté à ces deux orientations une troisième, dans les années 2000 : empêcher la mise en place d'institutions nationales palestiniennes à Jérusalem afin de tempérer les ardeurs nationalistes palestiniennes. Malgré tous ses efforts, Israël n'est pas entièrement parvenu à ses fins. Aucun État n'a officiellement reconnu comme légitime la revendication de souveraineté d'Israël sur Jérusalem-Est. D'un point de vue démographique, Jérusalem comptait en 2016 38 % de Palestiniens contre 28 % en 1980⁵¹. Une enquête de 2018 indique en outre que 97 % des résidents palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est sont fermement opposés à l'idée selon laquelle Israël devrait maintenir son annexion de Jérusalem-Est⁵². Et pourtant, depuis 1967, Israël a pris, pour appuyer sa revendication de souveraineté sur Jérusalem-Est, plusieurs mesures importantes détaillées ci-après.

39. Depuis 1967, 15 implantations juives israéliennes officielles, comptant en tout 210 000 colons, ont été construites à l'intérieur des frontières élargies de Jérusalem-Est et elles constituent une violation grave du droit international humanitaire⁵³. L'objectif est que le nombre de colons devienne tel qu'aucun Gouvernement israélien ne puisse sur le plan politique s'opposer à leur présence ou les déloger. Outre le mur de séparation et les implantations israéliennes situées aux alentours, non loin derrière les frontières municipales actuelles, l'établissement de ces colonies a eu pour effet d'amputer la Cisjordanie de Jérusalem-Est, où bat le cœur de la vie palestinienne, distendant ainsi considérablement tout lien d'interdépendance économique, sociale, familiale et politique entre les deux territoires⁵⁴. Récemment, la municipalité de Jérusalem a autorisé des colons israéliens à exproprier des Palestiniens des quartiers de Cheik Jarrah et de Silwan, entraînant fréquemment des frictions et des violences⁵⁵.

40. Les lois et l'autorité nationale israéliennes s'appliquent dans l'ensemble de Jérusalem-Est, tout en introduisant une discrimination systématique à l'égard des habitants palestiniens⁵⁶, comme pour ce qui a trait à l'urbanisme⁵⁷. Depuis 1967, Israël a exproprié plus de 38 % des terrains de Jérusalem-Est afin d'y construire uniquement des implantations et n'en a réservé que 15 %, soit 8,5 % de la superficie totale de la ville, à la construction de logements destinés aux Palestiniens. Il en a résulté une crise du logement et de l'urbanisme : seuls 8 % de l'ensemble des permis de construire délivrés par la municipalité de Jérusalem le sont pour des quartiers palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est, alors que la densité démographique des quartiers palestiniens est deux fois plus élevée que celle des quartiers israéliens⁵⁸. Selon l'Association for Civil Rights in Israel, les autorités chargées de l'urbanisme au niveau local et national n'ont pas présenté un seul avant-projet pour les quartiers palestiniens ces 10 dernières ⁵⁰ B'Tselem, A Policy of Discrimination: Land Expropriation, Planning and Building in East Jerusalem (1995).

⁵¹ Jerusalem Institute for Policy Research, Statistical Yearbook of Jerusalem, n° 32 (2018), tableau III/4.

⁵² Udi Shaham, « Poll: 97% of east J'lem residents oppose Israeli control over entire city », Jerusalem Post, 11 mai 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://www.jpost.com/Arab-Israeli-Conflict/Poll-97-percent-of-east-Jlem-residents-oppose-Israeli-control-over-entire-city-556147>.

⁵³ Résolution 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁵⁴ Voir www.btselem.org/jerusalem.

⁵⁵ Civic Coalition for Palestinian Rights in Jerusalem, Forced Eviction in Occupied East Jerusalem (à paraître).

⁵⁶ Voir Society of St. Yves, Everyone Pays the Price: Case Study of Jerusalem (2017).

⁵⁷ Bimkom, Trapped by Planning.

⁵⁸ Voir www.btselem.org/jerusalem. La densité mesurée correspond au nombre moyen de personnes par pièce pour chaque population.

années, ce qui a conduit à un gel des constructions⁵⁹. Conséquence inquiétante de cette discrimination en matière d'urbanisme, les autorités israéliennes ont ordonné, ces 10 dernières années, la démolition de plusieurs centaines d'habitations palestiniennes construites sans le permis requis, dont l'obtention est pratiquement impossible : 123 habitations ont ainsi été démolies en 2016, et plus de 15 000 logements abritant 100 000 Palestiniens, soit un tiers de la population palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est, sont menacés de destruction⁶⁰. Par ailleurs, beaucoup de Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est ne peuvent pas faire enregistrer les terrains qu'ils possèdent par les autorités nationales, ce qui les met en situation d'insécurité foncière et fait baisser la valeur de leur bien⁶¹. Cette crise de l'urbanisme tient en partie à la négligence dont la municipalité de Jérusalem fait depuis longtemps preuve à l'égard des quartiers palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est, qui enregistrent des taux de pauvreté nettement plus élevés qu'à Jérusalem-Ouest, se voient allouer une part bien moindre du budget municipal, doivent se satisfaire de services sociaux et de services de santé de piètre qualité et pâtissent du délabrement de leurs infrastructures publiques⁶². Bien que Jérusalem-Est ait été annexée de force par Israël, ses habitants palestiniens demeurent exclus de la relative prospérité du reste de la ville.

41. En outre, la loi israélienne confère à presque tous les Palestiniens de Jérusalem le statut de « résidents permanents », au même titre que les ressortissants étrangers résidant en Israël. Les résidents permanents palestiniens paient des impôts et ont droit aux mêmes prestations sociales et services publics que les citoyens israéliens, mais aucun droit ne leur garantit, comme à ces derniers, la possibilité de demeurer à Jérusalem. Si les Palestiniens de Jérusalem sont des « personnes protégées » au regard du droit de l'occupation, Israël ne leur reconnaît pas ce statut. Depuis 1967, plus de 14 500 Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est ont été déchus de leur statut de résident. Depuis 1995, les résidents palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est doivent prouver que leur « centre de vie » est dans la ville pour conserver leur statut de résident permanent. À défaut, ils risquent de le perdre et de ne plus pouvoir retourner dans leurs résidences à Jérusalem-Est. Sans statut de résident permanent, les Palestiniens vivant dans d'autres parties du Territoire palestinien occupé ne peuvent pas légalement résider à Jérusalem, ni même s'y rendre temporairement. De plus, la loi israélienne restreint drastiquement le droit au regroupement familial en empêchant de nombreux Palestiniens de Jérusalem d'étendre leur statut de résident permanent à leur conjoint et à leurs enfants, lesquels ne sont pas reconnus comme résidents de la ville⁶³.

42. L'autre tendance notable est la posture plus agressive qu'adoptent depuis plusieurs années les dirigeants politiques israéliens pour contrer la croissance démographique palestinienne à Jérusalem-Est et étayer la revendication de souveraineté d'Israël sur Jérusalem-Est. Elle a pris deux formes. Premièrement, le mur érigé dans les années 2000 autour de Jérusalem a été tracé délibérément de ⁵⁹ Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « East Jerusalem: facts and figures 2017 », 21 mai 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://law.acri.org.il/en/2017/05/24/east-jerusalem-facts-and-figures-2017/>.

⁶⁰ Ir Amim et Bimkom – Planners for Planning Rights, Deliberately Planned: A Policy to Thwart Planning in the Palestinian Neighbourhoods of Jerusalem (2017).

⁶¹ « East Jerusalem is the double-edged sword of Israel's capital », Haaretz, 10 avril 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/opinion/editorial/east-jerusalem-is-the-double-edged-sword-of-israel-s-capital-1.5988771.

⁶² CNUCED, L'économie palestinienne de Jérusalem-Est : Face à l'annexion, à l'isolement et au risque de désintégration, CNUCED/GDS/APP/2012/2 (New York et Genève, 2013).

⁶³ Civic Coalition for Palestinian Rights in Jerusalem, Israel's Occupation: 50 Years and Counting (2018).

manière à placer un certain nombre de quartiers palestiniens du côté cisjordanien. Deuxièmement, la Knesset a adopté plusieurs textes de loi et examine d'autres propositions législatives visant à rendre irréversible l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est.

43. Le mur, dont Israël affirme qu'il a vocation à être une barrière de sécurité mais qui, en maints endroits, avance profondément dans le territoire occupé, ne longe pas les frontières élargies de la municipalité de Jérusalem. Il a permis d'absorber une partie du territoire de la Cisjordanie situé aux alentours de Jérusalem tout en mettant unilatéralement de côté plusieurs grands quartiers palestiniens de la ville, tels que Kafr Aqab et Chouafat. Les Palestiniens de Jérusalem vivant au-delà du mur, dont le nombre oscille entre 120 000 et 140 000, vivent encore officiellement à Jérusalem, conservent leur statut de « résident permanent », continuent de verser des impôts à la municipalité et certains, travaillant à Jérusalem, doivent franchir les postes de contrôle israéliens pour entrer dans la ville⁶⁴. Toutefois, les autorités israéliennes ont largement abandonné ces quartiers. Même comparés aux quartiers palestiniens que le mur n'a pas exclus mais où les services municipaux sont négligeables, ces quartiers sont presque entièrement livrés à eux-mêmes : leurs habitants sont privés de services sociaux et d'infrastructures de base tels que la distribution de l'eau, le ramassage des déchets, la construction de routes et le traitement des eaux usées ; les écoles et les organismes d'aide sociale font cruellement défaut ; le taux de criminalité y demeure élevé ; ils souffrent d'une pénurie de logements et de la surpopulation et, faute d'un système efficace d'octroi de permis, presque tous les bâtiments y sont construits sans autorisation officielle⁶⁵. Le Ministre des affaires de Jérusalem au Gouvernement israélien, Ze'ev Elkin, a proposé en octobre 2017 que les quartiers palestiniens détachés ne fassent plus partie de la municipalité de Jérusalem et soient administrés par un nouveau conseil⁶⁶. Force est de conclure que le tracé du mur de séparation autour de Jérusalem, en incluant toutes les implantations israéliennes de Jérusalem-Est et plusieurs colonies environnantes de Cisjordanie, tout en excluant environ un tiers des Palestiniens de Jérusalem, obéit à des considérations d'ordre démographique, afin de maximiser la population israélienne à Jérusalem et d'y réduire sensiblement la présence palestinienne⁶⁷.

44. Plusieurs initiatives législatives ont récemment vu le jour à la Knesset pour consolider la souveraineté israélienne sur Jérusalem-Est et rétablir l'« équilibre démographique » de la ville⁶⁸. Deux d'entre elles qui se distinguent en particulier sont décrites ci-après.

45. Loi fondamentale faisant de Jérusalem la capitale d'Israël. En janvier 2018, la Knesset a modifié cette loi de sorte que toute proposition émise dans le cadre de négociations sur le statut final de la ville en vue de transférer « à une entité étrangère » l'autorité sur le territoire de Jérusalem ne puisse être autorisée que si elle est approuvée par une majorité qualifiée de 80 de ses 120 députés (la Loi fondamentale ⁶⁴ Association for Civil Rights in Israel, « East Jerusalem: facts and figures 2017 ».

⁶⁵ Rachel Kushner, « 'We are orphans here': life and death in East Jerusalem's Palestinian refugee camp », New York Times, 1^{er} décembre 2016. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.nytimes.com/2016/12/01/magazine/we-are-orphans-here.html.

⁶⁶ Nir Hasson et Jonathan Lis, « Israeli Minister to push plan aimed at reducing number of Arabs in Jerusalem », Haaretz, 29 octobre 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/premium-israeli-minister-proposes-plan-to-reduce-number-of-arabs-in-jerusalem-1.5461071.

⁶⁷ Al-Haq, « A legal analysis of bills and legislation to revoke the permanent residencies of Palestinians and alter the status of Jerusalem », avis juridique, 7 mars 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.alhaq.org/en/wp-content/uploads/2018/03/LegalBriefJerusalem.pdf.

⁶⁸ Ir Amim, « Destructive unilateral measures to redraw the borders of Jerusalem » (janvier 2018).

disposait jusqu'alors qu'une majorité simple suffisait). Outre qu'il compliquerait l'obtention de l'appui de la Knesset à un éventuel accord de paix reconnaissant la souveraineté palestinienne sur Jérusalem-Est, ce changement permet de redessiner en toute légalité les frontières administratives de Jérusalem de façon à en exclure les quartiers palestiniens détachés, situés du côté cisjordanien du mur.

46. Le projet de loi sur le « Grand Jérusalem ». Tout au long de 2017, la Knesset a examiné une proposition de loi visant à rattacher à Jérusalem cinq colonies israéliennes de Cisjordanie (Beitar Elit, Maalé Adoumim, Giv'at Ze'ev, Gush Etzion et Efrat), qui deviendraient alors des sous-municipalités de la ville tout en conservant leur autonomie locale. L'annexion « souple » prévue dans ce projet de loi aurait accru de 120 000 colons israéliens la population de Jérusalem, renforçant ainsi la majorité juive de la ville. Ce projet de loi avait le soutien du député Yoav Kish (Likoud), lequel estimait qu'il « affaiblirait l'emprise arabe sur la capitale » et « consacrerait la majorité juive »⁶⁹. Son examen a été repoussé par le Premier Ministre israélien, au motif qu'il fallait « coordonner » avec les États-Unis d'Amérique le programme législatif sur ce texte⁷⁰.

47. Au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport, le village bédouin palestinien de Khan el-Ahmar, situé en Cisjordanie, à l'est de Jérusalem, risque d'être démoli par les autorités israéliennes. D'après le Rapporteur spécial et d'autres, l'expulsion des habitants de Khan el-Ahmar qui s'ensuivrait se solderait inmanquablement par un transfert forcé, qui constitue un crime de guerre en droit international⁷¹. La destruction de ce village viserait notamment à déloger les habitants palestiniens de la zone de 12 kilomètres carrés connue sous le nom de « couloir E1 », ce qui permettrait d'assurer la continuité territoriale entre Jérusalem et la grande colonie de Maalé Adoumim, en Cisjordanie. La concrétisation de projets d'aménagement de longue date consistant à construire dans cette zone davantage de colonies israéliennes permettrait à Israël d'atteindre plusieurs objectifs d'annexion : a) renforcer sa souveraineté territoriale et sa domination démographique dans le Grand Jérusalem ; b) porter atteinte à la contiguïté territoriale de la Cisjordanie en achevant de séparer sa partie nord de sa partie sud, éteignant ainsi la faible lueur d'espoir que suscite encore la perspective d'une solution des deux États viable ; c) isoler plus avant les quartiers palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est de la Cisjordanie⁷².

⁶⁹ Yossi Verter, « Israeli ministers set to vote annexing West Bank settlements to Jerusalem », Haaretz, 26 octobre 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/ministers-to-vote-on-annexing-west-bank-settlements-to-jerusalem-1.5460310.

⁷⁰ Jonathan Lis et Amir Tibon, « Netanyahu: Israel must coordinate Jerusalem annexation bill with U.S », Haaretz, 29 octobre 2017.

⁷¹ Amnesty International, « Israel/OPT: demolition of Palestinian village of Khan al-Ahmar is cruel blow and war crime », 30 septembre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.amnesty.ca/news/israelopt-demolition-palestinian-village-khan-al-ahmar-cruel-blow-and-war-crime ; Noa Landau, « European Parliament warns: eviction, demolition of Khan al-Ahmar would be war crime », Haaretz, 13 septembre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://www.haaretz.com/israel-news/premium-european-parliament-warns- eviction-demolition-of-khan-al-ahmar-would-be-war-crime-1.6469916>.

⁷² Zena Agha, « Israel's annexation crusade in Jerusalem: the role of Ma'ale Adumim and the E1 corridor », Al-Shabaka, 26 mars 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://al-shabaka.org/briefs/israels-annexation-crusade-in-jerusalem-the-role-of-maale-adumim-and-the-e1-corridor/>.

E. L'annexion et la Cisjordanie

48. Israël n'a pas encore officiellement déclaré avoir annexé quelque partie que ce soit de la Cisjordanie occupée, étant donné qu'une telle proclamation ne bénéficierait actuellement d'aucun appui politique sur le plan international⁷³. Face au reste du monde, Israël se dit toujours disposé à négocier avec les Palestiniens le statut futur de la Cisjordanie, tout en niant que le territoire qu'il désigne sous le nom de « Judée-Samarie » soit occupé et en rejetant l'applicabilité de la quatrième Convention de Genève⁷⁴. En pratique, cependant, peu de temps après le début de l'occupation en juin 1967, Israël a commencé à prendre de nombreuses mesures allant dans le sens d'une revendication de souveraineté sur la Cisjordanie, qui se sont considérablement intensifiées ces dernières années.

49. Les premières implantations civiles israéliennes en Cisjordanie, qui avaient initialement l'apparence de camps militaires, ont été établies dans le courant de l'été 1967⁷⁵. Depuis, Israël a construit et incité à construire environ 230 implantations en Cisjordanie, où vivent plus de 400 000 colons. Aucun pays ne crée d'implantations civiles dans un territoire occupé sans avoir de visées annexionnistes. La communauté internationale a donc qualifié ces pratiques de crimes de guerre⁷⁶. Les activités israéliennes de peuplement ont toujours visé à établir sur le terrain une situation de souveraineté irréversible et à faire obstacle à l'autodétermination des Palestiniens. D'après le plan Drobles de 1978, dans lequel était formulée la raison d'être des activités d'implantation, qui n'en étaient alors qu'à leurs débuts, les terres domaniales et les terres non cultivées devaient être immédiatement saisies afin d'établir des implantations entre les zones dans lesquelles la population minoritaire [c'est-à-dire, les Palestiniens de Cisjordanie] était concentrée et aux alentours, afin de réduire au minimum les possibilités d'édification d'un autre État arabe dans ces régions⁷⁷.

50. Pendant un demi-siècle d'occupation, Israël n'a cessé de renforcer sa présence souveraine dans l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie⁷⁸. Les infrastructures du territoire – les égouts, les systèmes de communication et le réseau électrique – ont été complètement intégrées au système national israélien. Le système hydrologique de la Cisjordanie, doté d'abondants aquifères montagneux, est depuis 1982 la propriété de Mekorot, compagnie nationale des eaux, et profite principalement à Israël⁷⁹. Le réseau routier qui, avant 1967, reliait principalement le nord et le sud, a été transformé en système d'est en ouest pour relier les colonies entre elles ainsi qu'avec les villes israéliennes, perturbant ainsi les transports palestiniens⁸⁰. L'économie de la Cisjordanie fait l'objet d'un seul accord d'union douanière avec Israël, ce qui permet à l'économie la plus puissante des deux de dominer et de prospérer, tandis que l'autre se détériore du fait ⁷³ Noa Landau et al., « White House strongly denies as "false" Netanyahu's claims of talks with U.S. on annexing West Bank settlements », Haaretz, 12 février 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-netanyahu-settlement-annexation-being-discussed-with-u-s-1.5810741.

⁷⁴ Voir www.mfa.gov.il/mfa/foreignpolicy/peace/guide/pages/israeli%20settlements%20and%20international%20law.aspx.

⁷⁵ Idith Zertak et Akiva Eldar, Lords of the Land: The War over Israel's Settlements in the Occupied Territories, 1967-2007 (New York, Nation Books, 2007).

⁷⁶ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, art. 8 2) b) viii).

⁷⁷ David Kretzmer, « Settlements in the Supreme Court of Israel » (2017), American Journal of International Law, vol. 111 (2017), p. 42.

⁷⁸ « Regularization law », in Ben-Naftali, Sfard et Viterbo, The ABC of OPT.

⁷⁹ Voir www.btselem.org/water.

⁸⁰ Dajani, « Israel's creeping annexation », p. 54.

de la régression du développement et de la dépendance⁸¹. Les ressources naturelles de la Cisjordanie sont en grande partie contrôlées par Israël et principalement exploitées dans l'intérêt de ce dernier⁸². Les lois israéliennes ont été étendues par le commandement militaire israélien aux colons de Cisjordanie au cas par cas ou par zone, tandis qu'une version dénaturée du droit d'occupation, privée de bon nombre de ses protections et garanties, s'applique aux Palestiniens⁸³. En Cisjordanie, les « terres domaniales » affectées à différents usages ont été attribuées presque exclusivement à des colons israéliens (dans 99,76 % des cas), bien que ceux-ci ne représentent que 12 % de la population de la Cisjordanie⁸⁴.

51. Surtout, Israël contrôle intégralement, sur les plans civil et de la sécurité, la zone C de la Cisjordanie, qui représente plus de 60 % du territoire. Vestige du processus d'Oslo aujourd'hui caduc, la zone C est administrée par Israël qui en a fait l'assise territoriale de ses implantations de Cisjordanie. La Banque mondiale a noté que 68 % de la zone C sont affectés aux implantations israéliennes, 21 % à des zones militaires d'accès réglementé et 9 % à des réserves naturelles⁸⁵. Dans le 1 % qui reste aux Palestiniens, dont le nombre s'échelonne de 180 000 à 300 000, l'Administration civile israélienne a imposé un régime de planification très restrictif qui rend pratiquement impossible l'obtention d'un permis de construire à des fins résidentielles ou commerciales⁸⁶. Si les colons israéliens jouissent des mêmes droits et libertés économiques que les Israéliens vivant en Israël, les Palestiniens de la zone C souffrent d'une pénurie d'infrastructures collectives essentielles, d'une économie au bord de l'asphyxie, de l'omniprésence de postes de contrôle militaires, de restrictions d'accès à leurs ressources naturelles et du rejet systématique de la presque totalité des plans directeurs présentés⁸⁷, autant de facteurs qui, d'après l'ONU, s'apparentent à un climat coercitif contraignant les Palestiniens à partir⁸⁸. Depuis la modification en 2015 d'une ordonnance militaire de 2003 portant sur les constructions non autorisées, le chef du commandement central peut expulser de la zone C des communautés palestiniennes entières sans même avoir à obtenir d'ordre de démolition pour chaque structure, comme cela était auparavant nécessaire⁸⁹.

52. Auparavant qualifiée de « latente » par les organisations de la société civile, l'annexion israélienne de la Cisjordanie est décrite maintenant comme « avançant à ⁸¹ CNUCED, « Rapport sur l'assistance de la CNUCED au peuple palestinien : évolution de l'économie du Territoire palestinien occupé », TD/B/64/4, septembre 2017.

⁸² Shawan Jabarin, « Business and human rights in Palestine: a case study on the illegal exploitation of Palestinian natural resources », Al-Haq, 30 janvier 2014.

⁸³ Yehuda et al., One Rule, Two Legal Systems: Israel's Regime of Laws in the West Bank (Association for Civil Rights in Israel, 2014).

⁸⁴ Americans for Peace Now, « Land Allocation in the West Bank – For Israelis Only », juillet 2018.

⁸⁵ Banque mondiale, West Bank and Gaza: Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Washington, D.C., 2013).

⁸⁶ Voir www.btselem.org/topic/planning_and_building.

⁸⁷ Ahmad El-Atrash, « Israel's stranglehold on Area C: development as resistance », Al-Shabaka, 27 septembre 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://al-shabaka.org/commentaries/israels-stranglehold-on-area-c-development-as-resistance/>.

⁸⁸ Tovah Lazaroff, « UN: Israel policies forcing Palestinians to leave Area C of the West Bank », Jerusalem Post, 27 juillet 2016. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.jpost.com/Arab-Israeli-Conflict/UN-Israel-policies-forcing-Palestinians-to-leave-Area-C-of-the-West-Bank-462569.

⁸⁹ Peace Now (Settlement Watch), « Mentality of annexation: changes in the interpretation of the laws regarding occupation », janvier 2018.

grands bords »⁹⁰ et comme une « annexion-occupation »⁹¹. Les dirigeants politiques israéliens considèrent que la conjoncture internationale actuelle – et en particulier leurs relations avec le Gouvernement en place aux États-Unis – favorise leur ambition de consolider leur mainmise permanente sur la Cisjordanie, malgré l'absence de soutien en faveur d'une annexion officielle. Les mesures législatives d'annexion indirecte se sont par conséquent multipliées depuis le début de l'année 2017, ce qui semble établir le fondement de lois à venir qui institueraient une annexion pure et simple. Dans un récent éditorial, Ha'aretz, le plus grand quotidien progressiste israélien, a déclaré que le Gouvernement procédait à une annexion sur le plan juridique en faisant appliquer, depuis peu, de plus en plus de lois de la Knesset en Cisjordanie, tout en gommant la Ligne verte, instituant ainsi deux systèmes juridiques différents et inégaux pour les deux peuples vivant sur le territoire. Il énonçait que ce phénomène avait un nom et qu'Israël ne pourrait plus réfuter la réalité et nier devant la communauté internationale qu'il était un État d'apartheid, avec tout ce que cela impliquait⁹².

53. Ces deux dernières années, la Knesset israélienne a adopté ou examiné un certain nombre de lois qui étendent le droit israélien à la Cisjordanie ou établissent les fondements d'une future annexion sous une forme ou une autre⁹³. On trouvera ci-après certains des principaux textes ou projets de loi et autres mesures qui témoignent de cette tendance récente de la législation.

54. La loi sur la régularisation des implantations de « Judée-Samarie » permet de légaliser a posteriori des avant-postes construits sur des terres palestiniennes appartenant à des particuliers. Elle accorde des indemnités aux propriétaires palestiniens mais les prive de tout droit à la restitution de leurs biens. Adoptée par la Knesset en février 2017, son application a été retardée dans l'attente de l'issue qui sera donnée à une requête déposée devant la Haute Cour de justice israélienne par des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme qui en ont contesté la légalité. Devant la Haute Cour de justice, le Gouvernement israélien a fait valoir que la Knesset n'était pas soumise au droit international et que les lois à appliquer dans le territoire palestinien occupé émanaient d'elle. Malgré son opposition à cette loi, le Procureur général israélien a déclaré que les lois existantes permettaient déjà de légaliser les constructions israéliennes établies sur des terres palestiniennes appartenant à des particuliers en Cisjordanie (voir A/HRC/37/43, par. 16 et 17).

55. La loi sur l'enseignement supérieur étend la compétence du Conseil israélien de l'enseignement supérieur, qui régit les établissements d'enseignement supérieur israéliens, aux établissements universitaires des implantations de Cisjordanie. Il accorde ainsi à ces établissements (notamment, l'Université d'Ariel, située dans la colonie d'Ariel) le même statut qu'à toutes les autres universités israéliennes. Cette loi, promulguée en février 2018, est un exemple de l'application directe du droit interne israélien au territoire occupé, ce qui est pourtant interdit en droit international et constitue un pas manifeste vers l'annexion.

⁹⁰ Americans for Peace Now, « From creeping to leaping: annexation in the Trump-Netanyahu era », avril 2018.

⁹¹ 11.11.11, « Occup'annexation: the shift from occupation to annexation in Palestine », Bruxelles, 2017.

⁹² « The Knesset wants apartheid », Haaretz, 1^{er} juin 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/opinion/editorial/the-knesset-wants-apartheid-1.6137367.

⁹³ Foundation for Middle East Peace, « Israel's "Creeping Annexation" Policies – Tables » (septembre 2018) donne un précieux aperçu des mesures d'annexion récentes prises par la Knesset. Voir également : <https://goo.gl/c9DK3L>.

56. La loi sur l'État-nation juif est une loi fondamentale quasi-constitutionnelle, ce qui signifie qu'elle a la primauté sur la législation ordinaire de la Knesset. Adoptée en juillet 2018, elle dispose que seul le peuple juif a droit à l'autodétermination en Israël. L'une des grandes préoccupations que suscite la nouvelle loi fondamentale, du fait de l'emploi de l'expression « terre d'Israël », tient au fait qu'elle pourrait être appliquée à Jérusalem-Est et à la Cisjordanie pour justifier la protection des implantations israéliennes et les autres tendances à l'annexion. L'article 7 de la Loi fondamentale dispose que l'État considère le développement d'implantations juives comme un principe national et s'emploiera à favoriser et promouvoir leur mise en place et leur consolidation.

57. La loi (modifiée) sur les tribunaux administratifs, adoptée en juillet 2018, a pour effet d'étendre la compétence du Tribunal administratif israélien afin que celui-ci soit investi de vastes pouvoirs lui permettant de statuer sur les requêtes de multiples et diverses natures déposées par des Palestiniens de Cisjordanie, portant notamment sur les questions de planification et de construction dans la zone C, l'interdiction faite à des individus de pénétrer dans certaines zones de la Cisjordanie et la délivrance de permis de voyage. La Haute Cour de justice israélienne n'est ainsi plus compétente pour ces questions. Il est principalement reproché à cette modification de la loi d'étendre à la zone C la compétence d'un tribunal de droit interne israélien et de constituer ainsi une autre avancée dans l'extension progressive de la législation israélienne à la Cisjordanie occupée.

58. La direction politique israélienne hésite beaucoup moins, depuis deux ans, à dire haut et fort ce que les actions du Gouvernement israélien signalent déjà depuis des années. L'annexion est dans l'air, et les intentions sont maintenant clairement exprimées par des paroles autant que par des actes. La décision, adoptée à l'unanimité le 31 décembre 2017 par les 1 000 membres du comité central du Likoud, le parti au pouvoir, d'appuyer une résolution non contraignante visant à annexer officiellement la Cisjordanie témoigne parfaitement de l'évolution de la situation. Dans cette résolution, les élus du Likoud sont appelés à permettre la libre construction et à appliquer les lois d'Israël et sa souveraineté à toutes les zones des implantations juives libérées en Judée-Samarie⁹⁴. De plus, ces derniers mois, plusieurs ministres du Gouvernement israélien ont ouvertement exprimé leur adhésion à l'annexion officielle de tout ou partie de la Cisjordanie :

- Le Premier Ministre, Benjamin Nétanyahou : Ceci est la terre de nos pères, c'est notre terre. Nous sommes ici pour y rester indéfiniment. Il n'y aura pas de déracinement de populations sur la terre d'Israël⁹⁵.
- Le Ministre de la technologie, Ofir Akunis : La terre d'Israël nous appartient dans son intégralité, et ne peut être contestée ou divisée. La notion de « blocs de colonies » n'est plus d'actualité car il n'y a pas plus d'Arabes avec qui négocier⁹⁶.

⁹⁴ Chaim Levinson, « Netanyahu's party votes to annex West Bank, increase settlements », Haaretz, 1^{er} janvier 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-netanyahu-s-party-votes-to-annex-west-bank-increase-settlements-1.5630099.

⁹⁵ Breaking Israel News, « Netanyahu: Israel will stay in Judea and Samaria forever », 29 août 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.breakingisraelnews.com/93927/netanyahu-israel-will-stay-judea-samaria-forever/.

⁹⁶ Peter Beaumont, « On a rocky ridge over Ramallah, settlers put their faith in Trump », The Guardian, 11 février 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.theguardian.com/world/2017/feb/12/israel-settlers-put-their-faith-in-trump-netanyahu-visit-white-house.

- Le Ministre de l'éducation, Naftali Bennett : Aujourd'hui, la Knesset israélienne a cessé de viser la création d'un État palestinien et envisage désormais la souveraineté en Judée-Samarie ... Le projet de loi de régularisation des avant-postes n'est que la partie visible des efforts visant à établir cette souveraineté⁹⁷.
- Le Ministre des transports, Yisrael Katz : Aujourd'hui, je vais proposer au cabinet de sécurité d'adopter « la loi sur le grand Jérusalem », qui consiste notamment à étendre la souveraineté israélienne aux communautés voisines du grand Jérusalem : Maalé Adoumim, Giv'at Ze'ev, Beitar Elit et Gush Etzion, en les associant à la ville de Jérusalem et en la renforçant par l'ajout de territoire et de population juive⁹⁸.
- Le Ministre de la justice, Ayelet Shaked : Je pense que nous devrions appliquer la loi israélienne aux villes et villages [implantations] israéliens, et y normaliser la vie, et à long terme, appliquer le droit israélien dans la zone C de la Cisjordanie occupée, qui compte un demi-million d'Israéliens [des colons] et 100 000 Palestiniens ; ils seront citoyens à part entière, bien sûr, comme moi-même. Et les zones A et B feront partie d'une confédération avec Gaza, avec la Jordanie⁹⁹.
- Le Ministre de la sécurité publique, Gilad Erdan : Le moment est maintenant venu d'étendre la souveraineté à des zones dont il est établi qu'elles continueront à appartenir à Israël dans un accord sur le statut final¹⁰⁰.
- Le Ministre chargé des affaires de Jérusalem, Ze'ev Elkin : Khalas [« assez » en arabe] de l'histoire des deux États. L'État d'Israël est la seule possibilité ; assurément entre le Jourdain et la Méditerranée, il y aura un seul État¹⁰¹.
- Le Vice-Ministre de la défense, Eli Ben-Dahan : Nous devons nous concentrer sur l'essentiel. Nous sommes en Judée-Samarie, car c'est notre terre et nous sommes ici pour ne jamais en partir. La souveraineté doit s'appliquer en Judée-Samarie dès que possible¹⁰².

⁹⁷ Jewish Link of New Jersey, « Jewish Home's Bennett Says Outpost Bill Paves Way for Annexation of Judea and Samaria », 8 décembre 2016. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.jewishlinknj.com/world-us/16063-jewish-home-s-bennett-says-outpost-bill-paves-way-for-annexation-of-judea-and-samaria.

⁹⁸ Times of Israel, « Challenging Netanyahu, senior minister floats annexation of Jerusalem-area settlements », 22 janvier 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.timesofisrael.com/challenging-netanyahu-senior-minister-floats-annexation-of-jerusalem-area-settlements/.

⁹⁹ Entretien avec Ayelet Shaked, Ministre de la justice israélien, AIPAC Policy Conference, Washington, D.C., 7 mars 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <http://hamodia.com/2018/03/07/exclusive-interview-justice-minister-ayelet-shaked/>.

¹⁰⁰ Marissa Newman, « Build in settlements to punish Palestinians, top minister urges », Times of Israel, 13 février 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.timesofisrael.com/build-in-settlements-to-punish-palestinians-top-minister-urges/?link_id=12&can_id=beb87055f757f06618a29df863283e75&source=email-what-were-reading-what-to-expect-from-the-netanyahu-trump-meeting&email_referrer=what-were-reading-what-to-expect-from-the-netanyahu-trump-meeting&email_subject=what-were-reading-what-to-expect-from-the-netanyahu-trump-meeting.

¹⁰¹ Tovah Lazaroff, « Elkin: start preparing for one million settlers in the West Bank », Jerusalem Post, 14 novembre 2017. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.jpost.com/Israel-News/Elkin-Start-preparing-for-one-million-settlers-in-the-West-Bank-514251.

¹⁰² Israel National News, « The quiet war against terrorism continues », 30 mai 2002. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/24370.

- Le Ministre du logement, Yoav Galant : D'un point de vue stratégique, la vallée du Jourdain est la zone de sécurité à l'est de l'État d'Israël ; la région montagneuse est la zone d'attente, et Jérusalem-Ashdod-Hadera et Dan le lieu de vie essentiel de plus de 5 millions d'Israéliens ... nous devons continuer à contrôler entièrement Yehouda, Shomron et la vallée du Jourdain et à renforcer les implantations de ces régions¹⁰³.

59. Ces déclarations d'intention politique, ainsi que la réalité de la colonisation d'Israël sur le terrain, ses activités législatives, et son refus de se plier aux obligations solennelles qui lui incombent au regard du droit international ou de se conformer à la volonté de la communauté internationale en ce qui concerne ses 51 ans d'occupation, apportent la preuve qu'Israël a effectivement annexé une part importante de la Cisjordanie et traite ce territoire comme le sien. Bien qu'Israël n'ait pas encore officiellement déclaré sa souveraineté sur quelque partie que ce soit de la Cisjordanie, le Rapporteur spécial considère que la stricte interdiction de l'annexion en droit international ne s'applique pas seulement à une déclaration officielle, mais aussi aux actes d'appropriation territoriale d'Israël, qui concourent aux efforts de celui-ci visant à revendiquer officiellement à l'avenir la souveraineté sur le territoire palestinien occupé.

IV. Conclusion

60. La maxime ex turpi causa non oritur actio est l'un des principes fondamentaux du droit international moderne : la personne qui enfreint la loi ne peut tirer profit d'un acte illicite¹⁰⁴. En 1967, puis de nouveau en 1980, la communauté internationale a déclaré sans équivoque que l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est par Israël était contraire au droit international et nulle et non avenue¹⁰⁵. Elle s'est également exprimée de façon décisive sur le caractère illicite des activités de peuplement d'Israël¹⁰⁶, moteur politique et démographique par lequel il transforme en annexion son occupation. Malgré ces condamnations répétées des activités annexionnistes d'Israël, la communauté internationale n'a pris aucune mesure véritable pour amener celui-ci à rendre compte de ses actes. Bien qu'Israël n'ait pas suivi les injonctions de la communauté internationale, il a rarement eu à en payer véritablement le prix et sa volonté de pérenniser ses ambitions annexionnistes à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie ne s'est heurtée à pratiquement aucun frein. Ce n'est pas le manque de clarté du droit international, mais la réticence de la communauté internationale à faire appliquer ce qu'elle a proclamé, qui est au cœur du problème, dans ce conflit. Comme l'a déclaré un universitaire, le problème ne tient pas au droit international en tant que tel, mais au fait qu'il ne soit pas appliqué ; et au fait qu'au Moyen-Orient, le droit international est plus proche du pouvoir que de la justice¹⁰⁷. La meilleure façon de réfuter cette ¹⁰³ The Yeshiva World, « Galant: to keep Yehuda, Shomron and the Jordan Valley », 22 mars 2018. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.theyeshivaworld.com/news/israel-news/1495709/galant-to-keep-yehuda-shomron-and-the-jordan-valley.html?utm_source=General+Mailing+List&utm_campaign=bd366ef597-EMAIL_CAMPAIGN_2018_03_30&utm_medium=email&utm_term=0_586030c60d-bd366ef597-82754635.

¹⁰⁴ Lasa Oppenheim, International Law: A Treatise, 8^e éd., vol. 1, Peace (Londres, Longmans, Green and Company, 1955), p. 574.

¹⁰⁵ Résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité, résolution 72/14 de l'Assemblée générale et résolution 37/36 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

¹⁰⁶ Résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

¹⁰⁷ V. Kattan, From Coexistence to Conquest: International Law and the Origins of the Arab-Israeli Conflict, 1891-1949 (Londres, Pluto Press, 2009), p. 4.

affirmation est de faire en sorte que la communauté internationale prenne les mesures qui s'imposent au vu des preuves accablantes qui lui ont été présentées et insiste pour qu'Israël annule complètement son annexion et renonce à toute occupation, ou se tienne sinon prêt à pleinement assumer les conséquences de son mépris du droit international.

V. Recommandations

61. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le Gouvernement israélien respecte pleinement le droit international et mette complètement fin à ses 51 années d'occupation du territoire palestinien. Il recommande également que le Gouvernement israélien s'emploie immédiatement à :

a) Mettre fin au blocus et au bouclage de Gaza, lever toutes les restrictions sur les importations et les exportations ainsi que sur les déplacements de population, et faciliter le plein accès aux soins médicaux, conformément aux véritables préoccupations d'Israël en matière de sécurité ;

b) Veiller à ce que les règles régissant l'emploi de la force par les forces de sécurité israéliennes soient strictement conformes aux normes internationales, en accordant une attention particulière à l'utilisation de la force létale ;

c) Veiller à ce que les responsables des violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qui auraient été commises par les forces de sécurité israéliennes aient à rendre compte de leurs actes, en accordant une attention particulière aux manifestations de Gaza ;

d) Prendre des mesures pour répondre aux préoccupations exprimées quant à l'indépendance, l'impartialité et la transparence du système de justice militaire.

62. En ce qui concerne les préoccupations relatives à l'annexion de territoire, le Rapporteur spécial recommande qu'Israël :

a) Se conforme à toutes les résolutions pertinentes du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale relatives à Jérusalem-Est et à la Cisjordanie et renonce à toute revendication de souveraineté sur le territoire ;

b) Assure la liberté de circulation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, notamment entre la bande de Gaza et la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est ;

c) Respecte pleinement la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité relative aux colonies de peuplement ;

d) Adopte une approche fondée sur la bonne foi en ce qui concerne l'administration de la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est et Gaza en tant que territoire occupé, dans le respect des principes du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire, en vue de mettre complètement fin à l'occupation dans un délai raisonnable et de permettre l'autodétermination palestinienne.

63. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande en outre que la communauté internationale :

a) Prenne, conformément à l'article premier commun aux Conventions de Genève, toutes les mesures nécessaires pour respecter et faire respecter par

Israël et toutes les autres parties intéressées les obligations solennelles qui leur incombent au regard du droit international humanitaire ;

b) S'efforce d'appliquer à Israël les normes internationales qui doivent s'appliquer à tous les États, y compris l'interdiction de l'annexion ;

c) Veille à ce que les personnalités politiques et les militaires israéliens qui sont responsables de violations graves du droit international dans le territoire palestinien occupé aient à rendre pleinement compte de leurs actes ;

d) Fasse réaliser une étude des Nations Unies sur la licéité de l'annexion et de la poursuite de l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
21 octobre 2019
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-quatorzième session

Point 70 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967*

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, présenté en application de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent rapport a été soumis après la date limite afin que puissent y figurer les faits les plus récents.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le quatrième soumis à l'Assemblée générale par Michael Lynk, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il se fonde principalement sur les informations communiquées par des victimes, des témoins, des membres de la société civile, des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies et des responsables palestiniens à Amman, lors de la mission effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juillet 2019. Ce dernier y analyse un certain nombre de problèmes ayant trait à la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 donne un bref aperçu des problèmes les plus pressants en matière de droits de la personne qu'il a recensés à l'issue de ses conversations et rencontres avec des membres de la société civile dans le Territoire palestinien occupé au moment de l'établissement du rapport. Il procède ensuite à une analyse détaillée du principe de responsabilité, du phénomène d'impunité et de la responsabilité de la communauté internationale de mettre fin à l'occupation du Territoire palestinien occupé et aux autres pratiques israéliennes constituant des violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme.

2. Le Rapporteur spécial tient une nouvelle fois à souligner qu'en dépit de ses requêtes, il n'a pas encore reçu l'autorisation d'Israël de se rendre dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Sa dernière demande d'accès au Territoire remonte au 20 mai 2019 et, au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport, il n'avait pas encore reçu de réponse. Le Rapporteur souligne de nouveau qu'un dialogue ouvert entre toutes les parties est essentiel à la protection et à la promotion des droits de l'homme et rappelle à Israël qu'il est prêt et résolu à y participer. Le défaut systématique de coopération d'Israël avec le Rapporteur suscite une vive préoccupation. Une compréhension complète et exhaustive de la situation fondée sur l'observation directe serait extrêmement utile aux travaux de ce dernier.

3. Le présent rapport se fonde principalement sur des communications écrites, ainsi que sur les consultations menées avec des représentants de la société civile, des victimes, des témoins, des responsables palestiniens et des représentants d'organismes des Nations Unies à Amman, à l'occasion de la mission annuelle effectuée par le Rapporteur spécial dans la région en juillet 2019. Ce dernier tient à souligner que plusieurs groupes n'ont pas pu se rendre à Amman pour l'y rencontrer en raison des restrictions de déplacement imposées par les autorités israéliennes. Par conséquent, toutes les personnes et organisations basées à Gaza ont été consultées par visioconférence.

4. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial met l'accent, comme le prévoit son mandat, sur les obligations qu'imposent aux tierces parties le droit international des droits de l'homme et le droit international humanitaire¹. Il exhorte tous les acteurs à assurer le respect du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire et réaffirme que les violations de ces droits par quiconque sont déplorables et ne peuvent que compromettre les perspectives de paix.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à remercier le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine de la coopération sans réserve qu'il lui a apportée dans le cadre de l'exécution de son mandat. Il souhaite également adresser ses remerciements à toutes les personnes qui se sont rendues à Amman pour le voir, ainsi qu'à toutes celles qui n'ont pas pu faire le déplacement mais qui lui ont fait parvenir des observations écrites ou orales. Il remercie une nouvelle fois la Jordanie de son appui et de l'offre de tenir des réunions à Amman.

6. Le Rapporteur spécial redit son appui aux organisations palestiniennes, israéliennes et internationales de défense des droits de la personne, qui accomplissent un travail vital. Ces activités, qui sont indispensables à l'exécution de son mandat, profitent également à la communauté internationale tout entière. Le Rapporteur rappelle que ces organisations rencontrent souvent des obstacles considérables dans l'exercice de leurs activités ; il note que, depuis l'an dernier, les difficultés qu'elles connaissent ont augmenté et se sont exacerbées. Il demande à la communauté internationale de protéger les droits des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme ainsi que de soumettre à un examen critique toute tentative visant à décrédibiliser ou à discréditer de quelque manière leur travail et de s'y opposer.

¹ Comme énoncé dans la résolution 1993/2 de la Commission des droits de l'homme.

II. Situation actuelle des droits de l'homme

7. Depuis le précédent rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial à l'Assemblée générale (A/73/447), la situation des droits de l'homme dans le Territoire palestinien occupé est demeurée extrêmement grave, en particulier à Gaza. Le rétrécissement constant de l'espace civique, la non-application généralisée du principe de responsabilité, notamment en ce qui concerne les enquêtes et les poursuites relatives aux actes commis lors des hostilités qui ont eu lieu à Gaza en 2014, la démolition d'habitations en Cisjordanie, en particulier à Jérusalem-Est, la poursuite du recours à l'internement administratif et à la détention d'enfants et les incidences de diverses pratiques sur l'environnement comptent parmi les principales difficultés qui ont été répertoriées dans le cadre de cette mission².

8. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial ne dresse pas la liste exhaustive de l'ensemble des préoccupations, faute de place, mais insiste sur certaines des questions qui étaient les plus pressantes au moment de l'établissement du présent rapport. Cet état des lieux sera suivi d'une analyse approfondie de la responsabilité des États tiers.

A. Gaza

9. Gaza subit sa douzième année d'un blocus terrestre, maritime et aérien qui restreint drastiquement les importations et les exportations, les déplacements de populations à destination ou au départ de Gaza et l'accès à des soins de santé, à une éducation et à des moyens de subsistance adéquats, notamment aux terres agricoles et aux zones de pêche³. Invoquant des préoccupations en matière de sécurité, Israël a fortement durci les restrictions à la liberté de circulation du personnel humanitaire depuis 2018. Le blocus imposé à Gaza constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de la personne et une peine collective⁴. L'économie de Gaza demeure proche de l'effondrement, comme la Conférence des Nations Unies sur le commerce et le développement l'a déterminé, en juillet 2019 (voir TD/B/EX(68)/4). La situation financière incertaine de l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) et la réduction de ses programmes ont contribué à cet état de fait. En juillet 2019, l'Office avait réussi à lever 110 millions de dollars, mais il lui manquait encore des fonds pour atteindre son budget annuel de 1,2 milliard de dollars⁵. Ce problème est exacerbé par le fait que certains pays ont annoncé qu'ils allaient surseoir au paiement des sommes promises

² Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « Occupied Palestinian Territory: United Nations human rights expert says Israel bent on further annexation », 12 juillet 2019.

³ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip », fiche d'information, octobre 2011.

⁴ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Increased restrictions on the movement of humanitarian staff in and out of Gaza », Humanitarian Bulletin, juillet 2019.

⁵ James Reinl, « United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) raises $110m but still cash-strapped after US cuts », Al-Jazeera, 25 juin 2019.

jusqu'à ce que des clarifications soient apportées concernant des allégations de corruption⁶.

10. Bien que, dans l'ensemble, la situation humanitaire soit alarmante, l'approvisionnement en électricité s'est nettement amélioré à Gaza. Le Gouvernement qatari a apporté une aide de 60 millions de dollars en octobre 2018, ce qui a permis de fournir plus de combustible à Gaza et, ainsi, d'améliorer immédiatement l'approvisionnement en électricité, qui est passé de moins de 7 à 14-15 heures par jour. Toutefois, l'approvisionnement en électricité a répondu à moins de la moitié des besoins en électricité à Gaza au premier semestre de 2019 et les interruptions d'alimentation électrique continuent d'entraver considérablement le fonctionnement des hôpitaux et autres établissements de santé⁷.

Manifestations et emploi de la force

11. À ce jour, 207 Palestiniens ont été tués et 33 828 ont été blessés lors de la Grande Marche du retour et des manifestations qui ont eu lieu dans ce contexte⁸. La commission d'enquête établie par la suite a conclu que l'utilisation de balles réelles par les forces de sécurité israéliennes contre les manifestants était illégale dans tous, sauf deux, des cas (A/HRC/40/74, par. 94). Elle a également déterminé que des manifestants avaient essuyé des tirs en violation de leur droit à la vie et du principe de distinction au titre du droit international humanitaire (ibid., par. 97). En effet, dans la vaste majorité des cas, les victimes se trouvaient loin de la clôture et les forces israéliennes, positionnées derrière des buttes de terre, bénéficiaient d'une protection suffisante. Israël n'a pour l'essentiel pas répondu de ces actes, bien que la communauté internationale et la société civile aient demandé que ces faits fassent l'objet d'enquêtes indépendantes et transparentes⁹.

12. Des Palestiniens continuent de manifester, tous les vendredis depuis mars 2018, contre le blocus et pour leur droit de rentrer dans leurs foyers. Le 6 septembre 2019, par exemple, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont tué par des tirs à balles réelles deux enfants qui manifestaient près de la clôture¹⁰. Selon des organisations de défense des droits de l'homme, la plupart des blessés ont été atteints par des balles réelles ; d'autres ont été directement touchés par des munitions lacrymogènes¹¹.

13. Il demeure difficile pour le secteur de la santé à Gaza de faire face au nombre considérable de blessés, dont la majorité par balle. Submergé par l'afflux massif de nouvelles blessures à traiter, qui vient s'ajouter aux restrictions à la circulation des personnes et du matériel et à la pénurie d'électricité et de certains biens et équipements dont il souffrait déjà, le système de santé de Gaza est au bord de l'effondrement¹². Ces deux facteurs – débordement du système de santé de Gaza et

⁶ Jewish Telegraphic Agency et Cnaan Lipshiz, « Swiss and Dutch suspend funding for United Nations aid agency for Palestinians over graft scandal », Haaretz, 31 juillet 2019.

⁷ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Improvements to Gaza electricity supply », Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, juin 2019.

⁸ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, base de données sur les pertes, consultable à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties.

⁹ Farhan Haq, porte-parole adjoint du Secrétaire général, Déclaration attribuable au porte-parole adjoint du Secrétaire général sur la situation à Gaza, 30 mars 2018.

¹⁰ Michelle Bachelet, Haute-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, déclaration prononcée à la quarante-deuxième session du Conseil des droits de l'homme, le 9 septembre 2019.

¹¹ Al Mezan Centre for Human Rights, « 71th Friday of demonstrations in Gaza, 161 wounded, including 56 children, one woman and six paramedics », communiqué de presse, 25 août 2019.

¹² Organisation mondiale de la Santé et Health Cluster – Occupied Palestinian Territory, Emergency Trauma Response to the Gaza Mass Demonstrations 2018–2019: A One-Year Review of Trauma Data and the Humanitarian Consequences (2019).

multiplication des manifestants blessés nécessitant des soins spécialisés – ont contribué à une augmentation du nombre de personnes demandant l'autorisation de quitter Gaza pour aller se faire soigner dans un hôpital extérieur ; la plupart des demandes ont été refusées.

Violations des droits de l'homme par le Hamas à Gaza

14. En mai 2019, les forces du Hamas ont réprimé dans la violence, à Gaza, des manifestations liées à la situation économique. Selon des informations reçues, le Hamas a brutalisé et arrêté des dizaines de Palestiniens qui manifestaient contre les hausses de prix décrétées dans le territoire et les conditions de vie extrêmement difficiles qui y règnent. Des manifestations de faible ampleur ont été organisées dans plusieurs localités de la bande de Gaza par un groupe d'activistes qui a choisi pour nom « We want to live »¹³. Ce dernier épisode de répression survient après de précédentes manifestations tenues en mars 2019, lors desquelles des centaines de personnes avaient subi des brutalités, des arrestations et détentions arbitraires, des tortures et des mauvais traitements¹⁴. Ces actes du Hamas sont alarmants et constituent une violation flagrante des droits des Palestiniens à la liberté d'expression et d'association ainsi qu'un déni de leur droit d'être à l'abri de détentions arbitraires et de leur droit à l'intégrité physique. Le Hamas a le devoir de veiller à ce que les Palestiniens de Gaza soient libres d'exercer leurs droits sans être victimes de menaces, d'actes d'intimidation ou de violences.

B. Cisjordanie

15. Dans un contexte où le Premier Ministre israélien¹⁵ et des hauts responsables de son Gouvernement multiplient les appels à l'annexion de tout ou partie de la Cisjordanie, la violence exercée par les colons s'exacerbe. Des actes de violence ont été enregistrés dans plusieurs villes de la Cisjordanie, dont Hébron, Naplouse et Ramallah. Le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires a recensé sept décès de Palestiniens attribuables à la violence exercée par les colons en 2019¹⁶. La fréquence des attaques s'est particulièrement accrue dans des régions de la vallée du Jourdain, surtout dans le nord du district de Toubas, où des bergers ont été à plusieurs reprises pris pour cible par des colons israéliens¹⁷. Ces violences ont forcé de nombreux habitants palestiniens à quitter les zones touchées tandis que l'extension de l'implantation israélienne se poursuit, encerclant de fait les populations palestiniennes et réduisant l'espace dont elles disposent pour vivre.

16. En parallèle, le rythme des démolitions d'habitations et la saisie de structures appartenant à des Palestiniens a connu une nette accélération en 2019 par rapport aux années précédentes. En juillet 2019, 362 structures au total avaient été détruites par les autorités israéliennes, ce qui avait entraîné le déplacement de plus de 481 Palestiniens. Il s'agit d'une hausse de 64 % comparativement à la même période en 2018¹⁸. Les zones les plus touchées étaient Hébron, Toubas et Naplouse. Les

¹³ Oliver Holmes, « Hamas violently suppresses Gaza economic protests », Guardian, 21 mars 2019.

¹⁴ Amnesty International, « Gaza. Le Hamas doit cesser la répression brutale contre les manifestants et les défenseurs des droits humains », 18 mars 2019.

¹⁵ Oliver Holmes, « Netanyahu vows to annex large parts of occupied West Bank », Guardian, 10 septembre 2019.

¹⁶ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, base de données relative aux victimes.

¹⁷ B'Tselem, « Israeli settlers and military intensify attacks against Palestinian shepherds in the village of al-Farisiyah in the northern Jordan Valley », 15 mai 2019.

¹⁸ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « West Bank demolitions and displacement: an overview », juillet 2019.

autorités israéliennes ont invoqué de nombreuses raisons, comme des menaces à la sécurité ou l'absence de permis de construire, concernant notamment des bâtiments situés dans la « zone tampon », à proximité du mur de séparation. Le rejet des demandes de permis de construire est une politique israélienne.

17. Les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont également intensifié leurs incursions et leurs descentes dans diverses localités de Cisjordanie, prenant pour cible des organisations de la société civile et des résidences palestiniennes, avec, à la clé, détentions et arrestations arbitraires. Ainsi, le 19 septembre, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont procédé à une perquisition dans les locaux de l'association Prisoner Support and Human Rights (Addameer) et d'autres organisations, procédant à la saisie de matériel informatique et de documents. Cette recrudescence des descentes s'inscrit dans l'objectif de réduire au silence les organisations de la société civile et les défenseurs des droits de la personne, en particulier ceux qui travaillent sur la question du principe de responsabilité.

Restrictions à la liberté d'expression et d'association imposées par l'Autorité palestinienne

18. L'Autorité palestinienne a continué d'imposer des restrictions à la liberté d'expression, d'association et de réunion pacifique en Cisjordanie. En 2018, plusieurs journalistes ont été arrêtés, accusés d'avoir violé des dispositions de la loi de 2017 sur la cybercriminalité (A/HRC/40/39, par. 60, et A/HRC/40/43, par. 46). Bien que la loi ait récemment été modifiée, la poursuite des procédures intentées avant cette modification, dont les arrestations susmentionnées, a été autorisée. Un journaliste palestinien, par exemple, a été arrêté et accusé de diffamation et de calomnie au titre de cette loi (A/HRC/40/39, par. 60).

C. Jérusalem-Est

19. Depuis 2018, le Gouvernement israélien cherche, par plusieurs moyens, à renforcer et promouvoir sa revendication de souveraineté sur Jérusalem-Est : ainsi, il a pris des mesures législatives, multiplié les démolitions et les ordres d'expulsion de résidents palestiniens, intensifié la construction d'implantations et annoncé un plan visant à étendre à Jérusalem-Est la municipalité de Jérusalem¹⁹.

20. Des chiffres récents indiquent une augmentation du nombre de démolitions d'habitations palestiniennes à Jérusalem-Est et sont révélateurs de la multiplication des constructions d'implantations et de leur expansion. Au 30 avril 2019, 111 structures appartenant à des Palestiniens avaient été détruites à Jérusalem-Est depuis le début de l'année, soit directement par les autorités israéliennes, soit par leur propriétaire pour éviter d'avoir à payer une amende, à la suite d'ordres de destruction motivés par l'absence de permis de construire. Parmi celles-ci, 57 % ont été démolies en avril²⁰. Cette augmentation, tant des démolitions d'habitations palestiniennes que de la construction d'implantations, stimulée par le sentiment qu'a Israël d'avoir le feu vert des États-Unis d'Amérique, ne peut s'interpréter que comme une volonté de modifier la structure démographique de Jérusalem-Est en y réduisant la présence palestinienne et en y renforçant la majorité juive²¹.

¹⁹ Informations communiquées par une organisation humanitaire internationale. Voir également Al-Haq, « The occupational annexation of Jerusalem through Israeli bills and laws », 5 mars 2018 Error! Hyperlink reference not valid.

²⁰ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « United Nations officials call for an immediate halt to demolitions in East Jerusalem and respect for international law amidst rise », 3 mai 2019.

21. Le 4 octobre 2018, la municipalité de Jérusalem a annoncé un plan visant à étendre son contrôle sur l'ensemble de Jérusalem, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à remplacer les services de l'UNRWA par des services municipaux. À cette occasion, le maire de Jérusalem de l'époque, Nir Barkat, s'est expressément engagé à démanteler les installations de l'UNRWA à Jérusalem-Est, déclarant que la municipalité entendait retirer l'autorisation accordée à l'UNRWA de fournir des services médicaux, éducatifs et sanitaires pour en assurer elle-même la prestation²². Par la suite, les forces israéliennes ont pénétré dans un dispensaire de l'UNRWA à Jérusalem-Est et ont demandé à voir un permis²³. L'UNRWA a depuis indiqué ne pas avoir été avisé des décisions de la municipalité et s'opposer fermement à cette tentative de modification de sa zone d'intervention. Dans une déclaration faite en janvier 2019, l'Office a rappelé à Israël son obligation de protéger les installations de l'UNRWA dans les zones relevant de son autorité²⁴. Comme je l'ai souligné dans mon précédent rapport à l'Assemblée générale, Israël s'est employé à garantir l'irréversibilité de son annexion de jure de Jérusalem-Est en étendant sa législation nationale et son autorité civile à la partie occupée de la ville (A/73/447, para. 37).

22. À un moment où la municipalité multiplie ses démonstrations de contrôle, la police israélienne a intensifié, en juin et juillet 2019, ses incursions dans le quartier palestinien d'Issaouïyé, y procédant à environ 340 arrestations. La plupart des personnes arrêtées ont été libérées peu après. Selon des sources, cinq suspects ont été mis en accusation²⁵. Cette multiplication des opérations de police s'est traduite, notamment, par la mise en place de barrages de contrôle de la circulation sur des routes menant au village, des inspections poussées de véhicules automobiles, l'installation de postes de contrôle de nuit à l'intérieur du village et de perquisitions et d'arrestations faites en pleine nuit. La présence policière accrue et la colère des résidents ont donné lieu à des affrontements dans le village, au cours desquels de nombreux résidents auraient été blessés, principalement par des tirs de balles souples. Au moins un Palestinien a été tué par la police à la fin du mois de juin²⁶.

23. Enfin, l'ingérence d'Israël dans le droit à l'éducation des enfants palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est est également préoccupante. En mai 2018, le Gouvernement israélien a annoncé qu'il investirait 1,85 milliard de shekels dans l'infrastructure et les services à Jérusalem-Est. Cependant, selon l'organisation non gouvernementale Ir Amim, 43,4 % de ce budget, qui doit être consacré à la réduction des disparités entre Jérusalem-Ouest et Jérusalem-Est dans le domaine de l'éducation, ne le sera qu'à la condition que le programme d'enseignement israélien soit adopté au lieu de celui de l'Autorité palestinienne²⁷. Les Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est se retrouvent pris entre deux feux, contraints de choisir une éducation qui ouvrirait à court terme plus de portes à leurs enfants, au prix de l'érosion de leur identité et de leur autonomie. Pris ensemble, la tentative d'Israël de faire pression sur les écoles pour les amener à ²¹ Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre, « Annual report 2018 », 2018.

²² Al-Jazeera, « Jerusalem to remove UNRWA to “end lie of Palestine refugees” », 4 octobre 2018.

²³ Nir Hasson, « UNRWA says Israeli inspectors tried to raid its East Jerusalem clinic », Haaretz, 8 octobre 2018.

²⁴ UNRWA, « UNRWA was not notified of any decision to close down schools it operated in East Jerusalem », 21 janvier 2019.

²⁵ Nir Hasson, « 340 arrests and only five indictments: summer-long police sweep strikes fear in Isawiyah », Haaretz, 28 août 2019.

²⁶ Ibid.

²⁷ Ir Amim, « The state of education in East Jerusalem: budgetary discrimination and national identity », août 2018, consultable à l'adresse suivante : http://www.ir-amim.org.il/sites/default/files/The%20State%20of%20Education_2018_1.pdf.

modifier leur programme d'enseignement et l'intention de la municipalité de faire cesser les activités de l'UNRWA peignent le tableau préoccupant d'une action visant à restreindre davantage encore l'autonomie et l'identité palestiniennes à Jérusalem-Est²⁸.

D. Droits fondamentaux des enfants

24. Les enfants représentent près de 48 % de la population palestinienne en Cisjordanie et à Gaza : 1,3 million d'enfants vivent en Cisjordanie et 1 million dans la bande de Gaza²⁹. Dans ces deux régions, les enfants continuent de souffrir des effets néfastes sur leur santé physique et mentale de leur exposition constante à la violence, notamment dans le contexte de la Grande Marche du retour et d'autres manifestations. Selon le rapport du Secrétaire général sur le sort des enfants en temps de conflit armé, les chiffres confirmés par l'ONU en 2018 indiquent le nombre d'enfants palestiniens tués (59) ou blessés (2 756) le plus élevé depuis 2014 (A/73/907-S/2019/509, par. 84).

25. À Gaza, les enfants continuent de voir entravé leur accès à des soins de santé adéquats, notamment lorsque les demandes d'entrée sur le territoire israélien à des fins de traitement médical sont rejetées ou lorsqu'elles ne sont pas traitées dans les délais. Le taux d'approbation de ces demandes est notablement plus bas pour les enfants palestiniens blessés lors des manifestations de Gaza (22 % en 2018) que pour ceux blessés dans d'autres circonstances (en moyenne, 75 % en 2018) (ibid., par. 94). Les autorités israéliennes continuent de rejeter les demandes d'autorisation de voyager à titre d'accompagnateur avec un enfant requérant des soins spécialisés, ou d'en retarder le traitement³⁰.

26. L'accès des enfants à l'éducation est gravement restreint dans les territoires occupés de Cisjordanie et de Gaza. Selon le rapport du Secrétaire général sur le sort des enfants en temps de conflit armé, 118 cas d'atteinte à l'éducation, concernant 23 188 enfants, ont été confirmés en 2018, dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Dans plus de la moitié de ces cas, les forces israéliennes ont tiré des balles réelles, lâché des gaz lacrymogènes ou lancé des grenades assourdissantes dans des écoles ou autour d'écoles (ibid., par. 91). À Gaza, la pénurie de salles de classe a motivé la mise en place d'un système de « roulement ». Les élèves sont scolarisés dans 274 écoles de l'UNRWA, qui comptent 8 676 agents de l'éducation dans la bande de Gaza ; 84 d'entre elles n'appliquent pas le système des classes alternées, 177 l'appliquent pour accueillir 2 groupes d'élèves et 13 l'appliquent pour accueillir 3 groupes d'élèves³¹.

27. Les enfants palestiniens et leurs familles souffrent également de l'anxiété que provoque la menace de démolition pesant sur leur habitation. Ils se retrouvent ainsi exposés à des niveaux croissants de stress du fait de l'augmentation du nombre d'ordres d'expulsion et de destruction, en particulier à Jérusalem-Est³². En 2019, la démolition d'habitations palestiniennes par les forces israéliennes a très souvent entraîné, entre autres, le déplacement de familles entières, au détriment du bien-être des enfants. Ainsi, le 25 avril 2019, les autorités israéliennes ont démoli, à des fins ²⁸ Nir Hasson, « Israel promises “revolution” for East Jerusalem schools. Palestinians say it’s “brainwashing” », Haaretz, 29 août 2018.

²⁹ Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance, « Children in the State of Palestine », novembre 2018.

³⁰ Organisation mondiale de la Santé, « Health access: barriers for patients in the Occupied Palestinian Territory », juin 2019.

³¹ Voir <https://www.unrwa.org/activity/education-gaza-strip>.

³² Palestinian Counselling Centre, Save the Children and Welfare Association, « Broken homes: addressing the impact of house demolitions on Palestinian children and families », avril 2009 Error! Hyperlink reference not valid..

punitives, une maison dans le village de Zaouiya, situé dans la zone B de la Cisjordanie, entraînant le déplacement de cinq enfants et de leurs parents³³. Or, un déplacement est un événement traumatisant aux conséquences durables, a fortiori lorsqu'il touche les plus vulnérables, comme, en l'espèce, les enfants.

III. Obligation de rendre compte, impunité et responsabilité de la communauté internationale

28. L'obligation de rendre compte – le principe de responsabilité dans l'exercice du pouvoir – est une des pierres angulaires de l'état de droit et de l'ordre international fondé sur des règles. Nul système juridique, national ou international, ne peut acquérir et conserver une légitimité populaire s'il n'est pas en mesure d'imposer des sanctions efficaces et d'offrir des recours réparateurs en cas de violation de ses lois. Sans ce principe, la force l'emporte sur le droit, la justice n'est plus qu'une vaine promesse et les dépossédés du pouvoir n'ont plus qu'à souffrir, ou alors à tenter de se faire justice par des moyens extrajuridiques irréguliers, voire violents. Un droit privé de voies de recours n'est, en fin de compte, pas un droit.

29. Les ennemis du principe de responsabilité sont l'impunité et l'exceptionnalisme. Comme il a été déclaré récemment au Conseil de sécurité, « le droit international n'est pas un menu à la carte »³⁴. Quiconque affirme pouvoir se soustraire aux directives de l'ordre juridique et diplomatique international défie l'état de droit et échoue au test du réalisme politique. En effet, aucun pays ne peut maintenir longtemps sa position et son influence au sein de la communauté des nations s'il s'autorise des particularités interdites aux autres, et aucun ordre international fondé sur des règles ne peut faire respecter ses lois et ses directives s'il tolère le défi et l'exceptionnalisme, sans une remise en question³⁵. L'impunité à l'échelon local est un danger pour la justice à l'échelon mondial.

30. Dans le monde d'aujourd'hui, ce n'est pas l'absence de lois, mais le défaut de volonté politique internationale qui est un problème majeur. Comme l'a souligné le Représentant permanent adjoint du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Jonathan Allen, lors d'une séance d'information du Conseil de sécurité consacrée au droit international humanitaire, tenue en avril 2019, « [c]e n'est pas la loi qui nous fait défaut, mais son application ainsi que le principe de responsabilité »³⁶. Trop souvent, sur de nombreuses questions graves, la communauté internationale n'a appliqué l'obligation de rendre des comptes que de manière sélective et partisane, reflet effarant d'une action tantôt prise à dessein ou dans l'indifférence, tantôt fruit de la collusion ou de l'apathie. Trop souvent, on a fermé les yeux sur le mépris qui était fait du droit, lui trouvant des excuses, ou dans un souci de conciliation. Or, ce déficit de responsabilité érode la confiance des populations dans l'efficacité du droit international, mettant ainsi en péril un bien commun précieux.

³³ Organisation des Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Protection of civilians », Biweekly Highlights, du 23 avril au 6 mai 2019.

³⁴ Christoph Heusgen, Représentant permanent de l'Allemagne auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, déclaration faite lors du débat public du Conseil de sécurité consacré au Moyen-Orient, le 23 juillet 2019.

³⁵ Benjamin R. Barber, Fear's Empire: War, Terrorism and Democracy (New York, W.W. Norton and Company, 2003).

³⁶ Jonathan Allen, Représentant permanent adjoint du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, « International humanitarian law: we lack enforcement and accountability », déclaration faite lors de la séance d'information du Conseil de sécurité consacrée au droit international humanitaire, le 1^{er} avril 2019.

31. Les 52 années d'occupation par Israël du territoire palestinien – Gaza et la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est – sont une amère illustration de l'absence de responsabilité internationale face aux violations systémiques des droits des Palestiniens au regard du droit des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire. L'obligation de rendre compte est le levier qui permet de soulever la chape de plomb que représente l'occupation permanente, et l'application de ce principe est la meilleure voie vers un règlement juste et durable. Pays relativement exigu du point de vue géographique et démographique, et particulièrement tributaire de la communauté internationale pour le commerce, les investissements et la coopération diplomatique, Israël n'aurait pu maintenir jusqu'ici une occupation à ce point répressive, en violation flagrante du droit international, sans le soutien actif, ou la négligence malveillante, de nombreux pays du monde industrialisé. Si la communauté internationale a publié de nombreuses résolutions et déclarations critiques à l'égard de l'occupation sans fin d'Israël et de ses projets constants d'annexion, ces critiques ont rarement eu des conséquences significatives. L'ancien représentant spécial de l'Union européenne pour le Moyen-Orient, Miguel Moratinos, avait déclaré, à propos de l'occupation israélienne : « Nous autres Européens sommes très forts pour les déclarations ; cela compense notre indolence »³⁷.

32. Dans la partie suivante du rapport, on examine l'obligation qui incombe à la communauté internationale de mettre fin aux violations graves des droits de la personne et de réglementer étroitement l'occupation de guerre, tout comme le devoir qu'elle a de veiller à ce que ses membres obéissent à ses directives. Dans un deuxième temps, on évalue le degré d'impunité dont jouit Israël. Enfin, on passe en revue les diverses mesures de responsabilisation que la communauté internationale a adoptées et appliquées dans certains conflits et dans certaines zones face aux violations des droits de la personne, afin de déterminer lesquelles pourraient être appliquées de manière significative pour mettre un terme à l'occupation israélienne.

A. Responsabilités juridiques de la communauté internationale

33. Depuis 1945, la communauté des nations a codifié un corpus impressionnant de règles de droit international, dans lequel elle a établi la responsabilité pour les États de vivre selon un ordre international fondé sur des règles et de le faire respecter. La promesse de faire respecter le principe de responsabilité – soit la mobilisation de la volonté collective et la prise de contre-mesures efficaces pour défendre la justice – est au cœur de l'ordre international. Le Rapporteur spécial a recensé trois sources importantes d'obligations juridiques qui astreignent la communauté internationale à mobiliser son autorité politique pour contraindre Israël à mettre fin, une fois pour toutes, à son occupation illégale et à lever les obstacles qui entravent l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien, à savoir :

- a) Article premier commun aux quatre Conventions de Genève de 1949 ;
- b) Articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite, de 2001 ;
- c) Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies.

Article premier commun aux quatre Conventions de Genève de 1949

34. La quatrième Convention de Genève de 1949 s'applique intégralement à l'occupation israélienne du territoire palestinien. Le Conseil de sécurité l'a déclaré

³⁷ Akiva Eldar, « Israel can't afford to postpone Mideast peace much longer », Haaretz, 12 novembre 2010.

pour la première fois dans les jours qui ont suivi l'occupation, dans sa résolution 237 (1967), et l'a reconfirmé à maintes reprises depuis lors, la dernière fois dans sa résolution 2334 (2016). D'autres grands organes des Nations Unies ont souscrit à cette déclaration, notamment l'Assemblée générale (par exemple, dans sa résolution 73/97), le Conseil des droits de l'homme (par exemple, dans sa résolution 40/23) et la Cour internationale de Justice³⁸. Bien qu'il ait ratifié les Conventions le 6 juillet 1951, et que le Conseil de sécurité lui ait demandé, dans sa résolution 446 (1979), de les respecter scrupuleusement, Israël conteste que la quatrième Convention de Genève s'applique au conflit et ne se reconnaît pas en tant que Puissance occupante du territoire palestinien³⁹. Toutefois, sa position n'a guère trouvé de soutien au sein de la communauté internationale ou parmi les spécialistes du droit international.

35. Aux termes de l'article premier commun aux quatre Conventions de Genève, « [l]es Hautes Parties contractantes s'engagent à respecter et à faire respecter la [...] Convention en toutes circonstances »⁴⁰.

36. Cette obligation solennelle est au cœur de l'application des droits garantis par les quatre Conventions de Genève et par le droit international humanitaire. Selon les juristes contemporains, l'article premier commun a acquis un « caractère quasi-constitutionnel »⁴¹, c'est-à-dire un statut juridique élevé qui exige des États non seulement qu'ils respectent les Conventions elles-mêmes, mais également qu'ils prennent toutes les mesures en leur pouvoir pour amener les autres États à s'acquitter des obligations qui leur incombent au titre du droit international humanitaire⁴². L'article premier reflète également le droit international coutumier, en lui conférant un caractère universel⁴³.

37. Le commentaire sur les quatre Conventions de Genève qui fait autorité a été publié par le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR) en 2016⁴⁴. En ce qui concerne l'article premier commun et l'obligation de faire respecter, le CICR a noté, dans le commentaire, « qu'il ne s'agit pas d'une vague promesse, mais d'un engagement ayant force juridique »⁴⁵. Interprétant cette disposition, la Cour internationale de Justice a déclaré que le terme « s'engagent » ne revêtait pas « un caractère purement incitatif » et ne se limitait pas « à l'énoncé d'une finalité », et qu'il ne visait pas simplement à introduire des obligations ultérieures, mais qu'il signifiait, en fait, « accepter une obligation »⁴⁶. Le CICR explique en outre, dans son commentaire, qu'« [e]n prenant l'engagement de “respecter et faire respecter” les Conventions, les États ont également reconnu l'importance que revêt le fait d'adopter toutes les mesures raisonnables afin de prévenir que des violations se produisent »⁴⁷.

³⁸ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, p. 177, par. 101.

³⁹ Comité international de la Croix-Rouge (CICR), « Le droit international humanitaire, le CICR et le statut d'Israël dans les territoires », 31 décembre 2012.

⁴⁰ Voir <https://www.icrc.org/fr/doc/war-and-law/treaties-customary-law/geneva-conventions/overview-geneva-conventions.htm>.

⁴¹ Laurence Boisson de Chazournes et Luigi Condorelli, « Common article 1 of the Geneva Conventions revisited: protecting collective interests », CICR, 31 mars 2000.

⁴² Knut Dörmann et Jose Serralvo, « Common article 1 to the Geneva Conventions and the obligation to prevent international humanitarian law violations », CICR, 21 septembre 2015.

⁴³ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2004, p. 136, par. 158.

⁴⁴ Voir <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/dih.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=9FDA19119E4EB59AC1257F7D005ED435>, par. 118 à 191.

⁴⁵ Ibid., par. 170.

⁴⁶ Application de la Convention pour la prévention et la répression du crime de génocide (Bosnie-Herzégovine c. Serbie-et-Monténégro), arrêt, C.I.J. Recueil 2007, p. 43, par. 162.

⁴⁷ Voir <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=72239588AFA66200C1257F7D00367DBD>, par. 121.

En cas de violation des Conventions, les Hautes Parties contractantes ne se seront acquittées de leurs obligations juridiques au sens de l'article premier commun qu'« aussi longtemps qu'elles [aur]ont fait tout ce qui était raisonnablement en leur pouvoir pour faire cesser les violations »⁴⁸.

38. Le CICR souligne, dans son commentaire, que les obligations énoncées dans les Conventions sont « d'une importance si fondamentale » pour la communauté internationale qu'elles créent des obligations erga omnes partes, c'est-à-dire des obligations qui s'imposent à toutes les autres Parties contractantes, en tout temps⁴⁹. En ce qui concerne l'article premier commun, celui-ci crée deux grandes obligations interdépendantes : a) chaque Haute Partie contractante est tenue envers toutes les autres Hautes Parties contractantes de respecter toutes les obligations qui lui incombent au titre des Conventions (obligation négative de ne pas violer) ; b) toutes les Hautes Parties contractantes ont le devoir, individuellement et collectivement, de veiller à ce que toutes les autres Hautes Parties contractantes respectent toutes les obligations qui leur incombent au titre des Conventions (obligation positive de faire respecter)⁵⁰.

39. Il importe, par conséquent, de se demander quel type de violations du droit international humanitaire ferait naître l'obligation pour les autres Hautes Parties contractantes de faire respecter les Conventions. L'article premier commun doit être lu au sens large et délibéré⁵¹. Des considérations politiques, telles que l'inertie nationale ou le refus d'affronter un allié, ne sont pas des raisons suffisantes pour s'abstenir de remplir l'obligation de faire rendre des comptes. Comme l'ont déclaré Théo Boutruche et Marco Sassòli, experts en droit international, dans leur avis juridique sur ce sujet :

« Par définition, l'existence d'un devoir en droit, sous la forme d'une obligation de faire respecter, exige une évaluation objective et empêche un État d'invoquer de simples considérations politiques pour prétendre qu'aucune mesure ne puisse être prise au titre de cette obligation. Le fait que l'exécution d'une obligation internationale puisse se révéler politiquement difficile ne saurait servir de motif pour se soustraire à toute mesure qui viserait à la mise en œuvre de ladite obligation »⁵².

40. Si les États ont l'obligation de faire respecter les Conventions « en toutes circonstances » et pour toutes les violations, il est on ne peut plus clair que les violations flagrantes des Conventions et les atteintes graves à leurs dispositions de la part d'un État imposent à toutes les autres Hautes Parties contractantes l'obligation internationale particulièrement impérieuse d'utiliser tous les moyens en leur pouvoir pour mettre un terme à ces violations et atteintes⁵³. En droit international humanitaire, des exemples de violations flagrantes et d'atteintes graves seraient, notamment : l'homicide intentionnel ; la destruction et l'appropriation de biens exécutées sur une grande échelle ; la peine collective ; la déportation ou le transfert illégal ou la détention illégale ; le fait de lancer une attaque sans discrimination atteignant la population civile ; le transfert par la Puissance occupante d'une partie de sa

⁴⁸ Ibid., par. 165.

⁴⁹ Ibid., par. 119.

⁵⁰ Ibid., par. 153 à 173.

⁵¹ Robin Geiß, « The obligation to respect and to ensure respect for the Conventions », in Andrew Clapham, Paolo Gaeta and Marco Sassòli, dir., The 1949 Geneva Conventions: A Commentary (Oxford University Press, Oxford, Royaume-Uni, 2015), p. 113.

⁵² Théo Boutruche and Marco Sassòli, « Expert opinion on third states' obligations vis-à-vis IHL violations under international law, with a special focus on common article 1 to the 1949 Geneva Conventions », 8 novembre 2016.

⁵³ Obligation renforcée par la quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 146, et Protocole I, art. 86.

population civile dans le territoire occupé ; les pratiques de ségrégation et de discrimination raciales⁵⁴. Toutes ces violations graves ont été soit alléguées quant au fond, soit établies pendant la conduite de l'occupation israélienne⁵⁵.

41. Dans son avis consultatif de 2004 sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, la Cour internationale de Justice a expressément déclaré qu'il appartenait aux Hautes Parties contractantes de veiller à ce qu'Israël – la Puissance occupante – s'acquitte des obligations que lui impose la quatrième Convention de Genève⁵⁶.

42. La place particulière qu'occupe le droit international humanitaire dans le droit international, l'avis de la Cour internationale de Justice selon laquelle les responsabilités de la communauté internationale au titre des Conventions de Genève sont des obligations juridiques et non des sentiments moraux, et l'accent mis par le CICR dans son commentaire sur le fait que les Conventions consacrent des obligations contraignantes et cumulatives s'associent pour créer, pour toutes les Hautes Parties contractantes, l'obligation juridique impérieuse de prendre toutes les mesures en leur pouvoir pour mettre un terme, rapidement et une fois pour toutes, à l'occupation israélienne et à ses multiples violations du droit. Si les déclarations occasionnelles des Hautes Parties contractantes concernant les principes humanitaires applicables à l'occupation et au conflit sont les bienvenues, il reste encore beaucoup à faire pour satisfaire à l'obligation de faire respecter les Conventions⁵⁷.

Articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite

43. En août 2001, au terme de cinq décennies de codification, la Commission du droit international a adopté les articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite. L'Assemblée générale a entériné ces articles en décembre 2001 (voir résolution 56/83, annexe). Une norme fondamentale du droit international veut que tous les États respectent le droit international en tout temps, conformément aux obligations qui leur incombent au titre de l'ordre international fondé sur des règles. Il est établi dans les articles, en tant que principe fondamental, que tous les États assument la responsabilité juridique de veiller à ce que les autres États respectent le droit international en tout temps. En ce sens, tous les États ont la responsabilité de ne pas reconnaître comme licite toute situation créée par une violation grave, par un autre État, d'une obligation découlant d'une norme impérative de droit international général. Ces articles sont largement considérés comme reflétant le droit international coutumier en matière de responsabilité de l'État⁵⁸.

44. Selon l'article 40 des articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite, le chapitre III des articles « s'applique à la responsabilité internationale qui résulte d'une violation grave par l'État d'une obligation découlant d'une norme impérative du droit international général » et « [l]a violation d'une telle ⁵⁴ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 33, 49 et 147, et Protocole additionnel, art. 85.

⁵⁵ Human Rights Watch, Amnesty International, Al-Haq, Al Mezan, B'Tselem et Gisha, entre autres.

⁵⁶ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif, C.I.J Recueil 2004, p. 136, par. 159.

⁵⁷ La Conférence des Hautes Parties contractantes a publié des allocutions et des déclarations concernant les principes humanitaires applicables à l'occupation israélienne du territoire palestinien en 1999, 2001 et 2014 ; consultables à l'adresse suivante : <https://unispal.un.org/UNISPAL.NSF/0/E7B8432A312475D385257DB100568AE8>.

⁵⁸ James Crawford, State Responsibility: The General Part (Cambridge University Press, New York, 2013), p. 435 à 455.

obligation est grave si elle dénote de la part de l'État responsable un manquement flagrant ou systématique à l'exécution de l'obligation ».

45. Une norme impérative (de jus cogens) du droit international général est une obligation juridique acceptée par la communauté internationale en tant que norme à laquelle aucune dérogation ou exception n'est permise⁵⁹. Selon le commentaire de fond sur les articles publiés par l'ONU en 2008⁶⁰, les normes impératives du droit incluraient le respect des règles fondamentales du droit international humanitaire et du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, ainsi que l'interdiction de la discrimination raciale, de l'apartheid, du génocide, de l'annexion, de l'agression et de la torture⁶¹. Une violation systématique, telle que mentionnée au paragraphe 2 de l'article 40, est celle qui a été commise « de façon organisée et délibérée », tandis que le terme « violation flagrante » « dénote des violations manifestes qui représentent une attaque directe contre les valeurs protégées par la règle »⁶².

46. Selon l'article 41 des articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite, « [l]es États doivent coopérer pour mettre fin, par des moyens licites, à toute violation grave au sens de l'article 40 » et « [a]ucun État ne doit reconnaître comme licite une situation créée par une violation grave au sens de l'article 40, ni prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de cette situation ».

47. Conformément à l'article 41, les États assument trois obligations fondamentales dans le cadre de leur responsabilité de veiller à ce que les autres États respectent le droit international : a) ils ne peuvent reconnaître comme licite une situation créée par une violation grave au sens de l'article 40 ; b) ils ne peuvent prêter aide ou assistance au maintien de cette situation ; c) ils ont le devoir positif de coopérer pour mettre fin à une telle violation grave⁶³. L'objectif de ces responsabilités spéciales à l'égard de tiers est de contrecarrer les effets qu'ont de telles violations graves sur l'ordre juridique, politique et moral de la communauté internationale dans son ensemble.

48. L'obligation de non-reconnaissance face à une situation illicite résultant d'une violation grave d'une norme impérative est d'empêcher que la validation d'un fait accompli illégal ne se cristallise, dans le temps, en un fait générateur de droit⁶⁴. Elle est fondée sur le principe juridique ex injuria jus non oritur, qui signifie qu'un droit ne peut naître d'un fait illicite. Selon ces articles, il est interdit aux États d'accorder à un État transgresseur une reconnaissance qui lui permettrait d'acquérir, entre autres, la souveraineté sur un territoire annexé, ou qui reviendrait à tolérer légalement ses pratiques de discrimination raciale ou d'apartheid ou à accepter légalement, de par le caractère continu de sa violation et de par l'écoulement du temps, son déni du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes⁶⁵.

49. L'obligation de ne pas prêter aide ou assistance au maintien d'une violation grave du droit international est fondée sur les principes d'interdépendance et de solidarité qui sous-tendent la Charte des Nations Unies et d'autres obligations en droit ⁵⁹ Convention de Vienne sur le droit des traités, art. 53.

⁶⁰ Annuaire de la Commission du droit international, 2001, vol. II, deuxième partie [publication des Nations Unies, numéro de vente : F.04.V.17 (Part 2)], chap. IV, sect. E.2 (Projet d'articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite et commentaires y relatifs).

⁶¹ Ibid., commentaire sur l'article 40.

⁶² Ibid.

⁶³ Ibid., commentaire sur l'article 41.

⁶⁴ Martin Dawidowicz, « The obligation of non-recognition of an unlawful situation », in James Crawford, Alain Pellet et Simon Olleson, dir., The Law of International Responsibility (New York, Oxford University Press, 2010).

⁶⁵ Projet d'articles et commentaires y relatifs, commentaire sur l'article 41.

inhérentes à l'ordre international fondé sur des règles⁶⁶. Cette obligation fait que les États doivent refuser individuellement d'offrir toute forme d'appui à l'État contrevenant qui persiste à commettre une violation grave. Les États qui, sciemment, fournissent à l'État contrevenant une assistance qui contribue à la violation commise deviennent eux-mêmes responsables des effets néfastes de leur action⁶⁷. Dans sa résolution 465 (1980), le Conseil de sécurité a chargé la communauté internationale d'appliquer ce principe aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes.

50. L'obligation de coopération créée, pour tous les États, le devoir positif de participer conjointement, au nom de la communauté internationale, à des actions licites visant à mettre fin aux violations graves de l'État contrevenant⁶⁸. Sans entrer dans les détails sur les formes de coopération qui peuvent être requises, l'obligation établit néanmoins le devoir de prendre des mesures collectives en cas de violations graves. Elle s'appuie sur l'obligation de coopération énoncée dans la Déclaration relative aux principes du droit international touchant les relations amicales et la coopération entre les États conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies, adoptée par l'Assemblée générale dans sa résolution 2625 (XXV), en octobre 1970.

Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies

51. L'Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies dispose que :

« [l]es Membres de l'Organisation conviennent d'accepter et d'appliquer les décisions du Conseil de sécurité conformément à la [...] Charte ».

L'opinion qui prévaut en ce qui concerne la portée de l'Article 25 est que les résolutions adoptées par le Conseil de sécurité qui comportent une décision, plutôt qu'une simple recommandation, constituent des décisions ayant force obligatoire pour tous les Membres de l'ONU et doivent être respectées et appliquées⁶⁹. Ce caractère contraignant des décisions du Conseil découle du fait que tous les États, en acceptant de devenir Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ont consenti à être liés par les dispositions de la Charte⁷⁰.

52. L'interprétation judiciaire la plus importante du sens et de la portée de l'Article 25 a été donnée par la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif sur la Namibie, de 1971. Dans son commentaire sur l'article 25, la Cour s'est prononcée sur trois grandes questions. Premièrement, elle a rejeté l'argument avancé par le régime d'apartheid de l'Afrique du Sud selon lequel l'Article 25 ne s'appliquait qu'aux cas où une résolution du Conseil de sécurité mentionnait expressément le Chapitre VII (le chapitre de la Charte sur l'action en cas de menace contre la paix ou de rupture de la paix)⁷¹. Dans cette conclusion, elle a confirmé que le Conseil était habilité à prendre des décisions juridiquement contraignantes qui ne concernaient pas le Chapitre VII, ce qui lui permettait de garantir l'efficacité de son action s'agissant de faire respecter toute une série de ses résolutions relatives à un ensemble de crises, de violations du ⁶⁶ Nina H.B. Jørgensen, « The obligation of non-assistance to the responsible State », in Crawford, Pellet et Olleson, dir., The Law of International Responsibility.

⁶⁷ Projet d'articles et commentaires y relatifs, commentaire sur l'art 41.

⁶⁸ Nina H.B. Jørgensen, « The obligation of cooperation », in Crawford, Pellet et Olleson, dir., The Law of International Responsibility.

⁶⁹ Bruno Simma et al., The Charter of the United Nations: A Commentary, 3^e éd. (New York, Oxford University Press), 2013, p. 454.

⁷⁰ Hisahi Owada, « Problems of interaction between the international and domestic legal orders », Asian Journal of International Law, vol. 5, n° 2 (juillet 2015).

⁷¹ Conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain) nonobstant la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 1971, p. 16, par. 113.

droit international et d'actes de non-respect de décisions antérieures prises par des organes des Nations Unies.

53. Deuxièmement, dans son avis consultatif sur la Namibie, la Cour a établi un critère juridique viable pour déterminer quand le libellé d'une résolution du Conseil de sécurité constituait une décision et avait, de ce fait, force obligatoire pour les États Membres de l'ONU. Elle a déclaré qu'il fallait soigneusement analyser le libellé d'une résolution du Conseil de sécurité avant de pouvoir conclure à son effet obligatoire, compte tenu :

- Des termes de la résolution à interpréter ;
- Des débats ayant précédé son adoption ;
- Des dispositions de la Charte invoquées ;
- De toutes autres circonstances pertinentes⁷².

Dans son avis consultatif sur la Namibie, la Cour a revu le libellé de la résolution 276 \(1970\) du Conseil sur le mandat, expiré, du régime d'apartheid de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie. Elle en a conclu que les paragraphes 2 et 5 de la résolution étaient juridiquement obligatoires pour tous les États Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, « qui sont ainsi tenus de les accepter et de les appliquer »⁷³ :

- Au paragraphe 2 de la résolution 276 \(1970\), le Conseil « déclare » que la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie est illégale ;
- Au paragraphe 5, il « demande à tous les États » de s'abstenir de toutes relations avec l'Afrique du Sud qui sont incompatibles avec le paragraphe 2.

Le Rapporteur spécial adopte la position selon laquelle le libellé employé par le Conseil dans une résolution pour faire une déclaration, exiger une action d'un État Membre ou se prononcer sur l'illégalité d'une situation est susceptible de constituer une décision au sens de l'Article 25.

54. Troisièmement, dans son avis consultatif sur la Namibie, la Cour a expressément abordé la question de la responsabilité juridique de la communauté internationale. Elle a déclaré que, lorsque le Conseil de sécurité adopte une décision aux termes de l'Article 25 de la Charte, celle-ci est juridiquement contraignante pour tous les États Membres⁷⁴. La Cour a ensuite développé le devoir de responsabilité de la communauté internationale lorsqu'un organe compétent des Nations Unies constate d'une manière obligatoire qu'une situation est illégale. Elle a jugé que « cette constatation ne peut rester sans conséquence » et que les Membres de l'ONU auraient « une obligation [...] de mettre fin à cette situation ». Elle a poursuivi en déclarant que « [c]ette décision entraîne une conséquence juridique, celle de mettre fin à une situation irrégulière »⁷⁵.

55. Les débats récemment tenus au Conseil de sécurité sur le caractère contraignant de ses résolutions indiquent que certains de ses membres principaux admettent que ces résolutions créent des obligations juridiques pour les États Membres de l'ONU. Lors d'une session extraordinaire du Conseil consacrée au Moyen-Orient, tenue en juillet 2019, le Représentant permanent de l'Allemagne a fait expressément allusion, comme suit, au caractère contraignant des résolutions adoptées par le Conseil sur l'occupation par Israël du territoire palestinien, en particulier de la résolution 2334 \(2016\) :

⁷² Ibid., par. 114.

⁷³ Ibid., par. 115.

⁷⁴ Ibid., par. 116.

⁷⁵ Ibid., par. 117.

« Nous croyons dans les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité ; pour nous, ce sont des dispositions contraignantes du droit international. Comme je l'ai dit, nous croyons en la force du droit international et nous ne croyons pas dans le droit du plus fort. Pour nous, la résolution 2334 (2016) – pour citer la plus récente résolution du Conseil de sécurité – a force de loi et reflète le consensus international. »⁷⁶

56. S'exprimant après le Représentant permanent de l'Allemagne, la Représentante permanente du Royaume-Uni a exprimé en ces termes son accord avec lui sur le caractère contraignant des résolutions du Conseil de sécurité :

« Je voudrais revenir sur une chose qu'a dite le représentant de l'Allemagne concernant le droit international. Nous convenons avec lui que le Conseil de sécurité a la responsabilité du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales et nous reconnaissons tous que le conflit arabo-israélien pose une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Il est donc normal que nous ayons adopté des résolutions à cet égard. Nous sommes tenus de respecter ces résolutions et de les mettre en œuvre, comme nous le faisons dans d'autres domaines. Cela constitue en effet la base des travaux du Conseil. »⁷⁷

57. De l'avis du Rapporteur spécial, toutes les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité dans lesquelles celui-ci conclut à l'illégalité des colonies de peuplement israéliennes, à l'illégalité de l'annexion israélienne de Jérusalem-Est et au non-respect par Israël des obligations juridiques que lui impose le droit international, ou dans lesquelles il fait des déclarations sur tout aspect de l'occupation israélienne, ont force obligatoire et doivent être respectées par Israël. Le non-respect par Israël de toute décision de ce type fait peser sur tous les autres États Membres la responsabilité de faire respecter ces obligations dans le cadre de la Charte.

