32. The Committee was appreciative of the work of the Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). In July, the Ministry of Planning of the Palestinian Authority and the Programme office agreed to coordinate the issuance of a Palestinian national poverty report. The Programme, together with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Ministry of Planning, was also establishing a uniform system for monitoring the Millennium Development Goals and the progress made towards the "A world fit for children" declaration and the National Plan of Action for Palestinian Children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Donor countries have continued to finance various projects, such as the rehabilitation of municipal structures; the restoration of the devastated agricultural sector; the paving of roads; the upgrading of the water supply; the construction of new schools and additional classrooms; and the protection of cultural and architectural heritage.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/28

33. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others, as indicated below.

1. Action taken in the General Assembly and the Security Council

34. On 11 November 2004, the General Assembly met to pay tribute to the memory of Yasser Arafat, late President of the Palestinian Authority. The Chairman of the Committee took part in the tribute and made a statement (A/59/PV.52).

35. During the period under review, the Security Council has continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. Throughout the year, the Council held monthly briefings under the agenda item entitled "The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question".

36. The Security Council met on 4 October 2004, at the request of the Permanent Representative of Tunisia in his capacity as Chairman of the Group of Arab States for the month of October (see S/2004/779). The Vice-Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Farhâdi, took part in the debate and made a statement (see S/PV.5049). At its 5051st meeting, on 5 October 2004, the Council voted on a draft resolution submitted by Algeria, Pakistan and Tunisia (S/2004/783). The result of the vote was 11 votes in favour, 1 against and 3 abstentions. The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member of the Council (see S/PV.5051).

37. The Security Council met on 21 July 2005, at the request of the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of Kuwait in his capacity as Chairman of the Group of Arab States for the month of July (see S/2005/469). The Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Badji, took part in the debate and made a statement (see S/PV.5230 (RESUMPTION1)).

2. Communications to the Secretary-General

38. The Chairman of the Committee has continued to bring the Committee's concerns about the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, to the attention of the Secretary-General (see A/ES-10/301-S/2005/262; A/ES-10/306-S/2005/556).

3. Statements by the Committee

39. On 11 November 2004, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement concerning the passing of President Arafat (see GA/PAL/970).

40. On 30 August 2005, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement concerning the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank (GA/PAL/990).

4. Participation by the Chairman of the Committee in international conferences and meetings

41. During the year, the Chairman of the Committee participated in events organized by civil society in support of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and contributed to their deliberations. The Chairman participated in the Peace in Palestine Conference, held from 28 to 30 March 2005 in Putrajaya, Malaysia.

42. As in previous years, the Committee continued to monitor the activities of other intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine, as well as the decisions and resolutions adopted by United Nations bodies and agencies.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 59/28 and 59/29

1. Programme of international meetings and conferences

43. In its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee addressed issues such as the application of international law to all aspects of the question of Palestine; the significance and impact of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice; the resumption of the political process and the implementation of the road map; the effects of the settlement policy and the construction of the wall on efforts to achieve a two-State solution; the need to protect the Palestinian people; and the further involvement of civil society.

44. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, United Nations Office at Geneva, 8 and 9 March 2005;

(b) Consultations with civil society, United Nations Office at Geneva, 10 March 2005;

(c) United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Middle East Peace, UNESCO Headquarters, Paris, 12 and 13 July 2005.

45. All of the above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as experts, representatives of the media, academics and students. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the Division's website.

2. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

46. During the year, the Committee continued its close cooperation with the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, through the participation of the Chairman in their meetings and through periodic consultations at United Nations Headquarters.

47. The Committee continued its cooperation on the question of Palestine with States members of the European Union. The Bureau held consultations with representatives of the European Union in March 2005 (under the Presidency of Luxembourg) as part of the ongoing effort to build a constructive relationship with European Union members on issues of common concern.

3. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

48. The Committee expanded its cooperation with non-governmental organizations, academic institutions, think tanks and media representatives through the International Civil Society Conference held at UNESCO headquarters, formal and informal consultations with civil society representatives, participation in meetings organized by non-governmental organizations and the accreditation of new organizations. It received briefs on the activities of civil society organizations in various parts of the world, including in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in Israel, and expressed its appreciation for their useful work and commitment. It noted, in particular, the civil society initiatives against the construction of the wall that kept the focus of the general public on new facts on the ground brought about by the occupying Power. The Committee was deeply appreciative of the work done by many civil society organizations in providing emergency relief under the most difficult circumstances. It encouraged all of the organizations to continue their activities.

49. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with the national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms accredited to it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual non-governmental organizations. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity on 29 November 2004. In the period under review, the Committee also accredited eight new non-governmental organizations. Consultations between the delegation of the Committee and representatives of civil society organizations accredited to the Committee were held at the United Nations office at Geneva on 10 March, following the United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine. Participating representatives of non-governmental organizations provided information about their initiatives, campaigns and projects. The delegation of the Committee recommended to the representatives that their initiatives be based on international law, as set out in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, the Fourth Geneva Convention and on the resolutions of the Security Council and General Assembly. The Chairman of the Committee met throughout the year with representatives of civil society organizations in New York and at the meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee away from Headquarters. The Chairman also participated in the Peace in Palestine Conference held in Putrajaya, Malaysia, on the initiative of a Malaysian umbrella organization that brings together over 400 non-governmental organizations from 35 countries, mainly from Asia and the Pacific.

50. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained the Internet website “NGO Network on the Question of Palestine” as a permanent tool for mutual information and cooperation between civil society and the Committee. The website can be found at <http://www.un.org/depts/dpa/ngo>. The Division also continued to issue its bimonthly newsletter, NGO Action News, covering the activities of civil society on the various aspects of the question of Palestine.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

51. The Committee continued to develop its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations and invited a number of parliamentarians to speak at its meetings. In Geneva in March 2005, the delegation of the Committee paid a visit to the headquarters of the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) and met with its Secretary-General, Anders Johnsson. The Chairman of the Committee commended the IPU efforts in support of the Palestinian people, in particular in promoting a dialogue between Israeli and Palestinian parliamentarians. The IPU Secretary-General informed the Committee delegation of efforts by the IPU to assist the Palestinian Authority in finalizing the electoral law and strengthening the oversight role of the Palestinian Legislative Council, its budget committees and its activities in the field of human rights. It remained crucial for the IPU to bring together members of the Knesset and the Council. It was agreed to continue and expand the involvement of parliamentarians of different backgrounds in the meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee.

4. Research, monitoring and publications

52. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through UNISPAL:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by United Nations and intergovernmental organizations in relation to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of developments relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) Special bulletins and notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments relating to Middle East peace efforts;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

5. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

53. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop UNISPAL, pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates. This included the ongoing upgrading of technical components of the system to ensure its uninterrupted presence on the Internet, notably via the UNISPAL "Question of Palestine" interface on the United Nations home page, under "Peace and Security", and involved the expansion of the documents collection to include relevant new and old documents. In addition, steps were continued to enhance the user-friendliness of accessing and navigating the system

(<http://domino.un.org/unispal.nsf>) — including to facilitate “bookmarking” of documents on the situation of Palestinian women — as work for the graphic enhancement of the “Question of Palestine” site progressed.

6. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

54. Three staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority participated in a training programme conducted by the Division, from September to December 2004, in conjunction with the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly. The trainees familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other organs and conducted research on specific topics.

7. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

55. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna on 29 November 2004. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a solemn meeting of the Committee and other activities, an exhibit entitled “Steadfast in Palestine” was presented by the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

56. In adopting its programme of work, the Committee decided that a similar observance of the International Day of Solidarity should be organized in 2005.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/30

57. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/30 of 1 December 2004, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine. It used various tools to disseminate information on the question of Palestine to the international community.

58. The Department's television, radio, press, photo and Internet news operations regularly covered the question of Palestine, providing live and archived coverage of open meetings of the General Assembly, the Security Council and other intergovernmental bodies on the issue. They also covered other programmes and activities in which the situation was addressed.

59. The Arabic Radio Unit produced a number of programmes covering the activities of UNRWA, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East, UNICEF, UNDP, the United Nations Population Fund and other United Nations agencies working in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Unit also conducted interviews with Palestinian participants in various intergovernmental meetings, including the 10-year review of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (Beijing + 10) and the Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women. A sequential series of radio programmes produced in the Territory were placed on a special page on the Arabic Radio Unit website. The question of Palestine was also regularly covered in all other official languages, as well as in non-official languages, such as Bahasa Indonesia, Bangla, Hindi, Turkish and Urdu.

60. The United Nations website continued to host a page on the question of Palestine under the "Global Issues" site, as well as the "Peace and Security" and "Refugees" pages. Links are available to the UNISPAL database, as well as to the web pages created by the Department of Political Affairs. In addition, the Website Section webcast all meetings of the Security Council and the General Assembly and most press conferences on the question of Palestine held at United Nations Headquarters, which were available immediately afterwards as archived webcasts.

61. The question of Palestine and a broad range of developments relating to the situation in the Middle East were given extensive coverage by the United Nations News Centre website in all official languages. The Arabic website continued to gain visitors over the past 12 months, receiving over 193,000 visits and registering 849,000 page views on various pages and files within the site. The news stories on these issues were also distributed throughout the world to some 40,000 subscribers to the e-mail service of the United Nations News Service in English and French. A special "News Focus" page on the news portal provided users with easy access to United Nations resources on the question of Palestine, including links to key reports, statements, resolutions and other related material.

62. During the period under review, the Department issued 149 press releases on the question of Palestine (77 in English, 72 in French). In addition, the completely updated 2004 edition of Basic Facts about the United Nations included an extensive section on the Middle East, in which all aspects of the Palestinian question were addressed. The newly revised 2005 edition of the smaller booklet, UN in Brief, also highlighted United Nations efforts to promote a peaceful resolution of the situation through a two-State solution.

63. The Department held a two-week workshop for Arab journalists in November and December 2004, which included sessions on the question of Palestine.

64. As part of its special information programme on Palestine, the Department organized a training programme for 10 young Palestinian journalists at United Nations Headquarters, in Washington, D.C., and at the United Nations Office at Geneva, from 25 October to 10 December 2004. The programme was aimed at strengthening their capacity as media professionals.

65. In cooperation with the Foreign Ministry of Egypt, the Department organized an international media seminar on peace in the Middle East in Cairo, on 13 and 14 June 2005. The proceedings of the previous international media seminar, held in Beijing in June 2004, were published.

66. The permanent exhibit on Palestine at United Nations Headquarters (English) and at the Palais des Nations in Geneva (French) was updated in late 2004 and early 2005. A brochure accompanying the exhibit and entitled "The United Nations and the Question of Palestine" was published in Arabic, English, French and Spanish. The Graphic Design Unit of the Department of Public Information designed the brochure, as well as the booklet containing the proceedings of the Beijing media seminar.

67. The UN Chronicle (in the six official languages) and the UN Chronicle Online (in English and French) reported on events and issues relating to the question of Palestine and on action taken by the General Assembly. Articles were redistributed through UN Chronicle E-Alerts and the UN Chronicle Feature Service.

68. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library digitized documents pertaining to the United Nations Palestine Commission (A/AC.21 series) for UNISPAL document collections.

69. The network of United Nations information centres, services and offices continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine and to organize special outreach activities. Press releases, statements, documents and audio-visual material were brought to the attention of target audiences, posted on their websites and made available to visitors of the reference libraries maintained by their relative offices.

70. A major focus of activities was the promotion of the International Day for Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Department organized the installation of the annual exhibit on the question of Palestine at United Nations Headquarters during the observance of the Day. Special events and activities, including television and radio interviews, were organized by the centres, services and offices individually or jointly with United Nations associations and regional organizations, such as the League of Arab States. The Secretary-General's message for the Day was widely disseminated by the centres, particularly those in Accra, Brussels, Bucharest, Buenos Aires, Cairo, Dar es Salaam, Geneva, Lima, Mexico City, New Delhi, Pretoria, Rabat, Sana'a, Tehran, Tripoli, Tunis, Vienna and Warsaw.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

71. The year under review was marked by promise and hope, as well as by developments on the ground that complicated efforts to resume the peace process within the framework of the road map. The Committee is encouraged by the resumption of dialogue at the highest level between Israeli and Palestinian leaders. The Committee welcomes the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and four small settlements in the northern West Bank as a rare opportunity to revive negotiations within the framework of the road map and restart the stalled political process. It should be noted that Israel remains in control of the borders of the Gaza Strip, including its territorial sea and airspace and the movement of people and goods into and out of Gaza, thus hampering any meaningful economic development. The Committee is strongly opposed to the expansion of settlements in the West Bank and efforts to complete the construction of the wall on Palestinian land. It is particularly alarmed by the intention of the Israeli Government to expand large settlement blocks in the West Bank, which would separate East Jerusalem from the West Bank and the southern West Bank from its northern part. The Committee reiterates its position of principle that the settlements and the wall constructed by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, are contrary to international humanitarian law and numerous resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly, adopted since 1967, as well as the provisions of the road map.

72. The Committee has been encouraged by renewed efforts of the international community — in particular the Quartet, but also Egypt and Jordan — to revitalize the road map, facilitate the dialogue between the parties and implement their commitments under the road map. The Committee reiterates that the road map remains the best way to achieve the goal of a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine through the establishment of two States, Israel and Palestine, based on the 1967 borders. A settlement should be based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003) in particular, and other relevant resolutions. The Committee hopes that the Quartet and the international community will continue to work towards the achievement of this goal.

73. The Committee considers that its programme of international meetings and conferences contributes to focusing the attention of Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and the general public on issues crucial for advancing a peaceful settlement of the conflict. The meetings highlight the most pressing concerns, such as the need to end violence, stop settlement activities and improve the living conditions of the Palestinian population. They contribute to raising international awareness of the root cause of the conflict, namely the occupation by Israel of the Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. They also mobilize international support for efforts to resolve the conflict and implement the road map. The Committee is deeply appreciative of the involvement in those meetings of Governments, intergovernmental organizations, United Nations entities and civil society. It expresses its satisfaction with the level of dialogue, engagement and support from the international community achieved at those meetings. It will continue the programme to foster support for the attainment by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights in accordance with international legitimacy. In its meetings programme for 2006, the Committee intends to address such issues as the need to end the occupation of all Palestinian land; support of the efforts by the Palestinian Authority to rehabilitate the economy, especially that of the Gaza Strip; the responsibility of all Governments to apply international law to all aspects of the question of Palestine, in accordance with the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice; the implementation of the road map; the adverse consequences of the settlement policy and the construction of the wall for the achievement of a two-State solution; the need to protect the Palestinian people; the humanitarian and socio-economic situation, including the plight of Palestinian women and children; and the role of civil society.

74. The Committee commends civil society organizations for their efforts to uphold international legitimacy with regard to the question of Palestine through advocacy and the mobilization of public opinion and for their initiatives aimed at alleviating the plight of the Palestinian people. It notes the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening its cooperation with civil society. The Committee encourages civil society organizations to focus and synchronize their advocacy efforts at the local, national, regional and international levels on the legal obligations of Governments, as emphasized in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. It welcomes recent civil society initiatives, in particular in developing countries, to establish umbrella mechanisms to better coordinate their work. It supports all humanitarian and assistance initiatives geared towards improving the daily lives of the Palestinians. The Committee will also strive to enhance the involvement of parliamentarians in its programme of meetings and conferences.

75. The Committee emphasizes the essential contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights in support of its mandate and the implementation of its programme of work. The Committee, therefore, requests the Division to continue its mandated activities, including substantive and secretariat support; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, such as the further expansion and development of UNISPAL, including the graphic enhancement of the "Question of Palestine" website; the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority; and the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Committee expects the Division to continue to promote international awareness of the question of Palestine, as well as support for the rights of the Palestinian people and a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In this regard, the Committee notes with satisfaction (a) the level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the number of civil society organizations that have received accreditation to the Committee; and (c) the number of pages viewed on the United Nations website on the question of Palestine. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for the staff of the Palestinian Authority has proved its usefulness and requests that it be continued.

76. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the programme's continuation, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

77. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join in this endeavour and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate with overwhelming support.

Letter of transmittal

4 October 2006

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 7 of its resolution 60/36 of 1 December 2005.

The report covers the period from 6 October 2005 to 4 October 2006.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Paul Badji
Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency
Mr. Kofi Annan
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974.

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly each year renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

3. Since 1991, the Committee has consistently supported the peace process. It welcomed the 1991 Madrid Peace Conference that launched the Middle East peace process based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It also welcomed the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) and subsequent implementation agreements. The Committee has strongly supported the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called on the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee continued to work towards enabling the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination and to its own independent State, on all Palestinian territory occupied in 1967, including East Jerusalem. The Committee also promotes support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The reporting period began with a cautious hope that the removal in September 2005 of Israeli settlements from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the withdrawal of the Israeli army from the Gaza Strip would create the much-needed momentum for the resumption of the political dialogue between the parties. There was no progress in the political area either immediately after the pull-out or in the course of the months that followed, however. While the overall situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, remained serious, the situation in Gaza has deteriorated significantly since June 2006.

5. In the course of the year, the Israeli army has continued to conduct its operations in Palestinian population centres, resorting to extrajudicial assassinations, house demolitions and arrests. Palestinian response included suicide attacks in Israel and regular rocket fire by Palestinian armed groups. During the year, chances for a return to the political process remained elusive.

6. The holding of the elections to the Palestinian Legislative Council (PLC) on 25 January 2006 became a pivotal point in Palestinian political life. The electoral victory of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) confronted the Palestinian political system, the region and the wider international community with new challenges. In the period following the elections, the newly appointed Palestinian Cabinet and the Presidency have not been able to reach an agreement on a common political programme. While President Mahmoud Abbas fully embraced the platform of peace, the Cabinet remained reluctant to recognize Israel and accept all the previously signed bilateral agreements. This situation has persisted throughout the reviewed period, stymieing progress in the political area and negatively affecting efforts to address the rapidly deteriorating Palestinian humanitarian crisis. On 27 June, the major Palestinian factions reached an agreement to bolster national unity on the basis of the "Prisoners' Document"; however, Israeli military action delayed its taking effect.

7. While most Governments have treated the election results as a Palestinian domestic matter, some were not in a position to recognize and cooperate with the Hamas-led Cabinet. This has considerably undercut the prospects of delivering various forms of assistance to the Palestinian people. The decision by major international donors to cease direct assistance programmes has further exacerbated the humanitarian situation.

8. Israel responded to the electoral results by stepping up efforts at undermining the Palestinian Authority and by consolidating control over East Jerusalem, strategic parts of the West Bank and access to the Gaza Strip. The situation escalated dramatically at the end of June 2006 with major Israeli military incursions in the Gaza Strip following the capture of an Israeli soldier by Palestinian armed groups. Overshadowed by the hostilities in Lebanon that started in early July, Israeli military incursions, air strikes and artillery shelling, arbitrary arrests of Palestinian Authority and PLC officials, demolition of houses and crucial infrastructure continued unabated for months. The continued closure by Israel, the occupying Power, of the crossing points to the Gaza Strip and in the West Bank constituted collective punishment of an entire innocent civilian population.

9. During the year, the Committee remained deeply concerned about the continuing expansion of Israeli settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the acceleration in the completion of the wall built in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in contravention of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. The Committee cautioned that the Israeli plan to unilaterally draw its own permanent borders, incorporating large parts of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, posed a grave threat to the prospects of a peaceful, negotiated solution of the question of Palestine. It precludes any possibility of improving the economic and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and made a two-State solution virtually impossible. The Committee reminded Israel, the occupying Power, that its settlement activities, the annexation of East Jerusalem, any actions to strengthen its hold on the city and the construction of the wall on occupied land were contrary to international law. The Secretary-General was encouraged to expedite the establishment of a register of damage caused to all natural or legal persons concerned by the construction of the wall. The Committee called upon all Governments to fulfil their obligations under international law, in particular the Fourth Geneva Convention, and to take the necessary steps to ensure that Israel complied with its international obligations.

10. The Committee continued to support the efforts by the Quartet to unblock the stalemate in the political process and resume meaningful negotiations between the parties. It noted that, in the course of the year, the Quartet has met at both the principals and envoys level to address the situation on the ground, restore a credible political process and encourage the parties to move forward towards the implementation of the objectives of the road map. The Quartet's meeting at the principals level in New York on 20 September and a high-level meeting of the Security Council the next day, convened at the initiative of the Council of the League of Arab States, were held with a view to advancing the peace process.

11. The Committee noted the serious efforts by the Palestinian Authority Presidency and the Palestinian leadership to end violence, strengthen the national unity of the Palestinian people and create conditions conducive to reviving the political process and to achieving a solution of the question of Palestine exclusively through peaceful means. It welcomed the signing in June of the National Conciliation Document by the major Palestinian political organizations, and the designation of the Palestinian President as the person in charge of negotiations with Israel, as well as the effort of President Abbas to form a Government of national unity. The Committee called upon the international community to extend all possible cooperation to the Palestinian leadership in its quest for the realization of the inalienable rights of its people.

Chapter II

Mandate of the Committee

12. On 1 December 2005, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 60/36), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 60/37), and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 60/38). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 60/39 entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

13. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey and Ukraine.

14. In a letter dated 5 August 2005, the Permanent Representative of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela to the United Nations requested that the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela be admitted as an observer to the Committee. At its 289th meeting, held on 10 November 2005, the Committee approved that request and welcomed the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela to take part, as an observer, in the work of the Committee. In a letter, the Chairman informed the President of the General Assembly of the request of the Government of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. The letter from the Chairman and its annex were circulated as a document of the General Assembly (A/60/567).

15. At its 292nd meeting, on 10 February 2005, the Committee re-elected Paul Badji (Senegal) as Chairman, elected Rodrigo Malmierca Díaz (Cuba) as Vice-Chairman, and re-elected Ravan A. G. Farhâdi (Afghanistan) as Vice-Chairman and Victor Camilleri (Malta) as Rapporteur.

16. At the same meeting, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2006.³

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

17. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee as observers were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

18. In 2006, the Committee again welcomed as observers all States and organizations that had participated in its work in the preceding year.⁴

⁴ The observers at the Committee meetings were as follows: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, Nicaragua, Niger, Qatar, Sri Lanka, Syrian Arab Republic, United Arab Emirates, Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, African Union, League of Arab States, Organization of the Islamic Conference and Palestine.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

19. Pursuant to its mandate, the Committee continued to monitor the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as relevant political developments. The Palestinian people exercised their right to vote in the PLC elections held on 25 January 2006 throughout the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Overall, 77 per cent of registered voters cast their votes for a new legislature. Approximately 20,000 national and 1,000 international observers, including missions from the European Union, the National Democratic Institute, the Carter Centre and Canada observed the conduct of the election. The observers concluded that the campaign took place in a relatively calm atmosphere, with an absence of provocative rhetoric, although candidates, campaign and election workers were at times unable to move satisfactorily through Israeli checkpoints during the campaign period. Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas and the Palestinian people were congratulated by the Secretary-General, the Quartet and other officials within the international community for an election process that was free, fair and secure, and which marked an important milestone in the building of Palestinian democratic institutions. The Central Elections Commission announced the official results with Hamas winning a majority, consisting of 74 seats. Fatah won 45 seats, with the remaining 13 seats going to smaller parties and independents.

20. On 29 March, President Abbas swore in the new Palestinian Government which included Hamas members and independents, with Mr. Ismail Haniyeh as Prime Minister. In a letter to Mr. Haniyeh, President Abbas asked that the new Government programme be aligned with that of the Palestinian Presidency. The Quartet called on the new Government to commit to the principles of non-violence, recognition of Israel's right to exist and acceptance of previous agreements and obligations, including the road map. Since the illness of Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, Mr. Ehud Olmert on 4 January took over the reins of government as Acting Prime Minister, until his election on 28 March. On 19 February, Acting Prime Minister Olmert had announced that Israel would not hold contacts with a Palestinian Government which included Hamas, not transfer some US$ 55 million a month in taxes and tariffs to it and ban the transfer of equipment to its security services. On 10 April, donors decided to freeze direct aid to the Palestinian Authority until it complied with the three principles outlined by the Quartet. In the run-up to and after the elections, Prime Minister Olmert declared his intention to set unilaterally Israel's borders in the West Bank, that would include major settlement blocks, as well as the Jordan River as a security border. In response, the Quartet called upon both parties to avoid unilateral measures which would prejudice final status issues.

21. Efforts were undertaken to find consensus among various Palestinian parties. Led by President Abbas and with the participation of Prime Minister Haniyeh, a Palestinian national dialogue conference took place on 25 and 26 May. Representatives of political parties, civil society, the private sector, the Palestinian Authority and the Palestine Liberation Organization participated. A final statement concluded that a Prisoners' Document (see para. 31 below) should serve as a basis for the continuation of the national dialogue. On 27 June, a National Conciliation Document was agreed upon. As of the beginning of October, efforts by President

Abbas to form a national unity Government that would reflect the principles put forward by the Quartet, remained inconclusive.

22. Internal Palestinian difficulties, the withholding of hundreds of millions of dollars of Palestinian tax money by Israel, coupled with its continuing military operation in the Occupied Territory, led to a serious political and financial crisis and total paralysis of efforts to restart the dialogue between the parties.

23. During the period under review, the Committee closely monitored the situation on the ground and was greatly alarmed by the intense escalation of violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Casualties continued to increase, mostly among Palestinians, as a result of the disproportionate use of force by the occupying Power, but also among Israeli civilians in Israel as a result of suicide bombings. During the month of June, Israel stepped up its policy of targeted killings of militants and shelling of the Gaza Strip. On 9 June, an explosion on a beach in the Gaza Strip killed seven civilians, all members of the same family. The Secretary-General called for a full investigation, while Human Rights Watch concluded that Israeli artillery fire was to blame. The Committee has repeatedly condemned the policy and practice of extrajudicial killings as being inadmissible under international law. At the same time, it has strongly condemned all attacks against Israeli civilians in Israel, which could not be justified and undermined any prospect of reconciliation between the parties. Suicide bombings occurred at the market of Hadera in Israel on 26 October 2005, in Netanya on 5 December, outside the settlement of "Kedumim" in the northern West Bank on 30 March and in central Tel Aviv on 17 April 2006, altogether killing at least 21 Israelis and 3 foreigners.

24. In late June and July 2006, the security situation worsened further, making July the deadliest month in the Gaza Strip in nearly two years. On 25 June, an armed Palestinian group attacked an army post near Karam Abu Slim (Kerem Shalom) crossing, killing two Israeli soldiers and capturing one. President Abbas called for the immediate release of the Israeli soldier while calling on the international community and the Quartet to prevent Israel from exploiting the situation to invade the Gaza Strip. On 27 and 28 June, the Israeli army expanded its military operation, code-named "Operation Summer Rains", attacking infrastructure in the Gaza Strip, including bombing the Gaza power station, cutting electricity to some 40 per cent of the Gaza Strip, leaving thousands of the Gaza residents without water. Three bridges were also destroyed, dividing the Gaza Strip into isolated units. The Secretary-General called upon Israel to show restraint and to avoid actions that damaged civilian infrastructure and aggravated the hardship of the Palestinian people. On 6 July, Israeli tanks pushed up to 6 kilometres into the northern Gaza Strip, taking position in three former settlements in an operation code-named "Oaks of Bashan". At least 12 Palestinians and 1 Israeli soldier were killed in the fighting. On 8 July, the Secretary-General called on Israel to restore and maintain the uninterrupted supply of fuel to Gaza and to ensure the passage of food and essential supplies through the Karni crossing. Israeli aircraft bombed the office of Prime Minister Haniyeh on 1 July and the Foreign Ministry building on 13 July. Because of the war in Lebanon, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) along with United Nations humanitarian agencies working in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,⁵ on 3 August, expressed concern that with international attention focusing on Lebanon, the tragedy in Gaza that had started in June was being forgotten. The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs reported in August to the Security Council that since Israel's disengagement from the Gaza Strip in September 2005 to August 2006, 450 Palestinians had been killed. Over 2,500 have been wounded. The United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported 202 Palestinian deaths, including 44 children, since the beginning of the Israeli offensive in Gaza on 28 June. It was estimated that since the start of the second intifada in 2000, close to 4,400 Palestinians have been killed and some 31,000 wounded. As of July 2006, the number of deaths of children under 18 exceeded 850.

25. To improve the freedom of movement and economic activity of Palestinians living in the Gaza Strip, an Agreement on Movement and Access between Israel and the Palestinian Authority was reached on 15 November 2005. It provided for the reopening of the Rafah border crossing with Egypt and other crossing points. The Rafah terminal was transferred to the Palestinian Authority with oversight by European Union monitors. The Rafah and Al-Muntar (Karni) crossings have been only partially operational at rates far lower than foreseen by the Agreement, however. During 2006, less than 10 per cent of the Gaza Strip's minimum daily export targets have been achieved. The Rafah terminal has remained closed for all but two days for most of the months of July and August, preventing people from leaving or entering the Gaza Strip. There has been no progress on the other aspects of the Agreement, such as the Gaza-West Bank link and progress on the airport and seaport. Basic food commodities were severely depleted, bakeries closed and food rationing was introduced. The closure also seriously affected the export of produce from the Gaza Strip. The Al-Muntar (Karni) closures have cost Palestinians up to $500,000 a day, according to United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs estimates. The combination of checkpoints, physical obstacles and a permit system has cut the West Bank into three distinct areas in addition to East Jerusalem. In the Jordan Valley, Israel has placed a series of checkpoints and roadblocks between the Valley and the rest of the West Bank, separating Palestinians from their land, their families and from their jobs. Physical obstacles include the separation wall, checkpoints, partial checkpoints, roadblocks, road gates, earth mounds, earth walls, trenches and fences. The number of physical obstacles increased from 376 in August 2005 to 547 in August 2006.

26. On 9 March 2006, Acting Prime Minister Ehud Olmert made public a "convergence plan", in accordance with which Israel would withdraw from parts of the West Bank, and annex "Gush Etzion", the "Jerusalem Envelope", "Ma'ale Adumim", the "Ariel" region and the Jordan River as a "security border". He pledged to build up the "E1" area (area between "Ma'ale Adumim" and Jerusalem). In its statement of 9 May the Quartet rejected any unilateral steps on final status issues by either party. In August 2006, Prime Minister Olmert stated that owing to the war in Lebanon and the significant damage caused to northern Israel, his plan was no longer at the top of his Government's agenda.

27. An issue of great concern to the Committee was the continued construction of the separation wall in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, in contravention of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice rendered on 9 July 2004, which reaffirmed the illegality of the wall. On 30 April 2006, the Israeli Cabinet revised the route, which would further consolidate Israeli control over vital parts of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The revised route would incorporate over 370,000 settlers, or nearly 87 per cent of the settler population. The wall in the Jerusalem area annexed 228.2 sq km of the West Bank, severing East Jerusalem from the rest of the West Bank and isolating over 230,000 Palestinian Jerusalemites from the rest of the West Bank. It would further separate over 2 million Palestinians living on the eastern side of the wall from East Jerusalem. The wall would sever East Jerusalem from Bethlehem and Ramallah, communities that have been socially, culturally and economically interdependent. Bethlehem would be completely cut off from Jerusalem, while the “Etzion” block settlements would expand onto more Palestinian land. On 21 March, the Israel Defense Forces issued a military order to seize 81.6 dunums of Palestinian land in Beituniya in the West Bank for construction of the wall. In May, Israeli Justice Minister Haim Ramon committed to finishing construction on 95 per cent of the wall by the end of 2006. Forty-two per cent (336 km) of the planned 790 km structure has been completed. Some 102 km were in various stages of construction, and would be completed at year’s end. Sixty-seven kilometres were still at the paperwork level, and the building of a 285-kilometre-long section awaited Israeli court approval. The Committee noted the delay in establishing the register of damages to compensate those who had suffered any material damage as a result of the wall’s construction, and urged the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts in that direction.

28. During the year, the Committee also noted the relentless settlement expansion. Territorial contiguity of East Jerusalem settlements was being enhanced. In November 2005, the Israel Land Administration published tenders for 350 housing units in “Ma’ale Adumim”, bringing the total tenders for the settlement in 2005 to 665 units. In February 2006, the Israel Land Administration was working on a plan to expand “Pisgat Ze’ev”, which had 40,000 residents. It proposed 1,100 new housing units in a development of 18 buildings of five to nine storeys. In March, new housing construction continued in “Karmeit Tzur”, “Karmel”, “Kiryat Arba”, “Pnei Hever” and “Susiya”. Land levelling continued for a new security fence around “Adora” and “Pnei Hever”. Settlers evacuated from the Gaza Strip were settling in the West Bank settlements of “Eshkolot”, south of Hebron, “Ariel”, and in the Jordan Valley settlement of “Maskiyot”. The Jordan Valley is home to some 47,000 Palestinians, along with 8,300 settlers living in 31 settlements. Israel’s de facto annexation of this area accounted for an additional 28.5 per cent of the West Bank. On 14 March, the Israeli authorities confirmed the list of 2,000 Palestinians banned from returning to the Jordan Valley. Thousands of dunums of land there had been transferred to settlements and army bases. In April, the Israel Defense Forces requisitioned 25 dunums belonging to the Palestinian towns of Beit Ummar and Halhul to create a buffer zone around “Karmeit Tzur”. On 4 May, Prime Minister Olmert announced a plan to build thousands of new dwellings in settlements to house evacuees from isolated settlements. Defence Minister Amir Peretz has approved expanding the territorial jurisdiction of four settlements — “Givat Ze’ev”, “Oranit”, “Maskiyot”, and “Beitar Ilit”. In spring 2006, construction began for 3,500 new units in “Nof Adumim”, part of the “Adumim” settlement block. Construction of the Israeli police station in the E1 area had already been completed. The Israel Defense Forces authorized plans to expand the municipal boundaries of “Beitar Ilit” by 500 dunums, connecting the settlement and the Green Line. An industrial zone was planned for the area. On 4 September 2006, the Israeli Construction and Housing Ministry solicited tenders for the construction of 690 apartments at “Beitar Ilit” and “Ma’ale Adumim”. On 21 September, the Ministry invited bids for construction of 164 housing units for the settlements of “Ariel”, “Alfei Menashe” and “Karnei Shomron”. The wall and the planned settlement expansion would place some 45.5 per cent of the West Bank under Israeli control.

29. The number of settlers in the West Bank had increased by 3 per cent in the first six months of 2006, from 253,748 to 260,932. Settlers were involved in various violent incidents including attacking Palestinian farmers working their land; attacking Palestinian shepherds and killing their sheep; injuring Palestinian children on their way home in Hebron; uprooting thousands of olive trees and destroying fruit trees in Palestinian farms in Yatta, Kfar Thulth, near Qalqilya; setting fire in the village of Awarta near Nablus; beating Palestinians in their car and damaging their vehicle; throwing stones at cars; blocking roads near Palestinian villages. The settlement of “Beitar Ilit” discharged sewage onto lands belonging to the villages of Wadi Fukin and Nahhalin while settlers from “Ariel” continued to pump sewage water onto Palestinian farmlands belonging to residents of Burkin and Kfer al-Diq. The municipality of Salfit declared an emergency after sewage dumped from “Ariel” had contaminated the sole water well supplying surrounding villages. There have also been attacks by Palestinians against Israeli settlers.

30. The weak financial situation of the Palestinian Authority severely worsened owing to Israeli and donors’ decisions to halt transfers of tariffs and direct aid, the contraction of Palestinian economic activity and reduced domestic tax revenues. Unpaid salaries to over 150,000 civil servants, 70,000 of whom were members of the security services, contributed to the deterioration of the security environment as frustrated civil servants vented their anger by protest demonstrations, strikes and taking over Government buildings and confrontations. Nearly 1 million Palestinians relied on Palestinian Authority wage earners whose salaries accounted for about 25 per cent of the gross domestic product. Responding to an urgent appeal of President Abbas, the European Commission in early July 2006 took action through setting up a temporary international mechanism. Its first steps were to provide fuel for hospitals in the Gaza Strip to enable the continued provision of essential health services. The Committee commended the efforts by many Governments to provide immediate financial relief to abate the fiscal crisis of the Palestinian Authority and expressed appreciation to the Arab League and international and regional financial institutions for their continued and augmented commitment. The Committee highly valued the efforts by James Wolfensohn as the Quartet’s Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement in implementing his mandate, as well as his role in the conclusion of the Agreement on Movement and Access.

31. The issue of the continued incarceration of a large number of Palestinian prisoners and detainees in Israeli prisons and detention facilities remained an issue of serious concern for the Committee. In September 2006, the Palestinian Authority Ministry of Detainees and Ex-Detainees Affairs reported that, since 1967, a total of some 700,000 (25 per cent of the population) Palestinians had been taken prisoner in the Occupied Palestinian Territory by Israel. There were 10,100 detainees still held in 30 Israeli prisons and detention facilities. Since September 2000, the beginning of the second intifada, about 4,000 children and 500 women had been arrested or detained. About 120 women remained in custody. Prisoners and detainees were subjected to practices that undermined their health, tortured and humiliated. Palestinian political detainees in Israeli prisons, including senior Fatah and Hamas members, announced on 10 May an agreement on common principles for national action and dialogue outlined in a Prisoners' Document. The document was regarded as a precursor to a Palestinian national dialogue (see para. 21 above). On 29 June, Israel arrested 64 Palestinian Authority officials, including cabinet ministers and PLC members. On 5 August, PLC speaker Abd al-Aziz Dweik was arrested in Ramallah by Israeli forces. The Secretary-General expressed concern at the detention of the Palestinian officials, including PLC members.

32. The humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has steadily worsened. Unemployment and poverty rates have increased dramatically. In May 2006, the rate of unemployment had been 34 per cent in the Occupied Palestinian Territory as a whole and 44 per cent in the Gaza Strip. This rate rose to 55 per cent during times of complete closure imposed by Israel. Similarly, the poverty rate was nearly 50 per cent, with the Gaza Strip rate at approximately 70 per cent. In June 2006, the World Food Programme increased the number of people it fed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory by 25 per cent, or from 480,000 to 600,000 non-refugees. Nearly 2 million Palestinians, 51 per cent of the population, were unable to meet their daily food needs without assistance. The plight of women has remained extremely difficult owing to the worsening security and economic situation. In the past six years, hundreds of women have been killed and injured on their way to and from work and as a result of being denied access to medical services. Half of all families living in Palestine refugee camps were headed by women. Female-headed households have been disproportionately affected by the rise in poverty that accompanied the violence and closures.

33. The Palestinian people have continued to suffer from low reserves and the quality of the drinking water available to them, a crisis caused by both the exhaustion of the Palestinian aquifer reservoirs by Israel and the over-drainage of thousands of illegal wells spread throughout the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. In the West Bank, Israel controlled 83 per cent of the Palestinian water. It also infringed on the Palestinian right to water in the Jordan Valley. The water crisis was further exacerbated by the security situation, which hindered projects aimed at improving the quality of water and providing alternatives to the available sources of water. More than 220 communities in the West Bank, around 320,000 people, were unconnected to water mains. Hundreds were forced to purchase water from expensive and unsanitary tankers. Farmers had to use expensive water to irrigate vegetable farms. Medical sources said diarrhoea, gastroenteritis, fever, kidney failure, infection and dermatological problems affected most Palestinian children and persisted to adulthood because of poor water supplies.

34. UNRWA officials expressed alarm that the general living conditions of the Palestine refugees in the Gaza Strip had become "deplorable and getting worse". In early June, authorities had not been able to pay suppliers, hospital staff and teachers, for three months, disrupting essential services, including medical care. Increasing restrictions imposed by Israel on Palestinian movement further stifled the economy. The Agency was caring for over 1.1 million people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory under its emergency programme, providing cash, food and temporary employment. In late July 2006, continued Israeli shelling drove over 1,500 Palestinians from their homes in the Beit Hanoun area to the Jabalya camp. Four UNRWA schools at the camp were serving as makeshift shelters for those who had to flee their homes. While focused on the plight of Palestine refugees within its mandate, UNRWA also extended assistance to a number of non-refugee civilians affected by the war in Lebanon during July and August.

35. The Committee expressed appreciation for the work of the Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP/PAPP). With funding from Japan, UNDP played a central role in supporting the Palestinian legislative election through establishing a Liaison and Support Unit that served as a resource centre for the over 1,000 international observers monitoring the elections. To combat poverty and rehabilitate agricultural land in the worst hit areas, UNDP/PAPP signed an agreement with the Islamic Development Bank, with funding by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). The project, the first of its kind with OPEC, focused on the agricultural sector of the Tulkarm area in the West Bank, which had suffered from restricted mobility and damage to agricultural land and infrastructure. In December 2005, UNDP/PAPP was entrusted by the Palestinian Authority, Israel and the Office of the Special Envoy of the Quartet to carry out a task of clearing and recycling the rubble left behind as a result of the destruction of the settlements in the Gaza Strip. With over 1.2 million tons of rubble to be cleared, the project would cost $24.7 million, which was being funded by Israel. Progress on this project was hampered by the heavy shelling of the former settlement areas. With funding from Japan and Norway, UNDP was taking a lead in assessing the damage to the infrastructure and assisting in alleviating the humanitarian crisis through employment generation schemes, removal of solid waste, and supplying essential fuel and equipment.

36. The United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, established in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 2000, was a response to the deteriorating humanitarian situation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Its aim was to improve the humanitarian situation by enhancing coordination between agencies to ensure effective distribution of humanitarian assistance. It provides analytical reports on crucial issues to inform policymakers and help aid organizations in their operational decisions. It acts as guardian for the Consolidated Appeal Process. In September, donor nations pledged an additional $116 million, although the humanitarian appeal remained 42 per cent underfunded.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 60/36

37. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others, as indicated below.

1. Action taken in the Security Council

38. During the period under review, the Security Council has continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. Throughout the year, the Council held monthly briefings under the agenda item entitled "The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question".

39. The Security Council met on 30 March 2006 for the monthly briefing, which was followed by a debate. The Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Paul Badji, took part in the debate and made a statement (see S/PV.5404).

40. The Security Council met on 17 April 2006, at the request of the Permanent Representative of Bahrain in his capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group for the month of April 2006 and on behalf of the States members of the League of Arab States (see S/2006/227), the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of Yemen in his capacity as Chairman of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Group (see S/2006/239), and the Permanent Representative of Malaysia in his capacity as Chairman of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement (see S/2006/240). The Chairman of the Committee took part in the debate and made a statement (see S/PV.5411).

41. The Security Council met on 30 June 2006 for the monthly briefing, which was followed by a debate (see S/PV.5481).

42. The Security Council met on 13 July 2006, at the requests of the Permanent Representative of Algeria, in his capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group for the month of June 2006, and on behalf of the States members of the League of Arab States (see S/2006/458), and the Permanent Representative of Qatar (see S/2006/462). The Council voted on a draft resolution submitted by Qatar (see S/2006/508). The result of the vote was 10 votes in favour, 1 against and 4 abstaining. The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member of the Council (see S/PV.5488).

43. The Security Council met on 21 July 2006 for a briefing from the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General and the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator, which was followed by a debate. The Chairman of the Committee took part in the debate and made a statement (see S/PV.5493).

44. The Security Council met on 22 August 2006 for the monthly briefing, which was followed by a debate (see S/PV.5515).

45. The Security Council met on 21 September 2006, at the request of the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States (see S/2006/700). A debate, at the ministerial level, was held (see S/PV.5530).

2. Statements by the Committee

46. On 7 February 2006, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the holding of the PLC elections (see GA/PAL/1000).

47. On 27 July 2006, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement concerning the Israeli military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (see GA/PAL/1017).

3. Participation by the Chairman of the Committee in international conferences and meetings

48. During the year, the Chairman of the Committee participated in events in support of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and contributed to their deliberations. The Chairman participated in the International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East, held from 8 to 9 June 2006 in Moscow, organized by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 60/36 and 60/37

1. Programme of international meetings and conferences

49. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine, and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

50. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations Latin American and Caribbean Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Caracas, 13 and 14 December 2005;

(b) United Nations Public Forum in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Caracas, 15 December 2005;

(c) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Cairo, 26 and 27 April 2006;

(d) United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, United Nations Office at Vienna, 27 and 28 June 2006;

(e) Consultations with civil society organizations, United Nations Office at Vienna, 29 June 2006;

(f) United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People, United Nations Office at Geneva, 7 and 8 September 2006.

51. All of the above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as representatives of civil society and the media. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the Division's website.

52. In Cairo, during the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, the Committee delegation was received by Mr. Ahmed Aboul Gheit, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Arab Republic of Egypt, who stressed the urgency of supporting peace in the Middle East and welcomed the efforts of the Committee in that regard. At Vienna, in connection with the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, the Committee delegation met with Ambassador Ralph Scheide, head of the Near and Middle East Department of the Austrian Foreign Ministry. On the sidelines of the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People held in Geneva, the Committee delegation had meetings at the Federal Department of Foreign Affairs of Switzerland in Bern, with the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies.

2. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

53. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its close cooperation with the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, through the participation of the Chairman in their meetings and through periodic consultations at United Nations Headquarters.

54. The Committee continued its cooperation on the question of Palestine with States members of the European Union. The Bureau held consultations with representatives of the European Union in March 2006 (under the Presidency of Austria) as part of the ongoing effort to build a constructive relationship with European Union members on issues of common concern.

3. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

55. The Committee continued to work with civil society organizations, academic institutions, think tanks and media representatives, using consultations with civil society representatives, participation in meetings organized by civil society organizations and the accreditation of new organizations. This work was reviewed and further advanced at the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People. It provided civil society organizations from all regions of the world with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground, promote their current programmes, develop action-oriented proposals in support of the Palestinian people and improve the coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by many civil society organizations and encouraged them to continue their work towards a just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

56. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with the national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations.

Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2005. In the period under review, the Committee also accredited 13 new organizations, including 2 as observers. Consultations between the delegation of the Committee and representatives of organizations accredited to the Committee were held at the United Nations Office at Vienna on 29 June 2006, following the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace. Participating representatives of non-governmental organizations discussed the humanitarian crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and exchanged views with the Committee delegation on ways to improve their cooperation. The Chairman of the Committee has met throughout the year with representatives of civil society organizations in New York and at the meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee away from Headquarters.

57. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained the Internet website “NGO Network on the Question of Palestine” as a tool for exchange of information and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee. The website can be found at <http://www.un.org/depts/dpa/ngo>. At the request of the Committee, the Division also continued to issue its bimonthly newsletter, NGO Action News, covering the activities of civil society on the various aspects of the question of Palestine.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

58. The Committee continued to develop its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations and invited a number of parliamentarians to speak at its meetings. During the year, the Bureau of the Committee has met with members of the PLC, the Knesset and other national parliaments.

4. Research, monitoring and publications

59. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through UNISPAL:

(a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by United Nations and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;

(b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;

(c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;

(d) Special bulletins and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;

(f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

5. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

60. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop UNISPAL, pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates. This included the ongoing upgrading of technical components of the system to ensure its uninterrupted presence on the Internet, notably via the UNISPAL “Question of Palestine” portal, also developed and maintained by the Division, which is located on the United Nations home page, under “Peace and Security”, and involved the expansion of the documents collection to include relevant new and old documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of the system (<http://domino.un.org/unispal.nsf>) — including by incorporating additional multimedia content.

6. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

61. Two staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority participated in a training programme conducted by the Division, from September to December 2005, in conjunction with the sixtieth session of the General Assembly. The trainees familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other organs and conducted research on specific topics.

7. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

62. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna on 29 November 2005. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a performance by the El-Funoun dance troupe entitled “Dancing Tragedies and Dreams” was organized by the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

63. In adopting its programme of work, the Committee decided that a similar observance of the International Day of Solidarity should be organized in 2006.

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 60/38

64. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 59/30 of 1 December 2004 and 60/38, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine, using various tools at its disposal to disseminate information on this issue to the international community.

65. The Department's television, radio, press, photo and Internet news operations regularly covered the question of Palestine, providing live and archived coverage of open meetings of the General Assembly, the Security Council and other intergovernmental bodies on the issue. They also covered other programmes and activities in which the situation was addressed.

66. During the period under review, the Department issued 148 press releases on the question of Palestine (78 in English and 70 in French). In May 2006, the Department published the revised edition of Basic Facts about the United Nations in French and Spanish, which included an extensive section on the Middle East and all aspects of the Palestinian question. A revised edition of the smaller, companion volume, UN in Brief, was simultaneously issued in all six official languages.

67. United Nations Radio regularly covered various aspects of the question of Palestine and related issues in the news bulletins and the current affairs magazines in the official and non-official languages. Among the themes and issues covered were: the food crisis in Gaza owing to the Karni crossing closure; the request by UNRWA for $95.5 million to reconstruct Gaza and the West Bank; the World Food Programme warning on the deepening humanitarian crisis in Gaza; and the Secretary-General urging Israel to respect international humanitarian law.

68. The Arabic Language Unit covers all statements by the Security Council, the Secretary-General, the Special Envoy to the Middle East and the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs. It has contracted with two stringers who live in the West Bank and Gaza, and their reports from the region have improved the quality of the unit's outputs.

69. The United Nations website continued to host a page on the question of Palestine under the "Global Issues" page, as well as the "Peace and Security" and "Refugees" pages. Links are available to UNISPAL, as well as to the web pages created by the Department of Political Affairs. In addition, the Website Section webcast all meetings of the Security Council and the General Assembly and most press conferences on the question of Palestine held at Headquarters, which were available immediately afterwards as archived webcasts.

70. The UN News Centre portal continued to provide extensive coverage on the question of Palestine and a wide array of related developments and issues. The number of visitors to the portal (which is available in all official languages) continued to grow. Notably, the Arabic version has registered over 1 million page views in the last 12 months. On the English- and French-language versions of the portal, related issues were the subject of nearly 400 news stories, which were also distributed worldwide to some 43,000 e-mail subscribers through the United Nations News Service. The period under review also witnessed a considerable increase in the usage of the portal's special "News Focus" page, providing visitors with easy access to the broad range of United Nations resources on the question of Palestine, including links to key reports, statements, resolutions and other related materials.

71. United Nations Television distributed 12 stories related to the question of Palestine via UNifeed, a daily satellite television news feed reaching hundreds of broadcasters around the world.

72. As part of its special information programme on Palestine, the Department organized a training programme for 10 young Palestinian journalists at Headquarters, in Washington, D.C., and at the United Nations Office at Geneva, from 24 October to 9 December 2005. The programme was aimed at strengthening the participants' capacity as media professionals.

73. In cooperation with the Foreign Ministry of the Russian Federation, the Department organized an International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East, in Moscow on 8 and 9 June 2006, in which 72 people participated. Press releases were issued on the proceedings of the two-day seminar. The seminar was covered by the Jerusalem Post, Yediot Achronot, Ha'aretz, Al-Ayam and Al-Ahram newspapers, as well as by ITAR-TASS, Interfax, Wafa (Palestinian News Agency) and major Russian television channels.

74. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library digitized documents pertaining to the United Nations Palestine Commission (A/AC.21 series) for the UNISPAL document collection.

75. The network of United Nations information centres, services and offices continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine and to organize special outreach activities. Press releases, statements, documents and audio-visual material were brought to the attention of target audiences, posted on their websites and made available to visitors of their reference libraries.

76. A major focus of activities was the promotion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Department assisted in the installation of the annual exhibit on the question of Palestine at Headquarters. Special events and activities, including conferences and public forums, were organized by the centres, services and offices individually or jointly with academic institutions, foreign ministries or United Nations Associations. The Secretary-General's message for the Day was widely disseminated in official and non-official languages.

77. In addition, support was provided to the United Nations Latin American and Caribbean Meeting on the Question of Palestine, held in Caracas; the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, held in Cairo; the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Palestinian Peace, held in Vienna; and to the Commissioner-General of UNRWA during her visit to Brussels and Washington, D.C.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

78. The year was marked by a steady deterioration of the security and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Committee expressed particular concern at the Israeli incursions into Gaza during the recent months and its destructive effects on the Palestinian people and on their hopes for peace. The Committee calls upon Israel to end its military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to stop any other measures that further undermine Palestinian institutions. It reminds Israel, the occupying Power, that it is bound by the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Times of War, which obliges the parties to protect civilians during hostilities. The Convention's applicability to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, has been repeatedly confirmed by the General Assembly and the Security Council. Israel must end its incursions into Gaza, cease offensive military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, withdraw its forces to their original positions outside Gaza, and release, immediately and unconditionally, all imprisoned cabinet members and parliamentarians, as well as other Palestinian prisoners. The Committee strongly condemns the killing of innocent civilians by either side. It denounces rocket attacks on Israel and calls for a cessation of those activities by Palestinian armed groups. The Committee is strongly opposed to the expansion of settlements in the West Bank and efforts to complete the construction of the wall on Palestinian land. It is particularly alarmed by the intention of the Israeli Government to expand large settlement blocks in the West Bank, which would separate East Jerusalem from the West Bank and the southern West Bank from its northern part. The Committee reiterates its position of principle that the settlements and the wall constructed by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, are contrary to international humanitarian law and numerous resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly, adopted since 1967, as well as the provisions of the road map. It reminds the Secretary-General of the urgency of establishing the register of damage caused by the construction of the wall.

79. The Committee welcomes the signing of the National Conciliation Document by the major Palestinian political organizations, the decision to form a national unity Government, and the designation of Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas as the person in charge of negotiations with Israel. These have been encouraging developments and should be supported by Israel and the international community. At the same time, the international community should focus on practical and meaningful benchmarks to engage all parties to achieve a mutual ceasefire and support major international peace efforts, including the Arab Peace Initiative and the road map. The Committee reiterates that only a negotiated solution can bring about the goal of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine through the establishment of two States, Israel and Palestine, based on the 1967 borders. A settlement should be based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003) in particular, and other relevant resolutions. The Committee hopes that the Security Council, the Quartet and the other actors of the international community will continue to work towards the achievement of this goal.

80. The Committee feels strongly that, through the programme of mandated activities of the Division for Palestinian Rights, it will be able to continue to generate heightened international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine, as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In that connection, the Committee emphasizes the essential contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. In that regard, the Committee notes with satisfaction (a) the level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and the use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the number of civil society organizations that have received accreditation to the Committee; and (c) the number of pages viewed on the United Nations website on the question of Palestine. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority has proved its usefulness, and requests that it be continued.

81. The Committee considers that its programme of international meetings and conferences contributes to focusing the attention of Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and the general public on issues crucial for advancing a peaceful settlement of the conflict. The meetings highlight the most pressing concerns, such as the need to end violence, stop settlement activities and improve the living conditions of the Palestinian population. They contribute to raising international awareness of the root cause of the conflict, namely the occupation by Israel of the Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. They also mobilize international support for efforts to resolve the conflict, including through the convening of an international peace conference. It will continue the programme to foster support for the attainment by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights in accordance with international legitimacy. In its meetings programme for 2007, the Committee intends to address such issues as the detrimental effects of unilateral steps by the occupying Power; the responsibility of all Governments to apply international law to all aspects of the question of Palestine, in accordance with the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice; the need to convene the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, in view of the systematic violation by the occupying Power of international humanitarian law; the adverse consequences of the settlement policy and the construction of the wall for the achievement of a two-State solution; the collective international responsibility to protect the Palestinian people; the need to alleviate humanitarian and socio-economic hardships, including the plight of Palestinian women and children; and the role of civil society.

82. The Committee commends civil society organizations for their efforts to uphold international legitimacy with regard to the question of Palestine through advocacy and the mobilization of public opinion and for their initiatives aimed at alleviating the plight of the Palestinian people. It notes the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening its cooperation with civil society. The Committee encourages civil society organizations to broaden their base and to focus and harmonize their advocacy efforts at the local, national, regional and international levels with respect to the legal obligations of Governments, as emphasized in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. It supports all humanitarian and assistance initiatives geared towards improving the daily lives of the Palestinians. The Committee will continue to involve parliamentarians in its programme of international meetings and conferences.

83. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, such as the further expansion and development of UNISPAL, including the graphic enhancement of the “Question of Palestine” website; the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority; and the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

84. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the programme’s continuation, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

85. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate with overwhelming support.

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 61/22 of 1 December 2006.

The report covers the period from 4 October 2006 to 4 October 2007.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Paul Badji
Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly each year renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

3. Since 1991, the Committee has consistently supported the peace process. It welcomed the 1991 Madrid Peace Conference that launched the Middle East peace process based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It also welcomed the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) and subsequent implementation agreements. The Committee has strongly supported the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called on the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee continued to work towards enabling the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination and to its own independent State, on all Palestinian territory occupied in 1967, including East Jerusalem. The Committee also promotes support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The reporting period was characterized by the reinforcement of the Israeli occupation policies and practices in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip, as well as by a further weakening of the institutions of the Palestinian Authority as a result of those policies and the decision by major international donors to cease direct assistance programmes to the Hamas-led cabinet that took office in March 2006. The period was also marked by the consistent efforts of major Palestinian political organizations and groups to achieve national unity, which was briefly achieved in March 2007 with the establishment of a National Unity Government following the Mecca agreement, but which collapsed soon thereafter.

5. The Israeli army continued to conduct military operations in Palestinian population centres, including by carrying out extrajudicial killings, house demolitions and arrests. The Palestinian response included regular rocket and mortar fire by armed Palestinian groups and a suicide attack within Israel. For most of the year the political process remained stalled. Only after the dissolution of the Palestinian national unity government in June, following the armed takeover of the Gaza Strip by Hamas, did diplomatic activities, including meetings between the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, and the Prime Minister of Israel, Ehud Olmert, resume, leading to the release of a limited number of Palestinian prisoners, as well as part of the tax money collected by Israel in accordance with bilateral agreements but withheld since January 2006. Direct donor assistance to Palestinian Authority institutions in the West Bank also resumed.

6. Despite a certain diplomatic momentum achieved since June, mainly through the re-engagement of major international stakeholders, the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, remained complex and volatile. Due to the continued imposition of prolonged closures by Israel, the Gaza Strip remained isolated from other parts of the Palestinian Territory, solely allowing an inflow of basic humanitarian goods. Economic activity has been stifled. The humanitarian situation has reached crisis proportions. In the West Bank, normal life was being hampered by continuous Israeli military operations, hundreds of checkpoints, the settlements infrastructure, the construction of the wall and periodic closures.

7. Throughout the year, the Committee remained deeply concerned about the continuing illegal settlement activities in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the unlawful construction of the wall in contravention of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice (see A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1). The Committee cautioned that the continuation of such policies posed a grave threat to the prospects of a peaceful, negotiated solution of the conflict. It precluded any possibility of improving the economic and humanitarian situation and was making a two-State solution virtually impossible.

8. The Secretary-General was encouraged to expedite the functioning of the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as requested by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/17. The Committee called upon all Governments to fulfil their obligations under international law, in particular the Fourth Geneva Convention, and to take the necessary steps to ensure that Israel complied with its obligations in this regard.

9. The Committee continued to support the efforts by the international community to unblock the stalemate in the political process and resume meaningful negotiations between the parties. It welcomed the renewed Arab Peace Initiative and concrete steps taken by the League of Arab States to implement it. The Committee supported the reinvigorated efforts by the Quartet and its individual members aimed at resuming the peace process.

10. The Committee called upon the Palestinian leadership, the leaders of all factions and all Palestinians to unite behind the elected President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, and his government and all democratically elected Palestinian institutions and to resolve their political differences by peaceful means. The Committee reiterated its long-standing position that the Palestine Liberation Organization was the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and, as such, an essential party to any negotiations aimed at resolving the question of Palestine by peaceful means. The Committee invited the international community to extend all possible cooperation to the Palestinian leadership in its quest for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

Mandate of the Committee

11. On 1 December 2006, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 61/22), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 61/23) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 61/24). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 61/25 entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

12. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey and Ukraine.

13. At its 299th meeting, on 27 February 2007, the Committee re-elected Paul Badji (Senegal) as Chairman, Rodrigo Malmierca Díaz (Cuba) as Vice-Chairman and Victor Camilleri (Malta) as Rapporteur. At the same meeting, the Committee elected Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) as Vice-Chairman. At its 303rd meeting on 17 September 2007, the Committee elected Saviour F. Borg (Malta) as Rapporteur, replacing Victor Camilleri, who had been assigned by his Government to another post.

14. Also at the 299th meeting, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2007.³

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

15. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee as observers were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

16. In 2007, the Committee again welcomed as observers all States and organizations that had participated in its work in the preceding year.⁴

⁴ The observers at the Committee meetings were: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, Nicaragua, Niger, Qatar, Sri Lanka, Syrian Arab Republic, United Arab Emirates, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of), Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the African Union, the League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and Palestine.

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

17. Pursuant to its mandate, the Committee continued to monitor the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as relevant political developments. The Committee has emphasized that the Israeli occupation remained the root cause of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. For 40 years, the occupying Power has been systematically altering the Palestinian land through unlawful policies and practices, including settlement construction and, more recently, the construction of the wall in the West Bank. Continued closures, the sealing-off of the Gaza Strip, Israeli military operations in Palestinian population centres and the humiliating system of checkpoints throughout the West Bank have rendered the Palestinian Authority nearly dysfunctional, caused socio-economic decline and contributed to the polarization within Palestinian society. In addition, tensions among Palestinian factions continued to intensify.

18. Regional and international leaders have stepped up their engagement in the Israeli-Palestinian issue, intensifying efforts to achieve a peaceful settlement of the conflict. In late March, a meeting of Arab Foreign Ministers adopted the Riyadh Declaration (see A/61/922), which endorsed the Arab Peace Initiative (A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221), providing a framework for a comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict, consistent with Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). On 31 July, United States Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice signed an endorsement of the initiative. Egypt remained active in brokering a ceasefire among Palestinian factions in the Gaza Strip. Dialogue at the highest levels, which included discussions on the Arab Peace Initiative, took place between Israeli, Jordanian and Egyptian officials. Meanwhile, the Quartet met several times, and on 27 June it named former British Prime Minister Tony Blair as special envoy to lead the process of Palestinian institution-building. Norway proposed the reactivation of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of the International Assistance to Palestinians to oversee assistance management, financial support to the Palestinian Authority and Palestinian institutional reform. The Ad Hoc Liaison Committee met at United Nations Headquarters in New York on 24 September, prior to the meeting of donors planned for December 2007. On 16 July, United States President George Bush announced his intention to convene an international meeting later in the year to be chaired by the United States Secretary of State. It was envisaged that Israel, the Palestinians and regional neighbours would participate in the meeting. The Quartet and the League of Arab States welcomed President Bush's statement renewing the commitment of the United States to a negotiated two-State solution and for an international meeting. President Abbas and Prime Minister Olmert began to meet on a more regular basis. At their meeting on 10 September, they agreed to set up negotiating teams to work on key issues in preparation for the forthcoming international meeting set for November 2007. The idea of convening the meeting on Israeli-Palestinian peace was supported by the Quartet when it met in New York on 23 September.

19. During the period under review, the Committee remained extremely concerned about the Israeli military incursions into the Gaza Strip and military operation in the West Bank, which had resulted in a large number of deaths and injuries among Palestinian civilians. In early November 2006, a week-long operation, code-named "Autumn clouds", in Beit Hanoun in the Gaza Strip left 82 Palestinians dead, 21 of them children. At least 18 homes, a mosque and the offices of a non-governmental organization were demolished, and 150 homes were damaged. In the early morning hours of 8 November, with most of the residents of Beit Hanoun still asleep, Israel Defense Forces (IDF) artillery struck a residential area, killing at least 19, including eight children and seven women. In late November 2006, a mutual ceasefire in the Gaza Strip was agreed upon between President Abbas and Prime Minister Olmert. However, the ceasefire did not extend to the West Bank, where Israeli military operations continued. As of February 2007, the number of IDF search-and-arrest operations in the West Bank had increased by 58 per cent over the previous month. Clashes between Israeli forces and Palestinians in the West Bank rose by 88 per cent during the same period.

20. In late February, in Nablus, the IDF launched a large-scale operation code-named "Hot winter". While uncovering sites used for preparing explosives, IDF imposed a curfew that disrupted civilian life and humanitarian operations and affected tens of thousands of Palestinians in the city. In May, some 54 Palestinians were killed in the Gaza Strip. The majority of the deaths occurred as a result of Israeli air strikes on Hamas bases and vehicles carrying members of Hamas or the Islamic Jihad. In May alone, the Israeli Air Force carried out 65 air strikes on Palestinian targets.

21. The Committee denounced the excessive and indiscriminate use of force, extrajudicial killings, the destruction of Palestinian homes, civilian infrastructure and agricultural lands and the attendant devastating effects on the Palestinian civilian population. At the same time, it strongly condemned all attacks against Israeli civilians. It is estimated that since the start of the second intifada in 2000, close to 4,800 Palestinians have been killed and some 31,500 wounded by the Israeli occupying forces. As of August 2007, there were over 950 Palestinian children under the age of 18 dead as a result of the violence. The number of Israelis killed during the same period was 1,024.

22. The restrictions on movement imposed by Israel in the West Bank continued to affect every aspect of Palestinian life, including access to medical facilities and schools and the ability of Palestinians to reach their places of work. These measures have also impaired family and social ties, have led to a decline in the provision of infrastructure services and law enforcement in areas under the control of the Palestinian Authority. Israeli commitments to ease movement and access in the West Bank remained unmet. Since the conclusion of the Agreement on Movement and Access entered into between Israel and the Palestinian Authority on 15 November 2005, closure levels have doubled and the number of checkpoints has increased. In September 2007, a total of 572 physical obstacles to movement were in place, a 52 per cent increase from August 2005. In the Gaza Strip, only about 10 per cent of the targets set out by the agreement, or 400 truckloads of exported goods per day, was reached as of April. The Al-Muntar (Karni) and Rafah crossings were open only sporadically.

23. The decision of Israel not to have contacts with a Palestinian government, that included Hamas, its withholding of taxes and tariffs owed to the Palestinian Authority, which total some $50 million per month, and the halting of direct international financial aid to the Palestinian Authority has had a devastating effect on Palestinian institutions and on the provision of basic services to the Palestinian people. In April, strikes by Palestinian Authority employees and local municipal workers were held to protest the lack of regular payment of salaries. Tensions among the various Palestinian factions intensified in mid-December 2006 and again in early January 2007. In February, under the auspices of King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, the Mecca Agreement was reached between Fatah and Hamas on the formation of a national unity government. On 17 March, after being approved by the Palestinian Legislative Council, the Palestinian National Unity Government was sworn in, in accordance with the programme agreed at Mecca. With a lack of improvement in the security situation, particularly in the Gaza Strip, the new Minister of the Interior resigned on 14 May. Inter-factional fighting continued in the Gaza Strip, compounded by targeted Israeli air operations and rocket attacks by Palestinian groups against Israeli civilians. From 9 to 15 June, the military wing of Hamas and its executive force took control of the Gaza Strip. The armed takeover of the Gaza Strip by Hamas forces seriously damaged efforts to achieve national unity and left the intra-Palestinian dialogue in an inconclusive state. On 14 June, President Abbas dissolved the Government, dismissed Prime Minister Ismail Haniyeh and declared a state of emergency for 30 days. A new Prime Minister, Salam Fayyad was appointed, in addition to a new Foreign Minister and Finance Minister.

24. The internal security situation in the Gaza Strip has had an adverse effect on the humanitarian situation and the provision of humanitarian aid. The daily lives of civilians were severely disrupted as people were afraid to leave their homes, affecting both the public sector and commercial life. The Al-Muntar (Karni) crossing and Rafah terminal have been progressively closed since the fighting broke out in mid-June, and the alternate entry points (Sufa and Kerem Shalom) have barely provided sufficient access for much-needed commercial and humanitarian supplies. The Beit Hanoun (Erez) crossing operated periodically for “urgent, special cases”, allowing exit from the Gaza Strip, but, as of September, at least 100,000 Gazans who might have been expected to enter or exit the Gaza Strip were denied passage. Some 3,500 Palestinians were stranded for almost two months on the Egyptian side of the Rafah crossing, including patients returning from medical treatment abroad. At least 30 Palestinians died while waiting to return. The continued closure of the Gaza Strip borders plunged the Palestinian economy into even further decline, dramatically increasing the already significant need for humanitarian assistance as well as the level of dependency. The Committee was greatly alarmed by the decision taken by the Israeli Security Cabinet on 19 September to consider the Gaza Strip a “hostile territory”, and to apply additional sanctions to the territory, in order to restrict the passage of various goods to the Gaza Strip and reduce the supply of vital services such as fuel and electricity. The Committee stated that the decision was a violation of international law, including international humanitarian law, and yet another form of collective punishment of the Palestinian people, which, if implemented, was bound to substantially worsen the already deplorable living conditions of the civilian population in the occupied Gaza Strip.

25. On 15 December 2006, the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/17, in which it requested the setting up of the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory within six months. On 10 May 2007, the Secretary-General appointed three international experts to begin the work on the Register. The Committee expressed the hope that the Office of the Register of Damage would begin implementation of the Assembly resolution as well as the conclusions contained in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice.

26. Nevertheless, the construction of the wall continued in 2006-2007, in disregard of the advisory opinion. Parts of it extend deep into the West Bank. The wall has been completed along more than half of its planned route. Only 20 per cent of the wall's route correspond with the Green Line, the rest has been built on confiscated Palestinian land. About 10.7 per cent of the West Bank, 154,320 acres, is trapped between the wall and the Green Line. Of that, 141,974 acres (92 per cent) are in the Jerusalem area. In January, the Israeli media reported that Prime Minister Olmert had approved a change in the wall's route near the settlement of "Modi'in Illit", which would incorporate the settlements of "Nili" and "Na'aleh", effectively annexing them to Israel. If approved by the Cabinet, the decision would move the wall at least five kilometres east of the Green Line in this region. As a result, some 20,000 Palestinians living in five villages (Rantis, Shaqba, Qibya, Budrus and Ni'lin) would be surrounded by walls and security roads, creating an enclave in the West Bank. By April, the wall construction around the "Ateret" settlement had been completed. A wall now encircles the settlement on the land confiscated by IDF and belonging to Palestinians from Atara and Umm Safa. During the reporting period, the construction of the wall around East Jerusalem involved the confiscation of 3,360 acres, and the displacement of 1,150 households comprising 5,290 people. On 4 September, the Israeli High Court of Justice ordered a change in the route of the wall in the Bil'in area after Palestinian villagers protested that the route would annex their agricultural land.

27. Despite the resumption of payments of salaries by the Palestinian Authority in July 2007, poverty rates remain unacceptably high. The poverty line is defined based on a monthly income of $501.2 United States dollars ($) per month for a family of two adults and four children. At least 70 per cent of households in the Gaza Strip, 56 per cent of the West Bank and 19 per cent of East Jerusalem households are living below the poverty line. Poverty increased among Palestinian Authority employees from 46 per cent in May 2006 to 50 per cent in May 2007. The total accumulative and direct losses in the private sector since the closure of the Gaza Strip had been estimated at $35 million, with a daily loss in the range of about half a million dollars. In the industrial sector, the vast majority (nearly 90 per cent) of import-dependent industries have closed down and over 66,000 workers have been temporarily laid off. The World Bank has estimated that if a third of those laid off do not return to work, the unemployment rate will reach unprecedented levels of about 44 per cent. With household income continuing to decrease, Palestinian households have resorted to negative coping mechanisms, such as borrowing money, selling possessions, reducing health care and food consumption and taking children out of school.

28. Over the year, the Committee continued to express concern over the illegal settlement activities in and around East Jerusalem, as well as in the rest of the West Bank. In November 2006, the Anata village council reported the issuance of military orders confiscating 1,328 dunams of land in East Jerusalem, for the expansion of the "Almon" settlement near "Ma'ale Adumim". In January, the Jerusalem municipality commission for planning and construction approved a plan to build 983 housing units in the Har Homa settlement in a new area between Sur Bahir and Bethlehem. In March, the Israel Land Administration published tenders to construct 44 housing units in the East Jerusalem settlement of Har Homa. A plan was approved in March to expand the settlement of “Adam” (“Geva Binyamin”) as part of the larger expansion plan for the Jerusalem settlement of “Neve Ya’acov” and its connection with “Adam”. The plan included the construction of 1,200-unit neighbourhood for ultra-Orthodox Jews. Meanwhile, a request by Palestinian Jerusalemites living in the Silwan neighbourhood to construct 70 apartments was rejected on the basis that the land was a natural and historic area. Planned settlement expansion in the areas in and around Neve Ya’acov and the former site of the Atarot airport would link settlements in the area of East Jerusalem on both sides of the wall, establishing an unbroken belt of settlements along East Jerusalem’s northern perimeter to Road 60 settlements — from “Ma’ale Adumim” north to “Shilo” and “Eli” — to the Tel Aviv metropolis and the coastal plain. On 11 May, the Deputy Mayor of Jerusalem, Yehoshua Pollak, said the intention was to create a contiguous Jewish residential area linking East Jerusalem with major West Bank settlement blocks. In the West Bank, pressure from two settlements (“Na’ale” and “Nili”) resulted in Prime Minister Olmert ordering, on 31 January, that the two settlements be included west of the wall, necessitating a 12 kilometre addition to it. Some 20,000 Palestinians would be directly affected by the new construction, creating two Palestinian pockets accessible to areas east of the wall only through planned underground tunnels. In March 2007, approximately 3,500 settlers arrived at the site of the evacuated settlement of “Homesh” after the Israel Defense Forces had allowed them access, with the intention of resettling there after having been evacuated in 2005. Most construction continued to be associated with the largest settlements, such as “Beitar Ilit”, “Modi’in Ilit”, “Givat Ze’ev” and “Ma’ale Adumim”. In addition to the focus on large settlements, expansion continued in some smaller ones, including “Anatot”, “Givat Benjamin”, “Har Adar”, “Kochav Ya’acov”, “Oranit” and the hilltop settlements of “Itamar”, “Yitzhar”, and “Elon Moreh”. Despite the obligation of Israel under the road map, none of the additional 101 posts in the West Bank were removed. There were at least six roads, all on the eastern side of the wall, reaching some 33 kilometres in length, being paved or widened for the exclusive use of a small group of settlers.

29. Israel’s Interior Ministry has reported that during 2006, the settler population in the West Bank increased by 5.8 per cent, from 253,748 to 268,379. In East Jerusalem, the settler population has been stagnant for a decade, holding at around 200,000. The population of “Ma’ale Adumim” increased by 1,644 to 31,615. During 2007, “Modi’in Ilit”, which grew by 4,000 (11 per cent) to 30,425, might well emerge as the largest West Bank settlement (outside East Jerusalem). Settler violence in the West Bank increased in 2007, particularly in Hebron. Since the city was divided in 1997 under the Hebron agreement, 35,000 Palestinians living there have suffered from unending incidents of violence at the hands of some 500 settlers. Over 40 per cent of the Palestinians who once lived in Hebron have left their homes without compensation. About 2,500 Palestinians who owned shops and businesses have been forced to close them since the outbreak of the intifada. Settlers from Hebron’s “Beit Hadassah” settlement beat and injured a 13-year-old Palestinian and beat a Palestinian man with Down Syndrome. Elsewhere in the West Bank, settlers uprooted olive trees, damaged water pipes in Palestinian homes, ploughed Palestinian land, opened settlement sewage pipes on Palestinian agricultural lands, fired at Palestinians and destroyed plants and crops. On 2 August, two settlers attacked United Nations personnel driving in the South Hebron Hills. There have also been attacks by Palestinians against settlers, including a stabbing incident in February in which a settler from the “Bat Ayin” settlement was killed.

30. As of June 2007, over 10,400 Palestinians remained in 30 Israeli prisons, detention facilities and camps. Of those, 118 were women (including minors, pregnant women and mothers) and close to 376 were child prisoners under the age of 18. Israel regards Palestinian children as adults from the age of 12, in breach of its own juvenile law. A survey of former child detainees estimated that 60 per cent of the children interviewed were reported to have been subjected to physical coercion or inducement to collaborate with Israeli authorities. Some 970 Palestinians have been kept in administrative detention without trial, and 15 have been held in isolation for over five years. Moreover, prisons and detention centres often provide prisoners with little or no protection from summer heat or winter cold, and they are poorly maintained and overcrowded. At least 183 prisoners have died in Israeli prisons since 1967 and about 1,000 inmates have suffered from serious illnesses. On 20 July, Israel released 255 Palestinian prisoners after they signed a form promising not to engage in terrorist activities. On 1 and 2 October, Israel released another group of 86 prisoners. The former Minister of Higher Education of the Palestinian Authority, Nasr al-Sha'ir, and the former Minister of Prisoners' Affairs, Wasfi Kabaha, and 45 members of the Palestinian Legislative Council continue to be held in detention in Israel. The Committee reiterated its call for the release of Palestinian prisoners and for the safe release of captured Israeli corporal Gilad Shalit.

31. Women, children and the elderly continued to suffer under the occupation. Close to 30 per cent of pregnant women in the West Bank had difficulties in accessing antenatal care and safe delivery facilities, mostly due to closures, delays at checkpoints and the wall. The education sector is under increasing pressure since the cutting of aid to the Palestinian Authority. The wall and other movement restrictions impaired access of students and teachers to schools and universities. In the Sifa area, north-west of Beit Lahiya, the ongoing presence of the IDF forced a significant number of students to relocate to other villages to attend school.

32. In comparison to the 2006 average, the total water supply decreased by 12 per cent in the West Bank and 42 per cent in the Gaza Strip. Factional fighting damaged the electricity network for the wells in the Gaza Strip and increased the need for fuel to power backup generators. In addition, chemical stocks needed to maintain water quality were dangerously low, while several shipments of chlorine and other disinfecting agents were blocked at the Israeli border. Most of the work of humanitarian organizations, especially those working on water and sanitation, was also halted. Overall, some 70,103 households in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were not connected to a public water network, with 5 per cent of households depending on water wells. As for waste water, less than half of the total number of households (45.3 per cent) were connected to waste water networks, and only 4.5 per cent of households in the Gaza Strip considered their water to be of good quality.

33. Throughout the year, the work of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) became even more crucial as the situation, particularly in the Gaza Strip, turned increasingly desperate. Some 860,000 refugees in the Gaza Strip, almost two thirds of the overall population, depended on UNRWA emergency food assistance. In addition, one million people depended on its regular health services and 195,000 children were enrolled in its schools. The deteriorating internal security situation and periodic Israeli incursions caused UNRWA to scale back or suspend its operations several times. In early February, UNRWA headquarters and field offices in the Gaza Strip, 83 schools and its food distribution centre in Beach Camp briefly closed as factional violence placed staff and thousands of children in school at risk. The violence escalated in mid-June, resulting in the deaths of two UNRWA workers. The takeover of the Gaza Strip by Hamas resulted in a further tightening of Israeli controls on the movement of persons and goods, deepening already severe unemployment and poverty and increasing the already heavy burden on the Agency. In early July, UNRWA was obliged to halt $93 million in building projects because construction materials were not available on the local market. The halt affected the repair of shelters for 16,000 refugees. The humanitarian situation continued to deteriorate in the second half of 2007. In the West Bank, the continued construction of the separation barrier and associated land seizures, together with an increased number of Israeli checkpoints and movement barriers, severely affected the refugee population. By October, UNRWA had received pledges amounting to only half of its $246 million Emergency Appeal for the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 2007.

34. The work of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People on crucial projects continued with the assistance of Governments and United Nations agencies. Projects on poverty alleviation were assisted by the Islamic Development Bank, including a $30 million microfinance programme for deprived Palestinians. Efforts to rehabilitate the agricultural sector, particularly in the Gaza Strip, were enhanced with the assistance of the Government of Japan and the Arab Authority for Agricultural Investment and Development. To improve water supply, the UNDP programme launched a project providing support to the Bedouin community in the Jericho area. A mental health project was established, with assistance from the French Development Agency, to help relieve the negative psychological effects inflicted on Palestinian children and their families in the West Bank and Gaza. The construction of the Qalandiya Olympic stadium and the Qalandiya Road were made possible with the assistance of the Government of Germany.

35. The Committee expressed its appreciation for the increasingly important work of the United Nations Office of the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in enhancing its coordination in the distribution of humanitarian assistance. The Committee noted that its 2007 Consolidated Appeal, which had been set at $453 million, focused on employment generation and food assistance; health and education; agriculture, livestock, water and sanitation; and the better assessment of humanitarian protection needs.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 61/22

36. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others, as indicated below.

1. Action taken in the General Assembly and the Security Council

Resumed tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly

37. On 17 November 2006, the emergency special session of the General Assembly was resumed (thirteenth resumption) at the request of the Permanent Representative of Qatar to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group for the month of November 2006 and on behalf of the States members of the League of Arab States (A/ES-10/366), and the Permanent Representative of Cuba to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chair of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement in New York and on behalf of the States members of the Movement (A/ES-10/367), to address the Israeli attacks in the Gaza Strip, in particular the killing of Palestinian civilians in Beit Hanoun on 8 November 2006 under the item entitled "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory". The Chairman of the Committee took part in the debate and made a statement (A/ES-10/PV.28). At the end of the debate, on the same day, the Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/16.

38. On 15 December 2006, the emergency special session of the General Assembly was resumed (fourteenth resumption) at the request of the Permanent Representative of Qatar to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairman of the Group of Arab States for the month of November 2006 and on behalf of the States members of the League of Arab States (A/ES-10/370), the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations, in her capacity as Chair of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement in New York (A/ES-10/371) and the Permanent Representative of Azerbaijan to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairman of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Group in New York (A/ES-10/372) to consider the report of the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 (A/ES-10/361) under the item entitled "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory". Twenty-eight speakers took part in the debate (see A/ES-10/PV.30 and 31). At the end of the debate, on the same day, the Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/17, in which it called for the expeditious establishment by the Secretary-General of the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

39. In a letter dated 21 December 2006 addressed to the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly of his efforts to implement General Assembly resolution ES-10/16 (A/ES-10/374).

Meetings of the Security Council

40. During the period under review, the Security Council continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map.

41. The Security Council met on 9 November 2006, at the request of the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Qatar to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group for the month of November 2006 and on behalf of the States members of the League of Arab States (S/2006/868), the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Azerbaijan to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairman of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Group in New York and on behalf of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (S/2006/869), and the Permanent Representative of Cuba to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairman of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-aligned Movement and on behalf of the States members of the Movement (S/2006/871). The Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Badji, took part in the debate and made a statement (S/PV.5564 Resumption 1 and Corr. 1). At its 5565th meeting, on 11 November 2006, the Council voted on a draft resolution submitted by Qatar (S/2006/878). The result of the vote was 10 votes in favour, 1 against and 4 abstentions. The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member (S/PV.5565).

42. The Security Council held its 5584th meeting on 12 December 2006 for its monthly briefing on the situation in the Middle East. At the end of the meeting, the President of the Council read out a statement (S/PRST/2006/51) on behalf of the Council (S/PV.5584).

43. The Security Council also held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled "The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question". Some meetings were followed by a debate.

44. Debates following the monthly briefings were held on 13 February 2007, at which the Chairman of the Committee, Paul Badji, made a statement (S/PV.5629 Resumption 1); 25 April 2007 (S/PV.5667); and 29 August 2007 (S/PV.5736).

45. On 30 May 2007, the President of the Security Council issued a press statement on the breakdown of the ceasefire in the Gaza Strip (see SC/9028-PAL/2077).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

46. On 26 April 2007, the Bureau of the Committee met with the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs and discussed the latest political developments and the Committee's programme of activities.

47. On 11 May 2007, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the appointment of experts to the Board of the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (GA/PAL/1053).

48. On 7 June 2007, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement to mark 40 years of occupation by Israel of the Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1056).

49. On 3 July 2007, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement voicing its grave concern about the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1058).

50. On 20 September, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on Israel's decision to declare the Gaza Strip "hostile territory" (GA/PAL/1064).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 61/22 and 61/23

1. Programme of international meetings and conferences

51. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

52. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations Asian Meeting in Support of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, Kuala Lumpur, 15 and 16 December 2006;

(b) United Nations Forum of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People, Kuala Lumpur, 17 December 2006;

(c) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Doha, 5 and 6 February 2007;

(d) United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Rome, 22 and 23 March 2007;

(e) Consultations of the Committee delegation with civil society organizations on the question of Palestine, Rome, 24 March 2007;

(f) United Nations African Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Pretoria, 9 and 10 May 2007;

(g) Public Forum in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Pretoria, 11 May 2007;

(h) United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, European Parliament, Brussels, 30 and 31 August 2007.

53. All of the above events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as representatives of civil society and the media. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the Division's website.

54. In Kuala Lumpur, during the United Nations Asian Meeting in Support of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Committee delegation was received by Dato' Seri Syed Hamid Albar, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Malaysia. In Doha, in connection with the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian

People, the Committee delegation met with Ahmad Bin Abdullah Al-Mahmoud, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs of Qatar. On the margins of the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People held in Brussels, the Committee delegation had a meeting with Ambassador Jan Grauls, Secretary-General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Belgium.

2. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

55. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its close cooperation with the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference through the participation of the Chairman in their meetings and through periodic consultations at United Nations Headquarters.

56. The Committee continued its cooperation on the question of Palestine with States members of the European Union. On the sidelines of the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace in Brussels, the delegation held separate meetings with Belén Martínez Carbonell, Member of the Cabinet of European Commissioner for External Affairs, Benita Ferrero-Waldner; Leonidas Tezapsidis, Head of Near East Unit of the European Commission; and Ambassador Christian F. Jouret, Head of Unit, Task Force Mediterranean/Barcelona/Middle East, of the Council of the European Union.

3. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

57. The Committee continued its work with civil society organizations, academic institutions, think tanks and media representatives, including consultations with civil society representatives, participation in meetings organized by civil society organizations and the accreditation of new organizations. This work was reviewed and further advanced at the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace. It gave the civil society representatives and other participants from all regions of the world, especially from Europe, an opportunity to highlight their work and coordinate their responses to recent developments. It provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground, and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to improve coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations, encouraging them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at achieving a just and lasting peace between Israelis and Palestinians.

58. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2006. During the period under review, the Committee also accredited three new organizations. Consultations between the delegation of the Committee and representatives of organizations accredited to the Committee were held at the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in Rome on 24 March 2007, following the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace. Participating civil society representatives discussed the response of civil society to the continuing humanitarian crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and exchanged views with the Committee's delegation on ways to strengthen their cooperation. Over the past year, the Chairman of the Committee met with representatives of civil society organizations in New York and at the meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee away from Headquarters.

59. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained the Internet website "Civil society network on the Question of Palestine" (<http://www.un.org/depts/dpa/ngo>) as a tool for the exchange of information and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee. At the request of the Committee, the Division also continued to issue its bimonthly newsletter, NGO Action News, covering the activities of civil society on the various aspects of the question of Palestine.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

60. The Committee continued to develop its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations and invited a number of parliamentarians to speak at its meetings. During the year, the Bureau of the Committee has met with members of the Palestinian Legislative Council, the Knesset and other national parliaments. The holding of the annual United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace at the European Parliament in Brussels in August 2007 resulted in new synergies between the Committee, Parliamentarians and civil society, helping to advance the political process.

4. Research, monitoring and publications

61. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through UNISPAL:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by United Nations and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) Special bulletins and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

5. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

62. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop UNISPAL and the "Question of Palestine" website, which is located on the United Nations home page under “Peace and Security”, pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates. This included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of the system (<http://unispal.un.org>), including by incorporating additional multimedia content and a streamlined search facility.

6. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

63. Two staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority participated in a training programme conducted by the Division from September to December 2006, in conjunction with the sixty-first session of the General Assembly. The trainees familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other organs and conducted research on specific topics.

7. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

64. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna on 29 November 2006. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a cultural exhibit entitled “Contextualization: A Palestinian Narrative” was organized by the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

65. In adopting its programme of work, the Committee decided that a similar observance of the International Day of Solidarity should be organized in 2007.

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 61/24

66. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/24, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine in order to raise the awareness of the international community on this question and on the situation in the Middle East in such a way as to contribute effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process.

67. During the period under review, the Department covered intergovernmental meetings and related press briefings using all media at its disposal. The Department produced a total of 168 press releases, providing summaries in English and French of formal meetings and briefings, and distributed live television coverage to broadcasters around the world. Television coverage was also posted on the Internet (“webcast”) for easy viewing.

68. Two short television features were produced by UNTV for its “United Nations in Action” programme and a longer feature, focusing on the effects of the intifada on children, was produced for the Department’s new television magazine programme “21st Century”. Close to 30 video packages were distributed via satellite feed to broadcast points around the world on a range of issues related to the question of Palestine.

69. In news reports and features, United Nations Radio covered a number of issues, including the Organization’s humanitarian work, diplomatic engagement, the subject of inalienable human rights and critical events of the day, producing hundreds of radio programmes in the six official languages and in Portuguese for distribution to broadcast partners. The Arabic Language Unit reported on the meetings held in Doha and Rome and on other meetings organized by the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People.

70. The United Nations News Centre, the most heavily visited web portal managed by the Department, continuously highlighted stories related to the question of Palestine in the six official languages. In addition, a special focus page on the Middle East provided an in-depth and user-friendly venue for accessing information on the issue.

71. As part of its special information programme on Palestine, the Department organized a training programme for nine young Palestinian journalists at Headquarters and in Washington, D.C., from 6 November to 11 December 2006. The programme was aimed at strengthening the capacities of the participants as print media professionals.

72. In cooperation with the Foreign Ministry of Japan and the United Nations University, the Department organized the fifteenth International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East in Tokyo on 26 and 27 June 2007. Press releases were issued on the proceedings. The seminar was covered by all the major Japanese media and by select Israeli, Palestinian and international media.

73. The UN Chronicle magazine regularly reported on Palestine in its General Assembly coverage, in particular on the work of the Fourth and Sixth Committees, and carried an opinion piece by Gregory Levey on the communication breakdown between the Israeli and the Palestinian authorities. It also featured a number of web articles on the difficult future of Gaza, the new humanitarian symbol of the red crystal and the Unlearning Intolerance Seminar on Cartooning for Peace organized by the Outreach Division, which included discussion on the question of Palestine.

74. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library continued to digitize relevant documents for the UNISPAL document collection.

75. The network of United Nations information centres, services and offices continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine and to organize special outreach activities. The information centres engaged in over 20 activities in recognition of Palestinian rights. A major focus of activities was the promotion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Department assisted in the installation of the annual exhibit on the question of Palestine at Headquarters. The Secretary-General's message for the Day was widely disseminated in official and non-official languages. In Tunis, the information centre organized a weeklong public exhibition and an observance of the Day. A solemn meeting to commemorate the day was organized by the information centre in Dar-es-Salaam, in collaboration with the Embassy of Palestine. The Regional Information Centre in Brussels provided assistance and press coverage for the March mission of the Commissioner General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to Brussels for three days of meetings with European Union officials. The information centre in Cairo translated and disseminated widely the press release issued by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and arranged a press conference for the Special Committee.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

76. The year 2007 marked 40 years of the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Committee emphasizes that the occupation is the root cause of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. For 40 years, the occupying Power has systematically altered the Palestinian land by implementing its illegal policy of building settlements and, more recently, constructing a wall in the West Bank, including around East Jerusalem. Continued closures, the sealing-off of the Gaza Strip, unrelenting Israeli incursions into Palestinian population centres and the humiliating system of checkpoints throughout the West Bank have had a most destructive effect on the lives of the Palestinian people and have rendered the Palestinian Authority nearly dysfunctional. The situation has further deteriorated owing to the polarization within Palestinian society, which led, in June 2007, to an armed takeover of the Gaza Strip by Hamas forces. The Committee noted rising international awareness of the fact that a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the region would remain elusive until the national rights of the Palestinian people have been realized. In addition, there appears to be greater consciousness that the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is one of the major underlying factors of the rift between Western and Islamic societies.

77. The Committee calls upon Israel to end its military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to stop any other measures that further undermine Palestinian institutions. It again reminds Israel, the occupying Power, that it is bound by the Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Times of War, which obliges parties to the Convention to protect civilians during hostilities. Its applicability to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, has been repeatedly confirmed by the General Assembly and the Security Council. Israel must release, immediately and unconditionally, all imprisoned cabinet members and parliamentarians, as well as other Palestinian prisoners. The Committee strongly condemns the killing of innocent civilians by either side. It denounces rocket attacks on Israel and calls for a cessation of these activities by Palestinian armed groups. The Committee is strongly opposed to the expansion of settlements in the West Bank and to efforts to complete the construction of the wall. The Committee reiterates its position of principle that these activities are contrary to international humanitarian law and numerous resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly, adopted since 1967, as well as the provisions of the road map. Israel must cease and reverse all illegal actions in the Palestinian Territory it has occupied since 1967.

78. The Committee calls upon the Palestinian leadership, the leaders of all factions and all Palestinians to unite in support of President Abbas, his government and all democratically elected Palestinian institutions and to resolve their political differences by peaceful means. The Committee calls for the restoration of the situation in the Gaza Strip to that which existed prior to the June events and for measures to be taken to preserve the territorial unity and integrity of the Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Committee firmly believes that the unity of the Palestinian people is an essential condition for achieving a viable solution of the question of Palestine.

The Committee supports national dialogue among Palestinians to achieve national reconciliation. In this regard, the Committee reiterates its long-standing position that the Palestine Liberation Organization is the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and, as such, an essential party to any negotiations aimed at resolving the question of Palestine by peaceful means.

79. The Committee reiterates that only a negotiated solution can bring about the goal of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine through the establishment of two States, Israel and Palestine, based on the 1967 borders. A settlement should be based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003) in particular, and other relevant resolutions. It is incumbent on the Security Council to ensure a speedy and full implementation of its own resolutions. The Council should decide on effective steps to protect the civilian population, end hostilities and guide the parties, with the active involvement of the Quartet and regional actors, to a negotiated settlement. The Committee notes the steps taken by the Board and its secretariat to commence the mandated work on the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and requests all involved to expedite their efforts to render the Register operational. The Committee is encouraged by international efforts to relaunch the peace process. For it to succeed it is necessary to achieve concrete performance-based agreements relating to permanent status issues and the establishment of a timeline for their implementation. Any diplomatic process needs to be buttressed by urgent and meaningful steps on the ground. The continued support of the international community is crucial for advancing the process, namely a consistent dialogue between the Quartet and the parties, and the inclusion of regional partners. The Arab Peace Initiative remains a crucial element for advancing peace in the region. Member States of the European Union are encouraged to take a more proactive role in international efforts at resolving the conflict.

80. The Committee is convinced that, through the programme of mandated activities of the Division for Palestinian Rights, it will be able to continue to generate heightened international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine, international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the essential contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and the use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the number of civil society organizations that have received accreditation to the Committee; and (c) the number of pages viewed on the United Nations website on the question of Palestine. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority has proved its usefulness and requests that it be continued.

81. The Committee considers that its programme of international meetings and conferences contributes to focusing the attention of Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and the general public on current issues and the need for advancing a peaceful settlement of the conflict. The meetings also contribute to raising international awareness of the root cause of the conflict, namely the occupation by Israel of the Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to mobilizing international support for efforts to resolve the conflict. The Committee will continue the programme to foster support for the attainment by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights, the right to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty, and the right of Palestine refugees to return. The Committee, through its Bureau, will regularly assess the outcomes of the international meetings and conferences and, where required, decide on steps to enhance their contribution to the mandated goals of the Committee. In its meetings programme for 2008, the Committee intends to address issues such as the responsibility of all Governments to apply international law to all aspects of the question of Palestine, in accordance with the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice; the need to convene the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention in view of the systematic violation by the occupying Power of international humanitarian law; the sixtieth anniversary of the Nakba and the need to find a just solution for the Palestine refugee issue; the adverse consequences of the settlement policy and the construction of the wall for the achievement of a two-State solution; the collective international responsibility to protect the Palestinian people; the need to alleviate humanitarian and socio-economic hardships, including the plight of Palestinian women and children; and continuing efforts of civil society to build an effective international solidarity movement.

82. The Committee commends civil society organizations for their efforts to uphold international legitimacy with regard to the question of Palestine through advocacy and the mobilization of public opinion and for their initiatives aimed at alleviating the plight of the Palestinian people. It welcomes the efforts by organizations worldwide to mark 40 years of the occupation, thus raising public awareness of the issue. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening cooperation with civil society. The Committee encourages civil society organizations to broaden their base, involving trade unions and other large organizations, and to focus and harmonize their advocacy efforts at the local, national, regional and international levels with respect to the legal obligations of Governments, as emphasized in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. It supports all humanitarian and assistance initiatives geared towards improving the daily lives of the Palestinians. The Committee will continue to involve parliamentarians in its programme of international meetings and conferences. The Committee is of the opinion that the experience and political influence of lawmakers and their organizations can be instrumental in consolidating the democratic process and institution-building in the territory under the Palestinian Authority, strengthening political dialogue between the parties, and in applying norms of international law to efforts at resolving the conflict.

83. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, such as the further expansion and development of UNISPAL, including the graphic enhancement of the "Question of Palestine" website; the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority; and the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

84. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

85. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Letter of transmittal

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 62/80 of 10 December 2007.

The report covers the period from 5 October 2007 to 6 October 2008.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Paul Badji
Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974.

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly each year renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

3. Since 1991, the Committee has consistently supported the peace process. It welcomed the 1991 Madrid Peace Conference that launched the Middle East peace process based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It also welcomed the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) and subsequent implementation agreements. The Committee has strongly supported the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called on the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee continued to work towards creating conditions that would allow the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination and to its own independent State, on all of the Palestinian territory occupied in 1967, including East Jerusalem. The Committee also promotes support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The reporting period was characterized by the dichotomy between the resumption of the Israeli-Palestinian political negotiations and intensified international engagement on the issue, and a deteriorating situation on the ground.

5. On 27 November 2007, representatives of more than 50 Governments and intergovernmental organizations met at a conference, spearheaded by the Quartet and convened by the United States of America, in Annapolis, Maryland, which led to a resumption of permanent status negotiations between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) with the declared goal of reaching a two-State solution. Israel and PLO also renewed their commitment to implementing their respective obligations under the road map. The conference marked a new level of involvement on the part of the international community, with major stakeholders from all regions supporting a rigorous timetable for the finalization of the negotiations between the parties. The Committee welcomed the outcome of the meeting and pledged to work towards creating a climate conducive to the advancement of the permanent status negotiations. The resumption of the negotiations was further bolstered by the Paris donors' conference held in December 2007, which resulted in substantial pledges towards the Palestinian Reform and Development Plan.

² Since the thirty-first session, the Committee has submitted annual reports to the General Assembly; all such reports have been issued as supplement No. 35 of the sessional documentation of the Assembly.

6. At the same time, throughout the reporting period, the Israeli army continued to conduct military operations in Palestinian population centres, causing the deaths of and injury to many Palestinian civilians. The actions of Israel included extrajudicial killings, house demolitions and arrests. The Gaza Strip remained sealed off by the occupying Power for the greater part of the year, with Israel allowing only the most basic supplies to pass through checkpoints to avoid a large-scale humanitarian catastrophe. The response by armed Palestinian groups included rocket and mortar fire, sniper shootings and a suicide attack within Israel, resulting in Israeli casualties, including among civilians.

7. The Palestinian Authority, pursuant to its road map obligations, continued to consolidate, reform and train its security services, deploying them in major West Bank cities. In June, through Egyptian mediation, a Gaza ceasefire was agreed that has been by and large observed by the parties. The calm resulting from the ceasefire has led to more frequent openings of Israeli checkpoints for the passage of goods. However, the ceasefire did not result in a significant improvement in the dire living conditions of the civilian population in Gaza.

8. The Government of Israel, in violation of international law, United Nations resolutions and its road map obligations, continued to expand Israeli settlements, including in and around East Jerusalem. The construction of the wall on Palestinian land also continued, in contravention of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice (see A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1). The number of military checkpoints throughout the West Bank exceeded 600, stifling Palestinian economic activity and further worsening the daily hardships experienced by the Palestinian population. The lack of tangible progress in the situation on the ground had a negative effect on the ongoing negotiations between the parties.

9. Through its activities, the Committee sought to support the momentum created at Annapolis towards the successful conclusion of the permanent settlement negotiations. The Committee warned repeatedly that without visible improvement in the situation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the negotiations were doomed to fail and repeatedly reminded Israel, the occupying Power, of its obligations under international law. The Committee cautioned that the continuation of a policy of fait accompli on the ground posed a grave threat to the prospects for a peaceful, negotiated solution of the conflict. Moreover, it precludes any possibility of improving the economic and humanitarian situation and is making a two-State solution virtually impossible to achieve.

10. The Committee remained concerned about the internal Palestinian divisions blocking national reconciliation and the reunification of the West Bank and Gaza under the Palestinian Authority. It expressed support for all efforts of Arab and other countries, as well as the initiatives of the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, aimed at restoring Palestinian national unity as a necessity on the path towards a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine.

11. At a meeting marking 60 years since the dispossession of the Palestinian people in the Nakba of 1948, the Chairman of the Committee, Paul Badji, urged the international community to live up to its responsibility to bring about a just solution of the question of Palestine. Support should be given to advancing the political process, bolstering it through real changes on the ground, thereby enabling the parties to make progress in negotiations on all the permanent status issues.

Mandate of the Committee

12. On 10 December 2007, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 62/80), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 62/81) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 62/82). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 62/83 entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

13. By General Assembly decision 62/553 of 11 September 2008, Nicaragua was appointed as a member of the Committee, increasing the membership to 23. The Committee is encouraged by this expression of growing support for its work. The Committee is accordingly composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey and Ukraine.

14. At its 307th meeting, on 14 February 2008, the Committee re-elected Paul Badji (Senegal) as Chairman, Rodrigo Malmierca Díaz (Cuba) and Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) as Vice-Chairmen and Saviour F. Borg (Malta) as Rapporteur.

15. Also at the 307th meeting, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2008 (A/AC.183/2008/CRP.1).

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

16. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee as observers were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

17. In 2008, the Committee again welcomed as observers all States and organizations that had participated in its work in the preceding year.³

³ The observers at the Committee meetings were: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of), Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the African Union, the League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and Palestine.

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

18. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to monitor the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as relevant political developments. The Committee called to mind that 60 years had passed since the Nakba, when hundreds of thousands of Palestinians were forced to leave their homes and property following the Arab-Israeli hostilities of 1948. By the time armistice agreements were signed in 1949, Israeli forces had taken control of large parts of British Mandate Palestine, areas that became the new State of Israel. The Committee recalled that the conflict had resulted in the expulsion and mass flight of some 800,000 Palestine refugees, who left behind their homes, land and property. Today, the original Palestine refugees and their descendants are estimated to number more than 7 million persons and constitute the world's oldest and largest refugee population. The Committee maintained that the just resolution of the issue of Palestine refugees on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III) of 1948 was central to a lasting solution of the question of Palestine, along with the other permanent status issues of Jerusalem, settlements, borders, water and security. Overall, the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, remained of great concern. Despite the continuation of the political process and the efforts of the parties to overcome their differences and move ahead towards the achievement of a peaceful settlement of the conflict, minimal progress has been made.

19. Late in 2007, international efforts for a resumption of the peace process intensified. Encouraged by the Quartet, a number of regional meetings were held, culminating in the international conference held at Annapolis on 27 November under the auspices of the United States of America. The conference resulted in a joint understanding between the Palestinian and Israeli sides, committing them to relaunching the permanent status negotiations, resolving all outstanding issues, making every effort to conclude an agreement before the end of 2008 and implementing their respective obligations under the road map. Members of the League of Arab States underlined their continued support for the Arab Peace Initiative (A/56/1026-S/2002/932, annex II, resolution 14/221) and their belief in the need to achieve comprehensive peace in the region. Following the Annapolis conference, on 12 December, Israeli-Palestinian negotiations formally began, with a meeting of the joint steering committee headed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Israel, Tzipi Livni, and the Palestinian Chief Negotiator, Ahmed Qureia. The Prime Minister of Israel, Ehud Olmert, and the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, held meetings frequently, starting on 27 December 2007. In 2008, the leaders met on 8 and 27 January, 7 and 13 April, 5 May, 2 June, 13 July, 6 and 31 August and 16 September.

20. The Annapolis conference, followed by the International donors' conference for the Palestinian State, held in Paris on 17 December, co-chaired by France, Norway, the European Union and Quartet representative Tony Blair, provided important impetus to the peace process. The Secretary-General, 68 States and international institutions participated in the Paris conference, which was aimed at securing financial support for the Palestinian Authority. Donors commended the Palestinian Reform and Development Plan presented by Palestinian Prime Minister Salam Fayyad, and pledged $7.4 billion in assistance. The Quartet met members of the League of Arab States on the margins of the conference. Subsequent Quartet meetings at the principals' level were held on 2 May (London) and 24 June (Berlin), expressing concern about the situation on the ground, including the continued closure of the Gaza Strip and continued Israeli settlement construction in the West Bank, and calling for implementation of the road map and continuation and intensification of negotiations between the two sides aimed at resolving all permanent status issues.

21. In the meantime, the situation on the ground remained a cause of great concern. The Israel Defense Forces (IDF) continued to conduct deadly military incursions into the Gaza Strip, targeting militants responsible for rocket attacks. On 15 January, IDF entered the Gaza Strip and engaged Hamas militants in a heavy battle, which included air and tank operations. Forty-two Palestinians, including civilians, were killed, and 117 were injured by IDF as a result of 8 ground incursions, 15 air strikes and the firing of 10 surface-to-surface missiles over a period of one week.

22. In February and March, there was another major escalation in violence, with heavy Israeli air and land assaults on the Gaza Strip. The IDF operation "Hot Winter", launched on 29 February, lasted for five days. The Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on 29 February (see para. 63 below). On 1 March, 59 Palestinians were killed, including 39 civilians, among them women and children. During the same five-day period, over 390 rockets and mortar rounds were fired at Israel. The Security Council held an emergency meeting on 1 March (see para. 57 below). The Secretary-General condemned the excessive and disproportionate use of force and the killing of civilians. He also condemned indiscriminate rocket fire and called for an immediate cessation of such rocket attacks. Violence also spread to Jerusalem and the West Bank. On 16 April, 12 Palestinian civilians, including children and a news cameraman, were killed in Israeli action against militants following the killing of three Israeli soldiers.

23. Attacks by Palestinian militants also continued, and included a suicide attack in Dimona on 4 February, which killed one Israeli, and a shooting at a Jewish seminary in West Jerusalem, in which eight Israeli students were killed. An attack on 9 April on the Nahal Oz fuel depot killed two Israeli civilians. On 19 April, an attack using armoured vehicles and explosives against the Kerem Shalom crossing injured 13 soldiers. On 22 May, a suicide bombing attack caused significant structural damage to the Beit Hanoun (Erez) crossing. The blast also damaged electricity lines between the Gaza Strip and Israel. Three Israeli civilians were killed on 2 July, when a Palestinian used a bulldozer to attack vehicles in West Jerusalem. In a similar incident on 22 July, at least 16 people were injured.

24. The Committee denounced the excessive and indiscriminate use of force by Israel, the occupying Power, against the Palestinian civilian population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Committee strongly condemned extrajudicial killings, the destruction of Palestinian homes, civilian infrastructure and agricultural lands and the attendant devastating effects on the Palestinian population. At the same time, it strongly condemned all attacks against Israeli civilians and infrastructure. As of March, it was estimated that, since the start of the second intifada in 2000, nearly 5,500 Palestinians had been killed and some 32,600 wounded by Israeli forces. By June, at least 994 Palestinian children under the age of 18 had died as a result of the violence. The number of Israelis killed during the same period was 1,130.

25. Complying with road map phase I obligations, the Palestinian Authority deployed 300 security forces in Nablus in November 2007, leading to a significant improvement in the security environment in the area. On 3 May 2008, some 480 security officers were deployed in Jenin. However, citing security concerns, IDF continued operations in the West Bank. Such actions were regarded as seriously undermining the Palestinian Authority's security efforts. Improved security performance would be sustainable only through intensified Israeli-Palestinian cooperation. The Berlin Conference in Support of Palestinian Civil Security and the Rule of Law, held on 24 June, focused on strengthening the Palestinian police and justice sectors.

26. On 19 June, an Egyptian-mediated ceasefire was declared, bringing about some improvement in the security situation in the Gaza Strip and southern Israel. However, Israel did not extend the ceasefire to the West Bank, as repeatedly called for by the Palestinian Authority, and continued to carry out military operations and arrest campaigns. An IDF raid into Nablus on 24 June, launched without any prior contact with Palestinian security forces in the area, killed two Palestinians. IDF also closed down and seized equipment belonging to alleged Hamas-affiliated institutions, including schools, medical centres, media outlets and civil society organizations. Thirty-six civil society organizations were outlawed in the city.

27. Despite its claim that it was removing physical obstructions to ease movement, Israel continued to impose sweeping restrictions on Palestinian movement in the West Bank. An increasing number of obstacles to movement and access and continued construction of the wall and settlement expansion served to worsen the humanitarian situation. In August, 608 closure obstacles were erected by Israel in the West Bank.

28. There has been a marked increase in Palestinian home demolitions by Israel in 2008. There were 138 demolitions in the West Bank between January and March, compared with 29 in the last three months of 2007. Some 400 Palestinians were displaced as a result. A significant portion of the demolition orders issued in the past two years related to structures in Bedouin villages in the Jordan Valley, including Al-Hadidiya, Al-Farsiya, Al-Jiftlik and Al-'Aqabah. Home demolitions have also continued in occupied East Jerusalem. In addition, in January alone, Israeli forces uprooted 3,200 trees and destroyed water cisterns and stone terraces/retaining walls in fields near Beit Ula, north-west of Hebron.

29. In the Gaza Strip, the continuing blockade imposed by Israel in response to the election of Hamas in 2006 and its de facto takeover in June 2007 continued to inflict a severe toll on the 1.5 million residents. The suffocating closure of border crossings continued to obstruct the movement of persons and goods into and out of the area, a collective punishment of the entire Palestinian civilian population there. Farmers have been crippled by continued border closures, which did not allow produce to reach markets. The agricultural sector has suffered owing to repeated incursions, which have destroyed orchards and fields, and as the Israeli authorities prevented the planting of anything over 40 cm high, farmers were limited to growing cash crops such as strawberries and potatoes. Driven by need and diminishing supplies, up to half of the population of the Gaza Strip poured across the border into Egypt on 23 January, reflecting the desperation felt by Gazans, who had been effectively isolated for more than eight months. By January, imports into the Gaza Strip had dropped by 77 per cent, and exports from Gaza by 98 per cent. On 18 January, Israel imposed a comprehensive closure of the Gaza Strip, halting the import of fuel, food and medical and relief items. Some 40 per cent of the population of Gaza did not have regular access to running water. Gaza hospitals at times experienced power cuts for between 8 and 12 hours a day, hampering critical procedures. Hospitals were running on generators, limiting their activities to intensive care units only. Most Palestinians could not exit Gaza. By 8 August, at least 233 Palestinian patients had died after permission to exit Gaza for medical treatment had been denied or delayed. While the number of trucks entering through the Sufa and Al-Muntar (Karni) crossings increased by 54 per cent during the four weeks following the Egyptian-mediated ceasefire between Israel and Hamas agreed on 19 June, the import level stood at approximately 30 per cent of the level before June 2007, bringing little relief to Gazans.

30. Egypt continued its efforts aimed at defusing tensions between Fatah and Hamas, particularly in the Gaza Strip, and at facilitating the gradual reopening of crossings in coordination with the parties. On 5 June, President Abbas called for a national dialogue to implement the Yemen initiative on Palestinian national reconciliation, which called for a resumption of dialogue in line with the Mecca Agreement and for the return of the situation in the Gaza Strip to that existing before June 2007 (S/2008/201, annex). The Secretary-General stated that unity among Palestinians was very important and expressed the hope that the parties concerned would resolve all issues through dialogue in a peaceful manner.

31. The PLO Negotiations Affairs Department estimated that, as of August, almost 11,000 Palestinians were being held in Israeli prisons or detention camps, including 2,700 Palestinians arrested in 2008, most of them from the West Bank. Some 9,000 were identified as political prisoners, including 326 minors and 94 women. Some 49 Palestinian Legislative Council members have been detained for two years under administrative detention without charge or trial. About 85 per cent of the detainees, in particular children, had been subjected to abuse, beating and humiliation before and during questioning. It was also estimated that, since 1967, Israel had detained and imprisoned almost 700,000 Palestinians, constituting one fifth of the entire Palestinian population of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. On 3 December 2007, Israel released 429 prisoners, followed by the release of 198 prisoners on 25 August. Both releases were described as "goodwill gestures".

32. In contravention of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, Israel continued the illegal construction of the separation wall on Palestinian land in deviation from the armistice lines of 1949. As of May, 409 km of the wall, or 57 per cent of the planned route, had been built. Another 66 km (9 per cent) were under construction, and the construction of 248 km (34 per cent) had not yet begun. Upon completion of the wall, 11.9 per cent of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, would lie west of the wall or be surrounded completely or partially by it. Those areas are home to 498,000 Palestinians (222,500 in East Jerusalem), living in 92 towns and villages. The wall would de facto annex 60 settlements (including 12 in East Jerusalem) in which 381,000 Israelis live. In July, the defence establishment agreed to dismantle a 2.4 km stretch of the separation wall north of Qalqilya. The move would return 2,600 dunums of agricultural land to its Palestinian owners. The dismantled stretch would be replaced by 4.9 km of fencing closer to the Green Line, as ordered by the Israeli High Court of Justice. In August, the Israeli Government decided to re-route a section of the wall near the biggest West Bank settlement of “Ma’ale Adumim”, which would allow about 4,000 dunums of Palestinian land to remain on the eastern side of the wall.

33. In the period under review, Israel continued settlement activity in the West Bank, particularly in and around East Jerusalem. As of July 2008, there were approximately 4,000 settlement units under construction in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. Construction commenced on 275 new buildings in 53 settlements; 81 per cent were located in areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory now west of the separation wall. It was estimated that 40 per cent of the West Bank was taken up by Israeli infrastructure — settlements, roads and military bases — which was largely off-limits to Palestinians. The rest of the land has been broken up into enclaves, which are separated from each other and controlled by checkpoints and roadblocks. On 15 October 2007, Jerusalem’s committee on planning and construction voted in favour of permitting settlers to reside in a five-storey building located in the middle of the East Jerusalem neighbourhood of Silwan, despite the fact that it had been built without a permit. The building had been slated for evacuation.

34. On 4 December 2007, the Israeli Construction and Housing Ministry published tenders for the construction of 307 housing units in the East Jerusalem settlement of “Har Homa” (Jabal Abu Ghneim), home to approximately 4,000 settlers. Also in “Har Homa”, plans to construct more than 1,000 housing units on “absentee land” belonging to Palestinians were approved by the Jerusalem municipal planning board on 7 January. Tenders for 120 more homes were approved for “Har Homa” on 30 May, and in July, the construction of 1,800 new housing units was approved for “Har Homa” and “Pisgat Ze’ev”.

35. On 1 January 2008, tenders for 440 units in East Jerusalem’s “East Talpiot” settlement were announced by the Israel Land Administration. On 7 January, the construction of 60 housing units in the East Jerusalem settlement of Ras al-Amud commenced. Prime Minister Olmert approved the construction of 750 homes in the West Bank settlement of “Givat Ze’ev” on 8 March 2008. Approximately 50 units were approved in the “Gilo” settlement following the Annapolis conference. On 31 March, the Jerusalem municipality announced plans to build 600 new houses in the “Pisgat Ze’ev” settlement in East Jerusalem. More Palestinian property was confiscated to build a light rail system connecting the settlements in occupied East Jerusalem with West Jerusalem, further isolating East Jerusalem from the rest of the West Bank. In all, 9,617 new housing units have been built in East Jerusalem in the short period following the Annapolis conference.

36. On 8 April, the Israeli Vice Premier, Haim Ramon, reportedly confirmed that the “Ofra” settlement had been built on privately owned Palestinian land. On 18 April, the Construction and Housing Ministry invited construction firms to bid for the rights to build 48 houses in the “Ariel” settlement and a further 52 houses in the “Elkana” settlement. On 30 April, Israeli police began operating in a new police station located in the so-called E1 area near the “Ma’ale Adumim” settlement.

37. On 9 May, the Israeli Interior Ministry established a new municipality in the West Bank that included the “Ariel” bloc settlements of “Elkana”, “Etz Efraim”, “Oranit” and “Sha’arei Tikva”, with a total population of more than 13,200 settlers. This measure removed the four settlements from their traditional authorities, paving the way for their further development and expansion.

38. On 21 May, the Construction and Housing Ministry announced a plan to build 286 new houses in the “Beitar Ilit” settlement near Bethlehem. On 14 July, the Israeli Ministry of Industry, Trade and Labour approved the expansion of the industrial park in the “Ariel” settlement, allowing for the construction of 27 factories and tripling the size of the settlement’s industrial park.

39. On 13 June, the Israeli Interior Ministry confirmed plans to build 1,300 additional apartments in the “Ramat Shlomo” settlement in East Jerusalem. On 19 June, in Al-Mazra’a Al-Qabaliya, north-west of Ramallah, Israeli military bulldozers razed about 500 dunums of land, which are slated to be used for settler agricultural projects and for a new settlement. On 24 July, the Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee of the Knesset approved the construction of 20 new housing units at “Maskiyot”, establishing a new settlement in the Jordan Rift Valley in the West Bank.

40. According to reports available to the Committee, the Israeli Government was responsible for much of the increase in settlement construction. According to some accounts, the number of Government tenders for building in the settlements in the first half of 2008 increased by 550 per cent.

41. More than 480,000 Israeli settlers reside in settlements in the West Bank, including more than 200,000 who live in occupied East Jerusalem. There are approximately 440 settlements, outposts, military bases and other occupation sites, including 144 settlements, 96 outposts inside settlement boundaries, 48 military bases and other sites in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. While Palestinians constitute over 50 per cent of the population of East Jerusalem, only 7.3 per cent of its land is available for Palestinian construction.

42. Settler violence, harassment and intimidation of Palestinian civilians have also continued. On 31 March, settlers in Hebron sealed with glue the entrances to six stores belonging to Palestinians. They also sealed off the entrance to the office of the Islamic Waqf at the Tomb of the Patriarchs. On 24 July, more than 20 settlers attacked the Palestinian village of Burin near Nablus, smashing cars and windows and cutting electrical wires. Israeli security officials on 18 August raised concerns about an increase in violence by settlers in the West Bank. On 13 September, armed settlers from “Yitzhar” fired at the residents of a Palestinian village, vandalizing property and agricultural land.

43. Israeli restrictions on the Palestinians continued to be the main cause of the economic downturn, with gross domestic product (GDP) increasingly driven by Government spending and donor aid. Limited resources were available for investment, further reducing the productive base for a self-sustaining economy. Real GDP was negative in the first half of 2007, but began to recover in the West Bank during the second half of the year. As a result of the situation in the Gaza Strip, however, real GDP growth in 2007 was estimated to be zero. During the reporting period, the socio-economic situation of residents in the Gaza Strip took a turn for the worse. Some 80 per cent of families were reliant on humanitarian aid, compared with 63 per cent in 2006, and unemployment was approaching 50 per cent. In 2006, some 3,900 factories employed 35,000 people, but by December 2007, there were just 195 factories left, employing 1,700. Construction projects estimated at $240 million came to a halt, resulting in 42,000 workers being laid off. The number of households earning less than $1.20 per person per day rose from 55 per cent to 70 per cent. As a result of border crossing closures, estimated lost income from strawberry sales alone during the 2007-2008 season was approximately $7 million. The reduction in fuel supplies began on 28 October 2007. In February, gasoline (diesel) supply dropped by approximately 67 per cent and benzine by about 80 per cent.

44. In the course of the year, in order to advance economic development, the Palestinian Authority finalized its 2008-2010 Reform and Development Plan and began implementing nearly 200 development projects, worth $250 million. A further 226 projects were approved by the Government. On 13 May, Quartet representative Tony Blair announced a package of measures to stimulate economic development. Implementation advanced, with selected obstacles to movement being removed and a telecommunications contract being signed between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. However, progress in relaxing movement and access of persons and goods remained slow. The 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access has yet to be implemented. While the fiscal performance of the Palestinian Authority has improved somewhat, there was a budget shortfall of $400 million for the period from October through the end of 2008, which means that salaries might not be paid for that period, unless donors fulfil outstanding pledges and direct assistance to budget support.

45. The isolation of the Gaza Strip has had the most dramatic impact on women and, in particular, children, who account for more than 56 per cent of the population. Restricted access to food, water and medicine seriously affected newborn babies and pregnant mothers. Many babies were born suffering from anaemia inherited from their mothers. Of every 1,000 born, 28 die from malnutrition, anaemia and other poverty-related diseases. In 2002, 19 per cent of Gazans suffered from anaemia. In 2008, the figure was 77.5 per cent. Children received on average only 61 per cent of their daily calorie requirement from United Nations supplies. There were approximately 25,000 deaf and hearing-impaired people, many of whom had no specialist support service. About 2,000 children dropped out of school. Electricity cuts disrupted teaching, shortening the school day. There was a nearly 80 per cent failure rate among students in grades four to nine, with the rate increasing to 90 per cent in mathematics.

46. Throughout the occupation, problems compounding the water crisis have included Israel's discriminatory policy in distributing joint water resources in the West Bank and the limits it placed on the ability of the Palestinian Authority to drill new wells. The crisis has worsened in 2008 because of a serious drought. West Bank per capita water use was about 66 litres a day, two thirds of the minimum of 100 litres recommended by the World Health Organization in order to ensure that all health concerns were met. Per capita water consumption by the settlers in the West Bank was 3.5 times that of Palestinians, or more than 200 litres per day. In the Gaza Strip, over-extraction from the coastal aquifer has led to seawater intrusion, and groundwater resources have been heavily contaminated. The blockade imposed on the Gaza Strip since January 2006 has pushed the water and sanitation sectors to the brink of collapse due to lack of investment. Some communities had access to only 14 litres of water per capita daily. Because of the lack of fuel, the Gaza Power Generating Company has had to cut the power supply, leaving Gaza's 1.5 million people with daily power cuts of up to eight hours, reducing access to drinking water.

47. The humanitarian situation of the 1.5 million people in the Gaza Strip has become increasingly grave, making the work of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) even more critical. Gazans were caught between the Israeli closure, which amounted to collective punishment, and repeated militant attacks. The low levels of fuel delivery had an impact on all sectors of life, forcing UNRWA, for the first time, to suspend food distribution to 650,000 people.

48. In order to save fuel, UNRWA gave priority to food distribution, solid-waste removal and sewerage projects. Doctors, nurses, teachers and social workers were obliged to walk to work. Between 30 and 50 per cent of ambulances could not be used owing to the shortage of fuel and spare parts. Another consequence was the daily dumping of approximately 55,000 litres of raw and partially treated sewage into the Mediterranean Sea. In June 2008, new procedures applied to the movement of United Nations agencies in the West Bank, including property searches and refusal to accept United Nations identification documents, caused increasing operational concerns and difficulties among staff on the ground.

49. According to a survey conducted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the World Food Programme and UNRWA in May 2008, soaring food prices, falling incomes and growing unemployment had brought Palestinian purchasing power to an all-time low, jeopardizing the livelihoods of Palestinians and leading to heavy debt and changes in family eating habits. Rising food and fuel prices, coupled with the closure regime imposed upon the Gaza Strip, meant that aid agencies found it increasingly expensive to deliver aid to the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The consequences of the stepped-up violence in and around the Gaza Strip had dire consequences for civilians. Since January, 68 Palestinian children have been killed in the Gaza Strip, including UNRWA schoolchildren.

50. UNRWA implemented an emergency appeal to help approximately 170,000 refugee families cope with additional economic hardship. Owing to funding shortfalls, the Agency was able to provide only a fraction of the relief required to meet the ever-increasing needs.

51. The Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People of the United Nations Development Programme launched its midterm strategic framework 2008-2011, reinforcing its commitment to supporting socio-economic development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, exploring new approaches and drawing on its corporate capacities and strategic partnerships. Priorities included poverty reduction and democratic governance. The document itself was the outcome of cooperation and coordination between UNDP and the Palestinian Authority. Since the establishment of the Palestinian Authority in 1994, the Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, in partnership with public and private institutions, civil society and donors has invested more than $700 million in support of the Palestinian people.

52. The Committee also continued to express appreciation for the work of the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the scope of the consolidated appeal for 2008 focused on delivering humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/80

53. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others, as indicated below.

54. On 20 June 2008, to mark the 60 years of dispossession of Palestine refugees, the Committee held a special meeting at United Nations Headquarters.

1. Action taken in the Security Council

Meetings of the Security Council

55. During the period under review, the Security Council continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. It held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled "The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question".

56. The Council held its 5824th meeting on 22 January 2008, at the request of the Chairman of the Arab Group (S/2008/31). Twenty-eight speakers took the floor during an open debate (S/PV.5824 and Resumption 1).

57. The Council held its 5847th meeting on 1 March 2008, at the request of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (S/2008/142), to consider the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory due to continuing Israeli military attacks on the civilian population (S/PV.5847).

58. An open debate following a monthly briefing was held on 22 July 2008, at which the Chairman of the Committee, Paul Badji, made a statement (S/PV.5940 Resumption 1).

59. The Council held its 5983rd meeting on 26 September 2008, at the request of Saudi Arabia, to consider Israeli settlement activities in the occupied Palestinian territories (S/2008/615). A total of 18 speakers, including 10 Ministers for Foreign Affairs, took the floor during the debate (S/PV.5983).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

60. On 20 November 2007, the Committee issued a statement on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of the adoption by the Security Council of resolution 242 (1967) (GA/PAL/1067).

61. On 30 November 2007, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the Annapolis conference (GA/PAL/1070).

62. On 4 February 2008, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1071).

63. On 29 February, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the escalation of violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially in the Gaza Strip, and the killing of innocent civilians (GA/PAL/1080).

64. On 4 March 2008, the Chairman of the Committee, Paul Badji, met with the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs and discussed the latest political developments and the Committee's programme of activities.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 62/80 and 62/81

1. Programme of international meetings and conferences

65. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

66. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Amman, 19 and 20 February 2008;

(b) United Nations International Conference on Palestine Refugees, headquarters of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Paris, 29 and 30 April 2008;

(c) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Qawra, Malta, 3 and 4 June 2008.

67. All of the above events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as representatives of civil society and the media. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the Division's website.

68. In Amman, during the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, the Committee delegation was received by the Prime Minister of Jordan, Nader Dahabi. The Committee delegation also visited the Palestine refugee camps of Husn and Irbid, in northern Jordan, where UNRWA provides social services to the refugees. While in Paris in connection with the United Nations International Conference on Palestine Refugees, the Committee delegation held meetings at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of France with the Directors of the United Nations and Middle East Departments. In Malta, during the United Nations Meeting on the Question of Palestine, the Committee delegation was received by the President of Malta, Edward Fenech-Adami, at the presidential palace, and by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of Malta, Tonio Borg, at the Foreign Ministry. Following its visit to Malta, the Committee delegation was received in Vatican City by the Secretary for Relations with States of the Holy See, Archbishop Dominique Mamberti.

2. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

69. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference.

70. The Committee also continued its cooperation on the question of Palestine with States members of the European Union. During the meeting at the French Foreign Ministry, the Bureau discussed issues of mutual interest in the light of the assumption by France of the presidency of the European Union. Those consultations were continued at a meeting on 10 September 2008 with the Permanent Representative of France to the United Nations in his capacity as representative of the presidency of the European Union.

3. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

71. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2007. The meetings provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to improve coordination of their activities. Numerous representatives of civil society organizations also attended the special meeting of the Committee held on 20 June 2008 to mark 60 years of dispossession of Palestine refugees, including expert speakers who shared with the Committee their analyses of the status of Palestine refugees. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations, encouraging them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at achieving a just and lasting peace between Israelis and Palestinians.

72. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations. Over the past year, the Chairman of the Committee met with representatives of civil society organizations in New York and at the meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee away from Headquarters.

73. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained the Internet website "Civil society network on the Question of Palestine" (<http://www.un.org/depts/dpa/ngo>) as a tool for the exchange of information and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee. At the request of the Committee, the Division also continued to issue its bimonthly newsletter, NGO Action News, covering the activities of civil society on the various aspects of the question of Palestine.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

74. The Committee continued to develop its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations and invited a number of parliamentarians to speak at its meetings. In connection with the international meetings, the delegation of the Committee held meetings in Paris with deputies of the National Assembly and the Senate, as well as with members and officials of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean, headquartered in Saint Julians, Malta.

4. Research, monitoring and publications

75. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through UNISPAL:

(a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by United Nations and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;

(b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;

(c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;

(d) Special bulletins and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;

(f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

5. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

76. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop UNISPAL and the "Question of Palestine" website, which is located on the United Nations home page under "Peace and Security", pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates. This included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of the system (<http://unispal.un.org>), including by incorporating additional multimedia content and a streamlined search facility. The Division undertook a redesign of the UNISPAL and "Question of Palestine" websites, which is nearing completion, and conducted an online survey of website users to assess ways in which the system could be further improved.

6. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

77. Two staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority participated in a training programme conducted by the Division from September to December 2007, in conjunction with the sixty-second session of the General Assembly. The trainees familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other organs and conducted research on specific topics.

7. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

78. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna on 29 November 2007. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a cultural exhibit entitled "Palestine: A Continuing Legacy" and a musical performance by Simon Shaheen and Qantara were organized by the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

79. In adopting its programme of work, the Committee decided that a similar observance of the International Day of Solidarity should be organized in 2008.

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/82

80. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 62/82, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine. The objective of the programme is to raise international awareness on this question and on the situation in the Middle East with a view to contributing effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process.

81. The Department covered intergovernmental meetings and related press briefings using all media at its disposal. The Department produced a total of 130 press releases, providing summaries in English and French of formal meetings and briefings, and distributed live television coverage to broadcasters around the world through United Nations Television. Television coverage was also posted on the Internet (webcast) for easy viewing. UNifeed produced and distributed 11 packages on the question of Palestine, including the United Nations response to developments on the ground, relief work and support for refugees, as well as activities of the Security Council and the Human Rights Council.

82. The United Nations Radio Arabic Language Unit reported on meetings organized by the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People.

83. The United Nations News Centre, a news portal of the United Nations website, regularly highlighted stories related to the question of Palestine in the six official languages. In addition, a special focus page on the Middle East provided an in-depth and user-friendly venue for accessing information on the issue.

84. The Department organized a training programme for five young Palestinian journalists at Headquarters, in Washington, D.C., and in Geneva from 5 November to 14 December 2007. The programme was aimed at strengthening the skills of the participants as broadcast media professionals and providing them with basic technical skills to maintain websites in Arabic.

85. The Department updated and displayed the permanent exhibit of the question of Palestine at Headquarters, in English, and at the United Nations Office at Geneva, in French. It also produced an updated edition of the booklet The Question of Palestine and the United Nations in English and in other official languages.

86. The network of United Nations information centres, services and offices continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine and to organize relevant activities. A major focus of activities was the promotion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2007. The Secretary-General's message for the Day was widely disseminated in official and non-official languages.

87. Information centres/services in Accra, Ankara, Asunción, Beirut, Brussels, Cairo, Dar es Salaam, Jakarta, Mexico City, Moscow, New Delhi, Prague, Pretoria, Rabat, Rio de Janeiro, Tokyo, Vienna and Washington, D.C., commemorated the Day by organizing events individually or jointly with Governments, regional organizations, civil society and the media.

88. During the period under review, some centres provided media-related assistance, including the organization of press conferences, to the Commissioner-General of UNRWA during her visits to their duty stations. They also placed opinion pieces (op-eds) by the Commissioner-General and the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator in newspapers. Some information centres translated and disseminated the statement of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict on the violence in Gaza.

89. In its UN Chronicle magazine, the Department featured full coverage of the sixty-second session of the General Assembly and the Fourth Committee (Special Political and Decolonization Committee), including the reports of UNRWA and the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories. It also published articles which covered issues related to the question of Palestine, including “Gaza border closures accompanied by fears of humanitarian crisis” and “Financing for development to reach the MDGs: the experience in the Arab region”.

90. The United Nations Today, the successor volume to Basic Facts About the United Nations, included a thorough review of United Nations action in the Middle East, including participation in the ongoing peace process, humanitarian assistance to Palestine refugees and advocacy for the needs of the Palestinian people and support for their human rights.

91. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library continued to digitize relevant documents for the UNISPAL document collection.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

92. The year 2008 marked 60 years of Palestinian dispossession, or the Nakba, as the Palestinians refer to the loss of their homeland. Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians were forced to leave their homes and properties as a result of the Arab-Israeli hostilities of 1948. At its special meeting to mark that event, the Committee reiterated the permanent responsibility of the United Nations towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law and urged the international community to continue its support for the Middle East peace process.

93. The Committee was encouraged by the new level of engagement by major stakeholders from all regions that led to the Annapolis conference and Paris donors' conference resulting in a resumption of permanent status negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians and an outstanding degree of support for the Palestinian Authority and its economic reform programme. The Committee structured its activities throughout the year so as to support a climate conducive to the advancement of permanent status negotiations between the parties aimed at the achievement of the two-State solution and the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The Committee stressed the need for a complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror. It called upon Israel, the occupying Power, to end its illegal policies and oppressive practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, such as settlement activities, the construction of the wall and numerous measures of collective punishment. It emphasized the importance for both sides of implementing their road map obligations. The Committee welcomed the resumption of the negotiations between the parties, including at the highest level. It has repeatedly stressed that the political momentum provided by the Annapolis and Paris conferences must not be lost, and supported all efforts towards the goal of achieving a final status agreement by the end of 2008.

94. Regrettably, the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations were not supported by tangible improvements in the situation on the ground. The occupying Power continued to change the reality of life in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, through the expansion of settlements and related infrastructure, including the wall, and the fragmentation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory using checkpoints and other obstacles. This led to the stagnation of the political process and continued deterioration of Palestinian socio-economic conditions, further undermining efforts by the Palestinian Authority and the international community to bring about a two-State solution. The Committee is of the view that the illegal Israeli occupation of the Palestinian Territory must end without conditions, which should allow the Palestinian people to establish an independent State on all territories occupied in 1967, including East Jerusalem, and to exercise their inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination. The Committee firmly supports the two-State solution in accordance with Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee is convinced that only serious and sustained international engagement will bring about a peaceful and negotiated settlement of all outstanding issues and reverse the growing support for radical forces that promote violent and unilateral approaches to ending the conflict. Any diplomatic process needs to be buttressed by urgent and meaningful steps on the ground. The continued support of the international community is crucial for advancing the process, namely, a consistent dialogue between the Quartet and the parties and the inclusion of regional partners. The Arab Peace Initiative remains a crucial element for advancing peace in the region. States members of the European Union are encouraged to take a more proactive role in international efforts to resolve the conflict. The Committee welcomes the unwavering and substantial budgetary support for the Palestinian Authority provided by the European Union and other major donors. At the same time, it calls upon all donors to live up to their pledges and ensure the continued functioning of the Palestinian Authority institutions.

95. It is also imperative that the parties live up to their road map obligations. In particular, the Committee calls upon Israel to end its military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to stop any other measures that further undermine Palestinian institutions. The Committee is strongly opposed to the illegal construction and expansion of settlements in the West Bank, as well as the unlawful construction of the wall, and finds these activities incompatible with negotiations on the permanent settlement. It again reminds Israel, the occupying Power, that it is bound by the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, which, inter alia, obliges parties to the Convention to protect civilians during hostilities. Israel must release, immediately and unconditionally, all Palestinian prisoners, including imprisoned Cabinet members and parliamentarians. The Committee strongly condemns the killing of innocent civilians by either side. It denounces rocket attacks on Israel and calls for the cessation of these activities by Palestinian armed groups. The Committee has welcomed the agreed upon ceasefire in Gaza and has demanded its extension to the West Bank. The ceasefire and the political process can be sustained only once Israel has stopped and reversed all illegal actions in the Palestinian Territory occupied since 1967.

96. The Committee calls upon the Palestinian leadership, the leaders of all factions and all Palestinians to unite in support of President Abbas, his Government and all democratically elected Palestinian institutions and to resolve their political differences by peaceful means. The Committee calls for a comprehensive national dialogue supported by confidence-building measures to start a process of regaining national unity and the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under the Palestinian Authority. It is paramount that the various Palestinian factions put the national interests and aspirations of the Palestinian people ahead of any partisan concerns. The Committee firmly believes that the unity of the Palestinian people is an essential condition for achieving a viable solution of the question of Palestine.

97. The Committee is convinced that its own work and the programme of mandated activities of the Division for Palestinian Rights represent a significant contribution by the United Nations and its membership to the search for a comprehensive, just and lasting peaceful solution of the question of Palestine, in accordance with international law and relevant United Nations resolutions. It will continue to generate heightened international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine, international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and the use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) the increased international awareness of United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine as indicated by the growing number of documents and relevant information materials on the issue accessed by users worldwide at the websites maintained by the Division. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority has proved its usefulness and requests that it be continued.

98. The Committee considers that its programme of international meetings and conferences contributes to focusing the attention of Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and the general public on the need for advancing a peaceful settlement of the conflict and mobilizing much-needed assistance to the Palestinian people. The Committee, through its Bureau, will regularly assess the outcomes of the international meetings and conferences and, where required, decide on steps to enhance their contribution to the mandated goals of the Committee. In its meetings programme for 2009, the Committee intends to address issues such as the importance of the continuation of the political dialogue between the parties aimed at achieving a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine; the significance of realizing a tangible improvement in the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem; and the urgent need for all stakeholders to remain engaged in all aspects of the question of Palestine, to monitor and assess the developments and to use the available mechanisms, such as the main organs of the United Nations, to actively influence the process. The Committee will also highlight the adverse consequences of the settlement policy and the construction of the wall for the achievement of a two-State solution; the collective international responsibility to protect the Palestinian people; and the need to alleviate humanitarian and socio-economic hardships, including the plight of Palestinian women and children, with particular focus on the urgent need to improve the situation in Gaza.

99. The Committee commends civil society organizations for their efforts to uphold international legitimacy with regard to the question of Palestine through advocacy and the mobilization of public opinion and for their initiatives aimed at alleviating the plight of the Palestinian people. It has welcomed the efforts made by organizations worldwide to mark 60 years of Palestinian dispossession, raising public awareness of this long-standing and tragic issue. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening cooperation with civil society. The Committee encourages civil society organizations to broaden their base, involving trade unions and other large organizations, and to focus and harmonize their advocacy efforts at the local, national, regional and international levels. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. The Committee is of the opinion that the experience and political influence of lawmakers can be instrumental in consolidating the democratic process and institution-building in the territory under the Palestinian Authority, strengthening political dialogue between the parties, and in applying norms of international law to efforts to resolve the conflict.

100. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, such as the further expansion and development of UNISPAL, including the graphic enhancement of the “Question of Palestine” website; the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority; and the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

101. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

102. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Letter of transmittal

[6 October 2009]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 63/26 of 26 November 2008.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2008 to 6 October 2009.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Paul Badji
Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974.

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly each year renewed the Committee's mandate in pursuit of the tasks assigned to it.

3. The Committee has consistently supported a peaceful solution of the question of Palestine. It welcomed the 1991 Madrid Peace Conference that launched the Middle East peace process based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It also welcomed the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) and subsequent implementation agreements. The Committee has strongly supported the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called on the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee continued to work towards creating conditions for successful negotiations on a permanent settlement allowing the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights. The Committee also promotes support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The period since October 2008 was characterized by the stagnation of the political process, lack of progress in efforts to unite the West Bank and the Gaza Strip under the Palestinian Authority and a worsening situation on the ground throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. Of particular concern was the continuing humanitarian emergency in the Gaza Strip, exacerbated by an Israeli military offensive carried out in December 2008 and January 2009, and the continuing imposition of a severe blockade on the Gaza Strip which obstructed the movement of persons and goods, including humanitarian access and the import of all essential supplies.

² Since the thirty-first session, the Committee has submitted annual reports to the General Assembly; all such reports have been issued as supplement No. 35 of the sessional documentation of the Assembly.

5. The political process between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, which was resumed after the Annapolis conference of November 2007, failed to produce any tangible results and stalled once again. The Gaza ceasefire was not accompanied by an easing of the blockade and crossing points remained closed, allowing in only minimal humanitarian assistance for the 1.5 million civilians in Gaza. Israel continued to conduct military operations in the Gaza Strip, resulting in Palestinian casualties. This was met with resumed rocket and mortar fire by armed Palestinian groups into southern Israel, causing Israeli casualties and property damage. By the end of December 2008, Israel escalated the situation launching Operation Cast Lead, a large-scale military offensive with the declared goal of eliminating the threat of rocket fire on Israeli population centres. Military operations lasted for more than three weeks, killing more than 1,400 Palestinians, the majority of them civilians, including hundreds of children and women, and injuring more than 5,000 civilians. Israel reported 14 deaths, including 4 civilians, and 182 wounded. In the West Bank, the expansion of Israeli settlements, including outposts, continued, as did the construction of the wall, including in and around East Jerusalem. The number of checkpoints increased, which restricted Palestinian movement and undermined efforts to revive the economy. The Israeli army continued to carry out raids into Palestinian cities, often accompanied by the arrest and detention of Palestinians. The situation in East Jerusalem seriously deteriorated, with land confiscations, house demolitions and evictions of Palestinian residents, and the transfer of more Israeli settlers. The divide among major Palestinian factions continued to affect the lives of ordinary Palestinians, in particular in Gaza, and prevented Palestinians from uniting in support of the Palestinian Authority.

6. The international community responded to the assault on Gaza by calling for calm and respect for the lives of innocent civilians. Rocket attacks by Palestinian militants that indiscriminately targeted Israeli civilians were also condemned. The General Assembly and the Security Council met in special sessions and adopted resolutions calling for, inter alia, a permanent and durable ceasefire and the immediate provision of the necessary humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian civilian population in Gaza. The Secretary-General intervened and visited Gaza immediately after the halt of hostilities. The Sharm el-Sheikh donor conference on 2 March led to pledges of about $4.5 billion for Gaza's reconstruction. In March, the Palestinian Authority presented a plan to put those funds to effective use for early recovery and reconstruction. However, the continuation of the Israeli blockade to date has prevented the start of any reconstruction, which has deepened the despair of the Palestinians and provided a fertile ground for rising extremism in Gaza. After the war, a number of investigations were conducted, including one launched by the Secretary-General to assess the damage caused to United Nations facilities in Gaza and casualties among civilians having sought refuge there and a fact-finding mission launched by the Human Rights Council.

7. The Quartet continued its efforts at achieving a comprehensive resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict. It emphasized that Arab-Israeli peace and an end to the occupation that began in 1967 and the establishment of a State of Palestine in the West Bank and Gaza were in the fundamental interest of the international community. It called upon Israel and the Palestinians to act on their previous agreements and obligations, in particular adherence to the road map, irrespective of reciprocity. It acknowledged progress made by the Palestinian Authority in reforming its security sector and building its institutions and called for continued efforts to improve law and order, to fight violent extremism and to end incitement. Buttressed by the active efforts of the new United States Administration, the Quartet urged Israel to refrain from provocative actions in East Jerusalem and to freeze all settlement activity, which is deemed unlawful in accordance with international law and recognized by the international community as the biggest obstacle to achieving a permanent settlement.

8. Through its activities, the Committee sought to draw attention to the urgent need for coordinated and collective efforts to mitigate the negative developments occurring on the ground. The Committee warned repeatedly that without visible improvement in the situation on the ground, the negotiations would be doomed to fail. It supported the Gaza ceasefire and called upon Israel to lift the blockade. After the Israeli invasion of Gaza, the Committee swiftly condemned the deadly military assaults and destruction perpetrated by Israel and demanded a halt to the warfare. It also condemned rocket firing into Israel. The Committee's first international meeting in early March 2009 provided for an early opportunity to discuss the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian people in Gaza and to promote and coordinate reconstruction efforts. Another meeting, held in July, pointed to the obligations of all Governments to uphold international humanitarian law. Other international meetings emphasized the urgency to implement a two-State solution, cautioning that the continuation of the Israeli policy of imposing faits accomplis on the ground posed a grave threat to the prospects for a just, peaceful and negotiated solution of the conflict. Throughout the reporting period, the Bureau of the Committee met with high-level representatives of Governments, intergovernmental organizations, parliamentarians, civil society and the media, encouraging them to support the role and activities of the Committee and urging them to take appropriate steps in support of the implementation of the international consensus on the need to achieve a two-State solution.

Mandate of the Committee

9. On 26 November 2008, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 63/26), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 63/27) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 63/28). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 63/29, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

10. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey and Ukraine.

11. At its 315th meeting, on 11 February 2009, the Committee re-elected Paul Badji (Senegal) as Chairman, Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) as Vice-Chairman and Saviour F. Borg (Malta) as Rapporteur. The Committee also elected Abelardo Moreno Fernández (Cuba) as the other Vice-Chairman. At its 317th meeting, on 17 September 2009, the Committee elected Pedro Juan Núñez Mosquera (Cuba) as Vice-Chairman, to replace Abelardo Moreno Fernández, who had been assigned by his Government to another post.

12. Also at the 315th meeting, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2009 (see A/AC.183/2009/1).

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

13. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee as observers were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

14. In 2009, the Committee again welcomed as observers all States and organizations that had participated in its work in the preceding year.³

³ The observers at the Committee meetings were: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of), Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the African Union, the League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and Palestine.

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

15. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to monitor the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as relevant political developments.

16. The violence in the Gaza Strip and southern Israel started to escalate when Israel killed six Hamas members in military operations in the central Gaza Strip that targeted a tunnel that the Israeli military said Hamas had been planning to use to capture Israeli soldiers. Militants in the Gaza Strip responded the following day by firing 35 Qassam rockets into southern Israel. Both Hamas and Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for the rocket fire.

17. Following the end on 19 December 2008 of the six-month ceasefire between Israel and Hamas in the Gaza Strip that had been brokered by Egypt, on 27 December 2008 the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) launched, without warning, their military offensive in the Gaza Strip, Operation Cast Lead, with the stated purpose of deterring further rocket attacks by Hamas against Israeli citizens. Despite the international community's repeated calls for an immediate ceasefire and respect for civilian life, the offensive continued until Israeli troops completed withdrawal from the Gaza Strip on 21 January 2009, preceded by unilateral ceasefires declared by both parties on 19 January.

18. International humanitarian organizations and other investigation missions reported that during the offensive, the Israeli forces had made extensive use of white phosphorus in residential areas, causing death and injury to civilians and extensive fire damage to property. Homes, schools, medical facilities and United Nations buildings took direct hits. Tank-fired flechette rounds were also used by Israeli forces on at least five occasions between 4 and 9 January, resulting in the deaths of several civilians.

19. During the offensive, Israeli forces routinely prevented ambulances and other vehicles from reaching the wounded or from collecting bodies anywhere near their positions. Requests by Palestinian ambulance services to be allowed passage to rescue the wounded and evacuate the dead in any area in Gaza that had been taken over by Israeli forces were consistently denied by the Israeli army. As a result, many of the wounded, who were never more than 15 minutes away from a hospital, died.

20. Several Palestinian medical facilities, including hospitals, were repeatedly hit during the bombardments, and medical staff were themselves the victims of some attacks. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, in the course of the operation, 16 medical personnel were killed and 26 injured while on duty. Israeli bombardments damaged or destroyed 29 ambulances. Of the 122 health facilities throughout the Gaza Strip, 58 were either damaged or destroyed by direct or indirect shelling. Of those, 15 were hospitals and 43 were primary health-care clinics.

21. As a result of the offensive, 1,409 Palestinians were killed, of which 237 were combatants and 1,172 were non-combatants. Of the 1,172 non-combatants killed, at least 342 were children and 111 were women. Some 5,000 Palestinians were injured, including many women and children, many of whom were maimed for life. According to the Government of Israel, close to 800 rockets and mortar rounds launched from the Gaza Strip landed on Israeli territory during the operation, killing four Israeli civilians and injuring 182 others. Ten Israeli soldiers were killed during the offensive, four of them in a friendly fire incident, and 336 were injured.

22. Some 40 Palestinians were killed and many others injured at or in the vicinity of schools and a health centre run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) when they were hit by Israeli missiles, aerial bombs, artillery fire, or mortar rounds. Also, 5 UNRWA staff and 3 of its contractors were killed while on duty, and another 11 staff and 4 contractors were injured. There were four incidents during which aid convoys were shot at by Israeli forces. At least 53 United Nations buildings sustained damage.

23. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 3,540 Palestinian homes were destroyed and 2,870 homes severely damaged during the Gaza offensive. Also, 10 schools and 8 kindergartens were completely destroyed, and at least 280 others were damaged. According to the Palestinian Ministry of Education and Higher Education, 164 students and 12 teachers from its schools were killed, and another 454 students and 5 teachers were injured.

24. On 12 January, the United Nations Human Rights Council adopted resolution S-9/1 (A/HRC/S-9/L.1), condemning the Israeli military operation and calling for the immediate cessation of Israeli military attacks. In the same resolution, the Council decided to dispatch an independent international fact-finding mission to Gaza to investigate all violations of international human rights law during the Gaza offensive. On 3 April, the President of the Human Rights Council, Ambassador Martin Ihoeghian Uhomobhi of Nigeria, announced his decision to appoint Richard J. Goldstone, former Chief Prosecutor of the international criminal tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, to lead the four-member fact-finding mission to Gaza. The team visited the Gaza Strip and also held public hearings in Geneva in June. The mission submitted its report on 15 September, in which it concluded that there was evidence indicating that serious violations of international human rights and humanitarian law had been committed by Israel during the Gaza conflict, and that Israel had committed actions amounting to war crimes, and possibly crimes against humanity. The report also concluded that there was evidence that Palestinian armed groups had committed war crimes, and possibly crimes against humanity, in their repeated launching of rockets and mortars into southern Israel.

25. On 11 February, the Secretary-General appointed a United Nations Headquarters Board of Inquiry to review and investigate nine specific incidents that had occurred in the Gaza Strip between 27 December 2008 and 19 January 2009 and in which death or injuries had occurred at, and/or damage had been done to, United Nations premises or in the course of United Nations operations. The four-member Board was headed by Ian Martin of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. On 11 April, the Board presented its report to the Secretary-General, who on 15 May submitted a summary of the Board's findings, including its recommendations, to the Security Council (see A/63/855-S/2009/250).

26. On 30 July, the Government of Israel issued its own report on the factual and legal aspects of the operation, in which it stated, "Israel had both a right and an obligation to take military action against Hamas in Gaza to stop Hamas' almost incessant rocket and mortar attacks upon thousands of Israeli civilians and its other acts of terrorism. ... Israel has both the responsibility and the right under international law, as does every State, to defend its civilians from intentional rocket attacks.”

27. On 26 February, after a series of Egyptian-mediated reconciliation talks in Cairo, Fatah and Hamas agreed to work towards setting up a unity government, and created five joint committees on transitional Government formation, on issues of reconciliation, security, elections, and the PLO. In subsequent months, the Egyptian mediation continued. Another round of reconciliation talks was scheduled for the end of October.

28. On 2 March, in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt hosted the International Conference in Support of the Palestinian Economy for the Reconstruction of Gaza. Representatives from some 80 countries and multilateral organizations welcomed the Palestinian National Early Recovery and Reconstruction Plan for Gaza, and donors pledged some $4.5 billion for humanitarian and economic relief.

29. Israel’s Gaza offensive caused the widespread destruction of homes, infrastructure and productive assets and added to an already devastating humanitarian, social and economic situation in the Gaza Strip caused by the blockade imposed by Israel on the entire territory following the Hamas takeover in June 2007. As of August, approximately 75 per cent of Gaza’s population — more than 1.1 million people — were experiencing food insecurity caused by the dramatic increase in poverty, the destruction of agricultural assets and the inflation in prices of key food items. There has been a gradual shift in the diet of people in Gaza from high-cost and protein-rich foods, such as fruit, vegetables and animal products, to low-cost and high-carbohydrate foods, such as cereals, sugar and oil, which could lead to micronutrient deficiencies, in particular among children and pregnant women. In addition, over 40 per cent of Gaza’s workforce, or more than 140,000 people, were unemployed. The desperate situation led to dangerous and, at times, fatal attempts to smuggle necessary goods through tunnels dug under the border with Egypt. Since 18 January, 47 Palestinians have been killed in various tunnel-related incidents.

30. Follow-up treatment for people suffering from complex injuries and permanent disabilities inflicted during the Israeli offensive has created an enormous burden for a health system weakened by the shortages of facilities, equipment and drugs caused by the blockade. In addition, patients in need of specialized treatment outside Gaza must go through an arduous and uncertain process of obtaining the necessary permits required to leave Gaza, which adds considerable anguish and stress to patients’ lives and often results in denial by Israel of requests to travel for treatment and dire consequences for many patients, including several instances of fatalities.

31. The ban on the import of building materials has prevented the much-needed reconstruction of most of the damaged or destroyed houses and other infrastructure. No new construction for 7,500 planned housing units for Gaza’s rapidly expanding population has been possible owing to the lack of building materials available in Gaza. More than 20,000 displaced residents are forced to continue living in rented apartments, in the houses of relatives or in tents next to the rubble of their damaged houses. A small number of families continue to live in tented camps. The lives of those displaced families have been disrupted, with children being among the worst affected.

32. Palestinian women and children suffered the most as a consequence of the Israeli occupation, in particular, during and in the wake of the military assault on Gaza. As of July, none of the 10 schools and 8 kindergartens destroyed during the Gaza offensive had been rebuilt or rehabilitated because of the lack of construction materials. Schoolchildren, thousands of whom lost family members and/or their homes, were still suffering from psychological trauma and anxiety and were in need of social support. The World Health Organization reported that the inadequate infrastructure, lack of equipment and shortage of hospital staff were contributing to the deterioration of hospital care for mothers and newborns in Gaza.

33. In fulfilment of its road map obligations, the Palestinian Authority continued efforts to restructure its security forces to assume responsibility in West Bank cities, which was met with donor appreciation. On the other hand, there has not been a significant reduction in incursions by the Israeli army into Palestinian cities or in the easing of closures in the West Bank.

34. Israeli forces have routinely conducted raids and arrests in towns and villages in the West Bank. During the reporting period, a total of 27 Palestinians, including 8 children, were killed by Israeli forces, and more than 2,900 were arrested in the West Bank. In the Gaza Strip, outside the context of Operation Cast Lead, some 70 Palestinians, including 7 children, were killed by Israeli forces. One Israeli soldier on patrol was killed in a bomb blast near the Gaza border.

35. On 15 December 2008, Israel released 227 Palestinian prisoners as a gesture of goodwill ahead of the Muslim holiday of Eid al-Adha. On 23 June, Speaker of the Palestinian Legislative Council, Dr. Aziz Al-Dweik, was released after three years of detention. Ten Hamas members of the Palestinian Legislative Council were released on 2 September, while 23 others still remain in prison. In early October, Israel released 20 Palestinian women prisoners. There were no developments regarding the fate of some 11,000 other Palestinian prisoners, including children and women.

36. In the period under review, Israel continued illegal settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The occupying Power also carried out many demolitions of Palestinian homes and other infrastructure, destroyed and confiscated Palestinian-owned land and properties in order to expand existing settlements, and continued to carry out unlawful and provocative excavations in the area of Occupied East Jerusalem. In a report issued in March, an Israeli organization, Peace Now, stated that the Israeli Ministry of Construction and Housing was planning to construct 73,302 settlement units in the West Bank, 5,722 of which would be in East Jerusalem. A total of 15,156 units had been approved, 8,950 of which had already been built. If all the Ministry's plans are realized, the current total number of settlers would increase by approximately 300,000. According to a report by the Civil Administration of IDF covering the first half of 2009, there were 304,569 residents living in settlements in the West Bank, an increase of 2.3 per cent since January. This figure does not include the more than 180,000 Israeli settlers in East Jerusalem.

37. In August, Peace Now stated in its semi-annual report that construction within the settlement blocks continued as usual, despite Israel's announcement that it had stopped approving new building. According to the report, there were more than 40,000 settlement units in plans that had been approved in the past but not yet implemented, and the construction of 596 new structures had begun in the first half of 2009, 96 of which were in outposts.

38. Israeli activities to expand settlements in and expel Palestinian residents from East Jerusalem were of serious concern. On 12 December 2008, plans by the Housing Ministry and the Israel Land Administration to issue tenders in 2009 for 2,500 settlement units in Jerusalem, including 745 in the East Jerusalem settlement of Ramot, were reported. On 7 March, 88 houses were slated for demolition in the Al-Bustan neighbourhood of Silwan in East Jerusalem to make room for a park. On 19 March, the Israeli Mayor of Jerusalem, Nir Barkat, said that he would press forward with a plan to raze the entire Palestinian neighbourhood of Al-Bustan in East Jerusalem and to relocate more than 1,000 of its residents to make way for a park. On 23 March, the High Court of Justice authorized the confiscation of 30 dunams of Palestinian land in the Shu'fat neighbourhood of East Jerusalem to expand a military checkpoint.

39. On 27 April, the construction of approximately 60 new units began on a new East Jerusalem settlement in East Talpiot near the as-Sawahira neighbourhood. The expansion of that settlement would create a belt around East Jerusalem, severing it from the rest of the West Bank. On 3 May, the Israeli Minister of Internal Affairs and Shas party leader, Eli Yishai, recommended expanding Ma'ale Adumim by 12,000 dunams. The expansion would include 6,000 new units in the area between the Ma'ale Adumim and Qedar settlements. On 4 May, Minister Yishai announced plans to develop a Jewish residential area, City of David, in Jerusalem. On 2 June, it was reported that the Ministry of Internal Affairs had approved the construction of a new hotel in East Jerusalem 100 metres from the Old City walls. The plan would see the demolition of a wholesale market and a Palestinian kindergarten.

40. On 2 August, following a decision by the Israeli High Court of Justice, Israeli security forces forcibly evicted nine Palestinian families — 53 refugees registered by UNRWA, including 20 children — from their homes in the Sheikh Jarrah neighbourhood in East Jerusalem, and their property was handed over to a settlement organization. The United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, Robert Serry, issued a statement deploring those actions and stating that they were contrary to the provisions of the Geneva Conventions and to the calls of the international community, including the Quartet's. On 7 September, Defence Minister Barak approved the construction of 455 new settlement units. Also on 7 September, the Israel Land Administration published tenders for the construction of 486 units in the Pisgat Ze'ev settlement.

41. There was a significant increase in settler-related violence in the West Bank, and a large number of settler attacks against Palestinian villagers were reported, such as shooting, damaging Palestinian property, uprooting of trees and burning farmland, and other forms of intimidation and harassment, including physical assault. The lack of adequate Israeli law enforcement, and even permissiveness, with regard to violent Israeli settlers remained a serious problem. In addition, two Israeli settlers, including a 13-year-old boy, were killed in Palestinian attacks during the reporting period.

42. Israel has continued to ignore the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice regarding the illegal construction of the wall on the Palestinian land it has occupied since 1967. As of July, approximately 58 per cent of the 709-kilometre-long wall was complete. A further 10 per cent was under construction, and 31.5 per cent was planned. When completed, most of the route, approximately 85 per cent, will run inside the West Bank, including in and around East Jerusalem. The total area located between the wall and the Armistice Line of 1949 (Green Line), amounted to 9.5 per cent of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem and the “no man’s land”.

43. The substantial donor contributions aimed at rehabilitating the Palestinian economy have been considerably less effective than the donors had anticipated, in part because they were spent to attenuate the economic damage resulting from Israeli restrictions on Palestinian trade and movement, rather than on development projects. As of August, there were 619 closure obstacles. In September, Israel announced plans to remove 100 obstacles in the West Bank.

44. The World Bank reported in April that water withdrawals per head of the Palestinian population in the West Bank were declining and that there were real water shortages. Water withdrawals per capita for Palestinians in the West Bank are about one quarter of those available to Israelis and have declined over the last decade. There has been little progress on wastewater collection and treatment, with negative environmental results. Only four towns have wastewater treatment plants, producing poor quality effluent, and there is no planned or regulated reuse of effluent. Settlements are also discharging raw sewage into the environment.

45. As of August, some 10,000 people in northern Gaza did not have access to running water owing to the lack of available building materials to maintain and upgrade the wastewater infrastructure. As a result, 80 million litres of raw and partially treated sewage are being discharged daily into the environment. This has led to a further pollution of the sea and underground aquifer, creating serious health concerns. Only 5-10 per cent of the water extracted from Gaza’s aquifer meets the safety standards of the World Health Organization. Also, the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) reported that the underground water supplies, upon which 1.5 million Palestinians depend for agricultural and drinking water, were in danger of collapse as a result of years of overuse and contamination that had been exacerbated by the recent Israeli offensive. UNEP also reported increased salinity from salt water intrusion caused by over-abstraction of the groundwater, as well as pollution from sewage and agricultural run off. Pollution levels are such that infants in the Gaza Strip are at risk from nitrate poisoning.

46. During the Israeli offensive in Gaza, the role of UNRWA in providing assistance to refugees and supporting the delivery of critical services to non-refugees became even more vital. Over 2,300 UNRWA staff remained on active duty throughout the war to ensure the provision of basic health care and emergency relief. In addition, more than 50,000 persons were sheltered in 50 UNRWA schools across Gaza, where they received food, water, blankets, mattresses, hygiene kits and medical care from staff of the Agency and local and international non-governmental organizations. UNRWA also offered logistical and material support to the Ministry of Health and public utility providers in Gaza.

47. Following the cessation of hostilities, UNRWA scaled up its emergency programmes to meet new and emerging needs. Generous donor funding allowed the Agency to respond effectively to emergency needs, although recovery and reconstruction efforts have not been possible owing to the continued blockade of Gaza, which precipitated an unprecedented socio-economic decline.

48. As the international community marks the sixtieth anniversary of UNRWA, the Committee reiterates its sincere appreciation for the vitally important and courageous work carried out daily by UNRWA in time of hostilities.

49. The Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People of the United Nations Development Programme also responded to the destruction wrought by the Israeli military attacks in the Gaza Strip by providing food and cash assistance to victims and leading the early recovery group of United Nations agencies and civil society organizations in formulating projects to alleviate suffering in spite of the blockade of Gaza.

50. In the West Bank, the Programme of Assistance completed the construction of dozens of public buildings, including courthouses, schools and clinics, and worked with the Palestinian Authority to improve its administration. The Programme also focused on improving water management and the environment and on encouraging entrepreneurship in the poorest sectors of Palestinian society.

51. The Committee continued to express appreciation for the work of the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the consolidated appeal for 2009 focused on delivering humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 63/26

52. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others, as indicated below.

1. Action taken in the General Assembly and the Security Council

Resumed tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly

53. The tenth Emergency Special Session on “Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory” was resumed on 15 and 16 January 2009 to discuss Israel’s military aggression in the Gaza Strip, during which the Chairman of the Committee, Paul Badji, delivered a statement on behalf of the Committee. Following a two-day debate, the Special Session adopted resolution ES-10/18, which called on all parties to exert all efforts to ensure, in cooperation with the Security Council, full and urgent compliance with resolution 1860 (2009) (A/ES-10/PV.32, 33, 34, 35 and 36).

Meetings of the Security Council

54. During the period under review, the Security Council continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. It held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question”.

55. The monthly briefing at the Council’s 6049th meeting, on 18 December 2008, was followed by an open debate, during which the Chairman of the Committee made a statement (S/PV.6049).

56. The Council held its 6061st meeting, on 6 January 2009, to discuss the crisis in the Gaza Strip. Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas delivered a statement, and 14 Ministers for Foreign Affairs participated in the outset of the debate. The Chairman of the Committee made a statement during the meeting resumed on 7 January (S/PV.6061 and Resumption 1). The following day, on 8 January, the Security Council held its 6063rd meeting, at which it adopted resolution 1860 (2009), calling for an immediate, durable and fully respected ceasefire and also recalling the importance of the Arab Peace Initiative.

57. At the 6100th meeting of the Council, on 25 March, the monthly briefing was followed by an open debate, during which the Chairman of the Committee delivered a statement (S/PV.6100).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

58. On 14 November 2008, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip (GA/PAL/1100).

59. On 31 December 2008, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on Israel's deadly military assaults and destruction in the Gaza Strip (GA/PAL/1109).

60. On 8 January 2009, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the escalating violence in the Gaza Strip (GA/PAL/1110).

61. On 19 May, at its 316th meeting, the Committee adopted a statement expressing its utmost concern about illegal and provocative Israeli policies and measures in Occupied East Jerusalem (A/63/861-S/2009/265).

62. On 11 September, the Bureau of the Committee held a meeting with the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs and discussed the Committee's programme of activities and the latest political developments.

63. On 5 October, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the situation in Occupied East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1137).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 63/26 and 63/27

1. Programme of international meetings and conferences

64. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

65. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations Latin American and Caribbean Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Headquarters of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, Santiago, 11 and 12 December 2008;

(b) United Nations Public Forum in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Headquarters of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, Santiago, 13 December 2008;

(c) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Cairo, 10 and 11 March 2009;

(d) United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Nicosia, 6 and 7 May 2009;

(e) Consultations of the Committee delegation with parliamentarians and other experts participating in the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Nicosia, 8 May 2009;

(f) United Nations Asian and Pacific Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Jakarta, 8 and 9 June 2009;

(g) United Nations Public Forum in Support of the Palestinian People, Jakarta, 10 June 2009;

(h) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, United Nations Office at Geneva, 22 and 23 July 2009;

(i) Consultations of the Committee delegation with civil society organizations, United Nations Office at Geneva, 24 July.

66. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as representatives of civil society and the media. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the "Question of Palestine" website maintained by the Division.

67. In Santiago, on the sidelines of the United Nations Latin American and Caribbean Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, the Committee delegation was received by the President of Chile, Michelle Bachelet Jeria. It also held consultations with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Alejandro Foxley Rioseco.

68. In Cairo, during the seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people, the Committee delegation met at the Egyptian's People's Assembly with Dr. Abdel Ahad Gamal El-Din, majority leader of the Egyptian People's Assembly. In separate engagements, it met with members of the Foreign Affairs Committee and the Minister for Legal and Parliamentary Affairs of Egypt, Moufid Mahmoud Shehab. The Committee delegation also had consultations with Suzanne Mubarak, President of the Egyptian Red Crescent Society and First Lady of Egypt. It also visited the Palestine Hospital administered by the Palestine Red Crescent Society and visited Palestinian victims of the Israeli offensive in the Gaza Strip.

69. During its stay in Nicosia in connection with the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, the Committee delegation was received by the President of Cyprus, Dimitris Christofias. It also met separately with Marios Garoyian, Speaker of the House of Representatives and Averof Neophytou, Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Cypriot Parliament.

70. In Jakarta, during its stay in connection with the United Nations Asian and Pacific Meeting on the Question of Palestine, the Committee delegation was received by the Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs of Indonesia, Triyono Wibowo. It also met with Agung Laksono, Speaker of the House of Representatives of Indonesia.

71. The Committee delegation to the United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine held at the United Nations Office at Geneva used its stay in Geneva to conduct meetings and consultations with Paul Seger, Head of the Directorate for International Public Law, Department of Foreign Affairs of Switzerland; Anders B. Johnsson, Secretary-General of the Inter-Parliamentary Union; Rudy Salles, President of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean; Brigitte Troyon-Borgea, Deputy Director for International Law and Cooperation, International Committee of the Red Cross; Bekele Geleta, Secretary-General of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies; and Navanethem Pillay, United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

2. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

72. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference. The Committee very much appreciated the active participation of their representatives in the various meetings held under its aegis. During its stay in Cairo, the Committee delegation met with Amre Moussa, Secretary-General of the League of Arab States.

73. The Committee also continued its cooperation on the question of Palestine with the Presidency of the European Union (EU) and the European Commission. It appreciated the contribution of an EU expert speaker to the deliberations of the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People held in Cairo. The Bureau of the Committee met on 10 September with the Permanent Representative of Sweden to the United Nations in his capacity as representative of the Presidency of the European Union.

3. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

74. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 24 November 2008. The meetings provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to improve coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations, encouraging them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at realizing a two-State solution.

75. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations. At the meeting of consultations with civil society organizations held at the United Nations Office at Geneva in July 2009, the deliberations focused on the efforts by civil society to persuade their respective Governments, in their relations with Israel and the Palestinians, to adhere to their obligations under international law, ensure respect for the Geneva Conventions and support the work of this Committee. Over the past year, the Chairman of the Committee met with representatives of civil society organizations in New York and at the meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee away from Headquarters.

76. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a page on the civil society network on the Question of Palestine (<http://www.un.org/depts/dpa/ngo>) on the "Question of Palestine" website as a tool for the exchange of information and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

77. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Its meeting in Nicosia on the theme "Action by European, Arab and other parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations for Israeli-Palestinian peace" gave new impetus to the cooperation efforts and motivated participating parliamentarians and other experts from Europe, North America and the Arab region to work together with the United Nations and the Committee for the achievement of the two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. In connection with the international meetings, the delegation of the Committee held meetings in Cairo, Nicosia, Jakarta, Geneva and New York with officials of the respective national parliaments, as well as the Inter-Parliamentary Union in Geneva, the European Parliament and the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean.

78. On 29 September in New York, the Bureau of the Committee held a meeting with the delegation of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean, led by its President, Rudy Salles.

4. Research, monitoring and publications

79. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through the Internet:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by United Nations and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) Special bulletins and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

5. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

80. Pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates, the Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the "Question of Palestine" website, which is located on the United Nations home page under "Peace and Security". This included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of the system (<http://unispal.un.org>), including by incorporating additional multimedia content and RSS feeds intended to alert users about newly posted materials. The Division continued to work on redesigning the "Question of Palestine" website and conducted an online survey of website users, the results of which were used to identify ways in which the system could be further improved.

6. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

81. Two staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority participated in a training programme conducted by the Division from September to December 2008, in conjunction with the sixty-third session of the General Assembly. The trainees familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other organs and conducted research on specific topics.

7. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

82. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Geneva on 24 November 2008, and at the United Nations Office at Vienna on 26 November. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a cultural exhibit entitled “The Palestinians: 60 years of struggle and enduring hope” was organized by the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations information centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

83. In adopting its programme of work, the Committee decided that a similar observance of the International Day of Solidarity should be organized in 2009.

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 63/28

84. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/28, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine in order to raise the awareness of the international community on this question, as well as on the situation in the Middle East, in such a way as to contribute effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process.

85. UN Radio regularly covered the question of Palestine in the six official languages. Interviews, press briefings, and General Assembly and Security Council sessions were covered in programmes and posted on the UN Radio website. The international conference in Geneva organized by the Committee featured prominently in the programming of the Arabic Language Unit.

86. The United Nations News Centre, a news portal of the United Nations website, regularly highlighted issues related to the question of Palestine in the six official languages.

87. The Department organized a training programme for 10 young Palestinian journalists at Headquarters, in Washington, D.C., and in Geneva from 27 October to 5 December 2008. The programme, aimed at strengthening the participants' capacity as print media professionals, included Web training to improve their skills in maintaining websites in Arabic and finding Arabic language information on the United Nations website.

88. The Department organized two International Media Seminars on Peace in the Middle East. The seminar in 2008 was organized in cooperation with the Federal Ministry for European and International Affairs of Austria, in Vienna, on 2 and 3 December 2008. The seminar in 2009 was organized in cooperation with the Ministry of External Relations of Brazil, in Rio de Janeiro, on 27 and 28 July 2009. The seminars included the participation of several journalists and experts from the respective regions, including Palestinians and Israelis. Press releases were issued on the proceedings of both seminars.

89. The Public Inquiries Unit distributed more than 1,000 copies of the publication The Question of Palestine and the United Nations to visitors in the six official languages.

90. A smaller-scale version of the exhibit, "The Question of Palestine and the United Nations" was produced in Arabic, English and Spanish. The Spanish and English versions were displayed, respectively, at the meetings held under the Committee's aegis in Santiago and Jakarta.

91. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library continued to digitize documents for the UNISPAL document collection.

92. The Department arranged a number of briefings on the Middle East issue by UNRWA and the Department of Political Affairs.

93. The network of United Nations information centres, services and offices continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine and to organize special outreach activities. The Information Centres actively promoted the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (29 November) and widely disseminated the messages of the Secretary-General in official and non-official languages, including Farsi, German, Greek, Italian, Japanese, the Nordic languages, Portuguese and Turkish.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

94. Throughout the reporting period, the Committee has repeatedly expressed its utmost concern about the ever-deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the breakdown of the political process. It condemned the military offensive of the Israeli military in the Gaza Strip in December 2008 and January 2009. It also denounced the firing of rockets and mortar rounds by Palestinian militants from Gaza. It has been dismayed by the continued Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip, which prevents any reconstruction and sustained humanitarian assistance and which has caused the near collapse of the economy and social fabric of Gaza. The Committee remained firmly opposed to the continued illegal construction of settlements in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem. It has been particularly alarmed by the situation in Occupied East Jerusalem, the demolition of houses, the eviction of Palestinian citizens, settler extremism and the threats to Jerusalem's holy sites and historical heritage.

95. The Committee has been deeply alarmed about the Israeli military invasion of Gaza, which was accompanied by the callous disregard for civilian lives. After causing thousands of casualties among the civilian population and the massive destruction of Palestinian homes, property and infrastructure, Israel continued its suffocating blockade of the Gaza Strip. The Committee calls for the immediate lifting of the blockade. It reminds Israel that, under the Fourth Geneva Convention, the occupying Power is obliged to protect the civilian population under its occupation and to act within the ambit of international law. The Committee appeals to all the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to fulfil their obligations in accordance with common Article 1, which obligates them to respect and to ensure respect for the Convention in all circumstances. The Committee is of the view that 60 years after their entry into force, respect for the Geneva Conventions is often deficient, resulting in devastating consequences for the civilian victims of hostilities. The international community might consider strengthening respect for international humanitarian law by creating appropriate mechanisms to monitor adherence. The Committee recommends that the High Contracting Parties take, individually or collectively, the measures they deem appropriate to ensure respect for the Convention, including through the convening of a conference of the High Contracting Parties to address the subject of respect and ensuring respect for the Convention in all circumstances. The Committee will remain seized of the issue and is ready to work with Governments, intergovernmental organizations, parliamentarians, civil society and the media with a view to promoting a better understanding of the importance of the issue as it relates to the question of Palestine.

96. The Committee took note that various investigations into the warfare in Gaza had concluded that serious violations of international humanitarian law, and possibly war crimes, had been committed. The Committee commended the missions and convened a special international meeting to study their findings. At the same time, the Committee was disquieted by an almost complete denial by Israel of breaking the rules governing the conduct of war and deplored the lack of Israeli cooperation with some of the commissions. The investigations asserted the use of illegal weapons and excessive force disproportionate to any threat that may have been faced by the army in densely populated areas. The Committee is of the view that the perpetrators of serious crimes on either side have to be brought to justice and held accountable for their actions. The recommendations contained in various reports must be implemented. The Committee urges intergovernmental organizations to respect their own guidelines on promoting compliance with international humanitarian and human rights law. It also recommends that in their national legislation, parliamentarians incorporate laws allowing for the prosecution of serious violations of international humanitarian law and that inter-parliamentary organizations promote the acceptance of universal standards in that regard.

97. The Committee is seriously concerned over Israel's ongoing settlement activity. It reiterates that the presence of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, is illegal under international law. It calls upon Israel to immediately cease settlement activity, including construction related to so-called "natural growth", and to dismantle settlement outposts. The Committee welcomes the fact that the international community has remained focused on the damaging effects of Israel's settlement policies for the achievement of a two-State solution and calls for serious action to be taken in that regard.

98. The Committee is also greatly disturbed by the accelerated creation of faits accomplis in East Jerusalem, including recent policy statements and illegal unilateral measures by the Government of Israel. It reiterates that East Jerusalem is part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and that a negotiated solution of the question of Jerusalem, based on international law, is absolutely essential to resolving the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and crucial for a durable peace in the whole region. The Committee found that these concerns were widely shared by Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations, as well as by parliamentarians.

99. The Committee denounces the continued construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. Five years after the International Court of Justice issued its landmark 9 July 2004 Advisory Opinion confirming the illegality of the construction of the wall on Palestinian land, the ruling has remained unheeded. The Committee emphasizes that, based on the Advisory Opinion, the wall cannot be viewed by Israel, or any other Government, as a permanent political boundary predetermining the outcome of the permanent status negotiations. The Committee recommends that the international community take more determined action challenging the presence of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The international community should also demand the removal of hundreds of checkpoints and other obstacles stifling the economic life in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

100. The Committee notes that as a result of these detrimental developments and the continuing Israeli occupation, no progress has been achieved in the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. Self-determination, independence and sovereignty have remained elusive for the Palestinian people, as has the right of return, on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III), for the more than 4.6 million Palestine refugees. The Committee fully supports the international consensus that the only viable solution to the conflict and the exercise by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights is the creation of a Palestinian State in the territory occupied by Israel in 1967, living side by side with Israel in peace and security.

101. To that end, the Committee calls for the resumption of the permanent status negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians. This would require a genuine commitment of the Israeli Government to a two-State solution, buttressed by tangible improvements of the situation on the ground, first and foremost, by stopping all settlement activities. The continued support by the international community is crucial for moving forward the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations on all core issues. The Committee, therefore, will support all peace initiatives that have the realization of a two-State solution as their main objective.

102. Concerned that the divisions among the Palestinian factions profoundly affect the legitimate Palestinian national interests and aspirations for statehood and peace, the Committee calls for invigorated efforts by all to help reconcile their positions on the basis of the prevailing consensus on the need to achieve a two-State solution, which would lead to the exercise by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights.

103. The Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights will continue, through their mandated activities, to contribute to a comprehensive, just and lasting solution of the question of Palestine, in accordance with international law and relevant United Nations resolutions. They will further generate international support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and a peaceful settlement of the conflict. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and the use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) the increased international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine as indicated by the growing number of documents and relevant information materials on the issue accessed by users worldwide at the websites maintained by the Division. The Committee also considers that over the years the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority carried out by the Division has proved its usefulness, as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee strongly recommends that this important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, enhanced.

104. The Committee considers that its programme of international meetings and conferences implemented by the Division contributes to focusing the attention of Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and the public on the urgency of bringing about a two-State solution and mobilizing assistance to the Palestinian people. Through its international meetings programme for 2010, the Committee intends to continue to generate wide support for a peaceful solution of the conflict, based on international law and relevant United Nations resolutions. In cooperation with partners in inter-parliamentary organizations, and given the importance of the issue of Jerusalem to the overall efforts at resolving the question of Palestine, the Committee will convene an international meeting on the question of Jerusalem. It will continue to engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution of the conflict. It will reach out, with the assistance of the United Nations entities on the ground, to the people most affected by the status quo, refugees and Palestinians living under occupation, as well as to members of the Israeli public, to involve them in the search for solutions, to promote dialogue and common projects and to win their backing for a settlement negotiated by their leaders and supported by the international community. The Committee wishes to contribute to efforts towards ending incitement on both sides, provide a venue for the narratives to be heard and reconciled and, with the help of civil society, to promote peace education on the ground. It will pay particular attention to the empowerment of women and their organizations in this process.

105. The Committee commends civil society organizations for their support of the Palestinian people. It lauds the courageous advocacy actions of numerous activists, including parliamentarians, who participate in demonstrations against the wall, provide assistance to Gaza and keep their home constituencies informed about the harsh realities of life under occupation. The Committee and civil society have different roles which, through cooperation, are complementing each other. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine. It will continue to assess its programme of cooperation with civil society and consult them on ways to enhance their contribution. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening cooperation with civil society.

106. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of a two-State solution and ensure respect for international law, in accordance with their international obligations.

107. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, such as the further expansion and development of UNISPAL, including the graphic enhancement of the "Question of Palestine" website; the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority; and the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

108. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

109. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Letter of transmittal

[6 October 2010]

Mr. Secretary-General

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 64/16 of 2 December 2009.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2009 to 6 October 2010.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Paul Badji
Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974.

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel, the occupying Power, from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly each year renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

3. The Committee has consistently supported a peaceful solution of the question of Palestine. It welcomed the 1991 Madrid Peace Conference that launched the Middle East peace process based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It also welcomed the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) and subsequent implementation agreements. The Committee has strongly supported the objective of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called on the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee has continued to work towards creating conditions for the successful conduct and conclusion of the negotiations on a permanent settlement allowing the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights. The Committee has also promoted support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The reporting period has been characterized by efforts to resume negotiations between the parties on all permanent status issues, a volatile situation on the ground throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the continued division between the political leadership in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Of special concern was the humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, exacerbated by the continued imposition by Israel of a severe blockade on the territory, which has obstructed the movement of persons and goods, including humanitarian access and the import of materials required for the reconstruction and rehabilitation of Gaza and other essential supplies.

5. Systematic engagement by the Quartet and its individual members, in particular the United States of America, with the Israeli and Palestinian leaderships and other stakeholders in the region, led to the resumption of direct talks between Israel and the Palestinians on 2 September 2010. That had been preceded by several rounds of proximity talks assisted by the United States. The League of Arab States also engaged actively with the parties and the Quartet within the framework of the Arab Peace Initiative.

6. The situation in the Gaza Strip remained bleak, with 1.5 million inhabitants still suffering from the aftermath of the Israeli military assault of December 2008-January 2009, an acute shortage of basic goods and services, including clean water, and economic activity stifled by the blockade. Efforts by the international community, in particular the United Nations, to ease the blockade had only a limited effect. Civil society organizations mobilized ship convoys to break the siege, which were either prevented through the diplomatic efforts of Israel, or intercepted by its navy. On 31 May 2010, Israeli forces attacked, in international waters, a multinational humanitarian aid convoy sailing to Gaza. That military assault, in violation of international law, left nine Turkish civilians dead and many more wounded. It triggered an immediate condemnation by the international community, including the Security Council, and led to national and international investigations. The Human Rights Council dispatched an international independent fact-finding mission, and the Secretary-General established a Panel of Inquiry. At the same time, the international debate was continuing with regard to ensuring accountability and justice for violations of international humanitarian and human rights law committed during the Israeli military operations in the Gaza Strip, in particular the follow-up of the very specific conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza conflict, established by the Human Rights Council and led by Justice Richard Goldstone (A/HRC/12/48).

7. Throughout the year, Israel conducted limited military operations in the Gaza Strip, resulting in Palestinian casualties. This was met with resumed rocket and mortar fire by armed Palestinian groups into southern Israel. In addition, Israeli military incursions into West Bank population centres continued, often accompanied by the arrests of Palestinians. The expansion of Israeli settlements continued in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, as did the construction of the wall. The number of checkpoints was only marginally reduced. The situation in Occupied East Jerusalem deteriorated further, with ongoing land confiscations, house demolitions and evictions of Palestinian residents, and the transfer of more Israeli settlers into the City.

8. The divide among major Palestinian factions continued to affect the lives of ordinary Palestinians, especially in Gaza, and prevented Palestinians from uniting in support of the Palestinian Authority. Yet, in spite of the challenges presented by the occupation, the Palestinian Authority was able in the past year to make appreciable progress in economic development and State-building through the phased implementation of a plan entitled "Palestine: Ending the Occupation, establishing the State" (Fayyad Plan), which has received widespread international support.

9. The activities of the Committee and its Bureau in the reporting period focused on the need to end the Israeli occupation and to establish a sovereign and independent Palestinian State. The Committee monitored the situation on the ground and the political developments, implemented its programme of international meetings and conferences, held a number of consultations with representatives of Governments, national parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations, as well as civil society, and reached out to its partners worldwide using new communications media. The Committee reiterated its position of principle that a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could only be achieved through ending the occupation, establishing a Palestinian State on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, and a just and agreed solution to the Palestine refugees issue on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III). The first international meeting of the Committee in February 2010 engaged parliamentarians of the Mediterranean region and beyond in support of the two-State solution. It was followed by a seminar promoting international support of the Fayyad Plan. At another meeting held in May, participants emphasized the urgency to implement the two-State solution, cautioning that the continuation of the Israeli policy of illegally and unilaterally imposing faits accomplis on the ground posed a grave threat to the prospects of a negotiated solution of the conflict. The fourth event focused on the situation in East Jerusalem and its significance for a just peace in the Middle East. The Committee encouraged all stakeholders to support the role and activities of the United Nations and urged them to support the two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict on the basis of the relevant Security Council resolutions, the terms of reference of the Madrid Conference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet road map.

Mandate of the Committee

10. On 2 December 2009, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 64/16), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 64/17) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 64/18). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 64/19, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

11. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

12. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the African Union, the League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and Palestine.

13. At its 321st meeting, on 21 January 2010, the Committee re-elected Paul Badji (Senegal) as Chair, Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) and Pedro Núñez Mosquera (Cuba) as Vice-Chair and Saviour F. Borg (Malta) as Rapporteur.

14. Also at the 321st meeting, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2010 (see A/AC.183/2010/1).

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

15. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee as observers were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

16. After a long break in the Israeli-Palestinian peace negotiations, the United States, in early May 2010, facilitated indirect talks between the parties. After seven rounds of proximity talks, the parties agreed to enter into direct negotiations on permanent status issues. On 2 September, in Washington, D.C., delegations led by the Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu, and the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, held the first bilateral talks in some 20 months, followed by a second round of talks, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, and Jerusalem on 14 and 15 September. An Israeli moratorium on settlement construction ended on 26 September, which was met by broad criticism and endangered the continuation of the talks. The United States, supported by Egypt, Jordan and the European Union, intensified efforts aimed at convincing the Government of Israel to renew the moratorium.

17. The situation on the ground remained a cause of serious concern. Israeli forces continued to conduct routine military raids and arrests throughout the West Bank. During the reporting period (as at 28 September), 14 Palestinians were killed and more than 1,000 injured by Israeli forces in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, including during clashes between demonstrators and Israeli forces. Two members of the Israeli forces and five Israeli settlers were killed by Palestinians, and some 140 soldiers and policemen were injured during the reporting period. Over 2,300 Palestinians were arrested during some 4,000 search operations conducted by Israeli forces. In the Gaza Strip, Israeli forces killed 57 Palestinians, including 23 civilians, and injured more than 210 Palestinians, including at least 177 civilians, in incidents involving air strikes and the enforcement of access restrictions near the border fence. Three Israeli soldiers were killed and eight soldiers were injured during clashes with Palestinian militants in the Gaza Strip and southern Israel. One foreign worker was killed in southern Israel by a rocket launched by Palestinians in Gaza. The Israeli military reported that, as of September, 150 projectiles had been fired at Israel since the beginning of 2010.

18. In a worrisome development, the Israeli military issued a new order on 13 April, defining any person present in the West Bank without a permit issued by the Israeli military commander as an “infiltrator” who had committed a criminal offence and could be deported within 72 hours without judicial review. This new order puts at risk thousands of Palestinians living in the West Bank whose home addresses, as recorded in the population registry, are in Gaza, as well as people born in the West Bank or abroad who, for various reasons, do not have residency cards. However, owing to the ambiguity of the language of the order, it could potentially be applied to a much broader category of residents. In implementation of the new policy, several Palestinians have been deported to Gaza after being released from Israeli jails.

19. On numerous occasions, Israeli forces penetrated a few hundred metres within the Gaza Strip and withdrew shortly after conducting land-levelling operations. Such incidents occurred in the context of Israeli restrictions on Palestinian access to areas along the border fence. Similar restrictions were applied on access to fishing areas near shore. In many incidents, Israeli naval forces opened fire on Palestinian fishing boats, forcing them ashore, and, in several cases, wounding fishermen and damaging their boats. Three Palestinian fishermen have been killed and five others injured in 2010 (as of September). Since late 2008, Palestinians have been totally or partially prevented from accessing land located up to 1,000 metres to 1,500 metres from the Green Line, and sea areas beyond three nautical miles from shore. The United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs estimated the restricted area at 17 per cent of the total land mass of the Gaza Strip and 35 per cent of its agricultural land. At sea, fishermen were totally prevented from accessing some 85 per cent of the maritime areas to which they were entitled according to the Oslo Agreements. An estimated 178,000 people — 12 per cent of the population of Gaza — were directly affected by this regime, with approximately 113,000 affected in land areas and 65,000 affected by restrictions on access to maritime areas.

20. Access restrictions in those areas were primarily enforced by live fire on people attempting to enter the areas. While in most cases it was “warning shots” that forced people to stay away from the area, the Israeli army since the end of the Cast Lead offensive in January 2009, has killed at least 22 civilians and injured more than 150 in these circumstances. Despite the potential for civilian casualties, the Israeli authorities have not informed the affected population about the precise boundaries of the restricted areas and the conditions under which access to those areas might be permitted or denied.

21. Another method used by the Israeli military to prevent access was the systematic levelling of farm land and the destruction of other private property located in the restricted areas. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs conservatively estimated the value of agricultural and other property destroyed in the past five years in those areas at $308 million. It has been further estimated that access restrictions and the related destruction of agricultural assets resulted in a yearly loss of approximately 75,000 metric tons of potential produce, conservatively estimated at $50.2 million a year. In the fishing sector, the potential fishing catch lost as a result of access restrictions was estimated at approximately 7,000 metric tons, with a related loss of income of some $26.5 million over a period of five years. The erosion of livelihoods has forced affected families to develop a variety of coping mechanisms aimed at generating alternative income and reducing expenditure. Some of the practices raising significant concerns include a reduction in the quantity of food consumed; a gradual shift in diets (from vegetables and animal products to low-cost and high-carbohydrate items); a reduction in the length of school enrolment for children; and an increased inclination on the part of parents to marry off their daughters at an earlier age.

22. These access restrictions in Gaza, together with Israel’s continued obstruction of the import of essential construction materials and spare parts, have significantly impeded the maintenance and upgrade of the existing infrastructure for wastewater and electricity, negatively impacting the provision of services to the entire population of Gaza. In particular, the prolonged delay in the construction of three wastewater treatment plants has contributed to the daily release of some 80 million litres of raw and partially treated sewage into the sea and streams, constituting a significant environmental and health hazard.

23. Reconstruction in Gaza has been nearly impossible owing to the blockade imposed by Israel. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) reported in May 2010 that, more than one year after the Israeli offensive, three quarters of the damage inflicted on buildings and infrastructure remained unrepaired. Nearly none of the 3,425 homes destroyed during the operation had been reconstructed, resulting in the displacement of approximately 20,000 people. Only 17.5 per cent of the value of the damage caused to educational facilities had been repaired, putting an extra strain on Gaza's already stressed education system. Only half of the damage to the power network had been repaired, and no repair had been made to the transport infrastructure. A quarter of damaged farmland had been rehabilitated and only 40 per cent of private businesses had been repaired.

24. On 31 May, Israeli naval commando forces, operating in international waters, intercepted the "Free Gaza" flotilla of six ships carrying international activists and humanitarian aid to the Gaza Strip. During the takeover of one of the vessels, the Mavi Marmara, nine Turkish nationals, including one with dual United States citizenship, were killed by Israeli soldiers and many others were wounded. The Israeli assault was widely condemned by the international community. At the end of an emergency meeting, the Security Council on 1 June issued a presidential statement condemning these acts and calling for "a prompt, impartial, credible and transparent investigation conforming to international standards" (see/PRST/2010/9).

25. On 14 June, the Israeli Cabinet approved the establishment of the Israeli Public Commission to Examine the Maritime Incident of 31 May 2010, headed by retired Israeli Supreme Court Justice Jacob Turkel, in addition to a military investigation headed by General Eiland. On 2 June, the United Nations Human Rights Council decided to dispatch an independent international fact-finding mission to investigate violations of international law resulting from the attacks on the flotilla. The mission issued its report (A/HRC/15/21) on 22 September, concluding that a series of violations of international law had been committed by Israeli forces. The conclusions contained in the report were endorsed by the Human Rights Council on 29 September. On 2 August, the Secretary-General announced the launch of a Panel of Inquiry on the Flotilla incident that occurred on 31 May 2010, led by Geoffrey Palmer, the former Prime Minister of New Zealand. The Panel submitted its initial progress report to the Secretary-General on 15 September.

26. On 20 June, under international pressure, the Government of Israel announced a decision to ease the blockade on Gaza, which has been imposed for over three years since 2007. On 5 July, the Government of Israel switched from a "positive" list of goods allowed into Gaza to a "negative" list of items that would be prohibited or restricted from entry. Among the items prohibited or restricted are fertilizers, glass-fibre-based raw materials, drilling equipment, vessels and water disinfectants, as well as 19 types of construction materials (to be limited to projects under international supervision), including cement, gravel, concrete blocks, steel elements, asphalt, sealing materials and construction vehicles.

27. Despite the increase in imports into Gaza under the new measures, they remained far below the weekly average of truckloads delivered before the institution of the closure regime in 2007, thereby impeding the reconstruction of homes and infrastructure and limiting the scope of economic reactivation. A lack of industrial fuel supplied to the Gaza power plant continued to result in power outages of between four to six hours per day (as of September), affecting the daily life of residents, as well as the provision of essential services, including water supply, sewage treatment and removal. Power cuts also forced hospitals to suspend or postpone elective surgery, diagnostic procedures and supportive services, and sensitive medical equipment was regularly damaged as a result of the cuts. Access to medical facilities in the West Bank, Israel and Jordan continued to be limited by a restrictive permit regime implemented by the Israeli authorities.

28. Residents of Gaza continued to rely on goods smuggled through the tunnels under the border with Egypt. During the reporting period, 49 Palestinians, including 2 children, were killed and 104 injured in tunnel-related incidents, including Israeli air strikes, tunnel collapses, electrocution and the explosion of gas cylinders.

29. On 15 January, an arrangement was made whereby the Government of Israel made a payment of $10.5 million to the United Nations in respect of losses caused by Israel to United Nations facilities in Gaza during the Israeli military assault of December 2008 to January 2009 in the nine incidents investigated by the Gaza Board of Inquiry established by the Secretary-General. In the light of that payment, the United Nations has agreed that the financial issues relating to those incidents had been brought to a satisfactory conclusion.

30. During the reporting period, Israel continued illegal settlement activities in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem. On 25 November 2009, Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu declared a 10-month “partial moratorium” on new construction in settlements in the West Bank in order to encourage the resumption of talks with the Palestinians. The moratorium was not applied to East Jerusalem, where settlement construction continued throughout the reporting period. The organization Peace Now, which monitors Israeli settlements, reported in August 2010 that at least 600 housing units had started to be built during the moratorium in over 60 settlements, at least 492 of those in direct violation of the moratorium. Peace Now also reported that some 2,000 housing units were currently under construction, most of which had started before the announcement of the moratorium. Hours after the expiration of the moratorium on 26 September, construction work resumed in many settlements. According to a report by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, for the year 2009, the number of settlements in the West Bank totalled 144, the majority located in the Jerusalem area, and the number of settlers reached 517,774 by the end of 2009, the majority living in the Jerusalem area.

31. Of critical concern was settlement activity in Occupied East Jerusalem, as well as acts aimed at displacing and expelling Palestinian residents from the City through house demolitions, evictions and revocations of residency rights. Efforts by Israelis to settle in Palestinian neighbourhoods in East Jerusalem have intensified and have often been accompanied by attempts to forcibly evict Palestinian families. Among the methods used have been “reclamation of property” allegedly owned by Jewish residents of pre-1948 Mandatory Palestine, and controversial purchases of Palestinian property. Moreover, the Palestinian institutions in East Jerusalem, including the Orient House and the Chamber of Commerce, remained closed in contravention of the road map.

32. According to a report issued by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in July 2010, at least 242 Palestinian structures had been demolished in East Jerusalem and “Area C” of the West Bank in 2010. As a result, more than 1,100 Palestinians, including more than 400 children, had been forcibly displaced or otherwise affected owing to extensive damage of property or destruction of livelihood. In addition, there had been a marked increase in the number of stop-work and demolition orders being issued by Israel in Area C. As of August 2010, there were more than 3,000 outstanding demolition orders against Palestinian properties throughout Area C. Demolitions were carried out mainly against structures that had been built without Israeli-issued building permits and were thus considered “illegal” by Israel. In Area C, more than 70 per cent of the land, currently allocated to Israeli settlements or the Israeli occupying forces, was unavailable for Palestinians, while severe restrictions applied to their use of an additional 29 per cent. Only 1 per cent of the land in Area C was thus available for Palestinian construction and development. In East Jerusalem, only 13 per cent of the land was currently zoned for Palestinian construction, compared to the 35 per cent allocated for Israeli settlements.

33. The reporting period was also marked by increased violence by Israeli settlers against Palestinians. This included physical assault, harassment, intimidation, setting fire to or seizing agricultural land, uprooting or damaging olive trees and grape vines, the prevention of access, throwing stones at vehicles and houses, vandalizing mosques and cemeteries, shooting civilians and killing livestock. During the period, more than 300 incidents have taken place in which Israeli settlers caused either injury to Palestinian civilians, including children, or damage to Palestinian property. An Israeli settler was killed in a Palestinian shooting attack on his vehicle on 24 December 2009, and three Palestinian suspects were killed by an Israeli undercover unit two days later. On 14 May 2010, a Palestinian boy from the Ramallah area was shot and killed by Israeli settlers after he had thrown stones at their car. On 31 August, gunmen from the Izz ad-Din Al-Qassam Brigades, the armed wing of Hamas, opened fire at an Israeli car near Hebron, killing four settlers inside, including two women, one of whom was pregnant. The trend of particular concern was the so called “price tag” strategy by extreme settlers to protest the Israeli Government’s policy of settlement restraint, whereby for every attempt by the Israeli authorities to dismantle a settlement outpost, settlers would attack Palestinian communities. Also, the lack of adequate law enforcement on settler violence remained an issue of serious concern. The Israeli human rights group, Yesh Din, reported that investigations into many incidents had been closed by the Israeli police for lack of evidence or owing to “unknown perpetrators”.

34. Israel has continued the illegal construction of the wall in the West Bank, including in and around Occupied East Jerusalem, in defiance of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as of July 2010, approximately 61.4 per cent of the 707-kilometre-long wall was complete, a further 8.4 per cent was under construction and 30.1 per cent was planned but not yet constructed. When completed, the majority of the route, approximately 85 per cent, will run inside the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, rather than along the Green Line. The total area located between the wall and the Green Line amounted to 9.4 per cent of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem and the “no man’s land”, resulting in the confiscation of vast tracts of Palestinian land and the displacement of thousands of Palestinian civilians, many of whom are now forced to acquire special permits from the occupying Power in order to remain in their own homes in and around those areas.