B. Occupation du territoire palestinien et impunité d'Israël

58. L'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël, qui dure depuis plus de 52 ans et peut, de ce fait, être considérée comme la plus longue occupation de guerre du monde moderne, présente deux grandes particularités. Premièrement, elle a été marquée, à de très nombreuses reprises, par de graves violations intentionnelles du droit international, notamment du droit humanitaire et du droit des droits de l'homme. L'annexion d'un territoire occupé, de jure ou de facto, est illégale (A/73/447, par. 24 à 59). L'implantation de colonies de civils sur un territoire occupé est une violation grave de la quatrième Convention de Genève⁷⁸ et un crime de guerre au sens du Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale⁷⁹. De par son emplacement, sa pérennité et son immuabilité, la construction du mur de séparation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé peut être considérée comme étant contraire au droit international⁸⁰. Comme mentionné dans divers rapports de l'ONU, il est possible qu'Israël ait commis des crimes de guerre dans le cadre de ses opérations militaires menées à Gaza (voir A/HRC/12/48, A/HRC/29/CRP.4 et A/HRC/40/74). L'ONU ainsi que des défenseurs ⁷⁶ Heusgen, déclaration faite lors du débat public du Conseil de sécurité consacré au Moyen-Orient.

⁷⁷ Karen Pierce, Représentante permanente du Royaume-Uni auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, « Political and economic progress in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories », allocution prononcée lors de la séance d'information du Conseil de sécurité consacrée à la situation au Moyen-Orient, le 23 juillet 2019.

⁷⁸ Quatrième Convention de Genève, art. 49 et Protocole additionnel, art. 85 4) a).

⁷⁹ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, art. 8 2) b) viii).

⁸⁰ Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, Recueil des arrêts, avis consultatifs et ordonnances de la Cour internationale de Justice, 2004, p. 136, par. 142.

internationaux, israéliens et palestiniens des droits de la personne ont par ailleurs fait état, informations crédibles à l'appui, de nombreuses violations systématiques de ces droits (voir A/HRC/40/43). Le Rapporteur spécial a déjà fait savoir par le passé que, du fait des violations flagrantes des principes fondamentaux du droit moderne de l'occupation qui avaient été commises, l'occupation elle-même était devenue illégale (voir A/72/556).

59. Deuxièmement, la communauté internationale se montre très réticente à l'idée de prendre de véritables sanctions à l'encontre d'Israël pour son occupation permanente du territoire palestinien et les graves violations du droit international dont il est l'auteur. En dépit des nombreuses résolutions adoptées par divers organes de l'ONU l'exhortant à renoncer à l'occupation, à mettre fin à ses activités de colonisation, à annuler l'annexion de Jérusalem-Est, à respecter toutes les obligations qui lui incombent en matière de droits de la personne, à enquêter sur les crimes de guerre présumés, à faciliter le retour des réfugiés palestiniens dans leurs foyers et à cesser d'entraver le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien, l'État d'Israël refuse encore et toujours de se plier à ces directives émanant de la communauté internationale. Il a en effet bien compris que la communauté des nations – en particulier celle des pays industrialisés occidentaux – n'avait pas la volonté politique de mettre fin à son impunité et que son comportement agressif n'entraînait que rarement de véritables conséquences. Comme le rapporte le journaliste israélien Gideon Levy, aucun pays ne dépend autant du soutien de la communauté internationale qu'Israël qui, pourtant, se permet de défier le monde comme peu osent le faire⁸¹.

Résolutions du Conseil de sécurité

60. L'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël va directement à l'encontre d'un certain nombre de résolutions et de décisions du Conseil de sécurité.

61. Jérusalem-Est. En août 1980, le Conseil de sécurité a considéré, dans sa résolution 478 \(1980\), que l'annexion de jure de Jérusalem-Est par Israël cette année-là était nulle et non avenue et devait être rapportée immédiatement. Il a ainsi décidé de ne pas reconnaître la loi fondamentale et les autres actions d'Israël qui, du fait de cette loi, cherchaient à modifier le caractère et le statut de Jérusalem. En décembre 2016, le Conseil a réaffirmé les dispositions de cette résolution en adoptant sa résolution 2334 \(2016\). Pourtant, près de quarante ans après l'adoption de la résolution 478 \(1980\), Israël continue d'en violer les dispositions et poursuit de plus belle son occupation et son annexion de Jérusalem-Est.

62. Colonies de peuplement. Le Conseil de sécurité a affirmé, dans ses résolutions 446 \(1979\), 452 \(1979\) et 465 \(1980\), que la construction de colonies de peuplement par Israël était contraire au droit international. Dans sa résolution 2334 \(2016\), il a par la suite ajouté que celles-ci constituaient une violation flagrante du droit international et de nouveau exigé d'Israël qu'il arrête immédiatement et complètement toutes ses activités de peuplement dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et respecte pleinement toutes les obligations juridiques qui lui incombent à cet égard. Auparavant, en 2013, la mission internationale indépendante d'établissement des faits nommée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme pour étudier les effets des colonies de peuplement israéliennes avait constaté que, travaux de construction et d'expansion des colonies, ces dernières continuaient d'exister tandis que de nouvelles structures étaient créées » (A/HRC/22/63, par. 100).

« malgré toutes les résolutions pertinentes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dénonçant le caractère illégal des colonies de peuplement et demandant la cessation des activités de peuplement israéliennes et de la planification de

⁸¹ Gideon Levy, « Netanyahu's right: the occupation can actually go on forever », Haaretz, 25 septembre 2016.

Dans chacun des trois derniers rapports trimestriels qu'il a présentés au Conseil concernant la mise en œuvre de la résolution 2334 (2016), le Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et Représentant personnel du Secrétaire général auprès de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine et de l'Autorité palestinienne a déclaré, s'agissant de l'exigence faite par le Conseil à Israël d'arrêter toutes ses activités de peuplement, qu'aucune mesure n'avait été prise dans ce sens au cours de la période considérée. Il a indiqué, comme il l'avait déjà fait par le passé, que le Gouvernement israélien avait au contraire continué d'annoncer d'importants plans de construction de logements dans les colonies et le lancement de chantiers⁸². En 1983, on comptait 99 000 colons israéliens en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est⁸³ ; aujourd'hui, ceux-ci sont au nombre de 650 000, soit une augmentation de plus de 550 %⁸⁴.

63. Annexion. Le Conseil de sécurité a rappelé à au moins huit reprises – y compris, et ce pour la dernière fois, dans sa résolution 2334 (2016) – la règle juridique selon laquelle l'acquisition de territoires par la force était inadmissible. Bien que le Conseil ait qualifié d'illégale l'annexion par Israël de Jérusalem-Est, en 1980, et du plateau du Golan syrien, en 1981, force est de constater que le pays n'a pas renoncé à ces annexions de jure et que rien ni personne n'a empêché ses dirigeants politiques d'intensifier l'annexion de facto de la Cisjordanie par la confiscation continue de terres et la poursuite d'une colonisation tous azimuts. Les dirigeants politiques israéliens continuent en outre d'exprimer régulièrement leur adhésion à l'annexion officielle de tout ou partie de la Cisjordanie (A/73/447, par. 58). En septembre 2019, le Premier ministre israélien, Benjamin Nétanyahou, a annoncé qu'en cas de retour au pouvoir, son gouvernement annexerait la vallée du Jourdain et d'autres « espaces vitaux »⁸⁵.

64. Non-respect des règles par Israël, Puissance occupante. En 1980, le Conseil de sécurité a réaffirmé, dans sa résolution 476 (1980), la nécessité impérieuse de mettre fin à l'occupation prolongée des territoires arabes occupés par Israël depuis 1967 et déploré vivement le refus continu d'Israël, Puissance occupante, de respecter ses résolutions pertinentes ainsi que celles de l'Assemblée générale. Deux mois plus tard, dans sa résolution 478 (1980), il a noté qu'Israël ne s'était pas conformé à la résolution 476 (1980) et réaffirmé sa détermination d'examiner, en application des dispositions pertinentes de la Charte des Nations Unies, des moyens pratiques en vue d'assurer l'application intégrale de sa résolution 476 (1980) au cas où Israël ne s'y conformerait pas. Près de quarante ans plus tard, Israël continue d'afficher le même mépris à l'égard du Conseil de sécurité, alors que rien n'est fait pour mettre un terme

⁸² Nickolay Mladenov, Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, propos tenus lors de la séance d'information du Conseil de sécurité sur la situation au Moyen-Orient, le 20 juin 2019, et Nickolay Mladenov, Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, propos tenus lors de la séance d'information du Conseil de sécurité sur l'application de la résolution 2334 (2016), le 20 septembre 2019.

⁸³ Foundation for Middle East Peace, « Comprehensive settlement population, 1972–2011 », disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://fmep.org/resource/comprehensive-settlement-population-1972-2010/>.

⁸⁴ Peace Now, « Population », base de données « Settlement Watch », disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/population> ; Peace Now, « Jerusalem », base de données « Settlement Watch », disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlementsdata/jerusalem>.

⁸⁵ Times of Israel, « Netanyahu: after Jordan Valley and settlements, I'll annex other 'vital areas' », 16 septembre 2019.

aux violations continues du droit international dont il est l'auteur et que les appels et avertissements diplomatiques qui lui sont adressés en vue de mettre fin à l'occupation demeurent purement et simplement ignorés.

Obligation de rendre compte

65. L'ONU a demandé à de multiples occasions que la communauté internationale veille à faire appliquer le principe de responsabilité et mette fin au climat d'impunité entourant l'occupation israélienne.

66. Dans quatre grands rapports indépendants établis depuis 2009 à la demande du Conseil des droits de l'homme, il est invariablement question des graves violations du droit des droits de l'homme et du droit humanitaire commises par Israël, de la nécessité de faire répondre Israël de ses actes et de la notion d'exceptionnalisme s'appliquant à ce pays⁸⁶. Dans le rapport sur le conflit de Gaza pour 2008 et 2009, on a ainsi expliqué que la justice et le respect de l'état de droit constituaient le fondement indispensable de la paix et que la situation d'impunité qui perdurait avait créé dans le Territoire palestinien occupé une crise de la justice exigeant l'adoption des mesures voulues (A/HRC/12/48, par. 1958). Par ailleurs, dans son rapport de 2013 sur les effets des colonies de peuplement israéliennes, la mission internationale indépendante d'établissement des faits a exhorté Israël à garantir l'établissement de toutes les responsabilités s'agissant de l'ensemble des violations et à mettre fin à la politique d'impunité (A/HRC/22/63, par. 114), tandis que les auteurs du rapport établi au sujet du conflit, en 2014, se sont inquiétés de l'impunité totale dont jouissaient les forces israéliennes pour les violations du droit international humanitaire et du droit international des droits de l'homme qu'elles auraient commises et ont indiqué qu'Israël devait obliger les auteurs de violations à rendre compte de leurs actes, coupant ainsi court à la déplorable tendance observée récemment en la matière (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, par. 664). Enfin, on peut voir, dans le rapport de 2019 sur les manifestations survenues à Gaza en 2018, qu'à ce jour, le Gouvernement israélien n'a jamais mené de véritable enquête sur les crimes et violations commis contre des Palestiniens ni poursuivi de commandants ou de soldats, et que l'insuffisance des mesures d'établissement des responsabilités prises à la suite des opérations « Plomb durci » et « Bordure protectrice » jettent le doute quant à la volonté de l'État de contrôler les actions des dirigeants militaires et civils (A/HRC/40/74, par. 111).

67. Ces dernières années, tant l'Assemblée générale que le Conseil des droits de l'homme ont davantage insisté sur la nécessité de veiller à ce qu'Israël, Puissance occupante, soit astreint à rendre des comptes. Ainsi, dans une de ses résolutions relatives aux colonies de peuplement israéliennes, l'Assemblée a demandé que l'on envisage de prendre des mesures de responsabilisation, comme le prescrivait le droit international, étant donné que les exigences en vue d'un arrêt immédiat et complet de toutes les activités de peuplement n'avaient pas été satisfaites par Israël (résolution 73/98 de l'Assemblée générale, par. 6). De même, en mars 2019, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a fait part de son inquiétude et souligné la nécessité pour les États d'enquêter sur les violations graves des Conventions de Genève de 1949 et d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire et d'engager des poursuites afin de mettre un terme à l'impunité, de s'acquitter de l'obligation qui leur incombait d'assurer le respect de ces instruments et de promouvoir l'obligation de rendre des comptes sur le plan international (voir la résolution 40/13 du Conseil des droits de l'homme).

⁸⁶ Alessandro Tonutti, International Commissions of Inquiry and Palestine: Overview and Impact – Study Analysis (Ramallah, Al-Haq Centre for Applied International Law, 2016).

68. L'impunité dont jouit Israël et le fait que cet État puisse poursuivre son occupation sans être inquiété ont aussi suscité des réactions de la part du Secrétaire général. Ainsi, en 2010, Ban Ki-Moon, alors à la tête de l'ONU, a déclaré que l'inexistence de progrès significatifs sur la voie d'un règlement politique et la poursuite des violations du droit international des droits de l'homme et du droit international humanitaire étaient aggravées par l'impunité entourant les violations commises par le passé et que les parties devaient placer la lutte contre l'impunité en tête de leurs priorités (A/71/364, par. 6).

69. La non-application du principe de responsabilité est également au cœur des préoccupations du Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme. Dans un rapport détaillé sur l'établissement des responsabilités publié en juin 2017 (A/HRC/35/19), le Haut-Commissaire de l'époque, Zeid Ra'ad Al Hussein, a examiné 551 recommandations formulées depuis 2009 par les mécanismes compétents du Conseil des droits de l'homme pour déterminer dans quelle mesure Israël respectait les obligations lui incombant en matière de droits de la personne dans le Territoire palestinien occupé. Il a ainsi constaté que, sur les 178 recommandations relatives à l'établissement de responsabilités et à l'accès à la justice, Israël en avait appliqué deux complètement et huit partiellement, les 168 (90 %) restantes n'ayant quant à elles pas du tout été suivies. Dans le même ordre d'idées, il s'est aperçu que 91 % des recommandations relatives à l'arrestation et à la détention de Palestiniens (pour 8 % de recommandations appliquées partiellement), 100 % de celles portant sur les colonies de peuplement et 97 % de celles ayant trait à la liberté de circulation n'avaient pas non plus été appliquées. Au total, Israël avait donc pleinement mis en œuvre moins de 0,5 % des recommandations relatives aux droits de l'homme qui lui avaient été adressées. Dans ses conclusions, le Haut-Commissaire a rappelé à la communauté internationale que l'ensemble des parties prenantes devaient reconnaître que l'observation du droit international était une condition sine qua non de la paix (ibid., par. 81).

70. Dans un rapport sur l'établissement des responsabilités publié en mars 2019 (A/HRC/40/43), la Haute-Commissaire actuelle, Michelle Bachelet, a décrit en détail le climat d'impunité caractérisant depuis longtemps l'occupation israélienne.

- S'agissant de l'escalade des hostilités à Gaza en 2014, elle a par exemple appelé l'attention sur le nombre d'affaires classées par le Procureur général militaire d'Israël sans avoir fait l'objet d'une enquête pénale alors qu'elles concernaient de graves allégations de violations du droit international et qu'il existait un commencement de preuve.
- En ce qui concerne la situation à Gaza en 2018 et en 2019, elle a constaté que les forces de sécurité israéliennes avaient souvent fait un usage excessif de la force, tuant ou blessant un grand nombre de manifestants palestiniens en dehors des hostilités.
- Elle a par ailleurs noté que les défenseurs des droits de l'homme et les acteurs de la société civile étaient souvent victimes d'actes d'intimidation, de menaces et d'arrestations de la part d'Israël.

Dans son rapport, la Haute-Commissaire a évoqué la responsabilité qui incombait à la communauté internationale d'adopter des mesures visant à inciter les États à se conformer au droit international humanitaire et conclu que le non-établissement des responsabilités compromettrait les possibilités d'instaurer durablement la paix et la sécurité et que les parties devaient placer la lutte contre l'impunité en tête de leurs priorités (ibid., par. 54).

71. Paradoxalement, l'absence d'obligation de rendre compte est aussi frappante que tragique. Si la communauté internationale a, à d'innombrables occasions et avec beaucoup de discernement, voté en faveur de résolutions dans lesquelles diverses instances des Nations Unies reconnaissaient le non-établissement des responsabilités d'Israël et l'impunité dont celui-ci bénéficiait depuis une cinquantaine d'années ou accepté des rapports publics émanant de commissions d'enquête indépendantes et de hauts fonctionnaires de l'ONU allant dans le même sens, elle a par ailleurs fait preuve d'une indolence extraordinaire lorsqu'il s'est agi d'appliquer ses propres lois et décisions et de remplir les obligations que lui imposaient le droit humanitaire et ses précédents politiques. On est donc en droit de se demander s'il nous faut tout simplement accepter que, dans le cas de l'occupation de la Palestine par Israël, le droit international soit davantage du côté du pouvoir que de celui de la justice.

C. Des contre-mesures pour remédier à l'impunité

72. En politique internationale et dans la diplomatie, les contre-mesures sont couramment utilisées pour contraindre, par des voies légitimes et efficaces, les organisations et les États récalcitrants à se plier au droit international et à mettre un terme à des actions qui causent un dommage significatif à des tiers. Le recours à des contre-mesures vise à mettre fin à un fait illicite survenu antérieurement, celles-ci ne devant pas être envisagées comme une forme de châtement ou de répression d'un comportement illicite. Les contre-mesures doivent cibler l'État offensé, être réversibles sous réserve que l'État en question adopte un changement de comportement notable, respecter la Charte des Nations Unies (y compris toutes les obligations découlant du droit humanitaire et du droit des droits de l'homme) et être proportionnées et efficaces⁸⁷. Face à une violation grave, par un État ou une organisation, d'une obligation due à la communauté internationale, les autres États ont non seulement le droit mais aussi l'obligation de prendre des contre-mesures. On entend, notamment, par « violations graves » les atteintes aux normes impératives du droit international, y compris les violations graves du droit international humanitaire, qui sont légion dans le Territoire palestinien occupé.

73. Parmi les contre-mesures couramment mises en œuvre dans le monde moderne, on peut citer : a) les démarches diplomatiques et les déclarations publiques ; b) les sanctions diplomatiques ; c) les sanctions commerciales ; d) la réduction ou l'interruption de la coopération et de l'aide fournie ; e) les sanctions financières et économiques ; f) les interdictions de vol ; g) l'application d'embargos sur les armes ; h) la restriction des déplacements. Ces dernières années, des contre-mesures ont été adoptées pour promouvoir la démocratie et les droits de la personne, faire avancer l'État de droit, lutter contre les annexions et les agressions, combattre le terrorisme, faire face aux menaces contre la paix et la sécurité internationales, remédier aux crises humanitaires graves, protéger les minorités vulnérables et mettre fin aux conflits et aux guerres civiles.

74. D'après les spécialistes de la question, les contre-mesures et les sanctions répondent à trois objectifs principaux, à savoir : a) contraindre une organisation ou un État à modifier son comportement ; b) empêcher une organisation ou un État de se livrer à une activité interdite ; c) appeler l'attention sur une organisation ou un État pour ses violations des lois ou normes internationales. Il est par ailleurs particulièrement important de tenir compte, dans leur application, des critères ci-après⁸⁸ :

⁸⁷ Voir Jeremy Matam Farrall, United Nations Sanctions and the Rule of Law (New York, Cambridge University Press, 2007).

- Les contre-mesures et les sanctions sont extrêmement efficaces lorsque les parties entretiennent une relation cordiale ou un partenariat commercial étroit. En effet, celles-ci ont plus à perdre que si leurs relations étaient distantes ou conflictuelles, ce qui explique que les États faisant partie d'une vaste alliance sont plus enclins à céder devant leurs alliés, dans l'intérêt supérieur de leur relation.
- Les contre-mesures sont plus efficaces sur les démocraties que sur les autocraties. Les dirigeants démocratiques sont obligés de se soucier de l'opinion de la population et des institutions nationales indépendantes, qui accordent souvent une grande valeur à la qualité des relations internationales.
- Plus les retombées sont grandes, plus la sanction est efficace. Si un véritable changement de comportement est le but recherché, les contre-mesures et les sanctions entraînant des coûts économiques élevés sont les plus efficaces. Des sanctions de moindre portée peuvent également être utilisées à titre de mise en garde, mais il faudra en élargir rapidement la portée si elles n'entraînent pas une modification du comportement répréhensible.
- Si une bonne coopération internationale est importante, elle n'est pas forcément gage de succès. La participation d'une organisation internationale dont l'alliance de pays concernée et l'État fautif sont membres augmente les chances de succès.
- Il est essentiel de choisir des contre-mesures appropriées. Toutes les sanctions ne sont pas adaptées à n'importe quelle situation. Ainsi, la clé du succès est de repérer les faiblesses de l'organisation ou de l'état visé.
- L'objectif des sanctions doit être clair. Cette condition permet de s'assurer un meilleur soutien du public, de préciser les contre-mesures à utiliser et d'expliquer quand l'objectif recherché a été atteint ou quand un changement de cap doit être opéré.

75. Dans ses commentaires de 2016 sur les Conventions de Genève, le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge a recensé une série de mesures non exhaustives pouvant être prises, individuellement ou collectivement, par les Hautes Parties contractantes pour faire respecter le droit international humanitaire⁸⁹ :

- Aborder les questions de respect des obligations dans le cadre d'un dialogue diplomatique ;
- Exercer des pressions diplomatiques au moyen de protestations confidentielles ou de dénonciations publiques ;
- Subordonner les opérations conjointes au respect par un partenaire de la coalition des obligations qui lui incombent en vertu des Conventions ou prévoir des opérations conjointes visant à prévenir les violations de ces obligations ;
- Intervenir directement auprès des commandants en cas de violation, par exemple une attaque illégale imminente contre des civils, commise par un partenaire de la coalition ;

⁸⁸ Gary Clyde Hufbauer et consorts, Economic Sanctions Reconsidered, 3^e éd. (Washington, D.C., Peterson Institute for International Economics, 2007).

⁸⁹ Voir https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=72239588AFA66200C1257F7D00367DBD#_Toc452378926, par. 181.

- Renvoyer, le cas échéant, une situation à la Commission internationale humanitaire d'établissement des faits ;
- Demander la tenue d'une réunion des Hautes Parties contractantes ;
- Appliquer des mesures de rétorsion, telles que l'arrêt de négociations en cours ou le refus de ratifier des accords déjà signés, le non-renouvellement de privilèges commerciaux et la réduction ou la suspension de l'aide publique volontaire ;
- Adopter des contre-mesures légales telles que des embargos sur les armes, des restrictions commerciales et financières, des interdictions de vol et une réduction ou une interruption de l'aide fournie et des accords de coopération ;
- Encadrer, restreindre ou interrompre les transferts d'armes ;
- Renvoyer la question à une instance internationale compétente, telle que le Conseil de sécurité ou l'Assemblée générale ;
- Renvoyer, dans la mesure du possible, certains problèmes spécifiques à la Cour internationale de Justice ou à un autre organe de règlement des différends ;
- Avoir recours à des mesures pénales pour réprimer les violations du droit humanitaire ;
- Appuyer l'action engagée aux niveaux national et international en vue de traduire en justice les auteurs présumés de violations graves du droit international humanitaire.

76. Il reste beaucoup à dire sur la gamme de contre-mesures dont dispose la communauté internationale pour faire appliquer efficacement le principe de responsabilité et mettre fin à l'impunité en ce qui concerne l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël, le Rapporteur spécial se réservant, au demeurant, la possibilité de s'attarder sur cette question dans un prochain rapport. On peut néanmoins faire remarquer à ce stade que la communauté internationale est particulièrement bien équipée pour trouver une solution positive, durable et juste à l'occupation – laquelle qui ne prendra fin que si la communauté internationale agit résolument, en défense du droit international et de ses valeurs communes, pour contraindre Israël à s'acquitter de ses obligations. Comme l'a déclaré Hagai El-Ad, directeur exécutif de B'Tselem (importante organisation israélienne de défense des droits de l'homme), au Conseil de sécurité en 2016, Israël ne va pas se réveiller un jour et, prenant conscience de la brutalité de sa politique, abandonner son régime d'oppression : la communauté internationale doit intervenir⁹⁰.

IV. Conclusion

77. Dans le monde moderne, jamais une occupation n'a-t-elle été menée de la sorte, face à une communauté internationale pleinement consciente des nombreuses violations graves du droit international commises, parfaitement au fait de l'intention manifeste et déclarée de l'occupant d'annexer un territoire et d'y établir sa souveraineté permanente, et particulièrement informée de l'ampleur des souffrances et des dépossessions infligées à une population protégée vivant sous occupation, mais si peu disposée à user des outils juridiques et politiques concrets et nombreux dont elle dispose pour faire cesser une injustice dont les preuves, écrasantes, ne manquent pourtant pas.

⁹⁰ Hagai El-Ad, directeur exécutif de B'Tselem, déclaration faite au Conseil de sécurité, le 18 octobre 2018.

78. Si la communauté internationale prenait au sérieux les responsabilités juridiques qui lui incombent de condamner et de faire cesser tout fait internationalement illicite, elle aurait depuis longtemps conclu qu'Israël, Puissance occupante, ne cherche pas réellement à mettre un terme à l'occupation. Elle aurait tiré les vraies leçons des nombreuses résolutions, jamais appliquées, du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale, de la durée excessive de l'occupation, des innombrables preuves recueillies sur le terrain et des cycles de négociations inutiles. Elle aurait reconnu que cette occupation et cette annexion n'en finiraient jamais sans une intervention décisive de sa part, en raison du déséquilibre flagrant du rapport de forces présent sur le terrain. Elle accepterait que son devoir n'est pas de superviser l'occupation, mais d'y mettre fin. Elle prendrait les mesures raisonnables et nécessaires pour dresser collectivement une liste de contre-mesures efficaces, proportionnées et adaptées aux circonstances et, en cas d'obstination de la Puissance occupante, appliquerait et intensifierait ces contre-mesures jusqu'à ce que celle-ci s'acquitte de ses obligations. Enfin, elle noterait que la prise de mesures fermes et sa détermination à faire respecter le principe de responsabilité dans ce cas précis décourageraient fortement les vellétés d'occupation de tout autre État, qui s'exposerait, lui aussi, à être rappelé à l'ordre.

V. Recommandations

79. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le Gouvernement israélien s'acquitte pleinement des obligations qui lui incombent au titre du droit international, mette fin à ses 52 années d'occupation dans un délai raisonnable et permette la réalisation du droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien.

80. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que la communauté internationale :

a) Prenne, conformément à l'article premier commun aux Conventions de Genève, aux articles sur la responsabilité des États pour fait internationalement illicite et à l'Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies, toutes les mesures nécessaires, y compris des contre-mesures et des sanctions, pour garantir le respect par Israël et toutes les autres parties concernées de l'obligation de mettre fin à l'occupation qui leur incombe en vertu du droit international ;

b) S'efforce de faire respecter par Israël les normes internationales auxquelles tous les États sont tenus de se conformer ;

c) Veille à ce que les personnalités politiques et les militaires israéliens qui sont responsables de violations graves du droit international dans le Territoire palestinien occupé aient à rendre pleinement compte de leurs actes ;

d) Adopte la recommandation formulée, en juin 2017, par le Haut-Commissaire aux droits de l'homme de l'époque, tendant à ce que l'Assemblée générale use des pouvoirs que lui confère l'alinéa a) de l'Article 96 de la Charte des Nations Unies pour demander un avis consultatif à la Cour internationale de Justice sur l'obligation juridique d'Israël de mettre fin à l'occupation et sur les obligations juridiques de la communauté internationale et les pouvoirs dont celle-ci dispose pour obliger Israël à répondre de ses actes et en finir avec son impunité ;

e) Fasse réaliser une étude des Nations Unies sur la licéité de l'annexion et de la poursuite de l'occupation du territoire palestinien par Israël.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
22 octobre 2020
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-quinzième session

Point 72 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits de l'homme :
situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967*

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, conformément à la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent rapport a été soumis après la date limite, afin de prendre en compte l'évolution récente de la situation.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le cinquième soumis à l'Assemblée générale par Michael Lynk, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il a été établi principalement à partir d'informations communiquées par des victimes, des témoins, des représentants de la société civile et des organismes des Nations Unies. Il analyse un certain nombre de problèmes touchant à la situation des droits de l'homme en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza, et est le deuxième rapport à porter tout particulièrement sur les questions de responsabilité.

I. Introduction

1. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967 donne un bref aperçu des préoccupations qui lui sont apparues, à l'issue de ses conversations et rencontres avec des représentants de la société civile, comme étant les plus pressantes en matière de droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé au moment de la présentation du rapport. Il fait ensuite une analyse détaillée des derniers problèmes en date touchant les droits de l'homme dans le territoire palestinien occupé, en mettant tout particulièrement l'accent sur le principe de responsabilité.

2. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à souligner une fois de plus que, malgré ses demandes répétées, il n'a pas encore été autorisé par Israël à accéder au territoire palestinien occupé. Il fait à nouveau valoir qu'un libre dialogue entre toutes les parties est essentiel à la protection et à la promotion des droits de l'homme et rappelle à Israël qu'il est tout disposé à y participer. Il continue par ailleurs de faire remarquer que l'accès au territoire palestinien occupé est déterminant pour comprendre la réalité de la situation des droits de l'homme dans le territoire. Le défaut systématique de coopération d'Israël avec le Rapporteur spécial est très préoccupant.

3. Le Rapporteur spécial n'a pas pu se rendre dans la région, y compris à Amman, en raison des restrictions de voyage liées à la propagation de la maladie à coronavirus (COVID-19). Toutefois, il a pu communiquer activement avec des membres de la société civile et des organismes des Nations Unies et recueillir des informations importantes sur le sujet, soumises notamment sous la forme de communications.

4. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial se concentre sur deux questions. Tout d'abord, il passe en revue les responsabilités qui incombent au Conseil de sécurité s'agissant de faire respecter les décisions qu'il prend et des directives qu'il donne sur l'occupation israélienne. Il évalue ensuite la responsabilité des entreprises privées qui mènent des activités dans les colonies israéliennes ou tirent profit de l'occupation israélienne, que ce soit directement ou indirectement.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial souhaite remercier le Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine d'avoir pleinement coopéré avec lui dans le cadre de son mandat.

6. Le Rapporteur spécial réitère son soutien au travail essentiel qu'accomplissent les organisations palestiniennes, israéliennes et internationales de défense des droits de l'homme. Ce travail est indispensable non seulement au Rapporteur dans l'accomplissement de son mandat, mais aussi à la communauté internationale dans son ensemble. Les efforts que les organisations de défense des droits de l'homme déploient pour garantir la disponibilité d'informations précises et complètes sur la situation dans le territoire palestinien occupé ne doivent pas passer inaperçus.

II. Situation actuelle des droits de l'homme

A. Incidences de la COVID-19

7. La propagation de la pandémie de COVID-19 dans le territoire palestinien occupé a accentué certaines des répercussions négatives durables de l'occupation israélienne. À certains égards, elle a encore plus mis en évidence les lacunes structurelles constatées dans certains secteurs essentiels, notamment le secteur de la santé en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, en raison des pratiques israéliennes adoptées sur le terrain. Elle a également clairement montré qu'en période de grave crise sanitaire traversant les frontières et touchant toutes les populations, un régime d'occupation à deux vitesses renforçait les inégalités en matière de droits et en particulier de droit à une santé adéquate. Malgré les conditions sur le terrain, dans la phase initiale de la pandémie, plus précisément aux mois de mars et d'avril 2020, les responsables concernés ont appliqué des mesures préventives strictes qui ont permis de freiner efficacement la propagation du virus. À l'époque, l'Autorité palestinienne et Israël ont fait preuve d'une certaine coordination, bien qu'elle n'ait été que de courte durée¹. Toutefois, on observe une augmentation exponentielle du nombre de cas depuis la fin juin, date à laquelle on ne comptait que 2 765 cas confirmés au total². Le 13 octobre, le nombre total de cas confirmés atteignait 52 292 en Cisjordanie et 4 175 à Gaza.

8. Cette augmentation exponentielle a mis à rude épreuve un secteur de la santé déjà affaibli et surchargé, en particulier à Gaza. Cette tension supplémentaire a de surcroît été aggravée par la suspension, le 19 mai, de la coordination de l'Autorité palestinienne et d'Israël en matière de sécurité, qui a fait suite à l'annonce par Israël de son projet d'annexion de certaines parties de la Cisjordanie et de la vallée du Jourdain³. Cette situation a considérablement nui à l'accès des Palestiniens aux soins de santé, et a dans l'ensemble réduit l'aide humanitaire apportée et fait baisser les revenus mensuels de l'Autorité palestinienne de plus de 80 %, limitant gravement sa capacité à payer ses employés, en particulier le personnel de santé. Israël a retenu les recettes fiscales de l'Autorité palestinienne à de nombreuses reprises dans le passé. Depuis décembre 2019, ces recettes sont à nouveau retenues. Dans son exposé au Conseil de sécurité, le Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient a indiqué qu'il était également préoccupé par le fait que le niveau de coordination soit largement en deçà de celui qui existait au début de l'année, lorsque la première vague du virus a déferlé, car cela pourrait avoir de graves conséquences sur la capacité à maîtriser la propagation du virus et à atténuer son incidence sur la vie des personnes (voir S/2020/736, annexe 1).

9. Au-delà des conséquences de cette suspension, les données recueillies sur le terrain démontrent qu'en imposant un certain nombre de mesures, Israël, Puissance occupante, a considérablement réduit l'accès des Palestiniens aux soins de santé et à l'aide humanitaire. Ces mesures comprennent la mise en place d'une vaste infrastructure de colonisation dotée de zones de sécurité et de routes de contournement, du mur de séparation, de politiques d'aménagement et d'un vaste réseau de points de contrôle fixes et mobiles qui divisent de fait la Cisjordanie en zones séparées, fragmentées et déconnectées. S'agissant de l'accès à des soins de santé adéquats, et notamment à des hôpitaux mieux équipés et plus spécialisés, les Palestiniens continuent de faire face à des restrictions de mouvement non seulement en Cisjordanie mais aussi lorsqu'ils tentent de recevoir des soins à Jérusalem-Est. En outre, des retards continuent d'être signalés en ce qui concerne la réception de matériel médical vital, notamment les kits de dépistage et autres équipements nécessaires à la prévention⁴.

10. Le contrôle qu'Israël continue d'exercer sur le maintien de l'ordre, les politiques d'urbanisme et la reconstruction dans la zone C, qui représente plus de 60 % de la Cisjordanie occupée, a également entravé les efforts déployés pour lutter contre la pandémie. Les Palestiniens vivant dans la zone C, dont le nombre est actuellement estimé à près de 300 000, font face à des complications supplémentaires pour accéder à des soins de santé adéquats. On empêche ainsi les Palestiniens de prendre des

¹ Voir : <https://www.un.org/press/fr/2020/sc14167.doc.htm>.

² Voir : Organisation mondiale de la Santé, <https://app.powerbi.com/view?r=eyJrJjoiODJlYWM1YTEtNDIxZS00OTFILThkZjktNDAlODY2OGQ3NGJkIiwidCI6ImY2MTBjMG13LWJkMjQlNGZlOS04MTBiLTNkYzI4MGFmYjU5MCIslmMiOj9>.

³ Voir : <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/end-palestinian-authority-coordination-israel-response>.

⁴ Voir : <https://mondoweiss.net/2020/09/palestinians-faces-consistent-testing-kit-shortages-during-covid-19/>.

initiatives pour freiner la propagation du virus, alors que, bien souvent, les autorités israéliennes compétentes ne leur proposent aucune alternative. Les tentatives menées pour coordonner l'entrée de la police palestinienne dans la zone H2 à Hébron et ainsi renforcer les mesures de prévention avec les Palestiniens qui y vivent ont jusqu'à présent échoué. Une dynamique similaire a pu être observée à Jérusalem-Est. En avril, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont fait une descente dans une clinique de test COVID-19 dans le quartier palestinien de Silwan sous prétexte qu'elle était gérée et soutenue par l'Autorité palestinienne⁵. Alors que les taux d'infection étaient en nette augmentation pendant cette période, les Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est n'avaient pas un accès adéquat aux installations médicales, aux services de santé et aux kits de dépistage. Le fait qu'Israël ne fournisse pas de données agrégées sur les cas de contamination entrave également l'action menée contre la pandémie. Depuis lors, les autorités israéliennes ont ouvert un autre centre dans le quartier. Avec la récente augmentation du nombre de cas, les activités des professionnels de la santé à Jérusalem-Est restent soumises à de sévères restrictions, la Puissance occupante continuant de saper les efforts de développement sanitaire.

11. Un autre élément inquiétant est l'augmentation du taux de contamination parmi les Palestiniens placés dans les centres de détention israéliens, un enfant ayant notamment été atteint⁶. En avril, le Rapporteur spécial avait demandé la libération des détenus les plus vulnérables, notamment les enfants, les femmes, les personnes âgées et les personnes présentant des pathologies préexistantes. L'augmentation du nombre de détenus palestiniens contaminés montre à nouveau qu'il est absolument nécessaire de libérer les prisonniers politiques palestiniens ou de leur proposer des conditions de détention permettant d'assurer leur sécurité.

12. Comme les taux de contamination augmentent considérablement dans le territoire palestinien occupé, les incidences des problèmes structurels résultant directement de l'occupation et des pratiques israéliennes pèseront de plus en plus sur la population. L'ensemble complexe de mesures que la Puissance occupante applique dans différentes zones, qui se traduit souvent par des pratiques discriminatoires, ne peut qu'aggraver les répercussions de l'occupation, a fortiori dans le contexte d'une crise sanitaire aussi grave. Même en plein milieu d'une grave pandémie, des démolitions de maisons palestiniennes et des cas de recours excessif à la force continuent d'être enregistrés et ont même augmenté dans certains cas. À la lumière des taux actuellement alarmants de contamination par la COVID-19, il est impératif qu'Israël, en tant que Puissance occupante, mette fin à ces pratiques et assure aux Palestiniens une meilleure protection et un meilleur accès aux services de santé. En l'absence de telles mesures, les Palestiniens, qui font déjà face au fléau de l'occupation, verront inévitablement leurs conditions sanitaires empirer.

B. Projet d'annexion et expansion illégale des colonies par Israël

13. Le 20 avril, dans le cadre d'un accord d'unité, le Premier ministre israélien, Benjamin Nétanyahou, et le chef du parti Bleu Blanc, Benjamin Gantz, ont convenu d'engager officiellement un processus d'annexion de certaines parties de la Cisjordanie et de la vallée du Jourdain⁷. Le projet d'annexion aurait touché un tiers de la Cisjordanie s'il avait été mis en œuvre. Le Rapporteur spécial a souligné qu'en

⁵ Voir : www.middleeastmonitor.com/20200416-israel-closes-coronavirus-testing-centre-in-occupied-east-jerusalem/.

⁶ Voir : www.dci-palestine.org/palestinian_child_detainee_tests_positive_for_coronavirus_in_israeli_prison.

⁷ Voir : <https://www.amnesty.org/fr/latest/news/2020/07/israelopt-10-things-you-need-to-know-about-annexation/>.

plus d'entraîner une cascade de violations des droits de l'homme, toute annexion, même partielle, constituerait une grave violation du droit international et de la Charte des Nations Unies et créerait un dangereux précédent pour l'ordre international, fondé sur des règles⁸. La Haute-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, Michelle Bachelet, a également déclaré le 29 juin que l'annexion était illégale et qu'elle aurait des conséquences désastreuses non seulement pour les Palestiniens mais aussi pour Israël lui-même⁹.

14. Si les plans officiels d'annexion semblent avoir été retardés pour le moment, il est impératif de souligner que l'annexion de facto du territoire palestinien par Israël est en cours et s'est intensifiée en 2020, notamment par l'expansion illégale des colonies. Rien qu'en 2020, Israël a approuvé ou avancé la construction de plus de 12 150 logements, le chiffre le plus élevé jamais enregistré depuis 2012, date à laquelle de tels chiffres ont commencé à être enregistrés par Peace Now¹⁰. Plus de 5 000 de ces logements ont été approuvés rien qu'à la mi-octobre. Les colonies et la construction de colonies sont illégales au regard du droit international et constituent l'un des principaux obstacles à la paix. Parallèlement, les démolitions de structures appartenant à des Palestiniens ont augmenté de manière significative au cours de l'année passée. Rien qu'en 2020, plus de 560 structures ont été détruites, entraînant le déplacement de 747 Palestiniens¹¹. Le Rapporteur spécial souligne que, s'il est important de contrer les plans officiels d'annexion israéliens, il est également impératif de contrer toutes les mesures qu'Israël met en œuvre sur le terrain au vu et au su de la communauté internationale et qui équivalent à une annexion de facto et conduisent à de graves violations des droits humains des Palestiniens au quotidien.

C. Gaza

15. Le blocus terrestre, maritime et aérien qu'Israël impose à Gaza est entré dans sa quatorzième année, sans qu'aucune fin ne soit en vue. En conséquence, les 2 millions d'habitants de Gaza, dont environ 1 million d'enfants, continuent de subir une crise humanitaire grave et qui empire à de multiples niveaux. Les habitants de Gaza ont vu pratiquement tous leurs droits fondamentaux bafoués sous le poids du blocus, car ils n'ont toujours pas accès à des logements, à une éducation, à une eau et à un assainissement adéquats. L'insécurité alimentaire est endémique. Gaza connaît l'un des taux de chômage les plus élevés au monde (estimé à environ 45 %), avec des niveaux de pauvreté qui dépassaient les 53 % à la fin de l'année 2019¹². L'économie de Gaza est à l'agonie, avec une croissance du produit intérieur brut pratiquement nulle en 2019 et des exportations qui ont presque disparu en raison du bouclage et des restrictions sévères (voir TD/B/67/5, par. 2 et 13).

16. Les étudiants de Gaza continuent de manquer d'infrastructures éducatives adaptées et d'outils d'enseignement à distance, en particulier dans le contexte de la pandémie actuelle. Plus de 575 000 enfants et adolescents n'ont accès ni à un équipement informatique, ni à une source d'alimentation fiable, ni à Internet¹³. On estime que seuls 30 % des ménages de Gaza ont accès à Internet, alors que les réseaux Internet tombent en panne plus de dix fois par heure en moyenne¹⁴. Malgré leur ⁸ Voir : www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=25857&LangID=E.

⁹ Voir : www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26009&LangID=E.

¹⁰ Voir : www.aljazeera.com/news/2020/10/15/israels-settlement-approvals-hit-record-high-watchdog.

¹¹ Voir : www.ochaopt.org/data/demolition.

¹² Voir : <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/increase-gaza-s-unemployment-rate-2019>.

¹³ Voir : <https://gisha.org/en-blog/2020/10/13/remote-learning/>.

¹⁴ Voir : <http://pngoportal.org/en/3049.html>.

disponibilité depuis plus de 15 ans, Gaza ne dispose toujours pas de réseaux 3G, ce qui signifie que les temps de chargement des données sont considérablement ralentis. Dans le cadre de son blocus complet, Israël empêche l'entrée d'équipements nécessaires à l'amélioration de l'infrastructure de réseaux de données. Touchés par les limitations préexistantes des réseaux et par les mesures de confinement, les étudiants de Gaza se retrouvent confrontés à des difficultés insurmontables pour accéder à l'enseignement et à l'une des seules ouvertures qu'ils ont sur le monde extérieur. Tout cela porte atteinte à leur droit fondamental à l'éducation.

17. Le système de santé à Gaza est au bord de l'effondrement total, lequel provoquerait une véritable catastrophe humanitaire. Après la détection des premières contaminations intracommunautaires à Gaza le 25 août 2020, les cas confirmés ont augmenté de manière exponentielle, mettant à rude épreuve un système de santé déjà malmené¹⁵. Au 14 octobre, il y avait 4 285 cas confirmés à Gaza, ce qui représente une nette augmentation par rapport au 1^{er} juillet, date à laquelle on ne comptait que 11 cas. Des mesures préventives strictes ont été mises en œuvre par les autorités de facto, notamment l'imposition de couvre-feux complets et partiels et la création de centres de quarantaine. Ces mesures ont permis d'atténuer les effets et la propagation du virus, mais elles n'ont pas pu remédier aux carences structurelles fondamentales du secteur de la santé qu'entraîne le blocus.

18. L'interdiction des matériaux vitaux et à double usage – ceux qu'Israël considère comme pouvant être utilisés à la fois à des fins militaires et civiles, notamment le ciment et l'acier – ou les restrictions sévères à leur entrée, les pénuries d'électricité récurrentes et la contamination de plus de 90 % de l'approvisionnement en eau potable à Gaza ont compliqué les activités des hôpitaux avant même le début de la pandémie actuelle. Les statistiques actuelles sont extrêmement déroutantes : on estime qu'il n'y a que 93 ventilateurs et 110 lits disponibles dans les unités de soins intensifs à Gaza pour couvrir une population de 2 millions d'habitants¹⁶. À la fin du mois de septembre 2020, l'Organisation mondiale de la Santé estimait que 47 % des médicaments essentiels étaient en rupture de stock, alors que l'approvisionnement de moins d'un mois met en danger la vie de plus de 350 patients en oncologie et entraîne la suspension de plus de 13 000 opérations chirurgicales non urgentes. Plus de 50 % du personnel de soins de santé primaires à Gaza a été réaffecté pour soutenir la réponse apportée à la COVID-19, ce qui nuit gravement à la possibilité d'apporter une réponse et un traitement adéquats aux maladies non liées à la COVID-19. Le Rapporteur spécial avait spécifiquement averti début septembre que « si la pandémie COVID-19 prenait racine à Gaza, les conséquences seraient probablement très graves »¹⁷.