35. According to information made available by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics in April 2010, more than 7,000 Palestinians, including 34 women and 270 children (44 under the age of 16), were held by Israel in 17 investigation and detention centres as well as prisons. Detainees were often deprived of medical treatment, and there were more than 1,500 cases of illness among the detainees, including heart problems, kidney failure and cancer. Israeli authorities deprived these detainees of adequate medical treatment, and medication was often limited to pain killers only. Detainees were often subjected to isolated confinement and other forms of ill-treatment, resulting in psychological problems. Approximately 14 detainees had been subjected to isolated confinement for more than five years.

36. The Israeli occupation continued to gravely affect Palestinian women and children. In a report released in February 2010, the World Bank stated that, while men were the direct recipients of violence, women had also had to bear its indirect costs. For instance, although the overwhelming majority of Palestinians killed or imprisoned were men, women had to shoulder the responsibility of raising children and maintaining the household alone. In addition, for women, the Israeli military checkpoints represented spaces of humiliation and presented both physical and moral danger with gender-related consequences. The invasive search procedures presented a potential risk to women's honour. Families and communities often responded by censoring women's movements, in particular those of young unmarried women. The sense of humiliation and degree of affront to a woman's reputation was so great that families in Areas B and C even limited their girls' education rather than subject them to the perceived moral dangers of the checkpoints.

37. In Area C of the West Bank, schoolchildren face many obstacles, including restricted access to their schools, long walking distances, and substandard classrooms owing to the restrictive permit regime. In East Jerusalem, as of August 2010, over 7,000 Palestinian school-aged children were not enrolled in school because of Israeli policies requiring families to obtain permits proving residency in Jerusalem. In the Gaza Strip, 82 per cent of the damage caused to schools during Operation Cast Lead has still not been repaired, according to the United Nations Children's Fund. Moreover, the closure regime on Gaza has affected access to schools, seven of which were located within the restricted areas near the border with Israel. The safety of some 4,600 students and staff attending those institutions, the quality of education provided and the level of educational achievement have been seriously undermined by the frequent exposure to Israeli fire targeting people present in open areas.

38. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported that access restrictions in the West Bank had exacerbated the acute water shortage affecting communities in Area C, particularly during the summer season, as a result of the lack of water infrastructure and previous years of drought. The water shortage has gradually eroded the herding livelihoods on which most of those communities rely. Humanitarian organizations seeking to address the needs of these vulnerable communities faced considerable challenges owing to the restrictive permit regime implemented by the Israeli authorities. The Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem reported that Israel held almost complete control of the mountain aquifer and exploited 80 per cent of the production for its needs. The discriminatory sharing of water resources has created a chronic water shortage in the West Bank, with potentially serious consequences for the health of Palestinians.

39. In the Gaza Strip, in the peak of the hot summer season, households' access to running water was severely limited owing to power shortages. According to the Coastal Municipalities Water Utility, as of August 2010, 40 per cent of households in Gaza had access to running water for only six to eight hours per week, 30 per cent received water for only six hours once every five days, and the other 30 per cent obtained water only once every two days. The quality of the running water was poor, forcing the population to rely extensively on tankered water for drinking.

40. Despite facing very difficult circumstances of the occupation, the Palestinian Authority has made significant progress in carrying out its two-year State-building plan led by Prime Minister Fayyad, entitled “Palestine: Ending the occupation, establishing the State”, which was released in August 2009. The World Bank reported that the Palestinian Authority was making steady progress on implementing the programme and had strengthened its public financial management systems, improved service delivery, and made significant reforms to increase security and shore up its fiscal position. In the first half of 2010, the Palestinian economy has achieved real growth of 7 per cent. Most of the growth was in the West Bank, while Gaza continued to experience falling per capita gross domestic product. Sustainability of the growth, given the reliance on donor assistance, was a cause for concern. While private sector growth required a shift from public sector-driven investment to a real take-off in private sector investment and development and stabilization of the economy, the restrictions on movement and access to resources and markets imposed by the Government of Israel remained the largest impediment to private sector investment in the West Bank and Gaza. In August 2010, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs recorded some 500 obstacles to movement in the West Bank.

41. In its progress report on the Fayyad Plan released in August, entitled “Homestretch to freedom”, the Palestinian Authority stated that 34 new schools had been built and 23 had been expanded; 11 new clinics had been built and 30 expanded; 44 new housing projects had been started; 16 new roads had been built and 40 road improvement projects had been started; and 370,000 trees had been planted under the Greening Palestine project. Also, law and order had been improved: 88,000 court orders had been carried out by the police and a police station had been established in every major urban centre and in some other municipal centres. The Government had been able to increase revenues by 18 per cent, with an increase of 20 per cent in tax revenues.

42. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide an extensive programme of emergency assistance and basic public services in Gaza and the West Bank. Despite the Israeli announcement regarding the intention to ease the Gaza blockade in July 2010, UNRWA has not been able to resume work on suspended major infrastructure projects, with the exception of three pilot projects intended to test the integrity of the supply chain. In May 2010, the Agency completed 60 years of operations amidst one of its most grave financial crises, which threatened its ability to continue its vital services for the refugee population. The Committee reiterates its appreciation for the dedicated services provided by UNRWA and calls upon all donors to increase contributions to ensure the uninterrupted delivery of vital services and the well-being of the 4.8 million registered refugees dependent on the Agency’s assistance.

43. UNDP continued to respond to the destruction caused by the Israeli military attacks in the Gaza Strip of December 2008 to January 2009 by clearing and recycling debris, repairing damage to farming and fishing assets, providing social and economic assistance and coordinating early recovery efforts by various United Nations system entities. UNDP has affirmed its preparedness to restart the construction projects that have been suspended for three years if the reported changes in Israel's closure regime occur. In the West Bank, UNDP is working with the Palestinian Authority to increase its administrative capacity and improve access to justice. It is also engaged in a range of infrastructure, environmental, social and economic initiatives to improve the conditions of the Palestinian people and the effectiveness of government.

44. The Committee remained appreciative of the important work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the consolidated appeal for 2010 focused on delivering humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/16

45. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others.

1. Action taken in the General Assembly and the Security Council

Meetings of the Security Council

46. During the reporting period, the Security Council has continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. It held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question”.

47. The Council held its 6201st meeting on 14 October 2009 to discuss the Goldstone report, at the request of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, supported by Egypt on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement, and the Syrian Arab Republic, on behalf of the Organization of the Islamic Conference. During the open debate, the Chair of the Committee made a statement (S/PV.6201).

48. The Council held its 6265th meeting on 27 January 2010. During an open debate following the monthly briefing, the Chair of the Committee delivered a statement (S/PV.6265).

49. The Council held its 6298th meeting on 14 April. During an open debate following the monthly briefing, the Vice-Chair of the Committee delivered a statement (S/PV.6298).

50. The Council held its 6363rd meeting on 21 July. During an open debate following the monthly briefing, the Chair of the Committee made a statement (S/PV.6363).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

51. On 15 December 2009, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on Israel’s settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1142).

52. On 24 February 2010, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on Israel’s announcement to include the Tomb of the Patriarchs (Al-Haram Al-Ibrahimi) in Hebron and Rachel’s Tomb (Masjid Bilal or Qubbat Rakhil) in Bethlehem in a list of Israel’s “national heritage infrastructure” (GA/PAL/1151).

53. On 19 March, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on Israel’s settlement expansion in East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1153).

54. On 31 August, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the resumption of negotiations on all permanent status issues (GA/PAL/1173).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 64/16 and 64/17

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

55. At its periodic meetings at Headquarters in New York, the Committee, among other things, heard a presentation by a representative of the United Nations Environment Programme on an environmental assessment of the Gaza Strip following the Israeli military offensive, as well as a testimony by a participant in the Free Gaza flotilla. As a new initiative, the Committee also screened several documentary films on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

2. Programme of international meetings and conferences

56. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

57. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, co-organized with the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean, Qawra, Malta, 12 and 13 February 2010;

(b) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, United Nations Office at Vienna, 24 and 25 March;

(c) United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People, United Nations Office at Vienna, 26 March;

(d) United Nations International Meeting in Support of the Israeli-Palestinian Peace Process, Istanbul, 25 and 26 May;

(e) United Nations Public Forum in Support of the Palestinian People, Istanbul, 27 May;

(f) United Nations African Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Rabat, 1 and 2 July.

58. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the "Question of Palestine" website maintained by the Division.

59. In Malta, on the sidelines of the International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, the Committee delegation was received by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of Malta, Tonio Borg. It also held a meeting with the Chair of the Standing Committee on Foreign and European Affairs of the Maltese Parliament, Michael Frendo, and members of the Standing Committee.

60. During its stay in Vienna in connection with the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, the Committee delegation met with the Political Director, Ambassador Stefan Lehne, and the Director for the Middle East and North Africa, Minister Friedrich Stift, both of the Ministry for European and International Affairs of Austria.

61. In Istanbul, during its stay in connection with the United Nations International Meeting in Support of the Israeli-Palestinian Peace Process, the Committee delegation was received by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Turkey, Ahmet Davutoğlu.

62. In Rabat, on the sidelines of the United Nations African Meeting on the Question of Palestine, the Committee delegation met with President of the House of Representatives of Morocco, Abdelwahad Radi, and the President of the Moroccan House of Councillors, Mohamed Cheikh Biadillah.

3. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

63. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the European Union, the League of Arab States, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices.

4. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

64. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 30 November 2009. The meetings provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to improve coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations and encouraged them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at realizing a two-State solution.

65. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations. At the United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People, held at the United Nations Office at Vienna in March, the deliberations focused on civil society actions against the separation wall and the importance of upholding international law, including with respect to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the wall. Meanwhile, the United Nations Public Forum in Support of the Palestinian People, held in May 2010 at the Istanbul Kültür University in Turkey, focused on Jerusalem. Over the past year, the Chair of the Committee met with representatives of civil society, including a delegation of Palestinian Christians.

66. During the reporting period, six civil society organizations have been accredited to the Committee.

67. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a page on civil society and the question of Palestine (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>) on the “Question of Palestine” website as a tool for the exchange of information and networking and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee.

68. The Division strived to enhance the use of information technology and created a Facebook “fan page”, which has attracted more than 800 “fans” during the reporting period, informing about developments related to the question of Palestine and the work of the Committee. In addition, the Division continued to publish the periodic online bulletin “NGO Action News”, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

69. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. For the first time, it co-organized a meeting with the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean. The meeting considered, in particular, the role of parliamentarians and inter-parliamentary organizations in supporting Israeli-Palestinian peace and promoting stability in the region. The four international events held during 2010 were addressed by parliamentarians from Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Malta, Turkey, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

5. Research, monitoring and publications

70. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through the Internet:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) Special bulletins and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

6. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

71. Pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates, the Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the “Question of Palestine” website, which is located on the United Nations home page under “Peace and Security”. This included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL (<http://unispal.un.org>) on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old United Nations system and related documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of UNISPAL, including by incorporating additional multimedia content and RSS and Twitter feeds intended to alert users about newly posted materials. The Division has successfully launched the redesigned “Question of Palestine” portal.

7. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

72. Two staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority participated in a training programme conducted by the Division from September to December 2009, in conjunction with the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly. The trainees familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other organs and conducted research on specific topics.

8. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

73. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Geneva on 30 November 2009, and at the United Nations Office at Vienna on 1 December. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a cultural exhibit entitled “The United Nations and the Palestine refugees, 60 years later” was presented by UNRWA, in cooperation with the Permanent Mission of Luxembourg to the United Nations, under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee also sponsored a concert by Maqamat, an orchestra of the Edward Said National Conservatory of Music in Ramallah. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations information centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/18

74. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/18, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine in order to raise the awareness of the international community on this question, as well as on the situation in the Middle East, in such a way as to contribute effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process.

75. During the reporting period, the Department produced a total of 129 press releases on the question of Palestine in English and French, including summaries of formal meetings and press conferences, as well as statements and press releases by the Secretary-General and other United Nations officials.

76. UN Radio and the United Nations News Centre regularly covered the question of Palestine in the six official languages, as well as in Portuguese and Kiswahili. The Arabic Language Unit provided extensive coverage of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Interviews, press briefings and General Assembly and Security Council sessions were covered and posted on the UN Radio website. The English language version of the portal alone carried over 200 news stories devoted to the subject.

77. The Department, in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Portugal, organized the eighteenth International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East, in Lisbon on 22 and 23 July 2010. Approximately 100 participants from Portugal, the Middle East and other parts of the world participated, including current and former policymakers, government officials, mayors, representatives of civil society, academia and journalists. The Seminar received both local and international media coverage.

78. The Department organized a training programme for 10 young Palestinian journalists at Headquarters, in Washington, D.C., and in Geneva from 2 November to 11 December 2009. The programme strengthened the participants' capacity as broadcast media professionals and included training to improve their skills in maintaining websites in Arabic.

79. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library continued to digitize documents for the UNISPAL document collection.

80. The network of United Nations information centres and services continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine and to organize special outreach activities. The information centres promoted the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People and widely disseminated the messages of the Secretary-General in the official and non-official languages, including German, Greek, Japanese, Polish, Portuguese and Turkish. The United Nations Information Service in Vienna and the United Nations information centres in Ankara and Rabat provided communications support to the United Nations meetings held under the auspices of the Committee.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

81. Throughout the reporting period, the Committee has continued to advocate a peaceful and just solution of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, through the establishment of a sovereign and independent Palestinian State on the basis of the pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem as its capital in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions. There is international consensus that such a solution would lead to the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, as defined by the General Assembly, and the establishment of peace and security in the region. The Committee has reiterated that the Israeli occupation of Palestinian land that started in 1967 remains the main obstacle towards the realization of that objective. The occupation has entailed the construction of settlements and the wall, the transfer of Israeli settlers and the annexation of Palestinian land, as well as the military oppression of the Palestinian civilian population, constituting violations of international humanitarian and human rights law and constant affronts to the human dignity of the Palestinian people and the economic and social fabric of the Palestinian society. The occupation, with all its consequences, not only subjugates the Palestinian people but also harms the social fabric of the Israeli society. The prolonged occupation has made the search for a comprehensive, just and lasting solution more difficult by creating almost irreversible facts on the ground. As a result, a majority of the Palestinian people have lost confidence in the political process with Israel.

82. The Committee has repeatedly expressed its utmost concern about the volatile situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in East Jerusalem, and the stagnation of the political process. The Committee remained firmly opposed to the continued illegal construction of settlements in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem, accompanied by escalating settler violence. In addition, the construction of the separation wall has continued, leaving thousands of Palestinians cut off from access to their lands, families, schools and hospitals and isolating several communities in walled enclaves. The Committee is disturbed by the impunity with which Israel's legal obligations, as confirmed by the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, have been flouted, and calls upon the international community to take the required action to ensure respect for, and compliance with, the ruling of the International Court of Justice, the Fourth Geneva Convention and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

83. The Committee has been particularly alarmed by the situation in Occupied East Jerusalem, including the acceleration of settlement construction and expansion, the demolition of houses, the revocation of residency rights, the eviction of Palestinian citizens, settler extremism and the threats to Jerusalem's holy sites and historical heritage. Recent Israeli policy statements and actions by the municipal government in the City are not conducive to productive talks on the future of Jerusalem as the capital of two States. The Committee reiterates its position that Israel's dangerous and provocative policies in East Jerusalem are prone to spark negative reactions on the ground, in the region and by Muslims worldwide, leading to violence and even armed conflict. East Jerusalem is an integral part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and a negotiated solution of the question of Jerusalem, based on international law, is essential to resolving the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and crucial for a durable peace in the whole region. The Committee is encouraged that these concerns are widely shared by Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations, as well as by parliamentarians.

84. The Committee has persistently condemned the Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip, which prevents any reconstruction and sustained humanitarian assistance and which has caused the near collapse of the economy and social fabric of Gaza. That siege constitutes a severe form of collective punishment of the entire population of the Gaza Strip. The Committee has also denounced the firing of rockets and mortar rounds by Palestinian militants from Gaza and reiterated its call for the release of Israeli corporal Gilad Shalit. It urges Israel to open all of the Gaza Strip's border crossings for the flow of humanitarian aid, import and export of commercial goods, including reconstruction materials, and movement of persons in accordance with international humanitarian law, the Agreement on Movement and Access of 15 November 2005 and Security Council resolution 1860 (2009).

85. The Committee continued to monitor the international investigations and their follow-up into the Israeli military offensive against Gaza of December 2008 to January 2009 and the Free Gaza flotilla incident of May 2010. It acknowledged the value of internal investigations on the national level. The report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, established by the Human Rights Council and led by Justice Richard Goldstone (A/HRC/12/48), represents a comprehensive, balanced and authoritative account of the 2008-2009 Israeli incursion into Gaza. While the Committee recognizes the value of the Israeli Government's recent examination of some of the specific allegations, it calls for a comprehensive, credible and independent investigation into the violations of international law committed and demands follow-up action. The Committee also took note of the report of the international fact-finding mission established by the Human Rights Council to investigate violations of international law, including international humanitarian and human rights law, resulting from the Israeli attacks on the flotilla of ships carrying humanitarian assistance (A/HRC/15/21). The results of those investigations will, without doubt, contribute to a strengthening of the rule and application of international humanitarian and human rights law in conflict situations. The Committee appeals to all the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to fulfil their obligations in accordance with common Article 1, which obligates them to respect and to ensure respect for the Convention in all circumstances.

86. The Committee welcomed the resumption of the direct negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians on all permanent status issues and notes the important role played by the United States, Egypt and Jordan. The agreement by the Palestinian leadership to direct talks, despite Israel's lack of compliance with its road map obligations, testifies to the full commitment of the Palestine Liberation Organization to a peaceful solution of the conflict and should be met by a genuine commitment of the Israeli Government to the two-State solution, bolstered by tangible improvements of the situation on the ground. The Committee is of the view that the talks can only succeed if they are conducted in an atmosphere of trust and goodwill. In that regard, the Committee joins the rest of the international community in expressing deep regret at the non-extension of the Israeli moratorium on settlement construction, which called into question the continuation of the negotiations. It is crucial that the negotiations are based on the relevant Security Council resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference and the Arab Peace Initiative. The direct involvement in the negotiations of regional partners is vitally important. The continued support by the international community, in particular by the Quartet and its individual members, is key to moving forward the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations on all permanent status issues. The Committee will closely follow the developments and offer constructive support in the interest of resolving the question of Palestine and the achievement by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights.

87. The negotiations should be buttressed by a parallel process of Palestinian State-building in implementation of the strategic plan of the Palestinian Authority. The Committee will back those efforts by advocating sustained and generous donor commitment, highlighting the actual needs on the ground and providing the Palestinian Authority with the opportunity to present its assessment to the wider international community.

88. The Committee remains concerned that the divisions among the Palestinian factions profoundly affect the legitimate Palestinian national aspirations for statehood and peace. It calls for invigorated efforts by all to help reconcile their positions on the basis of the prevailing consensus on the need to achieve the two-State solution, which would lead to the exercise by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights.

89. The Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights will continue through their mandated activities to generate heightened international awareness of the current challenges for a comprehensive, just and lasting solution of the question of Palestine. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and the use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the continued involvement of parliamentarians and civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) the increased international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine as indicated by the growing number of documents and relevant information materials on the issue accessed by users worldwide at the websites maintained by the Division. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority carried out by the Division has proved its usefulness as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee strongly recommends that this important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, enhanced.

90. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2011, implemented by the Division, on widening international support for the permanent status negotiations and on contributing to the creation of a favourable international atmosphere for their conduct in good faith. The Committee intends to mobilize increased international scrutiny of the developments on the ground, in particular the halt of all settlement activities in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, and an end to all other illegal Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It will support global campaigns to challenge Israeli impunity and promote the concept of Israeli accountability for its actions towards the Palestinian people. It will pay special attention to highlighting the plight of the most disadvantaged Palestinians, such as the Palestine refugees, the Palestinians living in Gaza and Palestinian political prisoners. The Committee will continue to mobilize support for the Palestinian institution-building plan and all other efforts to facilitate the independence and viability of the Palestinian State. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution of the conflict. The Committee wishes to contribute to efforts towards ending incitement on both sides, provide a venue to have the narratives heard and reconciled and, with the help of civil society, to promote peace education. It will pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and their organizations in this process.

91. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people. It lauds the courageous advocacy actions of countless activists, including eminent personalities and parliamentarians, who participate in demonstrations against the wall, try to break the siege of Gaza and keep their home constituencies informed about the harsh realities of life under occupation. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine. It will continue to assess its programme of cooperation with civil society and consult them on ways to enhance their contribution. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening cooperation with civil society.

92. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of the two-State solution and ensure respect for international law, in accordance with their international obligations.

93. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities. The Division should pay special attention to continued development of the "Question of Palestine" portal and to explore new technologies and media, including Web-based social information networks, such as Facebook and Twitter. The Division should also continue to develop the UNISPAL document collection. The Division should further develop the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority paying special attention to the programme's gender balance, and organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

94. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

95. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 65/13 of 30 November 2010.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2010 to 6 October 2011.

(Signed) Abdou Salam Diallo
Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974.

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel, the occupying Power, from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly each year renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

3. The Committee has consistently supported a peaceful solution of the question of Palestine. It welcomed the 1991 Madrid Peace Conference that launched the Middle East peace process based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It also welcomed the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (A/48/486-S/26560, annex) and subsequent implementation agreements. The Committee has strongly supported the objective of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called on the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee has continued to work towards creating conditions for the successful conduct of the negotiations on a permanent settlement allowing the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights. The Committee has also promoted support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The reporting period has been characterized by the stagnation of the political process and a volatile situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The status quo has been characterized unanimously by the international community as unsustainable and requiring urgent attention. Despite the global calls for a complete cessation, Israel has continued its illegal settlement campaign in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, further exacerbating tensions and mistrust between the two sides. The critical humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip was also exacerbated by the continued imposition by Israel of a severe blockade on the territory, which has obstructed the movement of persons and goods, including humanitarian access and the import of materials required for the reconstruction and rehabilitation of Gaza, and undermined economic recovery.

5. The Israeli-Palestinian peace talks relaunched in September 2010 under the mediation of the United States of America were stalled merely after a few rounds of meetings following Israel's refusal to renew its so-called moratorium on settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. In the absence of credible negotiations owing to Israel's refusal to cease settlements activity and to commit to the long-standing terms of reference of the peace process, the Palestinian leadership turned to diplomatic initiatives to gain recognition as a State within the 1967 borders, on the basis of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions, and efforts aimed at obtaining United Nations membership during the General Assembly in 2011 session, the date endorsed in August 2010 by the Quartet as the date for the achievement of a final peace settlement. On 23 September 2011, at the outset of the sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly, the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, submitted to the Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon, an application for Palestine to become a State Member of the United Nations.

6. The situation in the Gaza Strip remained bleak, with high rates of poverty and unemployment. The continued blockade imposed by Israel forced 1.5 million Palestinians in Gaza to suffer from an acute shortage of basic goods and services, medicine and medical equipment and even clean water. Reconstruction and rehabilitation have been seriously undermined by the blockade. Throughout the year, Israel continued to conduct air strikes and limited ground incursions in Gaza, resulting in Palestinian casualties, including many civilians. This was met with rocket and mortar fire by armed Palestinian groups into southern Israel, endangering the lives of the Israeli population.

7. Israeli military incursions into West Bank population centres also continued, involving the killing and injuring of Palestinians, including civilians. Hundreds of Palestinians were arrested during those operations, including children under the age of 18 years. Many unarmed civilians were subjected to the excessive use of force by the Israeli military during demonstrations against the occupation, resulting in many injuries. The expansion of illegal Israeli settlements continued in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, with thousands of new units approved by the Israeli authorities. The construction of the separation wall continued in defiance of the International Court of Justice advisory opinion, resulting in further confiscation of Palestinian land and demolition of properties and further harming socio-economic conditions. The situation in Occupied East Jerusalem remained particularly alarming, with continued land confiscations, house demolitions and evictions of Palestinian residents, and the transfer of more Israeli settlers into the City.

8. Heeding the calls of the Palestinian people for an end to the political division since June 2007, Palestinian factions concluded a much anticipated reconciliation agreement in April 2011, but its implementation has been pending.

9. Over the reporting period, the Palestinian Authority successfully advanced its State-building programme, with strong support from the international community, and its institutional readiness for Statehood has been endorsed by the United Nations, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

10. The activities of the Committee and its Bureau in the reporting period focused on the need for respect for the relevant United Nations resolutions and the urgency of resuming negotiations between the parties in the interest of salvaging the two-State solution and advancing the realization of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace. The Committee monitored the situation on the ground and the political developments, implemented its programme of international meetings and conferences, held consultations with representatives of Governments, national parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations, as well as civil society, and reached out to its partners worldwide using new communications media. The Committee reiterated its position of principle that a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could be achieved only through ending the occupation that began in 1967, establishing a Palestinian State on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, and a just and agreed solution to the Palestine refugees issue on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III). The first international meeting convened by the Committee in March 2011 focused on the urgency of addressing the plight of Palestinian political prisoners held by Israel. It was followed by a regional meeting for Latin America and the Caribbean to discuss the urgency of realizing a two-State solution. The annual assistance seminar organized by the Committee in May focused on the mobilization of continued support for the Palestinian State-building programme. At another international meeting held in Brussels in June, participants discussed the role of Europe in advancing Palestinian Statehood and achieving Israeli-Palestinian peace. The Committee encouraged all stakeholders to support the role and activities of the United Nations and urged them to support the two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict on the basis of the relevant Security Council resolutions, the terms of reference of the Madrid Conference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet road map.

Mandate of the Committee

11. On 30 November 2010, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 65/13), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 65/14) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 65/15). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 65/16, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

12. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

13. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the African Union, the League of Arab States, the Organization of Islamic Cooperation and Palestine.

14. At its 330th meeting, on 21 January 2011, the Committee re-elected Abdou Salam Diallo (Senegal) as Chair, Pedro Núñez Mosquera (Cuba) and Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) as Vice-Chairs and Saviour F. Borg (Malta) as Rapporteur.

15. Also at the 330th meeting, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2011 (see A/AC.183/2011/1).

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

16. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee as observers were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Political developments

17. The Israeli-Palestinian talks that had been initiated by the United States of America on 2 September 2010 were stalled after Israel ended its 10-month so-called moratorium on settlement activity on 26 September. In the following months, intensive diplomatic efforts led by the United States and supported by the Quartet to create conditions conducive to the continuation of talks, including a renewal of the settlement freeze, were met by Israeli government approval of hundreds of new settlement units, especially in Occupied East Jerusalem. On 8 December, the United States efforts towards a settlement freeze were brought to a close.

18. In a Middle East policy speech on 19 May 2011, the President of the United States of America, Barack Obama, laid out parameters on borders and security, stating that the borders of Israel and Palestine should be based on the 1967 lines with mutually agreed swaps, so that secure and recognized borders were established for both States, and that the full and phased withdrawal of Israeli military forces should be coordinated with the assumption of Palestinian security responsibility in a sovereign, non-militarized State. On 20 May, the Quartet issued a statement expressing strong support for President Obama's vision. Subsequently, the Quartet was unable to translate that vision into clear parameters for the resumption of negotiations between the parties.

19. Meanwhile, the Palestinian leadership continued its efforts to gain international recognition as a State within the 1967 borders. A number of countries have recognized the State of Palestine during the reporting period. According to the Palestine Liberation Organization Negotiations Affairs Department, more than 127 States Members of the United Nations recognize Palestine to date. On 23 September 2011, during the general debate of the sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly, Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas submitted to the Secretary-General an application for Palestine to become a State Member of the United Nations. The Secretary-General immediately forwarded the application to the Security Council and the General Assembly.

Settlements

20. During the reporting period, Israel, the occupying Power, continued illegal settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics reported in August 2011 that the number of Israeli settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, totalled 144, and the number of settlers in 2010 had been 518,974. During the reporting period, the following plans to construct new housing units were approved by Israel, the occupying Power: 158 in the "Ramot" settlement and 80 in "Pisgat Ze'ev" (14 October 2010); 800 in "Ariel" and more than 1,000 elsewhere in Jerusalem and the West Bank (8 November); 130 in "Gilo" and Beit Safafa (30 November); 625 in "Pisgat Ze'ev" in East Jerusalem (1 December); 24 in "Beit Orot" in East Jerusalem (14 December); 92 in "East Talpiot" and 32 in "Pisgat Ze'ev" (17 January 2011); 56 in "Ramot" in East Jerusalem (14 February); 14 in the East Jerusalem neighbourhood of Ras al-Amud (2 March); 200 in "Modi'in Ilit", 100 in "Ariel", 40 in "Ma'ale Adumim" and 50 in "Gush Etzion" (13 March); 942 in "Gilo" in East

Jerusalem (4 April); 204 in the East Jerusalem settlement of French Hill (13 May); 1,550 in “Har Homa” and “Pisgat Ze’ev” in East Jerusalem (19 May); 294 in “Beitar Iliit” (22 May); 930 in “Har Homa” (4 August); 1,600 in “Ramat Shlomo” in East Jerusalem, 2,000 in “Givat Hamatos” and 700 in “Pisgat Ze’ev” (11 August); 277 in “Ariel” (15 August); 100 in “Beit Aryeh” (30 August); 1,100 in “Gilo” in East Jerusalem (27 September).

21. Also, Israeli authorities demolished the Shepherd Hotel in East Jerusalem on 9 January 2011 to build a complex of 20 luxury apartments for settlers. On 8 February, the Jerusalem Planning and Building Committee approved plans for the establishment of two new settlements in Sheikh Jarrah in East Jerusalem. On 4 April, Israeli Defence Minister Ehud Barak approved master plans for the “Nofim”, “Eshkolot”, “Rotem” and “Hemdat” settlements. On 19 May, Israeli ministers inaugurated a new settlement “Ma’aleh Hazeitim” in East Jerusalem. Peace Now reported in early September that, during the 10 months since the end of the settlement moratorium (from October 2010 to July 2011), the construction of 2,598 new housing units had begun, 2,149 had been completed and at least 3,700 had been under construction. In the light of the particular acceleration of settlement expansion, on 18 February, over 120 Member States sponsored a Security Council draft resolution condemning those illegal and provocative Israeli policies and calling for their immediate and complete cessation. While 14 members of the Council voted for the resolution, it was not adopted owing to the negative vote of the United States of America.

Settler violence

22. Settler-related violence in the West Bank and East Jerusalem continued to be a source of serious concern. During the reporting period, three Palestinians, including two children, were killed by Israeli settlers, and six Israeli settlers, including three children, were killed by Palestinians. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, there were at least 333 incidents of settler violence resulting in Palestinian casualties or property damage in 2011, and at least 142 Palestinians were injured by settlers. During the same period, 28 settlers were injured by Palestinians (as of 4 October). Since the beginning of 2011, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs recorded the death of one Palestinian boy and the injury of 21 Palestinians, including 14 children, hit by vehicles driven by Israeli settlers.

23. During the olive harvest season in 2010, attacks by Israeli settlers, including arson, the uprooting of thousands of olive trees belonging to Palestinians, vandalism and theft of agricultural equipment and crops were reported on an almost daily basis. On 22 October, Israeli settlers desecrated a Palestinian cemetery on the outskirts of the West Bank village of Kfar Kadum. Incidents of arson and vandalism of mosques in the West Bank by Israeli settlers also occurred during the reporting period. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, over 7,500 trees have been uprooted, burned or vandalized by Israeli settlers since the beginning of 2011. Palestinian civilians tended not to file complaints with the Israeli authorities as those complaints had almost never led to the prosecution of perpetrators. That tendency was reinforced by the hurdles facing those Palestinians who chose to do so, including the need to reach police stations located within Israeli settlements. When complaints were filed, investigations by Israel rarely succeeded. Approximately 90 per cent of the Israeli police investigations into such offences in recent years ended in failure, as files were closed on the grounds of either a “lack of evidence” or “perpetrator unknown”. In some cases, complaints were lost and never investigated. Of 97 complaints related to the vandalization of Palestinians’ trees that occurred between 2005 and 2010, followed up by the Israeli human rights group Yesh Din, none had led to the filing of an indictment against suspects, including 72 cases closed on grounds of “perpetrator unknown”.

Movement restrictions

24. As of August 2011, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs documented a total of 522 obstacles (roadblocks, checkpoints, among others) to Palestinian movement within the West Bank, an increase of 4 per cent from the equivalent figure recorded in July 2010 (503). The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs observed almost no changes in the other components of the system of movement restrictions, including the wall, the permit and “prior coordination” regimes to access the “Seam Zone” or settlement areas, and the closure of areas for military training. Also, the average number of flying checkpoints reported per month had significantly increased from less than 350 in previous years (July 2007 to June 2010) to close to 500 over the last 12 months (June 2010 to July 2011).

Demolitions and displacements

25. The Israeli practice of demolishing Palestinian homes, basic infrastructure and sources of livelihoods continued to devastate Palestinian families and communities in East Jerusalem and Area C, 60 per cent of the West Bank controlled by Israel. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs observed a sharp increase in demolitions since the beginning of 2011: as of 4 October, 435 Palestinian-owned structures had been demolished, displacing 823 persons. The total number of displaced persons in the whole of 2010 was 594. The United Nations estimated that there were more than 3,000 demolition orders outstanding in Area C, including 18 issued to schools. Most demolitions targeted already vulnerable Bedouin and herding communities, leaving those communities facing a real danger of complete destruction.

26. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, of those living entirely in Area C, approximately 18,500 live in small, sedentary villages and 27,500 reside in Bedouin and other herding communities, many in remote areas. They live in very basic structures (e.g., tents and tin shelters), have limited access to services and have no service infrastructure (including water, sanitation and electricity infrastructure). Food insecurity among those communities is high, at 55 per cent, compared to the overall level of 22 per cent for the West Bank. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs observed worrying trends regarding the displacement of Palestinians in Area C. The single most common reason causing people to move stems from the restrictive planning regime applied by the occupying Power, which makes it virtually impossible for Palestinians to obtain permissions to build. In many cases, it is due to a combination of other factors, such as settler violence, movement restrictions, including the wall, reduced income, demolitions, or obstructed access to water, education and other services.

The wall

27. Israel continued the illegal construction of the wall in the West Bank, including in and around Occupied East Jerusalem, in defiance of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in July that, according to the most recently approved route, the wall's total length was approximately 708 km, more than twice the length of the 1949 Armistice Line (Green Line) between the West Bank and Israel. Approximately 61.8 per cent of the wall was complete, a further 8.2 per cent was under construction and 30 per cent was planned but not yet constructed. When completed, the majority of the route, approximately 85 per cent, would run inside the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, rather than along the Green Line. The total area located between the wall and the Green Line amounted to 9.4 per cent of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem and "no man's land". The inclusion of Israeli settlements, together with areas planned for their future expansion, constituted the major factor for the deviation of the wall's route from the Green Line. The area on the western, or "Israeli", side of the wall included over 85 per cent of the total settler population in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, living in 71 of the 150 settlements.

Security

28. The security situation on the ground remained a cause of serious concern. The Palestinian Authority continued to work to provide security in areas under its authority and to meet its road map commitments to combat terrorist attacks. In November 2010, a sixth battalion of Palestinian national security forces completed its training in Jordan and was deployed in the West Bank, raising the number of newly trained security personnel in the West Bank to over 3,500. Palestinians have seen law and order return to the main cities, and Israelis have faced comparatively few acts of violence from the West Bank. Despite those efforts by the Palestinian Authority, Israeli occupying forces continued to conduct routine military raids and arrests throughout the West Bank. During the reporting period (as of 4 October), 11 Palestinians were killed and more than 1,300 injured by Israeli forces in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, including during clashes between demonstrators and Israeli forces. Israeli forces conducted more than 3,000 search-and-arrest operations during the reporting period.

29. In the Gaza Strip, Israeli forces killed 104 Palestinians and injured over 500 Palestinians during the reporting period (as of 4 October) in incidents involving air strikes and the enforcement of access restrictions near the border fence. Israeli restrictions on Palestinian access to land (up to 1,500 metres from the border fence) and sea (beyond three nautical miles from the shore) continued to result in casualties and hinder the livelihoods of thousands of Palestinians in Gaza.

30. Israel reported in late August that more than 550 rockets had been fired from Gaza into southern Israel during the past 12 months. On 6 April, a mortar shell from Gaza hit a school bus in southern Israel and a 13-year-old Israeli boy later died of his wounds. In total, 2 Israeli civilians, including a child, were killed, and 23 others, including 4 children, and 3 foreign workers were injured by rocket fire from Gaza during the reporting period.

Gaza Strip

31. Israel continued to ignore its obligations under international law to provide protection to the civilian population in the Gaza Strip. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in July that among the 1.6 million population of Gaza, 38 per cent lived in poverty, 31 per cent of the workforce was unemployed, 47 per cent of youths were unemployed, 54 per cent were food insecure, and over 75 per cent were aid dependent. The economic output in 2010 was 20 per cent lower than in 2005, and 35 per cent of Gaza's farmland and 85 per cent of its fishing waters were totally or partially inaccessible owing to Israeli military measures.

32. Despite the Israeli claims of "easing restrictions", the Israeli blockade continues to severely restrict imports and exports, as well as the movement of people in and out of Gaza, and access to agricultural land and fishing waters. People in Gaza are unable to provide for their families, and the quality of infrastructure and vital services has continued to deteriorate, with a severely detrimental impact on the socio-economic conditions. As such, measures taken to ease the blockade in June 2010 have had little effect on the humanitarian situation. While imports have increased, they are still only at 45 per cent of the pre-2007 levels. Exports remain tightly restricted and are limited to some agricultural produce to Europe. Businesses cannot access their traditional markets of Israel and the West Bank. Thousands of people, some of them children, risk their lives smuggling goods through the tunnels under the border with Egypt. The tunnel industry in Gaza is a direct result of ongoing restrictions on the import of construction materials, the lack of employment opportunities and the huge reconstruction needs in Gaza. During the reporting period, at least 37 Palestinians were killed and at least 52 injured in tunnel-related incidents, including Israeli air strikes, tunnel collapses, electrocution and explosion of gas cylinders (as of 4 October).

Water

33. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in July 2011 that 50 to 80 million litres of raw and partially treated sewage from the Gaza Strip were dumped in the sea each day, and over 90 per cent of the water from the Gaza aquifer was undrinkable. The already vulnerable water and sanitation infrastructure serving the Gaza Strip population was increasingly affected by Israeli attacks in recent months.

34. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics reported that Israeli settlers in the West Bank consumed water 7 times more than Palestinians. The amount of pure water available in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is estimated to be 2.4 billion cubic metres yearly, of which Israel utilizes about 90 per cent. This leads to scarcity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, forcing Palestinians to look for alternative resources, such as water purchased from an Israeli company. In 2010, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs recorded the demolition by Israel of 27 water cisterns and other rainwater-collection systems in the West Bank, which serve marginalized rural and herder Palestinian communities where water is already scarce and where drought is an ever-present threat. The removal of such critical infrastructure places serious strains on the resilience and coping mechanisms of these communities, who will become increasingly dependent on economically unsustainable sources such as tankered water.

Women

35. The West Bank and Gaza Office of UN-Women welcomed the fact that the Palestinian Authority had set up, for the first time, a Cross-sectoral National Gender Strategy and had pledged gender responsive budgeting to ensure gender equality and women's empowerment. Yet, women were still the most underutilized resource for socio-economic development, with formal labour force participation at 15 per cent and a lack of diversification in women's employment — 61 per cent in services and 20 per cent in agriculture.

Children's right to education

36. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs observed a number of concerns related to the right to education for children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. Continuing hostilities between the Israeli military and armed Palestinian groups in the Gaza Strip have affected the students of both populations. In Gaza, seven schools were damaged as a result of Israeli air strikes. In southern Israel, two incidents of Palestinian rocket fire caused damage to school infrastructure. Classroom shortages are also the main challenge facing the education sector in the Gaza Strip. The ban on the import of building materials imposed by Israel is among the main reasons for the current shortage of classrooms. Approximately 80 per cent of government schools and 90 per cent of United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) schools run double shifts. As a result, students often have to be accommodated in schools far from where they live, and classroom time has been reduced by almost one third. Even with double shifting, schools are overcrowded, with an average of 39 pupils in a class. Those difficulties have had a severe negative impact on learning outcomes. To address the classroom shortages for the next five years, it is estimated that 130 new government-run schools and 100 new UNRWA schools are needed.

37. Israeli military raids on school premises in the West Bank resulted in children being exposed to tear gas inhalation, frightened or injured by sound bombs, or arrested within their schools. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in July that part of a school had been demolished in the Area C village of Kherbet Al Dkeika in Hebron this year, and that six schools in East Jerusalem and 18 in Area C were served demolition orders. In East Jerusalem, almost half of the classrooms attended by Palestinian students were considered to be "non-standard" in 2010. To partially address these difficulties, double shifting is common, and schools are often forced to hold classes in rented houses that do not meet basic educational and health standards. It is almost impossible for alternative schools to obtain Israeli-issued building permits, and sometimes they are forced to build without a permit, running the risk of receiving demolition orders and heavy fines.

Prisoners

38. The Palestine Liberation Organization Negotiations Affairs Department said in January 2011 that Israel held roughly 6,000 Palestinian and Arab political prisoners in its prisons and detention centres, including 225 children and 39 women. That also included 315 political prisoners that it had held since before the conclusion of the Oslo accords in 1993. On 12 February 2011, the Palestinian Authority Minister of Prisoners Affairs, Issa Qaraqi, said that Palestinian children in Israeli prisons were “subjected to all forms of torture” and that in 2010 Israel had imprisoned 1,000 children and imposed house arrests and large fines on many minors. In a report published on 13 April, the Palestinian Authority Ministry for Prisoners Affairs said that Israel had arrested a total of 750,000 Palestinians since the start of the occupation in 1967. On 4 August, at the outset of the month of Ramadan, Israel released 200 Palestinian security prisoners that were close to completing their sentences.

Palestinian State-building programme

39. Despite the very difficult circumstances under occupation, the Palestinian Authority steadily advanced its State-building programme with strong support from the international community. In a report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting in April 2011, the World Bank reported that the Palestinian Authority had continued to strengthen its institutions, delivering public services and promoting reforms. It added that the quality of its public financial management had further improved. Education and health in the West Bank and Gaza were on the rise, comparing favourably to the performance of countries in the region as well as globally. Real economic growth in the West Bank and Gaza was estimated to have reached 9.3 per cent in 2010, exceeding the Palestinian Authority’s budget projection of 8 per cent. Also in a report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO) concluded that in six areas where the United Nations was most engaged, the Palestinian Authority’s governmental functions were now sufficient for a functioning government of a State.

40. Meeting in Brussels on 13 April, the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee recommended that the Palestinian Authority seek observer status in the World Trade Organization, and called on the Palestinian Authority to develop long-term strategies and advance trade-related institution-building. Also on 13 April, the High Representative of the European Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy, Catherine Ashton announced the signing of a deal that would open West Bank and Gaza markets to Europe, giving all agricultural products, processed agricultural products and fish and fishery products originating in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip duty free access to the European Union market.

41. In a report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting in September 2011, the World Bank stated that the onset of an acute fiscal crisis, accompanied by declining economic growth, might undermine the promise of those institution-building achievements. The economic growth had been unsustainable, driven primarily by donor aid rather than a rebounding private sector, which remained stifled by Israeli restrictions on access to natural resources and markets. Under those conditions, lower-than-expected aid flows in the first half of 2011 had had an immediate impact on the Palestinian economy. The shortfall in external financial support in the first half of 2011 had also contributed to the current fiscal crisis facing the Palestinian Authority. The United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, also in a report to the September Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting, stated that the institutional achievements of the Palestinian State-building agenda were fundamentally constrained in realizing their full potential by the lack of an enabling political environment, and that the constraints on the existence and successful functioning of the institutions of a potential State of Palestine arose primarily from the persistence of occupation, the unresolved issues in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and the Palestinian divide.

Reconciliation

42. On 27 April 2011, Fatah, Hamas and other Palestinian factions concluded a reconciliation agreement in Cairo under Egyptian auspices, and a signing ceremony was held on 4 May in Cairo. The agreement provides for the establishment of a transitional Government of technocrats that would prepare for parliamentary and presidential elections in a year and work for the reconstruction of the Gaza Strip. Implementation of the accord, however, has been stalled amid disputes over the composition and programme of a new government.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

43. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide extensive core services and emergency assistance to the Palestine refugees in its five fields of operations. The Israeli Government undertook measures to ease the movement of goods into and out of the Gaza Strip, but those measures still fell well short of the level required to meet the needs of the Palestinian civilian population and reconstruction requirements, or to ensure the revival of the economy. UNRWA continues to experience a grave financial crisis which threatens its ability to sustain or improve its services, to continue emergency assistance programmes, and to complete essential projects, such as the reconstruction of the Nahr El Bared Camp in Lebanon. The Committee reiterates its appreciation for the dedication of UNRWA to its mission and calls upon all donors to increase contributions to ensure the well-being of the population of 4.8 million registered refugees under the mandate of the Agency.

United Nations Development Programme/Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs

44. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to respond to the development needs in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The UNDP/Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, in support of the Palestinian Authority's National Development Plan 2011-2013, developed its strategy, entitled "Development for Freedom: Empowered Lives, a Resilient Nation 2011-2013", outlining the way the United Nations Development Programme/Programme intended to support Palestinians' aspiration for Statehood. The three-year plan will focus on democratic governance and the rule of law, economic empowerment of the most vulnerable and private sector investment, environment and management of natural resources, and public and social infrastructure for a viable State. Particular focus is on three geographic areas where the needs are the greatest owing to the lack of Palestinian Authority access — the Gaza Strip, East Jerusalem and Area C.

45. The Committee also remained appreciative of the important work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the consolidated appeal for 2011 focused on delivering humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 65/13

46. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others.

1. Action taken in the Security Council

47. During the reporting period, the Security Council has continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. It held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled "The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question".

48. During the open debates at the Council meetings held on 19 January, 21 April, and 26 July 2011, the Chair of the Committee delivered statements (see S/PV.6470, S/PV.6520, S/PV.6590).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

49. On 14 January and 19 August 2011, the Bureau of the Committee issued statements on Israel's illegal settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 65/13 and 65/14

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

50. At its periodic meetings at Headquarters in New York, the Committee, among other things, heard presentations by representatives of UNRWA and the Association of International Development Agencies on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

2. Programme of international meetings and conferences

51. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

52. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee, in 2011:

(a) The United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, United Nations Office at Vienna, 7 and 8 March;

(b) United Nations Latin American and Caribbean Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Montevideo, 29 and 30 March;

(c) United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Montevideo, 31 March;

(d) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Helsinki, 28 and 29 April;

(e) United Nations International Meeting in Support of the Israeli-Palestinian Peace Process, Brussels, 28 and 29 June.

53. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. The reports of the meetings were issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and were made available through the "Question of Palestine" website maintained by the Division.

54. In Vienna, on the margins of the United Nations International Meeting, the Committee delegation held consultations with representatives of the Austrian Ministry for European and International Affairs, the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean. It also met with the Director-General of the United Nations Office at Vienna and the Deputy United Nations Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process.

55. During its stay in Montevideo, in connection with the United Nations Latin American and Caribbean Meeting, the delegation of the Committee was received by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Uruguay, Luis Almagro. The delegation also met with a group of parliamentarians led by the Chairpersons of the International Affairs Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives. On its way back from Montevideo to New York, the delegation was received in Buenos Aires by the Deputy Foreign Minister of Argentina, Alberto D'Alotto.

56. In Helsinki, on the sidelines of the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, the Committee delegation met with the Secretary-General and Chief of the Cabinet of the President of Finland, Päivi Kairamo-Hella, as well as with a number of Finnish parliamentarians and representatives of leading civil society organizations involved in conflict resolution efforts.

57. In Brussels, in the margin of the United Nations International Meeting, the Committee delegation met with the Deputy Director-General for Multilateral Affairs and Globalization of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Belgium, Michel Goffin; the Chairman of the European Parliament Delegation for Relations with the Palestinian Legislative Council, Maghreb and Mashreq countries, Proinsias de Rossa, and other members of the European Parliament and their advisers at the European Parliament; the President of the European Economic and Social Committees, Staffan Nilsson; the Chief Diplomatic Adviser to the President of the European Parliament, Alexander Stutzmann; and the Head of the Middle East Division at the European External Action Service, Ilkka Uusitalo.

3. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

58. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the European Union, the League of Arab States, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices.

4. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

59. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2010. The meetings provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to improve coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations and encouraged them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at realizing a two-State solution.

60. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations. At the United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, held in Montevideo in March, the deliberations focused on the ways of engaging the civil society in Latin America and the Caribbean for peace and reconciliation between the Israelis and the Palestinians. While in Brussels, in connection with the United Nations International Meeting in Support of the Israeli-Palestinian Peace Process, the Committee delegation held consultations with 11 representatives of civil society organizations from Europe, the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel.

61. During the reporting period, seven civil society organizations were accredited to the Committee.

62. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a page on civil society (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>) on the "Question of Palestine" website as a tool for the exchange of information and networking and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee.

63. The Division maintained a Facebook page for information about developments related to the question of Palestine and the work of the Committee. The page has attracted some 700 additional "fans" during the reporting period, bringing the total to over 1,390. In addition, the Division continued to publish the periodic online bulletin NGO Action News, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

64. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. The international events held during 2011 were addressed by parliamentarians from Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, Chile, Israel, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as well as members of the European Parliament.

5. Research, monitoring and publications

65. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through the Internet:

(a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;

(b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;

(c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;

(d) Special bulletins and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;

(f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

6. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

66. Pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates, the Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the “Question of Palestine” website, which is located on the United Nations home page under “Peace and Security”. That included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL (<http://unispal.un.org>) on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old United Nations system and related documents. Documents in French were given French markers to facilitate the work of French-speaking researchers. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of UNISPAL, including by incorporating additional multimedia content and RSS and Twitter feeds intended to alert users about newly posted materials. The Division has continued to improve the redesigned “Question of Palestine” portal.

7. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

67. In accordance with the request of the General Assembly, the training programme conducted by the Division has been enhanced and involved four staff members of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Palestinian Authority. Two Palestinian Authority staff members participated in the New York training programme during the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, where they familiarized themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and conducted research on specific topics. Two additional Palestinian Authority staff members participated in a three-week training programme at the United Nations Office at Geneva during the Trade and Development Board session from 14 to 30 September 2011, where they familiarized themselves with the work of UNCTAD, including on trade facilitation and foreign direct investment. They also attended briefings on the work of other United Nations entities, including the Human Rights Council, the World Health Organization and the World Trade Organization.

8. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

68. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed at Headquarters in New York, the United Nations Office at Geneva and the United Nations Office at Vienna on 29 November 2010. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a photo exhibit entitled “Summer Games in Gaza” was presented by UNRWA under the auspices of the Committee, in cooperation with the Department of Public Information. The Committee also sponsored a cultural performance “The Gaza Monologues” by the Ashtar Theatre — Ramallah. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations information centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

69. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 65/15, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine. In doing so, it strove to enhance dialogue and understanding, while sensitizing public opinion to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process.

70. During the reporting period, the Department used all of its information outlets and products to highlight the broadest possible range of developments and issues related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process. The online United Nations News Centre provided extensive coverage of the question of Palestine and the United Nations. The News Centre's English-language version alone published some 300 stories during the reporting period. The Department also produced a total of 144 press releases on the question of Palestine in English and French, including summaries of formal meetings and press conferences, as well as statements and press releases by the Secretary-General and other United Nations officials.

71. UN Radio, also available in all official languages of the United Nations, as well as in Swahili and Portuguese, provided regular coverage of issues and events connected to the question of Palestine. It paid particularly close attention to the plight of Palestinians living in the Gaza Strip and the work done on the ground by UNRWA and other United Nations entities. Coverage was also provided by UNTV through its live broadcasts and web streaming, as well as dissemination via the UNifeed satellite distribution system and UNTV's Channel 150 on Time Warner cable network. A feature story on female entrepreneurs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was distributed to hundreds of broadcasters worldwide as part of both UNTV's news magazine programme, 21st Century, and the UN in Action series. UNTV also helped to distribute video content, including documentaries, produced by UNRWA. The Department also provided live webcast for over 56 hours of major discussions concerning the question of Palestine, including meetings in the Security Council and the General Assembly.

72. The Department arranged six briefings for 230 college and graduate-level students and responded to over 370 public inquiries on peace in the Middle East. The question of Palestine also continued to be a regular feature on the United Nations guided tour. Visitors were able to view the permanent exhibit on the topic, and tour guides and the audio tour recording provided additional information on the subject. The Department's Graphic Design Unit has worked on updating the permanent exhibit on Palestine, which is expected to be launched before the end of the year.

73. The Department's annual training programme for Palestinian media practitioners took place at United Nations Headquarters from 8 November to 10 December 2010. Nine mid-level Palestinian journalists working mainly in print media attended the programme, which also included visits to Geneva and Washington, D.C. The primary focus of the five-week session was strengthening the participants' capacity as print media professionals, including training with Internet-based media in the Arabic language.

74. The Department, in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Hungary, organized the 2011 International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East in Budapest on 12 and 13 July. The Seminar, which brought together over 100 former and present policymakers from Israel and the Palestinian Authority, international media personalities, as well as members of academia and civil society, focused on the theme “Prospects for Peace: Understanding Current Challenges and Overcoming Obstacles”. It took account of the dramatic changes in the political landscape in the Middle East and North Africa, including the increasing role of new media such as Twitter and Facebook in fostering political change. The Seminar was notable for its focus on the role of culture and the media in promoting understanding between Israelis and Palestinians. Eminent writers, cultural activists, musicians and political bloggers were among the panellists.

75. The network of United Nations information centres and services worldwide continued to disseminate information on the question of Palestine. The information centres promoted the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People and widely disseminated the message of the Secretary-General in official and non-official languages, including German, Kirundi, Portuguese and Turkish. Commemorative events, such as seminars, exhibits and film screenings, were organized in Dar es Salaam, Moscow, Manama and Pretoria.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

76. The reporting period was characterized by a continued deadlock in the peace process that began 20 years ago with the Madrid Peace Conference. It was accompanied by further stagnation on the ground, while the broader region underwent dramatic and rapid changes. International efforts to create conditions to bring the parties back to the negotiating table have not been successful owing to Israel's refusal to commit to the internationally supported terms of reference of the Middle East peace process for the achievement of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 borders in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions. The illegal Israeli settlement campaign accelerated, particularly in occupied East Jerusalem. Meanwhile, the two-year programme of the Palestinian Authority laid the institutional foundations of a functional State. The Palestinian leadership embarked on a successful worldwide diplomatic campaign, with a growing number of countries recognizing the Palestinian State, upgrading its diplomatic representation, and signalling their support for its bid to seek United Nations membership.

77. The Committee remains frustrated by the current stalemate in the peace process. The agreed upon target date of September 2011 for the conclusion of a peace settlement passed without a breakthrough. The Committee emphasizes that the status quo is unsustainable. Maintaining negotiations without clear parameters and timeline provides only cover for expanding settlements and consolidating the occupation. The Committee calls for a resumption of credible negotiations towards the two-State solution on the basis of relevant Security Council resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, the road map, and the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee is implacably opposed to all settlement activities by Israel, which are inimical to the peace process and contravene international law, Security Council and General Assembly resolutions and the road map. It was profoundly disappointed by the failure of the Security Council to uphold its obligations under the Charter of the United Nations in that regard. The continued engagement of the international community remains critical. The Committee welcomes the principles articulated by President Obama on 19 May 2011, and calls on the Quartet to translate them into comprehensive final status parameters so that Israeli-Palestinian negotiations can resume on that basis.

78. The Committee is encouraged by the success of the Palestinian State-building and reform programme, which it has consistently supported, and by the broadening international recognition of the State of Palestine. The Committee welcomes the intra-Palestinian agreement signed in Cairo as a step towards Palestinian unity and calls for its fulfilment. Further progress towards the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinians requires a dismantlement of the Israeli occupation and its associated regime of settlements, checkpoints, the separation wall, demolitions, land confiscations and expulsions, which have been alarmingly intensifying, particularly in East Jerusalem and in Area C. The financial situation of the Palestinian Authority should be stabilized to enable it to sustain its State-building momentum. The Committee calls on donors to provide urgent and generous support, and looks forward to the early convening of a donors conference. The Committee condemns any illegal and provocative seizure by Israel of the Palestinian Authority's revenues.

79. The Committee remains deeply concerned by the situation on the ground and the systematic violations of humanitarian and human rights law, which particularly affect the most vulnerable groups of Palestinian civilians — women, children and prisoners. The Committee is alarmed by the escalation of violence in and around Gaza, which threatens to end the relative calm that has prevailed in recent months. It reiterates its call for all attacks against all civilians to stop immediately and unconditionally, including rocket fire from Gaza and air strikes on populated areas in Gaza, settler violence and the shootings of unarmed protesters. The Gaza blockade should be immediately lifted by Israel, the occupying Power, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). The Security Council and the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention should act urgently and decisively to guarantee the protection of civilians in all situations and ensure accountability for violations of international law.

80. The Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights will continue through their mandated activities to generate heightened international awareness of the current challenges for a comprehensive, just and lasting solution of the question of Palestine. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support of the international community for its programme objectives, for instance, in terms of both participation at the meetings convened and the use of printed and electronic information materials provided by the Division; (b) the continued involvement of parliamentarians and civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) the increased international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine as indicated by the growing number of documents and relevant information materials on the issue accessed by users worldwide on the websites maintained by the Division. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority carried out by the Division has proved its usefulness as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee strongly recommends that that important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, further enhanced.

81. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2012, implemented by the Division, on widening international support for the achievement of inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty, and to return to their homes and property. The programme will also focus on strengthening international support for the permanent status negotiations and contributing to the creation of a favourable international atmosphere for their conduct in good faith. The Committee intends to mobilize increased international scrutiny of the developments on the ground, in particular the halt of all settlement activities in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, and an end to all other illegal Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It will support global campaigns to challenge Israeli impunity and promote the concept of Israeli accountability for its actions towards the Palestinian people.

82. The Committee will continue to pay special attention to highlighting the plight of the most disadvantaged Palestinians, such as the Palestine refugees, the Palestinians living in Gaza and Palestinian political prisoners. Taking into account the urgency of resolving the situation of thousands of Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails and detention facilities, and as a follow-up to its 2010 International Meeting on that issue, the Committee will hold an international meeting at the United Nations Office at Geneva on that topic. Also, considering the central role of youth as the agents of change through non-violent, peaceful means, as recent events in the Arab world have shown, and the need for an increased involvement of the Palestinian youth in the shaping of their future State, the Committee will convene a meeting on the role of youth in the resolution of the question of Palestine, with the participation of youth political and community leaders and diplomats.

83. The Committee will continue to mobilize support for the Palestinian institution-building and all other efforts to facilitate the viability of the Palestinian State. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution of all permanent status issues. The Committee wishes to contribute to efforts towards ending incitement on both sides, provide a venue to have the narratives heard and reconciled and, with the help of civil society, to promote peace education. It will pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and their organizations in this process. The Committee also wishes to work towards Palestinian reconciliation and will strive to involve in its events Palestinians from different ends of the political spectrum.

84. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people and welcomes the growing calls from civil society groups for peaceful protests against the status quo. It lauds the courageous advocacy actions of countless activists, including eminent personalities and parliamentarians, who participate in demonstrations against the wall, try to break the siege of Gaza and keep their home constituencies informed about the harsh realities of life under occupation. The Committee salutes the achievements of civil society which give hope to the Palestinian people. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine. It will continue to assess its programme of cooperation with civil society and consult them on ways to enhance their contribution. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening cooperation with civil society.

85. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of the two-State solution and ensure respect for international law, in accordance with their international obligations.

86. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support, the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities. The Division should pay special attention to continued development of the “Question of Palestine” portal and use of new technologies and media, including web-based social information networks, such as Facebook and Twitter. The Division should also continue to develop the UNISPAL document collection by, among other things, continuing to digitize and upload historic documents and to develop user-friendly search features such as the French titles project. The Division should further develop the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority paying special attention to the programme’s gender balance, and organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

87. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. The Committee requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility, as warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

88. The Committee, at its meeting held on 30 September 2011, took note of the application of Palestine for admission to membership in the United Nations submitted by President Mahmoud Abbas on 23 September 2011 to the Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon. The Committee calls upon the Security Council and the General Assembly to favourably consider Palestine’s application for United Nations membership. The Committee also supports the appeal made by President Abbas before the General Assembly to the States that have not yet recognized the State of Palestine to do so.

89. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

[8 October 2012]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 66/14 of 30 November 2011.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2011 to 6 October 2012.

(Signed) Abdou Salam Diallo
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

2. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly¹ were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,² the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973), as well as on the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel, the occupying Power, from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and the Assembly has each year renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

3. The Committee has consistently supported the objective of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's Road Map and called upon the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee has continued to work towards creating conditions for the successful conduct of the negotiations on a permanent settlement allowing the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights. The Committee has also promoted support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

4. The reporting period was characterized by the deadlocked political process and the deteriorating socioeconomic situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. There has been no breakthrough in efforts towards resuming direct Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, owing to Israel's consistent refusal to freeze its settlement activity and adhere to the long-standing terms of reference of the peace process. In the absence of credible negotiations, the Palestinian leadership continued its diplomatic initiatives to gain international recognition of Palestine as a State within the 1967 borders on the basis of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions. While Palestine's request for admission as a United Nations Member State, submitted on 23 September 2011, has been pending in the Security Council, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) admitted Palestine as a member State on 31 October 2011.

² Since the thirty-first session, the Committee has submitted annual reports to the General Assembly; all such reports have been issued as supplement No. 35 of the sessional documentation of the Assembly.

5. The situation in the Gaza Strip continued to be a source of serious concern, with high rates of poverty and unemployment. The continued blockade imposed by Israel, the occupying Power, forced 1.6 million Palestinians in Gaza, half of them children and two thirds of them refugees, to continue suffering from an acute shortage of basic goods and essential services. Reconstruction and rehabilitation continued to be hampered by the blockade. Israel continued to conduct air strikes and other military operations in and around Gaza, resulting in Palestinian casualties, including many civilians. Rocket and mortar fire by armed Palestinian groups into southern Israel also continued, endangering the lives of the Israeli population.

6. Israeli military raids and incursions in West Bank population centres continued, involving the killing and injuring of Palestinians, including children. At least 2,500 Palestinians, including women and children, were arrested during those operations. Many unarmed civilians were subjected to the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces during demonstrations against the occupation, resulting in many injuries. Israel continued to expand its illegal settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, attempted to retroactively “legalize” so-called outposts, created new settlements and approved thousands of new settlement units. The construction of the separation wall continued in defiance of the International Court of Justice advisory opinion (2004), resulting in further confiscation of Palestinian land and demolition of properties, further harming socioeconomic conditions and causing the displacement of more Palestinian families. The situation in Occupied East Jerusalem remained alarming, with continued land confiscations, house demolitions and evictions of Palestinian residents, and the transfer of more Israeli settlers into the City.

7. The Palestinian Authority steadily advanced its State-building programme on the ground, but it was challenged by a serious budget deficit as well as by restrictions and obstacles imposed by Israel on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which continued to prevent the normal movement of persons and goods, economic activity and sustained growth. In addition, a decrease in foreign aid and the failure of donor countries to fulfil their financial pledges contributed to the dire situation. As for Palestinian reconciliation, Fatah and Hamas reached an agreement in February 2012 to form a transitional Government as part of the process launched by their May 2011 agreement, but its implementation has been pending.

8. The activities of the Committee and its Bureau in the reporting period focused on the need for respect for the relevant United Nations resolutions and the urgency of resuming negotiations between the parties in the interest of salvaging the two-State solution and advancing the realization of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace. The Committee monitored the situation on the ground and the political developments, implemented its programme of international meetings and conferences, held consultations with representatives of Governments, national parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations, as well as civil society, and reached out to its partners worldwide using new communications media. The Committee reiterated its position of principle that a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could be achieved only through ending the occupation that began in 1967, establishing a Palestinian State on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, and a just and agreed solution to the Palestine refugees issue on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

9. The economic cost of the continued Israeli occupation of the Palestinian Territory was discussed at the annual seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people organized by the Committee in Cairo in February 2012. The seminar was followed in April by an international meeting in Geneva that focused on the question of Palestinian political prisoners held by Israel. The theme of another international meeting held in Paris in May addressed the role of youth and women in the peaceful resolution of the question of Palestine. It was followed in July by a regional meeting for Asia and the Pacific, at which the role of countries in the region in addressing the obstacles to the two-State solution was discussed.

Mandate of the Committee

10. On 30 November 2011, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (see resolution 66/14), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (see resolution 66/15) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (see resolution 66/16). On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 66/17, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

11. During the reporting period, Ecuador joined the Committee as a new member and Saudi Arabia as an observer.

12. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

13. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the African Union, the League of Arab States, the Organization of Islamic Cooperation and Palestine.

14. At its 339th meeting, on 13 February 2012, the Committee re-elected Abdou Salam Diallo (Senegal) as Chair, Pedro Núñez Mosquera (Cuba) and Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) as Vice-Chairs. Christopher Grima (Malta) was elected Rapporteur.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

15. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Political developments

16. Despite a series of quiet and informal meetings between the parties, there has been no breakthrough in efforts towards resuming Israeli-Palestinian dialogue and negotiations, owing to Israel's consistent refusal to freeze its illegal settlement activities, which continued to deepen mistrust and raise tensions and to jeopardize the two-State solution. On the contrary, Israel has continued to create new settlements, attempted to retroactively "legalize" so-called outposts, and announced plans for the construction of thousands of new settlement units during the reporting period.

17. Palestine's application for admission to United Nations membership, submitted by Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas on 23 September 2011, remains pending in the Security Council, since its Committee on the Admission of New Members was unable to make a unanimous recommendation to the Council, as reflected in its report of 11 November 2011. In his statement to the General Assembly on 27 September 2012, President Abbas said that Palestine had begun intensive consultations with various Member States and regional organizations aimed at having the Assembly adopt a resolution considering Palestine a non-Member State of the United Nations.

18. Meanwhile, the Palestinian leadership continued efforts to gain international recognition of Palestine as a State within the 1967 borders. On 31 October 2011, UNESCO admitted Palestine as a member State of the agency. The Israeli Government reacted to that development with punitive measures, including temporarily freezing the transfer of value-added tax and customs revenues that it collects on behalf of the Palestinian Authority pursuant to the Paris Protocol, and by announcing the accelerated construction of some 2,000 settlement units. On 29 June 2012, the UNESCO World Heritage Committee voted to add Bethlehem's Church of the Nativity and its pilgrimage route to the Heritage List.

19. During the reporting period, Iceland and Thailand announced that they recognized the State of Palestine, while several other States upgraded the status of the Palestinian delegation in their countries to that of an embassy or similar entity. According to the Negotiations Affairs Department of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to date some 130 States Members of the United Nations have recognized the State of Palestine.

Settlements

20. During the reporting period, Israel, the occupying Power, continued and intensified its illegal settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics reported in August 2012 that, in 2011, the number of settlers in the 144 settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, had been 536,932 (337,285 in the West Bank and 199,647 in East Jerusalem), reflecting an increase of almost 13,000 compared to 2010.

21. During the reporting period, the following plans were announced or approved by Israel: 119 housing units in the "Shilo" settlement (27 November 2011); 40 homes and a farm near "Efrat" (12 December); tenders for 348 units in "Beitar Illit" and 180 in "Givat Ze'ev" (18 December); the construction of 500 new units in “Shilo” and the retroactive “legalization” of more than 200 units in “Shilo” and “Shvut Rachel” built without permits (22 February 2012); tenders for 180 units in “Givat Ze’ev” and 69 in “Katzrin” in the occupied Golan (4 April); 851 new units in several West Bank settlements (6 June); and 750 new housing units in “Ma’ale Adumim” (12 August).

22. In addition, on 31 December 2011, the Government of Israel announced that it would recognize the “Ramat Gilad” outpost established on private land of Palestinians from Kafr village, which would become part of the “Karnei Shomron” settlement. On 24 April 2012, the Government of Israel announced that it had granted legal status to three settlement outposts, “Bruchin”, “Sansana” and “Rechelim”. On 17 July, it was reported that the Israeli Defence Ministry had “legalized” the “Givat Salit” outpost by making it part of the nearby “Mehola” settlement.

23. In Occupied East Jerusalem, the following plans were announced or approved: construction of a new visitors’ centre at the “City of David National Park” in Silwan (11 February); 11 new apartments in “Pisgat Ze’ev” (8 October); approximately 2,600 housing units for a new settlement “Givat Hamatos” (11 October); tenders for 749 housing units in “Har Homa” and 65 in “Pisgat Ze’ev” (15 November); construction of a new Jewish enclave to be named “Maale David” in the heart of the Palestinian neighbourhood of Ras al-Amoud (7 December); tenders for 500 units in “Har Homa” (18 December); construction of 130 new settler units in East Jerusalem (28 December); three new tenders for 300 settlement housing units in Jerusalem (3 January 2012); 277 housing units in “Efrat” as part of a series of reprisals for Palestine’s admission to UNESCO (11 January); the establishment of a new settlement “Kidmat Zion”, with about 200 units on a plot of land purchased by United States of America millionaire Irving Moskowitz (2 April); tenders for 827 homes in “Har Homa” (4 April); construction of nine hotels in “Givat Hamatos” (1 May); 1,242 units in “Gilo” (10 May) and 180 units in “Armon HaNetziv” (26 June); tenders for 130 housing units in “Har Homa” and 41 in “Pisgat Ze’ev” (30 June); establishment of a military college on the Mount of Olives (2 July); and tenders for 130 housing units in “Har Homa” (16 August).

Settler violence

24. Settler-related violence in the West Bank and East Jerusalem continued to be a source of serious concern. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, at least 154 Palestinians were injured by Israeli settlers during the reporting period (as at 2 October). At least 39 Israeli settlers were injured by Palestinians during the same period. In 2012 (as at September), 13 Palestinians, including 8 children, have been injured in hit and run incidents involving Israeli settler vehicles. Inadequate law enforcement by Israel and lack of accountability continued to be the key factors underpinning the phenomenon of settler violence and deliberate provocations against the Palestinian civilian population, including acts against Palestinian children, families and farmers, homes, agricultural lands and orchards and desecration of Muslim and Christian holy sites.

Jerusalem

25. The Association for Civil Rights in Israel reported in May 2012 that 360,882 Palestinians comprised 38 per cent of the total population of the City of Jerusalem.

Since 1967, the residency status of 14,084 Palestinians had been revoked and rescinded by Israel, and those former residents were no longer permitted to live in the City. Some 78 per cent of Palestinians living in East Jerusalem lived below the poverty line. There was a chronic shortage of some 1,000 classrooms in East Jerusalem's education system. Palestinians were permitted to build on only 17 per cent of the area of East Jerusalem, most of which had already been totally exhausted by previous construction. A third of Palestinian land in East Jerusalem had been expropriated since 1967, and thousands of apartments for Israeli settlers had been built on it. Israel's building of the separation wall, the closing of passage points and the implementation of a strict "entry permit" regime had effectively cut off East Jerusalem from the West Bank, exacerbating the economic and social condition of its residents. Restrictions on entry from the West Bank, imposed both on patients and medical staff, had also led to a severe financial crisis in East Jerusalem hospitals, which provide the bulk of medical services for the entire West Bank. For 11 years now, Israel has also renewed the closure order of Palestinian institutions in East Jerusalem, including the Orient House and the Chamber of Commerce, in contradiction to Israel's road map obligations.

Movement restrictions

26. In July 2012, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs recorded 59 permanently staffed checkpoints, 34 barrier checkpoints, 26 partially staffed checkpoints, 455 unstaffed obstacles, and 343 flying checkpoints. As of the end of June 2012, 60 Palestinian communities, with a combined population of about 190,000, were still compelled to use detours that were two to five times longer than the direct route to the closest city. As a result, their access to livelihoods and basic services, including health, education and water supply, continued to be impaired. Some 94 per cent of the Jordan Valley and Dead Sea area remained off-limits for Palestinian use owing to their designation as closed military areas and nature reserves, or their allocation to Israeli settlements.

27. Access to private agricultural land in the vicinity of Israeli settlements has remained significantly constrained owing to the fencing off of those areas or to settler violence. Palestinian farmers who own land close to 55 Israeli settlements have access only through "prior" coordination with the Israeli army, which has continued to undermine the agricultural livelihoods of farmers from some 90 Palestinian communities. Palestinian movement within the Israeli-controlled section of Hebron City remained subject to severe restrictions. The area is segregated from the rest of the city by more than 120 closure obstacles and Palestinian movement by car, and in some cases, by foot, continued to be banned along certain streets. As a result, those Palestinians still living in the area continue to suffer from poor access to basic services, including education.

28. Israel continued the illegal construction of the wall in the Occupied West Bank, including in and around Occupied East Jerusalem, in defiance of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in July 2012 that the wall's total length was approximately 708 km, more than twice the length of the 1949 Armistice Line (Green Line) between the West Bank and Israel. Approximately 62.1 per cent of the wall has been completed, a further 8 per cent is under construction, and 29.9 per cent is planned but not yet constructed. When completed, some 85 per cent of the route would run inside the West Bank, rather than along the Green Line, isolating some 9.4 per cent of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has, to date, collected over 26,000 claims for material damage caused by the construction of the wall.

29. Israeli restrictions also continued to isolate East Jerusalem and obstruct the access of the majority of the Palestinian population to the City and its holy sites, medical, education and social services, and markets. Palestinians with West Bank identification cards who are granted special permits can only enter East Jerusalem through 4 of the 14 wall checkpoints around the City. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, around 7,500 Palestinians who reside in areas between the Green Line and the wall (Seam Zone), excluding East Jerusalem, require special permits to continue living in their own homes. Another 23,000 will be isolated if the wall is completed as planned.

Demolitions and displacements

30. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Israel carried out the demolition of at least 589 Palestinian-owned structures, 184 of which were residences, during the reporting period (as at 2 October), displacing at least 879 people, including many children. Among structures demolished in Area C (under Israeli control with no official Palestinian Authority presence) in 2012 were 44 structures funded by international donors. In 2011, over 110 such structures were demolished by Israel. Since the beginning of 2011, 44 per cent of the demolished assistance structures were basic residential shelters (e.g. tents) provided to vulnerable families, while the majority of the other structures were intended to support livelihoods or improve access to basic services.

31. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, approximately 18 per cent of the West Bank has been designated by Israel, the occupying Power, as a closed military zone for training or a “firing zone”. Approximately 5,000 Palestinians reside in those zones, in mostly Bedouin or herding communities, many of which existed prior to the closing of the areas. Two schools and one kindergarten located in firing zones currently have demolition orders against them. Some 45 per cent of demolitions of Palestinian-owned structures in Area C since 2010 have occurred in firing zones, displacing over 820 Palestinian civilians.

Security

32. Israeli occupying forces continued to conduct routine military raids and arrests throughout the West Bank. During the reporting period (as at 2 October), 5 Palestinians were killed and over 2,400 injured by Israeli forces in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, including during clashes with demonstrators. By August, Israeli forces arrested at least 2,500 Palestinians in some 3,500 search-and-arrest operations during the reporting period.

33. In the Gaza Strip, Israeli forces killed at least 77 Palestinians and injured more than 300 during the reporting period (as at 2 October) in incidents involving air strikes and the enforcement of access restrictions near the border fence. Israeli restrictions on Palestinian access to land (up to 1,500 metres from the border fence) and sea (beyond three nautical miles from the shore) continued to result in casualties and hinder the livelihoods of thousands of Palestinians in Gaza. The Israeli authorities reported in September 2012 that more than 455 rockets fired from Gaza had hit Israel since the beginning of the year. In total, one Israeli soldier and one civilian were killed and 21 other Israelis injured by Palestinian fire from Gaza during the reporting period.

Gaza Strip

34. According to a report released by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in August 2012, many Palestinians in the Gaza Strip are food insecure, owing primarily to a lack of economic means, rather than to a shortage of food: 44 per cent of the households are food insecure and 16 per cent are vulnerable to food insecurity, even when taking into account United Nations food distributions to almost 1.1 million persons. On average, households spend close to 50 per cent of their cash on food; 80 per cent of households receive some form of assistance, and 39 per cent of persons live below the poverty line. As long as the closure continues, levels of food insecurity will remain high. Restrictions on access to agricultural land and the fishing limit of three miles from the coast remain challenges. Palestinians in Gaza have no access, or gain access only with difficulty, to 17 per cent of the land, including 35 per cent of the agricultural land, because it is located in the “buffer zone” or in the high-risk, access-restricted area near the border fence with Israel. More than 3,000 fishermen do not have access to 85 per cent of the maritime areas agreed in the 1995 Oslo Accords. As a result, the fish catch has decreased dramatically over the years of closure. Overall, land and sea restrictions affect the livelihoods of at least 178,000 people, or 12 per cent of the population of Gaza, resulting in annual estimated losses of US$ 76.7 million from agricultural production and fishing. Reports indicate that if the three-mile limit on fishing were to be lifted, the fishing industry would likely grow in size. Further, in Gaza, the effect of the chronic multi-year electricity deficit has been significant, with prolonged power outages disrupting the delivery of basic services and undermining already vulnerable livelihoods and living conditions.

Water

35. According to a report issued by the Palestinian Water Authority in September 2012, Israel currently exploits 90 per cent of the shared water resources in the West Bank for exclusive Israeli use, including for use in settlements, and allocates less than 10 per cent for Palestinian use. Palestinian water consumption in the West Bank is limited to an average of just 70 litres per capita per day, below the “absolute minimum” of 100 litres per day recommended by the World Health Organization, and far below 300 litres per day in Israel.

36. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in March 2012 that there were 56 water springs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in the vicinity of Israeli settlements that had become the target of provocative settler actions, 30 of which had been taken over completely by settlers, while the other 26 were at risk of settler takeover. At least 84 per cent of the springs affected by settler activities were located on land recognized by Israel as privately owned by Palestinians. In three quarters of the springs taken over, Palestinians had been deterred from accessing the area by threatening or intimidating acts, while access to the rest had been prevented by physical obstacles. In more than 70 per cent of the springs, Israeli settlers had begun to develop the surrounding area into a “tourist attraction”.

Women and children

37. According to the Palestinian Minister of Women’s Affairs, Palestinian women comprise 49.2 per cent of the population. The illiteracy rate among women has decreased from 16 per cent in 2000 to 7.8 per cent in 2011. The proportion of women in the workforce is 14.7 per cent, compared to that of males, which is 69 per cent. Of the women in the workforce, 27 per cent are unemployed, while a further 20 per cent work for no remuneration. In the public sector, women represent 37 per cent of employees. There are six women ministers in the current Palestinian Authority Government, the highest number to date. Furthermore, women are occupying positions that were formerly reserved for men, such as governors, heads of municipalities and the President of the Central Authority for Palestinian Statistics and Public Prosecutor.

38. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Palestinian children living in the Gaza Strip, Area C of the West Bank and East Jerusalem face particularly serious challenges, including a substandard school infrastructure and a chronic shortage of classrooms, owing to building restrictions, and impeded access to educational facilities, owing to physical, bureaucratic and other obstacles. These factors often result in a high drop-out rate, low learning achievements and, in some cases, displacement. Military operations and settler violence have also continued to disrupt schooling: during the first six months of 2012, there were 16 documented incidents which resulted in damage to schools or interruption of education, and in some cases, in direct injury to children.

39. Save the Children and the East Jerusalem Young Women’s Christian Association (YWCA) stated in a March 2012 report that Palestinian children were subjected to Israeli violations of their rights on a daily basis, including killing, maiming, torture, arbitrary arrest and detention, home demolitions, discrimination, harassment and restrictions of movement. According to the report, 11 per cent of children under the age of 5 suffered from chronic malnutrition. Since the commencement of the second intifada in 2000, the Israeli occupying forces had arrested and detained over 8,000 Palestinian children, many of whom were as young as 12 years old. Those children were interrogated, arrested and prosecuted in the Israeli military court system. Cases of ill-treatment, torture and physical and verbal harassment during detention were frequently reported. Usually arrested at night, blindfolded and their hands bound, they were often forcibly taken, either to Israeli prisons or settlements within the West Bank for interrogations. The questioning almost always takes place without the child’s lawyer or parents present. The way minors are treated by Israeli military forces and courts is in serious violation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Fourth Geneva Convention and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. Moreover, detention usually affects their psychological well-being with long-lasting implications.

Prisoners

40. In a prisoner exchange deal with Hamas, Israel released 477 Palestinian prisoners on 16 October 2011. In all, 205 prisoners were transferred to locations other than their residence before their detention, in accordance with the exchange agreement. On 18 October, Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit, who had been held in Gaza since June 2006, was released by Hamas. On 18 December, 550 Palestinian prisoners, including 55 minors and 6 women, were released by Israel in the second phase of the exchange. A hunger strike was launched in early 2012 by more than 1,500 Palestinian prisoners and detainees in Israeli custody to protest the deplorable and harsh conditions of captivity and Israel's application of administrative detention, by which it holds Palestinians without evidence, charge or trial. The crisis was resolved on 14 May, when Israel agreed to allow some 400 prisoners from Gaza to receive family visits for the first time since 2006, improve other conditions of detention and release administrative detainees once they completed their terms. Roughly 20 prisoners were also released from solitary confinement. According to the Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem, some 4,423 Palestinian security detainees and prisoners were held in Israeli prisons at the end of July 2012, among them 250 administrative detainees, 210 under the age of 18 and 7 women.

Palestinian institution-building

41. The International Monetary Fund reported in September 2012 that growth in the West Bank's gross domestic product (GDP) had declined to 5 per cent in 2011 and the first quarter of 2012, while unemployment had risen to 19 per cent in the first half of 2012, from 16 per cent in the same period of the previous year. The economic slowdown reflected continued fiscal retrenchment, combined with severe financing difficulties, declining donor aid, especially from regional donors, and slower easing of restrictions on movement and access. In Gaza, after a rebound in its real output by over 20 per cent on average in 2010-11 following the easing of tight restrictions, growth had declined to 6 per cent in the first quarter of 2012, and unemployment had risen to 30 per cent from 28 per cent in the same period in 2011.

42. The World Bank reported in September 2012 that the Palestinian Authority was facing a very serious fiscal situation with its budget deficit higher than expected, while external budget support had been falling. Debt to the local banking sector was almost at its limit and further credit from the private sector was unlikely to be forthcoming given the current high level of arrears. While the sustainability of growth in the Palestinian territories depended upon increasing private investment, restrictions put in place by the Government of Israel continued to stand in the way of potential private investment and remained the major impediment to sustainable economic growth. Most notably, the continued geographical fragmentation of Area C (envisaged under the Oslo Accords as a temporary arrangement) posed a binding constraint to real economic growth, essential to support the future Palestinian State. Area C's significance, as the only contiguous land in the West Bank connecting 227 separate geographical areas (A and B), was the key to economic cohesion and was the most resource-abundant space in the West Bank, holding the majority of the territory's water, agricultural lands, natural resources, and land reserves that provide an economic foundation for growth in key sectors of the economy.

Reconciliation

43. During a meeting in Doha on 5 February 2012, President Abbas and Hamas Political Bureau Chief Khaled Mashaal reached an agreement to form an interim government of "technocrats" to be headed by President Abbas and to be followed by the holding of presidential, parliamentary and local elections as agreed in May 2011.

However, to date, the agreement has not been implemented. The voter registration process that the Central Elections Commission had planned for Gaza from 3 to 14 July was suspended by the Hamas authorities. On 10 July, the Palestinian Authority, pending further developments on reconciliation, called for municipal elections to be held throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory on 20 October. Hamas has rejected that call. From 5 to 9 August, the Palestinian Central Elections Committee initiated a voter registry update in the West Bank, ahead of the planned local elections.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

44. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide extensive core services and emergency assistance to the Palestine refugees in all its fields of operations in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Government of Israel undertook some measures to ease the movement of goods into and out of the Gaza Strip, but those measures still fell well short of the level required to meet the needs of the Palestine refugee population and UNRWA's reconstruction requirements, or to ensure the revival of the economy which would reduce the dependency on UNRWA services. The Agency continues to experience a grave and recurrent financial crisis, which threatens its ability to sustain or improve its services and to continue emergency assistance programmes, including in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and for Palestine refugees in the Syrian Arab Republic, as well as its ability to complete essential projects, such as the reconstruction of the Nahr El Bared Camp in Lebanon. The Committee reiterates its appreciation for the dedication of UNRWA to its mission and calls upon all donors to increase contributions to ensure the well-being of more than 5 million registered Palestine refugees under the mandate of the Agency.

45. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to respond to the development needs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. In support of the Palestinian Authority's National Development Plan 2011-2013, UNDP proceeded with the implementation of its new consolidated plan, "Development for Freedom: Empowered Lives, a Resilient Nation 2011-2013". The three-year plan focuses on democratic governance and the rule of law, economic empowerment and private sector investment, environment and management of natural resources, as well as public and social infrastructure. In support of Palestinian Statehood, the UNDP plan places empowerment, resilience and sustainability at the centre of its efforts, with a focus on three priority areas: the Gaza Strip, East Jerusalem and Area C, where the needs are the greatest, owing to the lack of access by the Palestinian Authority.

46. The Committee also remained appreciative of the important work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the consolidated appeal for 2012 focused on delivering humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 66/14

47. In pursuance of its mandate, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with United Nations bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others.

1. Action taken in the Security Council

48. During the reporting period, the Security Council has continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to implement the road map. It held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question”.

49. During the open debates at the Council meetings held on 24 October 2011, 24 January, 23 April, and 25 July 2012, the Chair of the Committee delivered statements (see S/PV.6636, Resumption 1, S/PV.6706, Resumption 1, S/PV.6757, S/PV.6816).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

50. On 13 October 2011, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the situation of Palestinian political prisoners held by Israel (GA/PAL/1211). Further, on 24 February and 25 April 2012, the Bureau issued statements on Israel’s illegal settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1224 and GA/PAL/1228).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 66/14 and 66/15

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

51. At its periodic meetings at Headquarters in New York, the Committee, among other things, heard presentations by representatives of UNRWA, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the Norwegian Refugee Council on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. On two separate occasions, the Committee was briefed on recent developments by Palestine Liberation Organization Executive Committee member Hanan Ashrawi and Palestinian negotiator Mohammad Shtayyeh, respectively. The Committee also organized a screening of a documentary film on the daily life of Palestinians in Hebron facing violence and harassment by Israeli settlers.

2. Programme of international meetings and conferences

52. Through its programme of international meetings and conferences, the Committee continued to raise international awareness of the various aspects of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine.

53. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee in 2012:

(a) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Cairo, 6 and 7 February, on the economic cost of the continued Israeli occupation;

(b) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, United Nations Office at Geneva, 3 and 4 April, on the question of Palestinian political prisoners;

(c) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, UNESCO headquarters, Paris, 30 and 31 May, on the role of youth and women in the peaceful resolution of the question of Palestine;

(d) United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, UNESCO headquarters, Paris, 1 June, on harnessing the power of youth and women;

(e) United Nations Asian and Pacific Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, Bangkok, 10 and 11 July, on international efforts at addressing the obstacles to the two-State solution.

54. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, Palestine, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. Detailed information about these meetings is being issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and will be available on the “Question of Palestine” website maintained by the Division.

55. In connection with the above-mentioned events, the Committee delegation carried out the following activities: on the margins of the seminar in Cairo, the Committee delegation was received by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Egypt, Mohamed Kamel Amr, and by the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, Nabil Elaraby.

56. During its stay in Geneva, the Committee delegation held meetings with Swiss Government officials, including the Special Representative of Switzerland for the Middle East, Jean-Daniel Ruch, and with senior officials of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

57. On the sidelines of the meeting in Paris, the Committee delegation met with UNESCO Deputy Director-General Getachew Engida. On its way back to New York, the delegation stopped in Lisbon, where it met with representatives of parliamentary groups and civil society organizations.

58. In Bangkok, the Committee delegation met with officials from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Thailand. On its way back to New York, the delegation also visited Hanoi to meet with Vietnamese officials.

3. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

59. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the European Union, the League of Arab States, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices.

4. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

60. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2011. The meetings provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to improve coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations and encouraged them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at realizing a two-State solution.

61. The Committee maintained and developed its liaison with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms cooperating with it, in addition to its established liaison with a large number of individual organizations. At the United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, held in Paris in June, the deliberations focused on ways in which civil society organizations could serve as a platform for empowering youths and women. While in Geneva, the Committee delegation held consultations with 12 representatives of civil society organizations from Europe, the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel. The Committee delegation also held consultations in Bangkok with 15 civil society organizations from the Asian and Pacific region, the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel.

62. During the reporting period, three civil society organizations were accredited to the Committee.

63. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a page on civil society (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>) on the "Question of Palestine" website as a tool for the exchange of information and networking and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee.

64. The Division maintained a Facebook page to disseminate information about the work of the Committee, and the United Nations as a whole, on the question of Palestine. In addition, the Division continued to publish the periodic online bulletin NGO Action News, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations

65. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Representatives of parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations participated in international events organized by the Committee during 2012. Consultations with parliamentarians were also held in Lisbon and Hanoi.

5. Research, monitoring and publications

66. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through the Internet:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) A special bulletin and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

6. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

67. Pursuant to successive annual General Assembly mandates, the Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the “Question of Palestine” website, which is located on the United Nations home page under “Peace and Security”. That included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL (<http://unispal.un.org>) on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old United Nations system and related documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of UNISPAL, including by creating a focus page on Palestine’s application for United Nations membership and by incorporating additional multimedia content. RSS and Twitter feeds alerted users about newly posted materials.

7. Training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority

68. In accordance with the General Assembly mandate, the training programme conducted by the Division has been enhanced and involved seven staff members of the Palestinian Authority. Three staff members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Planning and the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations participated in a newly established training programme at the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia in Beirut from 7 to 11 May during its 27th session. Two additional Palestinian Authority staff members of the Ministry of National Economy participated in a three-week training programme at the United Nations Office at Geneva during the Trade and Development Board session from 18 September to 5 October 2012, where they familiarized themselves with the work of UNCTAD, including on trade facilitation and foreign direct investment. They also attended briefings on the work of other United Nations entities, including the Human Rights Council, the World Health Organization and the World Trade Organization. In addition, two staff members of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs are in the process of completing a three-month training programme at United Nations Headquarters in New York held from 12 September to 2 December, aimed at familiarizing themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies, including the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council.

8. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

69. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 29 November 2011 at Headquarters in New York, and at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna. On the occasion of the observance at Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee and other activities, a cultural exhibit entitled “A Palestinian Vista” was organized under the auspices of the Committee, in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations and the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations information centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 66/16

70. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 66/16, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine. In doing so, it strove to enhance dialogue and understanding, while sensitizing public opinion to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process.

71. The Department, in cooperation with the Federal Department of Foreign Affairs of Switzerland, organized the 2012 International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East in Geneva on 12 and 13 June 2012. The seminar, which brought together journalists, bloggers, activists, film-makers, academics, policymakers and diplomats from Palestine, Israel, the wider Middle East region, Europe and the United States, as well as senior United Nations officials, examined the prospects for peace approaching the twentieth anniversary of the Oslo Accords; how the Arab Spring has affected media coverage of the question of Palestine; the role of women's activism and the media in Israeli-Palestinian peace and the wider region; civil society in media and film in the Middle East; and youth activism in the Middle East. The event, which had the largest number of female participants in its history, was promoted extensively across online platforms, including Tumblr and Twitter.

72. To mark the 2011 observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November, the Department produced a revised and updated permanent exhibit on the question of Palestine and the United Nations. The exhibit has been translated by United Nations information centres around the world into 11 languages. In addition, the information centres widely disseminated the Secretary-General's message on the occasion of the Day in official and local languages. Commemorative events, such as exhibits, film screenings and panel discussions, were organized in Brussels, Geneva, Harare, Manama, Moscow and Pretoria, among others.

73. The Department's annual training programme for Palestinian journalists was held at United Nations Headquarters from 31 October to 2 December 2011. Nine Palestinian journalists working mainly in broadcast media attended the programme, which included a visit to Washington, D.C. The programme's primary focus was strengthening the participants' capacity as broadcast media professionals.

74. During the reporting period, the Department also used all of its information outlets and products, including digital media platforms, to highlight the broad range of developments and issues related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process. The multilingual United Nations News Centre portal covered the issue extensively, with its English and French language versions alone carrying more than 200 related stories. The Arabic, Chinese, Russian and Spanish versions of the United Nations News Centre provided further coverage. The Department also produced 110 press releases on the question of Palestine in English and French, which included summaries of formal meetings and press conferences, as well as statements by the Secretary-General and other United Nations officials. United Nations Webcast provided live coverage of major discussions concerning the question of Palestine, including meetings of the Security Council and the General Assembly.

75. United Nations Radio, which is available in all the official languages, as well as in Kiswahili and Portuguese, provided regular coverage of issues and events pertaining to the question of Palestine, including news reports on the Palestinian Rights Committee and on the plight of Palestinians living in the Gaza Strip, and the ongoing work of UNRWA. United Nations Radio also highlighted the engagement by other United Nations entities, such as the Human Rights Council and UNESCO.

76. United Nations TV provided extensive coverage through its live broadcasts and feature programmes, which were distributed and broadcast via a variety of means and platforms, including United Nations Webcast, the United Nations audiovisual broadcasting services (UNifeed) satellite distribution system and United Nations programming on the Time Warner cable network. Related feature stories, such as the Secretary-General's visit to the region in February 2012, the UNESCO vote on Palestinian membership in October 2011, and the Gaza marathon in March 2012, were also produced and widely distributed.

77. During the reporting period, three other groups of visitors were briefed on the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process (two high school groups, with a total of 65 students, and one college group, with a total of 22 students). In addition, the United Nations public inquiries team responded to 1,272 inquiries relating to the Middle East peace process.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

78. Throughout the reporting period, the Committee continued to work for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination, and a negotiated settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in all its aspects, resulting in an end to the occupation and the independence of a sovereign, viable, contiguous and democratic Palestinian State based on 1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, and a just solution for the Palestine refugees based on General Assembly resolution 194 (III). It urged the international community to continue its support for the Middle East peace process, promoted international action against obstacles in its path, particularly the ongoing illegal Israeli settlement campaign, and engaged with diverse constituencies in support of peace, such as women and youth. It continued to mobilize international assistance to the Palestinians, while bringing to light the economic costs of the Israeli occupation which constrain Palestinian economic, social and institutional development. The Committee raised international alarm about the plight of the Palestinian prisoners and called for their release and an end to abusive practices by Israel, including administrative detentions.

79. The reporting period marked the one-year anniversary of the 23 September 2011 submission of the application for United Nations membership by Palestine, and the adoption by the Quartet of a timetable for the resumption of Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, with a view to reaching an agreement by the end of 2012. The Committee is concerned that the positive momentum towards the two-State solution generated by these developments appears to have dissipated, while other crises have competed for international attention. The Committee remains convinced that a durable settlement of the conflict is a prerequisite for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. It is of the view that progress on the Palestinian status at the United Nations will generate a new dynamic in the peace process and help safeguard the two-State solution, as would the recognition of the State of Palestine by additional Member States. The Committee regrets that the series of “exploratory” meetings between the parties held in Amman in January 2012, and subsequent contacts, have not yet resulted in resumed negotiations. The main reason remains the continuation and expansion by Israel of its illegal settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and its refusal to commit to the long-standing parameters of the peace process based on relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet road map. The international community needs to maintain its focus on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, uphold its legal obligations in that regard, and present bold initiatives to break the current deadlock. The Committee shares the concern that any attempts to maintain the status quo will not only delay the two-State solution, but may also usher in a one-State reality with unpredictable consequences. The Committee calls upon the international community to take serious and concrete action which would compel Israel to stop its illegal settlement activities and to genuinely commit to ending its 45-year military occupation and to making peace. The dispatch of a fact-finding mission by the Human Rights Council is a welcome first step towards accountability. The Committee joins in the calls upon the Security Council members to undertake a mission to the region to examine the situation first-hand and to uphold its duties under the Charter of the United Nations to contribute tangibly to the efforts to advance a just, lasting and comprehensive solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole and to the establishment of peace and security in the Middle East region.

80. The Committee has consistently supported the Palestinian State-building and reform agenda. It is concerned that its accomplishments are now endangered, owing to the debilitating financial crisis experienced by the Palestinian Authority, and it calls upon donors to meet their prior commitments and to provide emergency aid to buttress the two-State solution. Progress towards that goal also requires all Palestinian factions to unite behind the legitimate leadership of President Mahmoud Abbas. The Committee urges the speedy implementation, in good faith, of national reconciliation agreements.

81. The Committee remained deeply concerned about the ongoing violence and gross violations of humanitarian and human rights law. It reiterates its condemnation of all attacks against civilians, including rocket fire from Gaza, air strikes on populated areas, and settler violence and calls upon the Security Council and the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to act urgently to guarantee the protection of civilians.

82. As the Gaza blockade reached its five-year mark, the Committee was greatly alarmed by the conclusions of a recent United Nations study that the damage to its economy, infrastructure and resources is becoming irreversible, thus threatening Gaza's future viability. The Committee remains convinced that any sustainable recovery would require a complete lifting of the blockade by Israel. It would also require the dismantlement of the Israeli occupation and its associated regime of settlements, checkpoints, the separation wall, demolitions, land confiscations and expulsions, which have been on the rise, with the worst abuses occurring in East Jerusalem and in Area C. The Committee calls in this regard for the transfer of additional territories in Area C to the jurisdiction of the Palestinian Authority, as envisaged in the Oslo Accords.

83. The Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights will continue through their mandated activities to generate heightened international awareness of the question of Palestine, as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate aimed at enabling the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support on the part of the international community for the programme's objectives, as evidenced by the number of adopted resolutions, international meetings and conferences, and commemorations of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the number of civil society conferences, public forums, meetings and consultations between the Committee and civil society organizations; and (c) an increase in international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the increased access to the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and other information materials on the Question of Palestine website. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority carried out by the Division has proved its usefulness, as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee strongly recommends that that important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, further enhanced.

84. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2013, implemented by the Division, on widening international support for the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty, and to return to their homes and property. The programme will also focus on strengthening international support for the permanent status negotiations and contributing to the creation of a favourable international atmosphere for their conduct in good faith. The Committee intends to mobilize increased international scrutiny of the developments on the ground, in particular the halting of all settlement activities in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, and an end to all other illegal Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It will support global campaigns to challenge Israeli impunity and promote the concept of Israeli accountability for its actions towards the Palestinian people.

85. The Committee will continue to pay special attention to highlighting the plight of the most disadvantaged Palestinians, such as refugees, those living in Gaza and political prisoners. The Committee will continue to mobilize support for Palestinian institution-building and all other efforts to facilitate the viability of the Palestinian State. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution to all permanent status issues. The Committee wishes to contribute to efforts towards ending incitement on both sides, provide a venue to have the narratives heard and reconciled and, with the help of civil society, to promote peace education. It will pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and youth and their organizations in this process. The Committee also wishes to work towards Palestinian reconciliation and will strive to involve Palestinians from different ends of the political spectrum in its events.

86. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people and welcomes the growing calls from civil society groups for peaceful protests against the status quo. It lauds the courageous advocacy actions of countless activists, including eminent personalities and parliamentarians, who participate in demonstrations against the wall, try to break the siege of Gaza and keep their home constituencies informed about the harsh realities of life under occupation. The Committee also recognizes the sacrifices made by Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails who have risked their lives to help to bring an end to illegal Israeli policies, including that of administrative detention. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions, with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine. It will continue to assess its programme of cooperation with civil society and consult them on ways to enhance their contribution. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in strengthening cooperation with civil society.

87. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of the two-State solution and ensure respect for international law, in accordance with their international obligations.

88. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support, the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities. It should pay special attention to continued development of the “Question of Palestine” portal and use of web-based social information networks, such as Facebook and Twitter. It should also continue to develop the UNISPAL document collection by reflecting the issue of the hour and enhancing subject-based search capability, as well as by continuing to digitize and upload historic documents and to develop user-friendly search features, such as the French titles project. The Division should continue to collaborate with the United Nations Libraries at Headquarters and at Geneva in the search for historic documents. It should further develop the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority, paying special attention to the programme’s gender balance and reviewing logistics to allow the maximum number of participants possible. It should continue to organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

89. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and public opinion of the relevant issues. It requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

90. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Letter of transmittal

[7 October 2013]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 67/20 of 30 November 2012.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2012 to 6 October 2013.

(Signed) Abdou Salam Diallo
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The reporting period witnessed a historic vote by the General Assembly on 29 November 2012 that granted Palestine non-member observer State status at the United Nations. Its adoption reflected the international consensus on the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and to freedom in their own sovereign State and consensus on the two-State solution, based on the pre-1967 borders and relevant United Nations resolutions, as well as the growing international impatience with the long-standing Israeli occupation and the growing sense of urgency to achieve a just and peaceful solution to the conflict.

2. The Government of Israel reacted negatively to the General Assembly vote by declaring plans to construct thousands of new settlement units, in breach of international law and United Nations resolutions, and by withholding the transfer of Palestinian tax and customs revenues, in violation of agreements reached. Israel continued to announce and approve settlement construction plans even after the resumption of peace talks was announced in July after months of mediation by the United States.

3. Two weeks before the General Assembly vote, Israel launched a large-scale, eight-day military offensive in the Gaza Strip, in which 165 Palestinians were killed, more than half of them civilians, and some 1,400 were injured, including many children. Six Israelis, including three civilians, were killed as a result of rocket fire. The humanitarian situation in Gaza remained critical, with high rates of poverty and unemployment. The long-standing restrictions on the movement of people and goods, imposed by Israel since 2007 in the form of a blockade, continued to undermine the living conditions of the 1.7 million Palestinians in Gaza. Reconstruction and rehabilitation also continued to be hampered by the blockade. Rocket and mortar fire by armed Palestinian groups into southern Israel also continued, endangering the lives of the Israeli population.

4. Israel continued its frequent military raids and incursions in the West Bank, resulting in the killing and injuring of Palestinians, including children. While overshadowed by reports of the release of some Palestinian prisoners by Israel as part of a goodwill gesture, at least 3,583 Palestinians, including women and children, were arrested in over 3,000 arrest operations during the reporting period alone, in addition to the thousands of Palestinians that remain in Israeli jails and detention centres. Many unarmed civilians were subjected to the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces during demonstrations against the occupation. Israel continued to expand its illegal settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and approved thousands more new settlement units. The construction of the separation wall continued in defiance of the International Court of Justice advisory opinion (2004), resulting in further confiscation of Palestinian land and demolition of properties, further harming socioeconomic conditions and causing the displacement of more Palestinian families. The situation in Occupied East Jerusalem remained alarming, with continued land confiscations, house demolitions and evictions of Palestinian residents, and the intensification of acts of aggression and vandalism against Christian and Muslim holy sites in the City.

5. The Palestinian State-building efforts continued to be challenged by a serious budget deficit as well as by restrictions and obstacles imposed by Israel on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which continued to prevent the normal movement of persons and goods, economic activity and sustained development and growth. In addition, a decrease in foreign aid and the failure of donor countries to fulfil their financial pledges contributed to the dire situation.

6. During the reporting period, the activities of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and its Bureau focused on mobilizing wide support for ending the Israeli occupation and realizing the two-State solution, in order for the Palestinian people to achieve its inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination. In that context, the Committee welcomed the resumption of Israeli-Palestinian peace talks in August with the active mediation of the United States. The Committee monitored the situation on the ground and the political developments, implemented its programme of international meetings and conferences, held consultations with representatives of Governments, national parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations, as well as civil society, and reached out to its partners worldwide using new communications media. The Committee reiterated its position of principle that a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could be reached only by ending the occupation that began in 1967, achieving the independence of the State of Palestine on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital and achieving a just and agreed solution to the Palestine refugees issue on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

7. The annual seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people, organized by the Committee in Rome in February 2013, addressed the challenges and opportunities of developing a self-sustaining economy in the new reality of a State under occupation. The seminar was followed in April by a regional meeting in Addis Ababa that focused on African solidarity with the Palestinian people for the achievement of the sovereignty and independence of the State of Palestine. An international meeting held in Beijing in June focused on reviving collective international engagement towards a two-State solution.

Mandate of the Committee

8. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974.

9. The recommendations made by the Committee in its first report to the General Assembly (A/31/35) were endorsed by the Assembly as a basis for the solution of the question of Palestine. In its subsequent reports,¹ the Committee has continued to stress that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, must be based on the relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973), as well as on the following essential principles: the withdrawal of Israel, the occupying Power, from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and from the other occupied Arab territories; respect for the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; and the recognition and exercise of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The recommendations of the Committee contained in its first report could not be implemented, and each year the Assembly has renewed the Committee's mandate and requested it to intensify efforts in pursuit of its objectives.

10. The Committee has consistently supported the objective of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side within secure and recognized borders on the basis of the 1949 armistice lines, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003). The Committee welcomed and supported the Quartet's road map and called upon the parties to implement it. In keeping with its mandate, the Committee has continued to work towards creating conditions for the successful conduct of negotiations on a permanent settlement allowing the Palestinian people to realize its inalienable rights. The Committee has also promoted support and assistance by the international community to the Palestinian people.

11. On 30 November 2012, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (resolution 67/20), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (resolution 67/21) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (resolution 67/22). The Assembly also adopted resolution 67/23, entitled "Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine".

¹ Since the thirty-first session, the Committee has submitted annual reports to the General Assembly; all such reports have been issued as supplement No. 35 of the sessional documentation of the Assembly.

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

12. During the reporting period, the Plurinational State of Bolivia joined the Committee as a new member on 22 August 2013.

13. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

14. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation.

15. At its 348th meeting, on 5 February 2013, the Committee elected Abdou Salam Diallo (Senegal) as Chair, Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan) and Rodolfo Reyes Rodríguez (Cuba) as Vice-Chairs and Christopher Grima (Malta) as Rapporteur. At its 354th meeting, on 4 October 2013, the Committee decided to elect three additional Vice-Chairs to its Bureau: Desra Percaya (Indonesia), Wilfried Emvula (Namibia) and María Rubiales de Chamorro (Nicaragua).

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

16. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all United Nations Member States and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and made briefings, observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Political developments

17. On 23 September 2011, President Mahmoud Abbas submitted to the Security Council the application of the State of Palestine for admission to full membership in the United Nations. With the application pending before the Council, the General Assembly adopted resolution 67/19 on 29 November 2012, which accorded Palestine non-member observer State status in the United Nations. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 138 in favour to 9 against, with 41 abstentions. Israel rejected the move and reacted immediately by deliberately announcing plans to build over 3,000 settlement units, including in Occupied East Jerusalem, and withholding the transfer of Palestinian tax and customs revenues collected on behalf of Palestinians.

18. International efforts to restart Israeli-Palestinian peace talks continued to be thwarted by Israel's continued expansion of illegal settlements and other illegal measures, but after months of mediation by the United States, the Secretary of State, John Kerry, announced, in Amman on 19 July 2013, that an agreement had been reached that established a basis for resuming direct final status negotiations between Palestinians and Israelis. Israeli and Palestinian negotiators held a series of preparatory meetings in Washington, D.C., on 29 and 30 July 2013, where they agreed on an agenda towards achieving a final status agreement over the next nine months. On 14 August, the first formal peace talks since September 2010 were held in Jerusalem, hours after Israel, as part of a goodwill gesture to the Palestinians, released 26 Palestinian prisoners who had been detained prior to the signing of the Oslo Accords. The negotiators were to meet weekly thereafter, alternating between Jerusalem and Jericho.

19. During the reporting period, Grenada, Guatemala and Haiti recognized the State of Palestine and Guyana and El Salvador established diplomatic relations with the State of Palestine. In addition, Cyprus, Denmark, Finland, Lithuania and Sweden decided to upgrade the status of the Palestinian delegations in the countries to that of an embassy or similar entity.

Settlements

20. Israel, the occupying Power, continued and intensified its illegal settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics reported in August 2013 that, in 2012, the number of settlers in the 144 settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, had been 563,546 (360,370 in the West Bank and 203,176 in East Jerusalem), an increase of 24,765 compared with 2011.

21. During the reporting period, the following were announced, approved or issued by Israel: tenders for the construction of 72 housing units in the "Ariel" settlement (6 November); the construction of nearly 700 new units in "Itamar" and other areas near Nablus (12 November); the construction of 3,000 new units, including preliminary zoning and planning work for thousands of units in East Jerusalem and settlement blocks, including "Ma'ale Adumim" and the "E1" area (30 November); tenders to build 92 units in "Ma'aleh Adumim" (11 December); an advanced plan to build 523 units in "Gush Ezion" (19 December); the construction of 523 units in “Gva’ot” (20 December); plans for 170 new units and 84 units in “Rotem” in the Jordan Valley (13 January 2013); tenders for the construction of 114 new units in “Efrat” and 84 in “Kiryat Arba” (16 January); tenders for 128 units in “Beitar Illit” (25 January); plans to build 346 units in “Gush Etzion” (31 January); the construction of 200 new housing units in “Tekoa” and 146 in “Nokdim” (2 February); plans to construct 90 new units in “Beit El” (11 February); 296 new units in “Beit El” (8 May); plans to build more than 1,000 housing units in “Itamar” and “Bruchin” (13 June); the construction of 732 units in “Modi’in Ilit” and 19 in “Kfar Adumim” (17 July); the construction of 230 units in “Ma’on” (6 August); tenders for the construction of 394 units in the West Bank (11 August). In addition, Peace Now reported on 31 October that Israel had actively supported the establishment of two new so-called settlement outposts, “Nahalei Tal” and “Tzofin North”, for the first time since 2005. On 24 December, Israel upgraded a college in the “Ariel” settlement to a university. On 7 January, Israel undertook measures to “legalize” the “Rahim” settlement near Nablus after merging two outposts.

22. In Occupied East Jerusalem, the following were announced, approved or issued: a plan to build 797 housing units west of the “Gilo” settlement (18 October 2012); tenders for the construction of 607 housing units in “Pisgat Ze’ev” and 606 in “Ramot” (6 November); the construction of 1,500 apartments in “Ramat Shlomo” (17 December); the building of 2,612 units in “Givat Hamatos” (19 December); the construction of 1,242 units in “Gilo” (25 December); the construction of an additional 120 units in “Givat Ze’ev” (29 April 2013); the construction of 300 new units in “Ramot” (30 May); the construction of 69 homes in the City (26 June); tenders for the construction of 793 units in the City (11 August); a construction plan for 942 housing units in “Gilo” (13 August). In addition, on 16 January, the “Jerusalem Committee for Planning and Construction” approved the construction of a new college for the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) next to the Mount of Olives in East Jerusalem. On 8 July, the same Committee approved the establishment of a new national park in southern Jerusalem on Palestinian land.

23. The international fact-finding mission to investigate the implications of the Israeli settlements on the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of the Palestinian people throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, appointed by the Human Rights Council and led by Christine Chanet, Judge of the Court of Cassation of France and member of the Human Rights Committee, published its findings on 31 January 2013 (A/HRC/22/63), stating that numerous of the human rights of the Palestinian people were being violated owing to the Israeli settlement campaign and stressing that the violations were interrelated and formed part of an overall pattern of breaches characterized principally by the denial of the right to self-determination and systematic discrimination against the Palestinian people occurring daily. Since 1967, the Governments of Israel had openly led, directly participated in, and had full control of the planning, construction, development, consolidation and encouragement of the settlements and private entities had enabled, facilitated and profited from the construction of the settlements. The mission considered that, in relation to the settlements, Israel was committing serious breaches of its obligations under the right to self-determination and certain obligations under international humanitarian law, including the obligation not to transfer its population into the occupied territory and that, in compliance with article 49 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention), Israel must cease all settlement activities without preconditions. It also stated that ratification by the State of Palestine of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which establishes the jurisdiction of the Court over the deportation or transfer, directly or indirectly, by the occupying Power of parts of its own population into the territory it occupies, might lead to accountability for gross violations of human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law and justice for victims.

24. On 19 July, the European Commission published new guidelines, effective 1 January 2014, prohibiting the funding of entities connected to the Israeli settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem or the Golan Heights. The Commission is also reportedly seeking to draft comprehensive guidelines on labelling settlement products by the end of 2013. In addition, the Ministry of Economic Affairs of the Netherlands issued a directive on 6 March to all retail chains in the country to state the origin of products from the occupied territories.

Settler violence

25. Settler-related violence in the West Bank and East Jerusalem continued to be a source of serious concern. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, there were at least 84 incidents leading to Palestinian casualties and 228 incidents leading to damage to Palestinian property or land during the reporting period (as of August 2013). In addition, there were at least 37 incidents leading to Israeli casualties and 8 incidents leading to damage to Israeli property or land. The Office had recorded damage to 7,272 Palestinian-owned olive trees and saplings by settlers in 2013 (as of July). In 2012, over 8,600 trees were reported burned, uprooted or otherwise vandalized.

26. The Israeli human rights organization Yesh Din reported in July 2013 that between 2005 and 2013, only 8.5 per cent of the investigations opened by Israeli authorities following complaints submitted by Palestinians with the organization's assistance had resulted in the indictment of Israelis suspected of harming Palestinians and their property. The international fact-finding mission noted in its report (A/HRC/22/63) that the identities of settlers responsible for violence and intimidation were known to the Israeli authorities, yet these acts continued with impunity, and concluded that there was institutionalized discrimination against the Palestinian people when it came to addressing violence.

Jerusalem

27. The Association for Civil Rights in Israel reported in May 2013 that 371,844 Palestinians constituted 39 per cent of the total population of Jerusalem. Some 79.5 per cent of residents and 85 per cent of children in East Jerusalem lived below the poverty line, the worst rate of all time. There remained a chronic shortage of more than 1,000 classrooms in East Jerusalem's education system. Palestinians were permitted to build on only 14 per cent of East Jerusalem. A third of Palestinian land in East Jerusalem had been expropriated since 1967, and thousands of settlement housing units had been built on it. Israel's building of the separation wall, the closing of passage points and the implementation of a strict "entry permit" regime had effectively cut off East Jerusalem from the West Bank, exacerbating the already dire economic and social condition of Palestinian residents. In 2012, Israel had revoked the residency status of 116 Palestinians from Jerusalem. Since 1967, the residency status of 14,263 Palestinians had been revoked and rescinded by Israel.

Area C

28. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, approximately 150,000 Palestinians live in 542 communities in “Area C”, constituting over 60 per cent of the West Bank, where Israel retains near exclusive control under the Oslo Accords with a complex system of physical and administrative measures. Some 325,000 Israeli settlers live in some 135 settlements and about 100 outposts in Area C. Palestinian construction in 29 per cent of Area C is heavily restricted, and less than 1 per cent has been planned for Palestinian development. In addition, 5,000 Palestinians reside in 38 communities located in areas designated as “firing zones” for military training, increasing their vulnerability and risk of displacement.

The wall

29. Israel continued the illegal construction of the wall in the Occupied West Bank, including in and around Occupied East Jerusalem, in defiance of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported in July 2013 that the wall’s total length was approximately 712 km, more than twice the length of the 1949 Armistice Line (Green Line) between the West Bank and Israel. Approximately 62 per cent of the wall was complete. If completed as planned, some 85 per cent of the route would run inside the West Bank, rather than along the Green Line, isolating 9.4 per cent of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Around 11,000 Palestinians living in 32 communities located between the wall and the Green Line depend on the granting of Israeli permits or special arrangements to live in their own homes. Approximately 150 Palestinian communities have land located behind the wall, forcing residents to seek special permits or “prior coordination” with the Israeli authorities to access it.

Demolitions and displacements

30. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Israel carried out the demolition of at least 594 Palestinian-owned structures during the reporting period, displacing at least 924 people (as at 30 September). There was a significant rise in demolitions and displacement in East Jerusalem, and, as of August 2013, the number of people displaced in the City in 2013 was greater than 250, more than the combined total of persons displaced in all of 2011 and 2012. The entire Bir Nabala Bedouin community in East Jerusalem was demolished in August, displacing 39 people, including 18 children, on the grounds that the residential and livelihood structures lacked building permits issued by Israel.

Security

31. On 14 November 2012, Israel launched a large-scale military offensive, “Operation Pillar of Defence”, in the Gaza Strip, with the targeted assassination of the acting chief of the military wing of Hamas. Palestinian armed groups responded by firing rockets into Israel, and the hostilities lasted until 21 November, when a ceasefire agreement was reached. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, during the eight days of hostilities, Israel targeted more than 1,500 sites throughout the Gaza Strip and 165 Palestinians were killed, of whom 99 were believed to be civilians, including 33 children and 13 women. The Gaza Ministry of Health reported that 1,399 Palestinians had been injured, the majority of whom were believed to be civilians. During the same period, Palestinian armed factions fired 1,506 rockets towards Israel, according to IDF, and six Israelis, including three civilians, were killed as a result of the rocket attacks and 224 others were injured, the vast majority of whom were reportedly civilians.

32. Overall, Israeli forces killed at least 196 Palestinians and injured more than 1,600 in the Gaza Strip during the reporting period (as at 30 September) in incidents involving air strikes and the enforcement of access restrictions near the border fence. In addition, 3 Palestinians, including 2 children, were killed and 24 Palestinians, including 19 children, were injured in incidents involving unexploded ordnance.

33. In the West Bank, Israeli occupying forces continued to conduct routine military raids and arrests. During the reporting period (as at 30 September), 20 Palestinians were killed and more than 4,200 injured by Israeli forces in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, including during clashes with demonstrators. Israeli forces arrested at least 3,583 Palestinians in more than 3,000 search-and-arrest operations.

34. Palestinian civilians engaged in demonstrations against the occupation continued to be killed and injured by the excessive use of force by Israel, including live ammunition and rubber-coated bullets. The Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem, in a report issued in July 2013 on the routine use by the Israeli army of rubber-coated metal bullets as a means of dispersing demonstrations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, stated that since 2000, at least 19 Palestinians, including 12 minors, had been killed by such bullets. It also stated that Israeli security forces made routine use of other crowd-control weapons, such as tear gas, stun grenades, water cannons and pepper spray, in unlawful and dangerous ways, with minimal accountability to prevent the recurrence of such conduct.

Gaza Strip

35. The long-standing restrictions on the movement of people and goods to, from and within the Gaza Strip continued to undermine the living conditions of its 1.7 million Palestinian residents. According to a report released by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in July 2013, 57 per cent of Gaza households are food-insecure and about 80 per cent are aid recipients, 34.5 per cent of those able and willing to work are unemployed. A long-standing electricity deficit and shortages in fuel result in power outages of up to 12 hours per day. More than 12,000 people are currently displaced owing to their inability to reconstruct their homes that were destroyed during hostilities. Since 2007, at least 230 Palestinian civilians have been killed and over 400 injured while working in tunnels used for the transfer of restricted goods between Gaza and Egypt. During the reporting period, 15 people were killed and 20 injured in tunnel-related incidents (as of August).

36. Fewer than 200 people per day (on average) were allowed out of Gaza by way of Israel in the first half of 2013, compared with 26,000 in the equivalent period in 2000. Less than one truckload of goods per day (on average) exited Gaza in the first half of 2013, compared with 38 during the first half of 2007 (before the imposition of the blockade). Access to land within 300 m from the fence erected by Israel surrounding Gaza is generally prohibited, and access to farming areas several hundred metres beyond is dangerous. Palestinian fishermen are allowed to access less than one third of the fishing areas allocated to them under the Oslo Accords (6 of 20 nautical miles) and are denied access to the most profitable fishing areas off the Gaza coast. The livelihoods of thousands of families have been impacted by the access restrictions: from 2000 to 2013, the number of fishermen declined from around 10,000 to only 3,500, some 95 per cent of whom rely on international aid.

Water

37. Israel, the occupying Power, retains almost exclusive control over all underground and surface water resources, the construction of new wells and cisterns and the upgrading of existing wells and other water infrastructure in the West Bank. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, approximately 1 million Palestinians in 492 communities in the West Bank access or consume 60 litres of water per capita per day or less, significantly below the World Health Organization recommendation of 100 litres per capita per day. In addition, an estimated 313,000 Palestinians from 113 communities are not connected to a water network, which translates into enormous costs related to water purchase. Israeli settlers in the West Bank consume approximately six times the water consumed by Palestinians. In some cases, the discrepancies are even wider: the Dead Sea settlements of “Mitzpe Shalem” and “Qalya” consume approximately 700 litres per capita per day, while the neighbouring Palestinian village of Al-Jiftlik has access to only 66 litres per capita per day and the Palestinian villages of Al-Nuweï’ma and Al-Hadidiya are at humanitarian crisis levels with 24 and 22 litres per capita per day, respectively.

38. In Gaza, according to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, only a quarter of households receive running water every day, but only during several hours, and over 90 per cent of the water extracted from the Gaza aquifer is unsafe for human consumption. Some 90 million litres of untreated and partially treated sewage are dumped in the sea off the Gaza coast each day, creating public health hazards.

39. In March 2013, the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics reported that, despite a rise in female participation in the labour force over the past 10 years, the participation rate remained low at 17.4 per cent in 2012, compared with 10.3 per cent in 2001. The female unemployment rate increased to 32.9 per cent in 2012 compared with 13.8 per cent in 2001. In 2012 in the West Bank, 20.7 per cent of local council members were female and 40.6 per cent of public sector employees were female.

40. In a report issued in March 2013, the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) stated that the ill-treatment of Palestinian children in the Israeli military detention system appeared to be widespread, systematic and institutionalized. The pattern of ill-treatment includes the arrests of children at their homes between midnight and 5 a.m. by heavily armed soldiers; the practice of blindfolding children and tying their hands with plastic ties; physical and verbal abuse during transfer to an interrogation site, including the use of painful restraints; the lack of access to water, food, toilet facilities and medical care; interrogation using physical violence and threats; coerced confessions; and the lack of access to lawyers or family members during interrogation. Treatment inconsistent with child rights continues during court appearances, including the shackling of children; the denial of bail and imposition of custodial sentences; and the transfer of children outside the Occupied Palestinian Territory to serve their sentences inside Israel. The incarceration isolates them from their families and interrupts their studies. UNICEF stated that these practices were in violation of international law that protects all children against ill-treatment when in contact with law enforcement, military and judicial institutions.

Prisoners

41. The Committee continued to monitor with serious concern the conditions of the Palestinian prisoners held by Israel in jails and detention centres in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in Israel. On 22 February, a 30-year-old Palestinian gas station attendant, Arafat Jaradat, died while undergoing interrogation in an Israeli facility, days after his arrest by IDF. The Palestinian Ministry for Prisoners' Affairs reported that he had been tortured savagely and subjected to psychological pressure on suspicion that he had thrown stones at Israeli troops. Israeli officials claimed that he had died of cardiac arrest. The United Nations called for an international, independent investigation into his death, but that has not been implemented.

42. The Palestinian organization Addameer reported in June 2013 that, since 1967, 73 Palestinian detainees had died from torture at the hands of Israeli interrogators. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, at the end of July 2013, 4,828 Palestinian security detainees and prisoners were being held in Israeli prisons, including 134 administrative detainees, 193 minors and 11 women.

43. On 28 July, the Israeli Cabinet, with a view to facilitating the resumption of Israeli-Palestinian talks, voted to approve the release of 104 Palestinian prisoners who had been held for more than 20 years. On 14 August, Israel released 26 of the prisoners, hours before the first round of formal peace talks were held in Jerusalem.

Palestinian State-building

44. On 20 October 2012, the first municipal elections since 2005 were successfully held in the West Bank. Elections in the Gaza Strip did not take place, since Hamas authorities did not allow the Central Elections Commission to carry out voter registration and related electoral preparations. In February, Hamas allowed the Commission to conduct registration in Gaza for eventual national elections, but Israel banned the transfer of registration forms from Gaza to Ramallah. The Commission used scanners to digitally transfer the data, and the Head of the Commission handed the updated voter register to President Abbas on 12 April and informed him that the Commission was technically ready to organize any election once it was so decided. On 6 June, following the resignation of the Prime Minister, Salam Fayyad, a new Palestinian Cabinet was sworn in under the leadership of the newly appointed Prime Minister, Rami Hamdallah, to carry on the administration of the State's affairs until a national consensus government was formed. Meanwhile, a series of reconciliation meetings between Fatah and Hamas, mediated by Egypt, did not yield tangible results.

45. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) reported in September 2013 that, with the persistence of Israeli restrictions on mobility in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, gross domestic product had decelerated and poverty and unemployment had increased in 2012. The Palestinian fiscal crisis had deepened, owing to less aid and the withholding of Palestinian revenue by Israel. The crisis was exacerbated by the leakage of Palestinian fiscal revenues from smuggling and lost tax on imports from Israel, estimated at $300 million annually.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

46. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide extensive services and emergency assistance to the Palestine refugees in all its fields of operations in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Agency continued to experience a grave and recurrent financial crisis, which threatened its ability to sustain its services, continue its emergency assistance programmes and complete essential projects, such as the reconstruction of the Nahr El Bared camp in Lebanon. In the light of the escalating conflict in the Syrian Arab Republic, the Agency is particularly concerned about the more than 500,000 Palestine refugees who have lived in the Syrian Arab Republic for decades. As of July 2013, more than two thirds of the community had been displaced, with approximately 235,000 persons displaced inside the Syrian Arab Republic, 92,000 displaced persons in Lebanon and over 8,000 displaced persons in Jordan. As the conflict has become increasingly violent and indiscriminate, it has exacted a heavy toll on Palestine refugees, with most of the 12 Palestine refugee camps in the Syrian Arab Republic being severely affected.

47. While the Government of Israel undertook some measures to ease the movement of goods into and out of the Gaza Strip, the blockade persisted and those measures fell well short of the level required to meet the needs of the Palestine refugee population and the Agency's reconstruction requirements, or to ensure the revival of the economy which would reduce the dependency on UNRWA services. The Committee again expresses its appreciation for the dedication of UNRWA and its entire staff to its mission and calls upon all donors to increase contributions, particularly in the light of prevailing crises and needs, to ensure the continuity of needed services and the well-being of approximately 5 million registered Palestine refugees under the mandate of the Agency.

48. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to respond to the development needs in the State of Palestine. In support of the Palestinian Authority's National Development Plan and Statehood Agenda, UNDP proceeded with the implementation of its consolidated plan, "Development for Freedom: Empowered Lives, a Resilient Nation 2012-2014". The three-year plan focuses on democratic governance and the rule of law, economic empowerment and private sector investment, environment and management of natural resources, as well as public and social infrastructure. In support of Palestinian statehood, the UNDP plan places empowerment, resilience and sustainability at the centre of its operation and focuses on three priority areas: the Gaza Strip, East Jerusalem and Area C, where the needs are the greatest.

49. The Committee also remained appreciative of the important work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the consolidated appeal for 2013 focused on delivering humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

1. Action taken in the Security Council

50. During the reporting period, the Security Council continued to monitor the situation on the ground and the efforts to resume Israeli-Palestinian peace talks. It held monthly briefings throughout the year under the agenda item entitled “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question”.

51. During the open debates at the Council held on 15 October 2012, 23 January, 24 April and 23 July 2013, the Chair of the Committee delivered statements (see S/PV.6847, Resumption 1; S/PV.6906, Resumption 1; S/PV.6950, Resumption 1; S/PV.7007).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

52. On 16 November 2012, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the deadly military attacks by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Gaza Strip (GA/PAL/1247). On 6 December, the Bureau issued a statement on Israel’s illegal settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1252). Furthermore, on 16 April 2013, the Bureau issued a statement on the plight of Palestinian prisoners held by Israel (GA/PAL/1263).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 67/20 and 67/21

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

53. At its periodic meetings at Headquarters in New York, the Committee, among other things, was briefed on recent developments by the Chief Palestinian Negotiator, Saeb Erakat, and organized a screening of a documentary film on the life of the late Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. Also, the Committee was briefed by members of the jury of the Russell Tribunal on Palestine on the outcome of its session held in New York in October 2012.

2. Committee meeting outside Headquarters

54. At the invitation of the Government of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, the Committee convened a special meeting in Caracas on 17 and 18 April 2013 to discuss the implications of General Assembly resolution 67/19 and initiatives to promote worldwide and regional solidarity with the Palestinian people. The meeting was opened by the Chair of the Committee, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the State of Palestine, Riad Al Malki, and the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, Elías Jaua Milano. The meeting adopted a declaration and a comprehensive programme of action in support of the Palestinian people and their rights and legitimate national aspirations.

3. Programme of international meetings and conferences

55. In the period under review, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee in 2013:

(a) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, FAO headquarters, Rome, 27 and 28 February, on the challenges and opportunities in the new reality of a State under occupation;

(b) United Nations Meeting of Consultations with Civil Society Organizations active on the Question of Palestine, FAO headquarters, Rome, 1 March;

(c) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, United Nations Conference Centre, Addis Ababa, 29 and 30 April, on African solidarity with the Palestinian people;

(d) United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Beijing, 18 and 19 June, on collective international engagement towards a two-State solution.

56. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. Detailed information about the meetings is being issued as publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat and available on the "Question of Palestine" website maintained by the Division.

57. In connection with the above-mentioned events, the Committee delegation held meetings with senior officials at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Italy on the margins of the seminar held in Rome. In Beijing, the Committee delegation met with high-level officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of China, including the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Wang Yi, and the Middle East Envoy, Wu Sike.

4. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

58. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the European Union, the League of Arab States, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices.

5. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

59. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Representatives of civil society participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee, including the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2012. The meetings provided civil society representatives with an opportunity to discuss the situation on the ground and their programmes in support of the Palestinian people and to further advance the coordination of their activities. The Committee was appreciative of the work done by civil society organizations and encouraged them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at realizing a two-State solution.

60. The Committee has reactivated its Working Group and mandated it to implement the Committee's programme of cooperation with civil society. The Chair of the Working Group is the representative of Malta.

61. During the reporting period, eight civil society organizations were accredited to the Committee.

62. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a civil society page (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>) on the "Question of Palestine" website as a tool for the exchange of information and networking and for cooperation between civil society and the Committee.

63. The Division maintained a Facebook page to disseminate information about the work of the Committee, and the United Nations as a whole, on the question of Palestine. In addition, the Division continued to publish the periodic online bulletin NGO Action News, reaching out to more than 1,000 civil society organizations around the world, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives.

Parliaments and interparliamentary organizations

64. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Representatives of parliaments and interparliamentary organizations participated in international events organized by the Committee during 2013. In particular, three Members of the Palestinian Legislative Council, one Member of the Israeli Knesset and a former Knesset Member participated as speakers in the international meeting held in Beijing.

6. Research, monitoring and publications

65. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination, including through the Internet:

(a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;

(b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine based on media reports and other sources;

(c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;

(d) Special bulletin and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;

(f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

7. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

66. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and the “Question of Palestine” website. That included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system to ensure the uninterrupted presence of UNISPAL (<http://unispal.un.org>) on the Internet and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old United Nations and related documents. In addition, steps continued to be taken to enhance the user-friendliness and usefulness of UNISPAL, by creating a focus page on the status of Palestine at the United Nations in the light of its admission as a non-member observer State, continuing to provide titles to documents in French and incorporating additional multimedia content. RSS and Twitter feeds continued to alert users about newly posted materials.

8. Training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine

67. The Division conducted the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine. Two staff members of the Ministry of National Economy participated in a three-week training programme at the United Nations Office at Geneva during the sixtieth session of the Trade and Development Board, from 16 September to 4 October 2013, where they familiarized themselves with the work of UNCTAD, including on trade facilitation and foreign direct investment. They also attended briefings on the work of other United Nations entities, including the Human Rights Council, the World Health Organization and the World Trade Organization. In addition, two staff members of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs are in the process of completing a three-month training programme at United Nations Headquarters in New York held from 11 September to 27 November 2013, in order to familiarize themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies, including the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council.

9. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

68. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 29 November 2012 at Headquarters in New York and the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna. At Headquarters, in addition to a special meeting of the Committee, an art exhibit entitled “Palestine: memories, dreams, perseverance” was organized under the auspices of the Committee, in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations and the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations information centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

Chapter VI

69. The Department of Public Information, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 67/22, continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine. In doing so, it strove to enhance dialogue and understanding, while sensitizing public opinion to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process.

70. To mark the 2012 observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November, the Department widely disseminated the Secretary-General's message in the six official languages, while the United Nations information centres in several cities translated the message into the local languages and posted it on their social media accounts. Commemorative events and activities were organized at United Nations information centres around the world, with the support of the Department.

71. The Department's annual training programme for Palestinian journalists held at United Nations Headquarters from 5 November to 7 December 2012 focused, for the first time, on online journalism and digital media. Four male and four female journalists were selected to attend from the Gaza Strip, the West Bank and East Jerusalem. The group was briefed by senior United Nations officials and attended meetings of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee). They also met with leaders of the digital media industry from Google, Twitter, Tumblr, the Huffington Post, the British Broadcasting Corporation, Al Jazeera and Reuters, among others.

72. The Department also used all of its information outlets and products, including digital media platforms, to highlight the broad range of developments and issues related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process. The multilingual United Nations News Centre portal covered the subject extensively, with its English and French language versions carrying more than 200 related stories and the Arabic, Chinese, Russian and Spanish versions providing further coverage. The Department also produced 108 press releases on the question of Palestine in English and French, which included summaries of formal meetings and press conferences, as well as statements by the Secretary-General and other United Nations officials.

73. Reporting on the work of alleviating the plight of Palestinians carried out by the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, UNRWA and other United Nations entities was also part of the extensive coverage provided by United Nations Radio in the six official languages of the United Nations and other languages.

74. Live television feeds from meetings at the United Nations, and news and feature programmes produced by United Nations Television and Video, were distributed by a variety of means and platforms, including the UNifeed satellite distribution system, United Nations Webcast and the United Nations channel on the Time Warner cable network in the New York City area. UNifeed packaged more than 20 Palestine-related stories during the reporting period for broadcasters around the world, including reports from the field by UNRWA, UNICEF and the World Food Programme, and coverage of statements and activities by senior United Nations officials.

75. United Nations Photo staff covered related events at Headquarters and in the field, including the visit by the Secretary-General to the West Bank on 21 November 2012, the General Assembly vote on the status of Palestine and the daily life of Palestinians, especially children and youth.

76. The Guided Tours Unit maintained a revised tour route at Headquarters, which includes a stop at the permanent exhibit entitled “The question of Palestine and the United Nations”. During the reporting period, approximately 148,000 visitors took the guided tour. In addition, a total of 341 persons from seven groups of scholars, students and officials were briefed on the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process. The United Nations public inquiries team responded to 55 queries relating to the Middle East peace process.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

77. The Committee remains firmly convinced that a negotiated peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in all its aspects and an end to the Israeli occupation remain central to peace and stability throughout the volatile Middle East region and merit the close attention of the international community. To that end, the Committee concentrated its efforts on promoting international awareness of the issue, and the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, in particular their right to an independent and sovereign Palestinian State based on 1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital. The Committee urged the international community to step up its engagement for the resumption of final status negotiations, within a clear framework based on internationally recognized parameters; promoted international action against obstacles in their path, such as the illegal Israeli settlement enterprise; encouraged solidarity with the Palestinians and their State; and engaged with diverse constituencies in support of peace. In its programme of work, the Committee analysed the ramifications of the new reality of a State under occupation. It actively sought to incorporate lessons learned from the history of anti-colonial and anti-apartheid struggles of other countries, in particular in Africa. It continued to mobilize international support for the Palestinian State-building programme, while highlighting the massive economic costs of the Israeli occupation. It urged increased donor support for the agencies of the United Nations system, in particular UNRWA, providing vital humanitarian support for the Palestinian people.

78. The Committee welcomed the admission of Palestine as a non-member observer State by the General Assembly, while calling upon all Member States to extend full diplomatic recognition to it. The Committee is of the view that the vote in the General Assembly constituted an important step towards the realization of the two-State solution, gave a new urgency to the resumption of the peace process, and vested the State of Palestine with important additional rights to join international legal frameworks and to contribute to the work of the United Nations system as a whole. The Committee stands ready to support Palestinian initiatives in this regard at the appropriate time. The Security Council should revisit the issue of the full membership of the State of Palestine in the United Nations in the light of the General Assembly vote.

79. The Committee condemned the illegal retaliatory measures undertaken by Israel following the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 67/19, including the withholding of Palestinian revenues and the acceleration of the settlement campaign, which raised tensions on the ground and jeopardized Palestinian institutional and socioeconomic development. The Committee calls upon the donors to institute a financial safety net to prevent future damage to Palestinian institutions, the development of which donors have generously supported over the years. The Committee condemned other illegal measures by Israel, the occupying Power, such as the construction of the separation wall, the use of excessive force against Palestinian protesters, arrest raids, prisoner abuse, the continuation of the Gaza blockade and hundreds of checkpoints throughout the West Bank and measures that stymie development and cause the forced displacement of Palestinian civilians, particularly from East Jerusalem and Area C. The Committee raised international awareness of the abusive practices experienced by the thousands of Palestinian prisoners held by Israel, including by prisoners undertaking hunger strikes, minors and those held without trial, and called for their prompt release and reintegration into Palestinian society.

80. The Committee remained deeply troubled by repeated bouts of violence. It condemned all attacks against civilians, in particular the military operation launched by Israel against Gaza in November 2012, the rocket fire from Gaza against Israeli civilian targets, settler violence, and the killings of unarmed protesters by Israeli forces. It calls upon the parties to adhere to the terms of the Gaza ceasefire agreement. It further calls upon the Security Council and the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to act urgently to uphold international humanitarian law and guarantee the protection of civilians.

81. The Committee welcomes the vigorous international diplomacy by the United States, the Arab League, the Secretary-General and many world leaders, which laid the basis for the resumption of direct negotiations between the Israelis and the Palestinians. The Committee salutes the demonstrated commitment of the Palestinian leadership to a peaceful settlement of the conflict, which should be reciprocated by the Israeli side. The Committee is looking forward to serious negotiations on the basis of pre-1967 borders which resolve all outstanding issues within the envisaged time frame, leading to the complete Israeli withdrawal from the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the independence of a truly sovereign, contiguous, viable and democratic State of Palestine. Sustained engagement and support by the international community, including a revitalized Quartet, is vital to ensure that the parties negotiate in good faith, live up to their commitments, and refrain from steps that jeopardize negotiations. Stepped-up international assistance and a tangible rollback of the measures of occupation are required to build popular support for negotiations. The current diplomatic initiative may represent the final window of opportunity to achieve a negotiated two-State solution on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet Road Map. The Committee is concerned in this regard by continued Israeli settlement announcements that threaten to derail negotiations. The Committee also stresses the importance of Palestinian unity under the legitimate leadership of President Abbas to secure a comprehensive peace.

82. The Committee welcomed the findings and recommendations of the international fact-finding mission on Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which highlighted the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, in particular in respect of settlements. It further welcomes in this regard the recently adopted European Union guidelines that prohibit funding by European Union institutions for Israeli entities connected with the settlements, as an overdue first step towards fulfilling obligations under international law. This measure should be followed up by further international action against settlements.

83. The Committee has consistently supported the Palestinian State-building and reform agenda. It is concerned that the accomplishments are now endangered owing to the chronic financial crisis and calls upon donors to meet their prior commitments and to provide additional aid to avert further deterioration. The Committee remains convinced, however, that sustainable economic development cannot take root under the existing regime of Israeli occupation.

84. The Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights will continue through their mandated activities to generate heightened international awareness of the question of Palestine, as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In this connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support on the part of the international community for the programme's objectives, as evidenced by the number of adopted resolutions, international meetings and conferences, commemorations of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People and increased membership of the Committee; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the number of civil society conferences, public forums, meetings and consultations between the Committee and civil society organizations; and (c) an increase in international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the increased number of visits to the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) and other information materials on the "Question of Palestine" website. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Government, carried out annually by the Division, has proved its usefulness, as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee strongly recommends that this important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, further enhanced.

85. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2014, to be implemented by the Division, on widening international support for the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The programme will also focus on the creation of a favourable atmosphere for the success of the resumed permanent status negotiations. The Committee intends to mobilize increased international scrutiny of the developments on the ground, in particular settlement activities, and will emphasize responsibility and promote action by the international community to put an end to all illegal Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Committee will examine the legal ramifications of the new international status of the State of Palestine, and will also continue to call attention to the plight of the Palestinian political prisoners in Israeli jails and urge a resolution of their plight.

86. The Committee will analyse lessons learned and the feedback received from participants in its events and adjust their format and substance, as appropriate. It will strive to involve prominent international personalities and experts and the representatives of vulnerable populations, such as women and refugees, in its events, while giving due regard to gender balance.

87. The Committee will continue to enrich the format of its regular meetings. It will invite internationally renowned personalities to brief the Committee and the wider United Nations membership. The Committee also considers that the round-table meetings have proved particularly useful in generating practical proposals for action in the United Nations and beyond and will continue to utilize this format.

88. The Committee will continue to mobilize support for Palestinian institution-building and all other efforts to support and enhance the viability of the State of Palestine. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution to all permanent status issues, including the question of refugees, based on principles of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions, including resolution 194 (III). The Committee wishes to contribute to efforts towards ending incitement on both sides, as well as to promote peace education. It will pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and youth and their organizations. The Committee also wishes to promote Palestinian reconciliation.

89. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people. A comprehensive peace will take root only if the relevant civil societies strongly demand it of their political leaderships. Special efforts are needed to revitalize the peace camp in Israel. The Committee lauds the courageous advocacy actions of countless activists, including eminent personalities and parliamentarians, who participate in demonstrations against the wall, try to break the siege of Gaza and keep their home constituencies informed about the harsh realities of life under occupation. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine. The Committee believes that the recommendations it adopted during the reporting period and its reactivated Working Group will help in building stronger partnerships with civil society. The Committee appreciates the support it receives from the Secretariat in this regard. The Committee encourages its members and observers to mobilize their respective civil societies at the national level, in particular the youth, and to establish solidarity committees with the State of Palestine.

90. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of the two-State solution and uphold their obligations under international law, including humanitarian and human rights law.

91. The Committee will reach out to all regional groups at the United Nations with a view to expanding its membership. It will actively work to organize more thematic debates on the question of Palestine in various United Nations forums. The Committee intends to request that the General Assembly proclaim an International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Committee believes that its increased workload should be adequately supported by an expanded Bureau.

92. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support, the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, in support of the Committee's communication strategy. The Division should pay special attention to continued development of the "Question of Palestine" portal, including the addition of a mobile-device-friendly version, and the use of web-based social information networks, such as Facebook, Twitter and YouTube. It should also continue to develop the UNISPAL document collection by reflecting current issues and events, as well as by continuing to digitize and upload historical documents and to add user-friendly search features. The Division should continue to collaborate with the United Nations Libraries at Headquarters and at Geneva in the search for historic documents. It should further enhance the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Government, paying special attention to the programme's gender balance, and optimize the use of resources to allow the maximum number of participants possible. Voluntary contributions from members and observers in line with their capacity are to be encouraged to put the programme on a solid financial footing. The Committee also commends its members and observers which instituted training programmes at the national level to build Palestinian capacity.

93. The Division should continue to organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

94. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public of the relevant issues. It requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

95. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and their leadership and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Letter of transmittal

[7 October 2014]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 68/12 of 26 November 2013.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2013 to 6 October 2014.

(Signed) Fodé Seck
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. At the outset, the reporting period was marked by efforts by the international community to help to advance the Israeli-Palestinian peace negotiations, mediated by the United States of America, that had started in July 2013. The talks, however, continued to be undermined by Israel's promotion of plans and tenders for the construction of thousands of new units in illegal settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. On 28 March 2014, Israel postponed the release of the last batch of "pre-Oslo" Palestinian prisoners, breaching the United States-brokered agreement between the two sides. Soon thereafter, the Government of the State of Palestine deposited instruments of accession to the Geneva Conventions and to a number of international treaties — a step that had been postponed during the negotiations. Israel reacted with the announcement of hundreds more settlement units. On 23 April, the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and Hamas reached a deal to end the division that began in 2007 and form a national consensus Government. While the international community welcomed the Palestinian reconciliation, Israel rejected it and suspended the peace talks on 24 April.

2. Soon thereafter, the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, rapidly deteriorated. Israel exploited the abduction and killing on 12 June of three Israeli teenagers studying in illegal settlements in the West Bank in order to launch a massive military operation in the West Bank. Israeli occupying forces carried out hundreds of military raids, killed six Palestinian civilians, and injured and arrested hundreds of others during the operation.

3. Tensions surrounding the Gaza Strip increased in June after Israel's targeted assassination of a Palestinian militant and an accompanying child and as a result of the Israeli military operations in the West Bank. On 7 July, Israel launched "Operation Protective Edge", with the claimed objective of stopping Palestinian rocket fire from Gaza. During the 50-day operation, Israel killed 2,189 Palestinians, 67 per cent of them civilians, including 513 children and 269 women, and injured more than 11,000. Sixty-six Israeli soldiers were killed, as well as five civilians, including one foreign national. The homes of more than 100,000 Palestinians in Gaza were destroyed or severely damaged. The massive destruction worsened the living conditions of the 1.8 million people living in Gaza, which was already at a crisis point owing to the Israeli blockade, now in its eighth year. The Committee has repeatedly condemned the excessive and disproportionate use of force by Israel, the occupying Power, targeting Palestinian civilians and infrastructure and has repeatedly called for the Israeli blockade to be lifted. It has also condemned the indiscriminate rocket fire from Gaza targeting Israeli cities and civilian infrastructure.

4. Israel continued its frequent military raids and incursions in the West Bank, resulting in the killing and injuring of Palestinians, including children. Thousands of Palestinians, including women and children, were arrested during the reporting period. This is in addition to the more than 5,000 Palestinians who remain in Israeli jails and detention centres. Unarmed Palestinian civilians continued to be subjected to the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces during demonstrations against the occupation. Israel continued to expand its illegal settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and approved thousands more new settlement units.

Ten years after the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice was rendered, the construction of the separation wall and its associated regime still continue, fragmenting the Palestinian land, obstructing movement and access, further isolating East Jerusalem and harming the socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people. During the reporting period, the situation in occupied East Jerusalem remained alarming, with increased numbers of incursions by extremist Israelis into the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound and acts of incitement and provocation, as well as continued land confiscations, excavations near holy sites, house demolitions, revocations of identity cards and evictions of Palestinian residents.

5. Palestinian State-building and institution-building efforts continued but were undermined by restrictions and obstacles imposed by Israel on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which continued to prevent the normal movement of persons and goods, economic activity and sustained development and growth. After the State of Palestine deposited the instruments of accession in April, its accession to the Geneva Conventions took effect immediately. Seven of the nine core human rights treaties and one of the substantive protocols have entered into force.

6. During the reporting period, the activities of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and its Bureau focused on bringing the attention of the international community to the 2014 International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, as proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 68/12, with the objective of mobilizing wide support for ending the Israeli occupation and realizing the two-State solution, in order for the Palestinian people to achieve its inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination. The Committee monitored the situation on the ground and the political developments, implemented its programme of international meetings and conferences, and held consultations with representatives of Governments, national parliaments and interparliamentary organizations, as well as civil society. The Committee continued to reiterate its position of principle that a permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could be reached only by ending the Israeli occupation that began in 1967, achieving the independence of the State of Palestine on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital and achieving a just and agreed solution to the issue of Palestine refugees on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

7. An international meeting organized by the Committee in Quito in March focused on the recognition of the State of Palestine by countries in the region and support for the two-State solution. In April, the Committee held a round table in Geneva on legal aspects of the question of Palestine. This was followed by an international meeting on the question of Jerusalem, held in Ankara in May. The meeting was organized in cooperation with the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and the Government of Turkey. A seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people, held in Nairobi, focused on solidifying the economic underpinnings of an independent State. Also, the Committee organized a series of events within the framework of the International Year, including a joint meeting with the League of Arab States in Cairo, a special meeting to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the wall, high-level briefings and film screenings at Headquarters in New York.

Mandate of the Committee

8. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. Further information is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat at <http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/com.htm>.

9. On 26 November 2013, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 68/12), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (resolution 68/13) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (resolution 68/14). The Assembly also adopted resolution 68/15, entitled "Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine".

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

10. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

11. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation.

12. At its 357th meeting, on 16 January 2014, the Committee re-elected Abdou Salam Diallo (Senegal) as Chair, and Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan), Rodolfo Reyes Rodríguez (Cuba), Desra Percaya (Indonesia), Wilfried Emvula (Namibia) and María Rubiales de Chamorro (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs, and Christopher Grima (Malta) as Rapporteur. At its 364th meeting on 3 October, the Committee elected Fodé Seck (Senegal) as the new Chair, replacing Abdou Salam Diallo, who had been assigned by his Government to another post.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

13. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings, gave briefings, made observations and developed proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Political developments

14. The Israeli-Palestinian peace talks mediated by the United States, which started in July 2013, were repeatedly thwarted by Israel's continued expansion of settlements and other illegal measures in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Israeli settlement monitoring organization, Peace Now, reported that, during the nine-month period following the beginning of the talks in July 2013, the Government of Israel promoted plans for the construction of at least 13,851 housing units in settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem — an average of 50 units per day.

15. On 28 March 2014, Israel postponed the release of a fourth and final batch of 26 pre-Oslo Palestinian prisoners, which had been agreed under the United States-brokered deal that led to the restart of negotiations. On 1 April, the State of Palestine submitted accession instruments to 21 international treaties and conventions. Israel reacted with the announcement of 708 reissued tenders for illegal settlement construction in East Jerusalem on the same day. On 23 April, PLO and Hamas achieved reconciliation and agreed that a national consensus Government would be formed within five weeks and elections held no later than six months after the Government's formation. In retaliation, the following day, the Israeli Cabinet took the decision to suspend the peace negotiations.

16. On 2 June, President Abbas swore in the Government of national consensus headed by Prime Minister Rami Hamdallah. Israel publicly declared its opposition to the unity Government and reacted with the announcement of the construction of thousands of new settler homes, while the international community, including the United Nations Secretary-General and the European Union, welcomed the consensus Government and the United States expressed its readiness to work with it.

17. During his address to the General Assembly in September, President Abbas stated that the State of Palestine and the Arab Group were preparing for the introduction of a draft Security Council resolution affirming the goal of ending the Israeli occupation and achieving the two-State solution within a specified time frame.

Security

18. On 12 June, three Israeli teenagers were abducted and killed in the West Bank on their way back home to Israel from yeshivas in two illegal settlements. Israeli occupying forces launched large-scale, violent military operations throughout the West Bank, during which they killed six Palestinian civilians, including a 15-year-old boy, and arrested hundreds of others, mostly alleged members of Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad, including over 50 Palestinians previously released as part of the exchange deal for the Israeli soldier, Gilad Shalit. Occupying forces also imposed further stringent movement restrictions, which disrupted the access by Palestinians to services, markets and workplaces, resulting in significant economic losses. On 30 June, occupying forces found the bodies of the three teenagers near Hebron. In retaliation, a group of Israelis abducted a 16-year-old Palestinian boy from East Jerusalem and burned him alive on 2 July. Widespread protests and violent clashes followed throughout East Jerusalem and spread to the West Bank, as a result of which nearly 570 Palestinian civilians were injured by Israeli forces, including 31 by live ammunition.

19. The November 2012 ceasefire understanding between Israel and Hamas has gradually weakened since December 2013, and tensions in and around Gaza increased on 11 June, when the Israeli Air Force targeted and killed an alleged militant, along with a 10-year-old child accompanying him, in Beit Lahiya in the northern Gaza Strip. Palestinian factions responded by firing projectiles at southern Israel, to which the Israeli military responded with air strikes targeting alleged military installations in Gaza. Tensions escalated after the abduction of the three Israeli youths in the West Bank and subsequent Israeli military action.

20. On 7 July, Israel launched a large military operation in the Gaza Strip, code-named "Operation Protective Edge", with the claimed objective of stopping the Palestinian firing of rockets at southern Israel and destroying the military infrastructure of Hamas and other armed groups. Excessive aerial and navy bombardment and ground operations throughout the Gaza Strip resulted in heavy Palestinian casualties, mostly civilians. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the Israeli military used 5,830 missiles in 4,028 air raids, as well as 16,507 artillery and tank projectiles and 3,494 naval shells aimed at targets in the Gaza Strip. During the offensive, 2,189 Palestinians were killed, 1,486 of them identified as civilians, including 513 children and 269 women, and 11,100 were injured, including 3,374 children, 2,088 women and 410 elderly persons. It is estimated that up to 1,000 of the injured children will have a permanent disability and up to 1,500 orphaned children will need sustained support from the child protection and welfare sectors. Over 1,000 homes were directly targeted by Israeli air strikes and 18,000 housing units were totally destroyed or severely damaged, leaving approximately 108,000 people homeless. At the height of the hostilities, an estimated 485,000 people, 28 per cent of the population of Gaza, were internally displaced, including 290,000 who took shelter in schools administered by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA). On three occasions, Israeli occupying forces directly hit UNRWA schools, with full knowledge that they were being used as shelters for displaced persons, killing 45 Palestinians, including 17 children, and injuring 317. An estimated 118 UNRWA installations sustained damage.

21. During the Israeli offensive, 1 hospital and 7 clinics were totally destroyed and 16 hospitals and 51 clinics were damaged. Fourteen ambulances were completely destroyed and 33 others were partially damaged. The majority of the Gaza population has lost its productive assets: 419 businesses and workshops were damaged, with 128 completely destroyed, further decimating the economy and resulting in the unemployment of another 30,000 people. Israeli attacks also caused substantial direct damage to Gaza's 17,000 hectares of cropland as well as much of its agricultural infrastructure. As at late August, around 7,000 unexploded ordnance were estimated to be present, threatening the lives of both civilians and humanitarian workers. As at 6 October, the ceasefire agreed on 26 August largely continued to hold. The Gaza power plant damaged in an Israeli air strike on 29 July remained inoperable and electricity outages of 18 hours a day continued in most areas across Gaza. The Government of the State of Palestine estimated that rebuilding Gaza would cost $7.8 billion.

22. Human rights organizations have expressed serious concerns regarding incidents where civilians or civilian objects were directly hit by Israeli air strikes, in circumstances where there was allegedly no rocket fire or armed group activity in the close vicinity. Human Rights Watch reported several incidents in which Israeli soldiers opened fire on fleeing civilians. Amnesty International reported that there was mounting evidence that Israel had launched apparently deliberate attacks against hospitals and health professionals, which left six medics dead. On 23 July, the Human Rights Council adopted a resolution addressing the crisis and deciding, inter alia, to dispatch an independent, international commission of inquiry to investigate all violations of international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in particular in Gaza, since 13 June (resolution S-21/1).

23. On the Israeli side, 66 soldiers, one security coordinator, four civilians, including a four-year-old, and one foreign national were killed, and some 130 civilians were injured during the Gaza operation. Palestinian armed groups reportedly fired 4,844 rockets and 1,734 mortars at Israel.

24. Prior to 7 July, Israeli forces killed 22 Palestinians and injured more than 200 in the Gaza Strip during the reporting period in incidents involving air strikes and live fire at Palestinians near the border fence. One Israeli repairing the fence between Gaza and Israel was killed by a Palestinian sniper. In the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, Israeli occupying forces killed 53 Palestinians and injured more than 4,800 during the reporting period (as at 29 September), including during clashes with demonstrators. Five Israeli civilians were killed by Palestinians in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

Settlements

25. Israel, the occupying Power, continued and intensified its illegal settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, which further diminished the viability of the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders. On 3 March, the Israel Central Bureau of Statistics stated that construction in the settlements had more than doubled in 2013 compared with 2012, from 1,133 to 2,534 housing units.

26. During the reporting period, the following were announced, approved, advanced or issued by Israel, or disclosed by watchdog/media organizations: the construction of 860 housing units in the “Ariel”, “Ma’aleh Adumim”, “Givat Ze’ev”, “Betar Illit”, “Karnei Shomron” and “Elkana” settlements and 2,500 other new units throughout the West Bank (31 October); tenders for 283 units in “Elkana”, 114 in “Ma’aleh Adumim”, 196 in “Karnei Shomron”, 102 in “Givat Zeev”, 18 in “Ariel”, 80 in “Adam” and 238 in “Beitar Illit” (3 November); plans to build 19,786 units in the West Bank (12 November); the construction of 829 new settler homes in the West Bank (25 November); plans for 250 units in “Ofra” and 22 in “Karnei Shomron” (5 January 2014); the construction of 801 units in the West Bank (10 January); plans to build 381 homes in “Givat Ze’ev” (21 January); plans for 256 units in “Nofei Prat” and 5 in “Ariel” (22 January); tenders for 900 units in the West Bank (4 June); the unfreezing of planning processes for 1,800 units that had been suspended (5 June); plans for 1,083 settler homes in the West Bank as part of its response to the newly formed Palestinian unity Government (week of 13 June); tenders for 283 new homes for “Elkana” (5 September). On 13 April, the Government of Israel retroactively approved measures for “legalizing” a settlement outpost at “Gush Etzion”, appropriating private Palestinian land. On 31 August, Israel declared four square kilometres of land west of Bethlehem as State land, unprecedented in its scope since the 1980's.

27. In Occupied East Jerusalem, the following were announced, approved, advanced or issued by Israel, or disclosed by watchdog/media organizations: the building of 58 housing units in the "Pisgat Ze'ev" settlement in East Jerusalem (9 October); plans for the construction of 80 units in "Har Homa" (10 October); the construction of 1,500 units in "Ramat Shlomo" (30 October); tenders for 311 units in "Gilo", 387 in "Ramat Shlomo" and 130 in "Har Homa" (3 November); 397 units in "Gilo" (4 November); plans to build 4,000 units in the City (12 November); the construction of 1,076 units in the City (10 January 2014); the construction of 1,800 units in "Armon" (28 January); the construction of 558 homes in "Har Homa", "Neve Yaakov" and "Pisgat Ze'ev" (5 February); the construction of a yeshiva in Sheikh Jarrah (12 February); the construction of 184 units in the City (19 March); tenders for 708 units in "Gilo" (1 April); the construction of 50 units "Har Homa" (26 May); a plan to build a "national park" on the land of the villages of Al-Issawiya and Al-Tur (27 May); tenders for 560 units in the City (4 June); the construction of 172 apartments in "Har Homa" (18 June); a plan featuring 2,200 housing units and 130 hectares for infrastructure in the Jabel Mukaber neighbourhood (3 September); and a plan to build 2,610 units in "Givat Hamatos" (24 September).

Settler-related incidents

28. Settler-related incidents in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, including acts of terror, provocation and destruction by settlers, continued to be a source of serious concern. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as at August 2014, there had been at least 92 incidents leading to Palestinian casualties and 155 incidents leading to damage to Palestinian property or land during the reporting period. In 2013, 10,142 trees were reported burned, uprooted, or otherwise vandalized, including in areas adjacent to settlements, compared with 8,259 trees in 2012.

Jerusalem

29. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 35 per cent of the land in occupied East Jerusalem has been confiscated for Israeli settlement use, and only 13 per cent of East Jerusalem is zoned for Palestinian construction, much of which is already built-up. At least a third of all Palestinian homes in East Jerusalem lack Israeli-issued building permits, which are difficult to obtain, potentially placing over 90,000 residents at risk of displacement, which has a negative socioeconomic and psychological impact on the Palestinian residents of the City. Since 1967, the Israeli authorities have demolished some 2,000 houses in East Jerusalem. Several hundred Palestinian residents of East Jerusalem are also at risk of forced displacement owing to settler activities, in particular in the Old City, Silwan and Sheikh Jarrah.

30. Tensions were heightened by increasing numbers of incursions by Israeli extremists and political leaders, including Government officials, into the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound. Those provocations led to clashes with Palestinian worshippers, in which some were injured, tear-gassed and detained. On 25 February, the Knesset held a debate regarding attempts to impose Israeli sovereignty on Al-Haram Al-Sharif.

Demolitions and displacements

31. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as at 29 September, Israel had carried out the demolition of at least 515 Palestinian-owned structures in Area C in the West Bank and 61 in East Jerusalem during the reporting period, displacing at least 975 and 164 Palestinians, respectively. On 1 July, the Israeli High Court of Justice sanctioned the punitive demolition of parts of the house of the family of a Palestinian from Hebron suspected of killing an Israeli policeman in April 2014.

Water

32. According to a report issued by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) in March 2014, groundwater in Gaza is being drawn at a higher rate than natural replenishment, and sea water from the Mediterranean has infiltrated the groundwater, raising the salinity to unsafe levels. Sewage and agricultural fertilizer infiltration have also contributed to water contamination with high levels of chloride and nitrates, in some areas as high as six times the World Health Organization (WHO) limit. More than 90 per cent of the water extracted from the territory's sole aquifer has been found to be unsafe for human consumption. Over-abstraction of groundwater could render the aquifer unusable by 2016. Since the tap water is often saline and undrinkable, more than four out of five Gazans buy their drinking water from unregulated, private vendors, a heavy burden on already impoverished families. Some families are spending as much as a third of their household income on water. An estimated four fifths of the water sold by private vendors is contaminated.

33. According to the Palestinian Water Authority, the water distribution network in Gaza suffered $34.4 million in damage as a result of the Israeli military offensive in July and August 2014: 11 water wells were completely destroyed and 15 partially destroyed; 17 kilometres of water supply networks were completely destroyed; two desalination units were completely destroyed and four partially damaged; 12 pumping sewage stations were severely damaged and 4 wastewater treatment stations partially destroyed.

34. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, in the West Bank, more than 70 per cent of the Palestinian communities located entirely or mostly in Area C are not connected to the water network and rely on tankered water at a vastly increased cost, and water consumption in some of these communities is as low as 20 litres per capita per day, one fifth of the WHO recommendation.

Women and children

35. The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) reported in August 2014 that the reproductive and maternal health situation in Gaza remained desperate. It estimated that nearly 46,000 women in Gaza were pregnant at the time of the Israeli military aggression, with 10,000 of them displaced as a result of the Israeli offensive. Maternity clinics were closed, as were a number of private maternity centres. Other facilities were overstrained and, in some, maternity beds were being used for the wounded. Shifa Hospital reported a 15 to 20 per cent increase in premature births, which were linked to the stress of the bombardments. Also, home deliveries were reportedly on the rise, increasing the risks for women and their babies.

36. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, at least 219 schools (141 Government and 75 UNRWA) in Gaza were damaged during the Israeli offensive, 22 of them so severely that they can no longer be used. Among those still standing, 103 were turned into collective shelters for some 330,000 displaced people, half of them children. Nearly 500,000 children could not return to school on 24 August, when the new academic year started. At least 373,000 children require direct and specialized psychological support. Children are showing symptoms of increasing distress, including bed-wetting, clinging to parents and nightmares. The education sector was already in crisis prior to the start of the Israeli operation, suffering from a shortage of almost 200 schools, with nearly 80 per cent of classes running double shifts to deal with the high number of students.

37. In East Jerusalem, there is also a chronic shortage of classrooms: 2,200 additional classrooms are required to accommodate Palestinian children, and many existing facilities are substandard or unsuitable.

Prisoners

38. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics and the Palestinian Ministry of Prisoners' Affairs reported in April that since 1967, Israel had arrested more than 805,000 Palestinians and 205 Palestinians had died in Israeli jails as a result of torture, denial of medical treatment or deliberate killing. According to the Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem, at the end of August, 5,505 Palestinian security detainees and prisoners were being held in Israeli prisons, including 473 administrative detainees and 201 minors. On 9 June, the Knesset gave initial approval to a law allowing force-feeding of Palestinian prisoners on hunger strike. On 24 June, 63 Palestinian prisoners agreed to suspend their two-month-old hunger strike in protest against Israel's use of administrative detention without charge or trial after reaching a deal with the Israeli authorities according to which their conditions were to be improved.

Palestinian State-building

39. On 2 April, the State of Palestine deposited its instruments of accession to the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 as well as a number of international treaties. The accession by the State of Palestine to the Geneva Conventions took effect immediately, and the following core human rights treaties and protocol have entered into force: International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities; International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination; Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment; Convention on the Rights of the Child; Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict.

40. In a report issued in September, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) stated that economic growth in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had declined from an average of about 11 per cent in 2010 and 2011 to a mere 1.5 per cent in 2013, the lowest rate since 2006, owing to the severe effects of the Israeli restrictions on the movement of Palestinian people and goods, pervasive uncertainty, the persistent fiscal crisis and gloomy economic horizons.

41. UNRWA continued to experience a grave and recurrent financial crisis, which threatened its ability to sustain its services, continue its emergency assistance programmes and complete essential projects. In the light of the escalating conflict in the Syrian Arab Republic, the Agency expressed particular concern about the more than 500,000 Palestine refugees who have lived in the country for decades. As at August, over 270,000 Palestine refugees were displaced within the Syrian Arab Republic, 53,070 in Lebanon and over 13,836 in Jordan. Some 65,000 Palestine refugees were in besieged areas, including 18,000 in Yarmouk, to which UNRWA has had only limited access since July 2013. A recent survey revealed that over 54,000 Palestinian refugee homes in the Syrian Arab Republic had been destroyed or damaged.

42. Prior to June, approximately 800,000 people in the Gaza Strip — almost half of the population — were receiving quarterly food aid rations from UNRWA. After the launch of the Israeli military operation, dozens of UNRWA schools were turned into shelters for hundreds of thousands of displaced people, and emergency food distribution was required to meet the needs of 1.2 million people. Eleven UNRWA staff members were killed in the line of duty during the Israeli offensive. In addition, thousands of refugee homes were destroyed by the occupying forces. The devastating conflict will have severe implications for the Agency's future work in Gaza.

43. The Committee again expresses its appreciation for the dedication of UNRWA and its entire staff to its mission and calls upon all donors to increase contributions to the Agency, in particular in the light of prevailing crises and needs, to ensure the continuity of needed services and the well-being of approximately 5 million registered Palestine refugees under the mandate of the Agency.

United Nations Development Programme/Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs

44. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to respond to the development needs in the State of Palestine. In support of the Palestinian Statehood agenda, UNDP proceeded with the implementation of a three-year plan focusing on democratic governance and the rule of law, economic empowerment and private sector investment, environment and management of natural resources, as well as public and social infrastructure. UNDP will also be responding to the destruction wrought by the Israeli military attacks in the Gaza Strip by enhancing livelihoods through emergency employment and leading early recovery activities to alleviate the suffering of the Gaza population, in spite of the blockade. UNDP continued to place empowerment, resilience and sustainability at the centre of its operation and focus on three priority areas: the Gaza Strip, East Jerusalem and Area C, where the needs are the greatest.

45. The Committee also remained appreciative of the important work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Committee calls upon all donors to increase contributions to the funding requirements of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, in particular to the Gaza Crisis Appeal.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/12

1. Action taken in the Security Council

46. During the open debates at the Security Council held on 22 October 2013, 20 January, 29 April and 22 July 2014, the Chair of the Committee delivered statements (see S/PV.7047; S/PV.7096, Resumption 1; S/PV.7164; S/PV.7222).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

47. On 7 November 2013, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on Israel's illegal settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1278). On 10 December, it issued a statement on the passing of Nelson Mandela (GA/PAL/1283). On 20 January 2014, the Bureau issued a statement on the deteriorating humanitarian situation in the Yarmouk refugee camp in the Syrian Arab Republic (GA/PAL/1286). On 5 March, it issued a statement on increased tensions in Occupied East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1287). On 4 June, the Bureau issued a statement welcoming the formation of the Palestinian national consensus Government (GA/PAL/1300). On 27 June, it issued a statement on Israel's massive military onslaught on the Palestinian civilian population in the West Bank (GA/PAL/1302). On 11 and 21 July, the Bureau issued statements condemning the Israeli military aggression in the Gaza Strip (GA/PAL/1310 and 1311).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 68/12 and 68/13

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

48. In its resolution 68/12 of 26 November 2013, the General Assembly proclaimed 2014 the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People and requested the Committee to organize related activities in cooperation with Governments, United Nations organizations, intergovernmental organizations and civil society organizations. In addition to its periodic meetings, the Committee organized the following events within the framework of the International Year:

(a) Screening of the documentary film Where Should the Birds Fly?, followed by a discussion, 20 January;

(b) Screening of the Academy Award-nominated documentary film 5 Broken Cameras, followed by a discussion, 19 February;

(c) Briefing by a representative of Defence for Children International Palestine, 24 February;

(d) Screening of the Academy Award-nominated film Omar, followed by a discussion, 1 May;

(e) Screening of Flying Paper, a documentary on Palestinian youth in Gaza, followed by a briefing by the UNRWA Director of Operations in Gaza, Robert Turner, and a discussion with the director of the film, 21 May;

(f) Special Meeting of the Committee to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 9 July (a Committee statement was adopted at the meeting);

(g) Briefing by Hanan Ashrawi, member of the PLO Executive Committee, 2 September.

2. Committee meeting away from Headquarters

49. On 10 March, the Committee held a joint meeting with the League of Arab States at its headquarters in Cairo aimed at reinforcing the critical support of all Arab States for the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. A joint declaration was adopted at the end of the meeting.

3. Programme of international meetings and conferences

50. The following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee in 2014:

(a) United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Quito, 25 and 26 March;

(b) United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace: Engaging civil society in Latin America and the Caribbean for the two-State solution, Quito, 27 March;

(c) United Nations Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine, United Nations Office at Geneva, 24 and 25 April;

(d) International Meeting on the Question of Jerusalem, jointly organized with OIC and the Government of Turkey, Ankara, 12 and 13 May;

(e) Public Forum on the Question of Jerusalem, organized in cooperation with the Centre for Middle Eastern and Strategic Studies, Ankara, 14 May;

(f) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, United Nations Office at Nairobi, 1 and 2 July.

51. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. Detailed information about the meetings is being issued in publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat and is available on the "Question of Palestine" website maintained by the Division.

52. On the margins of the United Nations International Meeting in Quito, the Committee delegation met with Ricardo Patiño Aroca, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Human Mobility of Ecuador, and other senior officials at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. On the margins of the United Nations Round Table in Geneva, the Committee delegation held meetings with senior officials of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, UNCTAD and the International Committee of the Red Cross. While in Geneva, the delegation also met with the Director-General of the World Health Organization and the Acting Secretary General of the Inter-Parliamentary Union. In Ankara, on the margins of the International Meeting, the Committee delegation met with Ahmet Davutoğlu, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Turkey, and other senior officials at the Ministry, as well as with representatives of OIC, including Secretary General Iyad bin Amin Madani.

4. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

53. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the European Union, the League of Arab States, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and OIC. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices.

5. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

54. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide, which was bolstered by the proclamation of 2014 as the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Civil society representatives participated in all meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee commends the important work of civil society organizations and encourages them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at attaining a comprehensive, just, lasting and peaceful solution to the question of Palestine in all its aspects and achieving the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

55. The Committee maintained its cooperation with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms and established new liaisons with a large number of individual organizations. Moreover, at the United Nations Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine held in Geneva, eight Palestinian human rights organizations took part in the deliberations with leading legal experts. While in Quito in March and in Ankara in May, the Committee organized joint events with local universities.

56. The Working Group of the Committee, chaired by the representative of Malta, met periodically and hosted three briefings by civil society representatives and the above-mentioned four film screenings at Headquarters.

57. During the reporting period, 12 civil society organizations were accredited to the Committee and 2 organizations became observers.

58. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a civil society page (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>) on the “Question of Palestine” website and developed the United Nations Platform for Palestine website (<http://unpfp.un.org>) as a tool for outreach to civil society organizations and to foster civil society networking and cooperation.

59. The Division maintained its Facebook and YouTube pages as well as Twitter feeds to disseminate information about the work of the Committee, and the United Nations as a whole, on the question of Palestine. In addition, the Division continued to publish the periodic online bulletin NGO Action News, reaching out to more than

1,000 civil society organizations around the world, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives.

Parliaments and interparliamentary organizations

60. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Representatives of parliaments and interparliamentary organizations participated in international events organized by the Committee during 2014. In particular, a member of the Israeli Knesset and the Vice-President of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean participated as speakers in the International Meeting on the Question of Jerusalem, held in Ankara. Moreover, in Quito, the Committee delegation met with the Chair of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the National Assembly of Ecuador. In Geneva, the Committee delegation held meetings with senior officials of the Inter-Parliamentary Union and, in New York, the Chair of the Committee met in December with a delegation of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean headed by its President.

6. Research, monitoring and publications

61. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) Special bulletin and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine;
- (g) Study entitled "Origins and Evolution of the Palestine Problem, Part V (1989-2000)".

7. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

62. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the "Question of Palestine" website (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/home.htm>). That included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old United Nations and other documents. RSS and Twitter feeds continued to alert users about newly posted materials.

8. Training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine

63. The Division conducted the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine. One staff member of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs participated in a three-week training programme at the United Nations Office at Geneva during the sixty-first session of the UNCTAD Trade and Development Board, which started on 15 September 2014. In addition, three staff members of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs are in the process of completing a 70-day training programme at Headquarters in New York, from 9 September to 27 November 2014, in order to familiarize themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies, including the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council. Training was also provided for five staff members of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs who were attending the Geneva Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine, and for one staff member participating in the nineteenth Rhodes Academy of Oceans Law and Policy training programme at Rhodes, Greece, in July 2014.

9. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

64. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 25 November 2013 at Headquarters in New York and on 29 November at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna. At Headquarters, the Committee organized a special meeting, as well as a concert featuring Nai Barghouti and her troupe and Mohammed Assaf, UNRWA Regional Youth Ambassador and 2013 winner of the Arab Idol contest, in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations and the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations information centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

Chapter VI

65. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/14, the Department of Public Information continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine.

66. During the reporting period, two United Nations International Media Seminars on Peace in the Middle East were organized by the Department. The first was held in Istanbul, Turkey, on 8 and 9 October 2013, in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Turkey. The second, arranged in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Japan, was held in Tokyo on 9 and 10 June 2014. The seminars were attended by journalists, bloggers, activists and representatives of civil society, current and former policymakers, academics and senior United Nations officials.

67. The Department's five-week annual training programme for Palestinian journalists was organized in New York and Washington, D.C. from 4 November to 6 December 2013. The selected group of eight Palestinian journalists participated in a series of briefings by United Nations officials and media industry leaders. They also worked through an intensive online journalism curriculum with regular workshops, assignments and a final project.

68. The Department continued to use all its platforms, including multimedia, to highlight the broad range of developments and issues related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process.

69. The declaration of 2014 as the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was prominently covered by all the Department's communications platforms, including social media channels. The Department developed an online portal dedicated to the Year in the six official languages and co-organized, with the Division for Palestinian Rights, screenings of two Academy Award-nominated Palestinian films at Headquarters.

70. United Nations information centres and services publicized the observance of the International Day and Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People in the media and widely disseminated information materials in official and non-official languages. Commemoration activities organized by the information centres included a series of outreach activities, such as cultural events, quizzes, exhibits, screenings and panel discussions. The United Nations Regional Information Centre for Western Europe (located in Brussels) and UNRWA, in association with several Belgian civil society groups, organized the "Yalla Palestina" festival in May. About 5,000 people attended the event. The information centre in Jakarta launched the monthly e-newsletter Halo Palestine in Indonesian.

71. The Department continued to maintain its tour route at United Nations Headquarters, which includes a stop at the permanent exhibit "The question of Palestine and the United Nations". During the reporting period, approximately 138,000 visitors took the guided tour. In addition, a total of 132 scholars and students were briefed on the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

72. During the reporting period, the Committee intensified its work, in implementation of its mandate contained in General Assembly resolution 68/12, to organize activities in 2014 for the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Operating within existing regular budget resources and with support from its partners, including the Arab League and OIC, the Committee was able to convene additional events throughout the year, in addition to its regular meetings and conferences. The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to its partners who contributed extrabudgetary resources, logistical and substantive support, and its gratitude for their active participation in these events, which made them a success. The Committee wishes to thank its members and observers who organized solidarity events during the International Year at the national level and encourages them to continue such activities. To sustain the momentum generated by the International Year, the Committee recommends that the General Assembly make provisions for follow-up activities by the Committee in 2015 and thereafter, in order to review key challenges and the progress being made by the Palestinian people towards the realization of their inalienable rights and long-denied freedom, justice and peace.

73. The Committee is convinced that a negotiated peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in all its aspects, in accordance with United Nations resolutions, and an urgent end to the Israeli occupation remain central to peace and stability throughout the volatile Middle East region and should be a top priority of the international community. The recent tragic events in Gaza, which has undergone three devastating Israeli military assaults in six years, reinforce this view. The ceasefire should be solidified and the root causes of the crisis fully addressed, including a lifting of the illegal blockade on Gaza.

74. The Committee notes with appreciation the emergence of an international consensus that there should not be a return to the status quo ante in Gaza. The cycle of war and rebuilding should end. The establishment of the national consensus Government, which the Committee strongly supported, provides a window of opportunity to stabilize Gaza. All States Members of the United Nations should support the administration of Gaza by the Palestinian national consensus Government under the leadership of President Mahmoud Abbas, which should in turn consolidate and unify the administrative and security apparatuses under its command. National elections should be held according to schedule. Gaza crossings should be open to the legitimate and sustained flow of persons and goods, including construction materials, humanitarian aid and commercial flows, with support from the European Union border assistance mission and in accordance with Security Council resolution 1860 (2009) and the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access. Exports from Gaza to the West Bank, Israel and the outside world should be allowed to resume, enabling the legitimate economy to rebuild. Long-dormant projects such as the Gaza airport and seaport, a safe passage route to the West Bank and offshore gas fields should be revitalized. The normalization in Gaza would significantly reduce tensions and facilitate the resumption of the political process.

75. The tragic events in Gaza underscore the urgency of reaching a peaceful settlement to the question of Palestine as a whole. The Committee supported the efforts spearheaded by the United States to reach a final status agreement between the parties by April of 2014. The Committee sought to contribute to peace efforts as it urged the international community to step up its support of negotiations, while promoting international action against obstacles in their path, such as the illegal Israeli settlements and the wall; drew international attention to key permanent status issues; examined legal options available to the State of Palestine; urged solidarity with the Palestinian people and their State; and engaged with diverse constituencies in support of peace. It continued to mobilize international support for the Palestinian National Development Plan, while highlighting the massive economic costs of the Israeli occupation. It urged increased donor support for the Government of the State of Palestine and United Nations agencies providing vital humanitarian support on the ground, as well as for the effective use of international assistance for sustainable growth.

76. The latest round of negotiations regrettably failed, as did previous such efforts in 2000-2001 and 2007-2008, in large part owing to the acceleration of Israel's illegal settlement campaign in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and its failure to honour the agreement to release Palestinian prisoners. The Committee observes that, in each case, the failure of negotiations was followed by an outbreak of violence. The repeated failure to reach agreement, despite the stepped-up engagement by the international community, also reflects the limitations of the traditional format of bilateral Israeli-Palestinian final status talks facilitated by a single Member State. In that regard, the Committee would welcome proposals for innovative approaches and formats that could help to break the deadlock and accelerate the end of the 47-year Israeli military occupation and the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, in particular their right to an independent and sovereign Palestinian State based on the 1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, and their right to return. The Committee recalls in that regard that the Quartet road map endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 1515 (2003) envisages the creation of a Palestinian State prior to the conclusion of negotiations on permanent status issues. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to give positive consideration to all such proposals and intends to contribute to a healthy and necessary discussion of the issues through its programme of conferences and international meetings.

77. The Committee considers that the United Nations has a permanent responsibility in respect of the question of Palestine, as well as a responsibility to protect the Palestinian civilian population in accordance with international humanitarian law. However, large protection gaps have been exposed, both in Gaza and in the West Bank. The Committee welcomes the fact-finding mission established by the Human Rights Council as an important step towards accountability for violations of humanitarian and human rights law. There is no justification for the targeting of innocent civilians and there should be no impunity for its perpetrators. The Committee welcomes the request by the Palestinian leadership addressed to the Secretary-General that the territory of the occupied State of Palestine be placed under an international protection system by the United Nations. The Committee calls upon the Secretary-General to expedite the review of that request and to submit his recommendations to the Security Council and the General Assembly as appropriate. The Committee expresses its readiness to contribute to the consideration of proposals in the relevant forums. The Committee calls upon the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly to also take practical steps to follow up on the findings of previous fact-finding missions.

78. The Committee welcomes the accession by the State of Palestine to a number of international conventions and treaties and encourages its Government to take all steps towards full compliance with those instruments, subject to the constraints imposed by the Israeli occupation. The Committee encourages the signature by the State of Palestine of additional international instruments, which would allow it to pursue justice and accountability for Palestinian victims through the available international legal mechanisms. The Committee stands ready to contribute to Palestinian capacity-building in that area through its training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine. The Committee is ready to organize further round tables to raise awareness among Palestinian policymakers regarding the legal options available under the status of non-Member observer State.

79. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, in particular in respect of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It welcomes in that regard the entry into force of European Union guidelines that prohibit funding by European Union institutions for Israeli entities connected with settlements and the importation of settlement agricultural produce. It welcomes further steps taken by Governments and private businesses to dissociate themselves from settlements.

80. The scale of the humanitarian catastrophe unfolding in Gaza is unprecedented. Clean water, sanitation and electricity remain scarce, with vast networks having been destroyed by the Israeli aggression, while hundreds of thousands of Palestinians remain homeless and destitute, since their houses were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable by the Israeli bombardments. The Committee calls upon the United Nations members and observers to provide generous support to UNRWA, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, UNICEF, the World Food Programme (WFP), UNDP and other organizations working on the ground to alleviate the catastrophic conditions in Gaza and to expedite the massive rebuilding effort that is vital.

81. The year 2014 marks the tenth anniversary of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, which determined that the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory built by Israel, the occupying Power, is contrary to international law. The Court called upon the United Nations, and especially the General Assembly and the Security Council, to consider further action to bring an end to that illegal situation. As the work of the Register of Damage caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, established by the General Assembly, nears completion, the Committee invites the Assembly to consider further steps to redress the illegal situation.

82. The Committee has consistently supported the Palestinian State-building and reform agenda. It is concerned that the accomplishments are now endangered owing to the chronic political, security and financial crises and calls upon donors to meet their prior commitments and to provide additional aid to avert further deterioration. The Committee remains convinced, however, that sustainable economic development cannot take root under the existing regime of Israeli occupation, which exacts annual costs of an estimated $7 billion, borne by the Palestinian economy, in particular in Gaza and in Area C of the West Bank. In that regard, the Committee calls upon the General Assembly to establish provisions for a mechanism that would allow the United Nations to document those costs. Moreover, unequal economic arrangements resulting from the Oslo Accords need to be revisited by the parties to allow the Palestinian economy to develop.

83. The Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights will continue through their mandated activities to generate heightened international awareness of the question of Palestine, as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine. In that connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful and constructive contribution of the Division in support of its mandate. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support on the part of the international community for the programme's objectives, as evidenced by the number of international meetings and conferences and commemorations of the International Day and Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) an increase in international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the increased number of followers of social media sites maintained by the Division. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine, carried out annually by the Division, has proved its usefulness, as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee strongly recommends that this important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, further enhanced.

84. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2015, to be implemented by the Division, on widening international support for the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The Committee intends to mobilize increased international scrutiny of the developments on the ground, in particular settlement activities, and will emphasize responsibility and promote action by the international community to put an end to all illegal Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the meantime, to promote accountability for Israeli violations and the needed protection for the Palestinian people. The Committee will also continue to examine the legal ramifications of the new international status of the State of Palestine and will continue to call attention to the plight of the Palestinian political prisoners in Israeli jails and urge a resolution of their plight. The Committee will strive to involve prominent international personalities and experts and the representatives of vulnerable populations, such as women and refugees, in its events, while giving due regard to gender balance.

85. The Committee will continue to invite internationally renowned personalities to brief the Committee and the wider United Nations membership.

The Committee also considers that round-table meetings have proved particularly useful in generating practical proposals for action in the United Nations and beyond and will continue to utilize that format.

86. The Committee will continue to mobilize support for Palestinian institution-building and all other efforts to support and enhance the viability of the State of Palestine. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution to all permanent status issues, including the question of refugees, based on principles of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions, including resolution 194 (III). It will pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and youth and their organizations.

87. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people. A comprehensive peace will take root only if the relevant civil societies strongly demand it of their political leaderships. Special efforts are needed to revitalize the peace camp in Israel. The Committee lauds the courageous advocacy actions of countless activists, including eminent personalities and parliamentarians, who participate in demonstrations against the occupation and keep their home constituencies informed about the harsh realities of life under occupation. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine. The Committee encourages its members and observers to mobilize their respective civil societies at the national level, in particular young people, and to establish solidarity committees with the State of Palestine.

88. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of a peaceful and just solution to the question of Palestine and uphold their obligations under international law, including humanitarian and human rights law. The Committee will reach out to new audiences such as local Governments, which have an important role to play in promoting local economic development and other initiatives at the decentralized level.

89. The Committee will reach out to all regional groups at the United Nations, with a view to expanding its membership. It will actively work to organize more thematic debates on the question of Palestine in various United Nations forums. Recognizing the growing importance of developing countries and regional and subregional organizations, it will make a special effort to step up engagement with those countries and organizations in its work.

90. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support, the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, in support of the Committee's communication strategy. The Division should pay special attention to continued development of the "Question of Palestine" portal, including the addition of a mobile-device-friendly version, and the use of web-based social information networks, such as Facebook, Twitter and YouTube. It should also continue to develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine document collection by reflecting current issues and events, as well as by continuing to digitize and upload historical documents and to add user-friendly search features. The Division should continue to collaborate with the United Nations libraries at Headquarters and at Geneva in the search for historic documents. It should further enhance the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine, paying special attention to the programme's gender balance, and optimize the use of resources to allow the maximum number of participants possible. Voluntary contributions from members and observers in line with their capacity are to be encouraged to put the programme on a solid financial footing.

91. The Division should continue to organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

92. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public of the relevant issues. It requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

93. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and their leadership and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 69/20 of 25 November 2014.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2014 to 6 October 2015.

(Signed) Fodé Seck
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. Among the developments that marked the reporting period were the efforts by the United Nations and the international community to support the reconstruction of the Gaza Strip following the Israeli military operations in the summer of 2014, which caused widespread destruction and physical and human devastation; the submission by the State of Palestine of documents to accede to a number of international treaties and conventions, including the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court; the Israeli parliamentary elections on 17 March and the subsequent formation of a right-wing Government under Benjamin Netanyahu; the further deterioration of the security situation in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, including the rise of settler violence and terror against Palestinian civilians; and endeavours for stronger involvement of the wider international community in the peace negotiations.

2. More than one year after the war on Gaza in the summer of 2014, the situation in the Gaza Strip remains very grave. Palestinian and international efforts to address the humanitarian situation and rebuild the lives, homes and livelihoods of the tens of thousands of people affected by the violence have been slow to proceed owing to the blockade and severe restrictions on the import of materials into Gaza imposed by Israel, the occupying Power, and also to unfulfilled donor pledges. As at August 2015, not a single one of the destroyed homes in Gaza had been rebuilt, and over 100,000 Palestinians are still homeless, forced to shelter in temporary housing with other families or in the ruins of their homes.

3. Israeli occupying forces continued to carry out frequent military raids and incursions in the West Bank, resulting in the killing and injuring of Palestinians, including children. Thousands of Palestinians, including women and children, were arrested during the reporting period, in addition to over 5,000 Palestinians who remain in Israeli jails and detention centres, many in administrative detention. Unarmed Palestinian civilians continued to be subjected to excessive force by Israeli forces during demonstrations against the prolonged occupation of their land. Israel continued to expand its illegal settlements in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem, and approved plans to build thousands more new settlement units. Eleven years after the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice was rendered, the construction of the separation wall and its associated regime continue, fragmenting the Palestinian land and communities, obstructing movement and access, further isolating East Jerusalem and severely harming the socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people. During the reporting period, the situation in occupied East Jerusalem remained alarming, with increased numbers of incursions by extremist Israelis into the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound and acts of incitement and provocation, as well as continued land confiscations, excavations near holy sites, house demolitions, revocations of residency permits and evictions of Palestinian residents.

4. Palestinian State-building and institution-building efforts continued, yet were undermined by restrictions and obstacles imposed by Israel on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which continued to prevent the free movement of persons and goods, economic activity and sustained development and growth. After the State of Palestine deposited instruments of accession to a number of international treaties and conventions, including the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court on

1 January 2015, to which it acceded the following week, Israel withheld the tax revenue that it collects on behalf of the Palestinian people pursuant to the 1994 Paris Protocol on Economic Relations, deepening the financial crisis of the Government of the State of Palestine, and did not release it until after the Israeli elections, following intense international pressure. On 25 June, the State of Palestine submitted a file to the International Criminal Court detailing possible war crimes in Gaza and settlement construction in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

5. Following the suspension of bilateral and United States-mediated peace talks by Israel in April 2014 and the subsequent war on Gaza in July and August 2014, Member States and regional organizations embarked upon efforts to mobilize broader, more substantive international support to the peace process. These include proposals for the Security Council to shoulder its responsibilities and redouble efforts to enforce its resolutions on the question of Palestine, as well as enlisting the support of regional stakeholders and organizations in order to break the deadlock and cycle of violence and help to foster an environment that is conducive to peace. During the reporting period, Saint Lucia, Sweden and the Holy See officially recognized the State of Palestine, and a number of European parliaments passed non-binding resolutions calling upon their Governments to do so.

6. During the reporting period, the activities of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and its Bureau continued to draw the international community's attention to the issues of immediate urgency, such as the dire humanitarian situation and the reconstruction of the Gaza Strip, the international efforts to revitalize negotiations and the need to address ongoing Israeli settlement activities in the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem, with the objective of mobilizing wide support for the Palestinian people's inalienable rights, including the right to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, international law and the provisions and calls made in numerous relevant United Nations resolutions. The Committee monitored the situation and the political developments on the ground, implemented its programme of international meetings and conferences and held consultations with representatives of Governments, national parliaments and interparliamentary organizations, as well as civil society. The Committee continued to reaffirm and promote the United Nations position that a just and permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could be reached only by ending the Israeli occupation that began in 1967, achieving the full independence of the State of Palestine on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital and reaching a just and agreed solution to the issue of Palestine refugees on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

7. Until the end of 2014, the Committee continued its series of events within the framework of the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. An international meeting of parliamentarians organized by the Committee at United Nations Headquarters in November focused on their role in ensuring respect for international law. An international conference organized by the Committee in Seville, Spain, in December was aimed at better understanding the role of local governments and civil society organizations in the struggle for the realization of Palestinian rights. A seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people held in Vienna in March 2015 focused on key aspects of the reconstruction of Gaza. The Committee held a round table in May at The Hague, Netherlands, on legal aspects of the question of Palestine, followed in July by an international meeting in support of Israeli-Palestinian peace held in Moscow. An international meeting held in September in Brussels, organized in cooperation with the League of Arab States and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC), focused on the issue of Israeli settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem as an obstacle to peace.

Chapter II

Mandate of the Committee

8. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. Further information is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat at <http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/com.htm>.

9. On 25 November 2014, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 69/20), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (resolution 69/21) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (resolution 69/22). The Assembly also adopted resolution 69/23, entitled "Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine".

Chapter III

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

10. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

11. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States and OIC.

12. At its 368th meeting, on 10 February 2015, the Committee re-elected Fodé Seck (Senegal) as Chair, Zahir Tanin (Afghanistan), Rodolfo Reyes Rodríguez (Cuba), Desra Percaya (Indonesia), Wilfried Emvula (Namibia) and María Rubiales de Chamorro (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs, and Christopher Grima (Malta) as Rapporteur.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

13. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings and gave briefings, made observations and developed proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter IV

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Political developments

14. During the reporting period, a number of States members of the European Union moved forward on the path to recognizing the State of Palestine. Sweden officially recognized the State of Palestine on 30 October 2014. The parliaments of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (13 October), Spain (18 November), France (2 December), Ireland (10 December), Portugal (12 December), Belgium (5 February 2015) and Italy (27 February 2015) adopted non-binding resolutions that call upon their respective Governments to recognize the State of Palestine. The Holy See and Saint Lucia officially recognized the State of Palestine on 26 June and 14 September respectively.

15. On 17 December, Switzerland, the depositary of the Geneva Conventions, convened, in Geneva, the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, at which a declaration was adopted in which the high contracting parties emphasized the continued applicability and relevance of the Fourth Geneva Convention and called upon the occupying Power to fully respect the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

16. On 30 December, the Security Council failed to adopt a draft resolution (S/2014/916) calling for a final status agreement and an end to the Israeli occupation by the end of 2017, owing to the lack of the required number of nine favourable votes. The following day, Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas signed instruments of accession to the following 18 international conventions and treaties: Convention on the Political Rights of Women; Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the “New York Convention”); Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal; Convention on Biological Diversity and the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety to the Convention on Biological Diversity; Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of Non-International Armed Conflicts (Protocol II); Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Adoption of an Additional Distinctive Emblem (Protocol III); Convention on the Law of the Non-Navigational Uses of International Watercourses; Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents; United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime; Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel and the Optional Protocol thereto; United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea; Convention on the Non-Applicability of Statutory Limitations to War Crimes and Crimes against Humanity; Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court; Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court; Declaration in accordance with the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court; Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects; Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons; Convention on Cluster Munitions.

17. On 3 January 2015, in retaliation against the Palestinian move to join the International Criminal Court, Israel decided to freeze approximately $127 million in tax revenues for the month of December, collected on behalf of the Palestinian people under the Paris Protocol to the Oslo Accords. The freeze deepened the Palestinian financial crisis and continued until the adoption of an agreement on 17 April between Israel and the State of Palestine under which Israel transferred more than $470 million that had previously been withheld.

18. After the general elections in Israel on 17 March, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu continued in his post. Many hardline statements, put forward in the final days of campaigning by the Prime Minister, raised serious doubts about Israel's commitment to the two-State solution. The new Government of Israel was confirmed on 14 May; its guidelines state that it will strive for peace with the Palestinians and all its neighbours, while safeguarding the security and historical and national interests of Israel. In the following months, Prime Minister Netanyahu reaffirmed his commitment to the idea of a sustainable two-State solution.

19. After its general elections, Israel implemented measures to ease restrictions on Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, particularly during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, although some have been revoked ostensibly in response to rocket fire from Gaza. In July, the Government of Israel decided to grant an additional 8,000 new work permits for Palestinians from the West Bank, bringing the number of permits issued for employment in Israel to a new high of approximately 60,000.

20. On 10 September, the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/320, in which it decided that the flags of non-member observer States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters would be raised at Headquarters and United Nations offices following the flags of the States Members of the Organization. On 30 September, the flag of Palestine was raised at United Nations Headquarters in the presence of President Mahmoud Abbas.

Reconstruction of Gaza

21. On 12 October 2014, at the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, which was co-organized by Egypt and Norway and focused on the reconstruction of Gaza, some 50 donor countries pledged $5.4 billion in relief funds for the Occupied Palestinian Territory, of which $3.5 billion ($2.5 billion in new commitments) was pledged for Gaza. These funds for Gaza represent only 63 per cent of the cost of reconstruction and thus fall short of the funds needed to return Gaza to the situation prior to the Israeli military operation, when socioeconomic conditions were already at their worst since 1967.

22. The Gaza Reconstruction Mechanism, the temporary agreement between Israel and the State of Palestine brokered by the United Nations in September 2014 with the objective of enabling construction and reconstruction work on the large scale required in the Gaza Strip, started slowly, hampered by a delay in the disbursement of donor funds, but scaled up in the first quarter of 2015.

23. In June 2015, Israel and the State of Palestine reached an agreement on the "residential stream" of the Gaza Reconstruction Mechanism, a new mechanism to allow Palestinians in Gaza access to needed construction material for the reconstruction of fully destroyed homes and for new construction. As at 10 August 2015, a total of 89,431 households out of the 100,063 affected had procured the materials necessary to repair their homes under the mechanism's shelter stream. Under the residential stream, by the end of August, over 2,600 housing units had been cleared for construction; the required construction materials have been procured for more than 1,200 of those units and, in many cases, the reconstruction of the homes has commenced.

24. According to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), by May, 20 per cent of Gaza's population, or 360,000 people, needed treatment for mental health conditions, and 400,000 children were in need of immediate psychosocial support. Moreover, in its annual report, UNCTAD reported that the Israeli blockade, three major wars and the social, health and security-related ramifications of high population density and overcrowding threatened to render Gaza uninhabitable by humans by 2020, when the population is expected to increase to 2.1 million.

25. There have been a number of significant achievements since the end of hostilities in August 2014. Notably, the last internally displaced persons left United Nations collective centres on 17 June 2015. In addition, as at 10 August, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) had removed 414,000 tons of rubble out of an estimated 2 million tons, and a similar amount has been removed by the Government and the private sector. According to the United Nations Mine Action Service, since December 2014, 592 explosive remnants of war risk assessments covering 1,480 dwellings have been conducted. Of an overall estimated 7,000 explosive remnants of war from the 2014 conflict, approximately one third have been cleared either directly or under the supervision of the United Nations Mine Action Service.

Palestinian State-building

26. During the reporting period, the Palestinian State-building efforts continued, supported by the international community. The first meeting of the Cabinet of the Government of national consensus was held in Gaza on 9 October 2014. Palestinian Prime Minister Hamdallah conducted his second visit to Gaza on 25 March 2015, and on 19 April, a delegation of Palestinian ministers travelled to Gaza to begin a process to reintegrate public sector employees. On 17 June, the Palestinian Government of national consensus, formed on 2 June 2014, resigned after President Mahmoud Abbas said that it was unable to operate in the Gaza Strip. On 22 June, the Executive Committee of the Palestinian Liberation Organization decided to establish a committee to consult with all Palestinian factions in order to form a national unity Government. On 31 July, the Government of the State of Palestine was reshuffled and five new ministers, for agriculture, education, local governance, national economy and transportation, were appointed.