19. N'ayant que peu d'options pour recevoir un traitement, les Palestiniens de Gaza, en particulier ceux dont l'état de santé est critique, continuent de subir des retards arbitraires et d'essuyer des refus de permis de sortie délivrés par Israël, qui sont pourtant nécessaires pour recevoir des soins de santé essentiels et souvent vitaux en dehors de Gaza. La suspension de la coordination entre Israël et l'Autorité palestinienne en matière de sécurité, intervenue en mai 2020 dans le contexte de l'annonce des projets d'annexion d'Israël en Cisjordanie, a compliqué et retardé davantage le processus de demande de permis de sortie. Depuis septembre 2020, l'Organisation mondiale de la Santé a mis en place un mécanisme de coordination pour aider les patients palestiniens à demander des permis de sortie israéliens afin d'atténuer l'incidence de la suspension de la coordination¹⁸. Le Rapporteur spécial réaffirme qu'il incombe d'abord à Israël, en tant que Puissance occupante, d'assurer le respect, la protection et la réalisation du droit à la santé des Palestiniens de Gaza dans la pleine mesure de leur contrôle effectif, tandis que l'Autorité palestinienne et les autorités de facto à Gaza ont également des responsabilités dans la mesure de leur contrôle effectif sur la population.

¹⁵ Voir : www.aljazeera.com/news/2020/8/25/gaza-in-lockdown-after-first-covid-19-community-transmission.

¹⁶ Voir : www.icrc.org/en/document/icrc-donates-vital-intensive-care-equipment-gaza.

¹⁷ Voir : www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26201&LangID=E.

20. Le blocus imposé par Israël à Gaza est contraire au droit international, en particulier à l'article 33 de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève), et équivaut à une punition collective de toute la population civile de Gaza. Le 1^{er} septembre, le Rapporteur spécial a déclaré ce qui suit : « Gaza est sur le point de devenir invivable. Il n'existe pas de situation comparable dans le monde où une population entière subit un tel verrouillage permanent, se retrouvant largement incapable de voyager ou de commercer et sous le contrôle d'une puissance occupante qui viole les obligations internationales solennelles qui lui incombent en matière de droits de l'homme et d'aide humanitaire. Nos standards internationaux en matière de dignité et de moralité ne tolèrent pas de telles expériences du désespoir humain »¹⁹. Le 14 septembre, la Haute-Commissaire a également noté dans son intervention que « le blocus, qui enfreint le droit international, [n'avait] pas réussi à apporter la sécurité ni la paix aux Israéliens et aux Palestiniens, et devrait être levé immédiatement »²⁰. Plus que jamais et après 14 ans, la logique sécuritaire israélienne du blocus a été minée par la réalité du terrain, laquelle montre que la population civile de Gaza continue de subir le plus gros du blocus.

21. La dernière escalade asymétrique des hostilités entre Israël et les groupes armés à Gaza, qui s'est terminée par un cessez-le-feu négocié fin août, montre que l'instabilité persistera tant que les droits fondamentaux des Palestiniens ne seront pas réalisés et protégés. Les solutions à court terme ne feront qu'aggraver la crise humanitaire provoquée par le blocus et accroître la frustration d'une population qui vit déjà dans des conditions extrêmement difficiles. Les Palestiniens de Gaza ont de toute urgence besoin de mesures immédiates pour atténuer les effets du blocus. Le Rapporteur spécial demande de prendre un ensemble de mesures spécifiques, notamment la reconstruction du port maritime de Gaza, la construction de nouvelles centrales électriques et stations de traitement de l'eau potable et des eaux usées, l'autorisation de faire entrer dans la bande de Gaza des quantités beaucoup plus élevées de matériaux de construction et la liberté de mouvement des habitants. La crise à Gaza est d'origine humaine et ce n'est que par l'exercice d'une volonté politique concertée de la part de ceux qui détiennent le pouvoir qu'une véritable catastrophe humanitaire peut être évitée.

D. Enfants

22. Les enfants palestiniens continuent chaque jour de subir les effets particulièrement négatifs de la poursuite de l'occupation et de leur exposition à la violence. Selon le rapport du Secrétaire général sur le sort des enfants en temps de conflit armé, en 2019, 32 enfants palestiniens (29 garçons, 3 filles) et 1 fille israélienne ont été tués en Cisjordanie occupée, y compris à Jérusalem-Est. La plupart des morts d'enfants palestiniens ont été attribuées aux forces israéliennes et ont été causées par le tir de balles réelles ou par des frappes aériennes. La même année, ¹⁸ Voir : www.ochaopt.org/content/covid-19-emergency-situation-report-18.

¹⁹ Voir : www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26201&LangID=E.

²⁰ Voir : <https://www.ohchr.org/FR/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26226&LangID=F>.

1 539 enfants palestiniens (1 460 garçons, 79 filles) et 8 enfants israéliens (5 garçons, 3 filles) ont été mutilés (voir A/74/845-S/2020/525, par. 85-86). Dans ce rapport, le Secrétaire général a exhorté Israël à faire cesser tout usage excessif de la force contre des enfants et à établir les responsabilités dans tous les cas de meurtre et d'atteinte à l'intégrité physique d'enfants. Il a en outre exhorté les groupes armés palestiniens à garantir la sécurité des enfants, notamment en empêchant qu'ils soient exposés au risque de violence ou en s'abstenant de les instrumentaliser à des fins politiques (ibid., par. 91-92).

23. L'accès des enfants palestiniens aux soins de santé continue d'être gravement entravé. Le système complexe de restrictions de circulation en place en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, et le blocus de Gaza exercé par Israël depuis 14 ans ont rendu l'accès aux établissements de soins de santé et aux traitements médicaux spécialisés très compliqués pour les enfants. À Gaza, les enfants continuent de se voir refuser ou retarder l'accès aux établissements de santé ou aux traitements spécialisés en dehors de la bande.

24. Le Rapporteur spécial reste également très préoccupé par les informations faisant état de mauvais traitements infligés aux enfants lors de leur arrestation, de leur interrogatoire ou de leur détention. En 2019, l'ONU ont reçu des témoignages d'enfants qui ont fait état de violations des droits de la défense et de mauvais traitements par les forces israéliennes dans le cadre de leur détention, y compris des violences physiques (ibid., par. 84). Les enfants détenus en Israël font état de mauvais traitements systématiques, tels que l'utilisation de bandeaux pour les yeux ou d'attaches pour les mains ou les jambes et le refus de donner de la nourriture et de l'eau ou d'accorder l'accès aux toilettes. Les enfants disent également s'être vu refuser l'accès à un avocat ou à leurs parents pendant leur interrogatoire, avoir été contraints de signer des documents en hébreu, que nombre d'entre eux ne comprennent pas, et ne pas avoir été correctement informés de leurs droits (voir A/75/336, par. 20). Les pratiques et les politiques israéliennes continuent donc à donner la priorité à la punition et à la criminalisation des enfants palestiniens plutôt qu'à leur réhabilitation.

E. Autorité palestinienne et autorités de facto à Gaza

25. Des cas d'arrestation et de détention arbitraires par les autorités de facto à Gaza, notamment de journalistes, de militants des droits de l'homme et d'activistes politiques, continuent d'être signalés. Beaucoup continuent d'être arrêtés en raison de leur affiliation politique et de leur opposition présumée aux autorités du Hamas. De sérieuses restrictions à la liberté d'expression persistent, notamment dans le contexte de l'élaboration de rapports sur les effets socioéconomiques de la pandémie de COVID-19. Des rapports font également état de l'usage excessif de la force contre celles et ceux qui violent les couvre-feux mis en place dans le cadre des mesures préventives imposées.

26. Pendant la crise de COVID-19, il a été rapporté que l'Autorité palestinienne avait libéré certains prisonniers afin d'essayer de contenir la pandémie. Pourtant, un certain nombre d'arrestations effectuées par les forces de sécurité palestiniennes continuent d'être signalées en Cisjordanie. Nombre des personnes arrêtées ont été accusées d'utiliser les plateformes de médias sociaux pour critiquer l'Autorité palestinienne ou pour exprimer des opinions politiques divergentes²¹. Les limitations de la liberté d'expression restent un sujet de préoccupation pour les journalistes. Un certain nombre d'allégations de mauvais traitements des personnes arrêtées continuent également à être reçues.

²¹ Voir : <https://www.amnesty.org/fr/latest/news/2020/05/palestine-end-arbitrary-detention-of-critics-in-west-bank-and-gaza/>.

III. Obligation de rendre compte, impunité et responsabilité de la communauté internationale

27. L'obligation de rendre compte – le contrôle institutionnel de l'exercice du pouvoir public et privé au nom du bien commun – est la composante indispensable de l'état de droit. Lorsqu'elle est utilisée efficacement et à bon escient, elle consacre l'équité et l'égalité, favorise la guérison et la résolution des différends, rend justice aux victimes comme aux auteurs des faits, atténue les conflits en cours et en empêche d'autres de se déclencher, et coud les 10 000 fils de la réconciliation qui nourrissent la confiance sociale.

28. Sans obligation de rendre compte, les systèmes de droit et de gouvernance humaine les mieux conçus dépériront parce qu'ils ne seront pas suffisamment appliqués et respectés. Sans obligation de rendre compte, il n'est pas possible de parvenir à une réconciliation politique, et encore moins de favoriser la prospérité qui doit en découler. Et sans obligation de rendre compte, les blessures sociales se métastasent : on cherche alors à résoudre les injustices du passé et du présent par des représailles non contrôlées plutôt que par une compensation mesurée. Comme l'a fait remarquer le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « l'absence d'état de droit et d'obligation de rendre compte en matière de violations des droits de l'homme entraîne l'échec de la justice et l'impunité des crimes, le déclenchement de conflits pour des torts non résolus et l'instauration d'un régime oppressif qui ne rend pas de comptes »²².

29. Le principe d'obligation de rendre compte s'applique à toutes les parties prenantes, publiques et privées, qui ont la capacité, par leur autorité ou leur pouvoir, d'influer sur le bien commun. Dans un rapport présenté au Conseil de sécurité en 2004, l'ancien Secrétaire général de l'ONU, Kofi Annan, approuvant cette large application du principe, a ainsi déclaré que l'état de droit désignait un principe de gouvernance en vertu duquel l'ensemble des individus, des institutions et des entités publiques et privées, ont à répondre de l'observation de lois promulguées publiquement, appliquées de façon identique pour tous et administrées de manière indépendante, et compatibles avec les règles et normes internationales en matière de droits de l'homme (voir S/2004/616, par. 6).

30. L'étendue de ce principe garantit non seulement que celles et ceux qui violent les normes internationales en matière de droits de l'homme et les règles humanitaires doivent mettre fin à leurs transgressions et être tenus pour responsables, mais aussi – et c'est tout aussi important – que celles et ceux qui ont la capacité individuelle et collective d'influencer le comportement de ces auteurs d'exactions doivent également utiliser, dans la mesure du possible, leur influence pour sanctionner utilement les violations et les crimes et y mettre fin.

31. La supervision internationale de l'occupation israélienne de la Palestine, vieille de 53 ans, illustre le fait que s'agissant du droit international et de l'obligation de rendre compte, il existe un fossé immense entre promesses et résultats. Le paradoxe tragique est que l'ONU n'a jamais, à l'époque moderne, pris part à un tel conflit et contribué de manière aussi décisive au développement du droit international dans un aussi grand nombre de domaines importants – en élargissant et en renforçant les droits des réfugiés, en définissant l'occupation belligérante et en l'encadrant, en imposant la stricte interdiction de l'annexion de territoires occupés, en définissant le statut juridique des colonies civiles dans les terres occupées et en insistant sur la centralité du droit à l'autodétermination, entre autres tout en offrant dans les faits aussi peu de protections aux nombreuses victimes de l'occupation²³.

²² Voir : <https://bangkok.ohchr.org/rule-of-law-accountability/>.

32. L'ONU et d'autres institutions internationales faisant autorité ont évoqué, souvent avec lucidité et perspicacité, l'incompatibilité de l'occupation israélienne avec le droit international et les principes élémentaires fondés sur les droits. À plusieurs reprises, elles ont mis Israël en garde contre son mépris et son non-respect des résolutions du Conseil de sécurité, de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil des droits de l'homme. Cependant, elles n'ont que rarement pris de véritables mesures – par exemple, des contre-mesures et des sanctions efficaces – pour tenir Israël responsable de ses politiques et pratiques d'obstruction concernant l'occupation.

33. L'objectif de cet appel à la reddition de comptes est évident : Voilà des décennies qu'Israël exerce une occupation, dans l'ensemble sans rendre de comptes, et tous les indicateurs disponibles – qu'il s'agisse de l'augmentation continue de la population présente dans les colonies, de la confiscation croissante de terres palestiniennes publiques et privées pour les colonies et l'armée israélienne, des proclamations répétées des dirigeants politiques israéliens selon lesquelles les terres occupées sont israéliennes de droit, ou du refus d'Israël de reconnaître que sa domination sur le territoire palestinien est régie par les lois de l'occupation – indiquent que cette occupation est incessante. L'ancien chef du Shin Bet israélien (l'agence de sécurité intérieure du pays), Carmi Gillon, a récemment observé, avec regret, que « le statu quo [était] bon pour Israël, car Israël obtient tout ce qu'il veut sans en payer le prix »²⁴.

34. Israël est un acteur rationnel, qui comprend que, si ses incitations à renforcer son occupation sont fortes et que les moyens de dissuasion de la communauté internationale sont pratiquement inexistant, il peut continuer à dévorer sans entrave le territoire destiné à accueillir un État palestinien. Si l'impunité continue d'être tolérée et même récompensée par la communauté internationale, il est chimérique de penser qu'une puissance occupante cupide fera tout sauf poursuivre son entreprise de colonisation, préparer encore plus assidûment une future demande d'annexion de jure, condamner les Palestiniens à un avenir sans espoir et écrire la nécrologie de la solution des deux États.

35. Dans le rapport du Rapporteur spécial d'octobre 2019 (A/74/507), la section sur l'obligation de rendre compte était axée sur les responsabilités de la communauté internationale. Le présent rapport traite des responsabilités de deux autres acteurs majeurs et influents dans le contexte de l'occupation : le Conseil de sécurité de l'ONU et les entreprises privées. Le Conseil de sécurité est le gardien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales et a le pouvoir d'imposer des sanctions internationales et de prendre d'autres mesures pour protéger le droit international lorsque la paix et la sécurité sont menacées. Les entreprises privées contribuent de manière considérable au maintien de la viabilité économique des colonies israéliennes illégales et, de ce fait, conduisent inextricablement les entreprises à prendre part aux violations des droits de l'homme commises dans le cadre de l'occupation.

²³ Susan Akram et al., eds., International Law and the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict: A Rights-Based Approach to Middle East Peace (Abingdon, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Routledge, 2011).

²⁴ Voir : www.haaretz.com/middle-east-news/palestinians/.premium-the-palestinians-got-screwed-they-are-now-a-non-issue-1.8968748.

A. Conseil de sécurité et occupation israélienne

Introduction

36. Au cours des cinquante dernières années, le Conseil de sécurité a approuvé à plusieurs reprises et sans ambiguïté trois principes fondamentaux en ce qui concerne l'occupation israélienne du territoire palestinien (Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et Gaza). Premièrement, Israël est la Puissance occupante, la quatrième Convention de Genève de 1949 s'applique intégralement et Israël est tenu de remplir toutes les obligations qui lui incombent au titre de la Convention²⁵. Deuxièmement, l'acquisition de territoire par la force ou la guerre est inadmissible²⁶. Troisièmement, la création et l'expansion des colonies israéliennes constituent une violation grave de l'interdiction absolue pour la puissance occupante de transférer une partie de sa population civile dans le territoire occupé, conformément au droit international²⁷. Ces trois principes ont été expressément réaffirmés par le Conseil dans sa résolution 2334 (2016). Ils comptent parmi les principes les mieux établis et les plus largement acceptés du droit international moderne.

37. À aucun moment un seul de ces trois principes n'a été accepté ou appliqué par Israël. Le Conseil de sécurité s'est parfois exprimé de manière très virulente sur l'attitude de défi d'Israël, mais n'a pris aucune sanction contre l'obstruction continue d'Israël. Aucune situation internationale grave en matière de droits de l'homme ni aucun acteur étatique insubordonné ne fait aujourd'hui l'objet d'autant de discussions et de critiques si claires de la part du Conseil de sécurité, mais aussi de si peu de mesures²⁸. Et pourtant, alors même qu'Israël a fait montre d'une obstination accrue ces dernières années, le Conseil de sécurité n'a ni agi, ni continué à s'exprimer sur la question avec la régularité dont il avait fait preuve auparavant : depuis janvier 2009, il n'a adopté que deux résolutions critiquant l'occupation israélienne²⁹, alors même que les conditions des droits de l'homme sur le terrain se sont progressivement dégradées.

Principe 1 : Quatrième Convention de Genève

38. La quatrième Convention de Genève a été promulguée au lendemain de la Seconde Guerre mondiale pour offrir une vaste protection aux civils pris dans la guerre, les civils étant les personnes les plus vulnérables au cours de tout conflit armé. S'agissant de son applicabilité, Israël – et pratiquement lui seul dans le monde – a fait valoir que la Convention ne s'appliquait pas au territoire palestinien, et donc que le territoire n'était pas occupé. En effet, selon lui, aucun autre État n'avait de revendication souveraine valable sur ces terres lorsqu'il les a prises en 1967³⁰. Le Conseil de sécurité a constamment rejeté cette position, confirmant dans au moins 22 résolutions prises depuis 1967, la dernière en date étant celle de 2016, que la

²⁵ Le Conseil de sécurité a fait pour la première fois référence à l'applicabilité de la quatrième Convention de Genève à l'occupation israélienne dans sa résolution 237 (1967), adoptée dans la semaine suivant la fin de la guerre de juin 1967.

²⁶ Voir la résolution 242 (1967) du Conseil.

²⁷ Voir la résolution 446 (1979) du Conseil.

²⁸ Dans ses mémoires, Kofi Annan observe que « la position agressive du Conseil contre la présence syrienne au Liban contraste fortement avec sa passivité concernant l'occupation des terres arabes par Israël [...] l'impression d'une politique de deux poids deux mesures au Moyen-Orient mine l'Organisation des Nations Unies ». Voir Kofi Annan, avec Nader Mousavizadeh, Interventions (New York, Penguin Books, 2012), p. 298.

²⁹ Résolutions 1860 (2009) et 2334 (2016).

³⁰ Voir : <https://mfa.gov.il/MFA/MFA-Archive/2003/Pages/DISPUTED%20TERRITORIES-%20Forgotten%20Facts%20About%20the%20We.aspx>.

Convention s'appliquait pleinement à l'occupation israélienne³¹. À diverses occasions, le Conseil de sécurité a « vivement déploré » le refus persistant d'Israël de se conformer aux résolutions prises précédemment et lui enjoignant de respecter la Convention³², a exigé qu'Israël se conforme « immédiatement et scrupuleusement » à la Convention³³ et a noté qu'en cas de non-respect, il examinerait « les moyens pratiques » d'assurer « l'application intégrale » par Israël des résolutions antérieures sur l'application de la Convention³⁴.

39. Par deux fois en 1980 – 13 ans après le début de l'occupation – le Conseil de sécurité a affirmé la « nécessité primordiale de mettre fin à l'occupation prolongée des territoires arabes occupés par Israël depuis 1967, y compris Jérusalem »³⁵. Pourtant, en 2020, l'occupation israélienne – désormais quatre fois plus longue qu'elle ne l'était en 1980 – s'est renforcée et étendue de manière exponentielle³⁶. Israël a rejeté l'applicabilité de la quatrième Convention de Genève depuis le début de l'occupation³⁷, et tant l'ONU que de nombreuses organisations de défense des droits de l'homme respectées ont déterminé qu'il avait violé à plusieurs reprises un certain nombre de protections garanties par la Convention (voir A/HRC/43/67)³⁸.

Principe 2 : Annexion d'un territoire occupé

40. L'annexion d'un territoire occupé par une puissance occupante est non seulement strictement interdite par le droit international³⁹, mais elle est désormais considérée comme un crime d'agression en vertu du Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale⁴⁰. Dans le contexte de l'occupation israélienne, le Conseil de sécurité a expressément approuvé le principe de l'inadmissibilité de l'acquisition de territoire par la guerre, par la force ou par la conquête militaire à au moins onze reprises⁴¹. En ce qui concerne l'annexion en deux étapes de Jérusalem-Est par Israël (en juin 1967 par décision du Cabinet et en juin 1980 par la Knesset), le Conseil de sécurité a déclaré à plusieurs reprises que Jérusalem-Est restait occupée et que la proclamation de souveraineté d'Israël était « nulle et non avenue », constituait « une violation ³¹ Voir, en général, les résolutions 446 \(1979\) et 2334 \(2016\).

³² Voir la résolution 476 \(1980\) du Conseil.

³³ Voir la résolution 592 \(1986\) du Conseil.

³⁴ Voir la résolution 478 \(1980\) du Conseil.

³⁵ Résolutions 471 \(1980\) et 476 \(1980\) du Conseil.

³⁶ Ardi Imseis, « Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967-2020 », European Journal of International Law (septembre 2020) ; et Michael Sfard, The Wall and the Gate: Israel, Palestine, and the Legal Battle for Human Rights (New York, Metropolitan Books, 2018).

³⁷ Theodor Meron, « The West Bank and international humanitarian law on the eve of the fiftieth anniversary of the Six-Day War », American Journal of International Law, vol. 111, n° 2 (avril 2017).

³⁸ Voir également les pages d'Amnesty International (www.amnesty.org/fr/countries/middle-east-and-north-africa/israel-and-occupied-palestinian-territories/) et de Human Rights Watch (www.hrw.org/fr/middle-east/north-africa/israel/palestine) consacrées à Israël et à la Palestine.

³⁹ Voir Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé], avis consultatif, Rapports de la C.I.J., 2004, p. 136, par. 87 (p. 171), où la Cour internationale de Justice a déclaré que le principe selon lequel « aucune acquisition territoriale résultant de la menace ou de l'emploi de la force ne sera reconnue comme légale » avait désormais le statut de droit international coutumier.

⁴⁰ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale (modifié en dernier lieu en 2010), 17 juillet 1998, article 8 bis, par. 2 « Les actes suivants sont des actes d'agression [...] : a) [...] l'annexion par la force de la totalité ou d'une partie du territoire d'un autre État ».

⁴¹ Voir la résolution 2334 \(2016\), dans laquelle le Conseil a réaffirmé l'inadmissibilité de l'acquisition de territoire par la force.

flagrante de la quatrième Convention de Genève » et n'avait « aucune validité juridique »⁴².

41. Face au refus persistant d'Israël de mettre fin à son annexion de Jérusalem-Est, le Conseil de sécurité a « vivement déploré » la violation par Israël des résolutions de l'ONU, lui a demandé « d'urgence » « de rapporter toutes les mesures de cette nature » et a exigé qu'Israël « renonce immédiatement » à toute nouvelle action visant à modifier le statut de Jérusalem⁴³. En d'autres occasions, le Conseil a confirmé « dans les termes les plus énergiques » que l'annexion était « totalement invalide » et a déploré « qu'Israël n'ait tenu aucun compte des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité »⁴⁴.

42. En réponse, Israël a continué à intensifier son annexion de Jérusalem-Est en créant et en étendant 12 colonies civiles, en assurant la présence de 215 000 colons juifs, en construisant un mur séparant Jérusalem-Est de la Cisjordanie, et en consolidant l'intégration politique et infrastructurelle de Jérusalem-Est et de Jérusalem-Ouest⁴⁵. Israël n'a jamais montré le moindre signe qu'il avait commencé à se conformer ou avait l'intention de se conformer à l'une des directives du Conseil de sécurité sur Jérusalem-Est, le Premier ministre israélien ayant proclamé en février 2020 que le Gouvernement avait réussi son annexion de Jérusalem-Est malgré une forte opposition de la communauté internationale⁴⁶.

Principe 3 : Colonies israéliennes

43. Le droit international interdit strictement à une puissance occupante de tenter de modifier la composition démographique d'un territoire occupé en y installant sa population civile⁴⁷. Le but de cette interdiction est de préserver le droit à l'autodétermination de la population autochtone⁴⁸, d'empêcher une puissance occupante cupide de faire valoir une revendication d'annexion inadmissible au moyen de la colonisation territoriale⁴⁹, et d'éviter l'immense souffrance humaine qui découle inévitablement du processus d'installation de colons⁵⁰. Depuis 2002, l'installation de colons est considérée comme un crime de guerre au regard du Statut de Rome⁵¹.

⁴² Voir les résolutions 471 (1980), 476 (1980) et 478 (1980).

⁴³ Voir les résolutions 252 (1968), 476 (1980) et 478 (1980).

⁴⁴ Voir la résolution 267 (1969) ; voir également les résolutions 298 (1971) et 478 (1980).

⁴⁵ Meir Margalit, The City of Jerusalem: the Israeli Occupation and Municipal Subjugation of Palestinian Jerusalemites (Brighton, Royaume-Uni, Sussex University Press, 2020).

⁴⁶ Oren Liebermann et Andrew Carey (Cable News Network), « As election looms, Netanyahu announces new construction in East Jerusalem », 20 février 2020 : « Nous y sommes parvenus malgré une forte opposition de la communauté internationale. Nous avons surmonté tous les obstacles et nous y sommes parvenus, et voyez ce que nous avons accompli à Jérusalem, a déclaré M. Nétanyahou. Nous relient toutes les parties de la Jérusalem unie, de la Jérusalem reconstruite. C'est une source de grande fierté et une grande nouvelle pour tout le peuple d'Israël ».

⁴⁷ Voir la quatrième Convention de Genève, article 49, sixième paragraphe.

⁴⁸ Voir : E/CN.4/Sub.2/1993/17 et E/CN.4/Sub.2/1993/17/Corr.1, par. 202 : « Les transferts de populations, en théorie et en pratique, peuvent viser spécifiquement à empêcher que s'exerce véritablement le droit à l'autodétermination, par exemple en altérant l'entité appelée à s'autodéterminer par le biais d'une manipulation démographique ou de politiques ayant cet effet ».

⁴⁹ Voir le commentaire de 1958 du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge sur le sixième paragraphe de l'article 49 de la quatrième Convention de Genève, disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.icrc.org/ihl.nsf/COM/380-600056?OpenDocument.

⁵⁰ Voir : E/CN.4/Sub.2/1997/23 et E/CN.4/Sub.2/1997/23.Corr.1, par. 16 : « Vu le vaste éventail des droits de l'homme auxquels portent atteinte les transferts de population et l'implantation de colons, ces phénomènes sont classés dans la catégorie des violations systématiques ou massives ».

⁵¹ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale (modifié en dernier lieu en 2010), 17 juillet 1998, article 8, par. 2), al. b) viii).

44. Depuis 1979, le Conseil de sécurité a déclaré à au moins six reprises que l'établissement par Israël de colonies civiles dans les territoires occupés n'avait « aucune validité juridique » et, de façon plus frappante, constituait une « violation flagrante du droit international »⁵². En 1980, il a « vivement déploré » le refus d'Israël de coopérer et son rejet des résolutions antérieures sur l'installation de colons⁵³. En 2016, il a déterminé que l'entreprise de colonisation d'Israël mettait gravement en péril ce qui restait de la solution des deux États et a exigé qu'Israël « arrête immédiatement et complètement toutes ses activités de peuplement »⁵⁴. En 2020, pourtant, Israël a créé, à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie, environ 250 colonies prospères comptant plus de 650 000 colons, et a continué à approuver un nombre record de nouveaux logements dans les colonies au cours de l'année passée⁵⁵. Dans les 14 rapports trimestriels qu'il a présentés au Conseil de sécurité depuis 2017 sur la question de la mise en œuvre par Israël de la directive claire contenue dans la résolution 2334 (2016), à savoir l'arrêt absolu de toutes ses activités de peuplement, le Coordonnateur spécial pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient a indiqué, à chaque fois, qu'Israël n'avait pris aucune mesure pour satisfaire à cette obligation⁵⁶.

Conseil de sécurité et obligation de rendre compte

45. Conformément au paragraphe 1 de l'article 24 de la Charte des Nations Unies, il incombe au Conseil de sécurité de maintenir la paix et la sécurité internationales. En vertu de l'article 41, cette responsabilité s'accompagne du pouvoir de mettre en œuvre un large éventail de mesures – n'impliquant pas la force armée – afin de contraindre les États et les acteurs fautifs à se conformer au droit international (comme dans le cas de l'invasion du Koweït par l'Iraq en 1991), de contenir une menace perçue à la paix et à la sécurité internationales (comme la prolifération nucléaire régionale) ou de faire face aux actes malveillants de certains acteurs internationaux, nationaux ou infranationaux (comme l'État islamique d'Iraq et du Levant, Al-Qaida ou les Talibans)⁵⁷. Depuis 1966, le Conseil de sécurité a mis en place 30 régimes de sanctions et en maintient actuellement 14. Si ces sanctions ont eu des résultats variables en termes d'efficacité et ont parfois été critiquées pour leurs effets négatifs d'un point de vue humanitaire⁵⁸, l'histoire plus récente a démontré que, lorsqu'elles étaient appliquées avec précision, dans un but précis, dans un esprit d'unité et avec la souplesse nécessaire pour moduler l'intensité les mesures visant à faire respecter le principe de responsabilité, les sanctions mises en œuvre par l'ONU pouvaient produire des changements significatifs dans le comportement des États et d'autres acteurs⁵⁹.

⁵² Voir les résolutions 446 (1979) et 465 (1980).

⁵³ Voir les résolutions 465 (1980) et 471 (1980).

⁵⁴ Voir la résolution 2334 (2016).

⁵⁵ Voir : Peace Now, « 4,948 settlement units advanced at October 2020 Higher Planning Council sessions », 15 octobre 2020 : « Ces approbations font officiellement de 2020 l'année qui a enregistré le plus grand nombre de projets de logements de peuplement depuis que Peace Now a commencé à enregistrer ces projets en 2012 ».

⁵⁶ Voir, par exemple, la déclaration faite par le Coordonnateur spécial pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, Nickolay Mladenov, au cours de l'exposé sur la situation au Moyen-Orient qu'il a présenté au Conseil de sécurité le 29 septembre 2020 (voir S/PV.8762).

⁵⁷ Larissa Van Den Herik, Research Handbook on UN Sanctions and International Law (Cheltenham, Royaume-Uni, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2017).

⁵⁸ Jeremy Matam Farrall, United Nations Sanctions and the Rule of Law (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, 2007).

⁵⁹ Enrico Carisch, Loraine Rickard-Martin et Shawna W. Meister, The Evolution of UN Sanctions: from a Tool of Warfare to a Tool of Peace, Security and Human Rights (New York, Springer, 2017).

46. L'attitude de défi – comme la qualifie le Conseil de sécurité⁶⁰ – qu'Israël affiche vis-à-vis des instructions de la communauté internationale pose un sérieux problème à l'ordre international fondé sur des règles. Les résolutions et décisions du Conseil de sécurité, ainsi que celles de l'Assemblée générale, sont le fondement du consensus juridique international relatif à l'occupation israélienne de la Palestine. Pour être admis à l'ONU, les États doivent s'engager solennellement à accepter et à appliquer les décisions et les directives du Conseil de sécurité⁶¹. L'état de droit est important, mais l'obligation de rendre compte l'est tout autant. Si l'on veut que le Conseil de sécurité affirme son autorité, toute désobéissance à ses directives doit avoir des conséquences.

47. De même, l'inertie dont fait preuve le Conseil de sécurité pour répondre de manière manifeste au non-respect par Israël de ses résolutions et directives – portant en particulier sur les trois principes fondamentaux qu'il a si fréquemment approuvés – est également un coup dur porté à l'efficacité du droit international⁶². Dans ses mémoires, Kofi Annan est troublé par « l'occupation prolongée et parfois brutale » d'Israël, et déplore la timidité de la réponse du Conseil de sécurité : « Même lorsque le Conseil a pris position, il n'a pas établi de mécanismes pour faire respecter sa volonté »⁶³. Il a également identifié une source majeure de la paralysie du Conseil : la « possessivité malsaine » dont font preuve les États-Unis d'Amérique vis-à-vis « du processus de paix au Moyen-Orient »⁶⁴. Depuis 1973, les États-Unis ont, au Conseil de sécurité, opposé 31 vetos à des projets de résolution critiquant l'occupation israélienne ; dans chaque cas, ils ont été le seul membre du Conseil à exprimer un vote négatif. Aucun autre membre permanent du Conseil de sécurité n'a opposé son veto à une résolution du Conseil critiquant l'occupation israélienne⁶⁵.

B. Entreprises privées et colonies israéliennes

Introduction

48. En 2011, le Conseil des droits de l'homme a adopté à l'unanimité les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme (A/HRC/17/31, annexe). Les Principes directeurs constituent un ensemble de normes non contraignantes visant à influencer la prise de décision des entreprises en leur faisant intégrer les principes relatifs aux droits de l'homme dans leurs activités quotidiennes. Ils ont vocation à s'appliquer à tous les secteurs commerciaux et à toutes les entreprises de toutes les régions géographiques. Ils font partie d'une initiative mondiale plus large – comprenant des déclarations majeures du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge⁶⁶ et de l'Organisation de coopération et de développement économiques⁶⁷ – visant à intégrer une culture des droits de l'homme dynamique dans le monde des entreprises. Ils définissent trois piliers compatibles avec le cadre de référence « protéger, respecter ⁶⁰ Voir les résolutions 608 (1988), 636 (1989) et 641 (1989).

⁶¹ Voir l'Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies.

⁶² En 2020, l'ancien Ambassadeur des États-Unis d'Amérique, Peter Mulrean, a fait remarquer que les « paroles de la communauté internationale [n'avaient] cependant jamais été suivies d'effet, notamment parce que les États-Unis [avaient] fait en sorte, en exerçant une pression sur d'autres pays et en usant de leur droit de veto au Conseil de sécurité de l'ONU, qu'Israël ne soit jamais véritablement puni ni même sévèrement critiqué dans cette enceinte potentiellement influente » (voir : www.justsecurity.org/69925/trumps-deal-of-the-century-is-bibis-dream-come-true/).

⁶³ Annan, Interventions, p. 256.

⁶⁴ Ibid., p. 290.

⁶⁵ Voir : <https://research.un.org/fr/docs/sc/quick>.

⁶⁶ Voir : www.icrc.org/en/doc/resources/documents/misc/business-ihl-150806.htm.

⁶⁷ Voir : www.oecd.org/corporate/mne/responsible-business-conduct-matters.htm.

et réparer » de l'ONU pour améliorer les pratiques relatives aux droits de l'homme et renforcer le respect de ces droits :

- a) le devoir qu'ont les États de protéger les droits de l'homme, y compris contre les violations commises par des entreprises ;
- b) la responsabilité qu'ont les entreprises de respecter les droits de l'homme, notamment en agissant avec la diligence requise pour éviter de violer les droits d'autrui ;
- c) la nécessité d'assurer aux victimes de violations liées aux entreprises un meilleur accès à des recours efficaces.

49. Les Principes directeurs n'ont pas force de loi, et la plupart des traités internationaux sur les droits de l'homme ne contiennent pas d'obligations spécifiques à l'égard des entreprises⁶⁸. Néanmoins, un certain nombre d'États ont étendu la responsabilité pénale ou civile aux entreprises domiciliées sur leur territoire par l'intermédiaire de leurs législations nationales respectives, dont beaucoup reflètent les normes internationales en matière de droits de l'homme (voir A/HRC/17/31, annexe, commentaire du Principe n° 12). Certains États ont également élaboré des politiques nationales d'orientation et publié des avis à l'intention des entreprises au sujet de leur conformité aux normes internationales en matière de droits de l'homme. Le riche ensemble d'instruments juridiques internationaux modernes qui existent en matière de droits de l'homme – s'agissant notamment du droit au travail, des droits environnementaux et des droits des groupes vulnérables tels que les minorités, les femmes, les enfants et les personnes handicapées – constitue l'étoile qui peut orienter les entreprises sur la manière dont elles peuvent satisfaire à leurs responsabilités en matière de droits de l'homme.

50. Parmi les Principes directeurs qui s'avèrent pertinents pour l'activité des entreprises dans les colonies israéliennes et sous l'occupation, on peut citer les suivants :

- a) Principe 7 : Les États devraient aider les entreprises opérant dans des zones touchées par des conflits à définir, à prévenir et à atténuer les risques qui existent en matière de droits de l'homme, et devraient refuser l'accès aux entreprises prenant part à des violations flagrantes des droits de l'homme ;
- b) Principe 11 : Les entreprises devraient éviter de porter atteinte aux droits de l'homme d'autrui et remédier aux incidences sur les droits de l'homme dans lesquelles elles ont une part ;
- c) Principe 12 : La responsabilité de respecter les droits de l'homme porte sur les droits de l'homme internationalement reconnus, ce qui comprendrait la Charte internationale des droits de l'homme et les normes fondamentales du travail, mais engloberait également tous les autres instruments de l'ONU relatifs aux droits de l'homme ;
- d) Principe 13 : La responsabilité de respecter les droits de l'homme exige des entreprises qu'elles évitent d'avoir des incidences négatives sur les droits de l'homme ou d'y contribuer, et qu'elles s'efforcent de prévenir ou d'atténuer les incidences négatives sur les droits de l'homme qui sont directement liées à leurs relations commerciales ;

⁶⁸ Il convient de noter que les négociations menées en vue d'élaborer un traité international juridiquement contraignant sur les entreprises et les droits de l'homme sont bien avancées (voir www.ohchr.org/Documents/HRBodies/HRCouncil/WGTransCorp/OEIGWG_RevisedDraft_LBI.pdf).

e) Principe 23 : Dans tous les contextes, les entreprises devraient se conformer à tous les droits de l'homme internationalement reconnus et applicables et parer au risque de commettre des atteintes caractérisées aux droits de l'homme ou d'y contribuer sous l'angle du respect de la légalité.

51. Outre le droit international des droits de l'homme, les entreprises sont censées intégrer les principes du droit international humanitaire et du droit pénal international dans leurs responsabilités opérationnelles⁶⁹. Le droit international humanitaire s'applique aux zones touchées par un conflit et aux territoires occupés et exige que les États et les individus adhèrent aux obligations juridiques de référence en matière de droit humanitaire qui figurent principalement dans les Conventions de Genève de 1949 et dans les textes juridiques qui en ont découlé. Alors que les entreprises opérant dans une zone de conflit ou sous occupation pourraient contribuer au bien-être économique et social de la population touchée, leurs activités risquent, au contraire, de contribuer à la commission de violations de droits de l'homme et d'exactions humanitaires ou d'aider la puissance occupante à maintenir sa domination étrangère une fois qu'il sera devenu évident qu'elle gouverne en violation des lois de l'occupation.

52. Le droit pénal international est axé sur les individus (plutôt que sur les États ou d'autres acteurs institutionnels) qui mènent, instiguent, ordonnent ou planifient des activités interdites par le Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale, telles que les crimes de guerre et les crimes contre l'humanité, ou qui se rendent complices de telles activités. Les décideurs individuels des entreprises pourraient être tenus responsables en vertu du droit pénal international. De sérieuses questions relatives au droit international humanitaire et au droit pénal international peuvent se poser dans les cas d'occupation où la puissance occupante procède au transfert d'une partie de sa population civile vers le territoire occupé. Les Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme exigent des entreprises opérant dans des zones de conflit et dans des territoires occupés qu'elles fassent preuve de davantage de précaution, d'un « soin accru », pour s'assurer que leurs activités sont conformes à leurs responsabilités légales. Toutefois, dans certaines circonstances, aucun degré de diligence raisonnable ne saurait empêcher les entreprises de se rendre complices de violations des droits de l'homme dans une zone de conflit ou d'occupation.

Entreprises et colonies israéliennes

53. Les colonies israéliennes constituent une profonde violation du droit international, comme l'ont déterminé les principaux organes délibérants et judiciaires de l'ONU, notamment le Conseil de sécurité⁷⁰, l'Assemblée générale⁷¹, le Conseil des droits de l'homme⁷² et la Cour internationale de Justice⁷³. Un avis partagé par d'autres organismes internationaux influents tels que l'Union européenne⁷⁴, le Comité ⁶⁹ On trouvera des commentaires très utiles dans : D. Hughes, « Differentiating the Corporation: Accountability and International Humanitarian Law », Michigan Journal of International Law, vol. 41, n° 1 (2020) ; et Marya Farah, Business and Human Rights in Occupied Territory: Guidance for Upholding Human Rights (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2019).

⁷⁰ Voir la résolution 2334 (2016).

⁷¹ Voir la résolution 71/97 de l'Assemblée générale.

⁷² Voir la résolution 43/31 du Conseil de sécurité.

⁷³ Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé], avis consultatif, Rapports de la C.I.J., 2004, par. 120.

⁷⁴ Conseil de l'Union européenne, « Conclusions du Conseil sur le processus de paix au Proche-Orient » (18 janvier 2016).

international de la Croix-Rouge⁷⁵ et les Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève⁷⁶. Plus grave encore, les colonies constituent un probable crime de guerre au regard du Statut de Rome⁷⁷.

54. Les terribles répercussions qu'ont les colonies sur les droits humains des Palestiniens à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie sont omniprésentes. La Haute-Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme a établi que les violations des droits de l'homme commises dans les colonies prenaient, entre autres, les formes suivantes : confiscation et aliénation de terres, violence de la part des colons, lois de planification discriminatoires, appropriation des ressources naturelles, démolition de logements, transfert forcé de population, exploitation par le travail, expulsions et déplacements forcés, enfermement physique, application discriminatoire de la loi et imposition d'un système à deux niveaux de droits politiques, sociaux et économiques inégaux fondés sur l'origine ethnique. Par-dessus tout, les colonies servent l'objectif plus large du Gouvernement israélien de revendiquer une souveraineté inadmissible sur certaines parties du territoire occupé tout en refusant l'autodétermination des Palestiniens (voir A/HRC/43/67 et A/HRC/22/63). Selon l'ONU, les colonies israéliennes et le rétrécissement de l'espace laissé aux Palestiniens qu'elles impliquent ont créé un « environnement coercitif » dans le territoire palestinien occupé⁷⁸.

55. La Conférence des Nations Unies sur le commerce et le développement a constaté que les restrictions territoriales imposées dans les colonies – les systèmes routiers séparés pour les colons et les Palestiniens, les centaines de barrages routiers, points de contrôle et obstacles mis en place dans l'ensemble de la Cisjordanie, la violence des colons et les fermetures de zones et couvre-feux réguliers – avaient disloqué l'espace économique dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Il en résulte une économie palestinienne prisonnière et très dépendante, un appauvrissement croissant, l'imposition quotidienne de contraintes et d'expériences humiliantes et une tendance accélérée au non-développement économique⁷⁹. En 2018, la fuite d'un mémorandum élaboré par des diplomates de l'Union européenne présents à Jérusalem a mis en évidence que l'occupation israélienne et son entreprise de colonisation imposaient une « discrimination juridique systématique » à l'égard du peuple palestinien⁸⁰.

56. Les entreprises et les activités commerciales contribuent de manière significative à la viabilité économique du projet de colonisation israélienne⁸¹. Ce sont ⁷⁵ Peter Maurer, « Challenges to international humanitarian law: Israel's occupation policy », International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 94, n° 888 (2012), p. 1503.

⁷⁶ Déclaration de la Conférence de Hautes Parties contractantes à la quatrième Convention de Genève, 17 décembre 2014, disponible à l'adresse suivante : https://unispal.un.org/pdfs/GENCONDEC_1214f.pdf.

⁷⁷ Ghislain Poissonier et Eric David, « Les colonies israéliennes en Cisjordanie, un crime de guerre ? », La Revue des droits de l'homme, n° 17 (2020). Voir également : www.amnestyusa.org/lets-be-clear-israels-long-running-settlement-policy-constitutes-a-war-crime/.

⁷⁸ Voir : www.un.org/unispal/document/ocha-2019-humanitarian-needs-overview/.

⁷⁹ The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: Cumulative Fiscal Costs (publication des Nations Unies, numéro de vente E.20.II.D.6).

⁸⁰ Andrew Rettman, « No EU cost for Israeli "apartheid" in West Bank », EUobserver, 1^{er} février 2019.

⁸¹ Les paragraphes 56 à 58 s'inspirent des tableaux complets dressés sur les dimensions de l'économie des colonies israéliennes liées aux entreprises, que l'on retrouve dans les documents suivants : Amnesty International, Think Twice (2019) ; Amnesty International, Destination: Occupation (2019) ; Farah, Business and Human Rights in Occupied Territory ; Profundo et 11.11.11, Doing Business with the Occupation (2018) ; Human Rights Watch, Bankrolling Abuse (2018) ; Human Rights Watch, Occupation, Inc. (2016) ; et Diakonia, The Unsettling Business of Settlement Business (2015). Voir également les travaux de Who Profits, disponibles à l'adresse suivante : www.whoprofits.org.

les entreprises privées qui, par l'intermédiaire des appels d'offres lancés par les agences gouvernementales israéliennes qui administrent la colonisation, bâtissent les colonies et construisent et entretiennent les routes et les infrastructures publiques qui les desservent. Les entreprises opérant dans les colonies et les parcs industriels – en particulier dans les industries manufacturières, les secteurs de service et les établissements vinicoles – créent des emplois et favorisent une activité commerciale qui soutient économiquement les colonies, tout en payant des impôts aux municipalités des colonies. Des sociétés de sécurité privées gardent de nombreuses colonies et fournissent, avec des entreprises de haute technologie, des équipements de surveillance et d'identification. Les banques et les institutions financières facilitent la mise en place de l'infrastructure fiscale qui permet d'organiser des prêts hypothécaires immobiliers et de prêter des capitaux aux entreprises opérant dans les colonies. Les cabinets d'avocats proposent des services juridiques aux colonies, aux colons et aux entreprises participant à la colonisation. Les agences immobilières coordonnent la vente et l'achat de biens résidentiels et commerciaux dans les colonies. Les entreprises agricoles produisent une gamme de denrées alimentaires destinées aux marchés intérieurs et aux exportations, en utilisant l'agriculture à grande échelle ainsi que des technologies modernes. Le tourisme national et international est un secteur émergent pour les colonies, au même titre que les hôtels et la location de logements. Des chaînes de magasins de détail opèrent dans les colonies. Les compagnies de transport relient les colonies aux zones situées à l'intérieur d'Israël mais aussi entre elles. Les entreprises d'extraction exploitent les ressources naturelles du territoire palestinien occupé, notamment les minéraux et l'eau. Les entreprises d'équipement fournissent les machines lourdes nécessaires à la construction de logements et de bâtiments commerciaux. Les sociétés de gestion des déchets desservent à la fois les municipalités et les entreprises industrielles situées dans les colonies. La construction et l'entretien du mur de séparation à travers le territoire occupé contribuent à consolider une situation illégale.

57. Nombre des sociétés et entreprises fournissant des services commerciaux dans les colonies ou contribuant à leur économie sont des sociétés israéliennes. Cependant, un certain nombre d'entreprises internationales contribuent également à l'économie des colonies et en tirent profit. Les banques et les institutions financières internationales accordent des prêts à des entreprises ayant des activités dans les colonies ou investissent dans ces entreprises. D'autres entreprises vendent des biens et des services aux colonies, tels que des matériaux de construction, des machines lourdes et des technologies solaires, ou bien puisent des ressources naturelles non renouvelables. De grandes sociétés internationales de transport ont participé à la construction du système de métro léger de Jérusalem (qui relie un certain nombre de colonies illégales de Jérusalem-Est à Jérusalem-Ouest) et de la liaison ferroviaire à grande vitesse entre Tel-Aviv et Jérusalem (qui traverse une partie du territoire occupé). Les grandes sociétés internationales de réservation de logements font de la publicité pour des locations de logements situées dans les colonies israéliennes. Les biens et services des colonies israéliennes, notamment les produits manufacturés, les vins et les denrées alimentaires, sont exportés en quantité vers le marché international.