27. On 29 January 2015, the International Monetary Fund reported that in 2014, the Palestinian economy had contracted for the first time since 2006. According to UNCTAD, socioeconomic conditions are at their lowest point since 1967. The World Bank assessed that unemployment and poverty have increased markedly. In the fourth quarter of 2014, unemployment in Gaza reached 43 per cent, the highest in the world, with youth unemployment at a staggering 60 per cent. The aggregate poverty rate for Gaza and the West Bank stood at 25 per cent. The economic gap between Gaza and the West Bank is growing, owing primarily to the impact of the ongoing restriction on the free movement of people and goods to and from the Gaza Strip.

28. The socioeconomic prospects for the immediate future remain bleak, owing to volatile political conditions, reduced aid flows, the slow pace of reconstruction in Gaza and the lingering effects of Israel's withholding of Palestinian tax revenue during the first four months of 2015. The latter caused an economic crisis in the Palestinian territory, which in Gaza was exacerbated by an equally severe financial crisis related to the lack of civil service reform. The overall efficacy of donor support, however, continues to be seriously undermined by the occupation, rather than by the inadequacy of the policies of the State of Palestine or poor donor coordination. The fiscal burden of the humanitarian crises and the occupation-related fiscal losses have diverted donor aid from development to humanitarian interventions, including emergency aid, and budget support. No amount of aid would be sufficient to place any economy on the path of sustainable development under conditions of frequent military strikes and destruction of infrastructure, isolation from global markets, fragmentation of domestic markets, and confiscation of and denial of access to national natural resources.

Security

29. The reporting period was marked by continued tensions, military incursions and raids by the Israeli occupying forces, and clashes with Palestinian youths and protesters in many parts of East Jerusalem and the West Bank, which have been taking place on an almost daily basis. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, as at 28 September, Israeli forces had killed 44 Palestinians and injured 3,387, including children. On 10 December, Palestinian Minister Ziad Abu Ein died during a confrontation with Israeli occupying forces in the course of a protest against Israel's settlements in the West Bank. In a positive development, since the ceasefire of 26 August 2014, violence across the Occupied Palestinian Territory has declined, with June 2015 recording the lowest number of Palestinian injuries in more than three years. The recent aggravation of tensions, however, especially in occupied East Jerusalem and at the holy sites are cause for concern and risk leading to a further destabilization of an already fragile situation.

30. In Gaza, there have been allegations that Palestinian factions rearmed after the Gaza war of the summer of 2014. There has been test-firing of rockets into the Mediterranean Sea. Militants began firing rockets towards Israel in October and on 20 December, Israel conducted its first air strike on Gaza since the ceasefire of 26 August. Israel also continues to conduct frequent incursions into the Gaza border area using military vehicles and continues its harassment of and shooting at unarmed farmers in the "no-go zone" near the Gaza-Israel border and its harassment of fishermen inside the Gaza fishing zone.

31. As at 1 August 2015, unexploded ordnance from the numerous Israeli military incursions and wars on Gaza had killed 2 Palestinians, including 1 child, and injured 40, including 21 children.

32. In a report submitted to Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon in April, the United Nations Headquarters Board of Inquiry concluded that some incidents during the 2014 Gaza conflict at schools of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), in which at least 44 Palestinians were killed and 227 injured, were attributable to the Israeli military. On 14 June, Israel published a report on its internal investigations into its actions during the conflict, including the shelling of United Nations facilities, in which it was concluded that Israel's military actions had been "lawful" and "legitimate".

33. In its report issued on 24 June, the United Nations Independent Commission of Inquiry on the 2014 Gaza Conflict (A/HRC/29/52), which was established by the Human Rights Council, stated that it had gathered substantial information pointing to serious violations of international law by both Israel and Palestinian armed groups, some of which might amount to war crimes. The Commission expressed concern that impunity prevailed across the board for violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law allegedly committed by Israeli forces, many of which constituted grave breaches of the Fourth Geneva Convention and thus might amount to war crimes, including deliberate attacks against civilians and civilian objects and wanton destruction of civilian property. With regard to Palestinian armed groups, the Commission expressed serious concern at the inherently indiscriminate nature of most of the projectiles directed towards Israel and at the targeting of civilians, which might amount to a war crime.

34. On 29 June, Israeli forces detained a Swedish-flagged vessel in international waters 100 nautical miles off the coast of Gaza and forced it to sail to the Israeli port of Ashdod. The vessel had been part of a four-boat flotilla aiming to bring humanitarian aid to Gaza and protest the Israeli blockade. The other ships turned back. Among the detainees were former Tunisian President Moncef Marzouki, Spanish Member of the European Parliament Ana Miranda, and Arab Member of the Israeli Knesset Basel Ghattas, along with several civil society representatives.

35. In response to intensifying acts of violence and terror, in particular by Israeli settlers, as reflected in the arson attack of 31 July 2015 against a Palestinian home in Duma in the West Bank, in which an 18-month-old boy, Ali Dawabsha, was burned alive, his father and mother died from their injuries and their 4-year-old son was orphaned, the Government of Israel decided on 2 August to strengthen the legal and institutional means of addressing terrorism by Jewish extremists, but also extended the use of the system of prolonged administrative detention, which is used almost exclusively to detain Palestinians without charge for long periods.

Jerusalem

36. Provocations and attacks against religious sites and incitement by Israeli religious extremists and officials escalated in November 2014, leading to the highest monthly number of Palestinian casualties (over 1,000). On 13 November, after a trilateral meeting with King Abdullah II of Jordan and United States Secretary of State John Kerry, Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu gave assurances that there would be no changes to the status quo of the holy sites in Jerusalem, in accordance with its agreement with Jordan. Constructive steps promised to de-escalate the tensions surrounding the holy sites in occupied East Jerusalem included a decrease in the number of Jewish activists at the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound, the lifting of access restrictions and, for the first time since 2007, permission for Palestinians from the Gaza Strip to worship at the Al-Aqsa Mosque.

37. On 18 November, a retaliation attack on a synagogue in West Jerusalem killed five Israelis and injured several others. It was followed on 29 November by an arson attack and the vandalization of a joint Jewish-Arab school in Jerusalem, allegedly perpetrated by Jewish extremists.

38. Provocative visits to the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound in occupied East Jerusalem by Jewish extremists and officials, under the protection of Israeli occupying forces, continued throughout the reporting period and repeatedly led to violent confrontations with Palestinian worshippers. In late September and early October, the confrontations escalated, concomitantly with clashes between Palestinians and Israeli settlers and increased Israeli military raids in Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps in the West Bank, resulting in a number of civilians killed or injured. This was followed by the decision by the Government of Israel to substantially increase the number of Israeli security forces in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to impose further restrictions on access to the Old City of Jerusalem for non-resident Palestinians.

Settlements and settler-related incidents

39. Notwithstanding the international calls for a cessation of all settlement activities, which constitute violations of international law, namely, the Fourth Geneva Convention, and Security Council and General Assembly resolutions, Israel continued its policy of illegal settlement-building in the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem. At the end of 2014, according to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, there were 150 Israeli settlements, 16 of which are in East Jerusalem, with a settler population of around 600,000, of whom 210,000 live in East Jerusalem. According to the Israel Central Bureau of Statistics of Israel, during the fourth quarter of 2014 and the first half of 2015, the construction of 1,260 structures was begun and 1,498 structures were completed. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, settlers outnumber Palestinians in Area C, which comprises 61 per cent of the West Bank, with 341,000 settlers living in 235 settlements and so-called settlement outposts, compared with 300,000 Palestinians.

40. According to the Israeli non-governmental organization Peace Now, in 2014, settlement construction in occupied East Jerusalem grew by 260 per cent, from 464 settlement buildings in 2013 to 1,209 in 2014. After accelerating the construction of 1,000 Jewish settler homes on 27 October, in November, Israel advanced plans for 500 more settler homes in the city. Tendering of new settlement construction also accelerated throughout the West Bank and East Jerusalem, with 4,599 units overall tendered in 2014 compared with 3,710 in 2013, a 20 per cent increase, and 2,359 units tendered in the West Bank in 2014 compared with 1,695 in 2013, a 40 per cent increase.

41. On 25 December, the Israeli Supreme Court ordered the evacuation and demolition of Amona, the largest settlement outpost in the West Bank, within two years. On 30 January 2015, the Government of Israel decided to issue tenders for the additional construction of about 450 residential units in West Bank settlements, and on 8 February, the Jerusalem municipality approved the construction of 64 Jewish settler homes north of the city.

42. Shortly after the formation of the new Government in May 2015, Israel approved the construction of 900 settler homes in occupied East Jerusalem. Following the decision on 29 July by the Israeli Supreme Court that two buildings in the West Bank settlement of Beit El adjacent to the city of Ramallah, which had been built on private Palestinian land, should be destroyed, the Israeli Prime Minister approved, the same day, the immediate construction of 300 housing units in the same settlement and advanced plans for 504 new housing units in Israeli settlement areas in occupied East Jerusalem.

43. Israeli settlers continued to harass and attack Palestinian civilians, especially farmers and herders, with clashes occurring on an almost daily basis. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as at 28 September, a total of 229 settler-related incidents had occurred during the reporting period, causing either Palestinian casualties, including to children, and/or damages to Palestinian property or land, averaging 19 each month. These included the destruction of Palestinian houses, mosques, churches and orchards, many in so-called price tag attacks, with the aim of scaring Palestinians off their lands and forcing Palestinians to end their resistance against the Israeli settlement enterprise. On 12 November, suspected Jewish settlers torched a mosque near Ramallah. In January 2015 alone, some 5,600 trees were uprooted or vandalized. On 31 July, an arson attack against a Palestinian family in the occupied West Bank committed by extremist Jewish settlers killed an 18-month-old baby and his father and mother and critically injured the 4-year-old brother, who is the only surviving member of the family.

44. According to a report by Israeli human rights organization Yesh Din published in May, only 7.4 per cent of Israeli police investigations initiated in the West Bank following complaints by Palestinian victims of offences committed against them or their property by Israeli settlers result in indictments. The remaining investigations have been closed, in most cases (some 85 per cent) owing to investigative failure.

Demolitions and displacements

45. Israel has continued its policy of demolition of Palestinian homes and structures built without Israeli-issued permits. Such permits are nearly impossible for Palestinians living under Israeli occupation to obtain. It has also reinstated the practice of punitive demolitions after having halted it almost completely for close to a decade. In August, the Israeli Supreme Court legitimized the applicability of the 1951 Absentee's Property Law to Palestinian property in East Jerusalem when the owner is residing elsewhere in the West Bank, allowing for the expropriation of property from Palestinians who have become absentees through no fault of their own. Israeli courts continued the practice of evicting Palestinian residents and owners of properties in East Jerusalem that, prior to 1948, had belonged to Jewish residents, while Palestinians cannot avail themselves of the same procedure, namely, reclaiming property previously under Palestinian ownership and now under Jewish-Israeli control.

46. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as at 28 September, a total of 590 Palestinian structures had been demolished during the reporting period, of which 106 were in East Jerusalem, displacing 765 Palestinians in total and 96 from East Jerusalem.

47. Some 7,000 Palestinian Bedouins in 46 residential areas of the West Bank are threatened with forcible transfer, linked to the expansion of illegal settlements and the wall in the E1 area, east of Jerusalem.

Palestinian prisoners

48. According to the Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem, at the end of July, a total of 5,369 Palestinian detainees and prisoners were being held in Israeli prisons, 346 of them from the Gaza Strip. An additional 972 Palestinians were being held in Israel Prison Service facilities for being in Israel illegally, 13 of them from the Gaza Strip. A total of 342 of those Palestinian prisoners are being held in administrative detention. On 12 July, the Israeli authorities released the Palestinian prisoner Khader Adnan, who had been arrested and placed in administrative detention in July 2014, after a 56-day hunger strike.

49. On 20 July, the Israeli Parliament amended the Penal Code to extend harsh punishments for throwing stones at moving vehicles, allowing sentences of up to 20 years, which is likely to disproportionately affect Palestinian children. On 30 July, the Knesset approved a law to permit force-feeding of prisoners on hunger strike under certain conditions, which potentially affects all detainees but particularly Palestinian detainees who have resorted to hunger strikes to protest their conditions, including their prolonged administrative detention without charge. The adoption of the law has led to widespread protests, including by the Israeli Medical Association, which refuses to comply as that would constitute a breach of the Hippocratic Oath.

Water

50. According to the Emergency Water and Sanitation Hygiene Group, one year after the Gaza war of 2014, which resulted in $34 million in damage to major water and sanitation infrastructure, some 120,000 Palestinians in the Gaza Strip, or 7 per cent of the population in the territory, are still not connected to the water network, while 23 per cent remain disconnected from the sewage system. As a result of the unrepaired war damages to wastewater facilities, untreated and partially treated wastewater is discharged into the environment, infiltrating and polluting the coastal aquifer, the sole freshwater source for the Gaza Strip, making 96 per cent of the water from the aquifer unfit for human consumption. According to the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, the water installations operate at approximately 50 per cent capacity owing to energy shortages and maintenance challenges caused by shortages of parts as a result of the blockade. Some 65 per cent of the population receives several hours of water once every three or four days and 15 per cent receives water for six to eight hours every day.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

51. UNRWA continued to provide extensive services and emergency assistance to over 5 million Palestine refugees in all its fields of operations in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. While it endeavours to serve this community in accordance with its General Assembly mandate, UNRWA is confronted with the most severe financial crisis since its establishment in 1949, which is jeopardizing its ability to live up to core responsibilities in providing basic education, health care and relief and social services. Although donor responses to this crisis in August helped UNRWA to avert the shutdown or delayed opening of its schools in all fields of operation, the financial deficit continues to affect operations, requiring more substantive solutions to the chronic underfunding of the Agency.

52. One year after the Israeli military operations of July and August 2014, the devastating conflict continues to have severe implications for the work of UNRWA in the Gaza Strip. A total of 9,117 Palestine refugee homes were totally demolished and 138,391 damaged during the conflict. The level of destruction, coupled with the worsening socioeconomic situation of Gaza Strip residents in the context of the blockade, presents an extremely challenging environment for Palestine refugees in the Gaza Strip, severely affecting their well-being, socioeconomic conditions and future potential.

53. In the light of the escalating conflict in the Syrian Arab Republic, the Agency is particularly concerned about the more than 560,000 Palestine refugees who have lived in the country for decades, over 50 per cent of whom have now been displaced within the Syrian Arab Republic, with an additional 12 per cent forced to seek refuge in neighbouring countries. In Lebanon, UNRWA has registered 45,000 Palestine refugees from the Syrian Arab Republic, and 15,000 Palestine refugees in Jordan and some 1,000 in the Gaza Strip have approached UNRWA for assistance. In Egypt, 4,000 Palestine refugees are also reported to have come from the Syrian Arab Republic and large groups are found further afield. Inside the Syrian Arab Republic, some 65,000 Palestine refugees are in hard-to-reach areas, including Yarmouk camp on the outskirts of Damascus, which has witnessed a dramatic escalation of violence that continues to endanger the lives of 18,000 Palestine refugees and Syrian residents of the camp. Although it has had limited access since July 2013, in 2015, UNRWA was able to serve the vast majority (over 90 per cent) of the Palestine refugee population in the Syrian Arab Republic with regular humanitarian assistance and services. However, the access situation declined significantly during the summer of 2015, particularly in the Dera'a and Aleppo areas.

54. The Committee again expresses its appreciation for the dedication of UNRWA and its entire staff to its mission and calls upon all Member States to address the critical financial situation in which the Agency finds itself, to enable the continued provision of vital support to the Palestine refugee population in all fields of operation.

55. UNDP, through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to respond to the development needs of the State of Palestine and its national consensus government. In support of the Palestinian statehood agenda, UNDP focuses on democratic governance and the rule of law, economic empowerment and private sector development, environment and management of natural resources, as well as public and social infrastructure. Notwithstanding the blockade of the Gaza Strip, UNDP is also alleviating the suffering of the population in the coastal enclave by enhancing livelihoods through emergency employment, cash assistance, the reconstruction of shelters and schools, the removal of rubble, and institutional integration. The Programme places empowerment, resilience and sustainability at the centre of its operation and focuses on three priority areas: the Gaza Strip, East Jerusalem and Area C of the West Bank, where the needs are the greatest.

56. The Committee remained appreciative of the important work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It noted that the consolidated appeal for 2015 focused on the delivery of humanitarian assistance, increased protection of civilians, enhanced monitoring and reporting on the humanitarian situation and the strengthening of United Nations humanitarian coordination structures.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

1. Action taken in the Security Council

57. During the open debates at the Security Council held on 21 October 2014, 15 January 2015, 21 April 2015 and 23 July 2015, the Chair of the Committee delivered a statement (see S/PV.7281; S/PV.7360; S/PV.7430; S/PV.7490).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

58. On 10 November 2014, the Bureau of the Committee issued a statement on the situation in East Jerusalem (GA/PAL/1315). On 18 December, the Bureau issued a statement welcoming the Declaration of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention (GA/PAL/1323).

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 69/20 and 69/21

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

59. During the reporting period, the Committee held periodic meetings at United Nations Headquarters in New York. At its 366th meeting, on 19 November 2014, the Committee approved for submission to the General Assembly four draft resolutions entitled “Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People”, “Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat”, “Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat” and “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”. At its 368th meeting, on 10 February 2015, attended by the Deputy Secretary-General of the United Nations, the Committee re-elected its Chair, Vice-Chairs and Rapporteur. At its 369th meeting on 1 May 2015, the Director of the UNRWA New York Office addressed the Committee on the occasion of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the commencement of the Agency’s operations.

60. In addition to its periodic meetings, during the reporting period, the Committee organized the following events at United Nations Headquarters in New York within the framework of the 2014 International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People:

(a) Lecture by Noam Chomsky, Professor Emeritus of Linguistics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 14 October 2014;

(b) Fashion show by Jamal Taslaq, Palestinian-Italian designer, 10 November 2014.

2. Programme of international meetings and conferences

61. During the reporting period, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations International Meeting of Parliamentarians in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, United Nations Headquarters, New York, 21 November 2014;

(b) International Conference of Local Governments and Civil Society Organizations in Support of Palestinian Rights, Seville, Spain, 2 and 3 December 2014;

(c) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, Vienna, 31 March and 1 April 2015;

(d) United Nations Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine, The Hague, Netherlands, 20 to 22 May 2015;

(e) United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, Moscow, 1 and 2 July 2015;

(f) International Meeting on the Question of Palestine, Brussels, 7 and 8 September 2015;

(g) Consultations of the Committee delegation with civil society organizations active on the Question of Palestine, Brussels, 9 September 2015.

62. The above-mentioned events were attended by representatives of Governments, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. Detailed information about the meetings is being issued in the form of publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat and is available on the "Question of Palestine" website maintained by the Division.

63. In the margins of the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People held in Austria, the Committee delegation met with high-ranking officials of the Federal Ministry for Europe, Integration and Foreign Affairs of Austria. In the margins of the United Nations Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine held in The Hague, the Committee delegation met with high-level officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands and of the European External Action Service. In the margins of the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace in Moscow, the Committee delegation held meetings with high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation, the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States and the Assistant Secretary-General of OIC, respectively. In the margins of the International Meeting on the Question of Palestine held in Brussels, the Committee delegation met with officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Foreign Trade and Development Cooperation of Belgium.

3. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations

64. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with the African Union, the European Union, the League of Arab States, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and OIC. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices and the co-sponsorship provided by the League of Arab States and OIC in organizing the International Meeting on the Question of Palestine held in Brussels in September.

4. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

65. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide. Civil society representatives participated in all international meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee. On 9 September, consultations between the Bureau of the Committee and civil society organizations were held in Brussels. The Committee commends the important work of civil society organizations and encourages them to continue contributing to efforts aimed at achieving a comprehensive, just, lasting and peaceful solution to the question of Palestine in all its aspects and achieving the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

66. The Committee maintained its cooperation with national, regional and international coordinating mechanisms and established new liaisons with a large number of individual organizations.

67. The Working Group of the Committee, chaired by the representative of Malta, met periodically and hosted two briefings by civil society representatives at United Nations Headquarters in New York.

68. During the reporting period, three civil society organizations were accredited to the Committee and two organizations became observers.

69. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintained a civil society page (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>) on the “Question of Palestine” website as an outreach tool towards civil society organizations and to foster civil society networking and cooperation.

70. The Division maintained its Facebook, Twitter and YouTube pages to disseminate information about the work of the Committee, and the United Nations as a whole, on the question of Palestine. In addition, the Division continued to publish the periodic online bulletin NGO Action News, reaching out to more than 1,000 civil society organizations around the world, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives.

Parliaments, interparliamentary organizations and local governments

71. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Representatives of parliaments and interparliamentary organizations participated in international events organized by the Committee during the reporting period. Among others, members of the Palestinian Legislative Council, the Israeli Knesset, the parliaments of Indonesia, Ireland, Jordan, Malta, Mexico, Pakistan, South Africa, Sweden, the regional parliament of Andalusia in Spain, as well as the European Parliament, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the Arab Inter-Parliamentary Union and the French Senate participated in the international meetings held under the auspices of the Committee.

5. Research, monitoring and publications

72. The Division carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, which reiterated the relevance of the research, monitoring and publications programme, it also prepared the publications listed below for dissemination:

(a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;

(b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine based on media reports and other sources;

(c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;

(d) Special bulletin and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;

(f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

6. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

73. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and develop the “Question of Palestine” website (<http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/home.htm>) and UNISPAL. That included the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of the technical components of the system and involved the expansion of the document collection to include relevant new and old United Nations and other documents.

7. Training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine

74. The Division conducted the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine. Two staff members of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs are in the process of completing a six-week training programme at Headquarters in New York (7 September to 16 October) and an additional two staff members will complete the same programme between 19 October and 27 November. The training will allow the Palestinian staff to familiarize themselves with various aspects of the work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies, including the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council. The training is financially supported by the OPEC Fund for International Development.

8. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

75. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 24 November 2014 at Headquarters in New York, on 26 November at the United Nations Office at Geneva and on 28 November at the United Nations Office at Vienna. At Headquarters, the Committee held a special meeting and organized a photo exhibit entitled “The Long Journey” in cooperation with UNRWA and the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, as well as a musical performance by the Joubran Trio in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations. The Committee noted with appreciation that the International Day of Solidarity had also been observed by United Nations Information Centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance are contained in the special bulletin issued by the Division.

Chapter VI

76. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 69/22, the Department of Public Information continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine.

77. On 26 and 27 May 2015, the Department held its annual United Nations International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East, in Astana, in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Kazakhstan. The seminar was attended by journalists, former and current policymakers, think tank members, academics and students from France, Israel, Kazakhstan, the United States of America and the State of Palestine. The event brought together some 350 participants.

78. The Department's annual five-week training programme for Palestinian journalists was organized in New York and Washington, D.C., from 3 November to 5 December 2014. The selected group of nine Palestinian journalists attended a series of briefings by United Nations officials and media industry leaders. They also worked through an intensive curriculum with regular workshops, assignments and final projects.

79. A number of outreach events to commemorate the 2014 International Day of Solidarity and the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People were also organized both at Headquarters and in other locations through the global network of the United Nations Information Centres of the Department of Public Information.

80. In New York, the Department, in conjunction with UNRWA and the Division for Palestinian Rights, arranged for the display of the "Long Journey" exhibit in the Visitors' Lobby of United Nations Headquarters as part of the commemoration of Solidarity Day, from November 2014 to January 2015.

81. Guided tour routes for visitors to United Nations Headquarters continued to include a stop at the permanent exhibit "The Question of Palestine and the United Nations". During the reporting period, over 200,000 visitors took the guided tour.

82. The question of Palestine, the International Day and the Year of Solidarity were all promoted widely on the multilingual United Nations website, through United Nations social media accounts managed by the Department of Public Information and through the Department's traditional media platforms, including United Nations Radio, United Nations Television and the United Nations News Centre.

83. United Nations Television produced a special edition of its 21st Century television series, entitled "Palestine and Israel — Mending Hearts", which looked at how a heart surgery programme helped a critically sick Palestinian baby in the West Bank.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

84. The Committee remains convinced that a negotiated peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in all its aspects in accordance with United Nations resolutions, an urgent end to the Israeli occupation, and the realization of the rights of the Palestinian people, including to self-determination, remain central to peace and stability throughout the volatile Middle East region and should be a top priority of the international community. As has consistently emerged during the international meetings organized by the Committee, any resolution of the conflict will require a comprehensive regional solution, conceivably with support from the reinvigorated Quartet, that includes greater engagement with key Arab States and the other States concerned. The Arab Peace Initiative remains a significant contribution to such a regional settlement. The Committee is supporting those efforts and will continue its enhanced cooperation with the League of Arab States and OIC.

85. In its continued support to revitalize the peace negotiations, the Committee aligns itself with the view that the previous paradigm of bilateral negotiations, which after more than two decades have not yielded any success, should be revised. There is a need to obtain a firm commitment from Israel with regard to the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 borders and in accordance with the relevant United Nations resolutions. Serious efforts are needed between the parties to overcome their deeply entrenched mistrust, including confidence-building efforts with the support of the international community, and to demonstrate the courage and leadership that is required at this time. If the two parties do continue to seek an outcome of two neighbouring States living in peace and security, but are unable themselves at this juncture to agree on a meaningful framework to resume negotiations, the international community must consider presenting such a framework, including parameters. In that regard, it is the primary responsibility of the Security Council, under the Charter of the United Nations, to play its role in defining a new peace architecture for resolving the conflict. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to give positive consideration to all proposals that endeavour to present a way out of the current impasse. The Committee intends to contribute to a healthy and necessary discussion of these issues via its programme of work.

86. The Committee notes that the reconstruction of Gaza has now commenced, one year after the devastating war. However, the pace of reconstruction remains inadequately slow and the humanitarian and security situation is fragile; clean water, sanitation and electricity are still scarce and the tens of thousands of Palestinians who were rendered homeless and destitute by the conflict remain so. Immediate steps are needed to solidify the ceasefire and to accelerate reconstruction efforts, focusing on the physical rebuilding and delivery of affordable energy and sufficient water and the amelioration of dire socioeconomic conditions. Continued donor funding has to be secured for the long term, including for UNRWA. There is need for continued funding for the Gaza Reconstruction Mechanism. Ultimately, in order to ensure respect for the rights of the Palestinian people, prevent deterioration beyond the breaking point and break the build-destroy-rebuild cycle, the Israeli blockade on the Gaza Strip must end and there must be a lifting of all closures within the framework of Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). Palestinian reconciliation is also essential, and a Palestinian unity government has to take up governance and security functions in Gaza and exercise control over the crossings. The Committee reiterates its calls upon the United Nations members and observers to provide generous support to UNRWA, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, UNDP, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the World Food Programme (WFP) and other organizations working on the ground to alleviate the catastrophic conditions and to expedite the Gaza reconstruction efforts.

87. The Committee reiterates that violations of humanitarian and human rights law have to be investigated and that the perpetrators should be brought to justice. The primary responsibility for such investigations rests with the Member States but they could be conducted by relevant United Nations and other international bodies if necessary. The Committee welcomed the fact-finding mission established by the Human Rights Council and the report of the United Nations Independent Commission of Inquiry on the 2014 Gaza Conflict (A/HRC/29/52) as important steps towards achieving accountability for violations of humanitarian and human rights law. The findings and recommendations of the report should be vigorously followed up on by the relevant bodies and authorities with a view to ending impunity.

88. The Committee welcomes the accession by the State of Palestine to additional international conventions and treaties, including the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and encourages its Government to take all steps towards full compliance with those instruments, to the extent allowed by the constraints imposed by the Israeli occupation. As became apparent during the legal round table organized by the Committee, the signature by the State of Palestine of additional international instruments can help to strengthen the rule of law and uphold human rights domestically, while making it possible to pursue justice and accountability for Palestinian victims through available international legal mechanisms. The Committee stands ready to further contribute to capacity-building in this area through its training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine.

89. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, particularly in respect of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It welcomes in that regard the appropriate stance of the European Union on the importation of products from settlements and encourages the European Union and other organizations and States to adopt and implement other such policies that guarantee adherence to international conventions in regard of illegal settlements in occupied areas, particularly the Fourth Geneva Convention. It welcomes further steps taken by Governments and private businesses to dissociate themselves from policies that directly or indirectly support settlements.

90. Through its mandated activities, the Committee will continue to generate heightened international awareness of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination and independence. In that connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat in support of its mandate. It notes with satisfaction:

(a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support on the part of the international community for the programme's objectives, as evidenced by the number of and participation in international meetings and conferences, and commemorations of the International Day and Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) an increase in international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the increased number of visitors to the Question of Palestine website and followers of social media sites maintained by the Division. The Committee also considers that the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine, carried out annually by the Division, has proved its usefulness, as it directly contributes to Palestinian capacity-building efforts. The Committee expresses its appreciation for the funding of the programme in 2015 by the OPEC Fund for International Development and strongly recommends that this important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, further expanded.

91. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2016, to be implemented by the Division, on amplifying international support for the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, stressing the role and responsibility of the United Nations in that regard and in this year of the seventieth anniversary of the Organization. The Committee intends to work closely with other United Nations actors on the ground, such as the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern. The Committee will also continue to examine the legal aspects of the question of Palestine.

92. The Committee will continue to mobilize support for Palestinian institution-building and all other efforts to support and enhance the viability of the State of Palestine. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society to mobilize support for a just solution to all permanent status issues, including the question of refugees, based on principles of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 194 (III). It will pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and young people and their organizations.

93. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people. It will expand its efforts to engage with all the supporters of a just and peaceful solution to the question of Palestine, including in Israel. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, on the question of Palestine.

94. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of a peaceful and just solution of the question of Palestine and uphold their obligations under international law, including humanitarian and human rights law. It will continue its outreach to new audiences such as local governments, which also have an important role to play in promoting the rights of the Palestinian people and the responsibilities of Governments to adhere to international humanitarian and human rights laws and conventions.

95. The Committee will reach out to all regional groups at the United Nations with a view to expanding its membership. It will actively work to organize more thematic debates on the question of Palestine in various United Nations forums. Recognizing the growing importance of developing countries and regional and subregional organizations, it will make a special effort to step up engagement with those countries and organizations in its work.

96. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support, the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, in support of the Committee's communication strategy. The Division should pay special attention to continued development of the "Question of Palestine" portal, the preparation of publications and information materials on various aspects of the question of Palestine and their widest possible dissemination, including in the official languages of the United Nations, and the use of web-based social information networks, such as Facebook, Twitter and YouTube. It should also continue to develop the UNISPAL document collection by reflecting current issues and events, as well as by continuing to digitize and upload historical documents and to add user-friendly search features. The Division should continue to collaborate with the United Nations Libraries at Headquarters and in Geneva in the search for historic documents. It should explore opportunities to expand the breadth and scope of the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine, paying special attention to the programme's gender balance, such as expanding the pool of potential participants to all offices and departments of the Government and optimizing the use of resources to allow the maximum number of participants possible. Continued voluntary contributions from member and observer States and international organizations in line with their capacity, such as from the OPEC Fund for International Development in 2015, are to be encouraged to put the programme on a solid financial footing.

97. The Division should continue to organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

98. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public of the relevant issues. It requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

99. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and their leadership and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Annex

Economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people

Note by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development

A. Introduction and objective

1. The year 2015 marks the forty-eighth year of Israel's occupation of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Despite numerous United Nations resolutions and condemnations of the illegal occupation of the Palestinian territory, little has been achieved to end the occupation and its damaging impacts. On the contrary, illegal settlements continue to expand and new ones are being built, the settler population is increasing, and the detrimental consequences are now engrained in the daily lives of the Palestinian population under occupation.

2. In recognition of this fact, on 25 November 2014, the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/20, in which it requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to report to the Assembly on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people.

3. The objective of the present annex is to partially respond to that request. Reporting the cost of the occupation is, however, a substantial and multi-year task and requires more resources than are presently available to UNCTAD. The Conference therefore carried out preliminary work to reflect on how the task could be implemented; highlight historical precedents relating to similar situations; outline the scope and periodicity of the task; and assess the resources required to implement it. Specifically, the annex is aimed at providing Member States with background and the resource requirements for UNCTAD to fulfil the request contained in paragraph 9 of General Assembly resolution 69/20 and perform this task on a regular basis.

4. Hence, the annex does not contain a report on the qualitative and quantitative aspects of the cost of the occupation; rather, it underscores for Member States the critical importance of such an assignment and the need to equip the international community with an objective understanding of the effects of the occupation on the Palestinian people as a step towards achieving peace with justice and dignity.

B. Some perspectives on the economics of the occupation

5. Throughout history, colonization and military occupations have consistently had economic objectives and consequences. They take various shapes and forms, but always involve the exploitation, impoverishment, marginalization, displacement and appropriation of resources of the occupied indigenous people.

6. In almost all types of occupation, the economic dimension could be described as acts and measures taken by the occupier to appropriate assets, natural resources and economic benefits that rightfully belong to the colonized people. These acts often deprive the people under colonial rule of the internationally recognized human right to development by confiscating their national resources, preventing them from accessing and utilizing those resources, depriving them of the ability to produce and thus forcing them to consume products produced by the occupier. These actions represent only a partial aspect of the economic costs incurred by the people under occupation. Equally damaging are the measures and policies that undermine the capacity of the occupied people to conduct normal trade and economic and social transactions with neighbours and traditional trading partners and to move freely within their country and territories.

C. Key references and historical precedents

7. This section highlights some relevant precedents where economic costs were taken into account as key elements for negotiating durable solutions to complex and intractable conflicts.

8. The United Nations Fact-finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, which was established by the President of the Human Rights Council on 3 April 2009, concluded in its report to the General Assembly (A/HRC/12/48) that Israel's continuing occupation emerged as the fundamental factor underlying violations of international law and undermining prospects for development and peace.

9. The costs of the Israeli occupation have been staggering and are mounting. They continue to increase despite numerous United Nations resolutions calling for the dismantlement of the settlements and an end to the losses and suffering incurred by the Palestinian people. Equally relevant, in the context of economic development in conflict situations, are the international law statutes and principles and the international human rights and humanitarian law that deal with redress and reparation payments to injured parties in conflict situations. Resolutions, measures and precedents that should also apply to Palestinians under occupation include the following:

(a) Decision by the Permanent Court of International Justice of 1928 in the landmark case concerning the factory at Chorzów. It was determined in this decision that States are responsible for making reparation (return to status quo ante) for their breaches of international law;^a

(b) General Assembly resolution 194 (III). This resolution has served and continues to serve as the legal cornerstone for Palestinians on the refugee question and on compensation. The oft-cited resolution was adopted on 11 December 1948 during the ongoing mass displacement of Palestinians from areas that fell under Israeli control. The General Assembly has consistently reaffirmed the applicability of resolution 194 (III) to the settlement of refugee questions and compensation;

(c) Pinheiro Principles. More recently, the post-Cold War era witnessed significant normative and practical developments in the area of durable solutions for refugees and reparation payments. Numerous conflicts involving the mass displacement of persons and damages to property and people were resolved through agreements in the 1990s, including in Afghanistan, Cyprus, Guatemala and the former Yugoslavia. Several mass claim schemes were also implemented during this period to remedy human rights abuses, displacement and loss of property. Notable examples are the establishment of the Commission for Real Property Claims of

Displaced Persons and Refugees in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Kosovo and the United Nations Compensation Commission for the victims of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait;^b

(d) Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The advisory opinion reaffirmed the principle of compensation and reparations to injured parties for actions of States that breach international law.^c

D. Need for an assessment of the economic cost of occupation

10. It follows from the precedents listed above that there is a cost borne by the people under occupation and those suffering damage from the actions of the occupying authority.^d Compensation for this cost, however, should not be considered as a price or a substitute to ending occupation. On the contrary, it is an essential remedy that should accompany steps towards reversing the negative impacts and economic distortions of occupation.

11. However, to this day, there is no systematic assessment or comprehensive record of the economic costs and consequences of the actions, measures and positions of Israel as an occupying Power in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Thus far, all the analyses performed and efforts made to quantify the cost of occupation have been done on an ad hoc basis, mostly by UNCTAD. Efforts made include the following:

(a) Since the mid-2000s, UNCTAD has prepared a number of studies and reports focusing on various aspects of the cost of occupation, such as the economic cost of the destruction of productive capacities, fiscal losses, the Israeli closure policy in the West Bank and the blockade in Gaza, the loss of Palestinian policy space and the Israeli control of Palestinian land, water and other natural resources;^e

(c) The United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, established in 2007 (General Assembly resolution ES-10/17), focuses only on the damage emanating from the construction of the Israeli separation barrier within the West Bank;

(d) The Palestinian National Authority estimated the cost of Israeli occupation related to the heavy restrictions imposed on the Palestinian people and their lack of ownership and access to their own natural resources;^g

(e) In the information brief entitled “Palestinian Losses in 1948: Calculating Refugee Compensation”, Atif Kubursi elaborated on the rights of refugees in terms of restitution of property and compensation for lost opportunity, in line with General Assembly resolution 194 (III). The assessment focused on the property and human capital losses of the Palestinian refugees.^h

E. Concept of losses and their typology

12. Not all the occupation-related costs can be measured in monetary terms; for example, no dollar value can be assigned to the distress and agony of the loss and destruction of life, community, culture, shelter or a homeland, or the detention of a human being without due process and legal justification. Assessment of the cost of the occupation to the Palestinian people can be, at best, a partial measurement of the losses/costs incurred since the onset of the occupation.

13. The typology of the costs incurred by the Palestinian people under occupation that followed from the “de-development” policies imposed on the Palestinian economy calls for identifying, monitoring and measuring these losses in a systematic and periodical manner. The list includes but is not restricted to physical losses; loss of water and other natural resources; opportunity and economic losses; specific macroeconomic and fiscal losses; non-specific/miscellaneous macro- and micro-losses; human capital losses; loss of community and neighbourhood; and psychosocial losses.

14. The identification and quantification of each of these losses lie at the core of assessing the “cost of occupation”. For each type of loss, the conceptual question is twofold: (a) What actions taken by the occupation authorities can be considered harmful to the economy (the costs of which are borne by all the individuals of the Palestinian people)?; (b) What monetary value can be assigned to each action taken by the occupation authorities (and therefore be a fair assessment of the cost of the occupation)? Obviously, such quantification will be complex and multidimensional, requiring expertise in economics, law, history and politics.

F. Institutional set-up and budget implications

15. In the light of its existing mandate, UNCTAD is the only United Nations entity with proven expertise on the Palestinian economy, its constraints and development prospects; it is therefore well-positioned to assume the responsibilities of the evaluation of the economic cost of the occupation. However, this task cannot be implemented with the resources presently available to UNCTAD. Additional resources are required for the Conference to fulfil the request contained in General Assembly resolution 69/20. The assignment of these additional resources should be established through the appropriate United Nations mechanisms.

16. A preliminary assessment of the resources required to fulfil this task indicates that the establishment phase (the first three years) would require extrabudgetary resources to involve four or five internationally renowned experts and cover the cost of all other related activities. The maintenance of the monitoring capacity in the first and subsequent years would require augmenting the existing capacity of UNCTAD by three Professional staff members and one General Service staff member. Moreover, an annual regular budget would be required to cover the cost of recruiting consultants and staff travel.

G. Recommendations

17. Building on General Assembly resolution 69/20, it is recommended to allocate to UNCTAD, through the appropriate mechanisms, the resources required to institutionalize the stocktaking function and gather the documentary evidence by keeping a real-time record based on measuring the costs of occupation on a timely basis within the United Nations system.

18. With a view to facilitating future negotiations for a sustainable, just and peaceful settlement of the conflict, it is recommended that UNCTAD estimate the historical and recurrent economic costs of occupation in a systematic, scientific and evidence-based way on a regular basis, and that it regularly document, update and keep an inventory of historical and new actions taken by the occupying Power, particularly those that have a damaging economic impact on the Palestinian people, their livelihood and their immediate and future ability to maintain a viable and efficient economy.

Letter of transmittal

[5 October 2016]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 of its resolution 70/12 of 24 November 2015.

The report covers the period from 7 October 2015 to 3 October 2016.

(Signed) Fodé Seck
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The reporting period from 7 October 2015 to 3 October 2016 was characterized by the further deterioration of the security and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. This included extrajudicial killings and excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces, raising serious concerns about the protection of civilians, including children; heightened provocations and tensions at the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound and other religious sites; ongoing illegal Israeli settlement activities and increasing house demolitions in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem. These negative developments further stoked tensions and hopelessness. Notwithstanding recent initiatives for a stronger involvement of the wider international community, the impasse in the peace process continued.
2. The humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip remained dire. Palestinian and international efforts to address humanitarian needs and rebuild the homes and livelihoods of the tens of thousands affected by the war in 2014 were insufficient to achieve significant results owing to the blockade and severe import restrictions imposed by Israel, as well as unfulfilled donor pledges. At least 65,000 Palestinian civilians remain displaced owing to the destruction of or severe damage to their homes during Israeli military operations in 2014.
3. Israeli occupying forces continued to carry out frequent military raids and incursions in the West Bank, resulting in the killing and injuring of Palestinians; hundreds more, including children and young people, were arrested or detained. During the reporting period, more than 6,000 Palestinians remained in Israeli prisons and detention centres. Hundreds went on hunger strike to protest their administrative detention and ill-treatment.
4. Israel continued to expand its illegal settlements in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem. Settlement construction was accompanied by official plans to build thousands of new settlement units, further fragmenting Palestinian land and disconnecting communities, and attempts to retroactively “legalize” settlement outposts. Hundreds of Palestinian families were forcibly displaced as a result of the increase in evictions and house demolitions. In occupied East Jerusalem, the increased number of incursions into the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound and acts of incitement and provocation by extremist Israelis significantly increased the risk of ethno-religious strife, which could become part of larger conflicts throughout the region.
5. Twelve years after the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice was rendered, the construction of the wall by Israel continued, severely impairing the movement and access of the Palestinian population, including to their farmlands and to such essential services as education and health care, further isolating East Jerusalem and harming the socioeconomic conditions of the Palestinian people.
6. Against the backdrop of stalled Palestinian-Israeli peace talks since April 2014 and growing tensions, France launched a new initiative in October 2015 aimed at mobilizing international support for Palestinian-Israeli peace and providing a framework for a credible political process. To that end, a ministerial meeting was convened on 3 June 2016 in Paris. On 1 July, the Middle East Quartet issued a long-awaited report with recommendations to address the prevailing situation and persistent obstacles on the path to peace and thus advance conditions conducive for negotiations aimed at the achievement of the two-State solution as a lasting settlement of the conflict. In May, Egypt appealed to Israel and the State of Palestine to achieve a peace agreement. In August, the Russian Federation offered to host direct talks between Israel and the State of Palestine.

7. Regional and other partners facilitated new reconciliation talks between Fatah and Hamas; the process is ongoing, however, and Palestinian unity has not yet been reached.

8. Municipal elections in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip scheduled for 8 October, in which Hamas had pledged to participate, were suspended on 8 September by a Palestinian high court ruling following a dispute over electoral lists in Gaza and the inability of Palestinians in East Jerusalem to participate.

9. Palestinian state- and institution-building efforts continued notwithstanding restrictions imposed by Israel on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which continued to obstruct the free movement of persons and goods and viable political and economic activity and undermine sustained development and growth. The accession by the State of Palestine to a series of international conventions and instruments, their implementation and the reporting requirements have provided the State of Palestine the opportunity to build capacity, especially regarding human rights standards and good governance, to bring it to par with other signatory countries. Similarly, the commitment by the State of Palestine to implement the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development under occupation has posed challenges to national institutions, along with opportunities to develop capacity.

10. The activities of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, its Bureau and Working Group continued to draw the attention of the international community to issues requiring urgent action, such as the dire living conditions and reconstruction of the Gaza Strip, international efforts to revitalize negotiations, the situation in occupied East Jerusalem and the challenges posed by the occupation with respect to the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals, with the objective of mobilizing wide support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including the right to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

11. The Committee continued to reaffirm and promote the United Nations position that a just and permanent settlement of the question of Palestine could be reached only by ending the Israeli occupation that began in 1967, achieving the full independence of the State of Palestine on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital and reaching a just and agreed solution to the issue of Palestine refugees on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

12. With the approach of the fiftieth anniversary of the Israeli occupation, the General Assembly, at its seventy-first session, is expected to declare 2017 as the “International Year to End the Israeli Occupation”, with activities and efforts to be organized to that end.

Chapter II

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Political developments

13. The reporting period saw new initiatives to revitalize the peace process. Recognizing the need to go beyond the bilateral mediation model that has proved ineffective for more than 20 years, on 15 October, France announced an initiative to launch a multilateral political process to move towards a just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine and salvage the two-State solution.

14. After a series of consultations with the parties and regional and international partners, on 3 June 2016, a ministerial meeting for the French peace initiative was held in Paris, with the participation of the Middle East Quartet, the European Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and some 25 countries, including Egypt, Jordan, Morocco, Saudi Arabia and Turkey. The aim of the initiative was to provide a concrete political vision, with the establishment of an international support group to work on three key aspects: economic incentives and compensation measures; security arrangements; and confidence-building measures and institution-building in support of the Palestinian reconciliation process. The plan to convene an international conference later in 2016 would give a new impetus to diplomatic efforts to advance the prospects for peace. Subsequently, many participants, including the LAS member countries, expressed their support for the French initiative but voiced the need for a timeline for ending the conflict, along with clear terms of reference for the negotiations and the principle of a return to the pre-1967 borders.

15. Throughout the reporting period, the Middle East Quartet also remained engaged with the parties; its envoys visited Israel and the State of Palestine to encourage steps to promote the easing of tensions and a rebuilding of trust. In September 2015, the Middle East Quartet held its customary meeting in the margins of the General Assembly, for the first time in an expanded format including key regional, international and European partners. On 1 July 2016, the Quartet issued a report focusing on three major threats to the achievement of the two-State solution: incitement of violence and terrorism; settlement expansion in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem; and the continued lack of Palestinian reconciliation and control over Gaza by the Palestinian Government of national consensus. The recommendations contained in the report were criticized by the State of Palestine, its Arab partners and others for the artificial symmetry attributed to the parties and for the failure to propose innovative ways forward or a clear path towards reaching a lasting peace, the end of the occupation and the long overdue independence of the Palestinian State.

16. High-level officials from Egypt visited the State of Palestine and Israel in June and July 2016 to meet with the Palestinian President and the Israeli Prime Minister, respectively. In August, the Russian Federation offered to host direct talks between Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas in Moscow, which was in principle welcomed by both sides. Meeting on 23 September in New York, Quartet principals and the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Egypt and France agreed to coordinate all peace efforts.

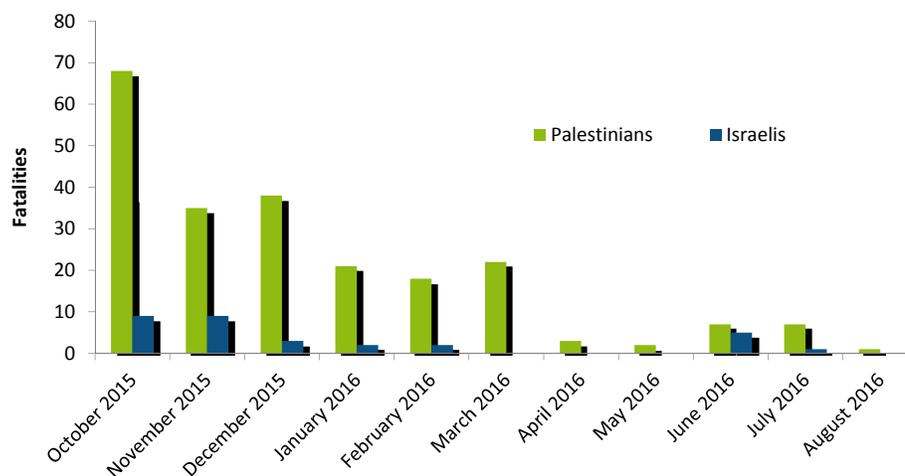

17. On 24 March, the Human Rights Council adopted four resolutions relating to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In the three customary resolutions, adopted without a vote, the Council reaffirmed the inalienable, permanent and unqualified right of the Palestinian people to self-determination (resolution 31/33); demanded that Israel cease all practices and actions that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people or the character, status and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory (resolution 31/34); and requested the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to investigate the implications of settlements on the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of the Palestinian people (resolution 31/35). Of particular significance was a new resolution (resolution 31/36) on Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, in which the Council called upon Israel to immediately cease and reverse all settlement activities and called upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to produce a database of all actors conducting business in areas under Israeli military occupation, bearing in mind the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

18. On 24 March, the Human Rights Council appointed Stanley Michael Lynk (Canada) as Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, replacing Makarim Wibisono (Indonesia), who had resigned in January over the failure by Israel to cooperate with his mandate.

Security

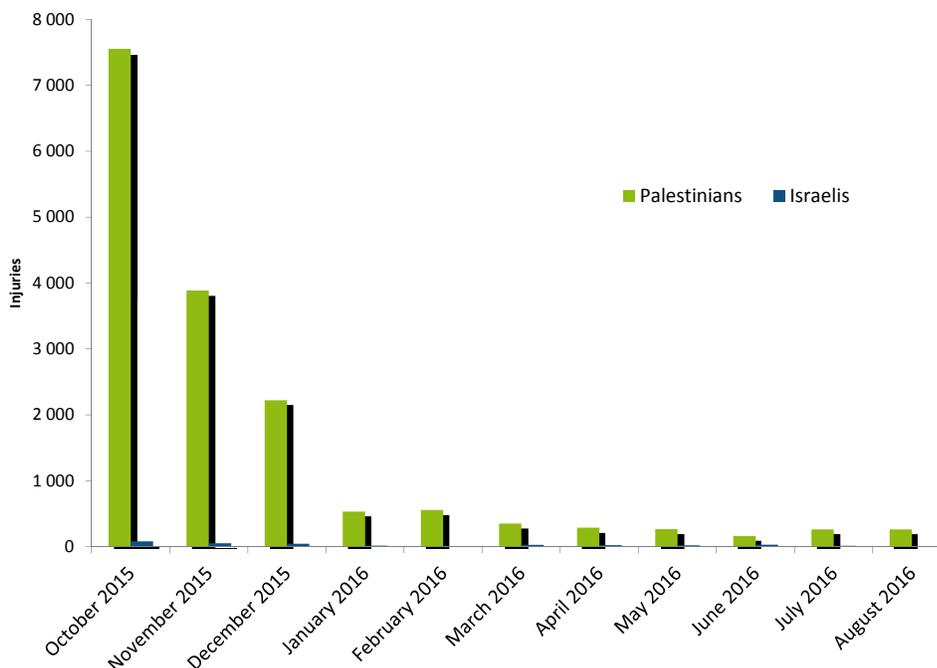

19. The reporting period was marked by continuing tensions, military incursions and raids by the Israeli occupying forces and clashes with Palestinian youth and protesters in many parts of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, on an almost daily basis. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, as at 31 August, 388 Palestinians had been killed and 15,542 injured during the reporting period (see figs. 1 and 2 below). Attacks, which took the lives of Israeli civilians, also occurred during the reporting period.

20. The aggravation of tensions in October and November 2015, especially at the holy sites in occupied East Jerusalem, was cause for concern and risked bringing about further destabilization. In response to the escalation, on 16 October, at the request of Jordan, the Security Council held an urgent meeting to address the unlawful and arbitrary practices of Israel against the Palestinian people, including incursions into the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound, in an attempt to change the status quo in the city and at Al-Haram Al-Sharif.

21. Among the most egregious cases of extrajudicial killings, on 24 March 2016, an unarmed Palestinian man, who had been shot at a military checkpoint in Hebron and was lying on the ground without any medical attention, was shot in the head and killed by an Israeli soldier. On 27 April, a 23-year-old five-month pregnant woman and her 16-year-old brother were killed by Israeli soldiers at the Qalandiya checkpoint between Jerusalem and Ramallah. The limited scope of Israeli investigations of Israeli occupying forces who have committed extrajudicial killings, which to date have led to only one conviction, is commonly cited as an example of the refusal by Israel to abide by international law and standards and a source of further impunity.

22. In Gaza, the lives of the 1.9 million Palestinians living in the Strip continue to be disrupted by the illegal blockade imposed by Israel, which is now entering its tenth year. Two years after the 2014 conflict, the rate of investigations opened by Israel into the serious allegations contained in the report of the independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1 (A/HRC/29/52) remains low. In January 2015, the International Criminal Court launched a preliminary investigation with respect to alleged crimes committed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. On 24 August, Israeli authorities announced that they had closed 13 criminal investigations into cases of Israeli soldiers accused of committing violations against Palestinian civilians during the 2014 war without imposing any punishment, while some 80 incidents were closed without opening a criminal investigation.

Jerusalem

23. The situation in East Jerusalem remained tense during the reporting period. Palestinians suffered from ongoing residency revocations and an increase in arrests, in particular of children, while some 20,000 Palestinian homes were threatened by demolitions. Israeli policies, seemingly aimed at shifting the demographic balance in the city, restricted opportunities for Palestinian economic and housing development, with one third of East Jerusalem expropriated for settlements and another 50 per cent zoned for infrastructure and green areas where Palestinians were not allowed to build. East Jerusalem continued to suffer from discrimination in the provision of infrastructure, education and municipal services. Of particular gravity was the situation of Palestinians living between the Israeli wall and the municipal border, who suffered from a lack of services and law and order, and access restrictions.

24. Provocative visits to the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound in occupied East Jerusalem by Jewish religious extremists and officials under the protection of Israeli occupying forces and serious breaches of the status quo escalated throughout the reporting period, repeatedly leading to violent confrontations with Palestinian worshippers.

25. In October 2015, in clashes between Palestinians and Israeli occupying forces, 68 Palestinians were killed and 1,118 injured. Nine Israelis were killed by Palestinians. In that month alone, a total of 22 violent incidents at religious sites were reported, including Israeli occupying forces entering the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound and firing rubber-coated steel bullets and stun and tear-gas grenades at worshippers. The following month saw 25 violent incidents at religious sites, concomitantly with clashes between Palestinian civilians and Israeli settlers and increased Israeli military raids on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps in the West Bank.

26. Subsequently, the Government of Israel decided to substantially increase its military forces in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to impose further restrictions on access to the Old City of Jerusalem for non-resident Palestinians. The incursions into the holy sites were perceived by the Palestinians as an attempt to change the status quo of the sites, as established under the existing agreements between Israel and Jordan, in its capacity as custodian of the holy sites, despite a public statement by Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu that the status quo would be maintained.

Settlements

27. Israel continued its policy of illegal settlement-building in the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem, in violation of international law (for example, the Fourth Geneva Convention) and Security Council and General Assembly resolutions and despite repeated international calls for a cessation of all settlement activities.

28. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, an estimated 150,000 Palestinians reside in Area C of the West Bank, over which Israel retains complete control and which contains the most significant land reserves available for Palestinian development, as well as the bulk of Palestinian agricultural and grazing land. While the number of Palestinian residents in Area C has steadily diminished owing to repressive Israeli policies in the area, 300,000 Israeli settlers are now living in approximately 135 Israeli settlements and 100 settlement outposts in Area C.

29. Israel has increased its control over Palestinian territory by declaring as “state land” tracts of Palestinian land that have not been registered as “private”. The policy is based on an interpretation of the Ottoman land code, which Israel adopted into its own legislation. For example, on 10 March, 580 acres south of Jericho were declared “state land”. In August, after the Israeli Supreme Court ruled that the illegal Israeli settlement outpost of Amona was to be dismantled, Israel announced plans to declare nearby Palestinian land as “state land” in order to relocate the settlers.

30. According to the General Bureau of Statistics of Israel, during the fourth quarter of 2015 and the first half of 2016, the construction of 817 settlement structures was begun, 999 structures were completed and 2,806 were still under construction as at 1 July.

31. Since the publication of the report of the Middle East Quartet on 1 July, Israel has persisted with such illegal actions and has advanced plans for more than 1,000 settlement units in occupied East Jerusalem and other settlements in the West Bank, including 770 housing units in the settlement of Gilo, between Bethlehem and East Jerusalem, and 200 settlement units in the Modi'in Illit settlement, west of Ramallah. In and around Hebron, Israel is planning to build new units in the settlement of Kiryat Arba and is examining plans for new settlement units for more than 100 Israelis on a portion of a military compound in the city.

32. Israel is also undertaking a new land survey to identify potential “state land” in the sensitive E2 area. This step could enable the establishment of a new settlement on the outskirts of Bethlehem, further restricting that city’s development, isolating it and contributing to the dismemberment of the West Bank.

33. Israel continued its attempts to retroactively “legalize” previously established settlement outposts and construction in existing settlements. In July, Israeli authorities advanced plans to legalize the outposts of Horesh Yaron and Rechelim and, on 31 August, they issued 179 building permits retroactively, legalizing under Israeli law housing units that had been erected in the settlement of Ofarim. These decisions drew strong condemnation from the international community, including the United States of America and the European Union.

34. Settler violence and terror against Palestinians and their property continued during the reporting period. The number of damaged, stolen or uprooted trees was the highest since 2006. On 20 July, members of the Dawabsha family were victims of an arson attack similar to the one suffered by their relatives in July 2015, when Israeli settlers set their home on fire. Data collected by the Israeli human rights organization Yesh Din indicate that 85 per cent of Israeli investigations into ideologically motivated crimes against Palestinians are closed owing to police investigative failures and that there is a mere 1.9 per cent chance that a complaint filed by a Palestinian with the Israel authorities will result in the conviction of the perpetrator/s.

Demolitions and displacement

35. A significant trend during the reporting period was the surge in demolitions by Israel, the occupying Power, of Palestinian homes and structures built without Israeli-issued permits, which are nearly impossible to obtain. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, to date in 2016, Israeli occupying forces in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, have demolished 726 structures, displacing 1,020 Palestinians. The figures for the period from 1 January to 31 August surpass those of the entire year of 2015, when there were 533 demolitions and 688 people displaced (see figs. 3 and 4).

Comparison of the number of Palestinians displaced by demolitions in the current and previous reporting periods

36. Israeli authorities demolished multiple residences and structures, including European Union-funded Palestinian homes, in Sebastia, Umm al-Kheir, Umm al-Hiran and the Jericho villages of al-Jiftlik and Fasayil. The stated intention to completely destroy the villages of Susiya and Umm al-Hiran near Hebron has provoked outrage on the part of the international community, with the United States and the European Union as well as other States and regional organizations strongly condemning the plan.

37. Bedouin communities in the occupied West Bank, such as the community of Abu Nawar southwest of the Israeli settlement of Ma'ale Adumim, were forcibly transferred owing to plans by Israeli authorities to build thousands of homes for Jewish-only settlements in the E1 corridor, in Area C east of Jerusalem. Among the 85 recently destroyed or confiscated structures, 24 had been provided by donors as emergency relief, while Israel contends that they had been built without official permits.

Reconstruction of the Gaza Strip

38. On 12 October 2014, at the Cairo International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, some 50 donor countries pledged $5.4 billion ($2.5 billion in new commitments) in relief funds for the Occupied Palestinian Territory, of which $3.5 billion was pledged for Gaza. At the time of the issuance of the present report, only 40 per cent of total pledges had been disbursed.

39. The Gaza Reconstruction Mechanism, namely, the temporary agreement between Israel, the State of Palestine and the United Nations to enable construction and reconstruction work on the large scale required in the Gaza Strip, started slowly but made some headway in 2016. By August 2016, half of the homes that had suffered partial damage and a third of the destroyed homes had been rebuilt. All of the 78 hospitals and the 252 schools that had been damaged have been repaired. However, 65,000 people remain displaced and are in temporary shelters awaiting the reconstruction of their destroyed homes. The humanitarian needs in this regard are immense.

40. In July, following the Turkish-Israeli reconciliation agreement, the first Turkish shipment of more than 11,000 tons of humanitarian aid (food and non-food items) for 10,000 families arrived at the Israeli port of Ashdod and was transported onward to the Gaza Strip. Another shipment of 2,200 tons arrived in Gaza just before Eid al-Fitr. The agreement is expected to allow Turkey to work on a number of infrastructure projects in Gaza, including a power station and a desalination plant.

41. The economic gap between Gaza and the West Bank is growing, primarily as a result of the impact of the ongoing restriction on the free movement of people and goods to and from the Gaza Strip, including on exports, which has severely diminished livelihoods and damaged the economy. According to the World Bank, the Gaza economy is not expected to rebound to even its pre-2014 war level until 2018.

Palestinian state-building

Local elections

42. During the reporting period, Palestinian state-building efforts continued, supported by the international community. In a welcome development, on 21 June, the Government of the State of Palestine announced that on 8 October, local council elections would be held throughout the occupied West Bank, Gaza and the districts of East Jerusalem governorate that had not been unilaterally annexed by Israel. Subsequently, Hamas expressed its willingness to participate in the elections and to facilitate the process in the Gaza Strip. Five Palestinian left-wing movements entered the elections on a unified list, while Palestinian Islamic Jihad announced that it would not participate.

43. In accordance with the election calendar, voter registration was conducted from 23 to 27 July, resulting in some 74,000 new applications and a total of 2,051,598 registered voters. Almost half of the new voters registered online, while the rest registered in the 416 municipalities. On 29 August, the Central Elections Commission-Palestine published a total of 874 electoral lists and candidates, including 787 lists in the West Bank and 87 lists in Gaza. It reported that its registration officers did not face security threats or access restrictions in the West Bank and Gaza. However, on 25 August, political factions and institutions in Nablus decided to postpone the elections in the wake of violent confrontations between Palestinian security forces and local armed groups.

44. Candidate nominations took place from 16 to 25 August and the final register of electoral lists was expected to be published on 24 September. Political campaigning was scheduled for 24 September to 6 October. On 8 September, however, the Palestinian Supreme Court in Ramallah suspended the elections, following a complaint about the disqualification of a number of Fatah lists by a Gaza court and owing to the inability to hold a vote in occupied East Jerusalem as a result of Israeli obstruction. On 4 October, one day after the Palestinian Supreme Court ruling to exclude the Gaza Strip from the elections, the Government of the State of Palestine decided to postpone the vote for four months.

Reconciliation

45. During the reporting period, Fatah and Hamas failed to significantly advance their reconciliation process. In March 2016, and again in June, their representatives met in Doha to continue discussions, without any progress. The South African non-governmental organization In Transition Initiative organized two intra-Palestinian dialogues with senior leaders from Fatah and Hamas and Palestinians from the whole political spectrum, as well as civil society, with a view to forging a common political vision for the future. In addition, Egypt has expressed its readiness to continue mediating the reconciliation process.

46. In August, Israeli Parliament members from the joint Arab list met with the Palestinian leadership to discuss the inter-Palestinian reconciliation efforts, in an attempt to play a bridging role not only between Israelis and Palestinians, but also between Fatah, Hamas and other Palestinian factions.

Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development

47. At the United Nations summit for the adoption of the post-2015 development agenda, held from 25 to 27 September 2015 in New York, the Government of the State of Palestine committed to the Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development. Subsequently, the Government integrated the Sustainable Development Goals into its agenda through the creation of a national planning matrix and established a national coordinating committee for the Sustainable Development Goals in the State of Palestine under the leadership of Prime Minister Rami Hamdallah.

48. The United Nations Environment Programme worked on enhancing the capacity of the State of Palestine for climate change adaptation and mitigation, recognizing the critical impact that climate change might have on water availability, land degradation and agriculture. This included a capacity assessment of six national institutions and the preparation of a capacity development action plan. The State of Palestine acceded to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and became a full member on 17 March.

Socioeconomic issues

49. At its meeting in April 2016, the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee of the International Assistance to Palestinians pointed to the sharp decline in donor aid to the Palestinian Authority, which, combined with the political impasse, was impairing the perspective of preserving the two-State solution. However, despite the need for more vigorous and predictable donor support, no amount of aid was considered sufficient to place the economy on the path of sustainable development under conditions of frequent military strikes and destruction of infrastructure, isolation from global markets, fragmentation of domestic markets and confiscation of and denial of access to national natural resources.

50. The substantial challenges faced by Palestinians and young people in particular result from their social, economic and political marginalization under occupation. Two out of five Palestinian youths were unemployed during the first quarter of 2016, according to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics. The highest unemployment rate was among young people between 20 and 24 years old, reaching 43 per cent, compared with 39 per cent for young people aged 25 to 29. Unemployment among young graduates reached 51 per cent. In Gaza, the youth unemployment rate exceeds 60 per cent.

51. The limitations imposed by the Israeli occupation on a dignified existence include vital access to clean, safe drinking water. In June, during Ramadan, the Israeli company Mekorot, the main supplier of water to the West Bank, interrupted its provision in Jenin, Nablus and Salfit districts for several days, arguing that repairs needed to be done. Palestinians were left without access to safe drinking water while illegal Israeli settlements enjoyed an uninterrupted supply.

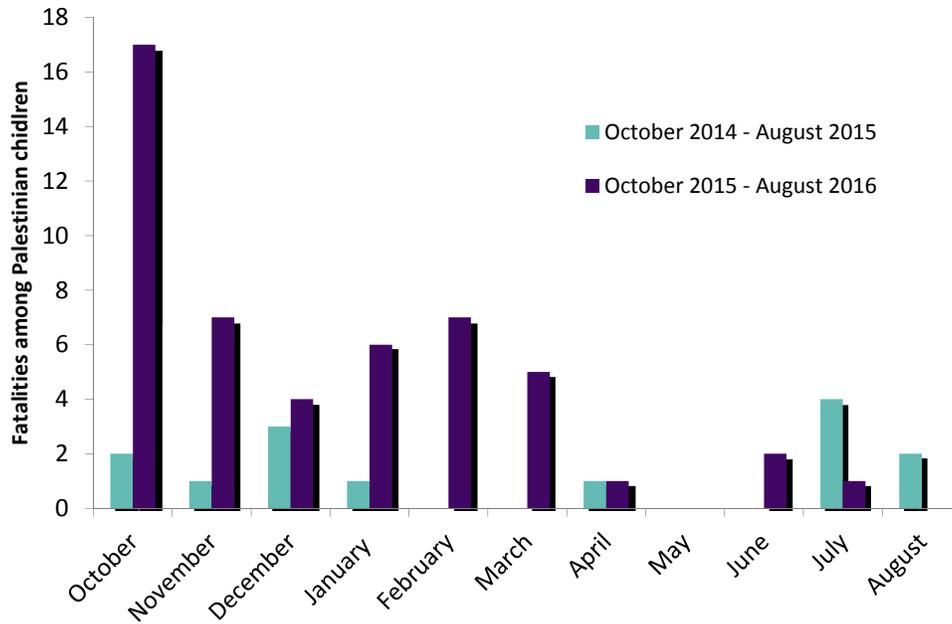

52. In July, in retaliation against attacks targeting Israeli civilians in the West Bank, Israel froze the transfer, to the Government of the State of Palestine, of tax revenues collected on behalf of the Palestinian people under the Paris Protocol to the Oslo Accords. The freeze deepened the Palestinian financial crisis and affected the livelihoods of thousands of Palestinians. In a report issued on 28 August, the World Bank estimated that the State of Palestine was losing $285 million in annual revenues under the current economic arrangements with Israel.

53. In a report by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people (A/71/174), prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 70/12, it was suggested that without the occupation, the Palestinian economy could be twice its current size.

54. In its resolution 2016/4 on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, and in an effort to tackle issues surrounding the advancement of women and social development, the Economic and Social Council expressed deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations, in addition to the high rates of poverty and unemployment, which affect women disproportionately.

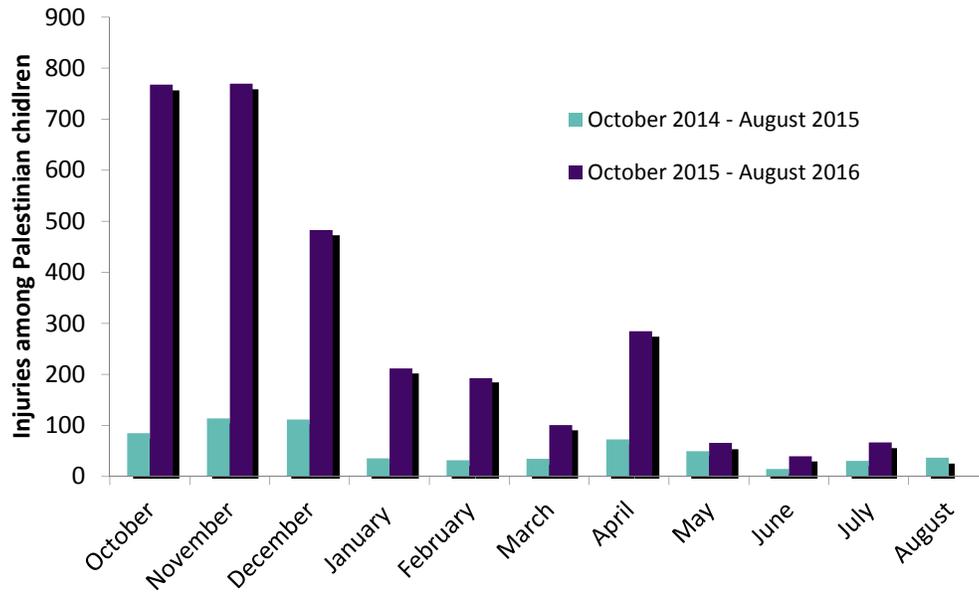

55. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the reporting period saw a significant increase in the number of Palestinian children killed and injured by Israeli occupying forces (see figs. 5 and 6 below). The report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict issued in April 2016 (A/70/836-S/2016/360) also highlights the increasing number of Palestinian children arrested and detained by Israeli occupying forces and prosecuted by juvenile military courts in the West Bank. According to the Israel Prison Service, the monthly average number of children in Israeli custody in 2015 increased by 15 per cent compared with 2014.

56. On 3 August, the Israeli Parliament approved the Youth Bill, allowing Israeli authorities to imprison Palestinian children as young as 12 years if convicted of “terrorism” against Israeli civilians or military personnel.

Palestinian prisoners

57. According to the Israeli human rights organization B’Tselem, at the end of April, 6,295 Palestinian security detainees and prisoners, including 414 minors, were held in Israeli prisons, 334 of them from the Gaza Strip. An additional 749 Palestinians were held in Israel Prison Service facilities for being in Israel illegally, 14 of them from the Gaza Strip. According to Addameer Palestinian Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, as at July, 62 women were being held in Israeli prisons.

58. In August, more than 200 Palestinian prisoners in Israeli prisons went on hunger strike to protest their treatment. Another Palestinian prisoner, Bilal Kayed, was on a hunger strike for 71 days, until 25 August, when he reached an agreement whereby he will be freed in December. Israeli authorities have extended by three months the detention without trial of Palestinian journalist Omar Nazzal, also on hunger strike, who was due for release on 22 August.

59. In July, the International Forum for Democracy and Human Rights filed a submission under article 15 with the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Court concerning the widespread and systematic torture of Palestinian detainees by the Palestinian security services in the occupied West Bank.

Chapter III

Mandate of the Committee

60. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. Further information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat at <https://unispal.un.org/DPA/DPR/unispal.nsf/udc.htm>.

61. On 24 November 2015, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 70/12), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (resolution 70/13) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (resolution 70/14). The Assembly also adopted resolution 70/15, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

62. The Committee is composed of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

63. The observers at the Committee meetings are: Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, LAS and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

64. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. At its 375th meeting, on 27 January 2016, the Committee elected Fodé Seck (Senegal) as Chair, Mahmoud Saikal (Afghanistan), Rodolfo Reyes Rodríguez (Cuba), Desra Percaya (Indonesia), Wilfried Emvula (Namibia) and María Rubiales de Chamorro (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs and Christopher Grima (Malta) as Rapporteur. At its 377th meeting, on 4 August, the Committee elected Dian Triansyah Djani (Indonesia) as a new Vice-Chair, to replace Desra Percaya, and Carmelo Inguanez as the new Rapporteur, to replace Christopher Grima, who had been assigned by their Governments to another post.

65. The current composition of the Security Council includes, as elected members, five members and observers of the Committee, namely, Egypt, Malaysia, Senegal, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

66. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings, gave briefings and put forward observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 70/12

1. Action taken in the Security Council

67. During the open debates at the Security Council held on 22 October 2015 and 26 January, 18 April and 12 July 2016, the Committee delivered statements highlighting the situation and calling upon the Council to take appropriate actions (see S/PV.7540; S/PV.7540, Resumption 1; S/PV.7610; S/PV.7673; S/PV.7736).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

68. The members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all the international conferences organized in accordance with the programme of work. In the margins of those events, the Committee delegation met with senior officials from the respective host countries. In particular, the Committee delegation met with the Indonesian Minister for Foreign Affairs and parliamentarians. In Amman, it held consultations with high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Jordan. In Dakar, the Committee delegation held consultations with the Foreign Relations Committee of the National Assembly of Senegal and the Minister of Justice and President of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute. In Stockholm, it met with high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Sweden. In Geneva, the Committee delegation held consultations with the President of the International Committee of the Red Cross and with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

69. On 12 November 2015, the Bureau held its first annual retreat to review the work of the Committee. Issues discussed included the need for periodic reviews of the efficacy of the programmes of work of the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights, the programme of work of the Committee for 2016, the work of the Bureau during the tenure of Senegal in the Security Council (2016-2017), capacity-building for the staff of the Government of the State of Palestine and engagement with civil society organizations.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 70/12 and 70/13

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

70. During the reporting period, the Committee held six periodic meetings at United Nations Headquarters in New York, in addition to the informal meetings of its Bureau and the meetings of its Working Group. At its 372nd meeting, on 5 October 2015, the Committee adopted its annual report. At its 373rd meeting, on 10 November, the Committee approved for submission to the General Assembly four draft resolutions, entitled “Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People”, “Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat”, “Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat” and “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”. Also at that meeting, UNCTAD briefed the Committee on the economic and social costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. At its 375th meeting, on 27 January 2016, attended by the Deputy Secretary-General of the United Nations, the Committee re-elected its Chair, Vice-Chairs and Rapporteur and adopted its annual programme of work. At its 376th meeting, on 7 April, the Committee focused on the reports on the international conferences held to date and adopted the programme for upcoming international conferences. At its 377th meeting, on 4 August, the Committee elected its Vice-Chair and Rapporteur. It also heard reports on international conferences and accredited two civil society organizations.

71. In addition to its periodic meetings, during the reporting period, the Committee organized a public event at United Nations Headquarters, namely, a briefing by Mahmoud Elkhafif, Coordinator of the UNCTAD Assistance to the Palestinian People Unit, and Atif Kubursi, Consultant to UNCTAD, which was held on 10 November.

2. Programme of international meetings and conferences

72. During the reporting period, the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, under the theme “Addressing the present and shaping the future of Jerusalem”, jointly organized with OIC, Jakarta, 14 and 15 December 2015;

(b) United Nations Civil Society Forum on the Question of Palestine, under the theme “Civil society action in support of justice in Palestine and ending the occupation”, Jakarta, 16 December. At the conference, attended by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Indonesia and the State of Palestine, participants provided up-to-date information on the current situation in Jerusalem to inform policy and decision makers, civil society and the general public and considered ways to enhance international efforts for a halt to unilateral Israeli actions as well as possible ways forward for Jerusalem. Speakers considered the efforts by the United Nations to find a solution to the long-standing Israeli-Palestinian conflict, the situation on the ground and regional and local civil society initiatives in support of Palestinian rights;

(c) United Nations Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine, under the theme “Instruments and institutions of international treaty law — theory and practice”, Amman, 15 to 17 March 2016. The round table, held in closed-door format, was aimed at developing the capacity and expertise of staff of the Government of the State of Palestine in the field of international treaty law, including implementation and reporting, in view of its accession in recent years to a series of international treaties and conventions. Participants discussed opportunities and strategies for the State of Palestine to utilize international legal instruments, explored relevant best practices and introduced attendees to the audiovisual international law library of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat;

(d) International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, under the theme “Jerusalem at the heart of the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, jointly organized with OIC, Dakar, 3 and 4 May. The conference, attended by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Senegal and the State of Palestine, provided up-to-date information on the current situation in East Jerusalem under occupation; identified opportunities to intensify international support for resilience, protection and development in the city; explored possible scenarios for a just and lasting settlement of the question of Jerusalem; and provided a venue for an open exchange among experts, civil society activists and academics;

(e) United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, under the theme “Agenda 2030: Paving the way towards a peaceful, independent and sustainable State of Palestine”, Stockholm, 19 and 20 May. Participants reviewed the challenges and constraints of the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals for the State of Palestine under the Israeli occupation. They also looked at ways of building: (i) resilient and sustainable economic growth while addressing humanitarian needs; (ii) long-term investment in young people and women as a key to building a peaceful and inclusive society; and (iii) international solidarity and partnerships for development;

(f) United Nations International Conference in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, under the theme “Peace is possible — frameworks for a way forward”, Geneva, 29 and 30 June. The conference provided experienced peace negotiators, and representatives of Member States, United Nations entities and civil society, a venue to: (i) discuss lessons learned from past stages of the peace process and initiatives such as the Arab Peace Initiative; (ii) assess recent initiatives such as the French peace initiative; and (iii) discuss new proposals for a lasting solution to the conflict. Questions were raised as to whether the long-standing formula of bilateral peace negotiations had reached its limits. Reference was made to other multilateral negotiations as examples to be followed, with the international community acting together to support Israeli-Palestinian peace.

73. The public events mentioned above were attended by representatives of Governments, intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media. Detailed information about the meetings is being issued in the form of publications of the Division for Palestinian Rights and is available on the “Question of Palestine” website maintained by the Division.

3. Cooperation with intergovernmental and regional organizations

74. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with intergovernmental organizations. The Committee is appreciative of the active participation of their representatives in the various international events held under its auspices and the co-sponsorship provided by OIC in the organization of the two International Conferences on the Question of Jerusalem, held in Jakarta, which the Secretary General of OIC attended, and in Dakar, respectively. The Committee is also grateful for the financial support provided by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) Fund for International Development for the annual training programme for Palestinian staff organized by the Division in October 2015 to familiarize them with various aspects of the multilateral work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies. The African Union, LAS and OIC, as observers to the Committee, regularly attend the meetings of the Committee and its Working Group and participate in their work.

4. Cooperation with civil society

Civil society organizations

75. The Committee continued its cooperation with civil society organizations worldwide, through its Working Group and other outreach activities carried out by the Division for Palestinian Rights. During the reporting period, two civil society organizations were accredited to the Committee. Civil society representatives participated in all public international meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee. On 16 December 2015, a civil society forum was organized by the Committee in Jakarta, in conjunction with the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem.

76. The Working Group of the Committee, chaired by the Deputy Permanent Representative of Malta, met periodically and hosted various events at Headquarters, including:

(a) Briefing by representatives of the human rights organization Adalah (the Legal Center for Arab Minority Rights in Israel) on the recent situation in East Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza, 9 November 2015;

(b) Panel discussion on the theme “Women’s role in the search for Israeli-Palestinian peace” in the margins of the sixtieth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, on 14 March 2016. Hiba Hussein, Legal adviser for the peace negotiations and founding member of the Al-Mustaqbal Foundation, and Lihi Joffe, Board member of the Coalition of Women for Peace, spoke about their efforts for peace in a public discussion moderated by Sarah Taylor, Women, Peace and Security Advocate at Human Rights Watch;

(c) Screening of the film “Giraffada”, organized in cooperation with the Department of Public Information, 7 April;

(d) Briefing by Sahar Francis, Director of Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, and Khaled Quzmar, General Director of Defense for Children International-Palestine, moderated by Sarah Leah Whitson, Executive Director of the Middle East and North Africa Division of Human Rights Watch, on the situation of detained children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 27 April.

77. The Division for Palestinian Rights maintains a civil society page (<https://unispal.un.org/DPA/DPR/unispal.nsf/udc.htm>) on the “Question of Palestine” website and the UN Platform for Palestine site (www.unfpf.org) as a tool for outreach to civil society organizations and to foster civil society networking and cooperation. During the reporting period, it continued to publish the periodic online bulletin NGO Action News, reaching out to more than 900 civil society organizations around the world, in order to catalogue and publicize civil society initiatives, and organized brown-bag sessions.

Parliaments, interparliamentary organizations and local governments

78. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Representatives of parliaments and interparliamentary organizations participated in international events organized by the Committee during the reporting period. Among others, members of the Palestinian Legislative Council, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean, the Israeli Knesset, the Swedish Riksdag and the National Assembly of Senegal participated in the international meetings held under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee delegation held meetings with parliamentarians at the Parliament of Indonesia and the National Assembly of Senegal on the sidelines of the conferences in Jakarta and Dakar, respectively.

5. Research, monitoring and publications

79. The Division for Palestinian Rights carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, the Division prepared the following publications for dissemination:

- (a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;
- (b) Monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine based on media reports and other sources;
- (c) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;
- (d) Special bulletin and information notes on the observance of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;
- (e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process;
- (f) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

6. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

80. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant technical and library services of the United Nations Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and upgrade the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the “Question of Palestine” website (<https://unispal.un.org/DPA/DPR/unispal.nsf/udc.htm>). The Division maintained its Facebook, Twitter and YouTube pages to disseminate information about the work on the question of Palestine by the Committee and the United Nations as a whole. As part of its efforts to improve on access to its publications and document collection, the Division for Palestinian Rights is in the process of redesigning the website on the “Question of Palestine” and aligning it with current United Nations organizational standards.

7. Capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine

81. As part of its efforts to develop the annual capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine, as mandated by General Assembly resolutions, including resolution 70/13, and in consultation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations in New York, the Division for Palestinian Rights organized and administered a number of capacity-building initiatives. In October 2015, the Division organized the annual training programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine. These training activities allow the Palestinian staff to familiarize themselves with various aspects of the multilateral work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies, including the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council. The training is financially supported by the OPEC Fund for International Development. In March 2016, 25 Palestinians received training at the United Nations Round Table on Legal Aspects of the Question of Palestine, held under the theme “Instruments and institutions of international treaty law — theory and practice”, which took place in Amman. In May, in collaboration with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Division arranged for two Palestinian staff members to travel to Geneva and observe a session of the Committee against Torture.

8. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

82. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 23 November 2015 at Headquarters in New York, on 24 November at the United Nations Office at Vienna and on 30 November at the United Nations Office at Geneva. At Headquarters, the Committee held a special meeting with the participation of the Deputy Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly and the President of the Security Council and organized a photo exhibit entitled “Palestinian Children: Overcoming Tragedies with Hope, Dreams, Resilience and Dignity”. The Committee noted with appreciation that International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People had also been observed by United Nations Information Centres and other bodies in many cities throughout the world. Details on the observance can be found on the website (unispal.un.org) maintained by the Division.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 70/14 and by other United Nations entities

83. During the reporting period, the Department of Public Information continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine in accordance with General Assembly resolution 70/14.

84. The Department organized the annual five-week training programme for 10 Palestinian journalists, held from November to December in New York and Washington, D.C., and its annual International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East, held in Pretoria from 31 August to 2 September.

85. The Department continued to regularly cover the broad range of issues and developments related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process across its multilingual news platforms. Live coverage was provided and materials made available on demand through United Nations Television, on the Department website and on social media.

86. The Arabic Website Unit of the Department of Public Information provided support for campaigns and online appeals run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, focusing on the humanitarian situation affecting the Palestinian people and the Palestine refugee populations in the Middle East.

87. The Department's global network of more than 60 United Nations Information Centres organized a number of outreach activities, including exhibitions, film screenings and conferences, and translated and disseminated information materials on the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

88. In addition, a number of outreach events to commemorate the 2015 International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People were organized at Headquarters and with United Nations Information Centres, including those in Cairo; Canberra; Dakar; Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania; Harare; Mexico City; and Tehran.

89. In June, the Birzeit University main library was designated the first United Nations depository library in the State of Palestine.

90. The Department is also finalizing the revised and updated edition of The UN and the Question of Palestine, a publication for journalists, academics, students and the public at large.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

91. UNRWA continued to provide extensive services and emergency assistance to over 5 million Palestine refugees in all its fields of operations in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. While it endeavours to serve this community in accordance with its mandate from the General Assembly, the Agency has been confronted with recurring and severe financial crises, including in 2016, jeopardizing its ability to deliver its core programmes.

92. The Agency continues to be particularly concerned about the more than 450,000 Palestine refugees who remain in the Syrian Arab Republic, 60 per cent of whom are displaced. Overall, 95 per cent of Palestine refugees in the country are now reliant on UNRWA for assistance. The wider destabilization of the region, resulting from the conflict in the Syrian Arab Republic, continues to pose major socioeconomic and security concerns for Jordan and Lebanon, who host large numbers of refugees from the Syrian Arab Republic, in addition to existing resident populations of Palestine refugees.

United Nations Development Programme/Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs

93. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), through its Programme of Assistance to the Palestinian People, continued to work on multiple levels in order to deliver on and implement the developmental needs of the State of Palestine. In supporting the Palestinian statehood agenda, the UNDP Programme focused on key areas: democratic governance and the rule of law; economic empowerment and private sector development; environment and management of natural resources; and public and social infrastructure. The programme is also critically engaged in supporting the harmonization of Gaza with the West Bank in terms of social, economic and political planning to better serve Palestinians. Similarly, in Area C, where continued barriers to the development of infrastructure are harming the status and livelihoods of vulnerable communities, the Programme has been a key agent in supporting and advocating for the basic rights of the local population to access health care, education and water.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

94. The Committee remains convinced that a negotiated peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in all its aspects, in accordance with the relevant United Nations resolutions, and an urgent end to the Israeli occupation and the realization of the rights of the Palestinian people, including to self-determination and independence, should be a top priority of the international community.

95. In its continued support for the revitalization of the peace negotiations, the Committee aligns itself with the view that the model of bilateral negotiations, which after more than two decades have not brought about the end of the Israeli occupation and the full independence of the State of Palestine on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, should be revised. The Committee welcomes the serious steps taken by the international community towards putting forward a new, expanded multilateral framework including key regional partners, in view of reigniting the peace process on a new political horizon with the necessary international support. Serious efforts are needed between the parties to overcome their deeply entrenched mistrust, including confidence-building efforts, and demonstrate the courage and leadership that are required at this time. The Committee supports efforts from any country able to advance this process, including through bilateral negotiations.

96. As has consistently emerged during the international meetings organized by the Committee, a resolution of the conflict remains central to peace and stability throughout the volatile Middle East region and to global peace and stability. As such, the conflict clearly requires a comprehensive regional solution, conceivably with support from the reinvigorated Quartet, that includes greater engagement with key Arab States and other States concerned. The Arab Peace Initiative remains a significant contribution to such a regional settlement. The Committee supports the efforts in that regard and will continue its enhanced cooperation with LAS and OIC.

97. The Committee urges the Security Council, which has a primary responsibility for maintaining peace and security under the Charter of the United Nations, and the General Assembly to play a constructive role in reaffirming the long-standing parameters for peace based on the relevant United Nations resolutions and defining a new peace architecture for resolving the conflict. Positive consideration should be given to all proposals that endeavour to offer a way out of the current impasse. The Committee intends to contribute to a healthy and necessary discussion of these issues through its programme of work.

98. The Committee reiterates that the international community must intensify its efforts, uphold its moral and legal responsibility and demand the lifting of the Israeli blockade of Gaza. It notes that, two years after the devastating war of 2014, important strides in the reconstruction of Gaza have been made. However, clean water, sanitation and electricity still remain scarce and the fact that more than 65,000 people remain displaced continues to have a significant impact on an already dire humanitarian situation. The Committee calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges in order to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, essential for alleviating the distress of the Palestinians, including women and children.

99. Ultimately, in order to ensure respect for the rights of the Palestinian people, prevent deterioration beyond a breaking point and break the build-destroy-rebuild cycle, the Israeli blockade on the Gaza Strip must end and there must be a lifting of all closures within the framework of Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). A Palestinian unity government is also essential to take up governance and security functions in Gaza and exercise control over the crossings.

100. The Committee reiterates that violations of humanitarian and human rights law must be investigated and that perpetrators of such violations should be brought to justice. The Committee expresses its concern at the limited implementation by Israel, the occupying Power, of the findings and recommendations contained in the report of the independent commission of inquiry on the 2014 Gaza conflict (A/HRC/29/52). The Committee welcomes the appointment of Stanley Michael Lynk as Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 and will strive to facilitate the implementation of his mandate.

101. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, in particular in respect of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It welcomes in that regard the adoption by the Human Rights Council of its resolution 31/36 calling for the creation of a database of all actors conducting business in areas under Israeli military occupation. The adoption of the resolution is in line with the appropriate stance of the European Union on the importation of products from settlements, encouraging its members and other organizations and States to adopt and implement policies that guarantee adherence to international conventions in regard of illegal settlements in occupied areas, in particular the Fourth Geneva Convention. It welcomes further steps taken by Governments and private businesses to dissociate themselves from policies that directly or indirectly support settlements.

102. The Committee will continue, through its mandated activities, to generate heightened international awareness of the question of Palestine and international support for the rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination and independence. In that connection, the Committee emphasizes the useful contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat in support of its mandate and encourages it to make such adjustments to its approved programme of work as it may consider necessary in the light of developments. It notes with satisfaction: (a) the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support on the part of the international community for the objectives of the programme, as evidenced by the number of and participation in international meetings and conferences as well as the commemorations of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People; (b) the continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine; and (c) an increase in international awareness of the United Nations policies and activities on the question of Palestine, as evidenced by the number of visitors to the Question of Palestine website and followers of the social media sites maintained by the Division. The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to its partners, in particular OIC, which contributed extrabudgetary resources, including for their active participation in conferences and events.

103. The Committee will focus its programme of international meetings and conferences in 2017, to be implemented by the Division, on amplifying international support for the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, stressing the role and responsibility of the United Nations in this regard and in this year marking the fiftieth anniversary of the Israeli occupation and the seventieth anniversary of the General Assembly resolution concerning the future government of Palestine and outlining the Plan of Partition (resolution 181 (II)). The Committee intends to work closely with other United Nations actors on the ground, such as the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the United Nations towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner in accordance with international legitimacy (see Assembly resolution 70/12, tenth preambular para.).

104. The Committee will continue to mobilize support and assistance for Palestinian institution-building and all other efforts to support and enhance the viability of the State of Palestine, in particular in the light of its efforts to implement the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. It will reach out to and engage Governments, parliamentarians and civil society and pay particular attention to the inclusion and empowerment of women and young people and their organizations.

105. The Committee also considers that the annual capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine, carried out by the Division, directly contributes to Palestinian efforts to establish a more efficient, accountable and transparent government. The Committee expresses its appreciation for the funding of this programme in 2015 by the OPEC Fund for International Development and strongly recommends that this important mandated activity be continued and, where possible, further expanded. Special attention should be paid to the gender balance of the programme, expanding the pool of potential participants to all offices and departments of the Government and optimizing the use of resources to allow the maximum number of participants possible. Continued voluntary contributions from Member and observer States and international organizations in line with their capacity are to be encouraged in order to place the programme on a solid financial footing.

106. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people. The Committee will continue to expand its efforts to engage additional civil society organizations and the public at large that support a just and peaceful solution to the question of Palestine, including in Israel. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations, including that of the Committee, with the overall aim of promoting the achievement by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights.

107. The Committee looks forward to further developing its cooperation with parliamentarians and their umbrella organizations. Parliamentarians have a special responsibility to ensure that their Governments actively promote and support the realization of a peaceful and just settlement of the question of Palestine and uphold their obligations under international law, including humanitarian and human rights law.

108. The Committee will reach out to all regional groups at the United Nations with a view to expanding its membership. It will actively work to organize more thematic debates on the question of Palestine in various United Nations forums. Recognizing the growing importance of cooperation with developing countries and regional and subregional organizations in sharing and implementing sustainable, cost-effective and replicable experiences and solutions that work, it will make a special effort to step up engagement with such countries and organizations in the context of the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation.

109. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support and the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities, in support of the Committee's communication strategy. The Division should pay special attention to the continued development of the Question of Palestine portal, the preparation of publications and information materials on various aspects of the question of Palestine and their widest possible dissemination, including in the official languages of the United Nations, and the use of web-based social information networks, such as Facebook, Twitter and YouTube. It should also continue to develop the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine document collection by reflecting current issues and events and by continuing to digitize and upload historical documents and to add user-friendly search features. The Division should continue to collaborate with the United Nations libraries at Headquarters and in Geneva in the search for historic documents.

110. The Division should continue to organize the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

111. The Committee intends to request that the General Assembly proclaim 2017 as "International Year to End the Israeli Occupation".

112. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public of the relevant issues. It requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

113. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and their leadership and besetting the peace process, the Committee calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report by the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to resolution 71/20 (2016) of the General Assembly adopted on 30 November 2016. It contains information on the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work, designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights, including through maintaining international awareness of and mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just, comprehensive and lasting solution of the question of Palestine, enhancing international solidarity with the plight of the Palestinian people and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts to build a viable and sustainable future independent State of Palestine.
2. In chapter II the Committee reviews the situation relating to the question of Palestine, including events that have taken place on the ground.
3. Chapters III and IV outline the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and provide information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work from 4 October 2016 to 5 September 2017.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with intergovernmental organizations and civil society. The chapter also contains information about the international conferences and capacity-building workshops organized by the Committee, as well as other mandated activities and events carried out by the Division for Palestinian Rights on the Committee's behalf.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine carried out by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 71/22 of 30 November 2016.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Review of the situation relating to the question of Palestine

Security Council and resolution 2334 (2016)

7. On 14 October 2016, Malaysia, with Angola, Egypt, Senegal and the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, hosted an Arrria formula meeting entitled “Illegal Israeli settlements: obstacles to peace and the two-State solution”, concerning the negative impact of Israeli settlements on the Palestinian people and their quest for self-determination and independence, and the prospects for achieving a just, lasting and peaceful solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The meeting heard first-hand information from experts and civil society representatives, as well as statements from members of the Security Council and other Member States condemning the ongoing expansion of Israeli settlements and demanding their cessation.

8. On 23 December 2016, the Security Council adopted resolution 2334 (2016), sponsored by Malaysia, New Zealand, Senegal and the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, a landmark document in which the Council reiterated its vision of a region where two democratic States, Israel and Palestine, lived side by side in peace within secure and recognized borders. The Council reaffirmed its relevant resolutions, and the obligation of Israel, the occupying Power, to abide scrupulously by its legal obligations and responsibilities under the Fourth Geneva Convention. It stressed that the status quo was not sustainable and that significant steps, consistent with the transition contemplated by prior agreements, were urgently needed (a) to stabilize the situation and reverse negative trends on the ground, which were steadily eroding the two-State solution and entrenching a one-State reality; and (b) to create the conditions for successful final status negotiations and for advancing the two-State solution through those negotiations. The Council reaffirmed that establishment by Israel of settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, had no legal validity and constituted a major obstacle to the achievement of the two-State solution and a just, lasting and comprehensive peace, and demanded their immediate and complete cessation. It also condemned all measures aimed at altering the demographic composition, character and status of the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, and expressed grave concern that continuing Israeli settlement activities were dangerously imperilling the viability of the two-State solution. The Council also underlined that it would not recognize any changes to the 1967 lines, including with regard to Jerusalem, other than those agreed by the parties through negotiations. It called for immediate steps to prevent all acts of violence against civilians, including acts of terror, as well as acts of provocation and destruction, and called for accountability in that regard. The Council also called upon all parties to continue to exert collective efforts to launch credible negotiations on all final status issues in the Middle East peace process. It urged in that regard the intensification of international and regional diplomatic efforts aimed at achieving, without delay, a just, lasting and comprehensive solution, on the basis of the relevant resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet road map, and requested the Secretary-General to report to the Council every three months on the implementation of the resolution.

9. In addition to reporting pursuant to resolution 2334 (2016), the Secretary-General continued the efforts of his predecessors in support of a peaceful solution to the question of Palestine. In his statements, including on 5 June 2017 on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the 1967 Arab-Israeli War, he reiterated the position of the international community, enshrined in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, that the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory had to end through a negotiated two-State outcome that would meet Israeli security needs and Palestinian aspirations for statehood and sovereignty, and would achieve the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. From 28 to 30 August he visited Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, where he held talks with the leaders of both States.

Human Rights Council

10. In his annual report to the Human Rights Council on the human rights situation in Palestine and other occupied Arab territories (A/HRC/35/19), the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights assessed the overall rate of “full implementation” by Israel of its human rights obligations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory at 0.4 per cent. In its response to the second report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, contained in the addendum to the report, despite the fact that the International Court of Justice, Security Council and General Assembly have clearly affirmed the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, along with the core international human rights covenants, Israel expressed the view that the human rights conventions do not apply beyond its territory (see A/HRC/25/15/Add.1, para. 56).

11. On 24 March, the Human Rights Council adopted four resolutions in which it: (a) emphasized the need to ensure accountability and justice for all violations of international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (resolution 34/28); (b) reaffirmed the inalienable, permanent and unqualified right of the Palestinian people to self-determination (resolution 34/29); (c) demanded that Israel cease all practices and actions that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people or alter the character, status and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory (resolution 34/30); and (d) demanded that Israel immediately cease all settlement activities and reverse the settlement policy, and requested that all parties concerned, including United Nations bodies, ensure the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the independent international fact-finding mission to investigate the implications of settlements on the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of the Palestinian people throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (resolution 34/31).

12. Pursuant to resolution 31/36, the Human Rights Council requested the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) to produce a database of all business enterprises involved in the activities described in the report of the independent international fact-finding mission to investigate the implications of the Israeli settlements on the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of the Palestinian people throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (A/HRC/22/63, para. 96), to be updated annually, and to transmit the data therein in the form of a report to the Council at its thirty-fourth session. At its organizational meeting on 13 February 2017, the Council decided, for one time only, to defer its consideration of that report to the end of December 2017.

13. During its annual field visit to the region in July 2017 to gather information for the annual report to the General Assembly, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories observed that the Israeli authorities continued with policies and practices that negatively impact the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.¹

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization

14. On 2 May 2017, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) adopted resolution 201 EX/PX/DR.30.1, entitled “Occupied Palestine”, in which it, inter alia, reaffirmed the importance of the Old City of Jerusalem for the three monotheistic religions, reminded that all actions by Israel altering the character of Jerusalem were null and void; and reaffirmed that the sacred sites in Bethlehem and Hebron were an integral part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, shared the conviction affirmed by the international community that the two sites are of religious significance for Judaism, Christianity and Islam, and deplored the ongoing Israeli works which harmfully affect the integrity of the site as well as the denial of access to places of worship. On 7 July (WHC/17/41.COM/18), the UNESCO World Heritage Committee inscribed Hebron/ Al-Khalil Old Town, which is the site of the Cave of the Patriarchs/Ibrahimi Mosque, sacred to Jews and Muslims, on the World Heritage List, and stated that the property was faced with serious threats which could have deleterious effects on its inherent characteristics and for which an immediate action by the World Heritage Committee was needed.

Restrictions on non-governmental organizations and peace activists

15. On 3 March 2017, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, and the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders, Michel Forst, expressed deep concern about the escalating restrictions the Government of Israel was placing on human rights defenders in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and called on Israel to observe its obligations under international law to protect human rights defenders and promote their work.

Intra-Palestinian reconciliation

16. The ongoing Palestinian political divide continued to be an impediment to the fulfilment of Palestinian national aspirations. On 16 March, Hamas announced the formation of an administrative committee to manage the Gaza Strip, a de facto parallel government. On 3 May, the movement unveiled its new charter that, while falling short of recognizing Israel, accepted for the first time the idea of a Palestinian State within the 1967 borders.

17. Since April, the Government of the State of Palestine has reduced the payments to nearly 60,000 public sector employees in the Gaza Strip, and in May also reduced payment for electricity supplied to the enclave by Israel, arguing that Hamas, as the receiver of taxes in Gaza, should pay for such services.

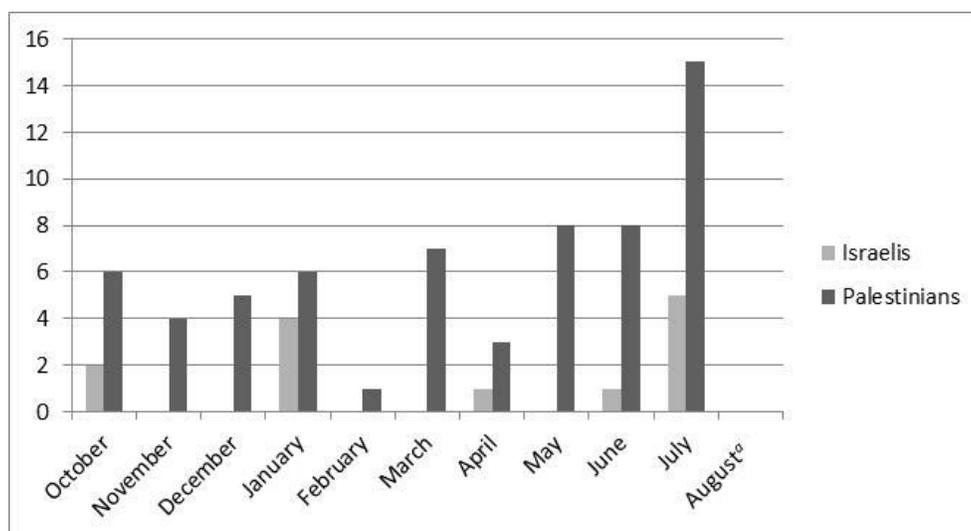

18. Municipal elections were held in the West Bank, excluding East Jerusalem, on 13 May. A boycott by Hamas, in addition to Islamic Jihad and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, prevented the holding of elections in the Gaza Strip. According to the Central Elections Commission, Fatah maintained a majority of the 3,253 local council seats (1,260 by acclamation, 429 in contest). Independent candidates won 1,204 seats (195 by acclamation, 1,009 in contest). Other parties and lists gained the remaining 360 seats.

19. Prospects of reconciliation between Hamas and Fatah remain low. Both continue to issue calls for a unified government and open elections, including for the Palestinian parliament and President, throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, but have not been able to agree on modalities. A number of reconciliation meetings and efforts by third parties, including by Egypt, Qatar and the Russian Federation, have not yielded any measurable progress.

Security

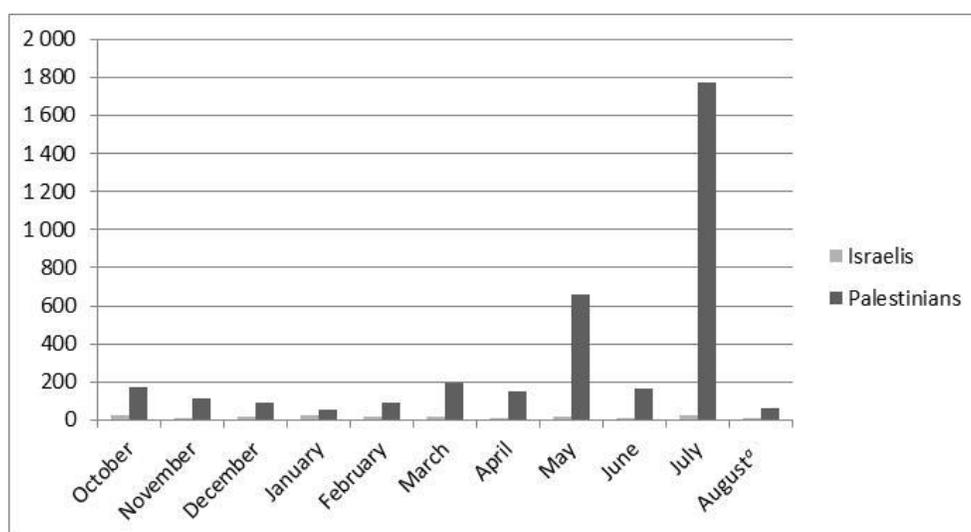

20. The reporting period was marked by continuing tensions, military incursions and raids by the Israeli occupying forces and clashes with Palestinian youth and protesters in many parts of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, on an almost daily basis. Settler violence against the Palestinian civilian people also continued. During the reporting period, a total of 52 Palestinians, including 4 women and 10 children, and 8 Israelis, including 5 women and 1 child, were killed in conflict-related violence, and many more were injured (see figures I and II).

Jerusalem

21. Israeli occupying forces in East Jerusalem have at times increased restrictions on movement and access to the holy sites, fomenting discontent, resistance and even violent actions. In July, an attack on Israeli security officers by Israeli Arab citizens at Al-Haram al-Sharif and the subsequent change of the historic status quo at the holy site resulted in a crisis that also involved Jordan, custodian of the Muslim and Christian holy sites in the City, and the Islamic Waqf. International efforts helped to solve the crisis and the Government of Israel agreed to revert to the original security procedures at the compound. In confrontations during the crisis, 14 people were killed (6 Palestinians, 6 Israelis and 2 Jordanians) and over a thousand injured, the vast majority of them Palestinians. On 21 July, in the course of the crisis, Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas suspended contacts of the State of Palestine with Israel on all levels, including security coordination.

22. According to the Ministry of Interior of Israel, from the beginning of the occupation in 1967 until the end of 2016, Israel revoked the residency status of at least 14,595 Palestinians from East Jerusalem. The discriminatory system pushes many Palestinians to leave in what amounts to forcible transfers, a serious violation of international law, which could amount to a war crime under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.

The Gaza Strip

23. The blockade imposed by Israel on the Gaza Strip since 2007, in breach of international law, continued into its tenth year. As the occupying Power,² Israel has an obligation to the civilian population, in particular, to facilitate rapid and unimpeded passage of humanitarian relief. Despite warnings issued for years, including by the United Nations country team, Gaza has continued on its trajectory of socioeconomic de-development. Ongoing humanitarian assistance and international service delivery, especially through the services of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), are partially mitigating the impact, but cannot stop the downward spiral that would make Gaza “unliveable” by 2020.³

24. Israel also continues to enforce access restrictions in unilaterally determined wide buffer areas inside the enclave along Gaza’s perimeter areas and to severely restrict access to the sea by Palestinian fishermen, routinely harassing them and firing at them, endangering lives and impairing their livelihoods.

25. Agricultural land damaged in the 2014 conflict is years away from yielding a harvest comparable to pre-conflict levels. Most of the damaged businesses have been unable to fully resume operations. Over 1 million Palestinians in Gaza are Claims by Israel that its disengagement from Gaza in 2005 amounted to the end of the occupation of the Gaza Strip were rejected on the basis that the control that Israel retained of Gaza’s air space, sea space and external borders continuously amounted to effective control (see report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, A/61/470, para. 7).

moderately to severely food insecure, despite many of them already receiving food assistance or other forms of social transfers.

26. The Gazan economy remains stagnant, and the poverty level stands at about 40 per cent. Over 42 per cent of Gazans are unemployed. Especially hard hit are the youth; as of the end of 2016, 60.3 per cent of 20 to 24-year-olds and 52.1 per cent of 25 to 29-year-olds were out of work, an increase of 10 and 16 per cent, respectively, over the previous 10 years. In the last 10 years, unemployment among women almost doubled, to 64.4 per cent, making women's labour force participation in Gaza among the lowest in the world. In the meantime the ability of Palestinians to move in and out of Gaza remains an important lifeline for their living conditions.

27. Young persons in the Gaza Strip — 43 per cent of the population is below the age of 15 — face many challenges. They face social, cultural and economic marginalization and isolation. In exchange for protection or a shelter for them and their families, some of them drop out of school to work low-skilled jobs, leave their jobs or marry at an early age.

28. Recent months have seen a significant decline in energy supply, including shortages caused by the continuing impasse between the Government of the State of Palestine and Hamas. As the Government stopped waiving taxes on fuel for the Gaza Power Plant and the de facto authorities refused to purchase the taxed fuel, the operation of the power plant came to a halt in April. As a result, Gaza's energy supply was reduced to only 120 megawatts and daily blackouts reached 20 hours per day (see figure III).

29. By the end of 2017, the only water source in Gaza will be depleted, and irreversibly so by 2020, unless immediate remedial action is taken. Access to safe drinking water in Gaza through the public water network plummeted from 98.3 per cent in 2000 to a mere 10.5 per cent in 2014, compared to almost 97 per cent in the West Bank. Palestinians in Gaza are forced to rely on, and pay for, water from water tanks, containers and bottled water.

Settlements

30. During the reporting period, there was an alarming increase in settlement construction by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention and, most recently, Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\).

31. On 23 November 2016, the occupying authorities decided to advance plans for 500 new settlement units in the illegal settlement of Ramat Shlomo, further encroaching on the East Jerusalem neighbourhood of Beit Hanina.

32. In January, two major announcements were made for a total of 5,500 settlement units in several settlements in Area C of the occupied West Bank. On 1 February 2017, the occupying Power announced its intention to establish a new settlement to house the residents of the illegal Amona outpost, following the demolition of the latter on 2 February by order of the Israeli High Court of Justice. Construction in at least four East Jerusalem settlements was enabled by the granting of building permits for over 900 units.

33. On 6 February, the Israeli Knesset passed a law (the so-called “regularization bill”) that would retroactively “legalize” Israeli settlements on privately owned Palestinian land. The bill was roundly condemned by the international community; Israeli and Palestinian non-governmental organizations have since appealed the ruling in the Israeli Supreme Court.

34. Spring 2017 saw a further substantial increase in settlement-related announcements, with plans for nearly 4,000 settlement units advanced and 2,000 tenders issued. Plans for some 3,200 units were also advanced through the various stages of the planning process in 22 settlements in Area C of the occupied West Bank, including over 2,800 housing units. In East Jerusalem 770 units reached the final approval stage, and building permits for more than 360 additional units were granted by the occupying authorities.

35. In July, plans were advanced for over 2,300 settlement units in East Jerusalem — 30 per cent more than were advanced during all of 2016. This includes plans for some 1,600 units expanding a ring of settlements north of East Jerusalem, as well as other plans that may involve demolition of Palestinian houses. In addition to the confiscation of Palestinian land and properties as a result of such settlement activities, the construction of all of the above-mentioned settlement units will entail the transfer of tens of thousands more Israeli settlers to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in grave breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

36. On 25 July, Israeli settlers seized an apartment in a building located in the H2 area of Hebron city, in violation of an Israeli order declaring part of the building as a closed military area pending a three-year-old challenge by a Palestinian family to the settlers' ownership claims. A Palestinian family of 16, half of them children, residing in another apartment of the same building, have reported access restrictions and intimidation since the takeover.

37. There are currently at least 370,000 Israelis living in some 130 settlements in Area C, including at least 85,000 settlers deep in the West Bank. Combined with some 200,000 in East Jerusalem, this brings the total Israeli settler population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to at least 570,000.

Demolitions and displacement

38. No progress was noted during the reporting period on return to homes and return of property of Palestine refugees. Meanwhile, the demolition of Palestinian homes and structures escalated, with most destroyed under the pretext that they were built without Israeli-issued permits, and continued to exacerbate Palestinian civilian displacement, including among the Bedouin community (see figures IV and V).

Figure IV

39. As noted by the Quartet, 70 per cent of Area C has been unilaterally taken for exclusive Israeli use, mostly through inclusion in the boundaries of local and regional settlement councils or designations of “State land”. Nearly all of the remaining 30 per cent of Area C, much of which is private Palestinian property, is effectively off-limits for Palestinian development because it requires permits from the Israeli occupying authorities that are almost never granted. The process of designating additional “State land” in Area C, which potentially impacts any land that cannot clearly be established as Palestinian private property, is ongoing, causing high insecurity to hundreds of Palestinian families and threatening them with forced displacement.

Restriction of movement

40. Israel continued to maintain security barriers restricting Palestinian movement in Area C and other areas of the West Bank in addition to those around the Gaza Strip, resulting in the physical fragmentation of the Palestinian territory and the separation and isolation of Palestinian communities. During the reporting period, increased restrictions were imposed, affecting the access of farmers to their agricultural land isolated by the wall under construction by Israel since 2002, 88 per cent of which is inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In East Jerusalem, the wall physically divides Palestinian communities into two separate sides, in place of what was previously only a jurisdictional division. In May, Israeli occupying forces added new measures to the already severe limitations on Palestinian movement in Hebron, a city that is segregated into areas Palestinians are forbidden to enter and areas where they are permitted to reside.

41. The construction of Israeli-only transportation corridors, or bypass roads, in the occupied West Bank pointed to a steady effort towards annexation of those areas. In the absence of measures to ease freedom of movement for Palestinians in the occupied West Bank to Israel and the Gaza Strip, the location of the corridors continued to be clearly aimed at facilitating and supporting the presence of settlers in the West Bank.

Palestinian prisoners

42. According to the Israel Prison Service, as of May 2017 a total of 6,020 Palestinians were held in Israeli prisons, 475 of them under administrative detention. Palestinian detainees are jailed inside Israel, in contravention of international law that stipulates that they be held within the occupied territory, in turn leading to restrictions on family visits.

43. On 17 April 2017, 1,500 Palestinian prisoners held by Israel launched an open-ended mass hunger strike to press for basic rights and draw attention to the difficult humanitarian conditions endured by Palestinian prisoners and detainees. Following international pressure and assurances from Israel, the strike ended on 27 May with an agreement between Palestinian prisoners and Israeli authorities.

44. The United Nations has also documented a growing use of administrative detention by Palestinian security forces in the West Bank and arbitrary detention by Hamas against perceived political opponents, including members of Fatah and former personnel of the Palestinian Authority in the Gaza Strip. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has also consistently received and documented reliable allegations of torture and ill-treatment of Palestinian detainees in the West Bank and in Gaza, including cases that led to death.

Socioeconomic situation

45. As of early 2017, one in two Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was in need of humanitarian assistance, according to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. All 4.8 million Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, are now affected by protection risks, including 350,000 Palestinians living in 67 West Bank communities vulnerable to settler violence.

46. On 22 February, the Government of the State of Palestine launched the National Policy Agenda for 2017-2022,⁴ in which it identified ending the occupation as its first national priority. Aligned with the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, the agenda has three pillars: path to independence, Government reform and sustainable development. It identifies 30 national policies. The United Nations Development Assistance Framework for the State of Palestine aims to support those national development priorities.

47. Israel, as the occupying Power, controls all shared surface and ground water resources, leaving only 15 per cent for Palestinian use. In January both sides agreed to renew the activity of the Israeli-Palestinian Joint Water Committee to improve water infrastructure and supply in the occupied West Bank and Gaza.

48. The protracted occupation has significantly undermined agriculture in Palestine, as both horizontal and vertical expansion of the agriculture sector has been restricted for decades. In addition to constraints on water use resulting from access restrictions, land resources in Area C are underutilized. Irrigating the unexploited area as well as accessing additional range and forest land could deliver an additional $704 million in value-added to the Palestinian economy, equivalent to 7 per cent of gross domestic product.

49. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the wall has had a significant impact on agricultural productivity in the West Bank, with some farmers having been separated from their lands on the other side of the wall. For example, the yield of olive trees in the area between the wall and the Green Line has been reduced by approximately 65 per cent in comparison with equivalent trees in areas accessible all year round.

Chapter III

Mandate of the Committee

50. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination and to national independence and sovereignty, and to return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat at <http://www.un.org/unispal/>.

51. Most recently, on 30 November 2016, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 71/20), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (resolution 71/21) and requested the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (resolution 71/22). The Assembly also adopted resolution 71/23, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

52. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main United Nations intergovernmental bodies such as the Security Council, the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, and with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

53. The Committee is composed of 26 Member States, representing different regional groups and supporting the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, the Plurinational State of Bolivia, Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela.

54. The 24 observers at the Committee meetings are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

55. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. At its 381st meeting, on 16 February 2017, the Committee elected Fodé Seck (Senegal) as Chair, and Mahmoud Saikal (Afghanistan), Anayansi Rodríguez Camejo (Cuba), Dian Triansyah Djani (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and María Rubiales de Chamorro (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs, and Carmelo Inganez (Malta) as Rapporteur. The State of Palestine participates in the Bureau's work as an observer.

56. The current composition of the Security Council includes, as elected members, four members and observers of the Committee: Bolivia, Egypt, Senegal and Ukraine.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

57. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in its work were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer, attended all of its meetings, conducted briefings and made observations and proposals for consideration by the Committee and its Bureau. All efforts were made by the Working Group of the Committee to guarantee participation of civil society organizations, including Israeli pro-peace actors.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

1. Action taken in the Security Council

58. During the open debates at the Security Council held on 19 October 2016 and 17 January, 20 April and 25 July 2017, the Committee delivered statements highlighting the situation and calling upon the Council to take appropriate actions to address ongoing violations and to uphold its responsibilities to contribute to a peaceful settlement of the conflict (see S/PV.7792; S/PV.7863; S/PV.7929; S/PV.8011 (resumption 1)).

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

59. The Members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized in accordance with the programme of work. On the margins of those events, the Committee delegation met with senior officials from the respective host countries. In particular, in Managua, the Committee delegation met with the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Nicaragua and parliamentarians. In Mexico City, the Committee delegation held consultations with high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Mexico and parliamentarians. In Baku, the Committee delegation met with high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Azerbaijan.

60. On 2 November 2016, the Bureau held its second annual retreat to review the work of the Committee. Issues discussed included the 2017 programme of work of the Committee, the goals for and organization of international events of the Committee and ideas for better outreach to and engagement with Member States and civil society.

61. On 22 March 2017, the Bureau met with the new Secretary-General, António Guterres, to familiarize him with the work of the Committee and to ensure his continuing support. The Bureau conveyed the sense of urgency among Member States regarding the implementation of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 borders, in the face of the continuing Israeli occupation and the deteriorating human rights and humanitarian situation, the spike in settlement activities and the one-State reality emerging. The alleviation of the suffering of the Palestinian people and the realization of their inalienable rights continues to be perceived as a litmus test of the credibility of the Organization. In particular, the Bureau requested the Secretary-General to make full use of one of the main tools currently at his disposal, his quarterly reports on the implementation of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\).

62. On 18 May 2017, in a letter addressed to the Secretary-General, the Committee conveyed its position regarding the quarterly report, namely, that the report should be substantive, in writing, and should clearly indicate whether the relevant parties are in compliance with the provisions of the resolution.

63. The Chair of the Committee delivered a statement at the meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers of OIC, held in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, on 10 and 11 July 2017.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 71/20 and 71/21

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

64. During the reporting period, the Committee held six periodic meetings at United Nations Headquarters in New York, in addition to the eight informal meetings of its Bureau and the meetings of its Working Group. At its 378th meeting, on 3 October 2016, the Committee adopted its annual report. At its 379th meeting, on 15 November, the Committee approved for submission to the General Assembly four draft resolutions entitled “Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People”, “Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat”, “Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat” and “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”. The 380th meeting, on 29 November, marked the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. At its 381st meeting, on 16 February 2017, attended by the Chef de Cabinet of the Secretary-General, the Committee re-elected its Chair, Vice-Chairs and Rapporteur and adopted its annual programme of work. At its 382nd meeting on 17 May, the Committee focused on the reports of the international conferences already held and approved the programmes for upcoming international conferences. At its 383rd meeting, on 8 August, the Committee received reports on its most recent international meetings.

65. On 17 March, the Committee organized a public event on the margins of the sixty-first session of the Commission on the Status of Women at United Nations Headquarters in New York, entitled “In conversation with Dr. Hanan Ashrawi”. Ms. Ashrawi is a member of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

66. To mark Palestinian Prisoners’ Day, on 18 April, the Committee, in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations, organized the screening of the film, Ghost Hunting.

67. The above-mentioned public events and others organized by the Working Group of the Committee (see paras. 80-85) were attended by representatives of Governments, intergovernmental organizations and entities of the United Nations system, as well as parliamentarians and representatives of civil society and the media.

2. Programme of international meetings and conferences

68. During the reporting period the following international events were held under the auspices of the Committee:

(a) United Nations Roundtable on the Question of Palestine, entitled “Building Bridges with the Palestinian Diaspora in Central America”, Managua, 4 February 2017, and Committee delegation visit to Mexico City, 7 February 2017

69. The Round Table built on the outcome of the 2016 Palestinian diaspora convention in Bethlehem and facilitated interaction between Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the diaspora, the latter from 10 countries in Central and South America. Participants discussed how to strengthen international advocacy to end the Israeli occupation and promote socioeconomic development in Palestine. The Round Table adopted the Managua Declaration, committing participants and their organizations to strengthening cooperation between a variety of diaspora communities, with the aim of establishing a regional bloc in Central America, attending upcoming meetings at Headquarters in June and in Santiago de Chile in October 2017 and increasing the number of visits to Palestine.

70. On 7 February, after participating in the Round Table, the Committee delegation visited Mexico City for meetings with high-level officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Chairs of two foreign affairs commissions of the Senate, as well as with the President of the Mexico-Palestine Friendship Group in the Chamber of Deputies. The Permanent Representative of Nicaragua and the Permanent Observer of Palestine also gave a presentation to students, policymakers and diplomats at the Diplomatic Academy.

(b) United Nations Capacity-Building Workshop on Sustainable Development Goals for Staff of the State of Palestine, entitled “Partnerships for Empowering a Future State of Palestine: Sustainable Development Goal 17 and South-South and Triangular Cooperation”, Beirut, 27 and 28 April 2017

71. The Workshop was organized in cooperation with the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) for mid-level Palestinian civil servants engaged in the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals. It aimed to establish a common understanding of the practice of South-South and triangular cooperation as an important modality for attaining the Goals in Palestine and provided practical tools and methods to comprehend the inherent challenges and opportunities. The Workshop built in part on the 2016 United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People, under the theme “Agenda 2030: paving the way towards a peaceful, independent and sustainable State of Palestine”, and took into account other capacity-building initiatives of the United Nations country team in Palestine.

(c) United Nations Forum to Mark Fifty Years of Occupation, entitled “Ending the Occupation: the Path to Independence, Justice and Peace for Palestine” and “Creating the Space for Human Rights, Development and a Just Peace”, New York, 29 and 30 June 2017

72. The Forum consisted of two day-long events, the first of which focused on diplomatic and political aspects of the ongoing occupation and the second on civil society advocacy strategies and recommendations.

73. The first day brought together international experts, representatives of the diplomatic community and civil society, including Palestinians and Israelis, as well as academics and students of diverse backgrounds and views. A series of moderated interactive panels underscored the importance of ending the occupation as an antecedent step towards a peaceful resolution of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Participants noted that, notwithstanding the costs to Israel, given its current prosperity and growing international relations, including within the Group of 77 and China, Israel does not have an incentive to end the occupation and act in favour of a two-State solution. Participants stressed the need for the international community to insist on ensuring accountability and enforcement of international law, including relevant United Nations resolutions, including resolution 2334 (2016). While experts recognized that a peaceful and lasting solution was not imminent, they nevertheless stressed the importance of multilateral peace efforts and of working constructively with civil society partners towards an eventual two-State solution.

74. On the second day, participants included representatives of leading Palestinian, Israeli and international human rights organizations, conflict prevention and diplomatic advisory groups, women’s and youth groups, political parties, churches, the Jewish community in the United States and the Palestinian diaspora, including in the United States and Chile. Discussions focused on field perspectives, the use of alternative frameworks for analysis and policy recommendations to ensure accountability and pave the way for a just and lasting peace, in addition to concerns expressed about the shrinking space for civil society in the absence of political will.

A common thread in the discussions was the call by and on civil society to make a difference through its own actions while continuing to pressure Governments to take measures to ensure respect for international law and United Nations resolutions.

(d) International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, entitled “Jerusalem and the International Community: Providing Political and Economic Support”, Baku, 20 and 21 July 2017, in collaboration with OIC

75. The Conference aimed to present ideas and proposals about ways in which the international community, especially OIC member States, could provide concrete support to the Palestinian population in Jerusalem, with a focus on education and training to foster resilience and on economic recovery and development.

76. Against the backdrop of tensions and confrontations at the al-Aqsa Mosque, participants warned that a continued violation of the historic status quo at the Haram al-Sharif risked inflaming religious sensitivities and shifting the Israeli-Palestinian/Arab conflict from a political to a religious one. To address the deteriorating socioeconomic situation of the Palestinian population in East Jerusalem, the participants called for an increase in outside support, for example, through direct investment in tourism and education infrastructure, provision of education and capacity-building opportunities abroad and permission for Arab Christians and Muslims to go on pilgrimage to East Jerusalem while under occupation.

77. The Conference ended with the issuance of a communiqué on behalf of the organizers, the Committee and OIC, strongly condemning the closure of the al-Aqsa Mosque and calling upon the international community to reaffirm respect for the historic status quo and to compel Israel to rescind all measures violating it.

3. Cooperation with intergovernmental and regional organizations

78. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with intergovernmental organizations. The Committee appreciates the active participation of the representatives of those organizations in the various international events held under its auspices and the co-sponsorship provided by OIC to organize the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem. The African Union, LAS and OIC, as observers to the Committee, regularly attend the meetings of the Committee and its Working Group and participate in their work.

79. On 10 and 11 July 2017, a Committee delegation attended the forty-fourth session of the OIC Council of Foreign Ministers in Abidjan.

4. Cooperation with civil society

80. In October 2016, the Working Group of the Committee adopted a new strategy with the overarching objective of promoting the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people through strengthened cooperation with civil society.

81. In accordance with its new strategy, the Working Group of the Committee, chaired by the Deputy Permanent Representative of Malta, supported action by civil society organizations promoting the rights of Palestinians and a just peace through events at Headquarters, which all Member and observer States were invited to attend, including the following:

(a) Briefing by Al Haq, Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch on issues related to the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 18 October 2016;

(b) Address by Suhad Babaa, Executive Director of Just Vision, at the special meeting of the Committee held in observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November 2016;

(c) Conversation with Palestinian political leader Hanan Ashrawi, on 17 March 2017. The event was held on the margins of the sixty-first session of the Commission on the Status of Women;

(d) Civil society forum held on 30 June 2017, entitled “Ending the Occupation: Creating the Space for Human Rights, Development and a Just Peace”, as part of a two-day event to mark fifty years of occupation.

82. Support to Palestinian and other civil society organizations was further provided by inviting civil society representatives based in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel to attend the Forum on 29 and 30 June. In addition, the Working Group facilitated speaking engagements by civil society representatives at other events, including a presentation by Nur Arafah, Policy Fellow with Al Shabaka: the Palestinian Policy Network, at a summer course entitled “Palestine: Half a Century of Occupation — a Legal, Political and Human Approach”, held in Madrid from 3 to 7 July 2017.

83. To expand its network of civil society partners, the Committee continued to reach out to Palestinian, Israeli and other organizations through its Working Group and the Division for Palestinian Rights. Civil society representatives were invited to participate in all public international meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee. Additional organizations and parliamentarians were involved in the work of the Committee through activities in Nicaragua and Mexico; liaison with United Nations field offices and focal points of non-governmental organizations at Headquarters; participation in conferences and meetings organized by civil society in New York and Washington, D.C.; informal consultations; and desk research.

84. During the reporting period, new civil society partnerships to mobilize international support for and assistance to the Palestinian people were developed with Palestinian diaspora communities in Latin America, Canada and the United States.

85. The Division for Palestinian Rights continued to maintain a web page on civil society and the question of Palestine (<https://unispal.un.org/DPA/DPR/unispal.nsf/ngo.htm>), supporting outreach to civil society organizations, increasing their awareness of Committee activities and fostering cooperation. The weekly online bulletin NGO Action News (<https://unispal.un.org/DPA/DPR/unispal.nsf/add2.htm>) kept the Working Group of the Committee updated on civil society action on the question of Palestine. Through its dissemination among approximately 900 civil society organizations from around the world, the publication supports efforts to exchange information, build alliances and coordinate civil society initiatives to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, achieve an end to the occupation and advance a just and lasting peace.

Parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations, and local governments

86. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its liaison with national and regional parliaments and their organizations. Representatives of parliaments and inter-parliamentary organizations participated in international events organized by the Committee during the reporting period. Among others, members of the Palestinian Legislative Council, Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean and the Israeli Knesset participated in international meetings held under the auspices of the Committee. The Committee delegation held meetings with parliamentarians in Nicaragua and Mexico.

5. Research, monitoring and publications

87. The Division for Palestinian Rights carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, the Division prepared the following publications for dissemination (see <http://www.un.org/unispal>):

(a) Monthly bulletin on action taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;

(b) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;

(c) Special bulletin and information notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(d) Annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, Security Council and Economic and Social Council relating to the question of Palestine;

(e) Periodic reviews of developments related to the Middle East peace process.

6. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

88. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant services of the Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and upgrade the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine to heighten international awareness of the question of Palestine as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and a just, peaceful solution through the work of the Committee. The Division also maintained its Facebook, Twitter and YouTube pages to disseminate information about the work on the question of Palestine by the Committee and the entities of the United Nations system.

7. Capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine

89. As mandated by General Assembly resolutions, including resolution 71/20, and as part of its ongoing efforts to further expand the capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine aimed at supporting the Government in enhancing the viability and sustainability of the future independent State of Palestine, the Division for Palestinian Rights organized and administered a number of capacity-building initiatives in consultation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations in New York. They included mobilizing international and regional support and resources, including within the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation, for national efforts with respect to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda on Sustainable Development, which pledges to “leave no one behind”.

90. In October and November 2016, the Division organized the annual training programme for the staff of the Government of the State of Palestine in New York and Geneva, respectively. The training programmes allow Palestinian staff to familiarize themselves with various aspects of the multilateral work of the Secretariat and other United Nations organs and bodies, including the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, as well as the United Nations Office in Geneva. In addition, in November 2016 the Division organized, in cooperation with the UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education, a four-day training course on water conflict management for Palestinian civil servants in Ramallah, designed for water managers, decision makers and others involved in integrated water resource management and negotiation. In the same month, the Committee funded the participation of Palestinian staff in an online course entitled “Introduction to Water Diplomacy”, developed by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), to enhance their ability to assess, prevent and respond to tensions arising from situations of water scarcity and mismanagement. In March 2017, the Committee funded another online course through UNITAR, entitled “Climate Change Diplomacy: Negotiating Effectively under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change”, enhancing the understanding of the climate change policy framework by building an appreciation of the science, causes and impacts of climate change and the history of the policymaking process. Finally, in April, the Division organized, in Beirut, a workshop on the Sustainable Development Goals entitled “Partnerships for Empowering a Future State of Palestine: Sustainable Development Goal 17 and South-South and Triangular Cooperation”.

91. The Committee paid special attention to expanding the pool of potential participants to all offices and departments of the Government of the State of Palestine and optimizing the use of resources to allow the maximum number of participants possible. The Committee remains of the view that in selecting candidates for its capacity-building and training programme, special consideration should be given to achieving gender balance; of the 41 Palestinian individuals trained during the reporting period, 23 were men and 18 were women.

8. International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

92. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 29 November 2016 at Headquarters, the United Nations offices in Vienna, Geneva, and Nairobi and at the United Nations Information Centres and other entities in many cities throughout the world. At Headquarters, the Committee held a special meeting with the participation of the Deputy Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly and the President of the Security Council, and organized an exhibit entitled “Palestinian Embroidery: Threads of Continuity, Identity and Empowerment”.

93. The Committee also facilitated a presentation by Randa Siniora, General Director of the Women’s Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling, and Ignacio Álvarez-Ossorio, professor in the Department of Arab and Islamic Studies of Alicante University, at the colloquium entitled “General Overview of the Human Rights Situation in Palestine — Perspectives from the International Community and Academia”, held on 18 November 2017 in Bogota, organized to mark the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

Chapter VI

94. During the reporting period, the Department of Public Information continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine in accordance with General Assembly resolution 71/22 of 30 November 2016.

95. The Department organized its annual training programme for Palestinian journalists, from 7 November to 8 December, in which nine Palestinian media practitioners attended meetings and participated in discussions at United Nations Headquarters in New York and in Washington, D.C., and travelled to Doha to undergo a training course at Al Jazeera.

96. The Department continued to produce and disseminate news and information about the range of issues and developments related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process on all its multimedia and multilingual platforms. All open intergovernmental meetings on the subject were covered by United Nations Television, the United Nations Photo Unit and United Nations Web TV. In addition, the Department produced a total of 76 press releases covering meetings, in both English and French.

97. The multilingual United Nations News Centre, and the Arabic unit in particular, produced numerous features on the question of Palestine, including a series of interviews with senior officials and policymakers. The Centre also produced stories from the field, for example, on the electricity and water crisis in the Gaza Strip.

98. The Yearbook of the United Nations reported regularly on relevant statements, resolutions, events and actions taken by the Committee.

99. The Department's global network of United Nations Information Centres organized a number of outreach activities, and translated and disseminated information materials on the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. For example, the Information Centre in Tehran organized a workshop on the Plan of Partition for Palestine (resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947); the Information Centre in New Delhi organized its second International Utopia Model United Nations Conference, raising awareness on the question of Palestine with youth; and the Information Centre in Warsaw galvanized youth to join a panel discussion with the visiting UNRWA Commissioner-General. Further activities and events were organized by a number of Information Centres in November 2016 to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, including in Canberra, Dakar, Dar es Salaam, Manama, Nairobi, New Delhi and Tehran.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

100. In the fiftieth year of the Israeli occupation, the Committee urges the international community to redouble its efforts aimed at achieving, without delay, a negotiated peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine in all its aspects through an end to the Israeli occupation, the realization of the rights of the Palestinian people, including to self-determination and independence, and achievement of the two-State solution in accordance with the relevant United Nations resolutions.

101. In its continued support to the revitalization of peace efforts, the Committee aligns itself with the view that the model of bilateral negotiations, which after more than two decades has not brought about the end of the Israeli occupation and the full independence of the State of Palestine on the basis of the pre-1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital, should be revised. The Committee welcomes serious steps taken by the international community towards presenting an expanded multilateral framework, including key regional partners, with a view to reviving the peace process and a credible political horizon.

102. As has consistently emerged during meetings of the General Assembly and the Security Council, as well as the international meetings organized by the Committee, any resolution of the conflict will remain central to peace and stability throughout the volatile Middle East region and the world. As such, the conflict clearly requires a comprehensive regional solution that includes greater engagement with key Arab States and other concerned States. The Arab Peace Initiative remains a significant contribution to such a regional settlement. The Committee supports those efforts and will continue its enhanced cooperation with the LAS and OIC. The Committee also welcomes the contributions of other States in the region and outside the Middle East in exerting their influence to reach a peaceful solution of the question of Palestine.

103. The Committee urges the Security Council, which has a primary responsibility for maintaining peace and security under the Charter of the United Nations, and the General Assembly to play a constructive role in ensuring fullest accountability and implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace reiterated in the relevant United Nations resolutions in order to resolve the conflict. Positive consideration should be given to all proposals that endeavour to overcome the current impasse. In that regard, the Committee welcomes the adoption of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), which reaffirmed that the establishment by Israel of settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, had no legal validity, and called for affirmative steps to be taken immediately to reverse the negative trends on the ground that are imperilling the two-State solution, thus generating a unique momentum for peace which needs to be maintained. Pursuant to paragraph 12 of the resolution, the Committee requests the Secretary-General to present his third and subsequent reports to the Council on the implementation of the provisions of the resolution in a written format and to propose practical ways and means to hold Israel accountable for its illegal settlement activities and other violations.

104. The Committee acknowledges that intra-Palestinian relations are an obstacle to progress towards an independent State of Palestine. Serious efforts are required to overcome mistrust between the parties, including through confidence-building efforts, and calls for a demonstration of the courage and leadership that is required at the present time. The Committee offers its services and support to local, regional and international efforts, from any country and/or organization that is able to advance the process.

105. Recalling the upcoming seventieth anniversary of the expulsion of Palestine refugees from their homeland in 1948, remembered as the “Nakba” (catastrophe), the Committee emphasizes the importance of the acknowledgment of that event and its impact upon the Palestinian people as a necessary requirement for a viable and lasting peace between Israelis and Palestinians, as well as for future reconciliation. It strongly advocates for the right to return (or compensation) of the Palestine refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III). The Committee further encourages all Member States to work collectively to more sufficiently and predictably fund UNRWA as it is confronted with an increased demand for services resulting from widespread instability and socioeconomic decline in all fields of operation and the deepening poverty and vulnerability of the Palestine refugee population, particularly in the Gaza Strip, while facing severe shortfalls in budget, affecting the Agency’s capacity to provide assistance and protection in accordance with its mandate.

106. The Committee reiterates that the international community must intensify its efforts, uphold its moral and legal responsibility and demand an end to the 10-year old Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza and the lifting of all closures within the framework of Security Council resolution 1860 \(2009\). It notes that, two years after the devastating 2014 war, the reconstruction of Gaza has made some important strides. However, clean water, sanitation and electricity still remain scarce, and the fact that over 65,000 persons remain displaced continues to cause widespread suffering and has a significant impact upon an already dire humanitarian situation. The Committee calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges in order to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance and the reconstruction process, essential for alleviating the distress of Palestinians, including women and children, and to support an urgent move from humanitarian assistance to development.

107. Ultimately, to ensure respect for the rights of the Palestinian people, to prevent deterioration beyond the breaking point and to stop the build-destroy-rebuild cycle, the Committee recommends shifting from a humanitarian to a political and human rights framework, which would take into account the legal obligations of all stakeholders, including in context of the Gaza Strip. A Palestinian unity government is also essential to take up governance and security functions in Gaza and exercise control over the crossings.

108. The Committee reiterates that violations of humanitarian and human rights law must be investigated, and that perpetrators of such violations should be brought to justice. The Committee expresses its concern at the limited implementation by Israel, the occupying Power, of the findings and recommendations contained in the report of the independent commission of inquiry on the 2014 Gaza conflict and of all other human rights recommendations directed at Israel. The Committee welcomes the appointment of Stanley Michael Lynk as Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 and will strive to facilitate the implementation of his mandate.

109. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, particularly in respect of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It looks forward to the establishment of a database of all actors conducting business in areas under Israeli military occupation, as mandated by Human Rights Council resolution 31/36 of 2016. Within the context of that resolution and in accordance with paragraph 5 of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), which calls upon States to distinguish, in their relevant dealings, between the territory of the State of Israel and the territories occupied since 1967, the Committee urges further steps by Governments, private businesses and other relevant bodies, including the European Union, to dissociate themselves from policies that directly or indirectly grant legitimacy to or support for illegal Israeli settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem and the occupation at large.

110. The Committee notes with appreciation the useful contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights in support of its mandate and its activities through the following:

(a) Efficient provision of substantive and secretariat support, including to official meetings of the Committee as well as informal meetings of the Bureau and Committee visits to the field, and effective liaison with and strategic guidance to the Committee, its Bureau and the Working Group; organization of briefings, including for new Committee delegates; execution of the decisions of the Committee, including by preparing Committee correspondence to national authorities and regional organizations; and timely preparation and issuance of the necessary parliamentary documentation;

(b) Organization of four international meetings and conferences contributing to the sustained level of dialogue, engagement and support on the part of the international community for the Committee's programme objectives, as evidenced by the number and level of participation in its international meetings and conferences, and commemorations of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(c) An increase in international awareness of United Nations policies and activities relating to the question of Palestine, through the preparation of publications and information materials and their widest possible dissemination; and maintenance, upgrading and continued development of The Question of Palestine website as well as the use of such web-based social information networks as Facebook, Twitter and YouTube;

(d) Enhanced assistance and support to the Government of the State of Palestine in building efficient, accountable and resilient institutions through workshops and training of Palestinian civil servants, particularly in the light of its efforts to implement the 2030 Agenda;

(e) Continued involvement of civil society organizations in support of the efforts of the Committee and the United Nations towards a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine.

111. The Committee will continue, through its mandated activities implemented by the Division for Palestinian Rights, to generate heightened international awareness on the question of Palestine, as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination and independence, in this year marking the fiftieth anniversary of the Israeli occupation and the seventieth anniversary of the General Assembly resolution to partition Palestine.

112. The Committee requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support of all aspects of its mandate; the organization of the annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People; the programme of international meetings and conferences; the programme of research, monitoring and publications and other informational activities in support of the Committee's communications strategy; and the expansion of the training and capacity-building programme, taking into account the National Policy Agenda of the State of Palestine and its efforts to implement the 2030 Agenda on Sustainable Development. In that context, the Committee recognizes the growing importance of cooperation among developing countries and regional and subregional organizations for sharing and implementing sustainable, cost-effective and replicable experiences and solutions that work, and supports special efforts by the Division to facilitate such exchanges within the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation. Lastly, it urges Committee Members and observer States and others to actively participate in its programme, including through voluntary contributions to offer training experiences and to put the programmes on a solid financial footing.

113. The Committee is of the view that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public of the relevant issues. It requests the continuation of the programme, with the necessary flexibility warranted by developments relevant to the question of Palestine.

114. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people and will continue to expand its efforts to engage additional civil society organizations, including by convening regular civil society forums, and the public at large in its work to support a just and peaceful solution to the question of Palestine, including in Israel. The Committee encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions with a view to gaining their full support for the work of the United Nations and the Committee, and for the overall aim of promoting the achievement by the Palestinian people of their inalienable rights, full recognition of the State of Palestine and its independence. Furthermore, following the productive engagement with the Palestinian diaspora during the reporting period, the Committee will continue to expand the engagement, with a view to synergizing efforts to raise awareness and gain practical support for a just solution to the question of Palestine and for the socioeconomic development of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

115. Wishing to make its contribution to the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the question of Palestine, and in view of the many difficulties facing the Palestinian people and their leadership and besetting the peace process, the Committee intends to work closely with other United Nations actors on the ground, including the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the Organization towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner in accordance with international legitimacy (General Assembly resolution 71/20, last preambular paragraph). The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to its partners, in particular OIC, for the contribution of extrabudgetary resources and their active participation in its conferences and events.

116. The Committee will also reach out to all regional groups at the United Nations with a view to expanding its membership. It calls upon all States to join it in this endeavour and to extend their cooperation and support to the Committee, and invites the General Assembly again to recognize the importance of its role and to reconfirm its mandate.

[4 September 2018]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 72/13 of 30 November 2017.

The report covers the period from 6 September 2017 to 4 September 2018.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

His Excellency Mr. António Guterres
Secretary-General of the United Nations
New York

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report by the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 72/13, adopted on 30 November 2017. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2018/1), formulated to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just, comprehensive and lasting solution of the question of Palestine, enhancing international solidarity with the plight of the Palestinian people and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards a viable and sustainable future independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of a review of the political context relating to the question of Palestine by the Committee during the reporting period, from 6 September 2017 to 4 September 2018.
3. Chapters III and IV outline the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and provide information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, delegation visits and capacity-building workshops organized by the Committee, as well as other mandated activities carried out and events held by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 72/12 of 30 November 2017.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Review of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

Jerusalem

7. During the reporting period, several unilateral measures threatened the status of Jerusalem and the consensus on the two-State solution. In October and November 2017, the Israeli authorities approved multiple building permits for housing units in settlements in East Jerusalem.¹ On 6 December, the United States of America announced its recognition of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and its intention to move its embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. The Secretary-General immediately reiterated that unilateral measures would jeopardize the prospect of peace for Israelis and Palestinians² and that Jerusalem remained a final status issue. The Committee issued a statement³ calling upon the United States to rescind its decision, stressing that there was no alternative to the two-State solution. On 14 May 2018, the United States inaugurated its embassy in Jerusalem to coincide with the seventieth anniversary of its recognition of Israel. In the week that followed, Guatemala and Paraguay opened embassies in Jerusalem. In late May, Czechia reopened its honorary consulate in Jerusalem; however, the Ministry for Foreign Affairs of Czechia issued a statement expressing full respect for the common European Union position of considering Jerusalem as the future capital of two States.

8. On 2 January, the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, passed a bill that stipulated that any measure to relinquish control over any portion of Jerusalem to a foreign entity would require a two-third majority in the Knesset. On 17 July, the Knesset passed an amendment to the law on administrative affairs courts, transferring judicial authority over a range of issues in the Occupied Palestinian Territory from the High Court of Justice to the Jerusalem District Court, including freedom of information requests, planning and constructions matters, entry permits into Israel and freedom of movement and access.

9. On 3 July, the Prime Minister of Israel lifted the ban that prohibited members of the Knesset from visiting the Temple Mount, and on 8 and 9 July, several members of the Knesset violated the media ban by filming their visits. On 18 July, the Knesset passed a bill entitled “Basic Law: Israel as the Nation-State of the Jewish People”, which provided that the State viewed the development of Jewish settlements as a national value and would act to encourage and promote their establishment and consolidation. The law will apply within Israel as well as in areas annexed since 1967, including East Jerusalem. On 21 July, the Minister of Jerusalem Affairs and Heritage of Israel called upon Jews to “ascend the Mount”. On 27 July, on the first anniversary of the 2017 unrest at the Holy Esplanade, 10 Palestinians and 4 Israeli police officers were injured in clashes at the site (see S.PV/8329). The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority conducted a series of meetings with Christian, Jewish and Muslim religious leaders in Jerusalem to ensure that the status quo was preserved at the holy sites.

The Gaza Strip

10. The political and security situation in the Gaza Strip continued to be volatile. Lack of progress in implementing the intra-Palestinian reconciliation agreement, compounded by the Israeli blockade and access restrictions, continued to aggravate an already dire humanitarian situation.⁴

11. From 30 March to 15 May 2018, thousands of Palestinians staged the “Great March of Return”, weekly demonstrations to mark Land Day along the fence separating Gaza from Israel and call for the right of Palestine refugees to return to their homes lost in 1948. Israeli forces responded with live and other ammunition, killing and wounding civilians. On 31 March, the Secretary-General called for an independent inquiry into those acts of violence. On 6 April, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights noted that unjustified recourse to live fire could amount to wilful killing of civilians, which would be a breach of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War. The Chief Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court warned that acts of violence against civilians would constitute a crime under the Rome Statute, adding that the situation in Palestine was under preliminary examination by her office. The Committee issued a statement⁵ on 14 May demanding that the occupying power abide by its obligation to protect civilians under its control, in accordance with international law, and called for an end to the illegal blockade of the Gaza Strip that continued to punish the Gazan population collectively. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported that, between 30 March and 16 August, 177 Palestinians, including 29 children, had been killed and 18,006 had been wounded in the context of demonstrations and hostilities in Gaza.

12. July and August witnessed the largest escalation in violence in Gaza since the conflict of 2014. After one Israeli soldier was killed and another wounded in gunfire shot from Gaza on 20 July, Israeli airstrikes and ensuing clashes led to the deaths of more than 20 Palestinians, including eight children, and to more than 1,000 Palestinians suffering injuries. On 21 July, the Secretary-General called upon Hamas and other Palestinian militants to cease the launching of rockets and incendiary kites and provocations along the fence, and stressed that Israel must exercise restraint to avoid inflaming the situation further. With support from Egypt and the United Nations, an informal ceasefire was reached on 9 August. From 17 July to 15 August, the fishing zone was reduced by Israel from nine to three nautical miles. On 2 August, Israel reinstated the ban on the entry of fuel into Gaza, bringing critical services to the brink of collapse and prompting the United Nations Coordinator for Humanitarian and Development Activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory to call for United Nations-purchased emergency fuel to be immediately allowed in to keep hospitals and essential water and sanitation facilities running.⁶ On 22 August, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs informed the Security Council of a critical shortage of medicines and of funding for United Nations emergency fuel supplies (see S/PV.8329).

Efforts to resume the peace process

13. On 20 February, the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, presented to the Security Council a peace plan⁷ calling for a multilateral international mechanism emanating from an international peace conference bringing together Israel, the State of Palestine and international stakeholders, notably the permanent members of the Security Council and the Quartet, in the same framework as the Conference for Peace in the Middle East held in Paris in 2017 and the meeting proposed to be held in Moscow in resolution 1850 (2008). He said that the outcome of the conference should include, inter alia, the admission of the State of Palestine as a full Member of the United Nations and the establishment of an international multilateral mechanism to facilitate time-bound negotiations between the two parties to resolve all permanent status issues. The terms of reference for negotiations would include respect for international law and relevant Security Council resolutions, the Arab Peace Initiative and signed agreements; the preservation of the principle of two States; the acceptance of minimal land swaps; East Jerusalem as the capital of the State of Palestine; ensuring the security of two States without undermining the independence and sovereignty of either of them; and a just and agreed solution for the Palestine refugees on the basis of General Assembly resolution 194 (III), as well as support for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), pending a just resolution for the refugees issue. The League of Arab States echoed the calls for a multilateral mechanism.⁸

Intra-Palestinian reconciliation efforts

14. On 12 October 2017, with the support of Egypt, Fatah and Hamas signed an agreement to enable the Government of the State of Palestine to resume its responsibilities in Gaza. The agreement was welcomed by the Committee. On 1 November, the Government of the State of Palestine regained control over Gaza crossings, while on 18 November, the Rafah crossing opened under government control for the first time in a decade. However, on 25 January 2018, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process reported to the Security Council that the implementation of the agreement had effectively ground to a halt, as Hamas and Fatah were unable to agree on key issues. On 13 March, the situation was further strained by an assassination attempt against the Prime Minister of the State of Palestine, Rami Hamdallah, during his visit to Gaza. Negotiations facilitated by Egypt have since resumed between Hamas and Fatah.

Protection of Palestinian civilians

15. The reporting period was marked by almost daily military incursions and raids by Israeli forces and clashes with young Palestinian people and Palestinian protesters in many parts of Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. On 22 May, the State of Palestine submitted a State referral to the Prosecutor of the International Court of Justice, requesting investigation of past, ongoing and future crimes in all parts of the territory of the State of Palestine. On 13 July, the International Court of Justice called upon the “victims of the situation in Palestine” to approach the court with reports about crimes committed against them.

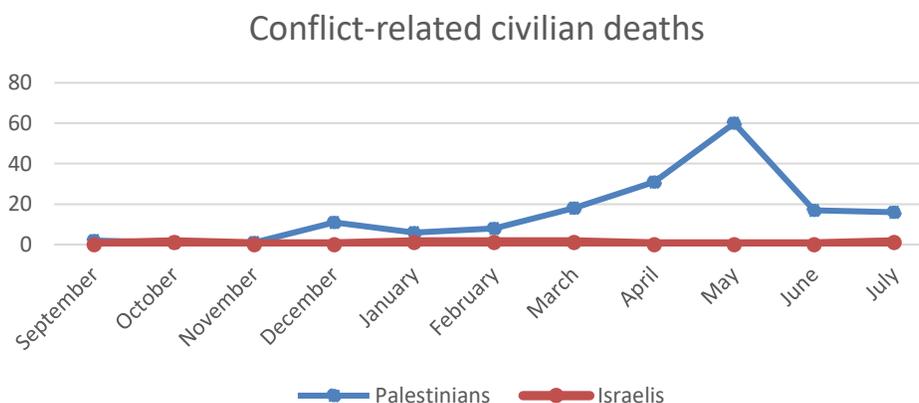

16. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, from 1 September 2017 to 30 July 2018, 171 Palestinian civilians were killed and 24,938 were injured (see figure I and the table below it), while attacks on Israelis resulted in five civilian deaths and 41 people injured in conflict-related casualties. Continued and disproportionate violence against Palestinian civilians and incitement have perpetuated mutual fear and suspicion. On 14 August, the Secretary-General issued a report on the protection of the Palestinian civilian population (A/ES-10/794), pursuant to General Assembly resolution ES-10/20, in which he laid out options for affording better protection to the Palestinian civilian population, including by means of a more robust presence of the United Nations on the ground; dedicated civilian observers; better humanitarian access; and a mandated United Nations mission to provide physical protection. He noted that, in order to be viable, each of those options would require the cooperation of the parties concerned, including Israel, the sustained cessation of hostilities and additional resources.

Settlements

17. Settlements have continued to expand, despite several Security Council resolutions, including resolution 2334 (2016), in which all settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were declared illegal under international law. Reporting on behalf of the Secretary-General pursuant to Security Council resolution 2334 (2016), the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process noted that, during the period from 20 September to 18 December 2017, Israel approved the construction of 1,200 units in the occupied West Bank. Plans were also advanced to build units for settlers evicted from illegal outposts under court orders. The authorities also conditionally approved building permits for 31 housing units in the H2 zone of Hebron, the first such approvals since 2001. During the period from 18 December 2017 to 25 March 2018, Israel advanced 22 plans for some 1,500 housing units in Area C settlements. For the period from 26 March to 12 June, Israel advanced, approved or tendered out some 3,500 housing units in settlements in Area C, one third of which were in settlements in outlying locations deep in the West Bank. On

1 August, Israel confirmed its intention to legalize the settler outpost of Adei Ad, in the first such instance since 2014.

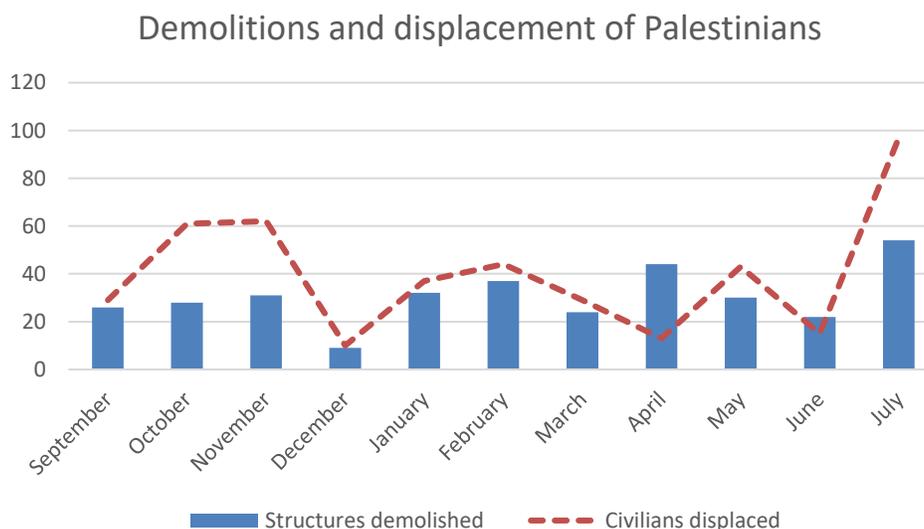

18. On 23 January, in line with European Union policy, the Parliament of Denmark passed a resolution with reference to Security Council resolution 2334 (2016) urging the inclusion of a clear statement in future agreements between Denmark and Israel indicating their inapplicability to occupied territory and encouraging the Government of Denmark to strengthen its guidance to private and public investors. On 11 July, the Seanad Éireann (the upper house) of Ireland passed a bill prohibiting trade with and economic support for settlements in occupied territory.¹⁰

19. Demolitions and confiscation of Palestinian-owned structures continued in 2018 across the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem (see figure II), albeit at a marginally lower rate than in the previous year (see S/2018/614). In his briefings to the Security Council, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process repeatedly expressed concern¹¹ about Israeli plans to evict communities, including Bedouin herding communities through demolitions. On 19 July, the Special Coordinator, among others, called upon Israel to cancel plans to demolish the Khan al-Ahmar — Abu al-Helu Bedouin community's dwellings, in Area C.¹² The demolitions were accompanied by residency restrictions on those evicted, especially in East Jerusalem, and denial of access to essential services, such as water and sanitation (see A/72/564, para. 64). On 1 August, the High Court of Justice of Israel ordered a hold on the demolition of the village of Khan al-Ahmar, stating that it did not find sufficient reason for the action.

Detention, trial and imprisonment

20. During the reporting period, the number of Palestinians arrested by Israeli forces ranged from 300 to 700 a month. On 19 December 2017, Palestinian teenager Ahed Tamimi, aged 16, was arrested and sentenced to eight months in prison for slapping an Israeli soldier. On 13 February, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 and the Chair-Rapporteur of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention issued a joint statement¹³ stating that the facts of the case did not appear to justify the teenager's detention before her trial, in particular given the concerns expressed by the Committee on the Rights of the Child. They observed in their statement that Israel detained and prosecuted between 500 and 700 Palestinian children in military courts every year. As of June 2018, 5,667 Palestinians remained in Israeli prisons, charged for offences related to the Israeli occupation.⁹

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and Palestine refugees

21. UNRWA, which provides core essential services to Palestine refugees in the region, was confronted with a major shortfall in budget during the reporting period, owing to an increase in the number of registered Palestine refugees, the growing extent of their vulnerability and their deepening poverty. Despite new contributions, as of June 2018, the Agency continued to face a shortfall of $248 million in its programming budget of $440 million. Its ability to continue education programmes is in question. In that context, UNRWA has launched a global fund-raising campaign.

Impact of the occupation on Palestinian women

22. Women continue to be adversely affected by the occupation. In a report issued in May 2018, the International Labour Organization (ILO) determined that women's unemployment rate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was now the highest in the world, rising to 47.4 per cent in 2017, from 44.6 the previous year.¹⁴ In the Gaza Strip, even though job vacancy rates have shrunk steadily, the number of women seeking employment has increased by 200 per cent. On 8 June, the United Nations Population Fund reported that the negative impact of the blockade of Gaza had worsened women's conditions, by increasing psychological stress and threatening the stability of families. Mothers whose children were injured in the Great March of Return protests reported increased gender-based violence,¹⁵ and the risk of economic violence increased for women widowed during Israeli military action against protestors.

Freedom of movement

23. The numerous restrictions to freedom of movement imposed by Israel, as an occupying power, had a severe impact on access to economic, social and cultural rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and on the enjoyment of the right to family life (see A/HRC/37/38). Gazan residents continued to face Israeli restrictions on movement into Israel through the Erez crossing (see figure III). During the month of Ramadan, Egypt kept the Rafah crossing open.¹⁶ Since 5 August, the import of cooking gas to Gaza has compensated for shortages due to Israeli restrictions.¹⁷ From 9 July to 15 August, Israel temporarily suspended the import and export of all items through the Kerem Shalom crossing, except for basic humanitarian supplies.¹⁸ On 19 August, Israel closed the Erez crossing for Gaza and West Bank residents, except for humanitarian cases.

24. The enforcement measures used by the Israeli authorities in Gaza undermine the right of Palestinian fishermen and farmers to a livelihood and have a devastating impact on the rights to life and to physical and mental health (see A/HRC/31/44, para. 43). The approval rate of Israeli exit permits from Gaza decreased from 72 per cent during the previous reporting period to 32.8 per cent during the present reporting period.¹⁹ Restrictions on movement also severely affected access to health care. The World Health Organization reported that dozens of patients died while waiting for their permits to be approved or after their applications had been denied.²⁰ Impediments to Palestinians' freedom of movement were further consolidated in the H2 zone of Hebron with the addition of new closures and the fortification of existing checkpoints. Israel continued to revoke the East Jerusalem residency status of Palestinians as a form of collective punishment (see A/72/565, paras. 21–25), violating the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose residence (see A/HRC/37/43, para. 54, and A/HRC/34/38, paras. 62–66). Restrictions on Palestinians' access to agricultural land and to critical natural resources in Area C remained in place, and markets in occupied East Jerusalem remained out of reach, severely curbing livelihood opportunities (see A/HRC/37/38, para. 42).

25. ILO noted that Palestinian access to farming remained restricted around and within Israeli settlements, as well as in the seam zone, where prior coordination or special permits were required. The approval rate for permit applications to access land in this area during the olive harvest fell from 58 per cent in 2016 to 55 per cent in 2017. Access to education, training and employment for Palestinians living on the West Bank side of “the Barrier” also remained severely constrained.¹⁴

26. In a research paper published on 27 March, the World Bank showed that the route deviations forced by the construction of the West Bank barrier by Israel had an economic impact, as seen in the deviation between 2006 and 2012 in the route from Ramallah to Qalqilyah (see figure IV). The World Bank also found that, during the period 2005–2012, market access constraints resulting from road closure obstacles reduced gross domestic product per capita in the West Bank by 4.1 to 6.1 per cent annually.²²

27. In a report released on 3 April, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development stated that restrictions on movement and access by Israel had stifled investment and limited the Palestinian private sector to small-scale operations with low capital intensity and efficiency.²³ Israel continued to maintain restrictions in several areas, including telecommunication spectrum, airspace, tourism, the exploitation of natural gas resources and water. Since the onset of the occupation, in 1967, Palestinians have lost access to more than 60 per cent of West Bank land and more than two thirds of grazing land, while, in the Gaza Strip, Palestinians have lost access to half the cultivable area. In the waters off Gaza, 85 per cent of fishery resources are inaccessible to Palestinian fishermen owing to limitations imposed by Israel on the distance that fishing boats may sail off the coast of Gaza, in violation of the United Nations Convention of the Law of the Sea.

28. The occupation has severely affected economic prospects for young Palestinian people. In its report released on 30 May,¹⁴ ILO found that the unemployment rate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had now risen to the highest level in the world, at 27.4 per cent in 2017, and that women and young people were particularly affected.

The Palestinian labour force participation rate was currently the eleventh lowest in the world. A large number of Palestinian workers employed in Israel did not enjoy social benefits and were not employed with a written contract. ILO also observed that ending the occupation was a prerequisite for realizing workers' rights and for making decent work a reality.

Palestinian role in international institutions

29. In a sign of growing recognition of the role that the State of Palestine could play in multilateral forums, the State of Palestine was elected on 24 July 2018 to chair the Group of 77 group at the United Nations in 2019. Before that, the Intergovernmental Committee for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) had elected the State of Palestine to its Bureau at its 12th session, held in Jeju, Republic of Korea, from 4 to 9 December 2017.

30. In a welcome breakthrough, on 19 April 2018, Palestinian and Israeli diplomats agreed on the text of a UNESCO resolution on occupied Jerusalem. Earlier on, on 12 October 2017, the United States had announced its withdrawal from UNESCO, accusing the agency of "anti-Israel bias". On 22 December 2017, Israel also announced its withdrawal from the agency. Both withdrawals, if followed through, will come into effect at the end of 2018.

Action in the General Assembly

31. On 22 December 2017, at an emergency special session and following a failed attempt in the Security Council,²⁴ the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/19 on the status of Jerusalem, after the unilateral decision by the United States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, in contravention of Security Council resolution 478 (1980). In its resolution, adopted by a majority of 128 countries in favour, to 9 against and 35 abstentions, the Assembly stressed that Jerusalem was a final status issue and affirmed that any decisions that purported to have altered the character, status or demographic composition of Jerusalem had no legal effect and were null and void.²⁵ On 13 June, at an emergency meeting, the Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/20 by 120 votes in favour to 8 against, deploring the use of excessive, disproportionate and indiscriminate force by Israeli forces against Palestinian civilians, in particular in the Gaza Strip. It requested the Secretary-General to submit a report within 60 days outlining proposals on ways and means for ensuring the safety of Palestinian civilians, including recommendations regarding an international protection mechanism.²⁶

32. From 17 to 20 July 2018, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories visited Amman, where it met community representatives, non-governmental organizations, officials from the Government of the State of Palestine and United Nations representatives. The delegation was told that discriminatory measures against the Palestinians were on the rise in a climate of impunity, with the continuation by the occupying power of deliberate and unlawful policies and practices. The Government of Israel maintained its practice of non-cooperation with the Committee and the delegation was unable to visit the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Action in the Security Council

33. On 18 December, owing to the negative vote exercised by a permanent member, the Security Council failed to adopt (with 14 votes in favour and 1 against) draft resolution S/2017/1060, tabled by Egypt, in which regret was expressed at the unilateral decision of a Member State to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and move its embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. On 15 May, the Council also failed to put to vote a draft resolution by Kuwait to condemn the killing of civilians in Gaza.

34. The Secretary-General continued to use his good offices to promote a peaceful settlement of the conflict based on the two-State solution. On 20 February, he expressed concern to the Security Council that the global consensus for a two-State solution could be eroding and that obstacles on the ground had the potential to create an irreversible one-State reality (see S/PV.8183). He also noted that conditions for Palestinians in Gaza were dire and felt that the shortfalls in the funding of UNRWA were a matter of international concern and called for concerted action by all parties.²⁷

35. In the monthly meetings of the Council on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question,¹¹ the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process reported that the failure of the forces of moderation was a win for the forces of radicalization and that unilateral moves that blocked the way back to the negotiating table would drive the situation further towards a one-State reality of perpetual occupation. He also highlighted the need to maintain support for Palestine refugees as a fundamental issue to the pursuit of peace and security in the region. The Special Coordinator also presented three reports on behalf of the Secretary-General on the implementation of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), the third of which was presented on 19 June and, in response to repeated requests by the Committee and other Member States, made available in writing.²⁸

36. On 22 February, Council members attended the Arria-formula meeting entitled “Prospects for the two-State solution for peace”. Participants in the briefing found that challenges to the prospect of a two-State solution included tensions regarding Jerusalem; a sharp deterioration in the humanitarian situation, in particular in Gaza; the financial difficulties faced by UNRWA; and the shrinking space for civil society, in particular human rights defenders and civilian protesters.

Action in the Economic and Social Council

37. On 25 July, ECOSOC adopted resolution 2017/30, in which it stressed the urgency of achieving without delay an end to the Israeli occupation that had begun in 1967. The Council stated that it was convinced that the Israeli occupation had gravely impeded the efforts to achieve environmentally sustainable development and a sound economic environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It demanded that Israel comply with the Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization signed in Paris on 29 April 1994.

Action in the Human Rights Council

38. In a report (A/HRC/37/39) submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 31/36, in which the Council called for a database of all business enterprises either explicitly linked to the settlements or forming part of processes that enabled and supported the establishment, expansion and maintenance of the settlements (see A/HRC/22/63, para. 4), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) identified 206 companies that would be named in a future update after they had all been contacted. While asking for more resources to update the database, OHCHR stated that the presence of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory served to depress the Palestinian economy and reduce opportunities for Palestinian businesses to thrive, which had a direct effect on the job market.

39. On 23 March, the Human Rights Council adopted four resolutions relating to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Council reaffirmed the inalienable, permanent and unqualified right of the Palestinian people to self-determination (resolution 37/34); demanded that Israel cease all practices and actions that violated the human rights of the Palestinian people (resolution 37/35); demanded that Israel cease all settlement activities in all the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and called upon Israel to cease immediately all actions causing the alteration of the character, status and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory (resolution 37/36); and called upon all duty bearers and United Nations bodies to pursue the implementation of recommendations of, inter alia, the independent international fact-finding mission to investigate the implications of settlements on the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of the Palestinian people (resolution 37/37).

40. In his second report to the Human Rights (A/72/556), in October 2017, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 stated that the role of Israel as occupier had crossed the line into illegality, and he recommended to the General Assembly to commission a study and consider the advantages of seeking an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the legality of the occupation. He also recommended to the Assembly to consider the adoption of a Uniting-for-Peace resolution with respect to the question of Palestine. In his third report (A/HRC/37/75), considered at the thirty-seventh session of the Council, the Special Rapporteur emphasized the urgent need to improve the desperate state of right to health in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the plight of Palestinian children.

41. At the same session, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights submitted a report on ensuring accountability and justice for all violations of international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (A/HRC/37/41), pursuant to resolution 34/28. In that report, the Commissioner called for accountability for the escalation of hostilities in Gaza in 2014 and observed that recent developments undermined confidence in the Israeli military justice system, as they appeared to reinforce a culture of impunity. The Commissioner also highlighted a lack of accountability for alleged violations impeding the work of human rights defenders and journalists in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

42. On 23 July, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights briefed the Committee, stressing that the root causes of the Great March of Return protests in Gaza needed to be addressed. He stated that only an end to the occupation could bring about lasting peace.²⁹

Mandate of the Committee

43. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly by resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty, and to return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat at <http://www.un.org/unispal/>.

44. On 30 November 2017, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 72/13), requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the necessary resources to carry out its programme of work (resolution 72/11) and the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat (resolution 72/12). The Assembly also adopted resolution 72/14, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

45. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main United Nations intergovernmental bodies, such as the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

46. The Committee is composed of 26 Member States, representing different regional groups and supporting the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

47. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

48. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. At its 388th meeting, on 5 February 2018, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Fodé Seck (Senegal) as Chair; Mahmoud Saikal (Afghanistan), Anayansi Rodríguez Camejo (Cuba), Dian Triansyah Djani (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and María Rubiales de Chamorro (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs; and Carmelo Inguanez (Malta) as Rapporteur. At its 390th meeting, on 23 July 2018, the Committee elected Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as the new Chair. The State of Palestine participates in the Bureau's work as an observer.

49. The Committee members and observers have actively advocated the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, a member and an observer of the Committee, the Plurinational State of Bolivia and Kuwait, respectively, serve on the Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

50. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all Member States of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in its work were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer. All efforts were made by the Committee to guarantee participation of civil society organizations, including from Israel.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee

A. Action taken in accordance with General Assembly resolution 72/13

1. Action taken in the Security Council

51. During the debates held by the Security Council on 18 October 2017 and 25 January, 26 April and 24 July 2018, the Committee delivered statements highlighting the deteriorating situation and calling upon the Council to uphold its responsibilities, take appropriate actions and contribute to a just, comprehensive and peaceful settlement of the conflict.³⁰

2. Action taken by the Bureau of the Committee

52. The members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee and in all delegation visits, and they chaired and moderated various sessions of the conferences. On the margins of the conferences and during delegation visits, they held meetings with senior officials from the respective host countries.

53. On 3 October 2017 and 2 August 2018, respectively, the Bureau held its third and fourth annual retreats. Issues discussed on those occasions included the programmes of work of the Committee for 2018 and 2019, including priorities and proposals for the holding of international events; and better outreach to and engagement with Member States (including in the Security Council, in particular its elected members), regional organizations and civil society. Several strategic decisions were taken to guide the future work of the Committee.

54. On 15 August, the Bureau met with the Secretary-General and conveyed its concern regarding the deteriorating humanitarian, economic and social situation in Gaza and the urgency to establish a protection mechanism for Palestinian civilians, following the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution ES-10/20. The Bureau also conveyed the need to solve as a matter of urgency the shortfall in funding of UNRWA.

55. The Chair, on behalf of the Committee, issued three statements: in December 2017, to call upon the United States to rescind its decision to move its embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem; in February 2018, to share the outcome of the Committee delegation visit to Uganda; and in May, to call upon Israel to abide by its international obligations as an occupying power and ensure the protection of civilians in Gaza.

B. Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 72/13 and 72/11

1. Committee meetings at Headquarters

56. During the reporting period, the Committee held six open meetings in New York, in addition to the six informal meetings of its Bureau. At the open meetings, the Committee received updates on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, reports of meetings organized by the Committee, reports from members of the ³⁰ See S/PV.8072, S/PV.8167, S/PV.8244 and S/PV.8316.

Committee on their activities in support of the Palestinian people, and briefings from invited speakers. Key aspects of those meetings included the following:

(a) At its 385th high-level meeting, on 15 November 2017, the Committee approved for submission to the General Assembly four draft resolutions entitled “Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People”, “Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat”, “Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat” and “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, respectively. At the same meeting, the Committee heard a briefing by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967;

(b) The 386th high-level meeting, on 29 November, marked the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People;

(c) At its 387th meeting, on 14 December, the Committee heard the report of the Committee delegation visit to the United Republic of Tanzania and of its meetings with civil society organizations;

(d) At its 388th meeting, on 5 February 2018, attended by the Secretary-General, the Committee re-elected its Chair, Vice-Chairs and Rapporteur and adopted its annual programme of work;

(e) At its 389th meeting, on 28 March, the Committee heard a briefing by the Director of the UNRWA New York Liaison Office. The report of the Committee delegation visit to Uganda was also presented;

(f) At its 390th meeting, on 23 July, the Committee reviewed reports on its delegation visit to Panama, the United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine, held at Headquarters on 17 and 18 May, and the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, held in Rabat from 26 to 28 June. At the same meeting, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights briefed the Committee on the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the funding shortfall of UNRWA and the adoption by Israel of the discriminatory “Basic Law: Israel as the Nation-State of the Jewish People”.

2. United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine: “70 Years after 1948 — Lessons to Achieve a Sustainable Peace”

57. The United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine, held at Headquarters on 17 and 18 May, brought together Palestinian, Israeli and international experts and representatives of the diplomatic community and civil society to highlight the need to address issues related to the 1948 war and subsequent mass displacement of Palestinians. Panels focused on an evaluation of the Nakbah (“the catastrophe”) and its continued relevance today, the ongoing displacement of Palestinians, questions of accountability and transitional justice.

58. Key findings and recommendations included: the fact that ending the Israeli occupation was a necessary prerequisite for the freedom of the Palestinian people and a two-State solution; the need to address the root causes of the conflict and the interlinkages among development, peace and security, and human rights; the need for the international community to acknowledge the Nakbah and to hold Israel accountable for crimes committed in 1948 and thereafter; the need to establish a truth-seeking, reparations and reconciliation mechanism prior to a political agreement; the need to remind Israel of its obligations under international law and to request that it provide better international protection to Palestinians, including refugees; and the need to treat Palestine refugees as dispossessed nationals of a country — Palestine — rather than as stateless refugees.

59. On 15 May, just before the Forum was held and to mark the seventieth anniversary of the Nakbah, the Committee supported the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations in New York in organizing a commemorative concert by a renowned Palestinian music band, Trio Joubran.

60. On 16 May, closed consultations were held with civil society organizations based in Palestine and Israel.

3. Annual observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People

61. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 29 November 2017 at Headquarters, the United Nations offices in Vienna, Geneva, and Nairobi, and at the United Nations information centres and other entities in many cities throughout the world. At Headquarters, the Committee held a special meeting with the participation of the Deputy Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly and the President of the Security Council. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 72/11, the Committee organized an exhibit, entitled “The Palestinian People: Everlasting Roots, Infinite Horizons”, showcasing photos of eminent Palestinian individuals and groups in different walks of life. Palestinian Arab Idol Star Ameer Dandan performed on the occasion.

4. Programme of international meetings and conferences

62. During the reporting period, the Committee organized several international events,³¹ including:

Committee delegation visit to the United Republic of Tanzania

63. The purpose of the visit to the United Republic of Tanzania (3–6 December 2017) was to mobilize engagement for the two-State solution in that country and to inform local public opinion about the life of the Palestinian people after 50 years of Israeli occupation.

64. The delegation held meetings with the Minister for Foreign Affairs and East African Cooperation and the Minister of Information, Culture, Arts and Sports. The delegation also met with representatives of civil society organizations and the media and with a former Prime Minister and erstwhile Secretary-General of the African Union. A public lecture was organized at a local conference centre.

65. Interlocutors reaffirmed that the United Republic of Tanzania was opposed to the foreign occupation of territory or its acquisition by force, and that it remained committed to the two-State solution. The delegation received requests for more outreach and information in East Africa, including in the major regional language, Kiswahili.

Committee delegation visit to Uganda

66. The objective of the visit to Uganda (26–28 February 2018) was to strengthen political and diplomatic ties, enhance the support of that country for the two-State solution and understand the evolving position of the African countries on the question of Palestine.

67. The delegation held meetings with the President, the Prime Minister and the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, as well as the Speaker of Parliament and the Chair of the Parliament Committee on Foreign Affairs. At Makerere University, the delegation had an interactive discussion with faculty and students. The delegation also met with representatives of civil society organizations.

³¹ For detailed reports of each event, see www.un.org/unispal/events/international-conferences/ and www.un.org/unispal/delegation-visit/.

68. Interlocutors reiterated the support of Uganda for the work of the Committee and the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. They also inquired about the concrete actions that the Committee was undertaking at United Nations Headquarters. They urged the Committee to focus on links between businesses and the Israeli occupation and to mobilize civil society, especially in the United States and Europe.

Committee delegation visit to Panama

69. The purpose of the visit to Panama (9 and 10 April 2018) was to enhance the support of that country for the two-State solution and advocate the recognition of the State of Palestine. The visit took place as part of the Committee's outreach efforts in Latin America.

70. The delegation held meetings with the Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs and with the Foreign Affairs Committee of the National Assembly. Other activities included a briefing to trainees at the Diplomatic Academy and a conference hosted by the Departments of Law and Political Science and of Public Administration of the University of Panama. The delegation also met with representatives of local Palestinian solidarity groups and of the Palestinian diaspora.

71. Government interlocutors highlighted the traditional position of Panama, which was to foster dialogue and facilitate solutions. They informed the Committee about the intention to open a liaison office of Panama in Ramallah, as a first step toward strengthening relations with the State of Palestine. The encounters with the public and local media attention to the visit also indicated strong interest in the question of Palestine and support for the rights of the Palestinian people.

International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem in Rabat, supported by the Organization of Islamic Cooperation

72. The International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, held in Rabat from 26 to 28 June 2018 under the theme "The question of Jerusalem after 50 years of occupation and 25 years of the Oslo Accords", brought together Palestinian, Israeli and international experts and representatives of the diplomatic community and of civil society to provide up-to-date information on the current situation in East Jerusalem, examine the latest legal developments having an impact on the political and social status of Palestinians, and explore practical ways for the international community to support the resilience and development of Jerusalem, in particular its youth.

73. The key messages and recommendations included the following: Jerusalem is a final status issue that must be resolved through direct negotiations; recent developments in Jerusalem, taken against international consensus and Security Council resolutions, have turned the focus back on the conflict, including the question of Jerusalem; the fundamental problem is the Israeli occupation, and Israeli reluctance to recognize the Palestinian people as an equal has resulted in a colonizer/colonized power dynamic between the two peoples; Israeli proposals for Palestinians in East Jerusalem to participate in local governance are a call for a de facto acceptance of the annexation of East Jerusalem; initiatives should be launched to provide socioeconomic and political support to Palestinians in Jerusalem and to enable them to stay in the city; international and regional organizations, such as the European Union, should take a more active political role and not restrict themselves to development funding; and future meetings on the question of Jerusalem should also be held outside the Arab Islamic world.

5. Cooperation with intergovernmental and regional organizations

74. Throughout the year, the Committee continued its cooperation with intergovernmental organizations. The Committee appreciates the active participation of the representatives of those organizations in the various international events held under its auspices and the co-sponsorship provided by OIC to organize the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem. The African Union, LAS and OIC, as observers to the Committee, regularly attend the meetings of the Committee and its Working Group and participate in their work.

75. The Chair of the Committee delivered a statement at the forty-fifth session of the Council of Foreign Ministers of OIC, in Dhaka, on 5 and 6 May 2018.

6. Cooperation with civil society

76. The Working Group of the Committee, chaired by Malta and supported by the Division for Palestinian Rights, collaborates with civil society organizations, promoting the rights of Palestinian through the following activities:

(a) Briefings provided by civil society organizations (B'Tselem, Gisha: Legal Center for Freedom of Movement, Human Rights Watch, Women's Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling and Terrestrial Jerusalem) and organized by the Israel-Palestine NGO Working Group and United Nations agencies. The Division for Palestinian Rights facilitated briefings by the Association of International Development Agencies, the Norwegian Refugee Council and One Voice following the publication of the report of the Association of International Development Agencies entitled "50 Years of Occupation: Dispossession, Deprivation and De-development". The briefings raised awareness of the situation following recent developments in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the humanitarian crisis in Gaza, the Great March of Return protests and the legal and political impact of new Israeli laws on Palestinians;

(b) A meeting of the Committee Bureau with the Israel-Palestine NGO Working Group on 23 February. Participants in the meeting were provided with updated information on the work of faith-based organizations of the United States in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(c) Civil society organization participation in the Forum on the Question of Palestine;

(d) Closed consultations with civil society organizations based in Palestine and Israel on 16 May, just before the Forum on the Question of Palestine. The consultations, attended by more than 20 organizations, provided an opportunity to meet with the Committee Working Group and member States. The civil society organizations recommended that the Committee adopt a more proactive advocacy policy within the United Nations to call for a systematic investigation into war crimes, compile research on best practices in relation to legal solutions for protracted displacement, and explicitly address the issue of business transactions in and with illegal Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, even in absence of an official United Nations database.

77. The Committee also invited youth representatives from East Jerusalem to attend the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem and share their perspectives about the challenges that they faced under occupation.

78. The Division for Palestinian Rights continued to issue the weekly NGO Action News bulletin and maintain the Committee web page on civil society to increase awareness and foster cooperation.

79. The Committee Working Group is currently reviewing the policy for civil society organization accreditation and the mechanism for selecting such organizations for participation in Committee events.

7. Cooperation with parliaments and interparliamentary organizations

80. The Committee continued to attach great importance to developing its relations with national and regional parliaments and their interparliamentary organizations, and it held meetings with parliamentarians in Panama, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania during Committee delegation visits, as well as with parliamentarians in Morocco in the margins of the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem.

8. Research, monitoring and publications

81. The Division for Palestinian Rights carried out research and monitoring activities and responded to requests for information and briefings on the question of Palestine. Under the guidance of the Committee, the Division prepared the following publications for dissemination:

(a) A monthly bulletin on actions taken by the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations relevant to the question of Palestine;³²

(b) Reports of international meetings and conferences organized under the auspices of the Committee;³³

(c) An annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Human Rights Council relating to the question of Palestine.³⁴

82. The Committee is of the view that the Division should continue a review of the continued relevance of existing publications in consultation with the Bureau, discontinue those that are no longer considered relevant and reallocate resources to other publications.

9. United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine

83. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in cooperation with relevant services of the Secretariat, continued to administer, maintain, expand and upgrade the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine³⁵ to heighten international awareness of the question of Palestine as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people and a just, peaceful solution through the work of the Committee. The Division also maintained its Facebook, Twitter and YouTube pages to disseminate information about the work on the question of Palestine by the Committee and the entities of the United Nations system. The Division, in cooperation with the Department of Public Information, undertook a major redesign and expansion of the Information System, which is now and for the first time available in all six official United Nations languages, on a more modern technological platform.

10. Capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine

84. As mandated in General Assembly resolutions, including resolution 72/11, and as part of its ongoing efforts to further expand the capacity-building programme for staff of the Government of the State of Palestine aimed at supporting the Government in enhancing the viability and sustainability of the future independent State of Palestine, the Division for Palestinian Rights organized and administered the following capacity-building initiatives, in consultation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations in New York:

(a) In October 2017, the programme facilitated and funded a training session on effective multilateral environmental agreements, organized by the United Nations Environment Programme in collaboration with the University of Eastern Finland;

(b) The same month, the programme implemented, in collaboration with the United Nations System Staff College, a training session entitled “United Nations catalytic support to South-South and triangular cooperation in implementing the 2030 Agenda”;

(c) From 30 October to 1 November 2017, the programme collaborated with OHCHR and organized a study visit to observe the sixty-eighth session of the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women in order to help Palestinian officials to prepare for the Convention’s session in 2018, when the report of the State of Palestine would be discussed;

(d) In December 2017, the programme funded the participation of Palestinian officials in a workshop on conference diplomacy and multilateral negotiations;

(e) In February 2018, the programme funded the participation of Palestinian officials in an online course organized by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), entitled “Women, leadership and peacebuilding”;

(f) In March 2018, the Programme funded the participation of Palestinian officials in another online UNITAR course, entitled “Multilateral conferences and diplomacy”.

85. The Committee paid special attention to expanding the pool of potential participants to all offices and departments of the Government of the State of Palestine, and it gave special consideration to achieving gender balance in the selection of candidates for its capacity-building programme. The Committee notes that, in September 2017, the annual capacity-building programme for Palestinian officials at United Nations Headquarters was not implemented for the first time since its advent, because candidates selected for the programme were unable to obtain visas to travel to New York in time.

86. The Division is currently undertaking a comprehensive evaluation of the programme, to make it more responsive to Palestinian capacity-building needs.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Public Information in accordance with General Assembly resolution 72/12

87. During the reporting period, the Department of Public Information continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine in accordance with General Assembly resolution 72/12.

88. The Department held an international media seminar on peace in the Middle East in Vienna, on 5 and 6 October 2017, which focused on media narratives and public perceptions from Israeli and Palestinian perspectives; and the conflict through the lens of international media.

89. The Department organized its annual training programme for 10 Palestinian journalists from 30 October to 1 December 2017, thereby bringing to 190 the number of journalists trained under the programme since its inception, in 1995.

90. The Department completed a major review and update of its permanent exhibit on the question of Palestine, located along the guided tour route of United Nations Headquarters.

91. The Department issued a total of 90 press releases covering meetings, in English and French, and disseminated news and information about issues and developments related to the question of Palestine. All open intergovernmental meetings on the subject were covered by the United Nations Television and Video, United Nations Photo and the Webcast Unit.

92. United Nations News, and its Arabic unit in particular, produced a series of interviews with senior officials and policymakers. The Yearbook of the United Nations continued to cover relevant statements, resolutions, events and actions taken by the Committee. The first issue of UN Chronicle in 2018 contained an article focusing on a training programme in Palestine to achieve environmental sustainability in the region.³⁶

93. The global network of United Nations information centres organized a wide range of activities, including briefings, exhibitions, film screenings, workshops, social media campaigns and commemorations of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Information centres across the world also helped to promote at the local level “Dignity is priceless”, the global fundraising campaign launched by UNWRA in January 2018.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

94. On the basis of its deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, Committee briefings, delegation visits, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations, and regional organizations, the Committee has developed the recommendations listed below.

95. Recalling that 2018 marked the seventieth anniversary of the expulsion of Palestine refugees from their homeland in 1948, remembered as the Nakbah (the catastrophe), and fifty-first anniversary of the Israeli occupation, the Committee urges the international community to redouble its efforts towards the achievement of the two-State solution based on the 1967 borders, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid principles, the Arab Peace Initiative and the road map of the Quartet.

96. The Committee reiterates the need to reframe the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. It is not a conflict between two parties over disputed territory. It is one of one State occupying, colonizing and annexing the territory of another State.

97. The Committee supports revising the existing model of bilateral negotiations into an expanded multilateral framework that includes key regional partners, with a view to reviving the peace process with a credible political horizon. In this context, the Committee welcomes the eight-point plan presented to the Security Council by President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, on 20 February 2018.

98. Any resolution of the conflict requires a comprehensive regional solution, such as that offered by the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee will enhance its cooperation with LAS and OIC. The Committee calls upon other international and regional organizations, such as the European Union, to take on a more politically active role in mediating an end to the conflict.

99. The Committee acknowledges that intra-Palestinian unity is critical to achieving an independent State of Palestine. The Committee offers its services and support to local, regional and international efforts to advance the unity process.

100. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure the accountability and implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace stated in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\). The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to present his reports to the Council on the implementation of the resolution in a written format and, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the resolution, to include in his reports references to implementation by Member States. Pursuant to paragraph 11 of the resolution, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions.

101. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, in particular with respect to settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It looks forward to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights producing expeditiously a database of all business enterprises engaged in certain Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as mandated by the Human Rights Council in its resolution 31/36.

102. The Committee calls upon the international community to shift from a humanitarian to a political and human rights framework in addressing the plight of the Palestinian people. It demands an end to the 11-year old Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza and the lifting of all closures within the framework of Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). It calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance, the reconstruction process and economic recovery, which are essential to alleviate the distress of Palestinians, including women and children.

103. The Committee deems unilateral decisions by Member States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of embassies in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as null and void, as they are in violation of Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 476 (1980) and 478 (1980). The Committee calls upon Member States to rescind those decisions. Jerusalem remains a final status issue that must be resolved through direct negotiations between the two parties on the basis of relevant United Nations resolutions.

104. The Committee deplores the use of excessive, disproportionate and indiscriminate force by Israeli forces against Palestinian civilians, including during the protests in the Gaza Strip in 2018. The Committee hopes that every support will be provided to the Commission of Inquiry mandated by the Human Rights Council to conclude expeditiously its investigation into violations committed on the fence between Israel and the Gaza Strip during those protests.

105. The Committee urges Member States and the Organization to remind Israel of its obligations under international law. It welcomes the report of the Secretary-General pursuant to resolution ES-10/20 and emphasizes the need for the implementation of an international protection mechanism that can credibly ensure the safety and welfare of Palestinian civilians.

106. The Committee emphasizes the importance of the acknowledgment by Israel of the Nakbah and its impact upon the Palestinian people as a necessary requirement for a viable and lasting peace. Palestine refugees should be treated as dispossessed nationals of a country — Palestine — rather than stateless refugees. It strongly advocates the right to return (or compensation) of the Palestine refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III). The Committee further encourages all Member States to work collectively to fund UNRWA sufficiently and predictably, in particular in view of the unprecedented shortfall in its funding.

107. The Committee notes with appreciation the diligent contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights in support of its mandate and requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support for all aspects of its mandate.

108. The Committee will continue, through its mandated activities implemented by the Division, to raise international awareness as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people. In that context, the Committee recognizes the growing importance of cooperation among developing countries and regional and subregional organizations within the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation for sharing replicable experiences of achieving self-determination and independence.

109. The Committee requests the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information, which has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public of the relevant issues.

110. The Committee highly values civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people and will continue to expand its efforts to engage civil society organizations, including by regularly convening civil society forums. It encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions to promote the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and full recognition of the State of Palestine and its independence.

111. The Committee intends to work closely with other United Nations actors and entities, including the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the Organization towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner and in accordance with international law. The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to its partners, and in particular OIC, for the contribution of extrabudgetary resources and their active participation in its conferences and events.

112. Lastly, the Committee urges its members, observer States and others to participate actively in its programme of activities. The Committee will also enhance its outreach to all Member States and regional groups at the United Nations to take a more effective approach towards the achievement of the two-State solution, and to expand the Committee's membership as a form of political support for the resolution of the question of Palestine. The Committee calls upon all Member States to join in this endeavour, and invites the General Assembly to reconfirm its mandate in recognition of the importance of its role.

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 73/18 of 30 November 2018.

The report covers the period from 5 September 2018 to 3 September 2019.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 73/18, adopted on 30 November 2018. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2019/1), formulated to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just and comprehensive solution of the question of Palestine and lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace, enhancing international solidarity with the plight of the Palestinian people until those objectives are achieved and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards a viable and sustainable future independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of an overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine during the reporting period, from 5 September 2018 to 3 September 2019.
3. Chapters III and IV contain an outline of the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, visits of delegations and capacity-building workshops organized by the Committee, as well as other mandated activities carried out and events held by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 73/20.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

7. During the reporting period, the deteriorating political, security, human rights, humanitarian and socioeconomic situation continued unabated as a result of the further entrenchment of the 52-year Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and diminishing prospects for realizing the two-State solution and a just peace.

8. Despite the demand reiterated by the Security Council in resolution 2334 \(2016\), no steps were taken by Israel to immediately and completely cease all settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. Settlement activity, facilitated through such measures as the approval of 6,000 additional housing units on 31 July, the seizure and demolition of Palestinian-owned structures and the forcible displacement of Palestinian families, continued and escalated across the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, not only in Area C, but also in Areas A and B, negatively affecting the Palestinian population, including women, girls and Bedouin communities. Those steps further undermined the contiguity of the Palestinian territory and the physical viability of the two-State solution based on the 1967 lines, making what is supposed to be a temporary situation of occupation indistinguishable from a one-State reality (see A/73/447).

9. To ensure accountability, the Committee and the wider membership reiterated calls for the implementation of relevant resolutions, including Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), and for reports on the implementation of that resolution to include information on compliance with its paragraph 5, in which States are called upon to distinguish in their dealings between Israel and the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem (see S/2019/251 and S/2018/614). They also reiterated their call for the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to publish in an expeditious manner the database of companies operating in Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

10. The 12-year illegal Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip continued to lead to human rights violations as well as humanitarian and socioeconomic distress among the Palestinian civilian population, which had no prospects for development or improved living conditions. The ongoing fuel and electricity crisis severely undermined the delivery of essential health, water and sanitation services, affecting women and girls in particular (see E/CN.6/2019/6). Moreover, demonstrations at the perimeter fence between Gaza and Israel continued on an almost daily basis. On 30 March 2019 alone, 18 demonstrators were killed and 703 wounded by Israeli security forces on the first anniversary of the Great March of Return, for which between 40,000 and 50,000 Palestinian protesters had gathered near the Israeli fence. In the report of the independent commission of inquiry established by the Human Rights Council to investigate violations committed during the large-scale civilian demonstrations held between 30 March and 31 December 2018, an investigation into possible war crimes and the prosecution of suspected perpetrators of international crimes were recommended (see A/HRC/40/74).

11. The protection of civilians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to be an issue of the utmost concern (see General Assembly resolution ES-10/20). Regrettably, on 29 January, the mandate of the Temporary International Presence in Hebron was not renewed, and the international monitors left the city, removing an essential element of protection for the local population.¹ The Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict has continued to report on the violations suffered by children, verifying that the past year witnessed the highest number of Palestinian child casualties since the 2014 Israeli war on the Gaza Strip, and the continued arrest, interrogation, detention and imprisonment of Palestinian children by Israel, the occupying Power (A/73/907-S/2019/509, paras. 84–97).

12. The implementation of the Egyptian-brokered reconciliation agreement of October 2017 among Palestinian factions to advance the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under a single, democratic and legitimate national Government remained stalled. In addition, a resolution to the serious financial crisis of the Government of the State of Palestine was not reached following the decision of Israel to punitively withhold Palestinian tax revenue from March 2019 onward, in violation of international law and existing agreements, in particular the Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (see, e.g., S/PV.8583). The support announced by the League of Arab States (LAS) and some Member States in April 2019 is expected to provide much-needed funding to ensure continuity in the functions of the Government of the State of Palestine.

13. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and its core programme of providing educational, health, relief and social services and emergency assistance, including food aid, to more than 5.4 million Palestine refugees registered with it continued to be imperilled as a result of the lack of a reliable and sustainable funding arrangement. Notwithstanding the additional $60 million contributed by donor countries and organizations at the pledging conference on 25 June, the Agency's 2019 budget shortfall remained at $151 million, and resource mobilization efforts continue.

14. Israel continued to pursue measures to alter the legal, demographic and historical multicultural and multireligious character and status of Jerusalem and to consolidate its control over the city and its surroundings. Those and other violations of the basic rights of Palestinians in East Jerusalem, including the lack of freedom of movement and worship, exposed the fragility of the status of the city. Tensions at the flashpoint area of Haram al-Sharif continued, including during the last day of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, resulting in the loss of Palestinian lives. The Committee, as well as world leaders, including Pope Francis, the King of Jordan and the King of Morocco,² reiterated that the historic status quo of the holy sites in Jerusalem must be respected and that their preservation was the shared responsibility of the international community.

15. The relocation of embassies and diplomatic offices from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem by a small number of Member States, with recognition of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, was met with a strong response from the international community. The Committee, the European Union and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) were among the many entities that considered those actions to be a flagrant violation of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions and reiterated calls for all Member States to comply with, inter alia, Security Council resolutions 476 (1980),

478 (1980) and 2334 (2016) and to refrain from establishing diplomatic missions in Jerusalem.³

16. The United States of America, as part of its efforts aimed at achieving Israeli-Palestinian peace, organized the “Peace to Prosperity” workshop in Manama on 25 June 2019. Representatives of the international community reiterated that the solution to the conflict remained political and that economic support for the Palestinian people would not succeed without a political plan that addressed the historic injustice of occupation and the fulfilment of their inalienable rights, including to self-determination and independence.

17. The international community, including the African Union, the European Union, OIC, LAS and the Non-Aligned Movement, continued to reaffirm overwhelmingly the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and uphold the long-standing parameters of the two-State solution for a viable and just solution to the conflict, with Israel and Palestine living side by side in peace and security, based on the pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem as the capital of the State of Palestine and with negotiated outcomes for all final status issues, in accordance with international law, relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid principles and the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee reiterated that the ongoing occupation should not prevent the State of Palestine from taking its rightful place among the community of nations and that Member States should extend formal recognition to the State of Palestine and support its full membership in the United Nations. As a reflection of that support, the State of Palestine was elected the 2019 Chair of the Group of 77 and China, the largest grouping in the General Assembly (see S/PV.8375, S/PV.8449, S/PV.8517 and S/PV.8583). In July 2019, Saint Kitts and Nevis became the 140th State to formally recognize the State of Palestine.

18. The observance in 2018 of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the signing of the Oslo Accords, a historic moment that filled Palestinians, Israelis and the world with the hope that a genuine and lasting peace could finally be realized, served as a sad reminder of a lost opportunity. Similarly, the seventieth anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and of the expulsion and flight of Palestine refugees from their homeland in 1948, remembered as the Nakbah (catastrophe), contrasted starkly with the unrealized rights and broken promises made to an entire people of a life of dignity and freedom.

Chapter III

Mandate of the Committee

19. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by General Assembly resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975 with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty and return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat (www.un.org/unispal).

20. On 30 November 2018, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 73/18) and requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the resources necessary for its programme of work (resolution 73/21) and to continue to implement the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information (renamed Department of Global Communications) of the Secretariat (resolution 73/20). The Assembly also adopted resolution 73/19, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

21. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations, such as the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

22. The Committee is composed of 26 Member States, representing different regional groups and supporting the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

23. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, LAS and OIC.

24. The Bureau of the Committee, with geographically balanced representation, is elected each year from among the permanent representatives of Committee members. At its 394th meeting, on 15 February 2019, chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as Chair; Adela Raz (Afghanistan), Ana Silvia Rodríguez Abascal (Cuba), Dian Triansyah Djani (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and Jaime Castillo Hermida (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs for the year; and Carmelo Inguanez (Malta) as Rapporteur until 15 May 2019. The State of Palestine participates in the Bureau's work as an observer.

25. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. The members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee and on all visits of delegations, and they chaired and moderated various sessions of the conferences. On the margins of the conferences and during visits, they held meetings with senior officials from the respective host countries.

26. The Committee members and observers have actively advocated the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, Committee members Indonesia and South Africa and observer Kuwait serve on the Security Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

27. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in its work were welcome to do so. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participated in the work of the Committee as an observer. The Committee made every effort to guarantee the participation of civil society organizations, including those from Israel.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 73/18 and 73/21

A. Introduction

28. In the implementation of its programme of work, as a subsidiary body of the General Assembly, the Committee is guided by its mandate to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and support the achievement without delay of an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 lines. Its work and activities are also fully aligned with Security Council resolutions on the question of Palestine; women and peace and security; international and humanitarian law; human rights frameworks such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; and, more recently, the Sustainable Development Goals and their achievement by the State of Palestine. As authorized by the General Assembly, the Committee frequently made adjustments to its approved programme of work that it considered appropriate and necessary in view of developments. Taking a rights-focused approach, the Committee has made every effort to support the universally recognized rights of an occupied people and the rights of all States and people to live in peace and security. To that end, the Committee utilized a wide range of instruments and activities, including engaging the diplomatic community in a sustained dialogue on the question of Palestine through its formal and informal intergovernmental processes; employing the good offices of the Secretary-General; organizing awareness-raising activities for the public that involved conferences, meetings, invited speakers and the media, including social media; promoting partnerships with Governments, relevant bodies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations and civil society organizations; and building the capacities of the future State of Palestine.