58. Sans cette participation importante des entreprises, les colonies, qui sont le moteur de l'occupation, représenteraient un fardeau économique insoutenable pour le Gouvernement israélien. Ces entreprises nationales et internationales tirent grandement profit de la confiscation illégale par Israël des terres et des ressources naturelles palestiniennes, du système israélien à deux vitesses en matière de droits, discriminatoire, d'avantages et de possibilités entre les colonies et le peuple palestinien, ainsi que de l'appauvrissement des Palestiniens (et de l'emploi de main-d'œuvre palestinienne à bas prix qui en résulte dans les colonies), lequel est la conséquence inévitable d'une entreprise d'implantation de colonies⁸². La question est de savoir si les entreprises peuvent commencer à opérer ou continuer d'opérer dans les colonies israéliennes tout en honorant leurs engagements en matière de droits de l'homme.

Diligence accrue ou abstention totale de la part des entreprises ?

59. En 2014, le Groupe de travail sur la question des droits de l'homme et des sociétés transnationales et autres entreprises a publié une déclaration détaillée sur les implications des Principes directeurs relatifs aux entreprises et aux droits de l'homme dans le contexte des colonies israéliennes⁸³. Il y a souligné l'illégalité des colonies et les nombreuses violations des droits de l'homme qui y sont associées. Dans sa conclusion, le Groupe de travail a émis une mise en garde contre l'implication des entreprises dans les colonies israéliennes, déclarant ce qui suit :

Les entreprises commerciales qui font des affaires ou qui cherchent à en faire dans les colonies israéliennes situées dans le territoire palestinien occupé ou qui sont liées à celles-ci doivent pouvoir démontrer qu'elles ne soutiennent pas la poursuite d'une situation illégale internationale ni ne sont complices de violations des droits de l'homme, qu'elles peuvent effectivement prévenir ou atténuer les risques en matière de droits de l'homme et qu'elles sont en mesure de rendre compte des efforts qu'elles déploient à cet égard.

60. En 2018, le HCDH a publié un rapport intérimaire portant sur les progrès accomplis dans la création d'une base de données des entreprises impliquées dans les colonies israéliennes. Dans sa conclusion, le HCDH a exprimé des doutes considérables quant à la possibilité pour une entreprise de prendre part à des activités commerciales avec les colonies israéliennes et, en même temps, de se conformer à ses responsabilités en matière de droits de l'homme (voir A/HRC/37/39, par. 41) :

Au vu de l'ampleur du consensus juridique international concernant la nature illégale des colonies elles-mêmes, et du caractère systémique et généralisé de leurs incidences sur les droits de l'homme, on imagine difficilement qu'une entreprise puisse prendre part aux activités énumérées tout en respectant les Principes directeurs et le droit international.

61. En 2019, Amnesty International a publié une étude de fond sur les droits de l'homme et sur les implications juridiques des entreprises faisant des affaires avec les colonies israéliennes⁸⁴. L'organisation a conclu que, compte tenu de leurs graves répercussions sur les droits de l'homme, seule une abstention totale de leur part conviendrait :

Une entreprise ne peut pas endosser la responsabilité qui lui incombe de respecter les droits de l'homme et les principes du droit international humanitaire lorsqu'elle fait des affaires avec les colonies. En effet, les colonies ont été établies et consolidées en violation des règles du droit international régissant ce que les États peuvent et ne peuvent pas faire en cas d'occupation militaire. En tant que telles, elles constituent des crimes de guerre et donnent lieu à des violations graves, systématiques et généralisées des droits de l'homme.

62. Le Rapporteur spécial estime que toute forme d'implication des entreprises israéliennes ou internationales dans les colonies israéliennes, qu'elle soit directe ou ⁸² Yael Ronen, « Responsibility of businesses involved in the Israeli settlements in the West Bank », janvier 2015.

⁸³ Voir : <https://www.ohchr.org/Documents/Issues/Business/OPTStatement6June2014.pdf>.

⁸⁴ Voir Amnesty International, Think Twice, p. 25.

indirecte, intentionnelle ou fortuite, est totalement incompatible avec les obligations qui incombent aux entreprises en matière de droits de l'homme, avec les Principes directeurs et avec toute définition utile de la diligence raisonnable accrue. Et ce, pour trois raisons. Premièrement, les colonies israéliennes constituent une violation flagrante et grave de la quatrième Convention de Genève et un probable crime de guerre en vertu du Statut de Rome. Il s'agit de l'une des plus graves infractions au droit international des droits de l'homme, au droit international humanitaire et au droit pénal international. Deuxièmement, les sociétés et les entreprises qui opèrent dans les colonies ou qui en tirent profit fournissent l'oxygène économique indispensable à leur croissance. Quelles que soient les retombées positives que les entreprises avancent pour défendre leur activité dans les colonies – souvent, l'emploi de main-d'œuvre palestinienne ou le paiement d'impôts locaux⁸⁵ –, elles ne font guère le poids, du point de vue des droits de l'homme, contre l'ampleur des violations flagrantes inhérentes à l'entreprise de colonisation. Troisièmement, les colonies sont le principal instrument politique – les « faits observés sur le terrain » sans cesse évoqués – utilisé par le Gouvernement israélien pour faire avancer ses revendications d'annexion de facto et de jure et pour refuser l'autodétermination palestinienne. L'annexion est un crime d'agression⁸⁶ et l'autodétermination est le premier des droits de l'homme⁸⁷.

63. Dans les conditions actuelles, la seule forme d'engagement que les entreprises pourraient adopter dans le territoire palestinien occupé pour respecter leurs responsabilités en matière de droits de l'homme consisterait à : a) faire en sorte que leurs activités bénéficient directement à la population protégée sous l'occupation ; b) refuser d'accorder des avantages aux colonies israéliennes et de faire affaire avec elles ; et c) contribuer à la revendication de souveraineté inhérente du peuple palestinien sur son territoire.

Base de données du Conseil des droits de l'homme

64. En février 2020, le HCDH a publié la base de données des entreprises impliquées dans certaines activités concernant les colonies de peuplement israéliennes (voir A/HRC/43/71), conformément à la demande formulée par le Conseil des droits de l'homme dans sa résolution 31/36. Des bases de données portant sur les activités des entreprises avaient déjà été commandées par l'ONU pour d'autres zones de conflit, notamment la République démocratique du Congo (voir S/2003/1027) et le Myanmar (voir A/HRC/42/CRP.3). Le Rapporteur spécial se félicite de la publication de la base de données, car elle fournit un éclairage important sur l'activité des entreprises tant israéliennes qu'internationales dans les colonies et permet au public et aux entreprises de mieux comprendre l'environnement défavorable aux droits de l'homme qui règne dans les colonies⁸⁸. En même temps, il reconnaît que la base de données avait un mandat restrictif (elle ne cherchait pas à couvrir toutes les activités commerciales liées aux colonies qui pourraient soulever des préoccupations en matière de droits de l'homme), qu'elle était interprétée de manière étroite (un certain nombre d'entreprises ayant des relations d'approvisionnement importantes avec les colonies ou le processus d'occupation n'y étaient pas incluses) et qu'elle ne

⁸⁵ Maha Abdullah and Lydia de Leeuw, Violations Set in Stone (Amsterdam, Somo, et Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2020).

⁸⁶ Statut de Rome de la Cour pénale internationale (modifié en dernier lieu en 2010), 17 juillet 1998, article 8 bis, par. 2, al. a).

⁸⁷ L'autodétermination est le tout premier droit de l'homme cité à la fois dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels et dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques.

⁸⁸ Valentina Azarova, « Business and human rights in occupied territory: the UN database of business active in Israel's settlements », Business and Human Rights Journal, vol. 3, n° 2 (juillet 2018), p. 187.

contenait pas de mécanisme juridictionnel⁸⁹. Il convient de répondre à ces préoccupations tout en renforçant la capacité de la base de données à être un outil vivant.

IV. Conclusions

65. En 1970, le Conseil de sécurité a dû faire face à une crise internationale qui présente des similitudes frappantes avec celle qui touche le territoire palestinien occupé : la domination prolongée de l’Afrique du Sud de l’apartheid sur la Namibie⁹⁰. Comme la Palestine, la Namibie était gouvernée dans le cadre d’une relation de confiance supervisée par l’ONU – dans un cas, il s’agit d’une occupation, dans l’autre, d’un mandat – par une puissance étrangère qui exploitait sa position et avançait une revendication de souveraineté illégale. Comme dans le cas de la Palestine, la domination sud-africaine sur la Namibie a été favorisée par l’importante présence d’entreprises régionales et internationales. Et comme dans le cas de la Palestine, la puissance étrangère présente en Namibie défiait les directives données depuis longtemps par le Conseil pour mettre fin à son règne abusif et ouvrir la voie à l’indépendance. En réponse, le Conseil avait autorisé un ensemble complet de sanctions et de contre-mesures pour mettre fin à la domination sud-africaine sur la Namibie. Ces mesures de responsabilisation – que l’on trouve, entre autres, dans la résolution 283 (1970) du Conseil et dans l’avis consultatif rendu par la Cour internationale de Justice sur la Namibie de 1971⁹¹ – ont jeté les bases des mesures prises par la communauté internationale contre le régime illégal de l’Afrique du Sud et en faveur de l’indépendance de la Namibie en 1990.

66. Sans les mesures globales de responsabilisation élaborées et appliquées par le Conseil de sécurité à l’égard de l’Afrique du Sud, l’indépendance de la Namibie n’aurait jamais eu lieu au moment où elle a eu lieu. Et sans l’élaboration et l’application de mesures globales de responsabilisation par la communauté internationale contre l’occupation israélienne, elle se poursuivra à l’avenir. Cette occupation ne mourra pas de vieillesse. Elle ne s’effritera pas non plus devant les appels au respect lancés par l’ONU, lesquels ne promettent pas l’inéluctabilité de répercussions néfastes en cas de désobéissance. Les droits prévus par le droit international sont évidents, mais ils ne s’exécutent pas d’eux-mêmes.

67. Dans ses résolutions 465 (1980) et 471 (1980), le Conseil de sécurité a demandé à tous les États « de ne fournir à Israël aucune assistance qui serait utilisée spécifiquement pour les colonies de peuplement des territoires occupés » et à Israël « de mettre fin à l’occupation prolongée ». Quarante ans plus tard, il est grand temps que le Conseil dirige la communauté internationale en s’inspirant de ses propres précédents concernant la Namibie et d’autres régimes de sanctions modernes pour honorer les directives qu’il émet en vue de mettre fin à l’aide fournie aux colonies et à l’occupation. Comme l’a déclaré la Cour internationale de Justice dans son avis consultatif :

⁸⁹ Voir : www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-why-the-un-s-settlement-database-doesn-t-go-far-enough-1.8589282.

⁹⁰ John Dugard, Confronting Apartheid: A Personal History of South Africa, Namibia and Palestine (Johannesburg, Afrique du Sud, Jacana Media, 2018).

⁹¹ Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South-West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council Resolution 276 (1970) [Conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l’Afrique du Sud en Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain) nonobstant la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité], avis consultatif, Rapports de la C.I.J., 1971, p. 16.

Ce serait une interprétation insoutenable d'affirmer que, lorsque le Conseil de sécurité fait une telle déclaration en vertu de l'article 24 de la Charte au nom de tous les États Membres. Ceux-ci sont libres de ne faire aucun cas de l'illégalité ni même des violations du droit qui en résultent⁹².

V. Recommandations

68. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le Gouvernement israélien se conforme pleinement aux obligations que lui impose le droit international, mette complètement fin à 53 ans d'occupation avec toute la célérité voulue et permette la réalisation de l'autodétermination palestinienne.

69. Le Rapporteur recommande que le Conseil de sécurité, ou l'Assemblée générale si le Conseil n'agit pas, adopte, conformément à la procédure prévue par sa résolution 377 (V) intitulée « Union pour le maintien de la paix », des résolutions contenant les directives suivantes :

a) Demander à tous les États qui entretiennent des relations diplomatiques ou consulaires avec Israël d'adresser une déclaration officielle au Gouvernement israélien indiquant qu'ils ne reconnaissent au pays aucune autorité sur le territoire palestinien occupé et considèrent que la présence continue d'Israël dans le territoire est illégale ;

b) Demander à tous les États de s'abstenir d'entretenir avec Israël toute relation – notamment sous la forme d'accords diplomatiques, consulaires, commerciaux et autres – impliquant la reconnaissance de l'autorité du Gouvernement israélien sur une quelconque partie du territoire palestinien occupé ;

c) Demander à tous les États de veiller à ce que l'ensemble des entreprises relevant de leur juridiction cessent toute activité commerciale, opérationnelle ou d'investissement ainsi que toute transaction commerciale de quelque nature que ce soit en lien avec les colonies israéliennes et les zones d'activités industrielles israéliennes ou avec des entreprises contrôlées par le Gouvernement israélien et opérant dans le territoire palestinien occupé ;

d) Demander à tous les États d'entreprendre, sans délai, une étude et un examen détaillés de l'ensemble des traités bilatéraux qu'ils ont conclus avec Israël, le but étant de déterminer si ces traités contiennent des dispositions susceptibles de s'appliquer aux colonies israéliennes situées dans le territoire palestinien occupé ;

e) Appeler tous les États à décourager la promotion du tourisme et l'émigration vers les colonies israéliennes ;

f) Appeler également tous les États à refuser l'entrée de biens produits et de services proposés, en tout ou en partie, dans les colonies israéliennes ou par des entreprises commerciales contrôlées par Israël et présentes dans le territoire palestinien occupé ;

g) Demander à tous les États de faire rapport chaque année au Secrétaire général sur les mesures qu'ils ont prises pour donner effet aux dispositions énoncées par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale.

70. Le Rapporteur recommande que le Conseil de sécurité veille à ce que la base de données des entreprises impliquées dans certaines activités concernant les colonies de peuplement israéliennes devienne un outil vivant, qu'il en clarifie et en élargisse le mandat et qu'il la dote de ressources suffisantes pour qu'elle puisse faire bien ressortir la mesure dans laquelle lesdites entreprises sont impliquées dans des activités relatives aux colonies et à l'occupation.

⁹² Ibid., par. 112 (p. 52).

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
22 octobre 2021
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-seizième session

Point 74 (c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits humains :
situations relatives aux droits humains et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits humains dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967*

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, en application de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent document est soumis après la date prévue pour que l'information la plus récente puisse y figurer.

Rapport du Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk

Résumé

Le présent rapport est le sixième soumis à l'Assemblée générale par Michael Lynk, Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967. Il a été établi principalement à partir d'informations communiquées par des victimes, des témoins, des représentants de la société civile et des organismes des Nations Unies. Il fait état d'un certain nombre de préoccupations liées à la situation des droits humains en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza, et comprend une analyse détaillée de la responsabilité et la performance des acteurs internationaux.

I. Introduction

1. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Michael Lynk, donne un bref aperçu des problèmes les plus pressants en matière de droits humains qu'il a recensés à l'issue de ses conversations et rencontres avec des membres de la société civile dans le Territoire palestinien occupé au moment de l'établissement du rapport. Il propose ensuite une analyse détaillée des préoccupations les plus récentes liées aux droits humains dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, en mettant tout particulièrement l'accent sur les responsabilités et la performance des acteurs internationaux.

2. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à souligner une fois de plus qu'en dépit de ses demandes répétées, Israël ne l'a pas encore autorisé à accéder au Territoire palestinien occupé. Il fait à nouveau valoir qu'un libre dialogue entre toutes les parties est essentiel à la protection et à la promotion des droits humains et rappelle à Israël qu'il est tout disposé à y participer. Il continue par ailleurs de faire remarquer que l'accès au Territoire palestinien occupé est déterminant pour comprendre la réalité de la situation des droits humains dans le territoire. Le défaut systématique de coopération d'Israël avec le Rapporteur spécial est très préoccupant.

3. Le Rapporteur spécial n'a pas pu se rendre dans la région, y compris à Amman, en raison des restrictions de voyage liées à la propagation de la maladie à coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19). Toutefois, il a pu communiquer activement avec des membres de la société civile et des organismes des Nations Unies et recueillir des informations importantes sur le sujet, en grande partie grâce à des communications.

4. Dans le présent rapport, le Rapporteur spécial s'applique à proposer une analyse détaillée des responsabilités et de la performance des acteurs internationaux.

5. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à exprimer sa gratitude au Gouvernement de l'État de Palestine pour sa pleine coopération à son mandat.

6. Le Rapporteur spécial réitère son soutien au travail essentiel qu'accomplissent les organisations palestiniennes, israéliennes et internationales de défense des droits humains. Ce travail est indispensable non seulement au Rapporteur dans l'accomplissement de son mandat, mais aussi à la communauté internationale dans son ensemble. Les efforts que les organisations de défense des droits humains déploient pour garantir la disponibilité d'informations précises et complètes sur la situation dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ne doivent pas passer inaperçus.

II. Situation actuelle des droits humains

A. Usage excessif de la force par Israël

7. Selon le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires (OCHA), 55 Palestiniens ont été tués par les forces israéliennes en Cisjordanie en 2021, tous par des tirs à balles réelles¹. Lors de l'un des derniers incidents en date, survenu le 15 août, cinq Palestiniens ont été tués par les forces israéliennes lors d'opérations de perquisition et d'arrestation dans le camp de Jénine. Ils auraient été tués à la suite d'un affrontement armé entre des Palestiniens et une unité d'infiltration israélienne, qui était entrée dans le camp pour arrêter un Palestinien supposément affilié au Hamas². Le 28 juillet, un garçon de 11 ans a été tué à Beït Oumar. Il était dans une voiture qui s'éloignait lentement des soldats lorsque certains d'entre eux ont commencé à courir après le véhicule et ont ouvert le feu. Lors de ses funérailles, qui ont eu lieu le 29 juillet, pendant les manifestations pour condamner son meurtre, des Palestiniens ont jeté des pierres et les forces israéliennes ont ouvert le feu, tuant un autre homme³.

¹ Voir Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Protection of civilians: Occupied Palestinian Territory », 10-23 août 2021 (1e 27 août).

² Ibid.

8. De nombreux Palestiniens ont été tués ou blessés à la suite de manifestations et d'affrontements entre manifestants et forces de sécurité, dont beaucoup avaient été organisées pour protester contre les implantations et leur expansion. Le 6 août par exemple, lors d'une manifestation à Beïta, des Palestiniens ont jeté des pierres sur les forces israéliennes, qui ont tiré à balles réelles et avec des balles en caoutchouc et lancé des grenades lacrymogènes, tuant un Palestinien⁴.

9. Les journalistes palestiniens qui rendent compte des violations des droits humains dans le Territoire palestinien occupé ont fait l'objet d'actes de harcèlement et de violence ayant pour but de les intimider et d'empêcher que les manifestations pacifiques palestiniennes reçoivent une couverture médiatique. Le 27 août 2021, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont arrêté sept journalistes palestiniens qui couvraient une manifestation pacifique contre l'établissement de nouveaux avant-postes de colonies et contre la violence des colons dans les collines du sud d'Hébron. Les journalistes ont été arrêtés et leur matériel a été confisqué alors qu'ils regagnaient leurs voitures peu après la fin de la manifestation, bien qu'ils se soient identifiés comme journalistes auprès des soldats. Ils ont été menottés, laissés assis sous le soleil brûlant pendant une heure, puis emmenés au poste de police de Qiryat Arba' où ils ont été interrogés. Deux d'entre eux ont affirmé avoir été agressés et battus par les soldats lors de l'arrestation⁵.

B. Gaza

10. Durant l'escalade des hostilités à Gaza qui a duré 11 jours en mai 2021, 260 Palestiniens ont été tués, dont 66 enfants. Au total, 129 d'entre eux étaient des civils. Plus de 2 200 Palestiniens ont été blessés au cours des hostilités, dont 685 enfants et 480 femmes. Il est possible que certains d'entre eux souffrent d'un handicap à long terme nécessitant une réadaptation⁶. En raison de l'escalade des hostilités, 113 000 personnes déplacées ont cherché refuge et protection dans les écoles gérées par l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA) ou chez leurs proches⁷. Au cours de cette escalade, 290 infrastructures liées à l'eau, à l'assainissement et à l'hygiène ont été endommagées ou détruites, notamment des puits d'eau, des stations de pompage et des réseaux de distribution⁸. En juillet 2021, la plupart des lignes électriques avaient été rétablies et le carburant financé par le Qatar est à nouveau entré dans la bande de Gaza, qui a alors pu bénéficier de 14 heures d'électricité par jour en moyenne⁹.

³ Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Protection of civilians: Occupied Palestinian Territory », 27 juillet-9 août 2021.

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ Nouvelle information relayée par Human Rights Defenders Fund, le 30 août 2021 (dans le dossier).

⁶ Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 8 », 8-28 juillet 2021.

⁷ Ibid.

⁸ WASH Cluster–State of Palestine, « Gaza WASH sector damage assessment », 28 juin 2021.

⁹ Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 8 ».

11. En août 2021, les manifestations ont repris le long de la clôture de Gaza et Israël y a répondu par la force. Le 21 août, un « jour de rage » a été annoncé et des centaines de Palestiniens ont manifesté en masse devant la clôture d'enceinte de Gaza. Au cours de la manifestation, des participants ont lancé des pierres et d'autres objets en direction des forces israéliennes, qui ont tiré à balles réelles et lancé des grenades lacrymogènes. Une autre manifestation a suivi le 23 août. Un homme de 31 ans et un enfant de 12 ans ont été tués par des tirs israéliens lors de ces manifestations et plus de 100 Palestiniens ont été blessés¹⁰.

12. Le travailleur humanitaire de Gaza, Mohammad el-Halabi, qui a été accusé de détourner les fonds de World Vision au profit de groupes armés, est toujours détenu par les autorités israéliennes. Son procès s'est terminé en août et il attend le verdict de la cour de district. L'accusation s'est appuyée sur des éléments de preuves confidentiels et ne lui a pas permis, dans un premier temps, d'avoir accès à un avocat. À de nombreuses reprises, M. el-Halabi aurait subi des pressions pour accepter une procédure de jugement sur reconnaissance préalable de culpabilité en échange d'une réduction de la liste de ses chefs d'accusation et d'un allègement de sa peine, ce qu'il a sans cesse refusé. Selon les informations reçues, son avocat s'est vu imposer de lourdes restrictions, la décision de la cour concernant l'admissibilité des aveux présumés obtenus sous la contrainte a été classée confidentielle et toutes les audiences se sont tenues à huis clos. Le Rapporteur spécial exprime une nouvelle fois de sérieuses inquiétudes estimant que M. el-Halabi n'a pas bénéficié d'un procès équitable (A/HRC/47/27, par. 17)¹¹, et demande à Israël de le libérer immédiatement.

C. Liberté de circulation

13. Les restrictions à la liberté de circulation ont été maintenues dans l'ensemble du Territoire palestinien occupé en tant que méthode permettant à Israël de faire respecter son régime d'occupation. Des restrictions ont été imposées aux déplacements des Palestiniens entre la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et la bande de Gaza, ainsi qu'aux déplacements à l'étranger. Quelque 593 points de contrôle et barrages routiers israéliens continuent d'entraver effectivement l'accès des Palestiniens à leurs droits et services, notamment en matière de santé, d'éducation et de travail. En outre, les Palestiniens en Cisjordanie n'ont pas le droit d'utiliser les routes construites pour les colons israéliens¹². Les personnes qui tentent de franchir les points de contrôle font régulièrement l'expérience d'actes de harcèlement et de difficultés, ce qui entrave gravement leur liberté de mouvement. Par exemple, le 5 juillet 2021, deux palestiniennes ont fait le trajet d'un rendez-vous médical au domicile de l'une d'elles à Hébron. Quelque 200 mètres avant d'y parvenir, les deux femmes ont été arrêtées et la police des frontières israélienne a refusé d'ouvrir la barrière et de les laisser passer. Alors que les deux femmes étaient retenues au poste de contrôle, des colons sont arrivés et ont attaqué l'une d'elles, qui a ensuite été emmenée à l'hôpital pour soigner ses blessures. La patrouille de police des frontières israélienne ne serait pas intervenue lors de cet incident¹³. Cet exemple est révélateur de la situation à Hébron

¹⁰ Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 9 », août 2021.

¹¹ Voir aussi : Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme, « Gaza aid worker must be given fair trial or released, say UN experts », 12 novembre 2020.

¹² Amnesty International, Amnesty International Rapport 2020/21 : La situation des droits humains dans le monde (Londres, 2021).

¹³ B'Tselem, « Border police and settlers attack family in Hebron during argument over crossing a checkpoint, arrest member and demand he not complain against a settler in exchange for releasing him », 8 août 2021.

en particulier, qui est truffée de postes de contrôle limitant considérablement la circulation des Palestiniens, et en Cisjordanie de manière générale.

14. Des Palestiniens ont également été tués ou blessés lors d'incidents qui se sont produits à des postes de contrôle et des barrages routiers. Un incident particulièrement choquant s'est produit dans la nuit du 6 avril 2021 : les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont installé un poste de contrôle temporaire entre Bir Nabala et Jib, au nord de Jérusalem. Elles y ont arrêté la voiture d'un couple palestinien, parents de cinq enfants, qui rentrait chez lui après un rendez-vous médical. Les soldats ont ouvert le feu sur la voiture alors que le couple s'éloignait, tuant l'homme et blessant sa femme¹⁴. Selon B'Tselem, les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont annoncé que la police militaire ouvrait une enquête sur cet incident. Cependant, étant donné l'impunité généralisée qui caractérise ce genre d'incident, les organisations de défense des droits humains ont exprimé la crainte de voir cette affaire connaître le même dénouement¹⁵.

15. Il est toujours très difficile pour les Palestiniens de quitter la bande de Gaza, et bien plus encore depuis l'escalade des hostilités de mai 2021. Début juillet, plus de six semaines après le cessez-le-feu, Israël continuait à restreindre sévèrement les déplacements en provenance ou à destination de Gaza via le passage d'Erez¹⁶. Les mesures relatives à la COVID-19 ont également contribué au renforcement des restrictions. En mars 2020, Israël a annoncé qu'il réduirait encore le nombre déjà restreint de personnes autorisées à quitter Gaza pour des raisons médicales. Au fur et à mesure de l'évolution de la pandémie, Israël a supprimé certaines des restrictions de mouvement imposées en Cisjordanie (et a par exemple octroyé des permis de travail à des Palestiniens pour l'entrée en Israël), mais les restrictions imposées à Gaza sont majoritairement restées en vigueur¹⁷. Le fait que l'Autorité palestinienne ait mis fin en mai 2020 à sa coordination avec Israël en matière de sécurité – en réponse à l'intention d'Israël d'annexer certaines parties de la Cisjordanie – a également contribué à l'apparition de nouvelles restrictions. En conséquence, les demandes de permis ont chuté et, en mars 2021 par exemple, la circulation au point de passage d'Erez a considérablement diminué, jusqu'à atteindre environ 6 % de ce qu'elle avait été les mois précédents¹⁸. Au cours du mois de mai 2021, 1 000 personnes ont quitté la bande de Gaza, soit le plus faible nombre de sorties pour toute l'année¹⁹. Bien que des informations indiquent que les autorités israéliennes ont assoupli certaines restrictions de mouvement pour les patients palestiniens depuis le cessez-le-feu, deux patients sur trois qui demandent de tels permis les attendent toujours au moment de leur rendez-vous²⁰.

D. Actes de violence commis par des colons

16. Malgré l'élection d'un nouveau gouvernement israélien en juin 2021, qui comprend des politiciens plus « centristes », dont certains ont pris position par le ¹⁴ B'Tselem, « Not an attack or a car-ramming: soldiers at checkpoint shoot and injure Palestinian parents of five, killing father », 27 avril 2021.

¹⁵ Ibid.

¹⁶ Gisha, « Israel's restrictions at Gaza crossings are impairing civilian infrastructure, crushing the economy, and violating human rights », 12 juillet 2021.

¹⁷ B'Tselem, « Since pandemic, has Israel allowed almost no Palestinians out of Gaza for medical treatment », 3 mai 2021.

¹⁸ Ibid.

¹⁹ Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, base de données Gaza Crossings. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : www.ochaopt.org/data/crossings.

²⁰ Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 8 ».

passé contre l'entreprise de colonisation²¹, l'expansion des implantations s'est poursuivie et la violence des colons ne semble pas baisser d'intensité. Des cas de plus en plus flagrants ont été recensés en 2021, ainsi que des cas impliquant un soutien et une collaboration actifs entre les colons et les forces de sécurité israéliennes. Au 24 septembre 2021, le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires avait recensé 246 actes de violence commis par des colons ayant entraîné des dommages matériels et 93 autres incidents ayant fait des blessés²². Cette violence est principalement motivée par des raisons idéologiques et a pour but de terroriser les Palestiniens et de les empêcher d'accéder à leurs terres. Aux violences physiques contre les Palestiniens s'ajoutent de nombreux incidents lors desquels leurs moyens de subsistance sont pris pour cible dans les zones rurales, où le bétail, les terres agricoles, les arbres et les maisons²³ font notamment l'objet d'actes de vandalisme.

17. Lors d'un incident particulièrement odieux qui s'est déroulé le 17 août 2021, des colons auraient percuté un jeune garçon de 15 ans avec leur véhicule près du village de Silat el-Zahr, sur la route reliant Naplouse à Jénine, puis l'auraient enlevé pour le conduire dans l'implantation israélienne de Homesh, précédemment évacuée, l'auraient attaché à un arbre puis battu et lui auraient brûlé les pieds jusqu'à ce qu'il perde connaissance. Une jeep de l'armée israélienne a trouvé le garçon deux heures plus tard et l'a confié à une ambulance. Le garçon a été transporté à l'hôpital où il a été soigné pour des contusions et des brûlures et souffre encore d'un grave traumatisme psychologique²⁴.

18. Il a été fait état de plusieurs incidents lors desquels les forces de sécurité israéliennes ont activement aidé les colons dans leurs attaques. Selon B'Tselem, lors de deux incidents distincts, le vendredi 14 mai 2021, des colons et des soldats ont fait irruption dans deux villages, Ourif et Iskaka. Les colons, dont certains étaient armés, ont jeté des pierres sur des habitations et des habitants. Colons et soldats ont ouvert le feu ensemble, faisant 12 blessés et 2 morts parmi les Palestiniens²⁵.

19. L'atmosphère d'impunité qui entoure les attaques de colons est très préoccupante et laisse entendre à ceux-ci que leurs actes illégaux et scandaleux contre les Palestiniens n'auront aucune conséquence. L'organisation non gouvernementale israélienne de défense des droits humains Yesh Din a analysé 63 incidents de violence commise par des colons ayant eu lieu entre 2017 et 2020, notamment des infractions violentes, des dommages matériels et la profanation de mosquées. Des plaintes ont été déposées pour 60 de ces incidents, mais la police n'a conclu son enquête que dans 38 cas. Aucun de ces incidents n'a abouti à une mise en examen²⁶. La violence des colons a un impact inéluctable sur la vie des Palestiniens en Cisjordanie et crée un sentiment persistant de terreur et d'intimidation.

²¹ Par exemple : voir Walla News, « Michaeli v. Yachimovich: there is nothing more to build in the settlements », 23 décembre 2012. Disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://news.walla.co.il/item/2599418>. En hébreu.

²² Nations Unies, Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, « Protection of civilians: Occupied Palestinian Territory », 7-20 septembre 2021.

²³ Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme (HCDH), « Israel/OPT: UN experts warn of rising levels of Israeli settler violence in a climate of impunity », 14 avril 2021.

²⁴ Gideon Levy et Alex Levaq, « Shacked, beaten, strung up on a tree: Palestinian teen brutally attacked by settlers », Haaretz, 26 août 2021.

²⁵ B'Tselem, « May 2021: two Palestinians were fatally shot in two joint attacks by settlers and soldiers in the villages of Iskaka and Urif – Awad Harb and Nidal Safadi », 24 août 2021.

²⁶ Yesh Din, « Settler crime and violence inside Palestinian communities, 2017–2020 », mai 2021.

E. Autorité palestinienne et autorités de facto de Gaza

20. Le 24 juin 2021, Nizar Banat, critique de longue date de l'Autorité palestinienne, est mort sous la garde des forces de sécurité palestiniennes. Depuis le meurtre de M. Banat fin juin, des manifestations ont eu lieu à Hébron, Bethléem et Ramallah, auxquelles les forces de sécurité palestiniennes, déployées en uniforme ou en habits civils, ont répondu par un usage excessif de la force²⁷. Le 21 août 2021 à Ramallah, les forces de sécurité palestiniennes ont arrêté 23 Palestiniens au motif qu'ils tenaient une manifestation publique. Les personnes arrêtées participaient à une manifestation organisée pour exiger que les responsables du meurtre de Nizar Banat en juin soient poursuivis en justice. La majorité des personnes arrêtées l'ont été avant même le début de toute manifestation. Les autorités avaient préalablement été informées de la tenue de cette manifestation, comme l'exige la loi²⁸. Il semblerait que d'autres arrestations soient en cours. La plupart des personnes arrêtées ont été accusées de participation à un rassemblement illégal ainsi que d'incitation au conflit sectaire et de diffamation des autorités supérieures. Plusieurs d'entre elles sont des défenseurs des droits humains et des militants politiques bien connus. Ces arrestations ont suscité une vague de condamnations de la part de l'ONU, de l'Union européenne et d'organisations de défense des droits humains, qui ont mis en garde contre un dangereux recul des droits et des libertés publiques. Le Rapporteur spécial tient à réaffirmer que l'obligation de respecter, protéger et réaliser les droits humains incombe à l'autorité compétente qui exerce le pouvoir. Nonobstant la dureté de l'occupation israélienne, la société civile palestinienne a tout à fait le droit d'exiger de ses propres dirigeants politiques et responsables de la sécurité qu'ils respectent la promesse solennelle qu'ils ont faite de se conformer aux engagements internationaux en matière de droits humains.

21. La colère a également été alimentée par la décision de reporter indéfiniment des élections qui étaient prévues pour mai et juillet 2021, et qui auraient été les premières élections palestiniennes depuis 15 ans²⁹. Le Président de l'État de Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, a annoncé le 29 avril 2021 que les élections seraient reportées à une date indéterminée car il était possible que les Palestiniens ne soient pas en mesure de voter à Jérusalem-Est. Le Rapporteur spécial a noté que les élections palestiniennes offraient l'occasion de renouveler le processus démocratique, de faire face à des divisions politiques internes de longue date, de renforcer les institutions responsables et de faire un pas important vers la réalisation des droits nationaux et individuels fondamentaux du peuple palestinien. Pour que les élections aient lieu, il est important qu'Israël déclare clairement qu'il autorisera la pleine participation démocratique des Palestiniens de Jérusalem-Est. En tant que puissance occupante, il doit interférer le moins possible avec les droits et la vie quotidienne des Palestiniens³⁰.

22. Le 22 juillet, une explosion a eu lieu dans un bâtiment de trois étages situé dans un marché populaire du secteur de Zaouiya. Elle a tué un homme de 68 ans et blessé 14 autres personnes, dont 6 enfants. Le comité de suivi des autorités de facto a annoncé qu'il avait demandé au Ministère de l'intérieur d'enquêter sur cette affaire. Un certain nombre d'organisations de défense des droits humains ont demandé une enquête rapide sur l'incident et se sont inquiétées de l'augmentation du nombre ²⁷ HCDC, « Occupied Palestinian Territory: attacks against critics must stop, those responsible arrested – UN experts », 6 juillet 2021.

²⁸ Amira Hass, « The Palestinian authority is quashing legal protests – again », Haaretz, 22 août 2021.

²⁹ Al-Jazeera, « UN, EU condemn Palestinian authority over activist arrests », 24 août 2021.

³⁰ HCDC, « Palestinian election: free, fair, democratic and credible vote must include East Jerusalem – UN experts », 26 July 2021.

d'explosions touchant des civils dans les zones résidentielles³¹. Au moment de la rédaction du présent rapport, l'enquête se poursuit.

III. Responsabilité et performance des acteurs internationaux

23. La communauté internationale – Nations Unies en tête – a accepté depuis longtemps la responsabilité particulière qui est la sienne lorsqu'il s'agit de superviser la question de Palestine, mettre un terme définitif à l'occupation israélienne, réaliser l'autodétermination palestinienne et veiller à ce que toutes les questions liées au conflit soient réglées de façon juste et durable³². Ces questions ont naturellement pris une immense ampleur politique, juridique et populaire, qui se répercute bien au-delà du Levant. Kofi Annan, l'ancien Secrétaire général de l'ONU, a rappelé dans ses mémoires que le conflit israélo-palestinien n'était pas simplement un problème non résolu parmi d'autres. Selon lui, aucune autre question ne porte une charge symbolique et émotionnelle aussi puissante qui touche des personnes vivant loin de la zone de conflit³³.

24. Ce sont les Nations Unies qui ont voté la partition de la Palestine et permis la création de l'État d'Israël³⁴, pris en charge des millions de réfugiés palestiniens pendant sept décennies³⁵, entrepris de multiples missions de maintien de la paix dans la région³⁶ et surveillé de près le conflit et l'occupation qui se poursuivent en adoptant des centaines de résolutions et en publiant une myriade de rapports³⁷. La communauté internationale est intimement associée à ce conflit du fait des nombreuses initiatives diplomatiques de cessez-le-feu et de paix, des ventes massives d'armes et du volume considérable de l'aide, des échanges commerciaux, des subventions et des investissements. Cette zone de conflit est depuis longtemps la plus largement couverte et étudiée au monde. Chaque fois que le conflit entre Israéliens et Arabes sur la question de la Palestine a atteint un point critique, l'ONU a servi de poste de pilotage diplomatique pour résoudre la crise. Ce conflit est devenu, à bien des égards, le plus international des conflits internationaux, et il restera presque certainement au premier plan ou parmi les priorités du programme politique de la communauté internationale jusqu'à l'avènement d'une paix juste.

25. Compte tenu de cette responsabilité particulière, comment pouvons-nous évaluer l'efficacité réelle des efforts déployés par la communauté internationale pour mettre un terme définitif à l'occupation israélienne ? Cela est particulièrement important étant donné la durée démesurée de cette occupation – la plus longue de l'ère moderne – et le fait que les principaux acteurs internationaux semblent s'être résignés à l'idée que la fin de l'occupation n'est pas pour demain, et qu'ils sont à court d'idées et d'énergie pour contrecarrer la stratégie de patience d'Israël et permettre à la Palestine d'atteindre à une véritable autodétermination.

³¹ Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, « Al Mezan calls for investigation into house explosion in Gaza that killed one person and injured 14 others », 22 juillet 2021.

³² Voir résolution 75/23 de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies (« Réaffirmant que l'Organisation des Nations Unies est investie d'une responsabilité permanente en ce qui concerne la question de Palestine ... »).

³³ Kofi Annan, Interventions : Une vie dans la guerre et dans la paix (Odile Jacobs, 2013).

³⁴ Voir résolution 181 (II) de l'Assemblée générale. Voir généralement Avi Shlaim, Le mur de fer : Israël et le monde arabe (Buchet-Chastel, 2008).

³⁵ Francesca P. Albanese et Lex Takkenberg, Palestinian Refugees in International Law (2^e éd.) (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2020).

³⁶ Karim Makdisi et Vidjay Prashad, éd., Land of Blue Helmets: The United Nations and the Arab World (Oakland, University of California Press, 2017).

³⁷ Ardi Imseis, The United Nations and the Question of Palestine (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, à paraître).

26. Dans un rapport daté du 21 octobre 2019 (A/74/507), le Rapporteur spécial a abordé la question des obligations tenant à la responsabilité internationale, en soulignant les devoirs juridiques et politiques découlant de la Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève), des articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite adoptés en 2001 et de l'Article 25 de la Charte des Nations Unies. Dans son rapport du 22 octobre 2020 (A/75/532), le Rapporteur spécial a examiné d'un œil critique le rôle du Conseil de sécurité dans la supervision de l'occupation, en faisant valoir que le Conseil n'a pas réussi à imposer des contraintes significatives à Israël en réponse au renforcement de son occupation de la Palestine au mépris de ses propres résolutions et du droit international. Dans le présent rapport, il s'intéresse à quatre acteurs internationaux – les États-Unis d'Amérique, l'Union européenne, la Banque mondiale et le Quatuor – qui ont joué divers rôles influents en tant que médiateurs, bailleurs de fonds ou facilitateurs ou ont supervisé tout ou partie du processus Madrid-Oslo relatif à l'occupation israélienne.

A. Responsabilité de la communauté internationale dans l'aggravation de l'occupation

27. Ces dernières années, l'occupation israélienne de la Palestine, qui dure déjà depuis 54 ans, toujours répressive, toujours insatiable, s'est métastasée en quelque chose de bien plus dur et profondément ancré : la domination étrangère permanente d'un peuple sur un autre, encadrée par un système à deux vitesses de lois et de droits politiques inégalitaires. Plus de 680 000 colons israéliens vivant dans des implantations ségréguées et privilégiées au milieu de 5 millions de Palestiniens apatrides ; des guerres asymétriques ; une fragmentation géographique ; une économie étouffée et fortement dépendante de l'aide extérieure ; des réseaux distincts de routes et de services ; des ghettos appauvris et clôturés uniques en leur genre dans le monde moderne ; un environnement coercitif ; le recours accru à la violence nécessaire au maintien de l'occupation ; le déni du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes ; l'accès profondément inégal aux droits sociaux et aux droits relatifs à la propriété, à la santé et à l'emploi. Le tout entièrement fondé sur la nationalité et l'appartenance ethnique³⁸. Tout cela devrait être impensable au XXI^e siècle.

28. Des juristes, parmi lesquels des universitaires israéliens, ont confirmé qu'en vertu du droit international : a) une occupation doit être de courte durée et temporaire ; b) une occupation doit impérativement être établie de bonne foi et dans l'intérêt de la population occupée ; c) la puissance occupante n'acquiert absolument aucun droit d'installer une partie de sa population civile dans le territoire occupé ou d'annexer une portion de celui-ci ; d) le territoire doit être restitué en totalité au souverain – le peuple occupé – dès que cela est raisonnablement possible³⁹. Israël viole depuis longtemps tous ces principes fondamentaux, et son occupation a franchi de manière flagrante une ligne rouge marquant l'illégalité au regard du droit international (voir A/72/556)⁴⁰.

³⁸ Voir les rapports récents de Al-Haq, B'Tselem, Human Rights Watch, Amnesty International et le West Bank Protection Consortium.

³⁹ Orna Ben-Naftali, Michael Sfard et Hedi Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT: A Legal Lexicon of the Israeli Control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, 2018) ; et Aeyal Gross, The Writing on the Wall: Rethinking the International Law of Occupation (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, 2017).

⁴⁰ Voir aussi Ardi Imseis, « Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967–2020 », European Journal of International Law, vol. 31, n° 3 (août 2020).

29. Cependant, la communauté internationale s'est montrée étonnamment peu encline à s'opposer véritablement aux changements considérables qu'Israël a générés sur le terrain, et encore moins à agir pour les annuler. Il s'agit là d'un échec politique de premier ordre. Cette même communauté internationale – s'exprimant par l'intermédiaire des principaux organes politiques et juridiques des Nations Unies – a établi le cadre détaillé et fondé sur les droits largement accepté qui régit la supervision et le règlement de la question de l'occupation israélienne de la Palestine⁴¹. En conséquence, la longue occupation israélienne doit purement et simplement cesser⁴². Tant les Palestiniens que les Israéliens doivent pouvoir vivre en paix et en sécurité et jouir du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, y compris en formant des États souverains, sûrs et viables, dans les limites du territoire de la Palestine sous mandat, sur la base de la frontière de 1967⁴³. L'annexion d'un territoire occupé est illégale⁴⁴. Chacune des plus de 280 implantations israéliennes à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie constitue une violation flagrante du droit international⁴⁵. Jérusalem-Est a été illégalement annexée par Israël et demeure un territoire occupé⁴⁶. Les Palestiniens qui sont devenus des réfugiés suite aux guerres de 1948 et 1967 ont le droit de choisir de retourner dans leur patrie⁴⁷. Gaza fait partie intégrante de la Palestine, elle demeure occupée et le blocus israélien est une forme prohibée de peine collective⁴⁸. Le devoir politique et juridique de responsabilité signifie qu'il incombe à la communauté internationale de s'opposer aux violations graves du droit international et des droits humains et d'y mettre fin⁴⁹ : elle dispose pour cela de nombreux pouvoirs politiques et juridiques lui permettant de sanctionner les contrevenants jusqu'à ce qu'ils se conforment à leurs obligations⁵⁰.

30. Ce n'est pas fuir la réalité ni dresser un obstacle insurmontable sur la voie de la diplomatie active que d'insister pour que la supervision et la cessation de l'occupation israélienne, ainsi que la création d'une solution juste et durable pour les Palestiniens comme pour les Israéliens, s'appuient sur le droit international et sur un cadre fondé sur les droits. Ce dernier établit au contraire les limites politiques claires entre les comportements admissibles et inadmissibles que tous les États et acteurs internationaux – grands et petits, forts et faibles, démocratiques et autoritaires – se sont engagés à respecter en ratifiant les traités, conventions et pactes modernes et en devenant membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies⁵¹. Se conformer au droit international est non seulement un devoir pour les acteurs internationaux, mais aussi

⁴¹ Kofi Annan a déclaré en 2002 qu'il n'y avait aucun conflit dans le monde aujourd'hui dont la solution soit aussi claire, emporte un aussi large consensus et soit aussi nécessaire à la paix mondiale que le conflit israélo-palestinien. Voir UN News, « At Arab summit, Annan urges Sharon, Arafat to lead their peoples "back from brink" », 27 mars 2002.

⁴² Résolution 476 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité (« Réaffirme la nécessité impérieuse de mettre fin à l'occupation prolongée des territoires arabes occupés par Israël depuis 1967, y compris Jérusalem »).

⁴³ Résolution 1850 (2008) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁴⁴ Résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁴⁵ Ibid.

⁴⁶ Ibid.

⁴⁷ Résolutions 73/92 et 73/93 de l'Assemblée générale.

⁴⁸ Résolution 1860 (2009) du Conseil de sécurité. Voir aussi Ban Ki-Moon, Secrétaire général de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, commentaires lors d'un point presse, 28 juin 2016.

⁴⁹ Voir résolution 56/83 de l'Assemblée générale, annexe (Articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite, art. 40 et 41). Voir également James Crawford, State Responsibility: The General Part (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, 2013).

⁵⁰ Jeremy Matam Farrall, United Nations Sanctions and the Rule of Law (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni, Cambridge University Press, 2009). Voir aussi Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, « Geneva Conventions of 1949 and Additional Protocols and their Commentaries », base de données du DIH coutumier, disponible à l'adresse suivante : <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/vwTreaties1949.xsp>.