B. Mobilization of the diplomatic community

29. The Committee utilized intergovernmental processes to continue to mobilize the international community in support of the realization of the two-State solution and a just, comprehensive and lasting solution to the question of Palestine in all its aspects through its diplomatic engagement with permanent missions in New York and around the world. It also held international conferences to allow the exchange of views among delegates and a wide range of partners.

30. During the reporting period, the Committee held four meetings at United Nations Headquarters, including a special meeting on the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see paras. 47–49 below). It also held seven Bureau meetings, including with special guests and briefers, and one Bureau retreat.

31. On 17 October 2018, the Bureau met to decide on the priorities and focus of the Committee's activities for the remainder of 2018 and the programme of work for 2019 in the light of updated information on the current political situation.

32. On 23 October, the Committee was briefed via videoconference by Michael Lynk, Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, on his forthcoming report (to be issued under the symbol A/HRC/40/73), which pointed to the actions of an occupying Power seemingly bent on further territorial annexation. Mr. Lynk warned that failure by the international community to stop the expansion of settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and other Israeli legislative initiatives could prompt Israel to formalize de jure annexation.

33. On 15 November, the Committee endorsed four draft resolutions for submission to the General Assembly. They concerned the mandate of the Committee, the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information (since renamed the Department of Global Communications) of the Secretariat, and the Division for Palestinian Rights. On 30 November, the General Assembly, having before it the report of the Committee (A/73/35), adopted the four draft resolutions (resolutions 73/18, 73/19, 73/20 and 73/21).

34. At its meeting on 15 February 2019, the Committee officially adopted its programme of work for 2019 (A/AC.183/2019/1). At the same meeting, the Committee also elected its Bureau members for 2019 (see para. 24 above).

35. On 26 February, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, organized its annual briefing session, which was open to all permanent missions to the United Nations, to familiarize delegates with the Committee's mandate and programme of work. A total of 20 participants attended the informative and interactive session, including 6 elected members of the Security Council. The Department of Global Communications also gave a presentation on the special information programme on the question of Palestine.

36. On 1 March, the Bureau, at the invitation of the Konrad Adenauer Foundation, discussed with Jürgen Rüttgers, former Federal Minister of Germany, commonalities between the visions of the Committee and Germany for a peaceful and sustainable solution to the question of Palestine based on the two-State solution, as well as practical steps for its achievement, including by engaging young people on both sides of the conflict.

37. On 20 March, the Bureau met with the Chair and a member of the independent commission of inquiry established by the Human Rights Council to investigate all alleged violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The briefing included the screening of footage of Israeli security forces killing and injuring Palestinian civilians at the Gaza fence.

38. As part of its priority to engage the European Union, the Committee sent delegations to Brussels and Berlin. The visit of the delegation to Brussels from 4 to 6 March 2019 mobilized regional and national support for the two-State solution and promoted concrete steps, such as the recognition of the State of Palestine and the protection of Palestinian civilians under occupation. Key action-oriented points raised during the visit included: accountability of Israel for its violations and the need for the European Union and the United Nations to be at the forefront of action to end impunity, with a view to safeguarding human rights and salvaging the prospects for realizing the two-State solution; compliance with the European Union policy of differentiation regarding products imported into the European Union from the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular from illegal Israeli settlements, and as a requirement of Security Council resolution 2334 (2016); the publication by the United Nations of a database of businesses profiting from the occupation of the Palestinian territory; protection of Palestinian civilians in the Gaza Strip and West Bank, especially in Hebron, and the lifting of the illegal blockade of Gaza; support for the mandate of UNRWA and for predictable, sufficient and sustained financing; and collective recognition of the State of Palestine by European Union member States as a means of promoting the peace process.

39. The United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine was held at Headquarters on 4 April and the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem was held at the United Nations Office at Geneva on 27 and 28 June. They served as important platforms for raising awareness, exchanging ideas and mobilizing the international community, Member States, international organizations and civil society organizations in the United States and abroad to shoulder the collective responsibility for safeguarding the two-State solution and exerting the efforts needed to support the realization of Palestinian rights and the achievement of lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace on the basis of that solution (see also paras. 55 and 56 below).

40. On 28 May, at Headquarters, the Bureau briefed the Group of African States on its mandate priorities and forthcoming activities in order to raise awareness of the Palestinian plight and foster support among regional United Nations groups.

41. On 21 June, the Bureau held its fifth annual retreat, at which it discussed the implications of international developments for the Committee and its work and identified priorities for 2019 and 2020. The Committee decided to strengthen outreach activities, including those regarding academia and the media, and to further develop its communication strategy. The decisions adopted at the retreat were shared with the Committee.

42. On 24 and 25 June, a Committee delegation visited Berlin and requested Germany to recognize the State of Palestine as a means of promoting the realization of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. The delegation met with officials from the Federal Chancellery and the Foreign Office and with parliament members, who confirmed that Germany remained committed to the two-State solution and opposed the annexation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

43. On 13 July, the Committee organized a visit to the Palestine Museum in Woodbridge, Connecticut, United States, to celebrate Palestinian cultural and artistic achievements through figurative art, music and dance. Representatives of Committee members and observers as well as the wider United Nations membership attended a lecture by a renowned Palestinian artist and scholar on the history and impact of Palestinian paintings and other works of art through the decades despite the occupation.

44. On 24 July, the Bureau held its annual meeting with the Secretary-General. The Chair conveyed the Committee's concerns regarding the deterioration of the situation and the continuing plight of the Palestinian people. He stressed that, while an overwhelming majority of Member States remained firmly committed to the two-State solution, that commitment had yet to be translated into concrete steps, including first and foremost the recognition of the State of Palestine as a sovereign and independent State and support for its full membership in the United Nations. The Secretary-General reaffirmed his unwavering support for the two-State solution.

45. The Chair delivered statements on behalf of the Committee at the quarterly debates of the Security Council on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, on 18 October 2018 (S/PV.8375), 22 January 2019 (S/PV.8449), 29 April 2019 (S/PV.8517) and 23 July 2019 (S/PV.8583). He highlighted the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the Committee's key activities and recommendations and called upon the Council to uphold its responsibilities under international law and take appropriate action that would lead to a just, comprehensive and peaceful settlement of the conflict in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the Council.

C. Raising awareness of the question of Palestine

46. The Committee has endeavoured to raise awareness of the political, human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the situation of Palestinian women, by facilitating up-to-date briefings by experts and exchanges of ideas on specific issues at Committee meetings at Headquarters, during side events, international conferences and visits of Committee delegations and through publications and its website. Details of each of the activities can be found on the website of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (www.un.org/unispal).

47. As the major awareness-raising event organized by the Committee, the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, which was commemorated on 28 November 2018, saw an impressive display of support and solidarity by Member States, civil society and the public.

48. At the special meeting of the Committee on that date, statements were delivered the President of the General Assembly, the President of the Security Council and the Secretary-General. Other speakers included the Vice-Chair of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, high-level representatives of the African Union, LAS, OIC and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations. Messages of solidarity were received from 22 Heads of State, six Heads of Government, nine Ministers for Foreign Affairs and others and published on the Committee's website.

49. All speakers expressed their unwavering support for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and called upon the international community to work towards that objective. Many stressed the urgency of an expeditious solution and the responsibility of world leaders to make the Palestinian question a priority, underscoring the centrality of a just solution to regional and global peace and stability.

50. As is customary, similar events were coordinated in observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People at the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi. The messages of the Chair and the Secretary-General were delivered at those events, and the United Nations was represented at the highest levels. The commemorations were attended by representatives of members and observers of the Committee and of the membership at large, who expressed their solidarity with the Palestinian people and support for the two-State solution. A message from the Secretary-General was issued in all six official languages.

51. The annual exhibition organized by the Committee on the occasion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations, was entitled "Unrealized rights, unfulfilled promises: 70 years of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and of the Palestinian people's Nakbah". It was displayed from 29 November 2018 to 4 January 2019 in the Visitors Lobby at Headquarters in the context of the seventieth anniversaries of both the expulsion and flight of Palestine refugees from their homeland in 1948, remembered as the Nakbah, and the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The exhibition served to raise awareness among visitors about the Nakbah and the denial of the rights of Palestine refugees that continues to this day.

52. The Chair, responding to an invitation from the Palestinian Return Centre, undertook a mission to London between 11 and 14 December 2018, where he met Members of Parliament and representatives of charities and delivered a public lecture at the School of Oriental and African Studies of the University of London. During the visit, the Chair recalled the principles and parameters agreed upon by the international community to find a just and lasting solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and informed key interlocutors about the Committee's work.

53. Several briefings and activities were organized within the framework of Committee meetings to update Member States and participants on specific issues. On 15 February 2019, a Committee meeting at Headquarters featured a videoconference with Amnesty International from East Jerusalem in which it presented a briefing on its report entitled "Destination: occupation – digital tourism and Israel's illegal settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories". The briefing provided information about the role of transnational e-tourism businesses in maintaining the Israeli occupation and highlighted how, by listing accommodations, attractions and tours located in settlements or run by settlers, four companies helped to sustain illegal Israeli settlements in the West Bank. In its report, Amnesty International recommended that Member States take regulatory action to prevent digital tourism companies domiciled or headquartered on their territory from providing or facilitating tourism services in settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

54. Similarly, a Committee side event, organized on 7 March 2019 on the margins of the sixty-third session of the Commission of the Status of Women, featured the screening of a documentary entitled Naila and the Uprising. The film described the active role played by Palestinian women during the first intifada of 1987 and its political aftermath. The screening was followed by a panel discussion with Zahira Kamal, head of the Palestinian Democratic Union Party, and Rula Salameh, the producer of the film, who had travelled for the occasion from Ramallah, as well as Julia Bacha, the director of the producing company Just Vision. The event, chaired by the Deputy Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine, attracted about 300 attendees and generated wide media coverage.

55. The United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine, held at Headquarters on 4 April 2019 on the theme "The threat of de facto annexation: what next for Palestine?", raised awareness among Member States of Israeli measures with the potential to produce a creeping annexation of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and highlighted viable and practical strategies to end that annexation in accordance with international law. Experts and attendees underscored, inter alia, the detrimental unilateral steps taken by some Member States and asserted that the continuing construction of illegal Israeli settlements and infrastructure for the exclusive use of Israelis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory amounted to a de facto annexation along with the 1980 de jure annexation of East Jerusalem, in violation of international law and United Nations resolutions. Other major impediments to achieving a lasting solution included the development of archaeological projects and tourist sites privileging an Israeli nationalistic narrative. Participants emphasized that Member States and civil society could play an important role in upholding international law, including human rights and humanitarian law, through bilateral pressure on Israel and domestic legislative and judicial action, such as the recognition of the State of Palestine and the implementation of paragraph 5 of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\).

56. The International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, organized in cooperation with OIC, was held at the United Nations Office at Geneva on 27 and 28 June 2019 on the theme "Preserving the cultural and religious character of Jerusalem". It raised awareness of Israeli policies and measures aimed at changing the cultural and religious character of Jerusalem, which have significant political, legal and socioeconomic ramifications, including the threat of derailing prospects for a peaceful solution to the question of Palestine. Panellists and participants highlighted, inter alia, that Jerusalem was a final status issue and that, without a just solution to its status, no Israeli-Palestinian agreement was possible; that Israeli plans risked upending the demographic make-up of the city; that the international community had a shared responsibility to preserve the historic status quo of the holy sites; that any unilateral actions, including by Member States, in contravention of United Nations resolutions and international law were null and void; that violations of the status quo could turn a political conflict into a religious conflagration, with repercussions throughout the region and beyond; and that there must be guarantees of free access for all worshippers to the city, with each group respecting the sanctity of the other's established holy sites.

57. The United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, now in its twenty-fifth year of operation, remains a valuable resource on the question of Palestine for diplomats and researchers around the world, averaging 35,000 visitors per month. It consists of more than 37,000 documents and is considered to be the largest and most comprehensive online repository on the subject. The collection ranges from the latest United Nations documents to rare records dating back decades. In June 2019, with the support of the Department of Global Communications and an external consultant, the Division for Palestinian Rights completed a two-and-a-half year project to migrate the information system to a modern technological platform. Since its launch, the new site has received more than double the number of page views per month. Efforts to make all of the information on the website available in all six official languages of the United Nations are under way.

58. The Committee maintained a social media presence to disseminate information on the question of Palestine. During the reporting period, the Committee's Facebook⁴ and Twitter⁵ accounts recorded steady growth in the number of visitors.

59. Further to its monitoring mandate, the Committee also produced monthly bulletins compiling all official documents of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations relating to the question of Palestine,⁶ an annual compendium of United Nations resolutions distributed to 4,095 recipients, including research libraries and universities, and other relevant studies and publications on topics of interest.

60. Moreover, through its weekly publication entitled "NGO Action News", the Committee continued to raise awareness of the work of civil society and United Nations actors in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and around the globe towards the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

D. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities

61. The Committee continued its cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities and expressed its appreciation for the active participation of representatives of those bodies at various events held under its auspices. It also expressed its appreciation to OIC for its annual co-sponsorship of the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem. The African Union, LAS and OIC regularly attended the meetings of the Committee as observers and participated in its work. At its meeting on 4 September 2018, the Committee was briefed by the Director of the New York office of UNRWA. The Committee's interaction with the European Union was strengthened through its delegation's visit to Brussels from 4 to 6 March.

62. In the context of cooperation with OIC, on 1 and 2 March 2019, the Chair delivered a statement at the forty-sixth session of the Council of Foreign Ministers of OIC, held in Abu Dhabi.

63. The Committee continued to attach great importance to enhancing relations with national and regional parliaments and their interparliamentary organizations. In March and June 2019, Committee delegations held meetings with Belgian and German parliamentarians as well as members of the European Parliament, focusing on their role in ensuring that Member States and intergovernmental organizations implement United Nations resolutions and relevant provisions of international law and contribute to a just, peaceful and lasting solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

64. At the United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine on 4 April, the Committee invited Senator Frances Black of Ireland, who had spearheaded a bill in line with paragraph 5 of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and the European Union policy of differentiation regarding products imported from the Occupied Palestinian Territory. During those meetings, interlocutors recommended that the Committee organize events focused on the role of parliamentarians in finding a just solution for the question of Palestine.

65. Also on 4 April, the Chair delivered a statement at the event entitled "Palestinian Day on the Hill", organized by the Canada-Palestine Parliamentary Friendship Group. The Chair stressed that parliaments had an important role to play as representatives of the will of the people that can demand accountability from their own Governments and ensure that international law is ultimately applied. Ahead of the visit, the Chair and the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine met in New York with the Foreign Minister of Canada.

66. During its activities, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, continued its long-standing cooperation with the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), United Nations country teams, UNRWA, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, the Department of Global Communications (including the United Nations information centres and the United Nations Regional Information Centre for Western Europe, in Brussels), the Human Rights Council and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR). The Division also liaised with the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) on the 2019 report of the Secretary-General on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (E/CN.6/2019/6) and with the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) in the context of the capacity-building programme.

67. On the margins of the International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, a Committee delegation held bilateral meetings with the President of the Human Rights Council, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the President of the International Committee of the Red Cross to consider the stark humanitarian and human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and progress on publishing the Human Rights Council-mandated database on businesses operating in the Israeli settlements.

68. The Committee continued its collaboration with civil society organizations promoting the rights of the Palestinian people. As is customary, a civil society representative was invited to speak at the special meeting of the Committee held on 28 November 2018 to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Bureau held closed consultations with civil society representatives, including from Israel and the State of Palestine, in the margins of that observance as well as on the margins of the United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine, held in New York on 3 March 2019. On 4 March, a Committee delegation met with Belgian and European civil society groups during its visit to Brussels.

69. Those meetings and interactions allowed the Committee to inform civil society about its mandate and activities, at Headquarters and abroad, as well as to learn about civil society concerns and actions. In turn, the rich exchanges have informed the programme of work, statements and reports of the Committee. The Committee has also continued to provide a space in which Israeli and Palestinian civil society organizations can interact, through the facilitation of their participation in Committee events, at a time when such interaction is increasingly circumscribed on the ground.

E. Capacity-building

70. As requested in General Assembly resolution 73/21, the Committee continued to develop training opportunities and programmes in order to expand the capacity of officials of the State of Palestine.

71. From 16 to 19 September 2018, a staff member of the Division for Palestinian Rights visited Ramallah and assessed the impact of the Committee's capacity-building programme, meeting with representatives of 10 ministries and 20 United Nations agencies. Apart from ensuring the alignment of the programme with activities of the rest of the United Nations system on the ground, the staff member conducted a needs assessment during the visit and identified specific areas and gaps in Palestinian capacity on which the Committee will now focus its efforts. The work undertaken serves to cement a demand-driven, national priority-focused capacity-building approach. An impact assessment of the annual training programme held in New York was also performed, and terms of reference for the selection of officials for the programme were also clarified and finalized.

72. From 5 September to 12 October 2018, the Committee carried out its annual six-week capacity-building training programme on multilateral diplomacy for Palestinian diplomats in New York, coinciding with the seventy-third session of the General Assembly. The objectives of the programme were revised and the classroom training element of the programme was strengthened, with the training content more customized to the job functions of participating Palestinian officials. The programme served to acquaint two female Palestinian diplomats with the work of the United Nations, its legal foundations, rules and regulations, and the functioning of its main organs and major items on their respective agendas, with a special focus on the question of Palestine. In December 2018, the Committee funded the participation of six Palestinian officials in an online course organized by UNITAR, entitled "Women, leadership and peacebuilding". The Committee, in cooperation with OHCHR, also supported the attendance, from 29 April to 3 May 2019, of a female Palestinian official at the ninety-eighth session of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, held in Geneva, in preparation for the presentation of the report of the State of Palestine to that Committee in August.

73. In response to multiple requests from Palestinian authorities, the Committee is collaborating with UNDP, UNESCO and the Office of the Prime Minister of the State of Palestine to build the communications and media relations capacity of officials in various ministries, including at the cabinet level.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 73/20

74. The Department of Global Communications continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine pursuant to General Assembly resolution 73/20.

75. During the reporting period, the Department held its annual International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East in Moscow on 5 and 6 September 2018, in which the Chair of the Committee also participated. The seminar, organized in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation with the support of the United Nations Association of Russia, the Russian Peace Foundation and the United Nations information centre in Moscow, was attended by participants from the State of Palestine, Israel, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States, among others, who discussed a variety of issues relating to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

76. The Department organized its annual training programme for Palestinian journalists in New York from 29 October to 30 November 2018 and in Washington, D.C., for the week beginning on 12 November. Six Palestinian journalists from Gaza, the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Jordan graduated in 2018, bringing the total number of journalists benefiting from the training programme to 196.

77. During the reporting period, all relevant open and intergovernmental meetings held at Headquarters were covered by United Nations Web TV and United Nations Photo.

78. The Meetings Coverage Section of the Department of Global Communications issued 73 press releases relating to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process in English and French. In addition, the Department produced a wealth of multimedia news articles and features about issues affecting the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people across its news and social media platforms in the six official languages, as well as in Kiswahili and Portuguese. United Nations News stories and social media posts on the flagship United Nations accounts were further amplified by media outlets and social media influencers. UNifeed video packages were aired 3,639 times by 315 global broadcasters, including Al Jazeera, the British Broadcasting Corporation, China Global Television News and Russia Today.

79. The Department's news and video teams conducted two field missions to the region, gathering information for features with a particular focus on children. Materials included exclusive reports, interviews and photos of senior United Nations officials visiting schools and training programmes sponsored by UNRWA in Gaza, the West Bank and Jordan.

80. With funding from Oman, the Department has been digitizing its audiovisual assets and has now posted 223 historical films and videos relating to the question of Palestine on its audiovisual library website.

81. Regarding the observance of the International Day of Solidarity in 2018, the Department worked closely with the Committee and the Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs to provide communications support for all of the events that were held at Headquarters on 28 November. The Department continued to update the website for the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People in the six official languages and supported the revitalization of the website of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, including the migration of data to preserve its rich historical record.

82. In addition, the global network of United Nations information centres organized a series of activities to highlight issues relating to the question of Palestine, including events in Brussels, Cairo, Canberra, Dakar, Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania, Geneva, Mexico City, Nairobi, Vienna and Washington, D.C.

83. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library was host to a series of four customized library training and coaching sessions for Palestinian delegates from 18 September to 8 October 2018, including training on United Nations documentation, treaty research and legal resources.

84. More than 256,700 visitors were briefed on the question of Palestine in front of the updated permanent exhibit, located along the route of the guided tour of Headquarters. Also during the reporting period, the updated permanent exhibit was mounted at the United Nations Office at Geneva.

85. The Envoy of the Secretary-General on Youth visited the West Bank and Gaza in June 2019 to raise awareness of the activities of UNRWA, in particular health and education services provided to young Palestine refugees. At the invitation of the Envoy, a delegation of UNRWA student parliamentarians attended the launch of the United Nations Youth Strategy on 24 September 2018.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

86. On the basis of its deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, briefings, visits of delegations, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations and regional organizations, the Committee has developed the recommendations set out below.

87. Recalling that 2019 marks the seventy-first anniversary of the expulsion and flight of Palestine refugees from their homeland in 1948, remembered as the Nakbah (catastrophe), and the fifty-second anniversary of the Israeli occupation, the Committee urges the international community to redouble its efforts towards the fulfilment of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including to self-determination and independence, and the achievement of the two-State solution based on the 1967 borders, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid principles, the Arab Peace Initiative and the road map of the Quartet.

88. The Committee reiterates the need to reframe the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. It is not a conflict between two equal parties over disputed territory. It is a conflict emanating from one State occupying, colonizing and annexing the territory of another State under oppressive, inhumane and discriminatory conditions.

89. Consistent with the responsibilities and obligations of the international community, the Committee supports revising the existing model of bilateral negotiations into an expanded multilateral framework, with a view to reviving the peace process with a credible political horizon. In this context, the Committee welcomes the eight-point plan presented to the Security Council by the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, on 20 February 2018, reiterating the agreed long-standing international consensus on the question of Palestine and calling for the mobilization of efforts to actualize that consensus.

90. Any resolution of the conflict, apart from having the two-State formula at its core, requires a comprehensive regional solution, such as that offered by the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee calls upon international and regional organizations, such as the European Union, LAS and OIC, to take on a more politically active role in mediating an end to the conflict.

91. The Committee acknowledges that intra-Palestinian unity is critical to the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under a single, democratic and legitimate national Government and to achieving an independent State of Palestine. The Committee offers its support to local, regional and international efforts to advance the unity process.

92. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure the implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace affirmed in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution 73/19. The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit his reports to the Council on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\) in written format and to include references to implementation by Member States of the provision contained in paragraph 5 of resolution 2334 \(2016\). Pursuant to paragraph 11 of the resolution, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions.

93. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, in particular with respect to settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It looks forward to the publication, by OHCHR, of a database of all business enterprises engaged in certain Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as mandated by the Human Rights Council in its resolution 31/36.

94. The Committee calls upon the international community to shift from a humanitarian to a human rights framework in addressing the plight of the Palestinian people. It demands an end to the 12-year Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza and the lifting of all closures within the framework of Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). It calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance, the reconstruction process and economic recovery, which are essential to alleviate the distress of Palestinians, including women and children, who face additional and gender-specific challenges that need to be addressed through targeted actions.

95. The Committee deems unilateral decisions by Member States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of embassies in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as null and void, as they are in violation of Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 476 (1980) and 478 (1980). The Committee calls upon Member States to rescind those decisions and reiterates that the historic status quo of the holy sites in Jerusalem must be respected and that the international community shares the responsibility to preserve the legal, demographic and historical multicultural and multireligious character and status of the city.

96. The Committee deplores the use of excessive, disproportionate and indiscriminate force by Israeli forces against Palestinian civilians, including during the protests in the Gaza Strip in 2018 and 2019. The Committee calls for the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the commission of inquiry, mandated by the Human Rights Council to investigate violations committed on the fence between Israel and the Gaza Strip during those protests.

97. The Committee urges Member States and the Organization to remind Israel of its obligations under international law to protect civilians. It regrets that, on 29 January, the mandate of the Temporary International Presence in Hebron was not renewed, and that the international monitors left the city, removing an essential element of protection for the local population. Further to the report of the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolution ES-10/20, the Committee emphasizes the need for the implementation of an international protection mechanism that can credibly ensure the safety and welfare of Palestinian civilians.

98. The Committee emphasizes the importance of the acknowledgment by Israel of the Nakbah and its impact upon the Palestinian people as a necessary requirement for a viable and lasting peace. Palestine refugees should be treated as dispossessed nationals of a country – the State of Palestine – rather than as stateless refugees. It strongly advocates the right to return as well as just compensation for Palestine refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III). The Committee further encourages all Member States to work collectively to fund UNRWA sufficiently and predictably.

99. The Committee notes with appreciation the diligent contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights in support of its mandate and requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support for all aspects of its mandate.

100. The Committee will continue, through its mandated activities implemented by the Division, to raise international awareness as well as international support for the rights of the Palestinian people in conformity with international law and United Nations resolutions. In that context, the Committee recognizes the growing importance of cooperation among developing countries and regional and subregional organizations within the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation for sharing replicable experiences towards the achievement of self-determination and independence.

101. The Committee requests the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information (now the Department of Global Communications), which has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public.

102. The Committee commends civil society initiatives in support of the Palestinian people and will continue to expand its efforts to engage civil society organizations, including by regularly convening civil society forums. It encourages civil society partners to work with their national Governments, parliamentarians and other institutions to promote the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the full recognition of the State of Palestine and its independence.

103. The Committee intends to continue to work closely with other United Nations actors and entities, including the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the Organization towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner and in accordance with international law. The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to its partners, and in particular OIC, for the contribution of extrabudgetary resources and their active participation in its conferences and events.

104. Lastly, the Committee urges its members, observers and others to participate actively in its programme of activities. The Committee will also enhance its outreach to all Member States and regional groups at the United Nations to take a more active and effective approach towards the achievement of the two-State solution, and to expand the Committee's membership as a form of political support for the resolution of the question of Palestine. The Committee calls upon all Member States to join in this endeavour and invites the General Assembly to reconfirm its mandate in recognition of the importance of its role.

[1 September 2020]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 74/10 of 3 December 2019.

The report covers the period from 4 September 2019 to 1 September 2020.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 74/10, adopted on 3 December 2019. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2020/1), formulated to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just and comprehensive solution of the question of Palestine and lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace, enhancing international solidarity with the plight of the Palestinian people until those objectives are achieved and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards a viable and sustainable future independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of an overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine during the reporting period, from 4 September 2019 to 1 September 2020.
3. Chapters III and IV contain an outline of the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, visits of delegations and capacity-building workshops organized by the Committee, as well as other mandated activities carried out and events held by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 74/13.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

7. During the reporting period, the political, security, human rights, humanitarian and socioeconomic situation continued to deteriorate across the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, owing to the ongoing entrenchment of the 53-year Israeli occupation and its illegal settlement activity, compounded by the ongoing illegal Gaza blockade and the threat of further de jure annexation of Palestinian lands. Moreover, the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic has inflicted an additional negative shock on the fragile socioeconomic fabric of the State of Palestine and its vulnerable population, especially in the Gaza Strip.

8. As documented in regular United Nations reports to the Security Council,¹ Israel, the occupying Power, took no steps to abide by Council resolution 2334 (2016), including to immediately and completely cease all settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. Instead, the construction and expansion of settlements, the construction of the separation barrier and bypass roads, the confiscation of land, the demolition of homes, the seizure of Palestinian-owned structures, the destruction of agricultural, water, sanitation and hygiene facilities, evictions and threats of the forcible transfer of Palestinian families, human rights abuses and settler violence, including the intimidation, injuring and killing of Palestinians, continued to negatively affect the lives and livelihoods of the Palestinian population, including women and girls.

9. Arbitrary arrests, discrimination, administrative detention, including of children (see A/74/845-S/2020/525), restrictions on freedom of movement, violations of the right to worship, restrictions on access to education and health care and killings by Israeli security forces continued in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem.²

10. The United Nations has frequently stated that the 53-year-old Israeli occupation prevents the Palestinian people from enjoying their human rights in freedom and peace. The actions described above constitute violations of international law and the human rights of the Palestinian people, are contrary to the legal obligation of Israel to protect the life and health of Palestinians under occupation and further jeopardize the possibility of realizing the two-State solution on the basis of the 1967 lines and a just peace.³ Furthermore, the impunity with which Israeli forces operate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory have been deemed a serious threat to a rules-based international order (see A/74/507).

11. The Secretary-General has reported limited compliance with paragraph 5 of resolution 2334 (2016), in which Member States were called upon to distinguish, in their relevant dealings, between Israel and the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem. The database of business enterprises operating in Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, was published by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on 28 February 2020 (A/HRC/43/71).

12. The illegal Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip entered its thirteenth year, inflicting ongoing human rights violations and humanitarian and socioeconomic distress on the Palestinian civilian population, including Palestine refugees who constitute most of that population. The situation of Palestinian residents in Gaza has been described as “collective punishment” (see A/74/507). On 20 November 2019, the Committee was briefed by the Deputy Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, United Nations Resident Coordinator and Humanitarian Coordinator for the Occupied Palestinian Territory, who indicated that the overflow of injuries caused by Israeli security forces firing on Palestinian civilian protesters during the Great March of Return, coupled with severe underfunding and the ongoing fuel and electricity shortages in Gaza, severely undermined the delivery of essential health, water and sanitation services. In addition, the chronic shortage of medicines and hospital beds, combined with population density, could have an irreparable impact if the COVID-19 pandemic spreads throughout the Strip.

13. The threat of conflict has persisted, as tensions and the cycle of violence between the two sides has remained inflamed. Israeli forces continued to carry out daily military raids and to perpetrate acts of violence against the Palestinian civilian population under occupation. In mid-November 2019, rockets were fired from the Gaza Strip into Israel, followed by Israel Defense Forces military strikes, two days after Israel and Palestinian Islamic Jihad had agreed to an Egyptian-mediated ceasefire. Additional exchanges of fire occurred in March, late June and early July 2020; in August, following the launch of incendiary balloons from Gaza, Israel retaliated with airstrikes, the prevention of fuel imports to the Strip and the reduction of the Gaza fishing zone from 15 to 8 nautical miles, causing serious distress among civilians. In April 2020, following the call issued on 23 March by the Secretary-General for a global ceasefire,⁴ the five United Nations Special Envoys for the Middle East, including the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, appealed for a ceasefire in the region and for an increase in local, regional and global cooperation to stop the rapid spread of the COVID-19 virus.⁵

14. The implementation of the Egyptian-brokered intra-Palestinian reconciliation agreement of October 2017 in view of reuniting Gaza and the West Bank under a single, democratic and legitimate national Government made limited progress, despite ongoing efforts to revive unity talks. In June 2020, Fatah and Hamas issued an unprecedented joint press statement against Israeli threats and plans to annex parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

15. Measures taken by Israel to consolidate its unlawful annexation of Jerusalem and its surroundings threatened the legal status of the city, as well as its demographic composition and its historically multicultural and multireligious character. A new bypass connecting Jewish settlements to the north and south of Jerusalem – the so-called “American Road” – risks cutting off the eastern part of the occupied city from the rest of the West Bank. Incitement and provocation by Israeli officials and extremist settlers against the Haram Al-Sharif and the Aqsa Mosque also continued, violating the historic and legal status quo and aggravating religious tensions.

16. The humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has underscored the vital role played by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA). In a context characterized by worsening living conditions, widespread poverty and underdevelopment, the Agency provides vital educational, health, relief and social services and emergency assistance, including food aid, to more than 5.6 million Palestine refugees. On 31 August 2018, the Government of the United States of America announced that it would stop funding UNRWA, depriving the Agency of a long-standing source of donor support. At an extraordinary ministerial-level meeting hosted by the Governments of Jordan and Sweden on 23 June 2020, 75 Governments and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) pledged $130 million in financial aid to sustain UNRWA operations, a contribution that was still far short of the funding gap. The Secretary-General has repeatedly echoed calls for the international community to guarantee predictable financing to sustain the work of the Agency at a time of regional instability, volatility and great vulnerability for Palestine refugees in its five fields of operation in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

17. The “Peace to Prosperity” plan, unveiled by the United States Administration on 28 January 2020, was rejected by the Government of the State of Palestine, the African Union Commission,⁶ the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC)⁷ and the League of Arab States (LAS), along with other individual Governments, who cited the failure of the plan to guarantee the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and to achieve international consensus on a just solution in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions. Following the release of the plan, the Government of Israel announced its intention to annex 30 per cent of the Occupied Palestinian Territory by 1 July, including most of the Jordan Valley and more than 230 illegal Israeli settlements. Although settlement activity and de facto annexation measures have continued, the 1 July date passed with no formal action taken by the Israeli Government.

18. At the Security Council debate held on 24 June 2020 (see S/2020/596), the Secretary-General called the predicament in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, a “watershed moment” and urged Israel to abandon its annexation plans. Most Council members warned that annexation would constitute a grave breach of international law. At its 43rd session, the Human Rights Council condemned Israeli annexation plans and called on the High Commissioner to compile a report on the impact of annexation, to be presented in March 2021. On 16 June, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967 and 47 other independent experts of the United Nations human rights system issued a statement⁸ expressing that the annexation of occupied territory was a serious violation of the Charter of the United Nations and the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and contrary to the fundamental rule affirmed many times by the Security Council and General Assembly that the acquisition of territory by war or force is inadmissible.

19. On 19 May 2020, the Palestinian leadership declared that it did not consider itself bound by “agreements and understandings” with the Governments of the United States and Israel, or by any of the obligations based on those understandings and agreements, including those related to security. The President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, reiterated his call for negotiations under an international framework, first made at the Security Council debate held on 11 February (see

S/PV.8717), including an expanded Quartet, and pledged to return to negotiations without preconditions. Several diplomatic initiatives, including by the Secretary-General, have been or are being pursued to create the conditions for such a meeting.

20. International and regional opposition to annexation has been widespread,⁹ from leaders in Europe, including the High Representative¹⁰ of the European Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy, leaders across the Arab world, OIC (see A/74/926-S/2020/584), LAS (see A/74/835-S/2020/356), the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries (see S/2020/341) and leaders in Latin America. Members and representatives of Israeli and Palestinian civil society, humanitarian organizations and think tanks, as well as legal scholars and academics, also expressed their opposition to annexation, as did hundreds of individuals from the professional sphere and the world of sports, arts and culture, trade union and political representatives and human rights activists, as well as faith-based leaders, members of the Elders group and Palestinian and international women leaders. On 25 June 2020, several members of the United States Congress and over 20 advocacy organizations sent a letter¹¹ to the Government of Israel, calling on it to shelve annexation plans and negotiate with the Palestinians. Multiple opinion polls revealed division among Israelis over the issue as well.

21. On 20 December 2019, the International Criminal Court announced that the statutory criteria under the Rome Statute of the Court had been met for the opening of a war crimes probe regarding the situation of Palestine and alleged crimes committed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Prosecutor requested from Pre-Trial Chamber I a jurisdictional ruling on the scope of the territorial jurisdiction of the Court under article 12 (2) (a) of the Rome Statute in the State of Palestine.¹² The Pre-Trial Chamber will rule on the matter in due course.¹³

22. The reporting period has seen the unprecedented spread of COVID-19. On 5 March 2020, the Prime Minister of the State of Palestine, Mohammad Shtayeh, declared a state of emergency after the first confirmed cases. Stringent measures and aggressive testing by the Government of the State of Palestine, combined with coordination with Israeli authorities, initially contained the spread of COVID-19 in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. As reported by the World Health Organization (WHO), by 27 August, the total number of cases amounted to 26,762 infected persons and 152 deaths. The socioeconomic repercussions of the pandemic are dire, including economic contraction and gender-based violence, which reportedly increased by 47 per cent, and violence against children, a trend regrettably also seen in many parts of the world. The public health implications of the pandemic and the negative shock to the Israeli and Palestinian economies will have profound implications for public welfare, employment, social cohesion, financial and institutional stability in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. On 21 July, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process warned the Security Council that the Palestinian Authority was on the verge of “total collapse” owing to the impact of COVID-19 and Israel’s pending annexation plans (see S/2020/736), although that assessment was rejected by the Government of the State of Palestine. On 3 April, the Chair of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of the International Assistance to Palestinians called for strong international donor support, and, on 2 June, 25 donor countries of the Liaison Committee committed themselves to creating conditions for a viable two-State solution.

23. The international community, including the African Union, the European Union, OIC, LAS and the Non-Aligned Movement, continued to reaffirm its support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and their quest for statehood, sovereignty and independence. The 140 countries that have formally recognized the State of Palestine and the compendium of United Nations resolutions adopted to date exemplify the international consensus on the question. In 2019, the State of Palestine served as Chair of the Group of 77 and China, the largest grouping in the General Assembly, demonstrating its ability and competence to engage as a rightful member of the international community and upholding its rights and obligations in that regard.

24. On 13 August 2020, the United States announced that it had brokered an agreement between Israel and the United Arab Emirates to work towards the full normalization of relations between the latter two countries.¹⁴ Under the deal, Israel would “suspend declaring sovereignty” over areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The three States would continue their efforts “to achieve a just, comprehensive and enduring resolution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict”.

25. The State of Palestine subsequently rejected and denounced that agreement.¹⁵ Some regional partners expressed concern about the unilateral action taken by the United Arab Emirates. On 19 August 2020, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Saudi Arabia confirmed that his country remained committed to peace with Israel on the basis of the 2002 Arab Peace Initiative (see A/56/1026–S/2002/932). The Secretary-General expressed the hope that the agreement could create an opportunity for Israeli and Palestinian leaders to re-engage in meaningful negotiations that would realize a two-State solution in line with relevant United Nations resolutions, international law and bilateral agreements.¹⁶ Several European countries and other Arab countries welcomed the decision by Israel to suspend its planned annexation. Other Member States from Africa, Asia and Latin America expressed concern as to whether the agreement was aligned with earlier global and regional agreements and about the fact that that it did not involve the full participation of the people of Palestine.

Chapter III

Mandate of the Committee

26. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by General Assembly resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975 with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty and return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat (www.un.org/unispal).

27. On 3 December 2019, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 74/10) and requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the resources necessary for its programme of work (resolution 74/12) and to continue to implement the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat (resolution 74/13). The Assembly also adopted resolution 74/11, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

28. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations, such as the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

29. The Committee is composed of 25 Member States, representing different regional groups and supporting the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

30. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, LAS and OIC.

31. The Bureau of the Committee is elected each year from among the permanent representatives of Committee members. At its 399th meeting, on 4 February 2020, chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as Chair; Adela Raz (Afghanistan), Ana Silvia Rodríguez Abascal (Cuba), Dian Triansyah Djani (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and Jaime Castillo Hermida (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs for the year. Adela Raz (Afghanistan) was also elected as Acting Rapporteur. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participates in the work of both the Committee and the Bureau as an observer.

32. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. Members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee, including by chairing and moderating conference sessions, and on all delegation visits. On the margins of the conferences and during delegation visits, they held meetings with senior officials of the respective host countries.

33. The Committee members and observers have actively advocated the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, three Committee members, Indonesia, South Africa and Tunisia, and two observers, the Niger and Viet Nam, serve on the Security Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

34. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in its work were welcome to do so. Committee activities regularly involve civil society organizations, including those from Israel.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 74/10 and 74/12

A. Introduction

35. In the implementation of its programme of work, as a subsidiary body of the General Assembly, the Committee is guided by its mandate to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and support the achievement without delay of an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 lines. Its work and activities are also fully aligned with Security Council and Assembly resolutions on the question of Palestine; the women and peace and security agenda; the programme of the United Nations country team; international law, including humanitarian law; human rights frameworks such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights; and, more recently, the Sustainable Development Goals and their achievement by the State of Palestine. As authorized by the Assembly, the Committee has adjusted its approved programme of work in view of developments.

36. Taking a rights-focused approach, the Committee has made every effort to support the universally recognized rights of an occupied people and the rights of all States and peoples to live in peace and security. To that end, the Committee engaged the diplomatic community on the question of Palestine through formal and informal intergovernmental processes; employed the good offices of the Secretary-General; organized public awareness-raising activities that involved conferences, meetings, speakers' panels and the media, including social media; promoted partnerships with Governments, relevant bodies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations, regional bodies and civil society organizations; and built capacities for the future State of Palestine.

37. Owing to the COVID-19 pandemic and the consequent lockdowns, starting from April 2020, the Committee converted its meetings and activities to online events, using a variety of platforms, in line with General Assembly decision 74/544, in order to ensure continuity in the delivery of its mandate.

B. Mobilization of the diplomatic community

38. Through its diplomatic engagement with permanent missions in New York and around the world, the Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the realization of the two-State solution and a just, comprehensive and lasting solution to the question of Palestine in all its aspects on the basis of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

39. During the reporting period, the Committee held seven meetings at United Nations Headquarters (four of which were held online), including a special meeting on the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see paras. 54–58 below). It also held eight Bureau meetings, including with special guests and briefers, and the annual Bureau retreat.

40. On 3 October 2019, prior to a legal seminar convened by the Committee in Galway (see para. 77 below), a Committee delegation led by the Chair of the Committee met in Dublin with the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Defense of Ireland, Simon Coveney, to discuss the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. Mr. Coveney assured the delegation of his country's continued engagement and support for Palestinian rights and for a just solution to the question of Palestine, which ranked high on the foreign policy agenda of Ireland.

41. On 20 November 2019, the Committee endorsed four draft resolutions for submission to the General Assembly. They concerned the mandates of the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights, the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, and the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat. On 3 December, the Assembly, having before it the report of the Committee (A/74/35), adopted the four draft resolutions (resolutions 74/10, 74/11, 74/12 and 74/13).

42. At its meeting on 4 February 2020, the Committee elected its Bureau members for 2020 (see para. 31 above). At the same meeting, the Committee officially adopted its programme of work for 2020 (A/AC.183/2020/1).

43. On 24 February, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, organized its annual briefing session, which was open to all permanent missions to the United Nations, to familiarize delegates with the Committee's mandate and programme of work. A total of 35 participants attended the informative and interactive session, including members of the Security Council. The Department of Global Communications also gave a presentation on the special information programme on the question of Palestine.

44. On the margins of the International Conference on the Question of Palestine, held on 28 February in Kuala Lumpur, on the theme "South-East Asian support for the Rights of the Palestinian People" (see para. 59 below), the Committee delegation met, inter alia, with the then-Prime Minister of Malaysia, Mahathir bin Mohamad, who reiterated his country's commitment to supporting the cause of the Palestinian people and to finding a just solution to the question of Palestine in line with the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders.

45. On 2 and 3 March, a Committee delegation visited New Delhi and met with representatives of the Government, political parties and think tanks. The delegation discussed the implications of the plan proposed by the United States and the crucial role of India, as a member of the Committee having good relations with both Israel and the State of Palestine and a non-permanent member of the Security Council for the 2021–2022 term, in contributing to a just, peaceful and lasting solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

46. On 5 May, the Committee issued a statement¹⁷ in which it warned that the planned annexation of parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory by Israel threatened the two-State solution and called on the international community, in particular the Security Council, to shoulder its responsibilities and take urgent action to counteract the threat of annexation.

47. At its 400th meeting, held online on 18 May, the Committee heard a briefing by the Prime Minister of the State of Palestine, who elaborated on the steps that his Government and the international community should take in order to support the two-State solution. The Prime Minister called upon the international community to use its political and economic weight to salvage the two-State solution and prevent Israeli annexation. The briefing also included an update of the impact of COVID-19 in Palestine.

48. At the 401st meeting, held online on 14 July, Committee members called for sustained international pressure to stop the planned annexation by Israel of parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as it represented a threat to the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders and, if carried out, would grossly violate international law and United Nations resolutions, undermine the credibility of the United Nations, increase the suffering of the Palestinian people, who were already hit hard by the COVID-19 pandemic, and undermine the prospects for the achievement of a just and lasting solution.

49. On 16 July, the Bureau held its annual meeting with the Secretary-General, who outlined his vision on the question of Palestine and efforts to restart dialogue within an international framework. The Chair conveyed the Committee's appreciation for the principled position expressed by the Secretary-General at the Security Council meeting on 24 June and called for sustained international pressure to stop the annexation by Israel of parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The need for accountability was stressed.

50. On 22 July, the Bureau held its sixth annual retreat to discuss activities planned for the remainder of 2020 and for 2021. The Bureau agreed to support United Nations and other efforts to overcome the current impasse; to step up outreach to key partners and to continue to adapt the Committee's working methods in the context of COVID-19. The Bureau also reviewed the proposed programme budget for 2021. The decisions adopted at the retreat were shared with the Committee.

51. Statements on behalf of the Committee were delivered before or provided to the Security Council in the context of its quarterly debates on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, on 28 October 2019 and 21 January, 23 April and 21 July 2020 (see S/PV.8648, S/PV.8706, S/2020/341 and S/2020/736). In those statements, the Committee highlighted the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, called for a halt to the illegal policies and practices of Israel, the occupying Power and drew attention to its key activities and recommendations. It also appealed to the Security Council to take appropriate action that would lead to a just, comprehensive and peaceful settlement of the conflict in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

C. Raising awareness of the question of Palestine

52. The Committee has raised awareness about the political, human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the situation of Palestinian women, by facilitating up-to-date briefings by experts and exchanges of ideas on specific issues at Committee meetings at Headquarters, during side events, international conferences and visits of Committee delegations, as well as through the dissemination of publications, information and the Committee's website. Details of each of the activities can be found on the website.

53. The Committee maintained an expanded social media presence to disseminate information on the question of Palestine. During the reporting period, the Committee Facebook, YouTube, Instagram and Twitter accounts recorded steady growth in the number of visitors. All Committee events, including those held online, are regularly broadcast via United Nations Web TV and across its social media pages, garnering thousands of viewers per event, resulting in an aggregate total of 57,484 views since March 2020 (see para. 45). These efforts resulted in increased engagement with the public, extended outreach to new audiences and higher numbers of followers across Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and YouTube. In addition to English, the Committee is also increasingly posting in Arabic on its website and social media channels.

54. As the major awareness-raising event organized by the Committee, the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, commemorated on 27 November, saw an impressive display of support and solidarity by Member States, civil society and the public.

55. At the special meeting of the Committee on that date, statements were delivered by the President of the General Assembly, the President of the Security Council and the Secretary-General. Other speakers included the Chair of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, high-level representatives of the African Union, LAS, OIC and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations. Messages of solidarity were received from 19 Heads of State, 6 Heads of Government, 8 Ministers for Foreign Affairs and others and were published on the Committee's website.

56. All speakers expressed their unwavering support for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and called upon the international community to work towards that objective. Many stressed the urgency of an expeditious solution and the responsibility of world leaders to make the Palestinian question a priority, underscoring the centrality of a just solution to regional and global peace and stability.

57. As is customary, similar events were coordinated in observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People at the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi. The messages of the Chair and the Secretary-General were delivered at those events, and the United Nations was represented at the highest levels. The commemorations were attended by representatives of members and observers of the Committee and other Member States, who expressed their solidarity with the Palestinian people and support for the two-State solution. A message from the Secretary-General was issued in all six official languages.

58. The annual exhibition organized by the Committee on the occasion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of the State of Palestine to the United Nations, was entitled "Palestine: the most universal national cause". It was displayed from 26 November 2019 to 6 January 2020 in the Visitors Lobby at Headquarters. The display represented advocates and activists from a wide range of disciplines, including political and religious leaders, diplomats, artists and athletes who, through their words and action, expressed their solidarity with the Palestinian People.

59. The International Conference on the Question of Palestine on the theme "South-East Asian support for the rights of the Palestinian People" was held in Kuala Lumpur on 28 and 29 February in cooperation with the Government of Malaysia and the Perdana Global Peace Foundation. The event brought together Palestinian and international experts, as well as civil society actors in South-East Asia, in support of the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. The then Prime Minister of Malaysia, Mahathir Mohamad, delivered the keynote address. Speakers highlighted activism against the Israeli occupation and urged the United Nations and its Member States to fulfil their obligations under the Charter and international law towards the Palestinian people, including through sanctioning Israel.

60. On 14 April, the Bureau of the Committee held a public online event with the Director of UNRWA Operations in Gaza, Matthias Schmale, on the theme "The COVID-19 pandemic in Gaza and ways to mitigate its impact on Palestine refugees". The event addressed developments in the occupied Gaza Strip, the latter's preparedness for the COVID-19 pandemic, the assistance to Palestine refugees in the Strip provided through UNRWA and the need for continued international resolve to support the Agency, including with emergency funding.

61. On 21 April, the Committee held an online conversation with representatives of Palestinian civil society on the theme “The COVID-19 pandemic under occupation – national resilience and international support”. The event highlighted how the Palestinian population in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza was coping with the COVID-19 pandemic under the ongoing occupation and political uncertainty in Israel and threats of annexation.

62. The United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine was held online on 4 June, on the theme “The Question of Palestine: threats of annexation and the prospects for peace”. Prominent speakers – a member of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and former member of the Palestinian negotiation team, Hanan Ashrawi; a former Israeli Minister and participant in the 1993 Oslo Accord negotiations, Yossi Beilin; and the founder and president of the Arab American Institute, James Zogby – raised awareness among Member States and civil society of the imminent threat posed by the illegal plans of Israel to annex areas in the occupied West Bank and the dangerous repercussions thereof, if implemented. They called for international efforts to avert such illegal actions and to mobilize efforts to achieve a just solution.

63. On 18 June, the Chair issued a video message in support of a solidarity campaign marking “53 years of occupation” initiated by the Negotiations Affairs Department of PLO.

64. The International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, jointly organized with OIC, was held online in two separate panel discussions, on 28 July, on the theme “Annexation in practice – Palestinian lives in Jerusalem” and on 27 August, on the theme “Annexation in practice – Palestinian youth in Jerusalem”. The Conference raised the awareness of Member States and civil society on the situation of the Palestinian population in the occupied city after over 50 years of Israeli annexation policies and measures. The Conference also demonstrated how actions in Jerusalem epitomize gradual annexation by Israel of Palestinian land.

65. The United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, now in its twenty-sixth year of operation, remains a valuable resource on the question of Palestine for diplomats and researchers around the world, averaging 35,000 visitors per month. It consists of more than 37,000 documents and is considered to be the largest and most comprehensive online repository on the subject. The collection ranges from the latest United Nations documents to rare records dating back decades. Since its launch, the new site has received more than double the number of page views per month. Efforts to make all of the information on the website available in all six official languages of the United Nations are under way, with a special emphasis on Arabic.

66. Further to its monitoring mandate, the Committee also produced monthly bulletins compiling all official documents of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations relating to the question of Palestine. The Committee also produced a compilation of United Nations resolutions and decisions and a quarterly newsletter on the activities of the Committee and has introduced an annual compilation of United Nations reports on the question of Palestine.

67. Through its weekly publication entitled “NGO Action News”, the Committee continued to raise awareness of the work of civil society and United Nations actors in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and around the globe towards the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

68. All publications of the Committee are disseminated through a mailing list of over 5,000 subscribers, including research libraries and universities, as well as prominent personalities and opinion leaders active on the question of Palestine, and are published on the Committee's website under the Publications section.

D. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities

69. The Committee continued its cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and United Nations system entities and expressed its appreciation for the active participation of representatives of those bodies at various events held under its auspices. OIC continued to jointly organize the Committee's annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem. The African Union, LAS and OIC regularly attended the meetings of the Committee as observers and participated in its work.

70. The Committee continued to attach great importance to enhancing relations with national and regional parliaments and their interparliamentary organizations. In March, as part of its visit to India, the Committee delegation held a meeting with a representative of the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party to appeal for support to promote a just, peaceful and lasting solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

71. During its activities, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, which conducted regular visits to Palestine, continued its long-standing cooperation with the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, United Nations country teams, UNRWA, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, the Department of Global Communications (including the United Nations information centres and the United Nations Regional Information Centre for Western Europe, in Brussels), the Human Rights Council and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Office for South-South Cooperation, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations System Staff College.

72. On 5 November, the Chair of the Committee met with a group of Palestinian journalists participating in the annual training programme organized by the Department of Global Communications (see para. 81 below). The Chair briefed the group about the work of the Committee and engaged the journalists in a lively informal discussion on the situation in the Middle East and the work of the United Nations.

73. The Committee continued its collaboration with civil society organizations promoting the rights of the Palestinian people. As is customary, a civil society representative was invited to speak at the special meeting of the Committee held on 27 November to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. On the margins of the commemoration, the Chair held closed consultations with civil society representatives, including from Israel and the State of Palestine.

74. Representatives of civil society organizations, including from Israel, were invited to attend all public events of the Committee. Those meetings and interactions allowed the Committee to inform civil society about its mandate and activities, at Headquarters and abroad, as well as to learn about civil society concerns and actions. In turn, the rich exchanges have informed the programme of work, statements and reports of the Committee. The Committee has also continued to provide a space in which Israeli and Palestinian civil society organizations can interact, through the facilitation of their participation in Committee events, at a time when such interaction is increasingly circumscribed on the ground.

E. Capacity-building

75. As requested in General Assembly resolution 74/12, the Committee continued to identify training opportunities to expand the capacity of officials of the State of Palestine. The Committee continued to assess the impact of its programmes.

76. In November, on behalf of the Committee, staff of the Division for Palestinian Rights met with Palestinian and United Nations country team counterparts in Jerusalem to explore areas of cooperation. The Committee is supporting the development of a Palestinian-owned communications strategy led by experts in the field. The Committee is sponsoring diplomatic protocol training, in collaboration with the Government of Jordan, in the spirit of South-South cooperation. Owing to the COVID-19 pandemic, in 2020 those two in-person activities were postponed.

77. On 4 and 5 October, the Committee convened a closed-door legal seminar at the Irish Centre for Human Rights of the National University of Ireland in Galway on ongoing settlement activities by Israel and the threat of annexation of occupied Palestinian territory and third-party responsibilities under Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\). The seminar brought together 12 prominent practitioners in the fields of international law and human rights and yielded practical recommendations on possible ways to hold the occupying Power accountable for settlements, annexation or other international law violations, highlighting accountability as essential for enabling the achievement of a just solution.

78. From 21 to 25 October, the Government of Senegal and the Committee organized a study visit for Palestinian officials on best practices in water management and promoting South-South cooperation, held in Dakar. Through briefings and discussions with 15 Senegalese experts, the 10 Palestinian participant hydrologists and officials from the Palestinian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates working on the issue of water resources gained an overview of the legal and institutional framework of the Senegal River Basin Development Organization, its main achievements and challenges.

79. In collaboration with the United Nations System Staff College, the Committee supported the participation of two diplomats, from the Palestinian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates and the Palestinian International Cooperation Agency, in a training session on South-South and triangular cooperation in implementing the 2030 Agenda on 29–31 October, in Turin.

80. From 28 October to 6 December, the Committee carried out its annual six-week capacity-building training programme on multilateral diplomacy for two Palestinian diplomats in New York, coinciding with the seventy-fourth session of the General Assembly. The objectives of the programme were revised, and the classroom training element of the programme was customized to the job functions of participating Palestinian officials.

81. In response to the COVID-19 crisis, the Committee prioritized online training. From 22 to 24 April, the Committee, in collaboration with UNITAR, supported the participation of three senior officials of the Palestinian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates in the online training workshop on leadership in crisis. From 18 to 20 May, the Committee, in collaboration with UNITAR, supported the participation of three senior female Palestinian Government officials in an online workshop on women's leadership.

Chapter VI

82. The Department held its annual International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East on 11 and 12 September in Ankara. The Seminar was organized in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Turkey. During the two-day event, diplomats, journalists, media experts and youth representatives of Israel, Palestine, Turkey, European countries, the United States and other parts of the world discussed, among many issues, media-related dynamics as they relate to coverage of the Israel-Palestine conflict and awareness and misperceptions in that regard.

83. The Department organized its annual training programme for Palestinian journalists from 4 November to 6 December at Headquarters, and in Washington, D.C., for the week beginning 18 November. Seven Palestinian journalists from Gaza, the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic participated in the 2019 programme, bringing the total number of graduates of the programme to 203.

84. During the reporting period, all of the open intergovernmental meetings held at Headquarters related to the question of Palestine were covered by United Nations Web TV, United Nations Photo and aired live and on demand for viewers around the world by United Nations Web TV.

85. The Meetings Coverage Section issued 67 press releases related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process in English and French.

86. From September 2019 to June 2020, UNifeed produced 30 stories related to the question of Palestine.

87. On 5 September, the Department signed an agreement with the Palestinian Broadcasting Corporation, which now carries content from United Nations News, a trusted international news source for the people in the region.

88. The Social Media Section featured issues relating to the question of Palestine on all its social media accounts (in all six official languages, as well as in Portuguese, Kiswahili and Hindi), which have a total follower count of over 30 million.

89. United Nations News teams produced more than 200 stories and content on issues affecting the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. These included an interview with the Deputy Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, United Nations Resident Coordinator and Humanitarian Coordinator for the Occupied Palestinian Territory on the situation of youth in the Gaza Strip, and an Arabic feature story highlighting an initiative by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization in Palestine called “Creative Palestine,”¹⁸ which is a joint creative laboratory for Palestinians that connects designers and businessmen with various arts and design institutions and universities.

90. As part of the COVID-19 communications response, Arabic News provided authoritative facts on the pandemic and produced inspiring stories, in a region where mistrust of news outlets is high, including about the welcoming by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process of the strong Palestinian-Israeli cooperation to curb the spread of COVID-19, and an interview with the Head of WHO in Gaza about the Palestinians’ right to health as related to the pandemic.

¹⁸ United Nations Industrial Development Organization, “Energizing Palestinian products, creating positive impact”, 20 January 2020.

91. In the light of the COVID-19 crisis and the shift to different ways of work, the Department used available online networks, platforms and social media accounts to promote virtual events and activities organized by the Committee, including the United Nations Forum on the Question of Palestine on 4 June, the online conversation with Prime Minister of the State of Palestine, Mohammad Shtayyeh, on 18 May (see para. 47 above), and two other special events, on 14 April and 21 April, related to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

92. With regard to the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People in 2019, the Department worked closely with the Committee and Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs to provide communications support for a number of public events that were held at Headquarters on 27 November. The Department updated the International Day of Solidarity website in the six official languages and supported the revitalization of the Committee's website, including by assisting in migrating data to preserve its rich historical records.

93. The global network of United Nations information centres organized commemorative events to mark the International Day of Solidarity in various capitals, including Ankara, Cairo, Canberra, Harare, Lusaka, Moscow, Nairobi, Pretoria and Rabat. Messaging about the Day was promoted across the centres' social media accounts and websites. For example, the information centre in Beirut promoted the Secretary-General's message and posts about the Day on its social media platforms. The message was also promoted on the website of the information centre in Beirut, which recorded more than 4,000 page views in November and December. The information centre in Cairo organized a media briefing at its premises to launch the 2019 report on United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) assistance to the Palestinian People by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (TD/B/EX(68)/4), which was attended by media professionals from Egypt and the region. The information centre promoted the event on its website and social media platforms and facilitated interviews with the UNCTAD representative.

94. From September 2019 to March 2020, approximately 110,000 visitors were briefed on the question of Palestine at the updated permanent exhibit located along the route of the guided tour of Headquarters. Tours have subsequently been suspended owing to the closure of United Nations premises to the general public in line with COVID-19 safety measures.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

95. On the basis of its deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, briefings, visits of delegations, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations and regional organizations, the Committee has developed the recommendations set out below.

A. Immediate action by the Committee in response to annexation

96. As affirmed in its statement of 5 May,¹⁹ the Committee rejects the stated intention of the Government of Israel to annex parts of the occupied West Bank, which would constitute a most serious violation of international law, including the Charter of the United Nations and the 1949 Geneva Conventions and would undermine the contiguity of the Palestinian territory and the physical viability of the two-State solution based on pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem as the capital of the State of Palestine, in accordance with international law, relevant United Nations resolutions, internationally agreed parameters, the Madrid terms of reference and the Arab Peace Initiative.

97. The Committee supports the Secretary-General's clear position on the question of Palestine, based on international law, countless United Nations resolutions and the search for a just solution.

98. The Committee will continue to advocate the resolution of the question of Palestine on the basis of an international framework and against annexation and in support of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and independence.

99. The Committee notes the concerns expressed by the Palestinian leadership, and the response of the international community, with regard to the agreement between Israel and the United Arab Emirates, which suspended, but did not commit Israel to halting, plans to further extend its sovereignty over Palestinian territory and its people. The agreement neither bound Israel to negotiations with the Palestinians, guided by the internationally agreed parameters, nor included the Palestinian people. To that end, the Committee reiterates that annexation of any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory is illegal. Any initiative aimed at a just solution to the question of Palestine must, foremost, consider the legitimate aspirations of the Palestinian people, engage the Palestinian leadership and be based on the two-State solution, according to international law, United Nations resolutions and agreements between the parties.

B. Action taken with the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council

100. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure the implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace affirmed in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution 74/11. The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit his reports to the Council on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\) in written format and, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the resolution, to include references to implementation of the provision by Member States. Pursuant to paragraph 11 of the resolution, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions, including the use of sanctions on States and private entities violating Council resolutions.

101. The Committee deplores the use of excessive, disproportionate and indiscriminate force by Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, including during the protests in the Gaza Strip in 2018 and 2019, and reiterates its call for the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the independent international commission of inquiry on the protests in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (A/HRC/40/74). The Commission was mandated by the Human Rights Council to investigate violations committed in the proximity of the fence between Israel and the Gaza Strip during those protests.

C. Advocacy and outreach activities with the international community and civil society

102. The Committee will continue to mobilize the international community to stop Israel's annexation plan and exert efforts to achieve the two-State solution on the pre-1967 borders. As the United Nations marks the seventy-fifth anniversary of the signing of the Charter of the United Nations, the Committee reiterates that the question of Palestine, whose fate is inherently bound to the history and existence of the Organization, should prompt the Member States to act on their commitment to the ideals and shared values of democracy, accountability and prosperity for everyone. The international community must redouble its efforts to advance the long-overdue realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and regional peace in the Middle East and maintain international peace and security.

103. Any resolution of the conflict requires a comprehensive regional solution, such as that offered by the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee calls upon regional organizations, such as the European Union, LAS and OIC, to take on a more politically active role in mediating an end to the conflict.

104. The Committee calls upon the international community to shift from a humanitarian to a human rights framework in addressing the plight of the Palestinian people. It demands an end to the 13-year Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza and the lifting of all closures within the framework of Security Council resolution 1860 \(2009\). It calls upon international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance, the reconstruction process and economic recovery, which are essential to alleviate the distress of Palestinians, including women and children, who face additional and gender-specific challenges that need to be addressed through targeted actions. It stresses the urgency of providing funding to UNRWA to ensure its vital humanitarian and development assistance to the Palestine refugees.

D. Action by Member States and regional organizations

105. The Committee urges Member States and the Organization to call upon Israel to respect its obligations under international law to protect civilians. Further to the report of the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolution ES-10/20, the Committee emphasizes the need for the implementation of an international protection mechanism that can credibly ensure the safety and welfare of Palestinian civilians.

106. The Committee emphasizes the importance of the acknowledgement by Israel of the Nakba and its impact upon the Palestinian people as a necessary requirement for a viable and lasting peace. Palestine refugees should be treated as dispossessed nationals of a country – the State of Palestine – rather than as stateless refugees. It strongly advocates the right to return as well as just compensation for Palestine refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 \(III\).

107. The Committee deems unilateral decisions by Member States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of embassies in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as null and void, as they are in violation of Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 476 \(1980\) and 478 \(1980\). The Committee calls upon Member States to rescind those decisions and reiterates that the historic status quo of the holy sites in Jerusalem must be respected and that the international community shares the responsibility to preserve the legal, demographic and historical multicultural and multireligious character and status of the city.

108. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States and private entities not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, including with respect to settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It welcomes efforts by Governments, parliamentarians and civil society actors to sanction support, including economic, for illegal Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

109. The Committee welcomes the release of the database of all business enterprises involved in certain activities relating to Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem and the West Bank (A/HRC/43/71), prepared by OHCHR pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 31/36 and calls upon Member States to implement the relevant obligations under international law, including as set out in paragraph 5 of Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), in which the Council called upon Member States to distinguish, in their relevant dealings, between the territory of the State of Israel and the territories occupied since 1967.

110. The Committee looks forward to the report of the High Commissioner for Human Rights on the effects of annexation, as requested by the Human Rights Council in paragraph 16 of its resolution 43/31. The Committee expresses appreciation for the work of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 and his reports submitted to the Human Rights Council.

111. The Committee underscores the importance of preventing the annexation of any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and is encouraged by the numerous statements in support of international legality by members of the international community, including international civil society. Such a collective position, including in the Arab world, will be paramount to prevent annexation and to bring an end to the occupation in line with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

E. Support action in response to the coronavirus disease pandemic

112. The Committee expresses concern about the unprecedented spread of COVID-19 throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and commends the stringent measures adopted by the Government of the State of Palestine to contain the spread in the region. The Committee urges the international community to direct its attention to the dire socioeconomic situation, the deteriorating living conditions of Palestinians in the occupied territory and the predicament of the Palestinian Government, which is on the verge of “total collapse” owing to the twin combination of the adverse impact of COVID-19 and the ongoing Israeli occupation and pending annexation plans, and provide support and assistance.

F. Action by the Secretariat and other United Nations entities

113. The Committee notes with appreciation the contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights in support of its mandate and requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support for all aspects of its mandate and highlights the growing importance of cooperation among developing countries and regional and subregional organizations within the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation for sharing replicable experiences towards the achievement of self-determination and independence.

114. The Committee encourages the Division for Palestinian Rights to continue with efforts to disseminate information on the question of Palestine by broadening outreach and promoting multilingualism, with a special emphasis on Arabic, on its website and social media platforms. It also requests the Division to continue to implement projects aimed at further promoting the Committee's mandate.

115. The Committee requests the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications, which has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public.

116. The Committee intends to continue to work closely with other United Nations actors and entities, including the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the Organization towards the question of Palestine until it is justly resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner and in accordance with international law. The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to OIC and other partners for the contribution of extrabudgetary resources and their active participation in its conferences and events.

117. The Committee further encourages all Member States to work collectively to sufficiently and predictably fund UNRWA.

118. The Committee will continue to promote inclusivity and gender balance in all its activities, including its capacity-building programme for the civil servants of the State of Palestine, and encourages a full utilization of online capacity-building opportunities, especially in the context of COVID-related travel restrictions.

[1 September 2021]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 75/20 of 2 December 2020.

The report covers the period from 2 September 2020 to 31 August 2021.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 75/20, adopted on 2 December 2020. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2021/1), formulated to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just and comprehensive solution to the question of Palestine and lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace, enhancing international solidarity with the plight of the Palestinian people until those objectives are achieved and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards a future viable and sustainable independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of an overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine during the reporting period, from 2 September 2020 to 31 August 2021.
3. Chapters III and IV contain an outline of the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, including in virtual format, capacity-building workshops organized by the Committee and other mandated activities carried out by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

7. During the reporting period, several developments and trends continued to threaten the prospects of a two-State solution.

8. Israeli settlements continued to be constructed and expanded in the Occupied Palestinian Territory despite several Security Council resolutions, including resolution 2334 (2016), declaring them illegal under international law. As documented regularly to the Security Council by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, including in his briefings to the Security Council of 25 March 2021¹ and 24 June,² contrary to international law and United Nations resolutions, Israel has entrenched its illegal occupation of the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, through settlement construction, wall construction, demolitions and seizures of homes and structures, as well as expulsions and the forced displacement of Palestinian families. On 14 October, the Israeli authorities advanced plans for building some 5,000 settlement units in Area C settlements. In early November, United Nations human rights experts condemned the demolition of the homes and property belonging to a Palestinian Bedouin community in Khirbat Humsah, on 12 July in the northern Jordan Valley. At least 73 inhabitants, including 41 children, were displaced, and more than 75 structures were destroyed. In January, 1,200 units were built in the East Jerusalem settlement of Giv'at Hamatos, and 800 Palestinians were evicted from their homes in the same period.

9. Demolitions and confiscation of Palestinian property throughout the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem continued relentlessly, according to data collected by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. On 26 January 2021, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process reported to the Security Council that, in the previous three months, Israeli authorities had demolished, seized or forced owners to demolish 71 Palestinian-owned structures, including 19 residential structures, displacing 73 Palestinians, including 17 women and 37 children (see S/2021/91, annex 1). On 7 July, Israeli forces destroyed all standing structures in Khirbat Humsah in the Jordan Valley, forcing the transfer of the entire community situated adjacent to the settlement of Beqa'ot. Illegal actions intensified in East Jerusalem in the Sheikh Jarrah neighbourhood, where Palestinian residents live under a perpetual threat of forced expulsion and are subject to restriction of movement. Palestinians in the neighbourhoods of Shaykh Jarrah and Silwan in occupied East Jerusalem remain under threat of imminent evictions and forced displacement as Israeli settler organizations continue their attempts to seize their homes.

10. Violent incidents and provocations have continued daily throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with an alarming increase in scale and intensity, as reported by the Secretary-General (see S/2021/584). The Special Coordinator noted the increase in settler-related violence against Palestinians and urged Israel to ensure the safety and security of the Palestinian population, in line with its responsibilities as the occupying Power under international law. Clashes have also repeatedly broken out in Bayta village near Nablus in the West Bank, in the context of Palestinian protests against the seizure of land by Israeli settlers and the construction of a new Israeli settlement outpost. The deployment of Israeli forces at the Aqsa Mosque compound restricted access to thousands of Muslim worshippers during the final days of Ramadan, triggering tensions and clashes leading to widespread unrest and the military escalation between Palestinian armed groups in the Gaza Strip and Israel. On 24 June, the Security Council was informed by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process that, on 15 June, several thousand Israeli extremists marched chanting racist slogans and threats against Arabs and Muslims, amid a heavy Israeli police presence, through the Old City of Jerusalem, leading to protests and clashes in East Jerusalem and other parts of the West Bank, where 66 Palestinians, including 12 children, were injured by rubber bullets, sound grenades and physical assaults. The Special Coordinator warned about the potential for Jerusalem to become the trigger for a larger conflict. Clashes continued throughout the West Bank. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, from 1 January to 21 July 2021, Israeli forces killed 50 Palestinians, including 11 children, and injured at least 11,231, including 584 children,³ throughout the West Bank.

11. Hostilities between Palestinian militant groups in Gaza and Israel broke out on 11 May and led to 11 days of intense fighting, the most severe and deadly escalation of violence since 2014. Israeli military airstrikes and bombardment caused a considerable number of casualties, humanitarian suffering and significant destruction to infrastructure in Gaza, including to educational facilities, hospitals, health centres and water pipes. Israeli air strikes on Gaza were considered disproportionate and failing to protect civilians. On 27 May, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights reported that at least 242 Palestinians, including 68 children, 37 women, 3 persons with disabilities and 1 journalist, were killed in Gaza by Israeli bombing of civilian areas. In some cases, entire Palestinian families, including women, children and infants, were killed in their homes. Long-range rockets launched from Gaza by Palestinian militants claimed the lives of 12 persons in Israel, including foreign nationals and two children. The hostilities displaced some 77,000 Palestinians, many of whom sheltered in United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) schools throughout Gaza.⁴

12. In his statement of 16 May to the Security Council, the Secretary-General demanded an immediate stop to the conflict. The international community welcomed a ceasefire reached on 20 May, following intense mediation efforts by Egypt, Jordan and Qatar and the United Nations. Continued Israeli evictions and demolitions threatened to undermine the ceasefire. For example, on 7 June, the Jerusalem Municipality issued demolition orders to 119 Palestinian families (1,500 persons) from al-Bustan suburb in the Silwan neighbourhood of occupied East Jerusalem to make way for an Israeli archaeological park. When Israeli officials allowed an extremist march in Old City of Jerusalem on 15 June, violent clashes between Israeli Forces and residents ensued. Militant groups in Gaza launched incendiary balloons into southern Israel allegedly as a response, to which Israel responded with reprisal military attacks. On 16 May, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights directly linked the escalation to protests and heavy response by Israeli forces, first in East Jerusalem then spreading to the entire Occupied Palestinian Territory and within Israel.⁵ On 27 May, while welcoming the ceasefire, the High Commissioner warned of further violence and civilian suffering on all sides unless the root causes of the violence were addressed in a genuine and inclusive peace process to bring the occupation to an end.⁶ Following the violence throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel in May, some 200 Israeli and Palestinian women's organizations released a joint statement⁷ on 30 June calling for negotiations, based on the principles of United Nations Security Council resolution 1325 (2000), to achieve long-term solutions to the conflict. Noting the particular importance of protecting women from all forms of violence, and ensuring women's representation in decision-making positions, they urged broader efforts towards a negotiated, long-term solution, "and not just a temporary calm."

13. The violent escalation had severe humanitarian consequences, in particular in Gaza, which remains under a 14-year blockade imposed by Israel by air, land and sea. Humanitarian access to the enclave was severely curtailed owing to the hostilities. Border crossing points, including the two Gaza crossing points with Israel – Erez and Kerem Shalom – remained closed during and after the outbreak of hostilities. In the immediate aftermath of the cessation of hostilities and ceasefire agreement, on 27 May, Member States made financial pledges to the United Nations humanitarian country team flash appeal of $95 million for Gaza, which included UNRWA needs.⁸ Several donors expressed a willingness to contribute to reconstruction efforts in Gaza, including Egypt, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, the United States of America, the European Union and the World Bank. On 6 July, a joint rapid damage and needs assessment report⁹ was released by the World Bank Group, the United Nations and the European Union, in close cooperation with the Palestinian Authority and in consultation with civil society in Gaza, in which recovery needs of up to $485 million during the first 24 months were estimated.

14. During the emergency General Assembly debate on the situation in the Middle East (Assembly agenda item 37) and the question of Palestine (Assembly agenda item 38) on 20 May, many Member States condemned the violence and called for a ceasefire, for the protection of civilians and for a resumption of negotiations on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions, to lead to a long-term solution of the conflict, while the President of the General Assembly issued an appeal for peace.¹⁰ On 22 May, the Security Council issued a press statement (SC/14527) stressing the immediate need for humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian civilian population, in particular in Gaza, and supporting the Secretary General's call for a ceasefire.¹¹

15. At a special session on 27 May, the Human Rights Council adopted resolution S-30/1, establishing an ongoing independent, international commission of inquiry to investigate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in Israel all alleged violations and abuses of international humanitarian law and international human rights law leading up to and since 13 April 2021, and all underlying root causes of recurrent tensions, instability and protraction of conflict, including systematic discrimination and repression based on national, ethnic, racial or religious identity.

16. Throughout the reporting period, human rights violations have continued with impunity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as reported by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian Territory occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, at the thirtieth special session of the Human Rights Council on 27 May.¹² Human rights abuses have taken a particularly heavy toll on women, children and minority groups. It is estimated that 234,000 children need mental health and psychosocial support, as a result of the humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip.

17. In a significant move towards ending impunity and ensuring justice, the International Criminal Court on 5 February confirmed its jurisdiction over grave crimes committed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including potential war crimes, which led the Court's Prosecutor on 3 March to initiate an investigation covering crimes within the jurisdiction of the Court alleged to have been committed since 13 June 2014. Israel, which is not a member of the Court, chose not to cooperate with the ruling. On 9 July, the Special Rapporteur called on the international community to designate Israeli settlements as a war crime under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.¹³

18. On 15 January, the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, issued a decree calling for legislative, presidential and Palestinian National Council elections in 2021. The Central Elections Commission embarked on voter and candidate registration, resulting in a published list of 36 parties and independent candidates for legislative elections, and a total of 2.55 million registered voters, including 1.247 million women and up to 800,000 young eligible voters. The Palestinian Government subsequently cancelled the legislative and presidential elections in the entire Occupied Palestinian Territory following the failure by Israel, the occupying Power, to guarantee that it would not impede the holding of the elections in East Jerusalem. In his June statement to the Security Council,¹⁴ the Special Coordinator described the postponement as compounding frustrations and undermining hope for many Palestinians.

19. The ongoing Palestinian political divide continued, while the Egyptian-led intra-Palestinian reconciliation, scheduled for June, failed to take place. In his statement of 24 June to the Security Council, the Special Coordinator also reiterated the firm support of the United Nations for Egyptian efforts and called upon all Palestinian factions to make serious efforts to ensure the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under a single, legitimate, democratic, national government.

20. A new Israeli coalition government, with a member from the United Arab List, was sworn in on 13 June, under the Prime Minister, Naftali Bennett, and the Alternate Prime Minister and Foreign Minister, Yair Lapid.

21. In November, UNRWA, which provides essential core services to Palestinian refugees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the region, confronted a major budgetary crisis due to the halt of United States funding and aggravated by the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic. The Commissioner-General of UNRWA, Philippe Lazzarini, welcomed the resumption by the United States of assistance to UNRWA in 2021 and confirmed plans by Jordan and Sweden to host an international conference later in 2021 to ensure sufficient, predictable and sustained funding for the Agency.

22. The COVID-19 pandemic in the Occupied Palestinian Territory saw a sharp increase in cases and remained a genuine threat to the health, security and prosperity of Palestinians and Israelis alike. In January, United Nations human rights experts¹⁵ called on Israel to ensure swift and equitable access to COVID-19 vaccines for the Palestinian people under occupation.

23. In its periodic deliberations, the Security Council encouraged the Middle East Quartet to revitalize the stalled peace process with the goal of resuming meaningful negotiations on the question of Palestine. The new United States administration outlined a different policy on the question of Palestine from that of its predecessor and in support of a mutually agreed two-State solution, renewed diplomatic engagement and resumption of United States assistance for the Palestinian people. The President of the United States, Joseph Biden, and the Secretary of State, Anthony Blinken, subsequently engaged directly with Israeli and Palestinian leadership during the May conflict.

Mandate of the Committee

24. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by General Assembly resolution 3376 \(XXX\) of 10 November 1975 with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty and return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 \(XXIX\) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat.¹⁶

25. On 2 December 2020, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 75/20), and requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the resources necessary for its programme of work (resolution 75/21), and to continue to implement the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat (resolution 75/23). As of 2020, the mandates of the Committee and the Division are biennial. The Assembly also adopted resolution 75/22, entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine”, in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

26. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations, such as the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the International Court of Justice, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

27. The Committee is composed of 25 Member States, representing different regional groups and supporting the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

28. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

29. The Bureau of the Committee is elected each year from among the permanent representatives of Committee members. At its 402nd meeting, on 4 February 2021, chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as Chair; Adela Raz (Afghanistan), Pedro Luis Pedrosa Cuesta (Cuba), Mohammad Kurniadi Koba (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and Jaime Hermida Castillo (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs for the year. Adela Raz (Afghanistan) was also elected as Acting Rapporteur. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participates in the work of both the Committee and the Bureau as an observer.

30. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. Members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee, including by chairing and moderating conference sessions, and on all delegation visits. On the margins of the conferences and during delegation visits, they held meetings with senior officials of the respective host countries.

31. The Committee members and observers have actively advocated the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, two Committee members, India and Tunisia, and two observers, the Niger and Viet Nam, serve on the Security Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

32. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in its work were welcome to do so. Committee activities regularly involve civil society organizations, including those from Israel.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 75/20 and 75/21

A. Introduction

33. In the implementation of its programme of work, as a subsidiary body of the General Assembly, the Committee is guided by its mandate to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and support the achievement, without delay, of an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 lines. Its work and activities are also fully aligned with Security Council and Assembly resolutions on the question of Palestine; the women and peace and security agenda; the programme of the United Nations country team; international law, including humanitarian law; human rights frameworks such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights; and, more recently, the Sustainable Development Goals and their achievement by the State of Palestine. As authorized by the Assembly, the Committee has adjusted its approved programme of work in view of developments.

34. Taking a rights-focused approach, the Committee has made every effort to support the universally recognized rights of an occupied people and the rights of all States and peoples to live in peace and security. To that end, the Committee engaged the diplomatic community on the question of Palestine through formal and informal intergovernmental processes; employed the good offices of the Secretary-General; organized public awareness-raising activities that involved conferences, meetings, speakers' panels and the media, including social media; promoted partnerships with Governments, relevant bodies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations, regional bodies and civil society organizations; and built capacities for the future State of Palestine.

35. Owing to the COVID-19 pandemic and the consequent lockdowns, starting from April 2020, the Committee converted its meetings and activities to online events, using a variety of platforms, in line with General Assembly decision 74/544, in order to ensure continuity in the delivery of its mandate.

B. Mobilization of the diplomatic community

36. The Committee continued to mobilize the international community in support of the realization of the two-State solution and a just, comprehensive and lasting solution to the question of Palestine in all its aspects on the basis of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

37. During the reporting period, all the Committee meetings were held in virtual format, including a special meeting on the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see para. 52 below). It also held seven virtual Bureau meetings.

38. On 23 November 2020, the Committee endorsed four draft resolutions for submission to the General Assembly. They concerned the mandates of the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights, the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat. On 2 December, the Assembly, having before it the report of the Committee (A/75/35), adopted the four draft resolutions (resolutions 75/20, 75/22, 75/21 and 75/23).

39. On 10 February, the Bureau met with the President of the seventy-fifth session of the General Assembly, Volkan Bozkır, and agreed to increase collaboration on mobilizing Member States' and regional groups' efforts to resolve the question of Palestine in accordance with United Nations resolutions and to increase support for UNRWA.

40. In a meeting officiated by the Secretary-General on 4 February 2021, the Committee elected its Bureau members for 2021 (see para. 31 above) and officially adopted its programme of work for 2021 (A/AC.183/2021/L.2).

41. On 25 February 2021, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, held its annual briefing session to familiarize delegates with the Committee's mandate and programme of work. A total of 20 participants attended the informative and interactive session, including members of the Security Council. The Department of Global Communications also gave a presentation on the special information programme on the question of Palestine.

42. In March 2021, the Bureau initiated a series of outreach meetings to members of the Middle East Quartet and the Security Council, advocating for the long overdue realization of the Palestinian people's rights and a reinvigoration of the Middle East Peace Process. Bureau delegations met with the European Union (5 March), the Russian Federation (18 March), China (24 March), France (26 April), Ireland (12 May) and Mexico (30 June), with more meetings planned, in line with the Bureau decision to adapt the Committee's programme of work to fast-evolving developments and needs on the ground. Member States that met with the Bureau underlined the need to resolve the question of Palestine on the basis of the two-State solution and in line with relevant United Nations resolutions. As part of its outreach efforts, the Bureau also met with the President of the General Assembly on 10 February, the President of the Security Council on 28 April and the Secretary-General on xx August.

43. On 28 April, the Bureau sent a letter to the President of the Security Council on behalf of the Committee, asking him to ensure that Israel comply with its obligations and allow unhindered elections in East Jerusalem, and on 10 May issued a press statement on its concerns and calling for Security Council action.

44. The Chair made statements on behalf of the Committee to the Security Council in the context of its quarterly debates on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, on 26 October 2020 and 26 January, 22 April and 28 July 2021. In those statements, the Committee highlighted the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, called for a halt to the illegal policies and practices of Israel, the occupying Power, and drew attention to the Committee's key activities and recommendations. It also appealed to the Security Council to take appropriate action that would lead to a just, comprehensive and peaceful settlement of the conflict in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions. It reiterated its appeals for humanitarian assistance for the Palestinian people and support for UNRWA.

45. On 10 May, the Bureau, on behalf of the Committee, issued a press statement expressing grave concern at the violence at the Aqsa Mosque compound and condemning the acts against Palestinian worshippers and acts of provocation, incitement and inflammatory rhetoric. It further expressed alarm at the escalation of Israeli actions in the Gaza Strip and the firing of rockets by Palestinian militants and called for all indiscriminate attacks against civilians to stop.

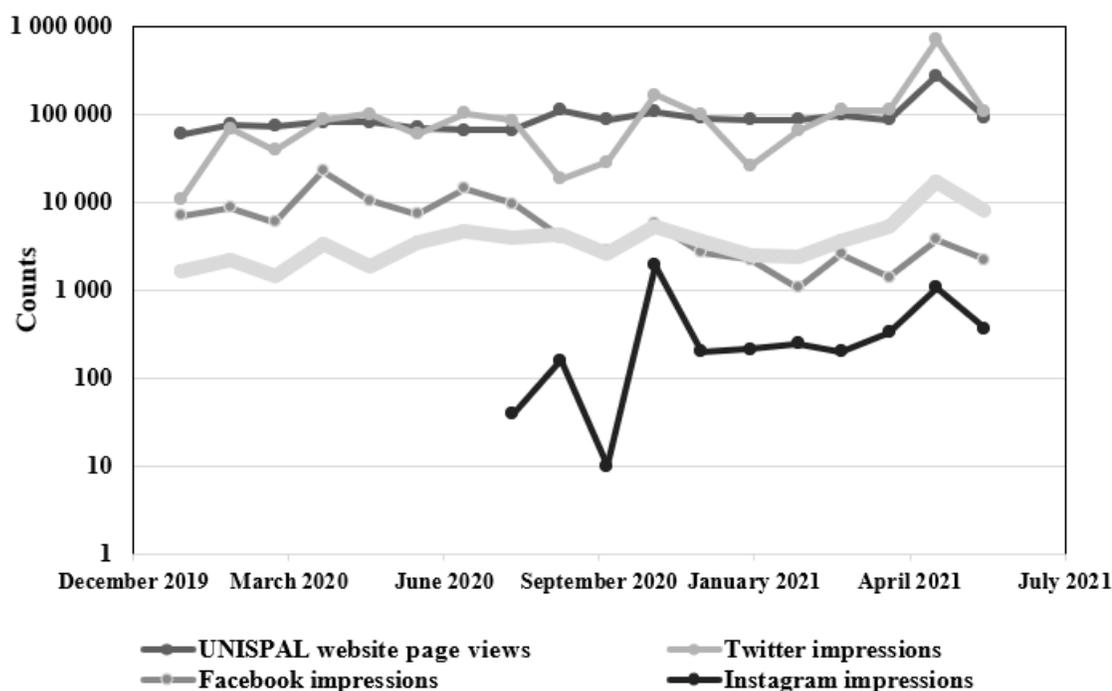

46. On 20 May, the Chair addressed the General Assembly formal plenary convened under agenda items 37 (The situation in the Middle East) and 38 (The Question of Palestine) in the context of the escalation in Jerusalem and conflict in Gaza.

C. Raising awareness of the question of Palestine

47. The Committee continued to raise awareness about the political, human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the situation of Palestinian women, by facilitating up-to-date briefings by experts and exchanges of ideas on specific issues during virtual Committee meetings, side events and virtual conferences, as well as through the dissemination of publications and information via several electronic platforms and the Committee’s website. Details regarding each activity can be found on the website.

48. The Committee maintained an expanded and enhanced social media presence to disseminate information on the question of Palestine. During the reporting period, the Committee Facebook, YouTube, Instagram and Twitter accounts recorded steady growth in the number of visitors and followers, as shown in the figure. The Twitter account alone had gained 3,429 new followers by 31 July (total 20,062), while the Committee mailing list grew by 2,032 new subscribers (total 74,114). The website was visited 1,114,994 times during the reporting period. All Committee public events, including those held online, are regularly broadcast via United Nations Web TV and across its social media pages, garnering thousands of viewers per event. As at 31 July, this has resulted in an aggregate total of 926,726 views since November 2020. These efforts resulted in increased engagement with the public, extended outreach to new audiences and higher numbers of followers across Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and YouTube. In addition to English, the Committee is also increasingly disseminating its documents in Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian and Spanish on its website. Conferences and events organized by the Committee during the reporting period were livestreamed on UN Web TV and United Nations social media platforms.

49. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, organized by the Committee and commemorated on 1 December, saw an impressive display of support and solidarity by Member States, civil society and the public despite the constraints imposed by the COVID-19 pandemic situation.

50. All speakers expressed their unwavering support for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and called upon the international community to work towards that objective. Many stressed the urgency of an expeditious solution and the responsibility of world leaders to make the Palestinian question a priority, underscoring the centrality of a just solution to regional and global peace and stability.

51. As is customary, similar events were coordinated in observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People at the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi. The messages of the Chair and the Secretary-General were delivered at those events, and the United Nations was represented at the highest levels. The commemorations were attended by representatives of members and observers of the Committee and other Member States, who expressed their solidarity with the Palestinian people and support for the two-State solution. A message from the Secretary-General was issued in all six official languages.

52. The 2020 exhibit organized for the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was entitled “The writing is on the wall: annexation – past and present”. The virtual exhibit displayed striking images of the separation wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and included murals, pieces of art and graffiti painted onto the Wall by, among others, international activists such as Banksy, Blu, several Palestinian artists and activists, as well as anonymous visitors expressing solidarity. The exhibit was launched virtually on 29 November 2020, and can be viewed on the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine website.¹⁷ In addition, the Bureau decided to reproduce and print, with a funding contribution by the Organization for Islamic Cooperation (OIC), the four past exhibits (2017–2020) into individual booklets, to be distributed physically and digitally to enhance the Committee’s advocacy and reach a wider global audience. On XX August, the Bureau presented the Secretary-General with the 2017 and 2018 booklets, featuring prominent Palestinian personalities, which were distributed to all Member and Observer States of the United Nations.

53. On 12 November, the Committee held a virtual event, “International Parliamentarians and the Palestine Question”, which brought together members of parliament from the European Union, South Africa and the United States. The speakers and participants – among them, some from the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean – emphasized the need for unified actions to keep the protection of Palestinians and their rights on the international agenda, to strengthen multilateral approaches to solve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and to provide urgent support to UNRWA. Participants called for closer interaction between legislative bodies and international organizations, requesting the Committee to organize further such events in the future.

54. A virtual event on “Women, peace and security and Beijing+25: progress and challenges for women and girls in Palestine” was organized on 10 March in the margins of the sixty-fifth session of the Commission on the Status of Women. The women speakers – former and current Palestinian officials and civil society representatives from throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory – focused on the unique situation of Palestinian women under occupation and traditional norms, their roles and challenges since the first intifada to date, including in the upcoming Palestinian elections, as well as the shrinking space of civil society in the Occupied

Palestinian Territory. They also called for the number of women in leadership positions and in parliament to be increased.

55. On 7 April, the Committee organized a virtual event on “Delivering critical assistance for Palestine refugees: challenges and opportunities in a complex context”, featuring briefings by the UNRWA Commissioner-General, Mr. Lazzarini, and the Director of UNRWA Operations in the West Bank, Gwyn Lewis. The President of the General Assembly, Mr. Bozkır, delivered a keynote address. The aim of the event was to strengthen international support for the rights of Palestine refugees and mobilize political and financial support to UNRWA, ahead and in support of a planned international UNRWA conference. UNRWA representatives called to protect the Agency’s mandate and the rights of Palestine refugees against a campaign using misinformation to deter donors and supporters.

56. On 18 May, the Committee held its annual United Nations forum, under the theme “International parliamentary support to the question of Palestine” with a two-panel interactive discussion, moderated by a Member of Parliament of Portugal and the Vice-President of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean, and included parliamentarians from Canada, Chile, France, South Africa and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The forum focused on parliamentary support on the full implementation of Security Council resolution 2334 (2016), including through incorporation of its requirements into national legislation, and the revival of multilateral efforts for a peaceful resolution of the conflict. Recommendations included establishing an international commission to investigate crimes of “apartheid” of Israel, revising bilateral agreements with Israel to include the 1967 borders and prohibiting tax benefits for companies operating in the settlements and the importation of their goods and services.

57. On 1 July, the Committee held the annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, with support from OIC, under the theme “Forced demographic change in Jerusalem – grave breaches and a threat to peace”. The discussion panel comprised Palestinian, Israeli and international experts and community activists from East Jerusalem and highlighted decades-long Israeli policies and actions to promote Jewish settlement into and Palestinian emigration from Jerusalem, enabled by an Israeli legal system ignoring international law and excluding the political context of a power imbalance between Jewish Israelis and Palestinians. The young Palestinian representatives shared their daily struggles against the indignities and coercion of the occupation and their means of peaceful resistance, highlighting the power of social media and international support.

58. The United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, now in its twenty-seventh year of operation, remains a valuable resource on the question of Palestine for diplomats and researchers around the world, averaging 100,000 page views per month. Accessed through the Committee’s website, it consists of more than 40,000 documents and is the largest and most comprehensive online repository on the subject. The collection ranges from the latest United Nations documents to rare records dating back decades. On 7 June, the System completed a comprehensive four-year migration and technological upgrade and progressed to make the website information in all six official languages of the United Nations, with a special emphasis on Arabic. Efforts are under way to improve the accessibility of the Committee’s website for the visually impaired. The Division for Palestinian Rights has initiated a project to deploy a virtual chatbot on the System to enhance user experience on the Committee’s website.¹⁸

59. Further to its monitoring mandate, the Committee also produced several publications disseminated by the Division for Palestinian Rights. They include monthly bulletins, compiling all official documents of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations relating to the question of Palestine, assembled United Nations resolutions and decisions, widely disseminated quarterly newsletters on the activities of the Committee and an annual compilation of United Nations reports on the question of Palestine, as well as an annual compilation of all resolutions issued by United Nations bodies on the question of Palestine.

60. Through its weekly publication entitled “NGO Action News”, the Committee continued to raise awareness of the work of civil society and United Nations actors in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and around the globe towards the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

61. The Committee commissioned a legal study for the Irish Centre for Human Rights at the National University of Ireland to examine the legality of the Israeli occupation. It is expected to be finalized in 2021.

62. The Committee’s publications were disseminated through a growing mailing list that includes more than 8,000 subscribers, including research libraries, universities and key stakeholders such as community leaders, political figures, members of the diplomatic community, students, university professors, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), intergovernmental organizations and journalists, as well as prominent personalities and opinion leaders. All the publications of the Committee are posted on the Committee’s website.

D. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities

63. The Committee continued its cooperation with intergovernmental organizations and United Nations system entities and expressed its appreciation for the active participation of representatives of those bodies at various events held under its auspices. OIC continued to support the annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, organized by the Committee. The African Union, LAS and OIC regularly attended the meetings of the Committee as observers and participated in its work.

64. During its activities, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, continued its long-standing cooperation with the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme, United Nations country teams, UNRWA, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, the Department of Global Communications (including the United Nations information centres and the United Nations Regional Information Centre for Western Europe, in Brussels), the Human Rights Council and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations System Staff College.

65. The Committee also continued its collaboration with NGOs promoting the rights of the Palestinian people. Representatives of civil society organizations, including from Israel, were invited to attend all public events of the Committee. Those meetings and interactions allowed the Committee to be informed about civil society concerns and actions and to share the Committee’s mandate and activities with them. These in-depth exchanges have informed the programme of work, statements and reports of the Committee. The Committee also continues to provide a space in which Israeli and Palestinian civil society organizations can interact, through the facilitation of their participation in Committee events, at a time when such interaction is increasingly restricted on the ground. As is customary, a civil society representative was invited to speak at the special meeting of the Committee held on 1 December to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Committee continued to send out a weekly NGO Action News. As part of its periodic interactions with civil society organizations, on 3 August, the Committee organized a virtual engagement with civil society organization representatives from Palestine, Israel and the international community to receive first-hand briefings on the situations in Jerusalem and Gaza and on advocacy in the United States.

E. Capacity-building

66. As requested in General Assembly resolution 75/21, the Committee continued to identify training opportunities to expand the capacity of officials of the State of Palestine. The Committee continued to assess the impact of its programmes. In response to the COVID-19 crisis, the Committee prioritized online training during the reporting period.

67. The Committee, in collaboration with the United Nations System Staff College supported the participation of three diplomats from the Palestinian Ministry of Foreign Affairs in a five-week online training course on effective writing skills that took place from 7 September to 9 October 2020. Furthermore, in collaboration with UNITAR, the Committee supported the participation of four diplomats from the Palestinian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates in a virtual immersion training course on the workings of the United Nations in Geneva from 9 to 20 August 2021.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23

68. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23 of 2 December 2020, the Department of Global Communications continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine, organizing its activities and outreach in mostly online formats, owing to the COVID-19 pandemic.

69. The Department worked with the Al-Jazeera Media Institute to organize a special virtual training programme for Palestinian journalists, from 23 November to 3 December. The online course was focused on three themes: mobile journalism; data journalism; and news verification; and benefited 12 Palestinian journalists from Gaza, the West Bank, Jerusalem and the diaspora. The International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East, held virtually on 8 and 9 December 2020, was officially opened by the Committee Chair, with speakers from Israel, Palestine the United Kingdom and the United States, as well as United Nations representatives, to discuss two themes: “The Israel-Palestine conflict and challenges of the new decade”, and “A tale of two narratives: misinformation and disinformation”. The International Day of Solidarity website was updated in the six official languages. The Department continued to provide guidance and assistance for maintenance of the website, including in the six official languages. In collaboration with the Office of Information and Communications Technology, the Department assisted with modernizing the presentation and searchability of digital materials on multiple aspects of the question of Palestine.

70. The Department provided communications support for live and on-demand streaming coverage of the Committee’s meetings and events outlined in section V.C of the report, in all available languages on UN Web TV. The Department issued 75 press releases, in English and French, related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process, including coverage of the Committee, the General Assembly and the Security Council, as well as statements and messages by the Secretary-General. UN News in the six official languages, as well as Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese, produced some 300 stories and multimedia products related to the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including stories about COVID-19 and interviews with representatives of United Nations agencies in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

71. The Department’s UNifeed service produced 42 packages for broadcasters related to the question of Palestine during the reporting period. UNifeed coverage of the escalation of the situation in Gaza and Israel was aired 20,298 times in May, breaking all previous monthly records for broadcast pick-up. UN Video also produced news and social media videos to highlight the voice of the United Nations and its leaders during the period of escalation. These videos were widely viewed and generated strong audience engagement. UNifeed videos received close to 60 hours of airtime during this period. Audience engagement was also strong, with two news videos produced by UN Video on the conflict, both rating among the top three produced for the month of May on YouTube and Twitter. On YouTube, the video featuring the Secretary-General and the President of the General Assembly speaking about the deadly violence generated more than 76,000 views, 2,400 reactions and 500 comments. On the Secretary-General’s Twitter account, the video on his stakeout reacting to the ceasefire received more than 53,000 views, some 700 retweets and 110 comments.

72. During the reporting period, the United Nations social media platforms continued to cover news and provide information about issues related to the question of Palestine in the six official languages, as well as Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese. United Nations social media platforms continued to promote virtual events and activities organized by the Committee, including by drawing traffic to the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the Committee's social media accounts, and by making the information available for use on public-facing platforms, such as Trello.¹⁹

73. Together with UNRWA, the Office of the Secretary-General's Envoy on Youth invited a young member of the first-ever "UNRWA Student Parliament" to speak at the ministerial round table of the Economic and Social Council youth forum),²⁰ which was held on 7 and 8 April. Following the event, the young Palestinian speaker was featured on the Office's blog series titled "Meet 23 young people leading on resilient recovery in the decade of action".²¹

74. On 15 July, the Secretary-General's Envoy on Youth participated in the "Palestine refugee youth empowerment" virtual event, hosted by the UNRWA Representative Office in New York, which aimed to put the spotlight on Palestine refugee youth success stories.