⁵¹ Zaha Hassan et al., « Breaking the Israel-Palestine status quo », 2021.

une pratique largement répandue parmi les États, comme en témoignent les flux d'investissements et de commerce internationaux, le respect des frontières et de la souveraineté, la prolifération des institutions internationales qui surveillent le respect des obligations et encouragent la coopération, et la réglementation d'aspects aussi ordinaires de la vie quotidienne que les voyages, les services de messagerie, les droits de garde et la technologie⁵².

31. En ce qui concerne l'occupation de la Palestine, il y aurait de nets avantages à ce que la communauté internationale exige qu'Israël respecte ses obligations juridiques internationales, du fait que cela permettrait :

a) Premièrement, d'aplanir une partie des immenses disparités de pouvoir entre Israël et les Palestiniens qui ont entravé l'intégralité du processus de paix, et rendrait ainsi plus probable la conclusion d'un accord durable et équitable⁵³ ;

b) Deuxièmement, d'établir des règles fondamentales bien définies pour déterminer ce qui est légitimement négociable (comme le commerce, la sécurité, la migration de main-d'œuvre et les modifications équitables des frontières de 1967) et ce qui ne l'est pas (comme le maintien des implantations, la poursuite de l'annexion et l'abus de souveraineté), conformément à la norme juridique adoptée de longue date selon laquelle *ex turpi causa non oritur actio*⁵⁴ ;

c) Troisièmement, d'accroître les chances qu'un accord visant à mettre fin à l'occupation et à créer une paix définitive soit durable, étant donné que l'ordre international fondé sur des règles apporterait à la fois la prévisibilité et des mécanismes d'application du principe de responsabilité permettant de faire face à toute difficulté ultérieure ;

d) Quatrièmement, d'indiquer clairement à de potentiels occupants illégitimes que la communauté internationale ne saurait tolérer l'existence de « zones interdites » en matière de droits humains, de droit humanitaire et de droit pénal. Dans le monde moderne, on ne peut pas traiter le droit international comme un menu à la carte et choisir les règles que l'on respecte et celles que l'on méprise.

32. Malheureusement, la remarquable tolérance de la communauté internationale à l'égard de l'exceptionnalisme qui caractérise la gestion israélienne de l'occupation a permis à la realpolitik de prendre le pas sur les droits, au pouvoir de supplanter la justice et à l'impunité de saper le principe de responsabilité. C'est l'évolution visible du processus de paix Madrid-Oslo, qui a débuté en 1991. Israël, sans rencontrer trop de résistance de la part des principaux acteurs internationaux, a réussi à faire en sorte que les négociations avec les Palestiniens soient menées en dehors du cadre du droit international en vigueur et du consensus international existant⁵⁵, et ce en dépit des impératifs liés à l'ordre international fondé sur des règles. Cela a permis à Israël de rester intraitable dans ses négociations, son objectif final étant de faire reconnaître formellement ses revendications sur Jérusalem-Est et sur la plupart, voire l'intégralité, de ses implantations de Cisjordanie, tout en consentant à la création d'un minuscule simulacre d'État pour les Palestiniens, qui ne jouirait ni d'un territoire ⁵² Harold Hongju Koh, « Why do nations obey international law? », Yale Law Journal, vol. 106, n° 8 (1997).

⁵³ Susan Akram et al., éd., International Law and the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict: A Rights-Based Approach to Middle East Peace (Londres, Routledge, 2011).

⁵⁴ Les droits ne peuvent pas découler d'actes illégaux.

⁵⁵ Khaled Elgindy, Blind Spot: America and the Palestinians from Balfour to Trump (Washington, D.C., Brookings Institution, 2019).

digne de ce nom ni d'aucune souveraineté⁵⁶. Pour la communauté internationale, cela a donné lieu à un paradoxe troublant : alors que l'ONU s'est exprimée plus régulièrement et de façon plus détaillée au sujet du cadre de règlement de ce conflit que pour n'importe quelle autre zone de conflit au monde, ce cadre n'a eu que très peu d'influence sur les diverses initiatives liées au processus de paix d'Oslo – comme la Déclaration de principes sur des arrangements intérimaires d'autonomie de 1993, les Accords d'Oslo II de 1995, les négociations de Camp David de 2000, les paramètres de Clinton de 2001, les principes arrêtés par le Quatuor en 2003, la formule issue de la Conférence d'Annapolis de 2007, l'initiative de paix proposée par Kerry en 2013-2014 et le plan intitulé « De la paix à la prospérité » établi par Trump en 2020 – qui ont échoué les uns après les autres faute de pouvoir prendre appui sur un échafaudage juridique solide et sur une véritable volonté politique de soutenir une résolution fondée sur les droits.

33. La communauté internationale n'est pas parvenue à faire respecter son propre cadre fondé sur les droits ni à faire appliquer ses nombreuses résolutions ; la conséquence de cet échec est que les rares possibilités restantes de parvenir à une véritable solution des deux États se réduisent comme peau de chagrin. Au lieu de cela est apparu ce que l'Union européenne a reconnu comme étant la réalité d'un État unique où les droits sont inégaux⁵⁷, et que les groupes régionaux et internationaux de défense des droits humains ont déclaré être un apartheid⁵⁸. En 2016, le Conseil de sécurité a mis en garde contre le fait que les activités de peuplement israéliennes mettaient gravement en péril la viabilité de la solution des deux États fondée sur les frontières de 1967⁵⁹. L'ancien Secrétaire général Ban Ki-Moon a déclaré en juin 2021 qu'Israël avait poursuivi une politique d'annexion progressive de facto dans les territoires qu'il occupait depuis 1967, au point que la perspective d'une solution des deux États avait pratiquement disparu⁶⁰. Les lignes roses minimalistes que la communauté internationale a tracées pour Israël – pas de nouvelles annexions de jure, pas de nouvelles implantations, pas de destruction de communautés palestiniennes – n'ont guère ralenti la croissance de sa population de colons, l'expansion des infrastructures de transport et de services publics reliant ses implantations entre elles, l'inextricable claustration qu'il impose à Gaza ou la régularité avec laquelle nombre de ses dirigeants politiques déclarent que Jérusalem-Est et la Cisjordanie appartiennent de droit à Israël et ne seront jamais cédées. Les déclarations rituelles dans lesquelles les principaux acteurs internationaux jurent qu'ils restent attachés à une solution des deux États sont devenues une pantomime diplomatique, une façade pour masquer la paralysie plutôt qu'une proclamation de détermination, et cela se produit alors que tout le monde est parfaitement au courant de la réalité dynamique sur le terrain.

34. Les tendances politiques de l'été 2021 ont été décourageantes, mais sans surprise. Le nouveau Premier Ministre israélien, Naftali Bennett, a expressément ⁵⁶ Seth Anziska, Preventing Palestine: A Political History from Camp David to Oslo (Princeton, New Jersey, Princeton University Press, 2018) ; et Jeremy Sharon, « Netanyahu calls for Palestinian “state-minus” », The Jerusalem Post, 24 octobre 2018.

⁵⁷ Barak Ravid, « EU foreign policy chief: Israel's land-grab law entrenches one-State reality of unequal rights », Haaretz, 7 février 2017.

⁵⁸ Human Rights Watch, A Threshold Crossed: Israeli Authorities and the Crimes of Apartheid and Persecution (2021) ; Susan Power, « The legal architecture of apartheid », Al-Haq, 12 avril 2021 ; et B'Tselem, « A regime of Jewish supremacy from the Jordan River to the Mediterranean Sea: this is apartheid », janvier 2021.

⁵⁹ Résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁶⁰ Ban Ki-Moon, « US should back a new approach to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict », The Financial Times, 29 juin 2021.

déclaré en septembre qu'il était opposé à la création d'un État palestinien⁶¹. Le Ministre israélien de la défense, Benny Gantz, a déclaré que les négociations de paix étaient impossibles en raison de l'opposition de l'Autorité palestinienne aux implantations israéliennes à Jérusalem-Est et en Cisjordanie. Il a affirmé qu'Israël ne démantèlerait pas les implantations⁶². Le nouveau Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères, Yair Lapid, a déclaré lors d'une réunion des ministres des affaires étrangères de l'Union européenne en juillet qu'il n'y avait aucune perspective actuelle pour un processus de paix⁶³. Rien de tout cela n'a suscité de réelle réaction internationale⁶⁴. Au lieu de cela, avec l'apparente bénédiction des principaux acteurs internationaux⁶⁵, le nouveau gouvernement s'applique à « réduire le conflit »⁶⁶ et à faire disparaître certains sujets de mécontentement pour les Palestiniens, en autorisant par exemple la construction d'un petit nombre de maisons palestiniennes dans la zone C, en augmentant le nombre de Palestiniens autorisés à travailler en Israël et en créant des réseaux de téléphonie mobile plus modernes⁶⁷. Les dirigeants politiques israéliens perçoivent cette paix économique non pas comme une voie vers la création d'un véritable État palestinien⁶⁸, mais comme un substitut permettant de maintenir le statu quo⁶⁹. Mairav Zonszein, de l'International Crisis Group, a fait valoir qu'il était impossible d'avoir une paix ou une stabilité économique sous occupation, car l'occupation fait passer les intérêts, les ressources et l'expansionnisme israéliens avant tout le reste⁷⁰.

35. Le présent rapport porte principalement sur l'efficacité de quatre des acteurs internationaux influents impliqués dans le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et la supervision de l'occupation israélienne. Il s'agit, en se concentrant sur les États-Unis, l'Union européenne, la Banque mondiale et le Quatuor, d'évaluer s'ils ont assidûment œuvré à la réalisation de l'objectif déclaré de la communauté internationale, à savoir mettre fin à l'occupation, permettre l'autodétermination des Palestiniens et assurer la ⁶¹ Bennett a déclaré qu'il était opposé à un État palestinien. Selon lui, ce serait une terrible erreur qui transposerait en Judée-Samarie la terrible situation à Gaza. Voir Tovah Lazaroff, « Palestinian statehood would be a "terrible mistake" – Bennett », The Jerusalem Post, 15 septembre 2021.

⁶² Neri Zilber, « Israel can live with a new Iran nuclear deal, Defense Minister says », Foreign Policy, 14 septembre 2021.

⁶³ Jonathan Lis, « Israel's Lapid to EU's top diplomats: two-state solution is unfeasible », Haaretz, 12 juillet 2021.

⁶⁴ Anshel Pfeffer, « Israel's Prime Minister now pretends the Palestinians don't exist. It's a brilliant move », Haaretz, 30 septembre 2021. (Au cours des trois derniers mois, depuis qu'il est devenu Premier Ministre, Bennett a remarqué à quel point il est rare que la question de Palestine soit évoquée lors de ses conversations avec des dirigeants étrangers, et à quel point ils manquaient d'enthousiasme lorsqu'ils en parlaient.)

⁶⁵ Le Président des États-Unis, Joseph Biden, lors de remarques à la soixante-seizième session de l'Assemblée générale, le 21 septembre 2021, a affirmé qu'il croyait encore à une solution des deux États, mais que le but était encore loin.

⁶⁶ Patrick Kingsley, « "Shrinking the conflict": what does Israel's new mantra really mean? », The New York Times, 30 septembre 2021.

⁶⁷ Adam Rasgon, « In reversal, Israel's new government engages with Palestinian authority », The New York Times, 25 septembre 2021.

⁶⁸ Après avoir exprimé son opposition à un État palestinien, le Premier Ministre Bennett a déclaré que sa perspective était centrée sur le commerce. Il a ajouté que si plus d'entreprises étaient créées, si l'économie était renforcée et les conditions de vie de tous améliorées en Judée-Samarie, ce serait une bonne chose. Voir Lazaroff, « Palestinian statehood would be a "terrible mistake" – Bennett ».

⁶⁹ En rendant compte de cette nouvelle approche du gouvernement israélien, le New York Times a noté que même si le gouvernement israélien prenait des mesures pour améliorer l'économie et la sécurité des Palestiniens, il s'était engagé à poursuivre l'expansion des colonies en Cisjordanie ; il avait également continué à démolir des habitations palestiniennes construites sans permis dans des zones où les permis sont rarement délivrés, et à employer la manière forte avec les Palestiniens lors des manifestations et des affrontements. Voir Rasgon, « In reversal ».

⁷⁰ Kingsley, « Shrinking the conflict ».

paix, la sécurité et un avenir prospère et partagé aux Israéliens et aux Palestiniens, ou s'ils l'ont en réalité freiné.

36. Pour évaluer leur efficacité, le Rapporteur spécial propose cinq critères fondamentaux permettant de mesurer le rôle de ces acteurs de premier plan. Il est important de mettre ces critères en exergue, car ils sont au cœur de la relation disparate entre Israël et la Palestine. Tout effort collectif ou individuel de la communauté internationale visant à créer un cadre pour superviser l'occupation et y mettre fin qui ne placerait pas ces critères immédiatement ou quasiment au cœur de son entreprise échouera presque certainement sur les hauts-fonds de la réalité moyen-orientale :

a) En raison de l'immense asymétrie de pouvoir entre Israël et les Palestiniens, une intervention internationale active est indispensable. Sur le plan militaire, Israël dispose des forces armées les plus puissantes de la région. Sur le plan économique, Israël affiche un produit intérieur brut par habitant comparable à ceux des pays européens et 12 fois supérieur à celui des Palestiniens. Sur le plan diplomatique, Israël compte sur le soutien durable d'acteurs internationaux de premier plan. Sur le plan territorial, Israël jouit d'une liberté d'action militaire totale entre la mer Méditerranée et le Jourdain. Ce n'est que sur le plan démographique que les Palestiniens ont l'avantage : ils constituent désormais une légère majorité de la population entre la mer Méditerranée et le Jourdain. Sans mesures internationales d'application du principe de responsabilité actives et décisives pour contrer l'abus de ce pouvoir écrasant, les vastes avantages d'Israël continueront à dicter ce qui se passe sur le terrain et à toute table de négociation ;

b) Le cadre destiné à mettre fin à l'occupation doit recourir à une approche fondée sur les droits, ancrée dans le droit international et les droits humains. La stratégie sur laquelle le processus de paix reposait hier – qui s'appuyait sur la realpolitik des « faits accomplis » israéliens, la faiblesse palestinienne et l'absence de droit – n'a conduit qu'à des impasses diplomatiques répétées, tout en permettant la poursuite presque sans entrave des violations des droits humains et d'une occupation sans fin⁷¹. Le fait d'ignorer le cadre international établi eu égard à l'occupation et aux droits ne fait qu'accélérer la détérioration de la situation⁷². Seule une approche fondée sur les droits peut mobiliser les puissants outils que constituent le principe de responsabilité et le corpus déjà largement approuvé du droit international, y compris le droit des droits humains et le droit humanitaire, pour mettre fin à l'impunité et promouvoir les intérêts des Palestiniens et des Israéliens ;

c) L'objectif final doit être la réalisation de l'autodétermination palestinienne. Israël existe déjà, et ce depuis 1948. La clé manquante pour une paix durable a toujours été le déni de l'autodétermination des Palestiniens⁷³. Mais l'annexion de facto et de jure du territoire occupé par Israël, réalisée principalement au moyen de l'implacable expansion de ses implantations, a sapé tout exercice digne de ce nom du droit à l'autodétermination sur ce qui reste des terres palestiniennes. L'autodétermination est au cœur des droits humains modernes et constitue la condition sine qua non d'une paix juste et définitive. L'autodétermination palestinienne doit être fondée sur les frontières de 1967 et la réalisation d'une souveraineté authentique si une véritable solution des deux États est toujours possible. Si ce n'est pas le cas, alors l'autodétermination doit être axée sur les droits à l'égalité individuels et collectifs pour toutes les personnes qui vivent entre la mer Méditerranée et le Jourdain ;

⁷¹ « Editorial: Israel's final warning from the ICC », Haaretz, 22 décembre 2019. (L'article explique qu'il est encore plus difficile de comprendre la position selon laquelle la question du conflit israélo-palestinien doit seulement être traitée par le dialogue et les négociations et que le processus juridique ne fera que lui nuire, alors qu'il est clair aux yeux de tous qu'aucun processus de ce genre n'est envisagé parce que le Gouvernement israélien ne s'y intéresse pas.)

⁷² Dimitris Bouris et Nathan J. Brown, « The Middle East Quartet's quest for relevance », Carnegie Europe, 20 juillet 2016.

⁷³ Résolution 75/172 de l'Assemblée générale.

d) Israël est un occupant de mauvaise foi. Telle est l'inévitable conclusion que l'on peut tirer de la façon dont il a mené son occupation du territoire palestinien depuis 54 ans. Son non-respect de centaines de résolutions des organes de l'ONU émanant du Conseil de sécurité, de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil des droits de l'homme concernant l'occupation, et son refus d'appliquer la quatrième Convention de Genève, n'expriment pas une divergence politique de bonne foi avec le reste du monde, mais une imperturbable attitude de défi destinée à préserver les fruits de sa conquête. Supposer qu'Israël est un occupant responsable, dont les intentions ne sont entachées que par un malheureux égarement politique à l'endroit des Palestiniens, revient à céder à la pensée chimérique qui a conduit aux échecs diplomatiques du passé ;

e) L'occupation doit prendre fin avec toute la célérité voulue. Les occupations sont conçues par le droit international pour être temporaires : elles ne doivent durer que le temps nécessaire pour que la puissance occupante rétablisse les institutions étatiques et sociales et la vie civique dans le territoire occupé et que ce dernier soit ensuite rendu au souverain déplacé (le peuple sous occupation)⁷⁴. Au XXI^e siècle, une domination étrangère ne peut se justifier que dans des circonstances exceptionnelles et obéissant à des conditions extrêmement spécifiques. Il est inconcevable au regard du droit international moderne et dans la perspective d'une bonne gestion des affaires internationales que l'injustice prenne fin à une date indéterminée, en particulier lorsqu'il s'agit d'une occupation cupide qui s'est affranchie depuis longtemps des frontières de la légitimité.

B. Les quatre acteurs internationaux

États-Unis d'Amérique

37. Au cours des 50 dernières années, les États-Unis ont joué un rôle démesuré dans le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, en menant pratiquement toutes les initiatives de paix internationales d'envergure, tout en fournissant à Israël une aide militaire de pointe colossale et en agissant comme son protecteur diplomatique à l'ONU et dans d'autres instances internationales. Ce double rôle des États-Unis dans le processus de paix est l'une des raisons principales pour lesquelles l'occupation israélienne reste inchangée et la quête d'autodétermination palestinienne inachevée. Kofi Annan a parlé de la possessivité malsaine des États-Unis à l'égard du processus de paix et de leur réticence à réellement travailler de façon conjointe à son élaboration⁷⁵. Ban Ki-Moon a déploré la protection politique accordée à Israël par les gouvernements successifs des États-Unis, qui est en partie responsable de ce non-établissement des responsabilités⁷⁶. À bien des égards, le rôle des États-Unis dans la défense d'Israël a été de permettre à l'occupation israélienne de se poursuivre, ternissant par là même leur propre réputation dans le monde. Dans ses mémoires, l'ancien Président des États-Unis Barack Obama a fait observer que pour son pays, le fait de soustraire Israël à la responsabilité des violations du droit international commises signifiait que les diplomates américains s'étaient retrouvés dans la position inconfortable consistant à intercéder en faveur d'Israël pour des actions auxquelles ils étaient eux-mêmes opposés⁷⁷.

⁷⁴ Voir la résolution 1483 (2003) du Conseil de sécurité, dans laquelle celui-ci saluait l'engagement des puissances occupant l'Iraq à rétablir la souveraineté du peuple iraquien « le plus tôt possible », et disait que ce jour devait « venir rapidement ». Voir également la résolution 75/172 de l'Assemblée générale (« Soulignant la nécessité impérieuse de mettre un terme immédiatement à l'occupation israélienne »).

⁷⁵ Annan, Interventions.

⁷⁶ Ban, « US should back a new approach ».

38. En mai 2021, les tensions à Jérusalem se sont aggravées lorsque des colons israéliens ont tenté de déloger des Palestiniens de leurs domiciles, ce qui a conduit le Hamas à tirer des roquettes sur des cibles civiles israéliennes et Israël à répondre par un usage disproportionné de la force militaire. La situation a abouti à 11 jours de violence intense qui ont causé de lourdes pertes civiles et la destruction massive de biens à Gaza. Au cours de ces violences, les États-Unis ont joué un rôle diplomatique d'une prévisibilité décourageante : au Conseil de sécurité, ils ont successivement bloqué un projet de résolution visant à obtenir un cessez-le-feu et la publication d'une déclaration à la presse, arguant que cela ne ferait qu'aliéner Israël⁷⁸. Cette intercession a permis à Israël de poursuivre son assaut sur Gaza jusqu'à ce qu'il ait atteint la plupart de ses objectifs militaires, alors que la sphère diplomatique et l'opinion publique souhaitaient mettre fin à la violence bien plus tôt. Depuis le début de l'occupation israélienne en juin 1967, les États-Unis ont régulièrement permis au Conseil d'adopter des résolutions critiques à l'égard d'Israël – 77 au total – mais ils ont également eu recours à la menace du veto pour contrecarrer la capacité du Conseil – la plus puissante instance politique internationale – de faire appliquer l'une quelconque de ces résolutions. En outre, ils ont opposé leur veto à 32 résolutions critiquant Israël depuis 1973.

39. Les États-Unis ont développé une relation militaire extraordinaire avec Israël, lui apportant une aide annuelle inégalée par toute autre relation bilatérale dans le monde. Depuis le début des années 1950, ils lui ont fourni plus de 100 milliards de dollars d'aide militaire (ainsi que 35 milliards de dollars d'aide économique)⁷⁹. Cette aide militaire a permis aux forces armées israéliennes de devenir l'une des armées les plus sophistiquées au monde sur le plan technologique. Grâce à l'aide américaine, Israël a également pu mettre en place une importante industrie de défense nationale, qui lui a permis de devenir l'un des principaux exportateurs mondiaux d'armes et de technologies liées à la cybersécurité. En effet, les observateurs ont noté que la prouesse d'Israël en tant qu'exportateur d'armes et de cybersécurité de première importance est due en très grande partie aux essais d'armement et de sécurité rendus possibles par sa longue expérience d'occupant qui régit la vie de 5 millions de Palestiniens⁸⁰. Les États-Unis fournissent cette aide militaire en dépit du fait que les lois du Congrès régissant les exportations d'armes depuis les États-Unis stipulent que les pays destinataires ne peuvent pas être associés à des violations flagrantes et systématiques des droits humains⁸¹. Un récent sondage de l'opinion publique américaine a indiqué qu'une faible majorité (50 % pour et 45 % contre) était favorable à la restriction de l'aide militaire à Israël afin d'éviter qu'elle ne soit utilisée dans des opérations militaires contre les Palestiniens⁸².

40. Compte tenu de la relation sui generis entre la seule superpuissance du monde et une petite puissance régionale, on peut se demander, comme l'a fait Shibley ⁷⁷ Barack Obama, Une terre promise (Fayard 2020).

⁷⁸ International Crisis Group, Beyond Business as Usual in Israel-Palestine, Middle East report No. 225 (Bruxelles, 2021).

⁷⁹ Congressional Research Service, États-Unis, « US foreign aid to Israel », novembre 2020.

⁸⁰ Matt Kennard, « The cruel experiments of Israel's arms industry », Centre Pulitzer, 28 décembre 2016).

⁸¹ Josh Ruebner, Salih Booker et Zaha Hassan, « Bringing assistance to Israel in line with rights and U.S. laws », Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 12 mai 2021.

⁸² Chicago Council on Global Affairs, « Americans split on military aid to Israel, say political status quo unacceptable », 25 août 2021.

Telhami, professeur à l'Université du Maryland, quel espoir il peut y avoir de réussir ailleurs si un président américain ne peut pas tirer parti de ce soutien extraordinaire et sans précédent pour faire avancer les valeurs américaines fondamentales⁸³. Les États-Unis ont joué un rôle fondamental dans l'élaboration du droit international moderne et de l'ordre international fondé sur des règles, mais ils ont entaché cette réussite en excluant systématiquement ces éléments du processus de paix israélo-palestinien. Ils se prononcent régulièrement en faveur de la solution des deux États, mais insistent également sur le fait que les pratiques israéliennes qui ont rendu cet objectif impossible ne doivent avoir aucune conséquence. Ils proclament que les droits humains sont la pierre angulaire de leur politique étrangère, mais n'appliquent pas ce critère à la conduite d'Israël. L'inquiétante réalité du Territoire palestinien occupé va à l'encontre de tout ce que les États-Unis affirment défendre, mais l'étroite proximité que ceux-ci entretiennent avec l'occupation israélienne dit le contraire.

Union européenne

41. En 1980, la Communauté européenne, qui comptait alors neuf membres, a publié son influente Déclaration de Venise, qui reconnaissait le droit du peuple palestinien à disposer pleinement de lui-même. Au début des années 1990, la Commission européenne a participé activement au processus de Madrid-Oslo, et a déclaré qu'une paix durable entre Israël et les Palestiniens était d'une importance vitale pour l'Europe. Tout au long des années 1990 et 2000, l'Union européenne a apporté un soutien politique et économique considérable au processus de paix (et a notamment financé de façon substantielle l'Autorité palestinienne), a émis des critiques parfois acerbes sur le comportement d'Israël et, à partir de 1999, a encouragé la création d'un État palestinien démocratique, viable et pacifique. Toutefois, lorsqu'elle a rejoint le Quatuor et s'est associée à ses mesures relatives à la feuille de route et aux élections palestiniennes de 2006, ses propres politiques et déclarations concernant l'occupation sont devenues plus prudentes, même si ses financements ont continué d'être aussi substantiels⁸⁴.

42. Au cours de la dernière décennie, cinq caractéristiques ont dominé l'approche de l'Union européenne vis-à-vis de l'occupation israélienne. Premièrement, elle procure toujours des fonds considérables à l'Autorité palestinienne, à l'UNRWA et à d'autres grandes organisations qui fournissent des services de renforcement des capacités et des services sociaux dans le territoire occupé. Deuxièmement, elle a maintenu des relations politiques et économiques étroites avec Israël, même si des points de tension sont apparus occasionnellement. Israël est membre de plusieurs accords de coopération scientifique et économique importants initiés par l'Union européenne, qui est son principal partenaire commercial et dont plusieurs des principaux membres lui fournissent de grandes quantités d'armes. Troisièmement, l'Union européenne a élaboré une politique de « différenciation » à l'égard des implantations israéliennes dans le territoire occupé. Cette politique stipule que les accords entre l'Union européenne et Israël sont inapplicables au-delà de la ligne verte de 1967, mais qu'à titre individuel les États membres conservent la liberté de décider comment appliquer la politique de différenciation dans leurs relations bilatérales avec Israël. Quatrièmement, ces dernières années, des dissensions de plus nombreuses sont apparues dans le discours de l'Union européenne sur l'occupation israélienne, dont le ton s'est par ailleurs adouci, du fait que certains États membres d'Europe de l'Est ont développé des relations étroites avec Israël et qu'il est à présent plus difficile de ⁸³ Shibley Telhami, « Biden's bungled response on the Israel-Palestinian conflict », Boston Globe, 19 mai 2021.

⁸⁴ Anders Persson, EU Diplomacy and the Israeli-Arab Conflict, 1967-2019 (Edinburgh University Press, 2020).

parvenir à une position européenne commune sur l'occupation⁸⁵. Lors des récentes violences israéliennes à Gaza en mai 2021, l'Union européenne a le plus clair du temps été spectatrice, incapable de publier une déclaration commune du Conseil de l'Union européenne en raison de sa « règle de l'unanimité ».

43. La cinquième et plus importante caractéristique de la politique contemporaine de l'Union européenne est son aversion à utiliser sa considérable influence économique et politique pour imposer des contraintes substantielles à Israël en réponse au non-respect de ses obligations internationales et pour n'avoir pas mis complètement fin à son occupation⁸⁶. À son crédit, l'opposition diplomatique de l'Union européenne aux projets d'annexion de jure d'Israël en 2020 a largement contribué à ce que les propositions contenues dans le plan De la paix à la prospérité, présenté par l'ancien Président des États-Unis Donald Trump, soient mises au placard. Il s'est agi là d'un acte de résistance appréciable, qui n'a toutefois guère perturbé l'expansion de l'occupation et la réalité de l'annexion de facto. Pour le reste, l'Union européenne s'est montrée très peu encline au risque. Parmi ses principaux accords impliquant Israël figure l'accord d'association Union européenne-Israël de 1995, qui énonçait des obligations en matière de droits humains et de respect des valeurs communes dont le non-respect autoriserait l'Union européenne à suspendre l'accord, mais elle n'a pris aucune mesure en ce sens. La lacune la plus flagrante de la politique de l'Union européenne est sa passivité à l'égard des implantations israéliennes. La politique de différenciation engendre des contraintes limitées dont Israël est disposé à s'accommoder, mais aucun changement notable concernant la permanence de l'occupation ou la croissance des implantations. Ces dernières, qui constituent un probable crime de guerre au regard du Statut de Rome, sont le produit de la politique de l'État israélien, et il n'y a aucun espoir de les démanteler tant que les mesures européennes d'établissement des responsabilités ne viseront pas expressément Israël lui-même (voir A/HRC/47/57).

44. La politique de l'Union européenne à l'égard de l'occupation est en fin de compte entravée par deux tendances interdépendantes : l'engagement envers l'étoile éteinte qu'est le processus Madrid-Oslo, et le refus de se séparer des États-Unis, quelque partielle et inefficace que soit la politique américaine. Quelle qu'ait été sa promesse initiale, le processus Madrid-Oslo sert à présent de justification pour maintenir l'occupation et éviter de prendre des décisions difficiles. Avec de l'imagination et du courage, la diplomatie européenne pourrait créer une approche qualitativement nouvelle pour garantir la paix au Moyen-Orient, fondée sur les droits et le droit international⁸⁷. Pour cela, il faudrait accepter de faire entrer l'intransigeance israélienne et la domination américaine dans l'équation. Si elle ne parvenait pas à s'y résoudre, l'Europe continuerait à être impliquée dans l'un des plus grands échecs diplomatiques du dernier demi-siècle.

Banque mondiale

45. La Banque mondiale a activement participé au développement de la politique économique en Palestine depuis l'aube du processus Madrid-Oslo. En 1993, elle a publié une importante étude en six volumes – Developing the Occupied Territories: An Investment in Peace – qui définissait une stratégie visant à réformer, réorganiser et renforcer les capacités économiques et sociales du territoire palestinien. Son objectif déclaré était de nature technique : privilégier le renforcement des institutions palestiniennes, les investissements du secteur privé et une planification économique optimale, tout en laissant à la sphère politique le soin de débattre des questions de sécurité, de droit international et de statut final. Le côté inquiétant du rapport ainsi établi tient notamment à la description qui y est faite du délabrement de l'économie palestinienne en 1993 – chômage élevé, revenus stagnants, extrême pauvreté, institutions et services publics surchargés, dépendance profonde de l'économie israélienne, vulnérabilité aux représailles politiques israéliennes et énormes disparités économiques entre Israéliens et Palestiniens –, qui n'a rien perdu de son exactitude aujourd'hui, même après 28 ans d'un renforcement conséquent des institutions et une aide financière se montant à des milliards de dollars.

⁸⁵ Omar Dajani et Hugh Lovatt, Rethinking Oslo: How Europe Can Promote Peace in Israel-Palestine (Londres, Conseil européen des relations internationales, 2017) ; et Hugh Lovatt et Mattia Toaldo, EU Differentiation and Israeli Settlements (Londres, Conseil européen des relations internationales, 2015).

⁸⁶ Beth Oppenheim, « Can Europe overcome its paralysis on Israel and Palestine? », Centre for European Reform, février 2020.

⁸⁷ Hugh Lovatt, The End of Oslo: A New European Strategy on Israel-Palestine (Londres, Conseil européen des relations internationales, 2020).

46. Depuis 1993, la Banque mondiale a publié des dizaines de rapports sur l'économie palestinienne. Beaucoup d'entre eux sont des examens très techniques de secteurs spécifiques, et certains contiennent de subtiles observations sur les innombrables façons dont Israël freine et asphyxie l'économie palestinienne. En particulier, la Banque mondiale présente des rapports économiques complets deux fois par an au Comité spécial de liaison pour la coordination de l'assistance internationale aux Palestiniens, un organe composé d'États et d'institutions (dont les États-Unis et l'Union européenne) qui coordonne l'aide internationale à l'Autorité palestinienne et dont la Banque mondiale assure le secrétariat.

47. Les rapports les plus convaincants de la Banque mondiale décrivent les systèmes contraignants de contrôle économique et social imposés par Israël en Cisjordanie et à Gaza, comme les enceintes exigües, les restrictions de la liberté de circulation, la rétention des taxes et des recettes fiscales et douanières, la croissance des implantations, le blocus de Gaza, la restriction des produits à double usage et celles qui touchent les télécommunications palestiniennes⁸⁸. En outre, certains de ces rapports – en particulier ceux publiés dans les années 2000 – ont établi un lien entre ces nombreuses contraintes et des phénomènes de détresse de plus grande envergure au sein de la société palestinienne, notamment le déclin de la scolarisation, l'insécurité alimentaire, la dépression parmi les écoliers et la fragmentation de la cohésion sociale⁸⁹. En 2013, la Banque mondiale a publié l'un de ses rapports les plus percutants, consacré à la zone C (les 61 % de la Cisjordanie entièrement sous contrôle sécuritaire et civil israélien, où se trouvent toutes les implantations d'Israël). Dans ce rapport, la Banque mondiale a expliqué de manière convaincante comment le fait de priver les Palestiniens de cette ressource foncière essentielle paralysait leur économie, entravait leur liberté de circulation personnelle et commerciale et leur interdisait tout développement indépendant⁹⁰.

48. Mais même lorsqu'elle est la plus convaincante, l'approche technocratique de la Banque mondiale se concentre sur l'arbre qui cache la forêt. Les aspects punitifs du contrôle étouffant qu'Israël impose à l'économie palestinienne ne résultent pas d'une politique israélienne regrettable, et sont susceptibles d'être ajustés dès lors que la Banque mondiale publie des données empiriquement plus fournies et des recommandations plus complètes. Le renforcement des capacités institutionnelles des Palestiniens ne modifiera pas non plus de manière significative l'enlaidissement de la réalité sur le terrain. Les rapports mettent l'accent sur les symptômes préoccupants d'une économie et d'une société enfermées dans une occupation ossifiée, tout en ignorant la morbidité à plus grande échelle. Ce diagnostic erroné est aussi fatal dans le cadre d'une situation politique désespérée qu'il l'est en médecine. Le terme « occupation » n'apparaît dans aucun des rapports de la Banque mondiale. Chose plus troublante encore, les rapports de la Banque mondiale sur les « territoires palestiniens » ne font référence qu'à la Cisjordanie et à Gaza ; bien que Jérusalem-Est soit depuis longtemps désignée par l'ONU comme un territoire occupé et illégalement annexé par Israël, elle n'est jamais incluse dans les comptes-rendus de la Banque mondiale, apparemment parce que cela obligerait celle-ci à préjuger de son statut, ce qui n'est guère une position neutre⁹¹. La Banque mondiale n'attribue pas non plus les politiques et pratiques israéliennes à l'égard des Palestiniens à une stratégie d'annexion de facto et de contrôle permanent du territoire palestinien, en dépit des nombreuses preuves économiques et politiques.

⁸⁸ Voir, par exemple, Banque mondiale, « West Bank and Gaza update », juin 2008 ; Banque mondiale, « Economic monitoring report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee », 27 septembre 2018 et 2 juin 2020.

⁸⁹ Voir, par exemple, Banque mondiale, « West Bank and Gaza update », novembre 2004, novembre 2007 et mars 2008.

⁹⁰ Banque mondiale, « West Bank and Gaza: Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy », Report No. AUS2922 (Washington, D.C., 2013).

49. Mais il peut en être autrement. Par rapport à l'approche sotto voce de la Banque mondiale, les rapports semestriels de la Conférence des Nations Unies sur le commerce et le développement (CNUCED) font une analyse beaucoup plus acérée, attribuant les ravages de l'économie palestinienne directement à l'occupation israélienne. Ces dernières années, la CNUCED a publié des rapports de fond sur les coûts économiques cumulés de l'occupation israélienne⁹², les obstacles que celle-ci pose pour la réalisation du potentiel de la Palestine en matière d'exploitation du pétrole et du gaz naturel⁹³, la relation entre la croissance des implantations et l'aggravation de la pauvreté de la population palestinienne (voir TD/B/67/5) et l'effondrement économique de Gaza, soumise à un blocus hermétique (voir TD/B/EX(68)/4). En nommant les faits sans détour, les rapports de la CNUCED offrent une compréhension plus juste de la réalité économique en Palestine et permettent de mieux comprendre pourquoi les milliards d'aide internationale et le renforcement des capacités institutionnelles des Palestiniens ont, par un jeu pervers, produit l'exact opposé – ou peu s'en faut – des objectifs déclarés de la communauté internationale : non pas un État en devenir, mais un territoire brisé baignant dans le formaldéhyde.

Quatuor

50. Le Quatuor – composé des États-Unis, de l'Union européenne, de l'ONU et de la Fédération de Russie – a été créé en 2002 pour que la recherche d'une paix durable entre Israël et les Palestiniens soit davantage multinationale. Il a été créé au lendemain de la deuxième intifada palestinienne et de l'échec du processus de paix de Camp David de 2000. Lors de sa création, les avantages d'une organisation aussi unique étaient perçus comme tenant à l'influence de ses quelques membres, à son adaptabilité et à son caractère informel, à sa capacité de prendre des décisions rapides et à l'adhésion politique d'Israël et des Palestiniens⁹⁴.

51. Aujourd'hui, le Quatuor n'est plus que l'ombre de lui-même. Il n'a plus d'envoyé politique de premier plan depuis la démission de l'ancien Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Tony Blair, en 2015. Il mène des projets d'amélioration technique et économique de faible envergure pour ⁹¹ Banque mondiale, Developing the Occupied Territories: An Investment in Peace, vol. 1 (Washington, D.C., 1993), note 45, et tableau 1.1. Dans ce rapport de 1993, la Banque mondiale a reconnu l'importance économique centrale de Jérusalem-Est pour l'économie palestinienne.

⁹² The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: The Impoverishment of Gaza under Blockade (publication des Nations Unies, 2019).

⁹³ The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation: Unrealized Oil and Natural Gas Potential (publication des Nations Unies, 2019).

⁹⁴ Khaled Elgindy, The Middle East Quartet: A Post-Mortem, document d'analyse n° 25 (Washington, D.C., Brookings Institution, 2012).

les Palestiniens, notamment dans les domaines de l'eau, de l'énergie, de la circulation et du commerce, des télécommunications et de la primauté du droit⁹⁵. Sa dernière déclaration, publiée en mars 2021 par les envoyés des quatre membres (qui ne s'étaient pas réunis depuis plus de quatre ans), était brève et aseptisée, exprimant des inquiétudes quant à la disparité économique intenable entre Israéliens et Palestiniens et exhortant les parties à s'abstenir de toute action unilatérale⁹⁶. La stratégie publiée par le Quatuor pour la période 2021-2023 n'utilise pas une seule fois le terme « occupation », ne fait jamais référence aux implantations et à leur rôle destructeur, ne fournit aucune analyse critique de la dureté du contrôle exercé par Israël sur les Palestiniens et n'explique nullement comment les projets d'amélioration économique du Quatuor peuvent prospérer dans une économie étouffée par des barrières, des murs, des tarifs douaniers et des points de contrôle et dont la géographie ne permet aucun accès commercial au monde extérieur⁹⁷.

52. L'inefficacité du Quatuor remonte à deux tournants importants et fatidiques au début de son existence. En 2003, il a publié sa feuille de route pour la paix au Moyen-Orient, avec pour objectif déclaré de mettre fin à l'occupation et de permettre une solution des deux États pour 2005, en s'appuyant sur des mesures détaillées axées sur des résultats. Si la feuille de route formulait des exigences à l'intention des deux parties, les plus importantes ont été endossées par les Palestiniens (fin de l'intifada, élections, nouvelles institutions, gouvernement réformé, acceptation de frontières provisoires). Les questions relatives au statut final devaient être négociées par les parties, mais aucune référence n'était faite au droit international (notamment en ce qui concernait les implantations et l'annexion de Jérusalem) et il n'était pas tenu compte des immenses disparités de pouvoir. Israël a ostensiblement accepté la feuille de route, mais les membres du Quatuor l'ont autorisé à émettre 14 réserves, ce qui en a effectivement sapé la viabilité. Selon l'évaluation la plus complète des performances du Quatuor, les États-Unis ont abandonné la feuille de route en 2005 pour soutenir Israël dans son retrait unilatéral de Gaza, avec l'acquiescement réticent des trois autres membres⁹⁸.

53. Le deuxième tournant fatidique pour le Quatuor a été la décision, en 2006, de boycotter le Gouvernement palestinien à la suite de l'élection du Hamas. On peut considérer que le Hamas est une organisation qui a commis des actes odieux par le passé, voire assez récemment, tout en reconnaissant que les élections palestiniennes de 2006 ont été libres et équitables et qu'en imposant ses exigences au nouveau gouvernement, sans parallèlement exiger qu'Israël se conforme à ses nombreuses obligations internationales, le Quatuor a affaibli sa propre autorité et compromis son objectif. Certains membres du Quatuor se sont prononcés en faveur de sanctions économiques contre le nouveau gouvernement palestinien, chose qui n'avait jamais été envisagée pour les graves violations d'Israël. Cette décision a contribué à la division de la politique palestinienne qui persiste aujourd'hui. Le Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient et Représentant personnel du Secrétaire général auprès de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine et de l'Autorité palestinienne de l'époque a par la suite noté que cette prise de position après les élections avait effectivement transformé le Quatuor, qui, de quartette guidé par la feuille de route et fait pour promouvoir les négociations, est devenu un organe qui allait presque jusqu'à imposer des sanctions au gouvernement librement élu d'un

⁹⁵ Office of the Quartet, « Annual report: January–December 2020 », décembre 2020.

⁹⁶ Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, « Statement by the Middle East Quartet envoys », 23 mars 2021.

⁹⁷ Office of the Quartet, « Strategy 2021–2023 », décembre 2020.

⁹⁸ Elgindy, The Middle East Quartet.

peuple sous occupation et fixait des conditions préalables au dialogue qui étaient irréalisables⁹⁹.

54. La situation délicate dans laquelle s'est trouvé le Quatuor offre un enseignement d'importance : le fait que les trois autres membres aient accepté la domination américaine signifie que, dans ces circonstances, les positions du Quatuor reflètent fréquemment le plus petit dénominateur commun : la position des États-Unis. D'où la boutade : « le Quatuor sans trois »¹⁰⁰. Compte tenu de l'extraordinaire relation politique, diplomatique et militaire qu'entretiennent les États-Unis et Israël, le droit international n'avait pas sa place dans les politiques du Quatuor ; les États-Unis se sont occupés seuls de contrôler qu'Israël respectait la feuille de route, et le Quatuor a rarement pris des positions critiques à l'égard du rôle joué par Israël en tant qu'occupant avide, ce qui, fut un temps, aurait pu maintenir en vie la solution des deux États¹⁰¹. Ce déséquilibre a non seulement sérieusement diminué toute efficacité potentielle du Quatuor, mais également terni l'image et le rôle de l'ONU, dont la responsabilité première est de faire respecter le droit international et les résolutions de ses organes.

IV. Conclusions et recommandations

55. La communauté internationale porte une responsabilité importante dans la persistance de l'occupation israélienne de la Palestine et l'incapacité à garantir une paix juste et durable dans la région. L'occupation est plus ancrée que jamais. Les conditions de vie des Palestiniens, sans parler de leur avenir politique, sont devenues encore plus précaires. Israël a continué d'afficher son mépris quasiment sans rencontrer d'opposition. Le processus de paix est moribond, pour ne pas dire plongé dans le coma, et il n'est pas sérieusement question de le ranimer. En cette ère post-coloniale, dans la troisième décennie du XXI^e siècle, le monde tolère l'intolérable : l'imposition d'une réalité coloniale en Palestine. Tout cela joue en faveur de l'insatiable occupant. Tout cela va à l'encontre des droits des personnes subjuguées, qui auraient dû être restituées il y a bien longtemps.

56. À l'aune des cinq critères proposés dans le présent rapport, aucun des quatre acteurs internationaux, qui ont tous une influence sur l'occupation israélienne de la Palestine, n'est en voie d'intégrer ce qui est nécessaire à la création d'une nouvelle base viable pour un véritable rétablissement de la paix au Moyen-Orient. La porte reste cependant ouverte. Les États-Unis peuvent tenir la promesse qu'ils ont faite de défendre les droits humains partout dans le monde¹⁰². L'Union européenne peut faire preuve de courage diplomatique en traçant une voie indépendante ancrée dans une approche fondée sur les droits¹⁰³. La Banque mondiale peut aborder la réalité économique de l'occupation à travers le prisme des droits humains afin de livrer de bien meilleures recommandations de politique générale. Et le Quatuor peut renforcer son influence en mettant l'accent sur le cadre international établi pour la paix et la justice au Moyen-Orient.

⁹⁹ Álvaro de Soto, End of Mission Report (2007).

¹⁰⁰ Patrick Müller, « Informal security governance and the Middle East Quartet », International Peacekeeping, vol. 21, n° 4 (août 2014).

¹⁰¹ De Soto, End of Mission Report.

¹⁰² Agence France-Presse à Washington, D.C., « Antony Blinken says the US will “stand up for human rights everywhere” », The Guardian, 30 mars 2021.

¹⁰³ Lovatt, The End of Oslo.

57. Il devrait être clair que la stratégie de realpolitik sur laquelle reposait le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient a largement dépassé sa date de péremption. Il ne sert et ne servira à rien de continuer sur la même lancée. Les droits et la légalité doivent être au cœur de la nouvelle stratégie diplomatique. Même si elles sont nécessaires, ces conditions préalables sont, à elles seules, insuffisantes. Il est également indispensable que se développe une diplomatie créative et courageuse, et que l'on se demande sans détour pourquoi cette occupation vieille de cinq décennies a fini par ressembler en tout point à une annexion et un apartheid. Tous ces éléments, ainsi que l'application à l'échelle internationale du principe de responsabilité, pourraient enfin permettre aux Palestiniens et aux Israéliens de jouir ensemble de la prospérité d'un avenir commun.

58. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que le Gouvernement d'Israël se conforme pleinement aux obligations que lui impose le droit international et mette un terme définitif à l'occupation du territoire palestinien avec toute la célérité voulue.

59. Le Rapporteur spécial recommande que la communauté internationale, notamment les acteurs internationaux qui participent activement à la supervision de l'occupation :

a) Élabore une liste complète de mesures d'application du principe de responsabilité à Israël jusqu'à ce que celui-ci se conforme à toutes les résolutions pertinentes des organes de l'ONU et se plie à la tendance internationale concernant l'administration et la fin de l'occupation ;

b) Appuie pleinement le travail du Bureau du Procureur de la Cour pénale internationale dans le cadre de son enquête sur la situation en Palestine ;

c) Adopte les cinq critères énoncés dans le présent rapport pour guider ses travaux futurs en vue de superviser la question de Palestine sous tous ses aspects.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
21 septembre 2022
Français
Original : anglais

Soixante-dix-septième session

Point 68 c) de l'ordre du jour

Promotion et protection des droits humains :
situations relatives aux droits humains et rapports
des rapporteurs et représentants spéciaux

Situation des droits humains dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967*

Note du Secrétaire général

Le Secrétaire général a l'honneur de transmettre à l'Assemblée générale le rapport présenté par la Rapporteuse spéciale sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Francesca Albanese, en application de la résolution 5/1 du Conseil des droits de l'homme.

* Le présent rapport a été soumis après la date limite afin que puissent y figurer les informations les plus récentes.

Rapport de la Rapporteuse spéciale sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Francesca Albanese

Résumé

Dans le présent rapport, la Rapporteuse spéciale sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Francesca Albanese, soulève un certain nombre de préoccupations relatives aux droits humains, notamment s'agissant du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination dans le contexte – emprunt d'un colonialisme de peuplement – de l'occupation prolongée par Israël.

I. Introduction

1. Dans le présent rapport, la Rapporteuse spéciale sur la situation des droits de l'homme dans les territoires palestiniens occupés depuis 1967, Francesca Albanese, se penche sur un certain nombre de problèmes ayant trait à la situation des droits humains en Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et à Gaza, et présente une analyse détaillée du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination. Elle y apporte des clarifications sur les principes juridiques, la signification et la portée de ce droit, dont le peuple palestinien reste privé, alors même qu'il se trouve au cœur de la mission que les États Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies se sont promis d'accomplir au lendemain des atrocités commises et observées pendant la Seconde Guerre mondiale¹.

2. La Rapporteuse spéciale n'a pas été en mesure de se rendre dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, (ci-après appelé « territoire palestinien occupé ») avant la soumission du présent rapport, bien qu'elle y ait été invitée par l'Observateur permanent de l'État de Palestine auprès de l'Office des Nations Unies et des autres organisations internationales à Genève. Ces visites étant essentielles à l'exécution de son mandat, la Rapporteuse spéciale entend s'atteler à obtenir l'accès à ce territoire. Sa demande de rencontre avec la Représentante permanente d'Israël auprès de l'Office des Nations Unies et des autres organisations internationales à Genève ayant été rejetée, la Rapporteuse spéciale souligne que le défaut systématique de coopération d'Israël vis-à-vis de son mandat est très préoccupant. Un dialogue ouvert entre toutes les parties étant essentiel à la protection et à la promotion des droits humains, elle rappelle à Israël qu'elle est toute disposée à y participer.

3. Reposant sur des recherches et des analyses juridiques, le présent rapport est en outre riche d'informations obtenues dans le cadre de consultations ainsi que de données présentées par d'autres parties. Ainsi, la Rapporteuse spéciale a tenu des consultations avec d'autres rapporteurs et rapporteuses spéciaux et certains de leurs prédécesseurs, de même qu'avec la Commission internationale indépendante chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël, et elle a rencontré, lors de réunions organisées en personne ou à distance, des représentant(e)s d'États, des personnalités du monde universitaire et des représentant(e)s d'organisations non gouvernementales du territoire palestinien occupé, d'Israël et d'ailleurs. Elle a par ailleurs examiné divers rapports soumis par des organisations locales et internationales de défense des droits humains, actives en particulier dans le territoire palestinien occupé et en Israël.

4. En raison des restrictions géographiques et temporelles du mandat confié à la Rapporteuse spéciale, l'enquête menée a eu une portée limitée, notamment s'agissant d'évaluer la manière dont les violations abordées dans le présent rapport affectaient le peuple palestinien qui se trouvait en dehors du territoire occupé. Cette situation n'empêche toutefois pas d'examiner la façon dont ce droit collectif est appliqué aux Palestiniens détenteurs de la citoyenneté israélienne, ainsi qu'aux réfugiés palestiniens de 1948 et 1967, lesquels bénéficient également des droits largement reconnus au retour, à la restitution et à l'indemnisation. Compte tenu des liens existant entre l'occupation israélienne commencée en 1967 et les événements qui l'ont précédée, la Rapporteuse spéciale revient sur certains points de l'histoire susceptibles d'aider à la compréhension de la situation actuelle.

¹ Charte des Nations Unies, Art. 55 et 56.

II. Fondements de l'enquête sur le droit à l'autodétermination

A. Situation actuelle et sujets prédominants

5. Cela fait 55 ans que les Palestiniens du territoire palestinien occupé, soit trois générations, grandissent sous occupation israélienne. Environ 40 % d'entre eux sont des réfugiés (ou leurs descendants) ayant fui la violence qui a accompagné la création de l'État d'Israël, lequel a commencé à procéder à des expulsions en 1948². La plupart des résidents de Gaza, ainsi que de nombreuses autres personnes actuellement victimes d'un transfert forcé en Cisjordanie, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, sont des réfugiés originaires de Galilée, Haïfa, Jaffa, Ramlé et Lod ainsi que du Néguev. Lors de la guerre de 1967, la majorité d'entre eux a de nouveau été forcée de se déplacer, en raison de la destruction et du dépeuplement de villages palestiniens, ces réfugiés se voyant ensuite refuser le retour chez eux, comme en 1947-1949³. Les Palestiniens qui, en 1967, ont réussi à « rester » ne pouvaient pas savoir que, 55 ans plus tard, ils se réveilleraient encore sous le joug de la domination étrangère, privés de leurs droits, les réfugiés parmi eux n'ayant en outre aucune idée de quand ils pourraient regagner leurs terres ancestrales.

6. Depuis 1967, la situation des droits humains dans le territoire palestinien occupé n'a cessé de se dégrader, principalement en raison de violations flagrantes du droit international par Israël, Puissance occupante, telles que la ségrégation raciale et l'assujettissement. Cette détérioration de la situation se manifeste sous diverses formes : imposition de restrictions draconiennes à la circulation des Palestiniens à l'intérieur et à l'extérieur du territoire palestinien occupé ; répression de la participation politique et citoyenne ; refus du droit de résidence, du statut et du regroupement familial ; dépossession des Palestiniens de leurs terres et de leurs biens ; transferts forcés ; homicides illicites ; généralisation des arrestations et détentions arbitraires, y compris d'enfants ; obstruction à l'aide et à la coopération humanitaires et interdiction de celles-ci ; refus de la propriété et de l'accès aux ressources naturelles ; commission d'actes de violence par des colons ; répression violente de la résistance opposée par le peuple à l'occupation. Ces pratiques dans leur ensemble constituent un châtement collectif infligé au peuple palestinien⁴.

7. Malgré la gravité de la situation, l'occupation par Israël du territoire palestinien continue d'être abordée principalement, et parfois exclusivement, sous trois grands angles :

a) Un angle humanitaire. Bien que particulièrement graves et résultant d'une occupation violente, les conditions économiques et humanitaires régnant dans la région sont traitées comme un problème (chronique) d'ordre humanitaire qu'il importe de maîtriser, plutôt que comme une question politique devant être réglée conformément au droit international ; dans nombre de cas, les réactions aux violations commises par Israël ne visent qu'à « améliorer » certains aspects de la vie sous occupation ;

b) Un angle politique. La Question de Palestine est souvent présentée comme un « conflit » entre parties pouvant être résolu par des négociations. Selon ce postulat, la fin de l'occupation ne pourra se faire que dans le cadre d'un « accord de paix

² Benny Morris, The Birth of the Palestinian Refugee Problem Revisited, édition révisée (Cambridge, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Cambridge University Press, 2004).

³ Tom Segev, 1967: Israel, the War, and the Year that Transformed the Middle East, 1^{re} édition (New York : Metropolitan Books, 2007).

⁴ A/HRC/44/60 (2020), par. 24 et 27.

négocié » ; c'est alors que les urgences humanitaires et économiques se posant dans le territoire palestinien occupé seront résolues ;

c) L'angle du développement économique. Ces dernières années, les partisans d'une solution ont mis l'accent sur une approche privilégiant le développement du territoire palestinien et le soutien artificiel de son économie, dans laquelle aucune solution politique ne serait apportée aux causes profondes du « conflit », notamment les nombreuses violations des droits et libertés des Palestiniens. Selon cette approche, le conflit serait résolu grâce à l'avancement des entreprises et aux possibilités entraînées par la croissance et le développement durable, et non en veillant à faire respecter les droits humains fondamentaux.

8. Les personnes se plaçant dans ces perspectives semblent croire que l'occupation prendra fin lorsque les parties, dont la puissance est nettement inégale, parviendront à une solution négociée. Il est malheureusement fait abstraction, dans ces approches, du contexte plus large caractérisant les urgences sans fin, les défis politiques et les déboires économiques. Mettant de côté des aspects pourtant cruciaux et primordiaux de l'occupation israélienne, on y confond ainsi causes profondes et symptômes, en considérant le non-respect du droit international par Israël comme un phénomène isolé plutôt que comme une composante structurelle de longue date de la privation prolongée des droits des Palestiniens sous occupation.

9. Ces dernières années, plusieurs universitaires et organisations de renom ont conclu que les politiques et pratiques discriminatoires généralisées couramment employées par Israël à l'égard des Palestiniens constituaient un crime d'apartheid au regard du droit international⁵. Bien que la communauté internationale n'ait pas encore pris de mesures en conséquence, l'idée selon laquelle l'occupation israélienne est légalement de l'ordre du crime d'apartheid gagne du terrain. Cette évolution de la pensée pourrait contribuer à renverser la tendance selon laquelle les violations commises par Israël, souvent de façon individuelle et décontextualisée, sont envisagées du point de vue d'organes spécifiques du droit international plutôt que de celui du système même utilisé par Israël pour régner sur les Palestiniens.

10. Par ailleurs, le concept d'apartheid, lorsqu'on le considère isolément plutôt que dans le cadre plus global de la situation du peuple palestinien dans son ensemble, présente certaines limites :

a) Premièrement, les rapports réalisés récemment sur l'apartheid israélien mettent principalement l'accent, à quelques exceptions près⁶, sur l'aspect « territorial » de la question, faisant peu de cas de l'expérience des réfugiés palestiniens. Il importe pourtant, pour qualifier ce régime, de tenir compte de l'expérience du peuple palestinien dans son ensemble et de considérer celui-ci comme un tout, en y incluant les personnes déplacées, dénationalisées et dépossédées en 1947-1949 (dont beaucoup vivent dans le territoire palestinien occupé) ;

⁵ A/HRC/49/87 (2022) (version préliminaire non éditée) ; Amnesty International, L'apartheid israélien envers le peuple palestinien : Un système cruel de domination et un crime contre l'humanité (2022) (disponible à l'adresse <https://www.amnesty.org/en/documents/mde15/5141/2022/fr/>) ; Human Rights Watch, A Threshold Crossed: Israeli Authorities and the Crimes of Apartheid and Persecution (2021) ; B'Tselem, « A regime of Jewish supremacy from the Jordan River to the Mediterranean Sea: This is apartheid » (12 janvier 2021) ; Al-Haq et al. Joint Parallel Report to the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on Israel's Seventeenth to Nineteenth Periodic Reports (10 novembre 2019) ; Commission économique et sociale pour l'Asie occidentale (CESAO), Israeli Practices towards the Palestinian People and the Question of Apartheid: Palestine and the Israeli Occupation, n° 1 (E/ESCWA/ECRI/2017/1) (2017).

⁶ Amnesty International, Al-Haq et al., Joint Parallel Report to the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, et E/ESCWA/ECRI/2017/1 (voir note de bas de page 5).

b) Deuxièmement, en ne se concentrant que sur l'apartheid israélien, on passe à côté du fait que l'occupation du territoire palestinien, y compris Jérusalem-Est, par Israël est déjà en elle-même illégale. L'illégalité de cette occupation tient au fait qu'il a été prouvé qu'elle n'était pas temporaire, et que celle-ci vise délibérément à nuire aux meilleurs intérêts de la population sous occupation, a entraîné l'annexion du territoire occupé et constitue une violation de la plupart des obligations imposées à la Puissance occupante⁷. Son illégalité découle également de la violation systématique d'au moins trois normes impératives du droit international, à savoir : l'interdiction de l'acquisition de territoires par la force ; l'interdiction de soumettre des peuples à des régimes de subjugation, de domination et d'exploitation étrangères, auxquels appartiennent la discrimination raciale et l'apartheid ; l'obligation qui incombe aux États de respecter le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination⁸. De ce fait, l'occupation israélienne constitue également un emploi injustifié de la force et un acte d'agression⁹. Ces agissements sont clairement interdits par le droit international et contraires aux valeurs, buts et principes inscrits dans la Charte des Nations Unies ;

c) Troisièmement, le concept d'apartheid ne couvre pas les « causes profondes » de l'ensemble de lois, ordonnances et politiques de discrimination raciale régissant la vie quotidienne dans le territoire palestinien occupé depuis 1967, ni l'animus (intention) d'Israël de s'emparer de terres en subjuguant et en déplaçant les populations autochtones pour les remplacer par ses ressortissants. C'est là la marque même du colonialisme de peuplement, ces actions constituant en outre un crime de guerre au sens du Statut de Rome.

11. En d'autres termes, on ne retrouve pas, dans le concept de l'apartheid tel qu'il est actuellement appliqué, de trace de la question – cruciale – de la reconnaissance du droit fondamental du peuple palestinien de déterminer son statut politique, social et économique et de se développer en tant que peuple, libre de toute occupation, domination et exploitation étrangères. Bien que nécessaire, la fin de l'apartheid israélien dans le territoire palestinien occupé ne résoudra pas automatiquement la question de la domination d'Israël sur les Palestiniens, ni ne rétablira la souveraineté permanente des Palestiniens sur les terres occupées par Israël et les ressources naturelles qui s'y trouvent, et elle ne suffira pas non plus, à elle seule, à répondre aux aspirations politiques des Palestiniens.

B. Développement d'un nouvel esprit

12. Il fut un temps où les discussions sur l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien se limitaient au thème de l'avenir de la Palestine et de son peuple, dans le cadre de la lutte pour la décolonisation. Le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, qui a commencé au début des années 1990, a changé la donne, en laissant paraître que la réalisation de l'autodétermination de ce peuple passait par l'obtention du statut d'État. Le fait pour le peuple palestinien de jouir du droit à l'autodétermination, dans le contexte d'un État politiquement indépendant s'étendant sur tout le territoire palestinien occupé, est un critère minimal de justice pour celui-ci ; la réalisation de cet objectif est pourtant plus illusoire que jamais, en grande partie à cause des efforts de colonisation de peuplement que déploie Israël dans le cadre de son occupation prolongée du territoire palestinien.

⁷ A/72/556 (2017).

⁸ Ardi Imseis, « Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967-2020 », European Journal of International Law, vol. 31, n° 3 (2020), p. 1055 à 1085.

⁹ Ralph Wilde, « Using the master's tools to dismantle the master's house: international law and Palestinian liberation », The Palestine Yearbook of International Law (Pays-Bas : Brill, 2021), p. 7.

13. Démarche souvent travestie en « projet de civilisation » et, dans le passé, imposée par les « pays occidentaux » aux pays du « tiers monde », le colonialisme se concrétise par la subordination culturelle des indigènes, ainsi que par l'exploitation économique de leurs terres et de leurs ressources et par l'étouffement de leurs revendications politiques¹⁰. La notion de colonialisme « de peuplement » s'utilise pour désigner une colonisation dont l'objectif est également d'éliminer le « caractère indigène de la terre colonisée »¹¹. Ce type de colonialisme se manifeste par la création et la promotion de colonies¹², à savoir des zones de peuplement de personnes étrangères aménagées parmi la population indigène dans le but de soumettre cette dernière et de la déposséder de ses biens et de « s'assurer de façon permanente » la mainmise sur des secteurs spécifiques¹³. La violation du droit des peuples à l'autodétermination est inhérente au colonialisme de peuplement.

14. L'aspect normatif du concept de l'autodétermination, en particulier tel qu'il apparaît dans le contexte de la décolonisation, permet de (ré)examiner sous un autre jour, ainsi que de résoudre, les revendications légitimes d'émancipation du peuple palestinien après des décennies d'occupation israélienne, tout en respectant les droits de tous les Palestiniens et de tous les Israéliens de la région.

III. L'autodétermination externe : un cadre indispensable

A. Fondement juridique

15. Droit collectif par excellence, le droit à l'autodétermination est également un « droit plateforme » nécessaire à la réalisation de nombreux autres droits¹⁴. Si un groupe de population n'est pas libre de déterminer son statut politique et de poursuivre son développement économique, social et culturel en tant que peuple¹⁵, il est presque certain que d'autres de ses droits ne seront pas reconnus.

16. Mis en avant par le mouvement de décolonisation qui s'est étendu de la fin des années 1950 aux années 1970, le droit à l'autodétermination a été universellement codifié en 1966, avec l'adoption du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et du Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels. Auparavant simple principe général des Nations Unies¹⁶, le concept d'autodétermination s'est ainsi transformé en un véritable cadre normatif permettant aux peuples d'exercer leur libre arbitre en tant que « groupes nationaux cohésifs »¹⁷,

¹⁰ Antony Anghie, « Colonialism and the birth of international institutions: sovereignty, economy, and the mandate system of the League of Nations », New York University Journal of International Law and Politics, vol. 34, n° 3 (2002), p. 513 à 634.

¹¹ Patrick Wolfe, « Settler colonialism and the elimination of the native », Journal of Genocide Research, vol. 8, n° 4 (2006), p. 387.

¹² S'agissant du territoire palestinien occupé, le terme « colonies » est plus approprié que celui de « zones de peuplement », en ce que ce dernier ne rend pas compte du caractère illégal de cette activité (voir, par exemple, l'utilisation privilégiée qui est faite de « colonies » dans la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité).

¹³ Lorenzo Veracini, « Introduction: The Settler Colonial Situation », dans Settler Colonialism (Londres : Palgrave Macmillan, 2010).

¹⁴ A/72/556, par. 62.

¹⁵ Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, alinéas 1 et 2 de l'article premier (commun aux deux textes).

¹⁶ Charte des Nations Unies, Art. 55 et 56.

¹⁷ Ian Brownlie, Principles of Public International Law, 5^e édition (Oxford, Royaume-Uni, Clarendon Press, 1998), p. 599.

de décider de façon indépendante comment s'organiser sur le plan politique et de choisir la voie de leur développement culturel et socioéconomique¹⁸. On retrouve à cet égard deux composantes étroitement liées :

a) Une composante politique. Capacité d'un peuple à choisir son propre gouvernement et à se gouverner sans interférence. Cette composante est, elle aussi, divisée en deux dimensions : i) la dimension interne de l'autodétermination, à savoir le droit d'un peuple à se gouverner lui-même, au moyen de processus constitutionnels et politiques permettant l'exercice démocratique du droit dans la pratique, dans le cadre d'un État existant¹⁹, et ii) la dimension externe de l'autodétermination, à savoir le droit, à plus large échelle, d'un peuple d'avoir sa volonté propre et de déterminer son propre statut politique sans contrôle extérieur ni domination étrangère²⁰ ;

b) Une composante économique. Droit collectif d'un peuple de jouir de ses richesses et ressources naturelles, lequel incarne sa souveraineté permanente sur celles-ci²¹. Cette composante est essentielle pour assurer et préserver l'existence indépendante d'un peuple grâce à ses propres moyens de subsistance.

17. Ce sont ces deux composantes interconnectées qui permettent aux peuples d'exister de façon indépendante, tant sur le plan démographique (en tant que peuple) que territorial (dans une région donnée), et de se développer aux niveaux culturel, économique et social grâce à ce que leur offrent leur territoire et les ressources s'y trouvant²².

18. La jouissance effective des composantes politique et économique du droit à l'autodétermination est intrinsèquement liée à la dimension externe de celui-ci. Comment un gouvernement pourrait-il fonctionner de manière indépendante tout en restant assujéti à une autre entité, sans exercer sa pleine juridiction sur l'ensemble de son territoire, de ses citoyens et de ses ressources ? La domination et l'occupation étrangère sont donc incompatibles avec le « droit à l'autodétermination externe » en tant que cadre réglementaire²³.

19. En substance, le droit à l'autodétermination est le droit de vivre et de se développer en tant que peuple au sein d'une communauté politique individuelle, généralement un État indépendant. En découle le droit de résister aux actes de domination, de subjugation et d'exploitation étrangères pouvant faire obstacle à sa réalisation²⁴, lequel a été sanctionné en 1977 dans le Protocole additionnel I aux Conventions de Genève, où est reconnue la lutte des peuples « contre la domination coloniale et l'occupation étrangère et contre les régimes racistes dans l'exercice du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes »²⁵. Ponctué de luttes pour la libération et la décolonisation, l'histoire a montré en quoi le droit d'exister en tant que peuple et le droit de résister à la domination étrangère étaient interconnectés. Elle a également révélé qu'il était vital, aux fins de l'affranchissement des peuples, que les luttes anticoloniales soient soutenues sur le plan international, en particulier par les ¹⁸ Antonio Cassese, Self-determination of peoples: a legal reappraisal, vol. 12, (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1995), p. 53.

¹⁹ James Crawford, The Creation of States in International Law, 2^e édition (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2007).

²⁰ Hurst Hannum, « Rethinking self-determination », Virginia Journal of International Law, vol. 34, n° 1 (1993), p. 1 et 33.

²¹ Catriona Drew, « The East Timor story: international law on trial », European Journal of International Law, vol. 12, n° 4 (2001), p. 651 et 663.

²² Hannum, « Rethinking self-determination » (voir note de bas de page 20).

²³ Wilde, « Using the master's tools to dismantle the master's house » (voir note de bas de page 9).

²⁴ Antonio Cassese, « Terrorism and human rights », American University Law Review, vol. 31, n° 4 (1982), p. 945 à 958.

²⁵ Protocole additionnel I aux Conventions de Genève (1977), alinéa 4 de l'article premier.

gouvernements et les décideurs. La décolonisation est rentrée dans le domaine du possible lorsque les mouvements anticolonialistes et les États sont parvenus à un consensus, à l'ONU, sur l'illégitimité de la domination coloniale, la question du respect des droits humains fondamentaux ayant joué un rôle essentiel en la matière²⁶.

20. Dans les années 1960, l'autodétermination est devenue le cadre normatif sous-tendant l'avancement de la décolonisation. Dans le contexte du processus « irrésistible et irréversible » de libération auquel tous les peuples avaient droit, le colonialisme et toutes les pratiques de ségrégation et de discrimination dont il s'accompagnait ont été totalement bannis²⁷. La valeur normative de l'autodétermination trouve sa source dans la Charte des Nations Unies, signée en 1945, dans laquelle le principe de « l'égalité des droits et de l'autodétermination des peuples » a été érigé au rang de priorité, au même titre que le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Pour parvenir à la décolonisation, l'Assemblée générale a donc reconnu ce qui suit :

Tous les peuples ont un droit inaliénable à la pleine liberté, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national. Tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination ; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique et poursuivent librement leur développement économique, social et culturel²⁸.

21. Les tentatives de colonisation se poursuivant, l'Assemblée générale a explicitement interdit les actes susceptibles de saper les efforts d'accession à l'indépendance des peuples colonisés, ainsi que le recours à la menace ou à l'emploi de la force par des États contre l'intégrité territoriale ou l'indépendance politique de tout autre État et la violation de frontières internationales existantes ou de lignes d'armistice établies par un accord international ou en vertu d'un tel accord, lesquels pouvaient avoir pour effet de priver les peuples de leur « droit à l'autodétermination, à la liberté et à l'indépendance »²⁹.

22. L'Assemblée générale a également précisé que le territoire d'un État donné ne pouvait faire l'objet d'une occupation militaire ou d'une acquisition par un autre État à la suite du recours à la menace ou à l'emploi de la force³⁰. Cette disposition s'est vue renforcée en 1974, lorsque, au moment de définir le terme « agression », l'Assemblée générale a interdit « le recours à l'emploi de la force armée pour priver les peuples de leur droit à l'autodétermination, à la liberté et à l'indépendance, ou pour porter atteinte à l'intégrité territoriale »³¹.

23. L'inviolabilité du droit à l'autodétermination découle du fait qu'il présente un caractère erga omnes et relève du jus cogens. L'expression Erga omnes signifie que tous les États ont un intérêt inhérent à la réalisation du droit à l'autodétermination et une obligation de le respecter ; il s'agit donc d'un droit qui est dû à la fois par et à la communauté internationale dans son ensemble³². Cette obligation, qui s'impose aux États non seulement à l'égard de leurs propres peuples, mais aussi à l'égard de tous les peuples qui ont été privés de la possibilité d'exercer leur droit à l'autodétermination³³, tient au caractère de jus cogens (norme impérative) du droit à l'autodétermination, qui ne peut être violé et auquel il n'est pas possible de déroger ²⁶ Roland Burke, Decolonization and the Evolution of International Human Rights (Philadelphie, University of Pennsylvania Press, 2011).

²⁷ Résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale (1960).

²⁸ Ibid.

²⁹ Résolution 2625 (XXV) de l'Assemblée générale (1970).

³⁰ Ibid.

³¹ Résolution 3314 (XXIX) de l'Assemblée générale (1974).

³² Cassese, Self-determination of peoples (voir note de bas de page 19).

³³ Comité des droits de l'homme, observation générale 12, par. 6.

(sauf au moyen d'une autre norme impérative)³⁴. La communauté internationale est tenue de veiller à ce que tous les peuples ayant droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes y parviennent effectivement et à ce que rien n'entrave ce processus³⁵.

24. La pratique internationale regorge d'exemples, tirés de situations allant de l'occupation de la Namibie dans les années 1950 à celle de l'Ukraine en 2022, qui montrent comment la communauté internationale – que ce soit par l'intermédiaire de tribunaux internationaux, tels que la Cour internationale de Justice³⁶, la Cour pénale internationale (CPI)³⁷ ou des tribunaux spéciaux³⁸, ou par l'intermédiaire de l'Assemblée générale³⁹ et du Conseil de sécurité⁴⁰ – et des États individuels – en passant par des juridictions nationales et au moyen de sanctions⁴¹ – ont fait usage des dispositions prévues au titre du droit international pour mettre un terme à des situations d'occupations illégales et d'assujettissement. En vertu du droit à l'autodétermination externe, le peuple palestinien a le droit de bénéficier – et doit bénéficier – d'un appui international comparable et d'une intervention déterminée.

B. Le cas du peuple palestinien dans le territoire palestinien occupé

25. Le droit à l'autodétermination est un « droit inaliénable » du peuple palestinien, comme l'a affirmé l'Assemblée générale⁴². Les origines de ce droit pour les Palestiniens remontent à plus d'un siècle, soit avant même sa première codification dans la Charte des Nations Unies. Les peuples de Palestine (musulmans, chrétiens et juifs)⁴³, à l'instar des autres peuples du Levant, ont vu leur droit à l'autodétermination reconnu par le Pacte de la Société des Nations de 1919. Ainsi, il a été prévu, à l'article 22 de cet instrument, que certaines communautés [mandats de « classe A » (Irak, Liban, Palestine, Transjordanie et Syrie)] pourraient voir leur existence comme nations indépendantes reconnue provisoirement, jusqu'au moment où elles seraient capables de se conduire seules⁴⁴, les « vœux » de ces communautés devant être pris « d'abord en considération pour le choix du Mandataire »⁴⁵.

26. Après des siècles d'antisémitisme – dont le paroxysme a été atteint avec la persécution des Juifs d'Europe lors de l'Holocauste, cauchemar génocidaire – le sionisme politique a pu compter sur un soutien accru. Dans cette idéologie, la ³⁴ Commission du droit international (CDI), A/CN.4/L.960/Add.1 (2022), conclusions 3 et 17.

³⁵ Avis consultatif sur les conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le Territoire palestinien occupé donné par la Cour internationale de Justice (CIJ) le 9 juillet 2004.

³⁶ CIJ, Conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain) nonobstant la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité.

³⁷ Cour pénale internationale (CPI), « La Présidence de la CPI assigne la situation en Ukraine à la Chambre préliminaire II » (2 mars 2022).

³⁸ Résolution 827 (1993) du Conseil de sécurité.

³⁹ Résolution 43/106 de l'Assemblée générale (1988).

⁴⁰ Résolution 264 (1969) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁴¹ Gouvernement des États-Unis, Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986, Public Law, n° 99-440 (1986).

⁴² Résolutions 3236(XXIX) (1974) et 2672(XXV)(C) (1970) de l'Assemblée générale.

⁴³ Au début des années 1900, les communautés les plus importantes étaient composées de 81 % de musulmans, 11 % de chrétiens et 8 % de juifs. Voir Sergio Della Pergola, « Demographic trends in Israel and Palestine: Prospects and policy implications », American Jewish Yearbook vol. 103 (2003), p. 3 à 68.

⁴⁴ Pacte de la Société des Nations (1919), article 22. Le système de mandats a été mis en place après la Première Guerre mondiale pour gérer les territoires qui auparavant appartenaient à l'Empire ottoman ou à des colonies allemandes. Les mandats étaient classés en catégories A, B et C, en fonction de ce que l'on estimait être l'état de préparation des zones concernées à l'autoadministration.

⁴⁵ Ibid.

Palestine est vue comme la terre sur laquelle concrétiser l'idée d'un « État pour les Juifs », par l'implantation de zones de peuplement et de colonies⁴⁶. On n'y tient toutefois pas compte du fait que, sur cette même terre, une population arabe palestinienne indigène a résidé pendant des millénaires. En 1947, les Nations Unies ont décidé de concilier les revendications, du peuple palestinien autochtone d'une part et des colons juifs – majoritairement européens – et des réfugiés d'Europe⁴⁷ d'autre part, sur cette terre, en recommandant la partition du mandat sur la Palestine, confié à la Grande-Bretagne, en un « État arabe » et un « État juif »⁴⁸. Peu après, la création de l'État d'Israël sur la majeure partie du territoire de la Palestine mandataire s'est accompagnée de massacres et d'expulsions massives, ainsi que de la dénationalisation de la plupart des Arabes de Palestine, qui se sont en outre vus dépossédés de leurs terres et de leurs biens. Ces derniers continuent d'être privés de leur droit à l'autodétermination, tout comme leurs descendants, les réfugiés de 1967 et les autres Palestiniens non réfugiés.

27. La guerre de 1967, qui a marqué le début de l'occupation israélienne, représente un tournant majeur. Dans sa résolution 242 \(1967\), le Conseil de sécurité des Nations Unies souligne « l'inadmissibilité de l'acquisition de territoires par la guerre » et appelle au « retrait des forces armées israéliennes » des territoires occupés, soulignant en outre le droit de toute personne dans la région « de vivre en paix à l'intérieur de frontières sûres et reconnues à l'abri de menaces ou d'actes de force »⁴⁹. Ces propos sont du même ordre que ceux tenus par l'Assemblée générale, qui a condamné tout emploi de la force susceptible de priver les peuples de leur liberté et de leur indépendance, ces agissements constituant une marque claire et incontestable de colonialisme⁵⁰.

28. Depuis 1967, l'ONU, tenant compte du caractère sensible que revêt la question du postcolonialisme au vu de la diversité de ses membres, a adopté des résolutions dans lesquels elle a non seulement réaffirmé le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, mais également estimé qu'il était justifié d'opposer une résistance aux actes de domination étrangère⁵¹. En 1974, face à l'occupation israélienne, qui déjà durait de longue date et n'était pas justifiée, l'Assemblée générale a reconnu le droit inaliénable à l'autodétermination sans ingérence extérieure du peuple palestinien, ainsi que le droit inaliénable des réfugiés palestiniens de retourner dans leur foyer⁵².

29. En 1982, Israël continuant de faire fi des obligations lui incombant, l'Assemblée générale a affirmé que « le déni des droits inaliénables du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, à la souveraineté, à l'indépendance et au retour en Palestine et les agressions répétées d'Israël contre les peuples de la région constitu[ent] une grave menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales »⁵³. Dans la même résolution, elle a par ailleurs prié instamment « tous les États, les organismes compétents des Nations Unies, les institutions spécialisées et autres organisations internationales de donner leur appui au peuple palestinien par l'intermédiaire de son seul représentant ⁴⁶ Theodor Herzl, Der Judenstaat (Leipzig et Vienne, Breitenstein, 1896).

⁴⁷ Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, deuxième session, supplément n° 11 (A/364) (Rapport de la Commission spéciale des Nations Unies pour la Palestine), vol. I (1947).

⁴⁸ Résolution 181 \(II\) de l'Assemblée générale (1947).

⁴⁹ Résolution 242 \(1967\) du Conseil de sécurité ; voir également les résolutions 298 \(1971\), 476 \(1980\) et 2334 \(2016\) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁵⁰ Résolution 2625 \(XXV\) de l'Assemblée générale (1970).

⁵¹ A/CONF.32/41 (1968).

⁵² Résolution 3236 \(XXIX\) de l'Assemblée générale (1974).

⁵³ Résolution 37/43 de l'Assemblée générale (1982).

légitime, l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine, dans la lutte qu'il men[ait] pour recouvrer son droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance »⁵⁴.

30. La reconnaissance, par l'Assemblée générale, de la lutte menée par le peuple palestinien pour « recouvrer » son droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance dans un contexte mondial de décolonisation a été un signe fort de la prise de conscience concernant la résistance nationale palestinienne, avec à sa tête l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine (OLP), laquelle, à compter des années 1970, fédérait les principales forces politiques palestiniennes, principalement en exil. À l'époque, il était clair que le droit à l'autodétermination constituait un motif légitime pour les Palestiniens de résister, compte étant tenu de la violence et de l'incommensurabilité de l'occupation israélienne, à laquelle ceux-ci s'efforçaient tant bien que mal d'échapper.

31. En 1983, l'Assemblée générale avait déjà dénoncé les « agressions répétées » d'Israël contre les Palestiniens⁵⁵. Au cours des dernières décennies, les Nations Unies ont réaffirmé le droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination dans des dizaines de résolutions, appelant à un retrait d'Israël du territoire occupé en 1967 et à la fin de l'occupation.

32. En 2016, le Conseil de sécurité lui-même – dont la capacité d'action sur cette question est pourtant très limitée en raison du soutien apporté par les États-Unis d'Amérique à Israël – a déclaré que « la création par Israël de colonies de peuplement dans le Territoire palestinien occupé [...], y compris Jérusalem-Est, n'a[vait] aucun fondement en droit », et condamné fermement ces agissements, les qualifiant de « violation flagrante du droit international »⁵⁶.

IV. Sous nos yeux : 55 ans de limitation du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination

A. Retour sur les faits

33. En tant que Puissance occupante, Israël n'a aucune souveraineté sur le territoire palestinien occupé. Même si cette occupation avait pour seul et honnête motif d'assurer la sécurité d'Israël (ce qui, en soi, est une aberration, étant donné ses retombées néfastes sur les droits et libertés fondamentaux des Palestiniens), sur quelles bases Israël s'appuie-t-il pour continuer de saisir des terres palestiniennes afin d'y construire des colonies en Cisjordanie, en exploitant des ressources en eau et en énergie qui appartiennent aux Palestiniens ? Quelle est son excuse pour détruire des infrastructures civiles essentielles de la population occupée ?

34. Au mépris des nombreuses résolutions des Nations Unies dans lesquelles il a été reconnu qu'Israël, Puissance occupante, violait ses obligations et au titre desquelles le pays a été enjoint à se retirer du territoire palestinien occupé⁵⁷, cet État a continué d'asseoir sa domination et sa présence militaire, celle-ci devenant toujours plus flagrante et pénible pour les Palestiniens, tout en faisant prévaloir ses propres intérêts⁵⁸. La façon dont Israël administre le territoire palestinien occupé est typique des pratiques coloniales, à savoir qu'il cherche à tout prix à exploiter les terres et les ⁵⁴ Ibid., par. 23.

⁵⁵ Résolution 38/17 de l'Assemblée générale (1983).

⁵⁶ Résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁵⁷ Ibid. et résolution 242 (1967) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁵⁸ Yehuda Z. Blum, « The missing reversioner: reflections on the status of Judea and Samaria » Israel Law Review, vol. 50 (2017), p. 276.

ressources pour son propre bénéfice et ne manifeste, dans le meilleur des cas, qu'une profonde indifférence pour les droits et les intérêts du peuple protégé⁵⁹.

35. Ce qui rend la situation dans le territoire palestinien occupé profondément illégale est le déplacement illégal et intentionnel des palestiniens autochtones (et réfugiés) y habitant, associé à l'altération du statut juridique, du caractère géographique et de la composition démographique du territoire occupé, par la fragmentation des terres, la saisie et l'exploitation des ressources naturelles, et l'entrave au développement économique palestinien, par et pour une minorité coloniale (grandissante). En réalité, l'installation forcée de colons, de zones de peuplement et d'infrastructures de colonisation sur le terrain et l'espace des Palestiniens a servi à empêcher les Palestiniens de jouir de leur droit à l'autodétermination et constitue une violation de plusieurs normes impératives du droit international, au titre duquel les activités de ce type sont absolument interdites⁶⁰.

36. On trouvera dans les sections ci-après des preuves que l'occupation n'est pas seulement belliqueuse mais qu'elle relève également du colonialisme de peuplement, Israël ayant empêché le peuple palestinien de jouir de son droit à l'autodétermination et violé chaque aspect de ce droit en poursuivant délibérément ses efforts de « dé-palestinisation » du territoire occupé. En substance, ces agissements témoignent d'une intention de coloniser le territoire palestinien occupé, dans la continuité de ce qui avait été envisagé par le mouvement sioniste pour l'Israël moderne il y a plus d'un siècle⁶¹. Parallèlement, cela fait plus de 55 ans que la communauté internationale manque systématiquement à son devoir en n'exigeant pas d'Israël qu'il réponde de ses actes, permettant ainsi à ce pays de continuer d'agir en toute impunité et de poursuivre ses efforts de colonisation.

B. L'occupation à son commencement : préparation du terrain

37. Lorsque, en 1967, Israël a envahi ce qui restait de la Palestine sous mandat britannique – que contrôlaient jusqu'alors l'Égypte (bande de Gaza) et la Jordanie (Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est) – nombreux sont ceux, en Israël et à l'étranger, à s'être réjouis au plus haut point de la prise de la Cisjordanie, de la bande de Gaza et de la vieille ville de Jérusalem⁶². Encouragés par leur prise de contrôle rapide sur de vastes étendues de terres, les dirigeants israéliens ont imaginé des plans pour consolider de façon permanente l'hégémonie de leur pays sur le territoire qu'il venait tout juste d'occuper⁶³. Depuis le début de l'occupation, les gouvernements israéliens se succédant agissent comme si le territoire « conquis » était une terra nullius, une attitude qui n'est pas sans rappeler celle adoptée par les dirigeants du mouvement sioniste envers la Palestine depuis l'époque de l'Empire ottoman.

38. Ce qui avait été prévu par les stratèges israéliens de l'époque était que le territoire occupé serait à l'avenir lié à la création d'un Grand Eretz Yisrael (Terre d'Israël), d'un point de vue stratégique, ainsi que d'un État juif, d'un point de vue ⁵⁹ A/72/556 (2017).

⁶⁰ Résolution 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité ; résolution 3314 (XXIX) de l'Assemblée générale (1974). Résolution 267 (1969) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁶¹ Rashid Khalidi, The Hundred Years' War on Palestine: A History of Settler Colonialism and Resistance: 1917-2017 (New York, Metropolitan Books, 2020).

⁶² Seth Anziska, Preventing Palestine: A Political History from Camp David to Oslo (Princeton, New Jersey, Princeton University Press, 2018), p. 7.

⁶³ Segev, 1967: Israel, the War, and the Year that Transformed the Middle East (voir note de bas de page 3).

démographique⁶⁴. Conformément au plan Allon, élaboré en 1967, un État juif unitaire s'étendant de la vallée du Jourdain à la Méditerranée serait créé, grâce à l'annexion complète de la vallée du Jourdain et à la création de Bantoustans palestiniens démilitarisés en son sein⁶⁵. Au titre de ce projet, la carte d'Israël serait revue dans son intégralité, abstraction étant faite dans le résultat final tant de la Ligne verte que des autres lignes d'armistice⁶⁶. La vieille ville de Jérusalem, située dans la partie est de la ville, serait annexée et il était prévu que les Palestiniens qui y vivaient reçoivent un « statut de résident conditionnel »⁶⁷. Du reste, la priorité serait donnée aux zones de faible densité démographique ; les basses terres situées le long du Jourdain, jugées essentielles pour la défense d'Israël, de même que la péninsule du Sinaï et Bethléem et Hébron, seraient annexées. Le reste du territoire, plus densément peuplé par les Palestiniens, serait placé sous le contrôle de la Jordanie⁶⁸.

39. Le plan Allon est resté d'actualité et a continué de progresser grâce aux actions entreprises par les gouvernements israéliens successifs. En 1973, Moshe Dayan, Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères et architecte parmi d'autres de l'occupation de 1967, a avancé l'idée d'un nouvel État d'Israël plus étendu, fort et solide, dans lequel l'autorité du Gouvernement s'étendrait du fleuve Jourdain au canal de Suez⁶⁹. En 1979, le Premier Ministre israélien Menachem Begin a déclaré que la Ligne verte n'existait plus et avait disparu à jamais⁷⁰. Comme l'a révélé l'ancien politicien israélien Matityahu Droblès en 1980, l'intention avait toujours été de conserver à jamais les territoires de Judée-Samarie, le meilleur moyen et le plus efficace pour ce faire étant d'accélérer la colonisation dans ces régions⁷¹. Citons pour exemple particulièrement probant l'annexion, par Israël, de Jérusalem-Est occupée depuis 1967, laquelle a été formellement cimentée en 1980 par l'adoption de mesures administratives et législatives⁷² ayant conduit à la modification du statut et du caractère de la vieille ville, lesquelles, comme l'a confirmé à plusieurs reprises le Conseil de sécurité des Nations Unies, n'avaient aucune validité en droit⁷³.

40. L'évolution de la situation sur le terrain témoigne de l'exécution du plan Allon, bien que celui-ci n'ait jamais été officiellement adopté. Israël s'attendant depuis des décennies à créer des faits accomplis sur le terrain pour consolider l'annexion de grandes parties du territoire palestinien occupé, en 2019, le Premier Ministre israélien de l'époque, Benjamin Netanyahu, a déclaré que la création d'un État palestinien mettrait en danger l'existence d'Israël et qu'il ne diviserait pas Jérusalem ni n'évacuerait aucune communauté, ajoutant qu'il s'assurerait qu'Israël contrôle le territoire situé à l'ouest de la Jordanie⁷⁴. De multiples gouvernements et dirigeants ⁶⁴ Commandant israélien (Premier Ministre par intérim, 1969) Yigad Allon, cité par Robert Friedman, Zealots for Zion: Inside Israel's West Bank Settlement Movement (New York : Random House, 1992).

⁶⁵ Geoffrey Aronson, Creating Facts: Israel, Palestinians and the West Bank (Washington, D.C. : Institute for Palestine Studies, 1987).

⁶⁶ Cité dans Gershom Gorenberg, The Unmaking of Israel, 1^{re} édition Harper Perennial (New York : Harper Perennial, 2012).

⁶⁷ Ibid.

⁶⁸ Ibid.

⁶⁹ Abba Eban, Ministre israélien des affaires étrangères, cité par Abba Eban, Abba Eban: An Autobiography (New York : Random House, 1977).

⁷⁰ « Foreign Minister Dayan on the Future of Settlements in Judea, Samaria and Gaza », 24 avril 1979.

⁷¹ Matityahu Droblès, « Settlement in Judea and Samaria – Strategy, Policy and Programmes », dans World Zionist Organization, Settlement Section (Jérusalem, 1980).

⁷² Knesset, « Basic Law: Jerusalem, Capital of Israel » (1980).

⁷³ Résolution 478 (1980) du Conseil de sécurité, par. 3.

⁷⁴ « Netanyahu says will begin annexing West Bank if he wins Israel election », Haaretz, 7 avril 2019.

politiques et militaires israéliens ont réaffirmé ces positions⁷⁵. En raison de la présence de « colons » et de kahanistes à la Knesset israélienne, il est difficile de séparer le colonialisme de la politique publique israélienne.

41. Depuis 1967, Israël installe sa population civile dans les 22 % de la Palestine mandataire qui étaient censés devenir (en raison de pressions politiques et d'analyses pragmatiques) le territoire où les Palestiniens réaliseraient leur droit à l'autodétermination, sous la forme d'un État indépendant (alors qu'en 1947, l'Assemblée générale avait délibéré que le territoire de l'« État arabe » correspondrait à 45 % du territoire occupé par la Palestine sous mandat britannique).

42. Tragique ironie, les Palestiniens ont commencé à subir un colonialisme de peuplement intense à un moment de l'histoire où le reste du monde progressait lentement vers la décolonisation. Dans le monde entier, des mouvements de résistance nationaux, bénéficiant du soutien symbolique des Nations Unies, se sont dressés contre leurs colonisateurs et sont parvenus à se libérer de leur domination, tandis que, dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, l'expansionnisme d'Israël se transformait en un régime d'apartheid caractérisé par la plus longue période d'occupation de l'histoire moderne.

C. Entrave à l'unité : la fragmentation territoriale

43. La souveraineté territoriale, composante essentielle de l'« unité d'autodétermination » palestinienne⁷⁶, est au centre de l'action menée par Israël depuis les premiers jours de l'occupation. La « fragmentation stratégique », qui consiste notamment à limiter la liberté de circulation des Palestiniens à l'intérieur et à l'extérieur du territoire occupé, à les priver d'accès à de vastes étendues de terre et à installer de nombreux barrages routiers, points de contrôle et déviations ainsi qu'un mur de séparation, fait partie des méthodes employées par le pays pour contenir et contrôler le peuple palestinien⁷⁷. Celle-ci constitue un douloureux rappel de la destruction et de la tentative d'anéantissement de centaines de villages palestiniens situés dans l'ancienne Palestine mandataire britannique au moment de la création de l'État d'Israël, qui s'est accompagnée d'une dénaturation des paysages, d'une reconfiguration des terres destinée à servir les intérêts d'Israël et de l'installation de séparation visant à contenir et à isoler le peuple palestinien à travers les zones sous contrôle. La surveillance accrue de la population palestinienne, dont la principale manifestation est le siège de la bande de Gaza, est désormais caractéristique des politiques de domination d'Israël.

44. La fragmentation et la séparation entre la Cisjordanie, Jérusalem-Est et la bande de Gaza ont été méticuleusement planifiées et exécutées. L'application, à partir de 1967, de régimes administratifs et militaires distincts pour la bande de Gaza et la Cisjordanie – se traduisant par exemple par l'utilisation de cartes d'identité et de plaques d'immatriculation différentes – a été le principal vecteur de cette fragmentation⁷⁸. Depuis les premiers jours de l'occupation, celle-ci a été exacerbée par l'expropriation sans limites de terres destinées à accueillir des colonies israéliennes⁷⁹. La création de colonies, qui déjà en 1967 constituait une grave

⁷⁵ Tovah Lazaroff, « Michaeli: no one thinks half a million settlers will be evacuated », Jerusalem Post, 9 mars 2021 ; « Benny Gantz, Netanyahu rival, gives campaign launch speech: full English transcript », Haaretz, 30 janvier 2019 ; Gil Stern Hoffman, « Lapid: US helped Iran fund its next war against Israel », Jerusalem Post, 26 janvier 2016.

⁷⁶ Crawford, The Creation of States in International Law (voir note de bas de page 19), p. 428.

⁷⁷ E/ESCWA/ECRI/2017/1 (2017) (voir note de bas de page 5).

⁷⁸ Jean-Pierre Filiu, Gaza: A History (Oxford : Oxford University Press, 2014).

⁷⁹ Ordonnance militaire 58 (1967).

violation du droit international⁸⁰, est le signe de la mise à exécution des plans élaborés par les dirigeants israéliens pour s'installer de manière permanente dans ces régions⁸¹. Cela est particulièrement visible à Jérusalem-Est, qu'Israël traite illégalement comme s'il l'avait « annexée » depuis des décennies⁸². Dans plus de 40 de ses résolutions, le Conseil de sécurité a rappelé à Israël la non-validité de toute modification du statut, du caractère et de la composition démographique de Jérusalem⁸³. Et pourtant, l'annexion et la dé-palestinisation de Jérusalem et de la majeure partie de la Cisjordanie ont progressé.

45. Au titre des accords d'Oslo, signés par Israël et l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine entre 1993 et 1995, la Cisjordanie a été divisée en « zones » A, B et C, ce qui a entraîné une fragmentation encore plus profonde du territoire disponible pour les Palestiniens. La fragmentation de la Cisjordanie a facilité la construction et la « protection » de colonies exclusivement juives dans le territoire occupé. Parallèlement, des milliers de structures palestiniennes ont été détruites et des dizaines de milliers de Palestiniens ont été déplacés de force depuis 2009. Les communautés pastorales et bédouines de la zone C, composées à 70 % de réfugiés, sont les plus exposées à cet « environnement coercitif »⁸⁴.

46. La transformation de la bande de Gaza en une enclave à haute densité de population particulièrement appauvrie, contrôlée par Israël au moyen d'un blocus maritime, terrestre et aérien étouffant, fait partie intégrante de ce même projet colonial. Le confinement de la population coloniale dans des réserves soumises à une supervision accrue est au cœur de l'objectif de colonisation de peuplement de garantir la suprématie démographique et d'empêcher le peuple palestinien d'exercer son droit à l'autodétermination⁸⁵. À l'inverse, l'obligation de considérer la bande de Gaza et la Cisjordanie, y compris Jérusalem-Est, comme une seule unité territoriale est ancrée dans le droit de l'occupation, le principe d'autodétermination des peuples et un certain nombre de traités bilatéraux conclus par Israël et l'OLP⁸⁶.

D. Lutte contre la prospérité économique : l'exploitation des ressources naturelles

47. La souveraineté permanente sur les ressources naturelles est un élément essentiel du développement économique des peuples, consacré par le droit à l'autodétermination⁸⁷. En raison du complexe système de contrôle et de restrictions qu'Israël applique dans le territoire palestinien occupé au profit exclusif de ses colonies, les Palestiniens voient réduites à néant leurs chances de poursuivre librement leur développement économique et de disposer de leurs richesses et ressources naturelles comme bon leur semble⁸⁸.

⁸⁰ Convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (quatrième Convention de Genève) du 12 août 1949, art. 147 ; Comité international de la Croix-Rouge, commentaire de 1958.

⁸¹ CIJ, Conséquences juridiques de l'édification d'un mur dans le territoire palestinien occupé, avis consultatif (2004) (voir note de bas de page 35).

⁸² Ordonnance sur les lois et l'administration (modification n° 11), loi de 1967.

⁸³ Résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité.

⁸⁴ A/HRC/31/43.

⁸⁵ Tareq Baconi, « Gaza and the One-State Reality », Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 50, n° 1 (2020), p. 77 à 90.

⁸⁶ Marco Longobardo, « The Legality of Closure on Land and Safe Passage between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank », Asian Journal of International Law, vol. 11, n° 1 (2021).

⁸⁷ Drew, « The East Timor story: international law on trial » (voir note de bas de page 22).

⁸⁸ Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, alinéa 2 de l'article premier (commun aux deux textes).

48. Les communautés palestiniennes, qui, par le passé, étaient capables de subvenir à leurs propres besoins grâce à l'agriculture, à l'élevage et à la pêche (à Gaza), ainsi qu'aux revenus générés par la vente de leur production, se retrouvent maintenant piégées dans un cercle vicieux de dépendance, vis-à-vis tant de l'économie israélienne que de l'aide internationale⁸⁹. L'accès aux moyens de subsistance, à l'eau, à la terre et aux routes est en permanence perturbé par les restrictions israéliennes.

49. Dans la zone C de la Cisjordanie, où se trouvent la plus grande partie des ressources naturelles et presque toutes les terres arables de la région, Israël exerce un monopole complet sur les sources d'eau⁹⁰ et n'a réservé que 1 % des terres à l'usage des Palestiniens⁹¹. Le « système de coordination » mis en place en grande pompe par le pays pour faciliter l'accès des Palestiniens à leurs terres est alambiqué et inefficace⁹². Le contrôle exercé par Israël sur les ressources palestiniennes entrave la production et menace l'autosuffisance des Palestiniens, mettant particulièrement en danger la survie des Bédouins et des autres communautés pastorales palestiniennes de la région. Selon les estimations de l'ONU, si la Cisjordanie ne se trouvait pas sous occupation israélienne, le PIB par habitant en 2019 y aurait été supérieur de 44 % aux chiffres enregistrés⁹³.

50. Dans la bande de Gaza assiégée, la situation économique est plus que désastreuse⁹⁴. En 2021, le taux de chômage y a dépassé les 50 %, 80 % de la population dépendant par ailleurs de l'aide fournie⁹⁵. Les offensives militaires israéliennes répétées de grande envergure, associées aux coupures d'électricité imposées par Israël, ont aggravé les difficultés auxquelles fait face la population palestinienne de Gaza, qui ne peut que rêver d'une vie dans la dignité⁹⁶. Grâce à son blocus illégal de la bande de Gaza, laquelle constitue une forme de peine collective, Israël est également en mesure d'exploiter les réserves de gaz naturel et de pétrole situées au large de celle-ci⁹⁷.

51. Dans le même temps, un réseau d'entreprises nationales et internationales opère dans le territoire palestinien illégalement occupé⁹⁸. Ces entreprises procèdent à des essais de matériel militaire sur les Palestiniens⁹⁹, exploitent les ressources en eau dont sont privés ces derniers¹⁰⁰, cultivent les terres et les utilisent à des fins d'élevage, exploitent des carrières de pierre, extraient des minéraux, forment des puits de pétrole et de gaz naturel et allouent des ressources presque exclusivement aux colonies et à ⁸⁹ B'Tselem, « Expel and exploit: the israeli practice of taking over rural palestinian land » (2016).

⁹⁰ Voir A/HRC/37/39 (2018).

⁹¹ Orhan Niksic et al., Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Banque mondiale, 2014), p. 13.

⁹² Voir B'Tselem, « Expel and exploit » (voir note de bas de page 89).

⁹³ Voir Conférence des Nations Unies sur le commerce et le développement (CNUCED), Les coûts économiques de l'occupation israélienne pour le peuple palestinien : Arrêt du développement et pauvreté en Cisjordanie (UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2021/2) (2021).

⁹⁴ CNUCED, Les coûts économiques de l'occupation israélienne pour le peuple palestinien : l'appauvrissement de Gaza sous le blocus (UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2020/1) (2020).

⁹⁵ Banque mondiale, Assistance Strategy for the West Bank and Gaza for the Period FY22-25 (156451-GZ) (2021).

⁹⁶ Ibid.

⁹⁷ CNUCED, Les coûts économiques de l'occupation israélienne pour le peuple palestinien : le potentiel gazier et pétrolier inexploité (UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2019/1) (2019).

⁹⁸ Wesam Ahmad, « Business and human rights, conflict and the converging legacies of colonialism in the Palestinian present », Cambridge Core, mai 2021.

⁹⁹ Maryam Farah, « Business and human rights in Occupied Territory: guidance for upholding human rights » (Al-Haq, 2020).

¹⁰⁰ Al-Haq, « Water for one people only: discriminatory access and 'water apartheid' in the OPT » (2013).

la Puissance occupante¹⁰¹. Les produits finis, qui sont commercialisés dans le monde entier comme « provenant d'Israël », sont généralement exportés vers le territoire d'États tiers, parfois en exonération de droits de douane¹⁰². L'obligation d'étiqueter ces produits de la colonisation comme provenant du territoire occupé ne résout pas l'illégalité de leur commerce¹⁰³ ; tout au plus, elle ne fait que transférer la responsabilité aux consommateurs des États destinataires de décider des produits qu'ils estiment ne pas devoir être autorisés sur les territoires des Hautes Parties contractantes aux Conventions de Genève.

52. Le refus délibéré de l'accès des Palestiniens à leurs ressources naturelles et de leur contrôle sur celles-ci fait de toute perspective de développement économique un simple substitut de prospérité¹⁰⁴. Le « dé-développement » imposé par Israël au territoire palestinien occupé a causé d'irréparables dommages à l'économie palestinienne et est aux antipodes du principe d'autodétermination auquel ont adhéré les Nations Unies dans leur rejet du colonialisme¹⁰⁵.

E. Privation d'une identité propre : l'effacement des droits culturels et civils des Palestiniens

53. Dans un contexte colonial et un régime d'apartheid, toute manifestation d'identité collective et tentative du peuple assujéti de revendiquer, une seule fois ou à plusieurs reprises, sa souveraineté représente une menace pour le régime en place. Le 13 mai 2022, des porteurs de cercueils palestiniens ont été attaqués par les forces israéliennes alors qu'ils arboraient le drapeau national lors des funérailles de la journaliste palestinienne Shireen Abu Akleh, tuée deux jours auparavant (voir par. 58). Les « symboles » palestiniens, tels que le drapeau palestinien, sont en réalité systématiquement pris pour cibles et détruits, que ce soit dans les lieux publics ou lors de manifestations publiques, de rassemblements et même de funérailles, tout affichage de l'identité nationale palestinienne étant de facto interdit. Dans le territoire palestinien occupé, les mesures visant à empêcher le peuple palestinien d'exprimer son identité collective sur sa propre terre prennent de nombreuses formes.

54. Ces interdictions s'inscrivent dans un effort plus large et plus important de « déconstruction et de remplacement » de la Palestine dans l'imaginaire collectif par une combinaison d'appropriation culturelle et d'effacement d'entités culturelles clefs¹⁰⁶. Le quartier marocain de la vieille ville de Jérusalem, rasé au début de l'occupation pour faire place à l'esplanade du Mur des lamentations, est l'un des premiers cas enregistrés de lieux palestiniens à avoir été détruits ou saisis et convertis en sites culturels israéliens peu après juin 1967. Les tentatives visant à effacer le caractère palestinien des vestiges de la terre palestinienne ancestrale comprennent : l'élimination de l'histoire palestinienne des programmes de cours dans les écoles de Jérusalem-Est¹⁰⁷, la révocation des licences des écoles palestiniennes qui ¹⁰¹ Al-Haq, « Palestinian human rights organizations submit file to ICC prosecutor: investigate and prosecute pillage, appropriation and destruction of Palestinian natural resources », 26 octobre 2018.

¹⁰² Accord de libre-échange entre le Canada et Israël (2014).

¹⁰³ Cour de justice de l'Union européenne, affaire C-363/18 (12 novembre 2019).

¹⁰⁴ Al-Haq et Groupe d'intervention d'urgence pour l'eau, l'assainissement et l'hygiène, « Israel's violations of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights with regard to the human rights to water and sanitation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory » (2011).

¹⁰⁵ Sara Roy, « De-development revisited: Palestinian economy and society since Oslo », Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 28, n° 3 (1999), p. 64 à 82.

¹⁰⁶ Wolfe, « Settler colonialism and the elimination of the native » (voir note de bas de page 11).

¹⁰⁷ Musa Ismael Basit, « The Israeli curriculum and the Palestinian national identity in Jerusalem », Palestine-Israel Journal, vol. 22, n° 4 (2017).

n'adhéreraient pas aux politiques préconisées par Israël en matière de programmation scolaire¹⁰⁸, et la conversion ou la fermeture de sites représentatifs de l'identité culturelle, politique et religieuse de la Palestine¹⁰⁹.

55. Les attaques perpétrées à l'encontre de biens culturels importants dans le but d'éliminer toutes traces et manifestations de l'existence palestinienne, de même que les tentatives de réécrire l'histoire pour justifier des revendications (sans fondements) de souveraineté dans le territoire palestinien occupé, sont la preuve de l'intention de l'occupant de dépouiller définitivement la terre de son identité d'origine.

F. Opposition à l'existence (et à la résistance) politique

56. La survie de tout peuple, en tant que collectivité et qu'entité politique, repose sur le respect de son droit à l'autodétermination. Depuis 1967, Israël ne cesse, pour maintenir sa domination, de perpétrer des violations des droits humains, procédant notamment à des exécutions extrajudiciaires, des détentions et des emprisonnements arbitraires (y compris de représentants élus), des révocations de résidence et des expulsions massives, y compris de personnalités politiques se trouvant hors du territoire palestinien occupé. Ces violations entravent la formation organique et le bon fonctionnement d'une entité politique de direction palestinienne cohésive et, partant, l'exercice, par les Palestiniens, de leur droit à l'autodétermination.

57. Décrits comme des terroristes, de nombreux dirigeants politiques palestiniens et des défenseurs de leur cause auraient été tués pour les messages qu'ils cherchaient à faire passer et leur effet potentiel sur la formation d'une idéologie politique palestinienne¹¹⁰. Ce qui avait commencé, dans les années 1960, comme des manœuvres de sécurité destinées à enrayer des « opérations terroristes » s'est transformé, au fil des ans, en une politique d'assassinats visant non seulement les auteurs d'attaques de ce type, mais aussi les dirigeants politiques d'organisations désignées par Israël comme terroristes¹¹¹. De nombreux membres de l'OLP ont notamment été visés, alors même que l'ONU et, par la suite, Israël avaient reconnu l'organisation comme étant le « représentant légitime du peuple palestinien », en 1974 pour la première et en 1993 pour le second. Il semblerait qu'Israël commette des assassinats ciblés – exécutions extrajudiciaires – comme stratégie politique lui permettant d'éviter les négociations¹¹². C'est là l'approche qui aurait été suivie lors de la seconde intifada, durant laquelle 300 Palestiniens accusés de terrorisme ont été tués délibérément, faisant 150 victimes civiles supplémentaires¹¹³.

58. Personnel humanitaire et journalistes figurent régulièrement parmi les victimes du recours généralisé à la force létale par Israël et l'impunité demeure omniprésente. L'assassinat de la journaliste palestinienne Shireen Abu Akleh, alors qu'elle couvrait ¹⁰⁸ « Education minister revokes licences of 6 East Jerusalem schools for incitement », Times of Israel, 28 juillet 2022.

¹⁰⁹ Luma Zayad, « Systematic cultural appropriation and the Israeli-Palestinian conflict », DePaul Journal of Art Technology and Intellectual Property Law, vol. 28, n° 2 (2018), p. 81 ; Mahmoud Hawari, « Capturing the castle: archaeology, architectural history and political bias at the Citadel of Jerusalem », Jerusalem Quarterly, n° 55 (2013); Mahmoud Hawari, « The Citadel of Jerusalem: a case study in the cultural appropriation of archaeology in Palestine », Present Pasts vol. 2, n° 1 (2010) ; Tom Abowd, « The Moroccan Quarter: a history of the present », Jerusalem Quarterly, n° 7 (2000).

¹¹⁰ Eyal Weizman, Hollow Land: Israel's Architecture of Occupation (Londres : Verso Books, 2012).

¹¹¹ Ronen Bergman, Rise and Kill First: The Secret History of Israel's Targeted Assassinations (New York : Random House Publishing Group, 2019).

¹¹² Weizman, Hollow Land: Israel's Architecture of Occupation (voir note de bas de page 110).

¹¹³ Noura Erakat, « Extrajudicial executions from the United States to Palestine », Just Security, 7 août 2020.

un raid israélien mené dans le camp de Jénine, le 11 mai 2022, reste impuni, en dépit des nombreuses enquêtes ayant mené à la conclusion que la journaliste avait été touchée par des tirs de soldats israéliens¹¹⁴.

59. Israël continue d'emprisonner des ministres de l'Autorité palestinienne, des maires, des enseignants, des défenseurs des droits humains et des représentants de la société civile. Dix membres du Conseil législatif palestinien auraient ainsi été incarcérés au cours de la seule année 2020. Cette pratique d'arrestations arbitraires massives, se traduisant notamment par des internements administratifs sans inculpation ni jugement, s'est encore accentuée depuis que les Palestiniens se sont mis à protester contre la construction illégale du mur de séparation en Cisjordanie et à Jérusalem-Est¹¹⁵. Près de 4 500 Palestiniens se trouvent actuellement en détention, dont 730 n'ont fait l'objet d'aucune inculpation et ont été arrêtés en grande partie sur la base d'éléments de preuves confidentiels. Des enfants âgés d'à peine 12 ans sont victimes d'arrestations et de détentions arbitraires ; ainsi, entre 500 et 700 mineurs sont détenus chaque année¹¹⁶. De nombreuses personnes accusées d'être des chefs de file de la résistance, telles que des fonctionnaires, des chefs et des militants religieux, des avocats, des journalistes et des étudiants engagés dans des activités politiques, ont été expulsées vers la bande de Gaza¹¹⁷. La déportation des élus, le fait d'empêcher les Palestiniens de voter et l'ingérence dans la politique palestinienne sont autant de facteurs entravant la prise d'initiatives et la manifestation d'une volonté politique indépendante de la part de la Palestine, qui seraient susceptibles de mettre à mal les intérêts coloniaux d'Israël¹¹⁸.

60. Les organisations de la société civile et les défenseurs des droits humains sont également la cible de la répression exercée par Israël. S'appuyant sur l'utilisation de logiciels espions à grande échelle pour surveiller les dispositifs de militants et défenseurs des droits humains, au moyen notamment du programme Pegasus, désormais exporté et utilisé dans le monde entier, Israël a réduit la marge de manœuvre politique des Palestiniens¹¹⁹. En 2021, six organisations de bonne réputation de la société civile palestinienne, œuvrant en première ligne pour la justice internationale et l'application du principe de responsabilité dans le territoire palestinien occupé, ont été désignées par Israël, sans preuve aucune, comme des « organisations terroristes ». En août 2022, les locaux de ces organisations ont été fouillés et ont fait l'objet d'un ordre de fermeture de la part d'Israël, tandis que plusieurs des principaux dirigeants de ces entités étaient convoqués et menacés. Il semble s'agir là d'une tentative de limiter encore davantage, voire de les réduire à néant, les possibilités de surveillance du respect des droits humains et d'opposition légale à l'occupation israélienne dans le territoire palestinien¹²⁰, au moyen d'une interprétation abusive de la législation antiterroriste¹²¹. Les organisations concernées étant pleinement engagées dans l'affaire de la Cour pénale internationale relative à la situation dans l'État de Palestine, il est possible qu'Israël, en s'attaquant à elles et à leurs travaux, détruise ou falsifie des éléments de preuve de crimes de guerre et de ¹¹⁴ Voir, par exemple, HCDH, « Meurtre d'une journaliste dans le territoire palestinien occupé », 24 juin 2022.

¹¹⁵ Addameer, Administrative detention fact sheet 2022 (20 janvier 2022).

¹¹⁶ Defense for Children International Palestine, « Number of Palestinian children (12-17) in Israeli military detention », 14 juin 2022. Disponible à l'adresse www.dci-palestine.org/children_in_israeli_detention.

¹¹⁷ Miftah, fiche d'information, « The Palestinian Exodus » (2002).

¹¹⁸ Ibid.

¹¹⁹ Front Line Defenders, « Six Palestinian human rights defenders hacked with NSO Group's Pegasus Spyware », 8 novembre 2021.

¹²⁰ Michael Kearney, « Lawfare, legitimacy and resistance: the weak and the law », Palestine Yearbook of International Law, vol. 16, n° 1 (2010).

¹²¹ A/HRC/40/52 (2019).

crimes contre l'humanité, faits absolument interdits par le droit pénal international, ou entrave le rassemblement de tels éléments¹²², ce qui constituerait une atteinte à l'administration de la justice par la Cour pénale.

61. La perpétration d'attaques contre des défenseurs et défenseuses des droits humains et des humanitaires est bien trop fréquente dans le territoire palestinien occupé. Salah Hammouri, un avocat franco-palestinien de Jérusalem, est par exemple soumis à des actes de harcèlement et fait l'objet d'arrestations et de détentions arbitraires depuis l'âge de 16 ans. Placé en détention sans chef d'inculpation ni procès le 7 mars 2022, au motif d'allégations de terrorisme, Hammouri risque de perdre son droit de résidence à Jérusalem pour manquement à l'allégeance envers Israël¹²³. Ce scénario créerait un dangereux précédent, car ce serait la première fois qu'un Jérusalémite se verrait privé de sa résidence sur la base de preuves confidentielles ayant trait à la protection de la sécurité nationale. On retiendra également le cas de Mohammed al-Halabi, travailleur humanitaire œuvrant pour le compte de World Vision dans la bande de Gaza, qui a été condamné, après six ans et plus de 160 audiences au tribunal, pour avoir détourné des fonds de l'organisation au profit du Hamas et pour d'autres crimes relevant du terrorisme, une condamnation reposant en grande partie sur des éléments de preuve tenus secrets et prononcée alors même qu'une enquête externe n'avait conduit à la découverte d'aucune preuve de méfaits¹²⁴.

62. Les attaques incessantes dont sont victimes les Palestiniens, de même que l'opposition à toutes manifestations politiques voire à toute résistance légale de leur part, ont été jugées comme s'apparentant à des actes de persécution¹²⁵, lesquels limitent in fine la capacité de ces personnes à se développer en tant que peuple.

G. Refus du statut d'État – « Négocier l'illégal » ?

63. En vertu du droit de la responsabilité des États, la violation d'une obligation internationale par un État constitue un fait internationalement illicite¹²⁶, auquel l'État responsable est avant tout tenu de mettre immédiatement fin, tout en offrant des assurances de non-répétition et en réparant le préjudice causé¹²⁷. Il s'ensuit qu'une violation du droit international ne devrait pas faire l'objet de négociations, car cela reviendrait à légitimer quelque chose d'illégal¹²⁸. Ainsi, l'occupation israélienne étant – de par sa nature prolongée, inextinguible et entachée de mauvaise foi – illégale, l'obligation d'y mettre fin ne peut en aucun cas faire l'objet de négociations¹²⁹.

64. Depuis le début du processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, marqué par la Conférence de Madrid de 1991, les principaux acteurs politiques concernés (en particulier le Quatuor pour le Moyen-Orient) plaident pour la tenue de négociations bilatérales en faveur de la paix. Dans la Déclaration d'indépendance de la Palestine de 1988, l'OLP avait déjà dû céder à l'inévitabilité d'une solution basée sur le compromis, son acceptation des résolutions 242 (1967) et 338 (1973) du Conseil de sécurité étant vue comme un consentement à l'idée que les revendications de ¹²² Statut de la CPI (1998), alinéa 1) c) de l'article 70.

¹²³ Addameer, « Salah Hammouri », 8 septembre 2022.

¹²⁴ Amnesty International, « Israël et territoires palestiniens occupés. La condamnation du travailleur humanitaire Mohammed al Halabi doit être annulée » (16 juin 2022).

¹²⁵ Human Rights Watch, A Threshold Crossed (voir note de bas de page 5), p. 170.

¹²⁶ CDI, projet d'articles sur la responsabilité de l'État pour fait internationalement illicite, alinéas a) et b) de l'article 2.

¹²⁷ Ibid. alinéas a) et b) de l'article 30 et 1) et 2) de l'article 31.

¹²⁸ Imseis, « Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967-2020 » (voir note de bas de page 8), p. 1068.

¹²⁹ Ibid.

souveraineté du peuple palestinien étaient limitées au seul territoire palestinien occupé¹³⁰. Les Accords d'Oslo, que beaucoup considèrent comme la référence pour ce qui est de résoudre le conflit israélo-palestinien par la reconnaissance du statut d'État, dans le respect des lignes d'armistice de 1949, n'ont permis ni de réaliser le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination ni d'avancer sur la question. Ces accords, qui faisaient de la réalisation du droit à l'autodétermination – après une période d'autonomie provisoire – l'objectif final des efforts de rétablissement de la paix, reposaient sur la reconnaissance mutuelle de l'État d'Israël et de l'OLP (et non de l'État de Palestine, tel qu'il avait été déclaré en 1988)¹³¹, mais l'autonomie palestinienne n'y était prévue que dans certaines parties de la Cisjordanie et de la bande de Gaza, tandis que les « droits légitimes et politiques » des Palestiniens ne seraient reconnus que dans le territoire palestinien occupé¹³². Dans la pratique, ceux-ci laissaient ouverte la possibilité d'étendre à perpétuité un système dans lequel la Palestine bénéficiait d'une certaine autonomie sans pour autant que son indépendance soit reconnue et, point essentiel, ils permettaient à Israël de conserver un contrôle total sur 61 % de la Cisjordanie¹³³.

65. Le droit à l'autodétermination demeure une norme fondamentale du droit international, dont le respect doit être garanti par la communauté des États dans son ensemble. En vertu du droit international, les accords spéciaux, au sens de la IV^e Convention de Genève, ne sauraient ni violer des droits impératifs, ni déroger aux droits des « personnes protégées » sous occupation ou les nier¹³⁴. Compte tenu du caractère impératif de cette norme, les Accords d'Oslo ne peuvent pas limiter le droit à l'autodétermination des Palestiniens. Il est inacceptable qu'une norme impérative de droit international général de ce type soit remise en question dans le cadre de négociations, surtout si l'on considère l'asymétrie du pouvoir de négociation entre l'occupant et l'occupé (c'est-à-dire entre le colonisateur et le colonisé)¹³⁵. Toute interprétation des Accords d'Oslo qui conduirait à nier le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien rendrait cet instrument discutable, voire invalide¹³⁶.

66. En réalité, toute solution permettant la poursuite de l'occupation et dans laquelle ne sont pas reconnues les différences de pouvoir entre les Palestiniens, peuple assujéti, et l'État d'Israël, Puissance occupante, et qui ne s'attaque pas une fois pour toutes au colonialisme de peuplement israélien, représente une violation du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination, entre autres dispositions essentielles du droit international.

¹³⁰ Conseil national palestinien, « Déclaration d'indépendance de la Palestine », Algérie, 15 novembre 1988.

¹³¹ Échange de lettres entre le Président de l'OLP, Yasser Arafat, le Premier Ministre israélien, Yitzhak Rabin, et le Ministre norvégien des affaires étrangères, Johan Holst (1993). Disponible à l'adresse www.un.org/unispal/document/auto-insert-205528/.

¹³² Israël et OLP, « Déclaration de principes sur des arrangements intérimaires d'autonomie (Oslo I) » (1993).

¹³³ Au titre des Accords d'Oslo, la Cisjordanie a été divisée en une zone A (placée sous le contrôle civil et sécuritaire exclusif de l'Autorité palestinienne), une zone B (placée sous le contrôle civil de l'Autorité palestinienne et sous contrôle sécuritaire conjoint israélo-palestinien) et une zone C (placée sous le contrôle civil et militaire complet d'Israël).

¹³⁴ ICC-01/18(2021), par. 25.

¹³⁵ Imseis, « Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967-2020 » (voir note de bas de page 8), p. 1065.

¹³⁶ CPI, Asem Khalil and Halla Shoaibi, affaire n° ICC-01/18-73 (2020), par. 71.

V. Changement de paradigme

67. Cela fait plus de 55 ans qu'Israël, de par son occupation militaire du territoire, empêche la réalisation du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination, tentant de « dé-palestiniser » le territoire occupé (c'est-à-dire d'y réduire la présence, l'identité et la résilience des Palestiniens) et d'en transformer la majeure partie en une extension permanente de son territoire métropolitain, dans laquelle vivraient le moins de Palestiniens possible. Ces tentatives, qui rappellent un passé colonial fermement condamné dans le monde entier il y a plusieurs décennies, ont pris de plus en plus d'ampleur, la communauté internationale y consentant tacitement et n'obligeant pas Israël à répondre de ses actes.

68. Le respect du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, élément essentiel de la lutte pour la décolonisation, n'est presque plus jamais mentionné sur la scène politique et humanitaire internationale, surtout dans le contexte de la « normalisation » des relations diplomatiques avec Israël, et ce malgré les appels que continuent de lancer des défenseurs et défenseuses des droits humains, des universitaires et des représentants de la société civile. Il semblerait que, pour certains, la mention de ce droit s'apparente plus à un slogan idéologique qu'à une réalité juridique s'accompagnant de responsabilités précises.

69. Dans le même temps, l'occupation s'est encore aggravée, avec la modification systématique et forcée par Israël du statut juridique, du caractère et de la composition démographique du territoire palestinien occupé. En ne remettant pas en question ces agissements, les approches adoptées à des fins « humanitaires », « politiques » et « de développement économique » du territoire palestinien occupé ont en réalité pour effet de normaliser l'occupation¹³⁷ et portent atteinte à la pertinence des fonctions de régulation et de réparation du droit international.

70. Il faut que les choses bougent. Seul un changement de paradigme, à savoir la mise en place d'une solution fondée sur le respect de l'histoire et du droit international, permettra de surmonter cette situation. Cette dernière ne pourra être résolue qu'en assurant le respect de la norme fondamentale qu'est le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et en reconnaissant l'illégalité absolue du colonialisme de peuplement et de la situation d'apartheid dans laquelle ont été plongés les Palestiniens en raison de l'occupation prolongée du territoire palestinien occupé. Compte tenu des visées de colonisation de l'occupation, celle-ci doit être considérée tout autrement, la communauté internationale devant par ailleurs revoir son discours.

71. Pour ce faire, il importe avant tout de reconnaître que le territoire palestinien occupé est actuellement soumis à un régime intentionnellement acquisitif, ségrégationniste et répressif, qui, depuis 55 ans, permet à Israël de priver les Palestiniens de leurs droits, les enfermant dans des Bantoustans avec pour seule compagnie de douloureux souvenirs de liens brisés et d'espairs envolés, l'objectif ultime étant d'asseoir la domination d'Israël, minorité, sur des terres usurpées à une majorité autochtone par la force, l'adoption de politiques abusives et discriminatoires, et le pillage des ressources. Le maintien d'une situation d'occupation sans fin, pour de prétendues « raisons de sécurité » dissimulant un dessein colonial de la part d'Israël et une volonté de supprimer le droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien et de s'appropriier le territoire, toujours plus réduit, de celui-ci – objectifs dont ne se cachent pas les personnalités politiques israéliennes –, est quelque chose que la communauté internationale ne peut plus tolérer. Il s'agit d'une question devant être abordée de manière globale.

¹³⁷ Daniela Huber, « The EU and 50 years of occupation: resistant to or complicit with normalization », Middle East Critique, vol. 27, n° 4 (2018), p. 351 à 364.

72. Cette occupation en elle-même supposant un emploi illégal de la force, elle peut être considérée, au regard du droit à l'autodétermination externe, comme un acte d'agression. Or, les actes d'agression constituent une violation du jus ad bellum et ne peuvent donc être justifiés, comme le fait souvent Israël, au motif qu'il s'agit d'actes de légitime défense « préventive ». Ces actions entraînent des conséquences en vertu de la Charte des Nations Unies et du droit de la responsabilité des États. Au vu de ces graves violations du droit international, il est a) impératif et non négociable que les forces israéliennes se retirent immédiatement du territoire occupé, afin que le peuple palestinien autochtone puisse recouvrer sa souveraineté, et b) nécessaire que les mesures de réparations voulues soient prises en vue d'avancer sur la voie de la justice et de la paix, tant pour les Palestiniens que pour les Israéliens.

VI. Observations finales

73. Les violations dont il est fait état dans le présent rapport mettent en lumière la nature de l'occupation israélienne, à savoir celle d'un régime intentionnellement acquisitif, ségrégationniste et répressif, conçu pour empêcher la réalisation du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination. Depuis 1967, Israël viole, de façon délibérée et intentionnelle, le droit à l'autodétermination des Palestiniens présents dans le territoire palestinien occupé, en les empêchant d'exercer leur souveraineté territoriale sur les ressources naturelles, en gommant leur identité culturelle et en réprimant leurs tentatives d'affirmation politique et de résistance. En bref, les agissements d'Israël dans les territoires palestiniens occupés sont indissociablement liés au colonialisme de peuplement. Le fait qu'Israël se soit emparé du territoire occupé, l'ait annexé et fragmenté et y ait transféré sa population civile constitue une violation de la souveraineté territoriale palestinienne ; l'extraction et l'exploitation des ressources des Palestiniens au bénéfice de parties tierces, dont les « colons », violent la souveraineté de ce peuple sur les ressources naturelles nécessaires au développement d'une économie indépendante ; l'élimination de symboles représentatifs de l'identité palestinienne ou leur appropriation par la Puissance occupante met en danger l'existence culturelle du peuple palestinien ; la répression, par la Puissance occupante, de l'activité politique et des efforts de plaidoyer et de militantisme des Palestiniens entrave la capacité de ces personnes à s'organiser en tant que peuple, sans contrôle extérieur ni domination étrangère.

74. Pour permettre au peuple palestinien de réaliser son droit inaliénable à l'autodétermination, il est absolument nécessaire de mettre fin, une bonne fois pour toutes, à l'occupation coloniale israélienne et aux pratiques d'apartheid. Le droit international ne laisse place à aucun doute sur cette question. Le seul moyen de parvenir à une solution qui soit juste, équitable et efficace est de mettre l'accent sur la décolonisation, afin de permettre au peuple palestinien de décider librement de la trajectoire qu'il souhaite prendre et de se développer sur les plans social, économique et culturel, en même temps que ses voisins israéliens. La communauté internationale doit reconnaître la véritable nature de l'occupation israélienne dans le territoire palestinien occupé, à savoir celle d'une colonisation de peuplement, et honorer les obligations que lui impose le droit international en aidant le peuple palestinien à réaliser pleinement son droit à l'autodétermination.

75. Le « processus de paix » au Moyen-Orient et les tentatives de rétablissement de la paix menées ensuite auprès des deux parties n'ont pas porté leurs fruits, les approches adoptées n'étant pas axées sur le respect des droits humains, en particulier le droit à l'autodétermination, et ne tenant pas compte des motifs coloniaux à l'origine de l'occupation israélienne. Comme l'a montré le processus d'Oslo, aucune négociation de paix engagée sur une base politique ne pourra aboutir à moins de permettre aux Palestiniens de se soustraire à leur statut de subordination, ce qui suppose d'entraver les efforts de colonisation d'Israël. La fin de l'occupation coloniale est la condition sine qua non pour que les Palestiniens n'aient plus à négocier les conditions de leur assujettissement et puissent jouir de leur droit à l'autodétermination dans le territoire palestinien occupé.

76. Norme impérative du droit international créant des obligations erga omnes, le droit à l'autodétermination ne peut faire l'objet d'aucune dérogation, quelle qu'elle soit. Le refus de laisser au peuple palestinien le droit de décider lui-même de sa trajectoire étant intentionnel et inhérent à l'occupation coloniale israélienne, l'application inébranlable du droit à l'autodétermination externe et du droit relatif à l'emploi de la force doit être la pierre angulaire de toute solution. En vertu du droit international, force dont le rôle est de garantir l'exercice de la justice, Israël a le devoir de libérer le peuple palestinien du joug qu'elle lui a imposé et est tenu de renoncer à chercher à exercer, de façon illégale, sa souveraineté sur des portions du territoire palestinien occupé. En découle une obligation pour Israël de se retirer sans condition ni réserve. Les États tiers ne peuvent reconnaître comme légitime la situation illégale créée par les actes internationalement illicites d'Israël, ni y contribuer ou l'encourager. Le fait de permettre à Israël de faire fi du droit international et de son obligation de rendre des comptes ne l'incite pas à mettre fin à ses agissements et favorise une culture de l'impunité. L'exceptionnalisme manifesté à l'égard d'Israël non seulement sape l'efficacité du droit international, mais ternit également l'image, la fiabilité et le rôle de la communauté internationale et de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, y compris ses organes judiciaires.

VII. Recommandations

77. La Rapporteuse spéciale recommande au Gouvernement israélien de se conformer aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu du droit international et de cesser d'entraver la réalisation du droit à l'autodétermination du peuple palestinien, en mettant fin immédiatement et sans condition à son occupation coloniale du territoire palestinien et en se rachetant pour les infractions commises.

78. La Rapporteuse spéciale recommande à tous les États :

a) De condamner les violations intentionnelles par Israël du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination, y compris par des pratiques de colonisation de peuplement. À cette fin, il est nécessaire que :

i) Les États exigent qu'il soit immédiatement mis fin à l'occupation israélienne illégale et que toutes les terres et ressources dont le peuple palestinien a été dépossédé, notamment dans le cadre d'expulsions, lui soient restituées, en veillant à ce que la question du retrait d'Israël ne puisse être considérée comme un sujet devant faire l'objet de négociations entre les deux parties ;

ii) L'Assemblée générale élabore un plan pour mettre fin à la politique israélienne d'occupation coloniale et d'apartheid ;

iii) Les États soient disposés à prendre les mesures diplomatiques, économiques et politiques prévues dans la Charte des Nations Unies en cas de non-respect de ses obligations par Israël ;

b) De déployer une force internationale de protection dans le territoire palestinien occupé pour y limiter les actes de violence, qui sont monnaie courante, et défendre la population palestinienne, conformément au rapport du

Secrétaire général sur la protection de la population civile palestinienne (A/ES-10/794) ;

c) De prendre les mesures voulues pour garantir la tenue d'une enquête approfondie, indépendante et transparente sur toutes les violations du droit international des droits humains et du droit international humanitaire commises dans le territoire palestinien occupé, notamment celles qui constituent des crimes contre l'humanité ou des crimes de guerre potentiels ou qui se rapportent au crime d'agression. La Rapporteuse spéciale recommande en outre à la communauté internationale de faire en sorte que les auteurs de ces crimes aient à répondre de leurs actes, à la fois par l'intermédiaire de la CPI, dans le cadre de son enquête en cours sur la situation en Palestine, et au moyen de mécanismes de compétence universelle ;

d) De prendre les mesures requises pour prévenir la commission de violations des droits humains par toutes les entreprises domiciliées sur leur territoire ou placées sous leur juridiction, et dans le cas où des tels actes se produisent, pour enquêter à leur sujet et réparer les préjudices causés, en adoptant les politiques nécessaires pour régler la conduite des entreprises dans le territoire palestinien occupé, notamment en ce qui concerne le désengagement des colonies et l'offre d'un recours effectif aux victimes.

79. La Rapporteuse spéciale recommande au Haut-Commissaire aux droits de l'homme de publier sans délai la base de données actualisée des entreprises mêlées aux colonies (résolution 31/36 du Conseil des droits de l'homme).

80. La Rapporteuse spéciale appuie sans réserve la Commission internationale indépendante chargée d'enquêter dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et en Israël, et l'encourage à enquêter sur le statut du droit à l'autodétermination et sur les efforts de colonisation de peuplement déployés par Israël de manière plus approfondie que ce qu'elle-même est en mesure de le faire dans les limites territoriales et géographiques de son mandat.

Assemblée générale

Distr. générale
31 août 2005
Français
Original: anglais

Soixantième session

Point 73 c) de l'ordre du jour provisoire*

Questions relatives aux droits de l'homme : situations relatives aux droits de l'homme et rapports des rapporteurs
et représentants spéciaux

Rapport du Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme – question des femmes palestiniennes enceintes accouchant aux points de contrôle israéliens

1. Le présent rapport est soumis en application de la résolution 2005/7 de la Commission des droits de l'homme en date du 14 avril 2005, intitulée « Pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme du peuple palestinien dans le territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est », dont le paragraphe 4 se lit comme suit :

« La Commission des droits de l'homme,

...

4. Prie la Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies aux droits de l'homme de se pencher sur la question des femmes palestiniennes enceintes accouchant aux points de contrôle israéliens du fait du refus par Israël d'autoriser leur accès aux hôpitaux, dans le but de mettre fin à cette pratique israélienne inhumaine, et d'en rendre compte à l'Assemblée générale à sa soixantième session et à la Commission à sa soixante-deuxième session; »

2. Le 21 juillet 2005, le Secrétaire général a adressé à la Mission permanente d'Israël et à la Mission permanente d'observation de la Palestine auprès de l'Office des Nations Unies à Genève des notes verbales dans lesquelles il indiquait qu'il souhaiterait recevoir toute information concernant l'application de la résolution susmentionnée. Au moment de la rédaction du présent rapport, aucune réponse n'avait été reçue.

3. En outre, le Haut Commissariat aux droits de l'homme a adressé le 21 juillet 2005 des lettres aux entités et institutions spécialisées des Nations Unies suivantes, présentes dans le territoire palestinien occupé : le Bureau de la coordination des affaires humanitaires, le Fonds des Nations Unies pour la population (FNUAP), le Fonds des Nations Unies pour l'enfance (UNICEF), le Fonds de développement des Nations Unies pour la femme (UNIFEM), l'Office de secours et de travaux des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés de Palestine dans le Proche-Orient (UNRWA), le Bureau du Coordonnateur spécial des Nations Unies pour le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, le Programme alimentaire mondial (PAM) et l'Organisation mondiale de la santé (OMS).

* A/60/150.

 La publication du présent rapport a été retardée de manière à présenter des informations aussi actualisées que possible.

4. Le Haut Commissariat aux droits de l'homme a reçu en août 2005 des informations du FNUAP, de l'UNRWA et de l'OMS. Cette dernière citait des statistiques du Ministère palestinien de la santé selon lesquelles 61 femmes avaient accouché aux points de contrôle de septembre 2000 à décembre 2004, ce qui avait entraîné la mort de 36 nouveau-nés. Le détail de ces chiffres par année est le suivant : en 2000-2001, 31 femmes ont accouché aux postes de contrôle et 17 nouveau-nés sont morts; en 2002, 16 femmes ont accouché dans les mêmes conditions et 11 nouveau-nés sont morts; ces chiffres sont descendus en 2003 à 8 accouchements aux points de contrôle et à 3 décès à la naissance, et en 2004 à 6 accouchements aux points de contrôle et à 5 décès.

5. Selon les chiffres de l'UNRWA, qui ne sont pas encore clôturés pour l'année en cours, dans la bande de Gaza, sur huit femmes enceintes transportées à l'hôpital, une a accouché dans une ambulance de la Société du Croissant-Rouge palestinien bloquée au point de contrôle. Une autre, que l'on emmenait à l'hôpital à cause de problèmes au sixième mois de sa grossesse, a avorté dans une ambulance de la Société du Croissant-Rouge palestinien retenue pendant une heure à un point de contrôle avant d'être autorisée à poursuivre sa route.

6. Selon les mêmes sources, 15 femmes enceintes en 2004 et huit autres en 2005 ont été retardées aux points de contrôle de la bande de Gaza alors qu'on les emmenait à l'hôpital dans une ambulance de la Société du Croissant-Rouge palestinien. Ces retards allaient d'une heure à deux heures et demie et s'allongeaient lors des évacuations des cas d'urgence des zones fermées telles que Seafa et Mahata; ces patientes étaient d'abord emmenées en ambulance jusqu'aux points de contrôle puis transférées dans une seconde ambulance qui attendait de l'autre côté. Selon certaines sources, ces transferts devaient être coordonnés au préalable avec les Forces de défense israéliennes (FDI) après les heures d'ouverture des points de contrôle.

7. Pour sa part, le FNUAP a indiqué qu'en raison du renforcement des procédures de sécurité aux points de contrôle et de la construction de la barrière de séparation, les Palestiniens avaient beaucoup plus difficilement accès aux hôpitaux et autres établissements médicaux. Depuis 2001, le Fonds a enregistré plus de 70 cas de femmes en couches retardées aux points de contrôle et parfois contraintes à un accouchement non accompagné et risqué au bord de la route, ce qui a entraîné la mort de mères et de nouveau-nés.

8. Le Ministère palestinien de la santé a signalé que les accouchements à domicile avaient augmenté de 7,9 % en Cisjordanie en 2005 (contre 0,5 % dans la bande de Gaza), ce qui indique que les femmes palestiniennes préfèrent accoucher chez elles et ne pas prendre le risque d'être retardées aux points de contrôle avec les conséquences éventuelles. Cette information a été confirmée par le FNUAP.

9. Plusieurs témoignages de femmes palestiniennes enceintes qui auraient été retenues à des points de contrôle par des militaires israéliens ont été portés à l'attention du Haut Commissariat aux droits de l'homme. Un de ces témoignages concernait la mort d'une nouveau-née survenue en août 2003 à un point de contrôle près du village de Salem, dans le gouvernorat de Naplouse. La mère avait accouché avec l'aide du père, qui avait dû couper le cordon ombilical à l'aide d'une pierre, alors qu'ils attendaient de l'autre côté du point de contrôle une seconde ambulance qui devait les emmener à l'hôpital.

10. Selon certaines informations, même si les ambulances étaient autorisées à franchir les points de contrôle pendant le couvre-feu à condition d'en avoir averti au préalable les Forces de défense israéliennes, elles étaient souvent retardées et contraintes d'emprunter des routes secondaires et lorsque les ambulances n'étaient pas autorisées à passer, les femmes enceintes devaient être transférées dans une seconde ambulance de l'autre côté du point de contrôle.

11. Selon plusieurs sources, beaucoup de femmes enceintes du territoire palestinien occupé craignent de ne pas pouvoir atteindre l'hôpital à temps pour accoucher. Le problème est plus grave encore dans les zones rurales, en particulier pour les femmes vivant dans des villages séparés des villes où se trouvent les hôpitaux par des points de contrôle. Le trajet pour aller à l'hôpital peut durer plusieurs heures même s'il n'y a que quelques kilomètres à parcourir. Il est impossible de le faire de nuit, durant les couvre-feux ou les incursions militaires. D'autres sources indiquent que plus de 30 % des femmes accouchent chez elles, ce qui augmente le risque de complications et de décès de mères ou de nouveau-nés. De plus en plus de femmes palestiniennes demandent une césarienne parce qu'elles éprouvent de l'appréhension et par crainte de ne pas pouvoir bénéficier d'un traitement médical approprié.

12. Le Haut Commissariat aux droits de l'homme et son bureau en Palestine continueront à recueillir des informations sur la question des femmes palestiniennes enceintes accouchant aux points de contrôle israéliens, en collaboration avec les organismes représentés dans l'équipe de pays des Nations Unies.