75. The quest for a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine was highlighted in the UN75 commemorative book: "Achieving our common humanity: Celebrating global cooperation through the United Nations"²² under the "Self-determination of all peoples" section.

76. On the International Day of Solidarity, the Department facilitated a virtual exhibit, discussed in paragraph 52, to engage a wide range of audiences and collaborated with the United Nations Regional Information Centre for promotions of the event in Western Europe in Brussels, and Centres in Ankara, Beirut, Brussels, Cairo, Canberra, Nairobi and Pretoria.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

77. In developing its recommendations set out below, the Committee has taken into account the deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, briefings received, outreach, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations and regional organizations.

A. Immediate action by the Committee in response to annexation and settlement activities

78. The Committee expresses concern about the failure of the Government of Israel to halt the creeping annexation of parts of the occupied West Bank, which would constitute a most serious violation of international law, including the Charter of the United Nations and the Geneva Conventions, and would undermine the contiguity of the Palestinian territory and the physical viability of the two-State solution based on pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem as the capital of the State of Palestine, in accordance with international law, relevant United Nations resolutions, internationally agreed parameters, the Madrid principles and the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee calls on Israel, the occupying Power, to halt all such illegal measures and to act towards bringing an end to its illegal occupation, in accordance with the relevant United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\).

79. The Committee supports the Secretary-General's clear position on the question of Palestine, based on international law, countless United Nations resolutions and the search for a just solution and calls for Israel to uphold its obligations under international humanitarian and international human rights law, respect the status quo at the holy sites in Jerusalem, including for the historic and legal status quo at Aqsa Mosque compound and the right of Muslims to peacefully worship there free from threats, intimidation and violence. The Committee calls on the Secretary-General to continue to utilize his good offices and mediation capacities, as well as on all parties with influence, to act with urgency to de-escalate this volatile situation.

80. The Committee will continue to advocate the resolution of the question of Palestine on the basis of an international framework and against annexation and in support of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and independence.

81. The Committee notes that any initiative aimed at a just solution to the question of Palestine must, first and foremost, consider the legitimate rights and aspirations of the Palestinian people, engage the Palestinian leadership, and be based on the two-State solution, according to international law, United Nations resolutions and agreements between the parties. In this context, the Committee notes the concerns expressed by the Palestinian leadership, and the response of the international community, that the bilateral agreements between Israel and some Arab countries did not commit Israel to halting plans to further extend its sovereignty over Palestinian territory and its people. To this end, the Committee reiterates that annexation of any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory is illegal.

82. The Committee expresses concerns at the occupying Power's continued expansion of its illegal settlement network and related infrastructure, including the wall, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem and deep inside the West Bank, in grave breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention and deemed illegal under international law, as reaffirmed, inter alia, in Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\). The Committee calls on Israel to immediately halt all settlement construction and expansion and its ongoing transfer of its population to those settlements as they are unlawful and constitute an obstacle to peace and are destroying the viability of the two-State solution.

83. The Committee expresses its deep concern about the imminent evictions of Palestinian families from their homes in the Sheikh Jarrah and Silwan neighbourhoods of occupied East Jerusalem settlements and Bayta village and reiterates its calls for a halt to all illegal Israeli policies and practices, including all settlement activities, home demolitions, evictions, forced displacement and all other acts of collective punishment against the Palestinian civilian population.

B. Immediate action by the Committee in response to the conflict

84. The Committee expresses its deep alarm at the dramatic deterioration of the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially following the escalation of violence in May and continuous acts of provocation and incitement, in particular by Israeli extremists in occupied East Jerusalem. The Committee reminds Israel and Palestinian militants that indiscriminate and disproportionate attacks and failure to distinguish between military and civilian objects, and their use, thereby constitute clear violations of international humanitarian law and may constitute war crimes.

85. The Committee calls on all parties to the May conflict in Gaza and Israel to respect a ceasefire to allow for medical, humanitarian and reconstructions efforts, and for an investigation by the International Criminal Court into the attacks on civilian populations and other gross violations of human rights. It emphasizes the need to address the root causes of the violence to avoid the next round of violence with further pain and suffering for civilians on all sides and to advance the realization of a just solution.

C. Immediate action by the Committee in response to postponement of elections in Palestine

86. The Committee regrets the postponement of parliamentary and presidential elections in the State of Palestine and underlines that those democratic elections are a crucial factor for the full realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. To this end, the Committee urges the Palestinian leadership to announce new dates for holding the elections and urges the Security Council to ensure that Israel guarantees the holding of democratic Palestinian elections throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

D. Action taken with the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council

87. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure the implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace affirmed in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution 74/11 \(2019\). The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit his reports to the Council on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\) in written format and, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the resolution, to include references to implementation of the provision by Member States. Pursuant to paragraph 11 of the resolution, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions, including the use of sanctions on States and private entities violating Council resolutions.

88. The Committee further urges the Security Council and the Middle East Quartet to revitalize the stalled peace process in view of resuming meaningful negotiations towards the achievement of a just and peaceful solution for the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The international community has an abiding responsibility towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all aspects, in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions and must act without delay.

89. The Committee deplores the use of excessive, disproportionate and indiscriminate force by Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, including during the protests in the Gaza Strip in 2018 and 2019 and during the 11-day conflict in May 2021 and reiterates its call for the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the independent international commission of inquiry on the protests in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (A/HRC/40/74). The Commission was mandated by the Human Rights Council to investigate violations committed in the proximity of the fence between Israel and the Gaza Strip during those protests. The Committee also calls for an end to all violations of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including arbitrary arrests and detentions, restrictions to freedom of movement, discrimination and collective punishment, as well as the denial of the rights to self-determination and independence.

90. The Committee is of the view that only full respect for the human and collective rights of the Palestinian people will ensure a lasting and just resolution to the question of Palestine. In support of justice and respect for the rule of law and human rights that are indispensable for peace, the Committee welcomes Human Rights Council resolution S-30/1 for an independent, international commission of inquiry to investigate all violations and abuses of international humanitarian law and international human rights law since 1 April 2021.

91. The Committee urges Member States and the Organization to call upon Israel, as the occupying Power, to respect its obligations under international law to protect civilians. Further to the report of the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolution ES-10/20, the Committee emphasizes the need for the implementation of an international protection mechanism that can credibly ensure the safety and welfare of Palestinian civilians. The Committee calls upon the international community to shift from a humanitarian to a human rights framework in addressing the plight of the Palestinian people, and demands also an end to the 14-year Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza and the lifting of all closures under Security Council resolution 1860 \(2009\).

E. Advocacy and outreach with the international community and civil society

92. The Committee will continue to mobilize the international community to stop Israel's annexation plan and will exert efforts to contribute to the achievement of the two-State solution on the pre-1967 borders and is encouraged by the numerous statements in support of international legality by members of the international community, including the Arab world and international civil society. Any comprehensive resolution of the conflict will require a regional approach, such as that offered by the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee calls upon regional organizations, such as the European Union, LAS and OIC, to take on a more politically active role in mediating an end to the conflict.

93. The Committee calls upon the international donors to fulfil without delay all pledges to expedite the provision of humanitarian assistance, the reconstruction process and economic recovery, which are essential to alleviate the distress of Palestinians, including women and children, who face additional and gender-specific challenges that need to be addressed through targeted actions. It stresses the urgency of sufficient and predictable funding to UNRWA to ensure its vital humanitarian and development assistance to the Palestine refugees.

F. Action by Member States and regional organizations

94. The Committee emphasizes the importance of the acknowledgement by Israel of the Nakba and its impact upon the Palestinian people as a necessary requirement for a viable and lasting peace. Palestine refugees should be treated as dispossessed nationals of a country – the State of Palestine – rather than as stateless refugees. It strongly advocates the right to return as well as just compensation for Palestine refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

95. The Committee deems unilateral decisions by Member States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of embassies in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as null and void, as they are in violation of Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 476 (1980) and 478 (1980). The Committee calls upon Member States to rescind those decisions and reiterates that the historic status quo of the holy sites in Jerusalem must be respected and that the international community shares the responsibility to preserve the legal, demographic and historical multicultural and multireligious character and status of the city.

96. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States, private entities and corporations not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, including with respect to their activities in settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It welcomes efforts by Governments, parliamentarians and civil society actors to sanction support, including economic, for illegal Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

97. The Committee calls upon Member States to implement the relevant obligations under international law, including as set out in paragraph 5 of Security Council resolution 2334 (2016), in which the Council called upon Member States to distinguish, in their relevant dealings, between the territory of the State of Israel and the territories occupied since 1967.

98. The Committee looks forward to the report of the United Nations High Commissioner of Human Rights on the effects of annexation, as requested by the Human Rights Council in paragraph 16 of its resolution 43/31 on 23 June 2020. The Committee expresses appreciation for the work of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 and his reports submitted to the Human Rights Council.

99. As the international community embarks on renewed efforts to restart meaningful negotiations within a credible peace process on the basis of the longstanding international parameters for a just solution, the Committee commits to continue its outreach to key stakeholders with influence on the question of Palestine and to offer support for initiatives, including by the Middle East Quartet, with a view to holding an international peace conference leading to a two-State solution, as highlighted in the 23 March 2021 statement of the Middle East Quartet envoys. The Committee will continue to encourage all supporters of the two-State solution to assist the parties to resume negotiations towards the achievement of a peaceful settlement in line with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

G. Support action in response to the coronavirus disease pandemic

100. The Committee expresses concern about the unprecedented spread of the COVID-19 pandemic throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and commends the stringent measures adopted by the Government of Palestine to contain its effects throughout the region.

101. The Committee draws the attention of the international community to the dire socioeconomic situation, the deteriorating living conditions of Palestinians in the occupied territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip, as well as to the predicament of the Palestinian Government, due to the twin combination of the adverse impact of COVID-19 and the ongoing Israeli occupation and creeping annexation policies.

102. The Committee echoes the concern of the international community about the way in which Israeli authorities are rolling out the COVID-19 vaccine, disregarding their obligations as the occupying Power to ensure public health in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Committee calls upon Israel to immediately comply with its duties under international humanitarian law by ensuring the provision of vaccines for the Palestinian population under its control in Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, as well as to Palestinian prisoners and detainees held in Israeli jails.

H. Action by the Secretariat and other United Nations entities

103. The Committee notes with appreciation the contribution of the Division for Palestinian Rights in support of its mandate and requests the Division to continue its substantive and secretariat support for all aspects of its mandate. The Committee also highlights the growing importance of cooperation among developing countries and regional and subregional organizations within the framework of South-South and triangular cooperation for sharing replicable experiences towards the achievement of self-determination and independence.

104. The Committee encourages the Division for Palestinian Rights to continue with efforts to disseminate information on the question of Palestine by continue broadening outreach and promoting multilingualism, with a special emphasis on Arabic, on its website and social media platforms. It also requests the Division to continue to implement projects, including capacity-building for officials of the State of Palestine, that are aimed at further promoting the Committee's mandate.

105. The Committee requests the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications, which has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public.

106. The Committee intends to continue to work closely with other United Nations actors and entities, including the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and UNRWA, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the Organization towards the question of Palestine until it is justly resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner and in accordance with international law. The Committee wishes to express its deep appreciation to OIC and other partners for the contribution of extrabudgetary resources and their active participation in its conferences and events.

107. The Committee will continue to promote inclusivity and gender balance in all its activities, including its capacity-building programme for the civil servants of the State of Palestine, and encourages a full utilization of online capacity-building opportunities, especially in the context of COVID-related travel restrictions.

[1 September 2022]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 75/20 of 2 December 2020.

The report covers the period from 2 September 2021 to 31 August 2022.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 75/20, adopted on 2 December 2020. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2022/1), formulated to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness of the plight of the Palestinian people, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just and comprehensive solution to the question of Palestine and lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace, enhancing international solidarity with the Palestinian people and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards a future viable and sustainable independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of an overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine during the reporting period, from 2 September 2021 to 31 August 2022.
3. Chapters III and IV contain an outline of the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with Member States, intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, including in virtual format, capacity-building activities organized by the Committee and other mandated activities carried out by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

7. Throughout the reporting period, the realization of the two-State solution, pursuant to the prevailing international consensus, failed to advance. The Middle East peace process did not resume, and the Middle East Quartet did not create opportunities for negotiations between Israel and the State of Palestine. Israeli leaders continued to publicly cast doubt on their commitment to a two-State solution, expanding illegal Israeli settlements throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory instead and openly declaring their intention to alter the demographic balance, character and status of East Jerusalem in favour of a Jewish majority. Although the United States of America resumed humanitarian aid to Palestinians, most notably to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), and restarted dialogue with the Palestinian Authority, it did not reverse all measures taken by the previous administration. The stalled peace process and the lack of new initiatives to benefit the Palestinian people's quest for self-determination have highlighted the need for enhanced global cooperation to reinvigorate negotiations and provide a political horizon leading to a just solution to the question of Palestine and lasting peace.

8. The peace process was also hampered by persistent negative trends, including ongoing and systematic violations by Israel of international law and United Nations resolutions. The unrelenting expansion of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, further entrenched the Israeli occupation and threatened the viability of a future independent State of Palestine. Israel continued to transfer its population to settlements in the occupied territory, confiscate Palestinian land and property, evict Palestinians from their homes and land, forcibly displace Palestinians and destroy their homes and structures, as thoroughly documented by the United Nations and others. Settlement expansion in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was accompanied by a dramatic rise in Israeli settler violence, tolerated and in some cases assisted by Israeli occupation forces, and the Palestinian population continued to endure systematic human rights violations as a result. The Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip, now in its fifteenth year, in conjunction with the Palestinian Government's poor financial situation, has contributed to the continued suffering of civilians under dire humanitarian and socioeconomic conditions and the slow reconstruction there.

9. High levels of violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially in East Jerusalem, resulted in numerous Palestinian casualties. On 28 May, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, Tor Wennesland, expressed concern at the high level of Palestinian and Israeli casualties, following months of violence. According to sources from the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the Office of the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, from 2 September 2021 to 26 June 2022, 80 Palestinian fatalities were recorded. Following another Israeli military aggression against the Gaza Strip from 5 to 7 August 2022, a further 49 Palestinians were killed, among them 17 children. On 11 August, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Michelle Bachelet, expressed alarm at the high number of Palestinians, including children, killed and injured in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.¹ This period was also marked by the most serious terrorist attacks inside Israel in years, in which 13 Israelis and 3 foreign nationals were killed. Indiscriminate rocket attacks fired from Gaza toward Israel continued intermittently. Mounting violence was further exacerbated by provocative steps and inflammatory rhetoric.²

10. On 11 May, Shireen Abu Aqleh, a Palestinian-American journalist, was killed while covering clashes near the Jenin refugee camp. According to a United Nations investigation and other accounts, Israeli occupation forces were responsible for the killing, while the United States concluded that Israeli forces might have killed the journalist, albeit, according to their view, “unintentionally”. The incident drew strong criticism from human rights organizations and the international community. The Secretary-General and the Committee – among others – called for an independent and transparent investigation into the incident,³ which Israel has yet to undertake. Since 2000, over 40 Palestinian media workers have reportedly been killed, and hundreds have been maimed, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory according to United Nations experts on human rights.⁴

11. In his 2022 report on Children and armed conflict (A/76/871-S/2022/493), the Secretary-General expressed alarm at the rise in grave violations against Palestinian children, particularly the sharp increase in live ammunition killings, rocket attacks and maiming. The Secretary-General confirmed 2,934 grave violations committed against 1,208 Palestinian children and 9 Israeli children; the detention of 637 children by Israeli forces in the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem; and the killing of 86 Palestinian children in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Israel. In the report, the Secretary-General called for the listing of Israel among the systematic perpetrators of violations against children should it continue the same pattern of violations witnessed in May 2021.

12. Despite mounting criticism, Israel continued to expand its settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in grave breach of international law and in direct violation of United Nations resolutions, including in particular Security Council resolution 2334 (2016). On 11 March, Israel announced the construction of 730 new housing units in Pisgat Ze’ev, a settlement in East Jerusalem, ending a halt in construction that followed the December 2021 appeal by the United States Secretary of State, Anthony Blinken, for Israel to refrain from implementing construction plans for some 9,000 housing units within Jerusalem’s municipal boundaries. On 12 May, the High Planning Council of the Israeli Ministry of Defence advanced plans to build over 4,000 housing units in Area C settlements of the occupied West Bank.⁵ These measures came after Israel issued tenders in October 2021 for more than 1,300 housing units, which later increased to more than 3,000 housing units, in the occupied West Bank. In December, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, highlighted that since 2016, when Security Council resolution 2334 (2016) was adopted, the number of Israeli settlers had increased by 12 per cent, from 400,000 in the West Bank and 218,000 in East Jerusalem to 475,000 and 230,000 respectively.⁶

13. Israel, the occupying Power, continued to confiscate land and demolish homes and structures belonging to Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, seriously threatening the viability of the State of Palestine. After a de facto moratorium during the Muslim month of Ramadan, Israel resumed the demolition of homes in early May in the East Jerusalem neighbourhood of Silwan and displaced Palestinians from the southern Hebron hamlet of Masafer Yatta (see S/PV.9046), which is slated to be expropriated by the Israeli military. Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, were the subject of a Human Rights Council resolution on 1 April (resolution 49/29), in which the Council urged Israel to end without delay its occupation of the territories occupied since 1967 and to stop the establishment of new settlements and the expansion of existing settlements immediately. During the reporting period, Israel destroyed over 540 buildings (93 of which were supported by international donors) and uprooted and rendered homeless over 680 Palestinians, negatively impacting over 20,800 people, including many children.⁷ Despite the decision of the Israeli Supreme Court, on 1 March, to put off the potential eviction of four Palestinian families, the situation in the East Jerusalem neighbourhood of Sheikh Jarrah remained uncertain, and Palestinian residents there continued to live under the constant threat of forcible eviction. When clashes intensified in February, after right-wing groups attempted to set up a temporary office there and vowed not to dismantle it until Israeli police provided protection to Jewish settlers, many members of the Security Council called on Israel to refrain from provocative acts that increased tensions.⁸

14. Provocation of Palestinians by extremist Jewish groups persisted unabated. On 29 March, during the annual flag march for Jerusalem Day, in which 70,000 Israelis took part, marchers violently attacked Palestinians and chanted threats and racial slurs against them. During five consecutive events in May, Israeli settlers and Israeli occupation forces entered Palestinian communities, injuring 100 Palestinians.⁹ In December, Israeli settlers reportedly attacked several Palestinian villages – notably Burqa village and its surroundings – damaging Palestinian homes and injuring approximately 150 locals.¹⁰

15. During the Muslim month of Ramadan in April, nightly clashes took place between Israeli forces and Palestinians in Jerusalem, including near the Aqsa Mosque. During the Islamic festival of al-Israa wa al-Miraj on 28 February, Israeli occupation forces and Palestinians also clashed in Jerusalem. Israeli forces used stun grenades, rubber bullets and skunk water, resulting in the injury of 37 Palestinians, including an 11-year-old girl with special needs. In October, Israeli forces clashed with Palestinians over religious ceremonies at the holy sites, namely at the Haram al-Sharif (the Holy Esplanade) and the Yusufiya cemetery in Jerusalem's Old City and the Damascus Gate.

16. After 15 years of a land, air and sea blockade by Israel, resulting in harsh socioeconomic conditions and de-development, the situation in Gaza continued to deteriorate. In May 2021, the military escalation of Israel against Gaza resulted in the deaths of 261 Palestinians, including 41 women, 67 children and 3 people with disabilities, compounding the suffering of its residents, as highlighted in a statement by the Bureau of the Committee issued on 10 May.¹¹ In March, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Michelle Bachelet, noted the harmful impact on the civilian population of Gaza of the collective punishment by Israel for 15 consecutive years, despite express prohibitions in international humanitarian law.¹² On 1 January, and against the backdrop of the death of the Palestinian prisoner, Hisham Abu Hawwash, mounting tensions between Palestinian militant groups in Gaza and Israel resulted in rocket fire from Gaza towards Israel and reprisal attacks by Israel. In a joint statement on 7 December, Palestinian militant factions accused Israel of deliberately delaying reconstruction efforts in Gaza and warned of renewed escalations should delays continue.

17. From 5 to 7 August, Israel carried out air and artillery strikes against Gaza,¹³ reportedly killing 49 Palestinians, including 17 children and 4 women,¹⁴ injuring hundreds, destroying hundreds of homes, displacing more than 1,000 people and aggravating an already fragile humanitarian situation. Militant groups responded by firing hundreds of rockets towards Israel, reportedly injuring 70 persons and causing limited material damage.¹⁵ On 7 August, the Secretary-General welcomed the ceasefire brokered by Egypt and expressed his deep sadness at the loss of life and injuries.¹⁶ On 8 August, the Security Council met to discuss the upsurge in violence, and the Bureau of the Committee welcomed the ceasefire, condemned the Israeli attack against Gaza and called for a lifting of the Gaza blockade and the immediate start of negotiations leading to the two-State solution.¹⁷

18. In its report (A/HRC/50/21), the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem and in Israel, established by the Human Rights Council in its resolution S-30/1, found that discrimination against Palestinians and the continued Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory since 1967 were the main causes of the region's ongoing tensions, instability and conflict. The Commission added that recurrent cycles of violence were exacerbated by the culture of impunity that had resulted from the lack of accountability for violations, forced transfers, threats of forced displacement, demolitions, settlement construction and growth, settler violence and the siege of Gaza.

19. Six Palestinian civil society organizations were labelled as “terrorist organizations” by Israel in October, a decision strongly criticized by the international community. United Nations experts and activists condemned the designation¹⁸ and claimed that the actions by Israel were intended to prevent Palestinian civil society monitoring of the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and cooperation with the International Criminal Court. During a closed-door Committee event on 7 December, NGOs warned that such actions were “a blueprint, replicable elsewhere, to silence civil society”. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights also criticized the designation at a Committee briefing and warned against Israel's overly broad definition of terrorism. Many Member States issued separate and joint statements announcing the resumption of funding and cooperation with the six civil society organizations, citing a lack of evidence to substantiate the Israeli claims. On 17 August, the Israeli occupation forces raided and closed the offices of seven Palestinian non-governmental organizations (NGOs), seizing documents and equipment. The Chair of the Committee joined the United Nations, the European Union, Member States and dozens of other NGOs from Israel, Palestine and elsewhere in expressing alarm and calling on the Government of Israel to revoke the designations.

20. At its meetings in November 2021 and May 2022, the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of the International Assistance to Palestinians acknowledged the dire financial situation of the Palestinian Authority, the ongoing humanitarian and development crisis facing Palestinians in Gaza and the historically low level of budget contributions from donors. In the World Bank economic monitoring report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee of May 2022, Gaza's economy is described as sluggish, marked by high unemployment and poor socioeconomic conditions.¹⁹ To put the Palestinian Authority on a sustainable fiscal path, enhance living standards and strengthen institutions, the members of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, at the meeting of the Committee in May 2022, committed to deepening their cooperation to address the socioeconomic challenges of the State of Palestine.

21. Despite its crucial role, UNRWA continued to experience a precarious financial situation. At the meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee of the General Assembly for the Announcement of Voluntary Contributions to UNRWA in June 2022, the Commissioner-General of UNRWA, Philippe Lazzarini, outlined the Agency's urgent need for $817 million for critical services, including education, health and social protection for Palestine refugees during 2022. The Secretary-General appealed to Member States to bring the Agency's current shortfall down to zero.²⁰ Member States pledged a total of $160 million at the event. The United States gave further economic assistance to Palestine during President Biden's visit in July, totalling $316 million, including a new multi-year contribution of $100 million for the East Jerusalem Hospital Network and an additional $201 million for UNRWA.

Mandate of the Committee

22. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly in its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975 with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty and return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat.²¹

23. On 2 December 2020, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 75/20) and requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the resources necessary for its programme of work (resolution 75/21) and to continue to implement the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat (resolution 75/23). As of 2020, the mandates of the Committee and the Division are biennial, and the Committee's report is produced annually. The Assembly also adopted resolution 75/22, entitled "Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine", in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

24. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations, such as the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the International Court of Justice, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

25. The Committee is composed of 25 Member States, representing different regional groups and supporting the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Türkiye and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

26. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam, Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

27. The Bureau of the Committee is elected each year from among the permanent representatives of Committee members. At its 406th meeting, on 8 February 2022, chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as Chair; Pedro Luis Pedroso Cuesta (Cuba), Arrmanatha Christiawan Nasir (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and Jaime Hermida Castillo (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs for the year. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participates in the work of both the Committee and the Bureau as an observer.

28. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. Members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee, including by chairing and moderating conference sessions, and on all delegation visits. On the margins of the conferences and during delegation visits, they held meetings with senior officials of the respective host countries.

29. The Committee members and observers have actively advocated the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, one Committee member, India, and one observer, United Arab Emirates, serve on the Security Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

30. As in previous years, the Committee reconfirmed that all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in its work were welcome to do so. Committee activities regularly involve civil society organizations, including those from Israel.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 75/20 and 75/21

A. Introduction

31. In the implementation of its programme of work, as a subsidiary body of the General Assembly, the Committee is guided by its mandate to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and support the achievement, without delay, of an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 lines. Its work and activities are also fully aligned with Security Council and Assembly resolutions on the Question of Palestine; the women and peace and security agenda; the programme of the United Nations country team; international law, including humanitarian law; human rights frameworks such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights; the Convention on the Rights of the Child; and, more recently, the Sustainable Development Goals and their achievement by the State of Palestine. As authorized by the Assembly, the Committee has adjusted its approved programme of work in view of developments to include mobilization of the diplomatic community, raising awareness of the question of Palestine, cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and United Nations system entities, and capacity-building.

32. Taking a rights-focused approach that emphasizes meeting obligations and encourages feedback and continuous improvement, the Committee has made every effort to support the universally recognized rights of an occupied people and the rights of all States and peoples to live in peace and security. To that end, the Committee engaged the diplomatic community on the question of Palestine through formal and informal intergovernmental processes; conducted Bureau delegation visits (see para. 45 below); organized a Bureau retreat; organized public awareness-raising activities that involved conferences, meetings, speakers' panels and the media, including social media with the support of the Department of Global Communications; promoted partnerships with Governments, relevant bodies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations, regional bodies and civil society organizations; and built capacities for the future State of Palestine.

33. With the lingering impact of coronavirus disease (COVID-19) and with some restrictions remaining in place throughout the Secretariat, the Committee continued to hold some meetings and activities virtually, using a variety of platforms to ensure continuity in the delivery of its mandate, including the special meeting on the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see para. 51 below) and eight Bureau meetings. However, the Committee swiftly re-adapted to holding in-person meetings and Bureau delegation visits with 17 in-person meetings taking place during the reporting period.

B. Mobilization of the diplomatic community

34. The Committee continued to mobilize the international community, formally inviting all Member States to actively participate in its events in support of the realization of the two-State solution and a just, comprehensive and lasting solution to the question of Palestine in all its aspects on the basis of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

35. On 4 November, after a long hiatus due to COVID-19, the Bureau held its annual retreat in person to take stock and adapt the implementation of the programme of work in line with developments on the ground and to include follow-up actions from its exchange with the Secretary-General.

36. On 1 December, the General Assembly debated the annual report of the Committee (A/76/35), resulting in a broad call for the realization of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 borders. With three resolutions endorsed by the Committee now considered on a biennial basis, the Assembly adopted only the resolution on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine (resolution 76/10), with a voting pattern similar to 2020. Sponsored by the Committee and 30 co-sponsors, the resolution obtained 148 votes in favour, 9 against and 13 abstentions.

37. In a meeting officiated by the Secretary-General on 8 February 2022, the Committee elected its Bureau members for 2022 (see para. 27 above) and officially adopted its programme of work for the year (A/AC.183/2022/L.2).

38. On 28 February, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights and with the support of the Department of Global Communications, held its annual briefing session for new United Nations delegates, in person, to familiarize them with the Committee's mandate and programme of work.

39. On 22 and 23 March, the Chair delivered a statement to the forty-eighth session of the OIC Council of Foreign Ministers in Islamabad highlighting the strategic partnership between the Committee and OIC and calling for the latter's membership to step up their solidarity with the Palestinian people and mobilize the international support needed to make the two-State solution a reality.

40. On 30 March, during its annual consultation with the President of the General Assembly, Abdulla Shahid, the Committee appealed for efforts to sustain the focus and attention of Member States on the question of Palestine and to ensure that new global crises do not divert the international community's attention from the grave situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and emphasized the need for a horizon towards the achievement of a just, lasting and peaceful solution.

41. On 24 March, a Vice-Chair participated in a breakfast discussion held at the Permanent Mission of Ireland to the United Nations with the European Union Special Representative for Human Rights, Eamon Gilmore, in which he voiced concern about the stalled Middle East peace process and highlighted the urgency of addressing human rights violations and reviving global cooperation to resolve the question of Palestine.

42. On 20 April, a Bureau delegation participated in a special briefing on the situation in Palestine convened by Kenya as the coordinator of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries caucus of the Security Council. The Bureau urged the caucus to advocate for the rights of the Palestinian people, and most importantly the right to self-determination, within the Council and beyond Council debates.

43. The Bureau continued to meet with Member States to advocate for the long-overdue realization of the Palestinian people's rights and to reinvigorate the Middle East peace process. Bureau delegations met with representatives of the United States (3 September), Brazil (23 February), Gabon (22 April), Ghana (15 March) and Albania (4 August). Member States that met with the Bureau agreed on the need to resolve the question of Palestine on the basis of the two-State solution and in line with relevant United Nations resolutions.

44. On 11 May, the Bureau, on behalf of the Committee, issued a press statement condemning the killing of Palestinian journalist Shireen Abu Akleh, who was fatally shot while reporting for Al-Jazeera News on an Israeli occupation force operation in Jenin, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Recalling the crucial role played by journalists in conflict zones, the Bureau called for an immediate, independent and thorough international investigation into the killing and for bringing to justice those responsible.²²

45. On 5 May, a Bureau delegation visited Dublin to discuss ways to relaunch the Middle East peace process. The delegation called on Ireland to recognize the State of Palestine as a means of promoting the realization of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. The delegation met with Minister of Foreign Affairs and Defence, Simon Coveney, and parliamentary parties, stressing the significant role that parliamentarians can play in promoting a just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine.

46. On 22 June, a Bureau delegation met with the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, Virginia Gamba, to share ideas on concrete actions to prevent rampant violations of the rights of Palestinian children by Israel, the occupying Power, and on ways to revive global attention with respect to the Convention on the Rights of Child, the implementation of which is key to protecting children in conflict.

47. On 25 July, the Chair met in Amman with the Director of the Negotiations Coordination Bureau at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates of Jordan, Mohammed Hindawi. Both parties agreed on the importance of the continued support of the international community for the Palestinian people and UNRWA and discussed possible joint capacity-building activities for Palestinian officials.

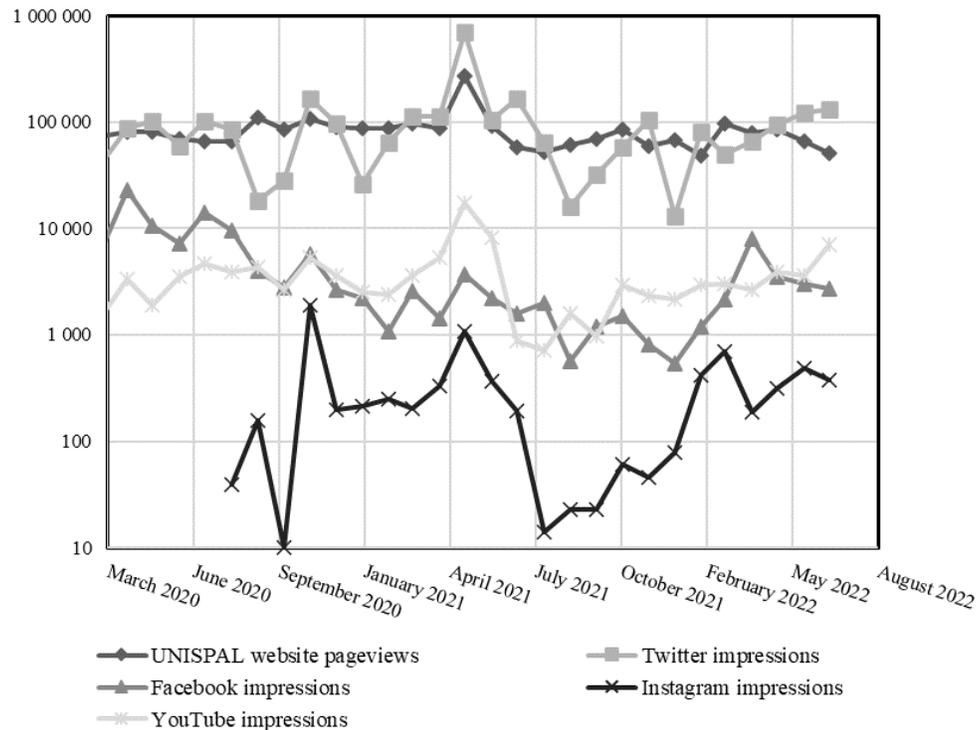

C. Raising awareness of the question of Palestine

48. The Committee continued to raise awareness about the political, human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the situation of Palestinian women, by facilitating up-to-date briefings by experts and exchanges of ideas on specific issues during virtual and in-person Committee meetings, side events and conferences, as well as through the dissemination of publications and information via several electronic platforms and the Committee's website. Details regarding each activity can be found on the website.

49. The Committee maintained an expanded and enhanced digital advocacy to disseminate information on the question of Palestine. During the reporting period, the Committee's Twitter, Facebook, YouTube and Instagram accounts recorded steady growth in the number of visitors and followers, as shown in the figure below. The Twitter account alone had gained 1,723 new followers by the end of August (total 21,785), while the Committee mailing list grew by 2,293 new subscribers (total 11,050). The website was visited 875,149 times during the reporting period. All Committee public events, including those held online, are regularly broadcast via United Nations Web TV and across its social media pages, garnering thousands of viewers per event. These efforts resulted in increased engagement with the public, including via expanded content in Arabic, extended outreach to new audiences and higher numbers of followers across Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and YouTube. In addition to English, the Committee is also increasingly disseminating its documents in Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian and Spanish on its website.

Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, social media statistics

Abbreviation: UNISPAL, United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine.

50. On 16 November 2021, the Chair participated in the International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East organized by the Department of Global Communications, stressing the importance of media for the Committee in delivering its General Assembly mandate, and urged accurate and reliable reporting on developments in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem (see para. 75 below).

51. As mandated by the General Assembly (resolution 75/21), the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People was observed on 29 November. The special meeting of the Committee to commemorate the Day was attended by 73 Member States and 3 regional organizations. The event remains of importance, as it serves as a reminder of the Palestinian people's inalienable rights and their lack of national independence and sovereignty. As is customary, the President of the General Assembly, the President of the Security Council and the Chair delivered statements. The Chef de Cabinet conveyed the Secretary-General's message. The African Union, LAS, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and OIC also delivered remarks. The Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine read out a message from the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas. Five prominent women civil society representatives – the former President of Finland, Tarja Halonen; the Secretary-General of Amnesty International, Agnès Callamard; activist and Nobel Peace Prize laureate, Malala Yousafzai; and Palestinian teacher and Global Teacher Prize winner, Hanan Hroub – along with prominent Palestinian rights activist, Mohammed El-Kurd, who shared his personal experience about forced evictions of Palestinians in Sheikh Jarrah (East Jerusalem), stressed the need for accountability for Israeli actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and appealed for international efforts to realize justice for the Palestinian people and a life of freedom and dignity. The Chair acknowledged solidarity messages from 40 Member States, the European Union and LAS. The observance of the Day was also marked in the United Nations Office at Geneva and at the United Nations Office at Vienna. The Division outreach efforts ensured live views on United Nations Web TV, Palestinian TV and social media platforms.

52. On 7 December, the Committee held a virtual event entitled “Supporting human rights defenders in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: reality, challenges and obligations” to discuss the shrinking space for human rights activism in the Occupied Palestinian Territory owing to repressive measures by the Israeli authorities. Highlighting designation by Israel of six Palestinian civil society organizations as terrorist entities, the event included a representative from one of those organizations (Al-Haq), as well as Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch, and a prominent Israeli human rights lawyer. Speakers called on Member States to confront the unlawful actions by Israel and urged the Committee to continue to offer its platform to the voices that Israel is trying to suppress.

53. Also on 7 December, the Committee received a briefing by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, who recounted the deteriorating situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, decried the use of excessive force by Israel against Palestinian civilians, condemned impunity and settler-related violence and raised alarm at the designation of six Palestinian civil society organizations as terrorist organizations.

54. On 23 March, on the margins of the sixty-sixth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, the Committee organized a virtual event on the impact of forced displacement on Palestinian women, focusing on the threat of eviction by Israeli authorities and related settlers violence, especially in the East Jerusalem neighbourhoods of Sheikh Jarrah and Silwan. The all-female panel included a representative from the Israeli NGO Ir Amim, two Palestinian residents of Sheikh Jarrah and Silwan, who shared their personal experiences, as well as representatives of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women). The event provided a platform for exchange and served to reaffirm the Committee’s support for the rights of Palestinian women through international mechanisms, such as Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\).

55. On 27 April, the Committee convened a virtual event entitled “Al-Khalil/Hebron: a case study for the impact of Israeli settlements on Palestinian rights under occupation” to highlight the critical situation caused by the ongoing illegal Israeli settlement campaign in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and its impact on the rights of the Palestinian people. Panellists from the Hebron Defence Committee, the Palestine Institute for Public Diplomacy and Combatants for Peace focused on the situation in Hebron as a case study illustrating discriminatory Israeli policies, while reiterating that all settlements are illegal under international law and constitute a substantial obstacle to peace.

56. On 16 June, the Committee, in line with increased concerns and ongoing awareness of the situation, facilitated a public virtual conversation on apartheid, international law and the Occupied Palestinian Territory with Zeid Ra’ad Al-Hussein, President of the International Peace Institute and former United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, and Agnès Callamard, Secretary-General of Amnesty International. They discussed the findings of Amnesty International’s 2022 report entitled “Israel’s apartheid against Palestinians: cruel system of domination and crime against humanity” and the way forward. In her video message, the Minister of International Relations and Cooperation of South Africa, Grace Naledi Mandisa Pandor, pointed to analogies between apartheid South Africa and the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Speakers discussed the reestablishment of the Special Committee against Apartheid to consider the case of Palestine.

57. On 20 July, the Committee, with support from OIC, organized its annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, in virtual format, on the theme of “Palestinian youth in East Jerusalem under occupation”. The President of the General Assembly (by video message) and an OIC representative from Jeddah addressed the Conference. Four speakers, including three women, one of which was from Israel, highlighted the challenges facing young Palestinians in East Jerusalem and discussed ways to support them as catalysts for change via empowerment and political engagement.

58. The United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, now in its twenty-eighth year of operation, remains a valuable resource for diplomats, researchers and the general public around the world, averaging 100,000 page views per month. Accessed through the Committee’s website, it consists of more than 41,200 documents and is the largest and most comprehensive online repository on the subject. The collection ranges from the latest United Nations documents to rare records dating back decades. The collection saw a significant surge in access and in the volume of documents uploaded during the Gaza conflict in May 2021. Efforts are now under way to improve the accessibility of the Committee’s website for the visually impaired.

59. The Bureau, supported by the Division for Palestinian Rights, continued to prioritize multilingualism. While content in Arabic is expanding, an agreement was reached with the Department of Global Communications to maintain the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine in Chinese. The Division continued to update the website with current documents and has identified historic documents from the early years of the United Nations involvement in the question of Palestine.

60. In collaboration with the Office of Information and Communications Technology, the Division for Palestinian Rights built an artificial-intelligence-based chatbot for the website of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, which became the first such tool available on any United Nations website. A project implemented by the Bureau, with support from the Division for Palestinian Rights, to map the positions of Member States on the question of Palestine was nominated for the United Nations Secretary-General Awards and was featured as a best practice use case at the Secretariat for the key role it plays in advancing the resolution of the question of Palestine.

61. Further to its monitoring mandate, the Committee also produced several publications disseminated by the Division for Palestinian Rights. They include monthly bulletins, compiling all official documents of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations relating to the question of Palestine, quarterly newsletters on the activities of the Committee, an annual compilation of United Nations reports on the question of Palestine, as well as an annual compilation of all resolutions issued by United Nations bodies on the question of Palestine.

62. Through its weekly publication “NGO Action News”, the Committee continued to raise awareness of the work of civil society and United Nations actors in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and elsewhere towards the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

63. The Committee’s publications were disseminated through a growing mailing list that includes 10,757 subscribers, including research libraries, universities and key stakeholders such as community leaders, political figures, members of the diplomatic community, students, university professors, NGOs, intergovernmental organizations and journalists, as well as prominent personalities and opinion leaders. All the publications of the Committee are posted on the Committee's website.

64. In collaboration with and with funding from OIC, the Committee, with support from the Division of Palestinian Rights, reproduced four advocacy booklets from past United Nations exhibits of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People that convey critical messages on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the question of Palestine. The booklets complement the Committee's global advocacy activities; a total of 2,724 booklets have been distributed to Member States and United Nations offices throughout the world since the beginning of the project. The electronic format of the booklets has reached 9,362 subscribers and can be viewed on the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine.²³

D. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities

65. The Committee continued to cooperate with intergovernmental organizations. OIC continued to support the annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, organized in cooperation with the Committee. The African Union, LAS and OIC regularly attended the meetings of the Committee as observers and participated in its work.

66. During its activities, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, continued its long-standing cooperation with the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme, United Nations country teams, UNRWA, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, the Department of Global Communications (including the United Nations information centres), the Human Rights Council and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, UN-Women, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and the United Nations System Staff College.

67. The Committee also continued to collaborate with NGOs in promoting the rights of the Palestinian people. Representatives of civil society organizations, including from Israel, are invited to attend all public events of the Committee. Those meetings and interactions allowed the Committee to be actively informed about civil society concerns and actions and provided a space in which Israeli and Palestinian civil society organizations could interact, especially at a time of increasing restrictions on the ground.

68. As part of the Committee's periodic interactions with civil society organizations, on 22 November and 1 March, the Committee organized virtual closed consultations with representatives of civil society organization from Palestine, Israel and elsewhere to receive first-hand briefings on the situation in Jerusalem and Gaza and on advocacy throughout the world. As is customary, a civil society representative was invited to speak at the special meeting of the Committee held on 29 November to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Committee continued to prepare and disseminate the weekly NGO Action News.

69. At its 407th meeting, the Committee approved the accreditation of three civil society organizations recommended by the Bureau who will partner with the Committee in implementing its mandate.

²³ www.un.org/unispal/exhibits-on-the-occasion-of-international-day-of-solidarity/.

E. Capacity-building

70. As requested in General Assembly resolution 75/21, the Committee continued to identify training opportunities to expand the capacity of officials of the State of Palestine. The Committee also continued to assess the impact of its programmes. Following the lifting of most COVID-19-related restrictions, the Committee continued to prioritize hybrid (online and in-person) training.

71. In collaboration with the Irish Centre for Human Rights of the National University of Ireland, the Committee organized a closed-door seminar on the legality of the Israeli occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The seminar was held in Dublin on 6 and 7 May and was attended by international legal experts, Palestinian diplomats and government officials, as well as members of the Bureau.

72. A two-day communication strategy workshop for 21 officials of the Government of Palestine was organized in Amman on 25 and 26 July. The workshop equipped participants with skills to develop a full suite of strategic communications tools to help the Government of Palestine communicate and engage with its audiences more effectively.

73. The Division for Palestinian Rights created a database containing capacity-building opportunities offered to Palestinian Government officials by the members and observers of the Committee. The purpose of the database, which will be updated on a regular basis, is to improve coordination among participating sponsors.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23

74. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23 of 2 December 2020, the Department of Global Communications continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine.

75. The Department continued to engage with the media on the question of Palestine. It held its annual International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East virtually on 16 and 17 November 2021. At the seminar, the Chair of the Committee (see para. 50 above) joined a panel of six experts from Egypt, Israel, the United States and the State of Palestine to discuss two relevant themes: “The thirtieth anniversary of the Madrid Peace Conference: can hope prevail?” and “Solutions journalism in the coverage of the Israel-Palestine conflict”.

76. The Department held its annual training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists virtually from 19 November to 22 December 2021. Nine Palestinian journalists from Gaza, the West Bank, Lebanon and the diaspora took part in the training. The online courses, which were provided by Al-Jazeera Media Institute, focused on five themes: writing humanitarian stories, storytelling for digital platforms, occupational safety for journalists, data journalism and television reporting skills.

77. On 31 May 2022, the Department announced that it had renamed the training programme to “Shireen Abu Akleh Training Programme for Palestinian Broadcasters and Journalists”, in honour of the Palestinian-American Al-Jazeera reporter who was killed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory on 11 May 2022.

78. The Department updated the website for the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People in the six official languages and distributed information about relevant events and seminars. The Department’s Digital Support Unit continued to support the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, including by facilitating the implementation of “Ask UNPal” (see para. 86 below).

79. The Department provided live and on-demand streaming coverage of relevant press conferences, open meetings and events, in all available languages, through its global UN Web TV (see paras. 50–57 above). The Department has also facilitated the first live broadcasts of Committee events on Palestinian TV.

80. The Department issued 80 press releases, in English and French, related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process. The press releases covered events and meetings of the Committee, the General Assembly and the Security Council, as well as statements and messages by the Secretary-General.

81. UN News produced more than 200 stories and features on the topic during the reporting period, in the six official languages, plus Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese, including a special highlight on the contributions to humanity of the Palestinian diaspora, as shown in the UN News feature “First person: from Gaza to the red planet”²⁴ about Loay Elbasyouni, a Palestinian electrical engineer on the 2021 United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Mars exploration mission team.

82. During the reporting period, UNifeed published 15 video packages on the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, which were aired by broadcasters a combined total of 1,231 times. These video packages covered a range of issues, including the Secretary-General's remarks at the opening of the 2022 session of the Committee, the International Ministerial Conference on UNRWA, meetings of the Security Council and the general debate of the General Assembly.

83. The Department's flagship United Nations social media accounts, in all six official languages, as well as Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese, continued to cover news and provide information related to the question of Palestine and to promote virtual events and activities organized by the Committee. The promotion of events and activities was accomplished by driving traffic to the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the Committee's social media accounts. The information was also made available on key collaborative and project management platforms, such as Trello.²⁵

84. During the reporting period, the Dag Hammarskjöld Library digitized 165 historic documents (some 1,330 pages) of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Palestinian Question and the Special Committee on Palestine. Among those, 143 documents from the Ad Hoc Committee on the Palestinian Question have also been uploaded to the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine website.

85. The Visitors' Service Section continued to conduct briefings on the subject matter, especially through the permanent exhibit "The United Nations and the question of Palestine", which is part of the United Nations guided tour route. Since the resumption of in-person guided tours at Headquarters on 7 April 2022, over 43,000 visitors have taken the tour and seen the exhibit.

86. The United Nations information centres in Lusaka, Moscow, Nairobi, Pretoria and Rabat, among others, disseminated information and organized commemorative events on and around the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (29 November). During the reporting period, the information centres also promoted events of the Committee as well as of United Nations offices. For example, the information centre in Cairo hosted a virtual press conference on the launch of the 2021 report of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people. The regional information centre in Brussels provided communications support, including the dissemination of press releases and a media advisory related to the high-level conference to support UNRWA and the signing of a joint European Union-UNRWA declaration marking 50 years of strategic partnership. The Department also facilitated the dissemination of e-books of the United Nations exhibit to United Nations information centres across the globe (see para. 64 above).

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

87. In developing its recommendations set out below, the Committee has taken into account the deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, briefings received, outreach, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations and regional organizations.

A. Immediate action by the Committee in response to the conflict and human rights violations

88. The Committee is deeply concerned by consistent reports of the use by the Israeli occupation forces of excessive lethal force against Palestinian civilians, including children, which has resulted in an increasing number of killings and injuries and an entrenched climate of impunity, including during the annual flag march for Jerusalem Day. The Committee laments the lack of accountability for illegal Israeli actions, including during the escalation of hostilities in Gaza in May 2021. The Committee reiterates that the indiscriminate launching of rockets towards Israeli population centres is prohibited by international humanitarian law and must stop immediately.

89. The Committee expresses its deep concern about the deteriorating security situation in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, especially the daily violence that continues to claim the lives of both Palestinians and Israelis. The Committee is also disturbed by the significant increase in the use of force against Palestinians by Israeli settlers. The Committee calls on political, religious and community leaders to reject violence, speak up against those who try to inflame the situation and refrain from actions and provocations that fuel tensions, while exercising maximum restraint.

90. The Committee calls on the Government of Israel to conduct prompt, independent, and impartial investigations into all incidents involving excessive use of force and the loss of Palestinian life, including of children and including the killing of Palestinian Al-Jazeera journalist Shireen Abu Akleh and at her funeral, and ensure that perpetrators are held accountable and that victims are provided with appropriate remedies. The Committee welcomes calls for the protection of Palestinians in line with international humanitarian law, as well as the United Nations findings on the killing of Ms. Abu Akleh, and reiterates that it is urgent that a credible and transparent international investigation be conducted.

91. The Committee calls on Israel to uphold its obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law, respect the status quo at the holy sites in Jerusalem, including the historic and legal status quo at the Aqsa Mosque compound, and ensure that Muslims are able to peacefully worship and practice their religion without fear of violence or retaliation. Special measures must be put in place by the occupying Power to prevent future provocations by Israeli occupation forces in Jerusalem during Ramadan.

92. The Committee welcomes the findings in the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict and calls for the parties to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict to commit to protecting children. The Committee urges the Israeli occupation forces and Palestinian armed groups to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian and international human rights law and ensure that any military operations are conducted in line with the principles of distinction, proportionality and precaution, and to immediately correct and reinforce existing measures to ensure the protection of children affected by armed conflict.

93. The Committee concurs with the stance of the Secretary-General on the question of Palestine, which is supported by international law, numerous United Nations resolutions and the pursuit of a just resolution, and urges the Secretary-General to continue to leverage his good offices to influence and mediate, with urgency, the diffusion of this volatile situation.

B. Immediate action by the Committee in response to annexation and settlement activities

94. The Committee is gravely concerned about the continued expropriation of and encroachment on Palestinian land and the continued construction and expansion of Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, despite the demands made by the Security Council, the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly for the cessation of all such illegal activities. The Committee further reiterates that annexation of any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, is illegal. The Committee calls on the Israeli authorities to cease the advancement of all settlement activity and refrain from such unilateral and provocative actions, which fuel instability and change the demographic composition, status and character of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Such actions undermine the prospect of achieving a two-State solution by systematically eroding a contiguous, independent, viable and sovereign Palestinian State, based on pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem serving as the capital of Palestine, in accordance with international law, pertinent United Nations resolutions, including Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), the Madrid principles and the Arab Peace Initiative.

95. The Committee urges the Government of Israel to refrain from seizing Palestinian land, stop implementing its demolition orders and terminate all forced evictions and forcible displacement of Palestinians, particularly in Area C of the West Bank and East Jerusalem. The recent announcement by the occupying Power of measures to expropriate Palestinian land and forcibly displace approximately 1,200 Palestinians from Masafer Yatta is particularly concerning and must be halted.

C. Action taken with the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council

96. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure the implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace affirmed in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution 74/11 \(2019\). The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit his reports to the Council on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\) in written format and, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the resolution, to include references to the implementation of the provision by Member States. Pursuant to paragraph 11 of the resolution, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions, including the use of sanctions on States and private entities violating Council resolutions.

97. The Committee concurs with the findings of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel, that discrimination against Palestinians and the continued occupation of Palestinian territory are the leading causes of the region's ongoing tensions, instability and conflict. The Committee will continue to advocate for the resolution of the Palestine question based on an international framework against occupation and in support of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and independence. The Committee notes that any initiative aimed at a just solution to the question of Palestine must, first and foremost, consider the legitimate rights and aspirations of the Palestinian people, engage the Palestinian leadership and be based on the two-State solution, according to international law, United Nations resolutions and agreements between both parties.

98. The Committee urges Member States and the Organization to call upon Israel, as the occupying Power, to uphold its responsibilities to safeguard civilians under international law. The Committee underscores the requirement for the implementation of an international protection mechanism that legitimately guarantees the safety and welfare of Palestinian civilians in accordance with General Assembly resolution ES-10/20. The Committee insists that the Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza, as well as all restrictions imposed by the occupying Power, be lifted in accordance with Security Council resolution 1860 \(2009\), and urges the international community to confront the plight of the Palestinian people with a human-rights-based approach rather than a humanitarian one.

99. The Committee urges the United Nations and the international community to remain focused on the question of Palestine despite other emerging global crises. It encourages the Security Council and the Middle East Quartet to continue the relentless pursuit of any opportunity to revitalize the peace process and to seek multilateral mechanisms to revive the much-needed dialogue between Palestine and Israel, as it remains the only path to a just and peaceful solution to the conflict. Until the Palestine question is fully resolved in line with international law and the pertinent United Nations resolutions, the international community has an ongoing obligation to take action.

D. Advocacy and outreach with the international community and civil society

100. The Committee will continue to mobilize the international community to stop Israel's annexation plans and to work concertedly to bring an end to the occupation and promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. It will exert efforts to contribute to the achievement of the two-State solution on the pre-1967 borders and is encouraged by the numerous statements in support of international legality by members of the international community, including the Arab world and global civil society. Any comprehensive resolution of the conflict will require a regional approach, such as that offered by the Arab Peace Initiative. The Committee calls upon regional organizations, such as the European Union, LAS, OIC and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, to take a more politically active role in stopping the annexation and mediating an end to the conflict.

101. The Committee unequivocally condemns Israel's designation of six Palestinian NGOs as terrorist organizations, a move that contributes to the shrinking of space for civil society in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, has potentially wide-ranging legal implications and increases pressure on NGO operations and activities that are important for the monitoring of the human rights situation on the ground and the achievement of Palestinian rights and the two-State solution. It urges the Israeli authorities to rescind the decision immediately.

E. Action by the Member States and regional organizations

102. The Committee emphasizes the importance of the acknowledgement by Israel of the Nakba and its impact upon the Palestinian people as a requirement for a viable and lasting peace. Palestine refugees should be treated as dispossessed nationals of a country – the State of Palestine – rather than as stateless refugees. It strongly advocates the right to return and just compensation for Palestine refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III).

103. The Committee deems unilateral decisions by the Member States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of embassies in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as null and void, as they violate Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 476 (1980) and 478 (1980). The Committee calls upon the Member States to rescind those decisions. It reiterates that the historic status quo of the holy sites in Jerusalem must be respected and that the international community is responsible for preserving the legal, demographic and historical multicultural and multireligious character and status of the city.

104. The Committee underscores the responsibility of States, private entities and corporations not to contribute to grave Israeli violations of Palestinian human rights, including with respect to their activities in settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It welcomes efforts by Governments, parliamentarians and civil society actors to sanction support, including economic support, for illegal Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

105. The Committee calls upon Member States to implement the relevant obligations under international law, including as set out in paragraph 5 of Security Council resolution 2334 (2016), in which the Council called upon Member States to distinguish, in their relevant dealings, between the territory of the State of Israel and the territories occupied since 1967.

106. The Committee reminds Member States that preserving UNRWA services to the Palestinian people is the international community's joint responsibility. It reiterates the call by the Secretary-General to provide UNRWA with predictable, sustained and sufficient funding to assist Palestine refugees in the five fields of operation and notes that any reduction or disruption of the Agency's services can have significant humanitarian, political and security consequences for the region and beyond. The Committee encourages Member States and donors to provide the necessary financial resources for UNRWA to meet growing demands and ensure that basic services meet critical humanitarian needs. The Committee also calls for the renewal of the mandate of UNRWA by the General Assembly at its seventy-seventh session.

107. The Committee calls on Member States to support the Palestinian Government's fiscal stability and strengthen Palestinian institutions to improve the economic and social conditions of the population in the State of Palestine. The Committee notes that efforts by the parties and the international community to stabilize and improve conditions on the ground should be linked to a credible political framework to justly and comprehensively resolve the conflict.

108. The Committee will continue to encourage all supporters of the two-State solution to assist the parties in resuming meaningful negotiations towards the achievement of a peaceful settlement on the basis of the long-standing international parameters for a just solution. The Committee commits to continuing its outreach to key stakeholders with influence on the question of Palestine and to offer support for initiatives, including by the Middle East Quartet, with a view to holding an international peace conference leading to a two-State solution.

F. Action by the Secretariat and other United Nations entities

109. The Committee conveys its deepest gratitude to the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs for its commitment to the Committee's mandate. It requests the Division to continue to provide substantive and secretariat support for all aspects of its mandate. The Committee encourages the Division to continue with efforts to disseminate information on the question of Palestine by continuing to broaden its outreach and promoting multilingualism, with a special emphasis on Arabic, on the Committee's website and social media platforms. It also requests the Division to continue to implement projects, including capacity-building for officials of the State of Palestine, that promote inclusivity and gender balance and encourage South-South and triangular cooperation between countries and regional and subregional organizations.

110. The Committee requests the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications, which has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public.

111. The Committee intends to continue to collaborate and work closely with other United Nations actors and entities, including the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, UNRWA, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 and others, to synergize efforts in fields of common concern and uphold the permanent responsibility of the Organization towards the question of Palestine until it is justly resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner and in accordance with international law. The Committee wishes to express deep appreciation to OIC and other partners for contributing extrabudgetary resources to support Committee activities and projects, including thematic conferences and events.

Letter of transmittal

[1 September 2023]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 77/22 of 30 November 2022.

The report covers the period from 2 September 2022 to 31 August 2023.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/22, adopted on 30 November 2022. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2023/1), focused on promoting the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness of the plight of the Palestinian people, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just and comprehensive solution to the question of Palestine and lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace, enhancing international solidarity with the Palestinian people and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards a future viable and sustainable independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of an overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine during the reporting period, from 2 September 2022 to 31 August 2023.
3. Chapters III and IV contain an outline of the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing dialogue with Member States, intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, including in virtual format, capacity-building activities organized by the Committee and other mandated activities carried out by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

7. The Palestinian people continued to endure the belligerent occupation of their territory, which has continued for more than 56 years, compounded by recurrent and deepening political, humanitarian and economic crises. The situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, remained tense and was characterized by a surge in human rights violations committed by Israel, the occupying Power, against the Palestinian civilian population, including women and children, as well as a rise in settlement activities and creeping annexation. Israel has continued to implement measures that violate international law and United Nations resolutions, and also to prevent the Palestinian people from exercising their right to self-determination while impairing the exercise of all other inalienable rights. Despite continued engagement by the Security Council and growing calls by the international community for Israel to change course, no tangible actions were taken in the reporting period towards ending the occupation, advancing the two-State solution and ensuring accountability for the systematic human rights violations and grave breaches of international law being perpetrated in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

8. The new coalition government of Israel, considered to be the most extremist in the country's history, has increased anti-Palestinian rhetoric, discriminatory measures against the Palestinian people and hostility towards the Palestinian Authority (see para. 16). Members of the Israeli government advocated openly for the Occupied Palestinian Territory to be ethnically cleansed and encouraged revenge attacks against Palestinians, even calling for entire communities to be destroyed.

9. Israel intensified military raids and the use of lethal force against Palestinians in the occupied West Bank, in particular in Jenin and Nablus.¹ On 3 July, Israel launched the largest military operation since 2002 in the Jenin refugee camp, using weapons and methods “associated with the conduct of hostilities in armed conflict, rather than law enforcement”.² The Secretary-General called for respect for international humanitarian law during military operations, while the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights described the air strikes in the densely populated refugee camp as an act that “may amount to wilful killing”.³ This incursion was preceded by other interventions in the camp, including on 19 June and 26 January.⁴ According to data compiled by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, at least 26 Palestinians, including women and children, were killed and dozens were wounded in the Israeli military assault on Jenin in January.⁵ On 22 February, a similar Israeli military assault in Nablus killed 10 Palestinians, including children and elderly persons, and injured 100 others.

10. The new Government of Israel pursued further annexation of Palestinian land⁶ through forced evictions, displacement of communities, confiscation of property and settlement expansion, as well as by transferring its civilian population to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Israel continued to carry out settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in grave breach of international humanitarian law and Security Council resolutions, including resolution 2334 (2016). The discriminatory policies and actions of Israel were consistently described by the former Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Link, as an apartheid system⁷ aimed at maintaining domination and the systematic oppression of the Palestinian people. In June, the Secretary-General called on Israel to reverse its decision to accelerate settlement activities.⁸ In the first quarter of 2023 alone, the Israeli authorities demolished, compelled individuals to demolish or confiscated 290 Palestinian-owned structures in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. About 93 per cent of these demolitions were predicated on the absence of building permits, which are extremely difficult for Palestinians to acquire from the Israeli authorities. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), a total of 43 structures were demolished, including schools funded by international donors in Masafer Yatta and Isfay al-Fawqa.

11. In 2022, the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, saw the highest number of Palestinian casualties recorded since 2006.⁹ The number of casualties was rising rapidly in the first half of 2023 (see table below). By 7 August, the number of casualties in the West Bank had exceeded the total recorded in 2022. In addition, the United Nations has verified increasing grave violations against Palestinian and Israeli children in West Bank, East Jerusalem, Gaza, and Israel.¹⁰ OHCHR identified two primary causes for this alarming trend: widespread Israeli settler violence and excessive use of force by Israeli forces against Palestinians.¹¹ Israeli settlers regularly targeted Palestinians, including children on their way to school, attacked and vandalized Palestinian homes and vehicles, resulting in property destruction, and engaged in burning of olive trees. Armed settlers receive active support from Israeli security forces, who permitted or took no action to stop the violence of the settlers and systematically resorted to lethal force against Palestinians as a first response. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 cautioned that such acts could potentially constitute extrajudicial executions and wilful killings, which are explicitly prohibited by international law, including the Fourth Geneva Convention and the Rome Statute.

12. Israeli settlement expansion was accompanied by a surge in settler violence against Palestinians, resulting in further displacement of their communities. Numerous incidents serve as evidence of this alarming trend. In 2022, there was a 41 per cent increase in Israeli settler attacks against Palestinians in the West Bank compared to 2021. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported 849 attacks by Israeli settlers, including 228 attacks that resulted in Palestinian casualties in 2022, compared with 496 settler attacks in 2021. At the time of writing, there have been more than 329 Israeli settler attacks, 112 of which resulted in casualties. On 25 May, the Palestinian community of Ayn Samiyah in Ramallah, which consists of 178 Palestinians, including 78 children, was forced to evacuate because of settler intimidation and violence.

13. On 20 June, following an Israeli military operation in the Jenin refugee camp in which four Palestinians were killed, Palestinians killed four Israelis in the settlement of Eli, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Groups of armed settlers then carried out revenge attacks in several Palestinian villages, burning property and terrorizing residents in Luban, Sharqiyah and Sinjil among others. In Turmus'ayya, one Palestinian was killed. The Israeli army did not protect the Palestinians and even assisted the settlers.¹² Similarly, on 26 and 27 February, hundreds of Israeli settlers physically assaulted Palestinians in the town of Huwwarah and nearby villages and killed one Palestinian in the town of Za'tarah. The settlers set fire to tens of Palestinian residences, businesses and vehicles in retaliation for the killing of two Israelis in Huwwarah.¹³ Israeli forces were present but failed to stop the attack, which was described as a "pogrom" by a high-ranking Israeli military officer. An Israeli cabinet minister praised the settlers' attack and called for the town to be "wiped out". The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, Tor Wennesland, condemned the failure of Israel to protect Palestinian civilians and called for the perpetrators to be held accountable.¹⁴

14. The High Court of Justice of Israel rejected an appeal against the eviction of Palestinian communities, including 12 herding groups with more than 1,150 residents in Masafer Yatta.¹⁵ Settlement activity continues to threaten Palestinian neighbourhoods in the Hebron area and in occupied East Jerusalem. In the latter, Silwan was one of the most affected neighbourhoods, where at least 470 Palestinians were threatened with forced eviction from their homes, often by settler organizations filing eviction cases in Israeli courts. The number of approved settlement housing units on

Palestinian-owned land in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, doubled in 2023 compared with previous years.¹⁶

15. The Security Council held 15 meetings on the question of Palestine, including five that were held outside its regular schedule. In his most recent report on Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan (A/HRC/52/76), the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights noted that there appears to be a correlation between the expansion of outposts and settler attacks against Palestinians, with just under 700,000 Israeli settlers now illegally residing in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem.¹⁷ On 20 February, for the first time in nine years, the Security Council issued a presidential statement on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. In that statement, the Security Council reaffirmed its strong support for a two-State solution, expressed serious concern about Israeli settlement expansion and “legalization” of settlement outposts and called for the protection of civilians in accordance with international humanitarian law.¹⁸

16. Faced with continued inaction in the Security Council, on 30 December 2022, the General Assembly adopted resolution 77/247, in which it calls upon the International Court of Justice to provide an advisory opinion on the prolonged denial of the right of the self-determination to the Palestinian people, on the legality of the occupation of Palestinian territory by Israel and on the consequences for third parties. In response, Israel imposed punitive measures against the Palestinian Authority, sparking widespread international condemnation.

17. The situation at the holy sites in East Jerusalem worsened. On 26 July, the National Security Minister of Israel, Itamar Ben-Gavir, and 1,700 of his supporters visited the Haram al-Sharif compound in violation of the historic and legal status quo at the holy sites in Jerusalem. Many countries, including the United States of America, issued statements reaffirming the need to preserve the status quo at the holy sites, deeming actions that prevent this to be unacceptable. On 5 January, the Security Council convened an emergency meeting in the wake of another visit by that same minister, accompanied by security forces, to the Haram al-Sharif compound.¹⁹ In a statement delivered at that meeting, the Assistant Secretary-General for the Middle East, Asia and the Pacific expressed concern regarding the fragile situation at the holy sites and warned of the potential for violence throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory.²⁰ The Assistant Secretary-General urged all parties to respect the status quo and the special role of Jordan.²¹ Heightened violence and simmering tensions once again marred the coinciding religious holidays of Ramadan, Passover and Easter. On 4 April, Israeli forces used disproportionate force to evacuate the Qibli prayer hall of the Aqsa Mosque, launching stun grenades, resorting to violence and firing rubber-coated metal bullets to remove Palestinian worshipers who resisted. Israeli extremists’ provocative calls for Jews to conduct ritual animal sacrifices at the holy sites further inflamed the situation. In addition, increasing attacks against Christians and their holy sites in Jerusalem have been reported.²²

18. Despite international condemnation and recommendations for Israel to end the practice of administrative detention, the number of Palestinian detainees imprisoned without trial or charge reached its highest level since 2008. The United Nations called on Israel to cease the arbitrary practice of administrative detention, with various special rapporteurs describing it as a war crime that deprives protected persons of fair trials. OHCHR reported that 5,000 Palestinians, including 160 children, were being held in Israeli prisons. Of that number, approximately 1,100 were being held without charge or trial.²³ Some Palestinian prisoners engaged in hunger strikes to protest the detention policies of Israel. One of those prisoners, Khader Adnan, who had been repeatedly detained by Israel without charge, ultimately died. The detention without due process and deportation of human rights lawyer Salah Hammouri drew international condemnation as a violation of international humanitarian law and the Fourth Geneva Convention.

19. Israel persisted in imposing restrictions on Palestinians' freedom of movement throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, adversely affecting the livelihoods of thousands and impeding family reunification and access to health care, education and economic opportunities. Civil society organizations have emphasized that the policy of family separation and the restrictive permit regime of Israel have devastating consequences.²⁴ On 27 April, during Eid al-Fitr, movement restrictions in Jericho were further intensified, affecting approximately 50,000 residents and visitors. Palestinian Christian worshippers also encountered limitations when trying to enter the Church of the Holy Sepulchre for the Orthodox Christian Holy Fire ceremony. The World Health Organization has reported arbitrary delays and denials for Palestinians seeking health care as a consequence of the permit regime, separation barriers, checkpoints and restricted-access roads, as well as the blockade of the Gaza Strip.

20. The 16-year land, air and sea blockade imposed on the Gaza Strip by Israel continued to cause severe limitations on Palestinian access to essential services and materials, including for hospitals, and to undermine livelihoods and development. The economic and humanitarian situation continued to worsen against a backdrop of import and export restrictions, supply shortages, high unemployment²⁵ and contaminated water.²⁶ More than 2.1 million people across the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 58 per cent of whom are from the Gaza Strip, urgently required humanitarian aid according to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.²⁷

21. The situation between Israeli occupation forces and Palestinian armed groups remained highly volatile; several escalations occurred that resulted in casualties, injuries, damaged housing and displacement of families. On 9 May, Israel targeted and killed three members of Palestinian Islamic Jihad, as well as 10 family members, including children. In response, Palestinian armed groups launched rockets, leading to retaliation from Israel. Although a ceasefire was eventually reached, the ensuing closure of the Erez and Kerem Shalom crossings by Israel hindered humanitarian access.

Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel, in its latest report,²⁸ found that the Israeli government restricts civic space in order to delegitimize and silence civil society and those who advocate for Palestinian rights, including Israelis. Israeli authorities increasingly used electronic surveillance and social media monitoring, including through unauthorized spyware planted on mobile phones, to spy on Palestinian civilians, human rights defenders, journalists and students and to arrest and detain them for political statements posted on social media platforms.²⁹

23. The Middle East peace process has been stalled since 2014. On 19 March, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, the State of Palestine and the United States met in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, to discuss commitments for de-escalation of tensions and Palestinian economic conditions, as well as to establish mechanisms to counter violence and incitement. That meeting came on the heels of another meeting that was held on 26 February, in Aqaba, Jordan, at which the participants stressed similar commitments, including upholding the historic status quo at the holy sites in Jerusalem. On 11 May, the participants in a Munich-format ministerial meeting that was held in Germany called on parties to fulfil their commitments for peace as agreed in Aqaba and Sharm el-Sheikh and emphasized the need for a realistic political process. However, Israel immediately disavowed the agreements reached and violated its commitments.

24. On 13 October, 14 Palestinian factions, including Fatah and Hamas, signed the Algiers Declaration, in which they acknowledged the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and outlined plans for Palestinian elections. The Secretary-General welcomed the reconciliation agreement, stressing that it could contribute to ending a 15-year rift.

25. According to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the extreme dependence of the Palestinian economy on Israel hindered growth, despite some signs of post-coronavirus disease (COVID-19) recovery.³⁰ Unemployment remained high at 26 per cent in the West Bank and half of the workforce in Gaza was unemployed. The closure of the Gaza-Israel border crossing has prevented 17,000 Palestinians from reaching their places of employment.

26. The fiscal crisis of the Palestinian Authority continued as international support declined, further undermining its ability to provide basic services and fulfil its obligations. Since November 2021, public sector employees have been receiving partial salaries.

27. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) also continues to face a dire financial crisis, putting Palestine refugees' livelihoods and regional stability at high risk. According to the Commission-General of UNRWA, Philippe Lazzarini, a decade of chronic underfunding has led to a threat of collapse. The budget shortfall at the start of 2023 was $75 million, and the Agency's global appeal for $1.6 billion raised only $828.3 million, including $115.2 million in new contributions.³¹ The realization of the Secretary-General's call to ensure that UNRWA has sustainable and predictable funding remained elusive, as Palestine refugees' needs continued to grow. On 11 May, the World Food Programme (WFP) revealed significant funding shortages that may result in reduced aid to over

200,000 Palestinians and a high risk that around 60 per cent of the residents of the Occupied Palestinian territory would face hunger.³²

28. On 30 November, the General Assembly, decided to commemorate, for the first time, the anniversary of the Nakbah. In its resolutions 77/23, the Assembly instructed the Division for Palestinian Rights to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nakbah on 15 May, including by organizing an event in the General Assembly Hall, which was well-attended. On that same day, the Committee held a high-level special meeting at which the President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, delivered a statement decrying efforts to deliberately obstruct implementation of United Nations resolutions and the increased suffering of Palestinians. In addition, he vowed to pursue legal and diplomatic measures for the realization of Palestinian rights and seek accountability for the crimes perpetrated by Israel against the Palestinian people.³³

Chapter III

Mandate of the Committee

29. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly in its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975 with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty and return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 (XXIX) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved considerably over the years into greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the mobilization of assistance. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat.³⁴

30. On 30 November, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 77/22) and requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the resources necessary for its programme of work (resolution 77/23) and to continue to implement the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat (resolution 77/24). The mandates of the Committee, the Division and the Department will be reviewed only as necessary. The Committee's report will continue to be produced annually. The Assembly also adopted resolution 77/25, entitled "Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine", in which it reaffirmed the near-consensus international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution.

31. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations, such as the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the International Court of Justice, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

32. The Committee is composed of 25 members representing Member States from different regional groups: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Türkiye and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

33. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam, Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

34. The Bureau of the Committee is elected each year from among the permanent representatives of Committee members. At its 410th meeting, on 22 February, chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as Chair and Pedro Luis Pedrosa Cuesta (Cuba), Arrmanatha Christiawan Nasir (Indonesia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and Jaime Hermida Castillo (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs for the year. Ahmad Faisal Muhamad (Malaysia) was elected as Vice-Chair and Rapporteur on 3 May at the 411th meeting of the Committee. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participates in the work of both the Committee and the Bureau as an observer.

35. The day-to-day tasks of the Committee are undertaken by its Bureau. Members of the Bureau represent the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee, including by chairing and moderating conference sessions, and on all delegation visits. On the margins of the conferences and during delegation visits, they hold meetings with senior officials of the respective host countries.

36. The Committee members and observers have actively advocated the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, two Committee members, Ecuador and Malta, and one observer, the United Arab Emirates, serve on the Security Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

37. As in previous years, the Committee invited all States Members of the United Nations and observers to participate in its work. Committee activities regularly involve civil society organizations, including those from Israel.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 77/22 and 77/23

A. Introduction

38. The Committee implemented its programme of work to realize the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, bring about an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and support the achievement of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 lines. Its activities are aligned with Security Council and General Assembly resolutions on the question of Palestine; the women and peace and security agenda; the programme of the United Nations country team; international law, including humanitarian law; human rights frameworks, such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights; the Convention on the Rights of the Child; and the Sustainable Development Goals and their achievement by the State of Palestine. The Committee has continuously adjusted its approved programme of work in line with developments in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and developments relating to the Palestinian question, in general.

39. The Committee has made every effort to support the universally recognized rights of an occupied people and the right to self-determination. To that end, the Committee engaged the diplomatic community on the question of Palestine through formal and informal intergovernmental processes; conducted Bureau delegation visits and outreach meetings; organized a Bureau retreat; organized public awareness-raising activities that involved conferences, meetings, speakers' panels and the media, including social media, with the support of the Department of Global Communications; promoted partnerships with Governments, relevant bodies of the United Nations system, including UNRWA, intergovernmental organizations, regional bodies and civil society organizations; and built capacities for the future State of Palestine. It formally invited all Member States to actively participate in its events.

40. The activities of the Bureau included holding meetings in a variety of formats, including in-person, hybrid and virtual events, as well as visits by Bureau delegations to locations away from Headquarters.

B. Mobilization of the diplomatic community

41. From 5 to 7 December, the Bureau held its annual retreat in Dakar to reflect on the implementation of its 2022 programme of work and discuss 2023 activities. The Bureau also met with officials from the Government of Senegal, including the President of the Republic, the Chef de Cabinet, the Minister for Foreign Affairs and the presidents of the National Assembly and Foreign Affairs Committee. It also engaged with education centres and think tanks in the country.

42. On 22 February, in a meeting chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected five of its Bureau members for 2023 and officially adopted its programme of work for 2023. On 3 May, the Permanent Representative of Malaysia was elected as Vice-Chair and Rapporteur.

43. On 28 February, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights and with the participation of the Department of Global Communications, held its annual briefing session for 20 new delegates of Member States.

44. The Chair led Bureau delegations in a series of advocacy visits. The Chair participated in the forty-ninth session of the OIC Council of Ministers for Foreign Affairs, which was held in Nouakchott on 16 and 17 March, and the high-level conference organized by LAS on the theme “Jerusalem: resilience and development”, which was held in Cairo on 12 February. The Chair visited France, Malta and Switzerland from 31 October to 4 November in order to engage with officials from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs of those countries. On 17 October, in Ottawa, the Bureau met with Ms. Salma Zahid, Member of the Parliament of Canada and of the Canada-Palestine Parliamentary Friendship Group. The Committee hosted Ms. Zahid in New York on 10 November.

45. The Bureau met with representatives of the non-permanent members of the Security Council on two occasions. On 20 February, it met with representatives of the five States that were elected to membership of the Council for 2023 and 2024, and on 9 May it met with representatives of all 10 of the non-permanent members of the Council. The participants exchanged ideas on how to implement Security Council resolutions and promote a political horizon to resolve the Palestinian plight, including through efforts aimed at resuming peace negotiations between Israel and the State of Palestine.

46. The Bureau used traditional and social media for global outreach and advocacy. On 30 September, the Bureau condemned the killing of Palestinian children and the trauma that they face. On 15 February, it expressed concern over the punitive measures taken by Israel against the Palestinian Authority in response to the request submitted by the General Assembly to the International Court of Justice for an advisory opinion on the legal consequences arising from the policies and practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and denounced the decision of Israel to advance settlements in the occupied West Bank. On 24 February, it condemned a raid that Israeli forces carried out in Nablus. On 5 April, the Committee condemned violence by Israel against Palestinian worshippers at the holy sites of Jerusalem. On 19 June, it condemned the raids that were carried out in refugee camps in Jenin and the decision to expand more than 4,000 Israeli settlements in the West Bank. On 20 June, the Chair condemned the acts of violence carried out by extremist settlers against Palestinian communities.

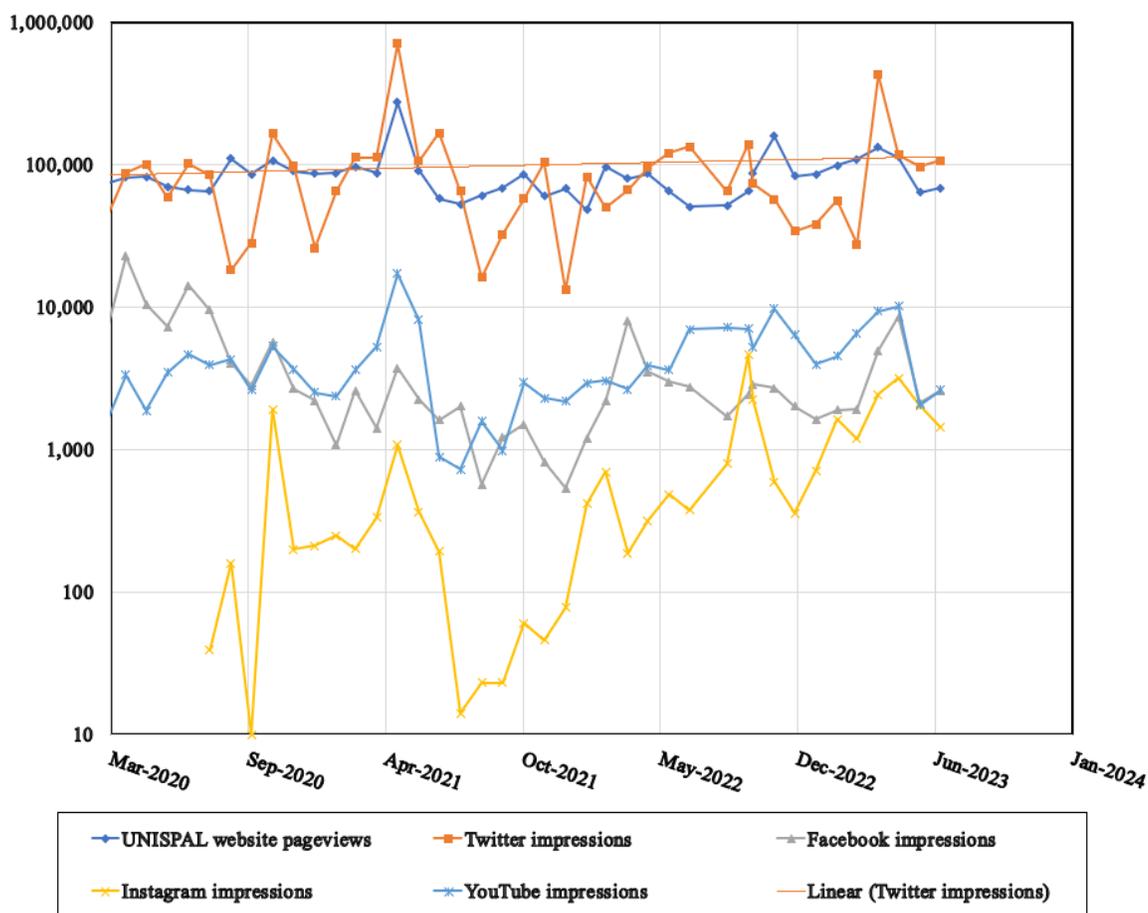

47. The Committee delivered statements at quarterly debates of the Security Council on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, on 28 October, 18 January, 25 April and 27 July. In those statements, the Committee highlighted the deteriorating situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and called for collective action to achieve the two-State solution and realize the rights of the Palestinian people, including the rights to self-determination and independence, in accordance with international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

C. Raising awareness on the question of Palestine

48. The Committee continued to raise awareness about the political, human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the situation of Palestinian women and youth, by facilitating up-to-date briefings by experts and exchange of ideas on specific issues during virtual and in-person Committee meetings, side events and conferences, as well as through the dissemination of publications and information through social media platforms and the Committee’s website. As requested by the General Assembly, the 2023 programme of work is focused on raising awareness of the Nakbah. Details regarding each activity can be found on the Committee’s website.

49. To better reach global audiences, the Committee expanded its digital advocacy efforts, with its Twitter, Facebook, YouTube and Instagram accounts recording steady growth in the number of visitors and followers, demonstrating growing public interest in the question of Palestine, as shown in the figure below. In addition, in May 2023, the Committee set up a TikTok account, which has accumulated 3,162 views in only a few months. The Twitter account alone had gained 1,215 new followers by the end of August (total 23,000), while the Committee mailing list reached a total of 13,000 subscribers. The website was visited 938,273 times during the reporting period. All Committee public events are broadcast on United Nations Web TV and social media, garnering thousands of viewers per event. The Committee also organized online advocacy campaigns ahead of the renewal of the mandate of UNRWA, the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see para. 52) and the commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nakbah (see para. 57), which resulted in strong engagement and a large viewership online.

50. On 26 October, the Bureau met with the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel and with the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967. On 11 April, the Bureau met with the President of the seventy-seventh session of the General Assembly, and on 24 April the Bureau met with the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Expatriates of the State of Palestine. On 22 August, the Bureau held its annual meeting with the Secretary-General.

51. On 3 November, the Chair participated in the International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East organized by the Department of Global Communications, stressing the importance of media for the Committee in upholding its General Assembly mandate. The Chair underlined the importance of press freedom and that journalists must be protected in order to be able to carry out their work in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. In addition, the Chair met with Palestinian journalists from Gaza, the West Bank and Lebanon who took part in the annual Shireen Abu Akleh Training Programme for Palestinian Broadcasters and Journalists organized by the Department of Global Communications (see para. 76).

52. As mandated by the General Assembly, the Committee commemorated the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November at United Nations Headquarters in New York. The President of the General Assembly, the President of the Security Council and the Chef de Cabinet, the latter speaking on behalf of the Secretary-General, reaffirmed the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the need for reinvigorated efforts to achieve a just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine. The Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine read a message from the President of the State of Palestine. In addition, speakers from the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the African Union, LAS, OIC and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries delivered statements, as did Shawan Jabarin, General Director of Al-Haq, on behalf of civil society organizations. The event was attended by 63 Member States and 10 non-governmental organizations (NGOs), while 44 Member States sent official messages of solidarity from Heads of State and Government. All statements and messages called for an end to the Israeli occupation and the achievement of the two-State solution. Similar commemorations were held at the United Nations Office at Geneva and the United Nations Office at Vienna.

53. A virtual exhibit entitled “Palestine through its people: portraits of Palestinians” dedicated to the memory of Palestinian journalist Shireen Abu Akleh was launched as part of the commemoration of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

54. On 8 November, the Committee held virtual closed consultations with civil society organizations on the theme “Advocating for accountability in the Occupied Palestinian Territory”. The participants, who included civil society organization representatives from the State of Palestine, Israel and the United States, as well as Committee members and observers, discussed accountability in the Occupied Palestinian Territory as being central to ending the Israeli occupation and to upholding international law.

55. On 15 March, the Committee organized a virtual event on the theme “Memories of the Nakbah and its impact on Palestinians” on the margins of the sixty-seventh session of the Commission on the Status of Women. At that event, Nadine Sayegh, author of the book Oranges from Jaffa, discussed the enduring impact of the Nakbah on the lives of millions of Palestinians since their displacement and dispossession in 1948. The event provided the Committee a platform to reaffirm its support for the rights of Palestinian women through international mechanisms, such as Security Council resolution 1325 \(2000\).

56. On 27 April, the Committee held a virtual closed consultation, under the Chatham House Rule, with civil society organizations on the theme “The ongoing Nakbah in Gaza: blockade, dispossession and denial of rights”. The consultation was attended by civil society organization representatives from the State of Palestine, Israel and the United States, as well as Committee members and observers. The participants focused on the Great March of Return and its legacy, the violation of Palestine refugees' right of return, the restrictions imposed by Israel on family reunification, and access to health care in Gaza.

57. On 15 May, for the first time in the history of the United Nations, the Committee, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/23, commemorated the anniversary of the Nakbah at United Nations Headquarters. The Chair, the President of the State of Palestine, the Under-Secretary-General for Political and Peacebuilding Affairs and a civil society organization representative delivered statements at a high-level Committee meeting to mark the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nakbah. Representatives of regional groups read statements of support and the Commissioner-General of UNRWA, in a video message, highlighted the critical needs of Palestine refugees. Following the meeting, a special commemorative event, which was open to the public, was held in the General Assembly Hall, which was at full capacity. The event, which was broadcast live, served to disseminate worldwide the continued impact of the Nakbah for the Palestinian people and the enduring call for a just solution to the question of Palestine. A video message from the President of the General Assembly was followed by an immersive experience of the Nakbah through live music, photos, videos and personal testimonies.

58. On 22 May, members of the Bureau met with representatives of Palestinian civil society organizations and the Israel-Palestine NGO Working Group based in New York to discuss the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and recent reports in which it is concluded that Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are victims of apartheid. The representatives of civil society organizations called for the restoration of the Special Committee against Apartheid. The Bureau continued to support the mandate of UNRWA through its regular statements and interactions with all Member States. On 13 October, the Chair met with Director of the UNRWA Representative Office in New York to discuss the renewal of the Agency's mandate, including an advocacy campaign by the Committee in that regard (see para. 49). On 30 May, the Bureau met with the Commissioner-General to discuss the Agency's financial crisis ahead of the 2023 pledging conference in support of UNRWA, which took place on 2 June. On 18 July, the Bureau met with the Chief of Staff of UNRWA to discuss the Agency's mandate and sustainability.

59. On 20 July, the Committee and OIC held a virtual conference on the theme "The impact of Israeli settlement policies on the Palestinian population in Jerusalem". The conference was attended by civil society representatives from the State of Palestine, Israel and the United States. Participants discussed a variety of concerns, including Israeli court processes and how to use the database of businesses facilitating Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory for economic activism. An evicted Palestinian illustrated the ongoing issues of illegal home evictions in East Jerusalem.³⁵

60. The United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, now in its twenty-ninth year of operation, remains an indispensable resource for diplomats, researchers and the general public, averaging 100,000 page views per month. It contains more than 42,496 documents and is the largest and most comprehensive online repository on the subject. The collection ranges from the latest United Nations documents to rare records dating back decades. Moreover, documents are increasingly being disseminated in Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian and Spanish, in addition to English.

³⁵ United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, "Impact of Israeli Settlement Policies on the Palestinian Population in Jerusalem", Chair's summary, 20 July 2023.

61. In collaboration with the Office of Information and Communications Technology, the Division for Palestinian Rights continued to improve the accessibility of UNPal, an artificial-intelligence-based chatbot for the website of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine.

62. Further to its monitoring mandate, the Committee produced several publications for dissemination by the Division for Palestinian Rights. They include a weekly publication on NGO action on the question of Palestine, monthly bulletins compiling all official documents of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations relating to the question of Palestine, quarterly newsletters on the activities of the Committee, an annual compilation of United Nations reports on the question of Palestine and an annual compilation of all resolutions issued by United Nations bodies on the question of Palestine.

63. At the request of the Office of Legal Affairs, the Division for Palestinian Rights helped the Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs produce a dossier of over 9,000 United Nations parliamentary documents drawn from the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine database for submission to the International Court of Justice in relation to the advisory opinion requested in General Assembly resolution 77/247.

64. The Committee's publications were disseminated to a growing mailing list of more than 13,000 subscribers, including research libraries, universities and such key stakeholders as political figures, members of the diplomatic community, students, university professors, NGOs, intergovernmental organizations and journalists, as well as prominent personalities and opinion leaders. All the publications of the Committee are posted on its website.

65. In support of the Committee's global advocacy and with extended support from OIC, the Bureau distributed 2,724 United Nations exhibit booklets globally, including to Member States and United Nations offices. The electronic versions of the booklets were viewed by 9,362 visitors. The booklets were reproduced in Arabic and English, and they are being translated into French and Spanish in order to further expand their reach.

D. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities

66. The Committee continued to cooperate with intergovernmental organizations. OIC continued to support the annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem, organized in cooperation with the Committee. The African Union, LAS and OIC regularly attended Committee meetings as observers and participated in its work. The Chair participated in key events of LAS and OIC (see para. 44).

67. During its activities, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, continued its long-standing cooperation with the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme, United Nations country teams, UNRWA, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, the Department of Global Communications (including the United Nations information centres), the Human Rights Council and OHCHR, the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations System Staff College.

68. The Committee continued to collaborate with NGOs in promoting the rights of the Palestinian people. Representatives of civil society organizations, including from Israel, were invited to attend all public events of the Committee (see paras. 54 to 59).

Civil society representatives were invited to speak at the special meeting of the Committee held on 29 November to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People and at the high-level meeting held by the Committee on 15 May to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nakbah.

69. NGOs continue to request accreditation with the Committee. At the time of writing, a total of two such organizations had been accredited in the reporting period to partner with the Committee in implementing its mandate.

E. Capacity-building

70. As requested in General Assembly resolution 77/23, the Committee continued to identify training opportunities to expand the capacity of officials of the State of Palestine and assess the impact of its programmes. Following the lifting of COVID-19-related restrictions, the Committee continued to prioritize hybrid (online and in-person) training.

71. In collaboration with UNITAR, the Committee supported the participation of four female diplomats from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates of the State of Palestine in a training course entitled “The art of speechwriting” from 17 October to 13 November. The course strengthened the individual capacity of diplomats working in roles requiring refined skills in speechwriting and public speaking.

72. From 24 October to 2 December, the Committee carried out its annual six-week capacity-building training programme on multilateral diplomacy for two female career diplomats. The programme, which was held in New York during the seventy-seventh session of the General Assembly, enabled trainees to enhance their understanding of multilateral diplomacy and peace, security and development issues, and recent regional and global developments that are at the centre of deliberations in the General Assembly and Security Council.

73. The Committee organized a closed-door seminar on the legality of the Israeli occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The seminar, which was held in Geneva from 7 to 9 February, brought together prominent practitioners in the fields of international law and human rights and Palestinian diplomats.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 77/24

74. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/24 of 30 November 2022, the Department of Global Communications continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine.

75. The Department held its annual International Media Seminar on Peace in the Middle East on 3 and 4 November in Geneva. Journalists, media experts, think tanks, diplomats and members of academia from Israel, the State of Palestine, Switzerland and the United States attended the event to discuss three themes: “Honouring the legacy of Shireen Abu Akleh: protecting journalists covering the conflict”, “Forgotten stories in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict: how political news eclipses coverage of economic challenges” and “Young journalists: opportunities and challenges”.

76. From 8 November to 9 December, the Department organized its annual Shireen Abu Akleh Training Programme for Palestinian Broadcasters and Journalists in New York and Washington, D.C. Six Palestinian journalists received hands-on training on media-related topics. In addition, the journalists met with United Nations officials, representatives from Al Jazeera, the European Broadcasting Union and the Middle East Institute, the Chair of the Committee and the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations.

77. The Department continued to update the web page of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People in the six official languages, and it provided technical support for the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine.

78. The multimedia, multilingual news and social media teams of the Department provided coverage for related activities and events.³⁶

79. The Meetings Coverage Section issued 80 press releases, in English and French, related to the question of Palestine and the Middle East peace process, including press releases concerning statements and messages by the Secretary-General, the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Committee.

80. UN News generated almost 400 related stories and features in the six official languages, as well as in Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese. For example, the Arabic unit of UN News produced a feature entitled “Looking into the eyes of the occupation”³⁷ on the public hearings held by the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel.

81. UN Video coverage included 28 news video packages on the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, the remarks made by the President of the State of Palestine during the general debate of the General Assembly and stories about internally displaced persons and refugees. Videos were aired by broadcasters from over 50 countries, including the Arabic service of the British Broadcasting Corporation, i24 News and the Arabic and English services of France 24.

82. The Department’s flagship United Nations social media accounts, with 67.5 million followers, in all six official languages, as well as Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese, continued to provide updated information on the question of Palestine and promote events organized by the Committee. The promotional efforts drove traffic to the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the Committee's social media accounts. The information and content were also made available publicly on the Trello board dedicated to the question of Palestine that is maintained by the Department.³⁸

83. The Visitors' Service Section continued to raise awareness through the permanent exhibit "The United Nations and the question of Palestine", which is part of the United Nations guided tour route. Over 150,000 visitors saw the exhibit during the reporting period. The Exhibits Unit, in connection with the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, facilitated the launch of the virtual exhibit "Palestine through its people: portraits of Palestinians", which has been viewed approximately 3,000 times (see para. 53).

84. The Office of the Envoy of the Secretary-General on Youth collaborated with UNRWA to ensure that a young Palestinian innovator, Yassir Al Ostath, was able to participate in the session entitled "Working with and for youth in accelerating COVID-19 recovery and achieving the 2030 Agenda" at the Economic and Social Council youth forum for 2023, which was held from 25 to 27 April.

85. United Nations information centres, including in Ankara, Canberra, Lusaka, Manama, Moscow, Nairobi and Rabat, marked the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People by organizing a wide range of commemorative events in collaboration with government officials and local embassies.

86. The United Nations information centre in Cairo provided media support for the launch of the UNCTAD report on Palestine, including by organizing a press conference at its premises in September 2022.

87. The United Nations Regional Information Centre for Western Europe provided media support to the UNRWA Representative Office in Europe during the visit of the Commissioner-General to the Holy See and Italy in May 2023.

88. The Department moderated the observance of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nakbah that was held in the Hall of the General Assembly, with news and social media teams from the Department covering the commemoration and related events on its multimedia platforms. On 24 May, the United Nations information centre in Lusaka, with support from the Resident Coordinator Office in Mozambique, organized a watch party for the commemorative event. Attendees included, inter alia, government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and young persons from six universities. The event featured a virtual exhibit, highlights from the event held at Headquarters and a video entitled "Sands of sorrow". From 27 to 31 May, the United Nations information centre in Jakarta, in cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the National Library of Indonesia, held an exhibit on the occasion of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nakbah to educate visitors about the historical context of the question of Palestine and the Nakbah and its consequences.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

89. In developing its recommendations set out below, the Committee has taken into account the deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, briefings received, outreach, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations and regional organizations.

A. Action by the Committee in response to the conflict and human rights violations

90. The Committee condemns the recurring human rights violations committed by Israel, the occupying Power, against the Palestinian civilian population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as amply documented by international organizations, including the United Nations and its human rights mechanisms, and human rights organizations, including from Israel. It calls for an immediate end to the excessive use of lethal force by Israeli forces and armed settlers against Palestinian civilians, including children, which has resulted in an unprecedented number of killings and injuries. The Committee reiterates that the indiscriminate launching of rockets towards Israeli population centres is prohibited by international humanitarian law and must stop immediately.

91. The Committee condemns the punitive measures imposed by the Government of Israel to perpetuate the occupation and weaken the Palestinian Authority and repress the Palestinian people. It deplores the significant increase in violence and terror against Palestinians by armed Israeli settlers. The Committee calls on Israel to immediately reverse the measures against the Palestinian Authority, disarm Israeli settlers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and provide protection to Palestinian civilians as called for in Security Council resolution 904 (1994) and General Assembly resolution ES-10/20 and in line with its obligations under international humanitarian law.

92. The Committee calls on Israeli government officials to halt their provocations, rhetoric and incitement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to end acquiescence to or support for, including by the Israeli army, settlers attacks on Palestinians and destruction of Palestinian homes and livelihoods. It further appeals to political, religious and community leaders to reject hate speech and violence and to speak up against those who try to inflame the situation.

93. The Committee strongly recommends that the United Nations and the international community take additional measure to ensure accountability, including arrest warrants from the International Criminal Court, because Israel has ignored its responsibility to investigate and prosecute acts committed by its agents or third parties that involve grave breaches of international humanitarian law and gross violations of the human rights of Palestinians.

94. The Committee calls on Israel to uphold its obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law and calls for full respect for the status quo at the holy sites in Jerusalem, including the historic and legal status quo at the Aqsa Mosque compound, recognizing the special role of the Jordan. The Committee decries the harassment of Muslim worshippers and the increasing number of attacks against Christians and their religious symbols in Jerusalem, and it urges Israel to ensure that Muslims and Christians can peacefully practice their respective religions without fear of violence. The Committee also calls for special measures to prevent future provocations during Muslim and Christian religious observances.

95. The Committee underscores the seriousness of the findings in the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict (A/76/871-S/2022/493) in relation to the situation of Palestinian children and calls for measures to protect children and prevent grave violation against them. The Committee urges the Israeli occupation forces and Palestinian armed groups to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law and ensure that the principles of distinction, proportionality and precaution are upheld during any military operation.

96. In the light of the continuation and escalation by Israel of violence and disproportionate use of military force, including air strikes and ground operations targeting densely populated civilian areas, the Committee urges the Secretary-General and the relevant human rights mechanisms, including the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, to take action consistent with their mandates and findings and consider potential listings of parties involved in violations against civilians, including women and children, as a deterrent measure, in order to protect civilian lives.

B. Action by the Committee in response to annexation and settlement activities

97. The Committee is gravely concerned at the stated objective of the Government of Israel to dramatically increase the number of settlers in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, openly referring to these territories as the “land of Israel”, contrary to international law, countless United Nations resolutions and the international consensus on the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders. The Committee supports the demands made by the Security Council, the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly for the cessation of all such illegal activities, including expropriation of and encroachment on Palestinian land and demolition of Palestinian homes and properties.

98. The Committee reiterates that the annexation of any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, is illegal. It calls on the Israeli authorities to cease all actions aimed at changing the demographic composition, status and character of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and to abide scrupulously by its international legal obligations. Such illegal colonization measures undermine the prospect of achieving a two-State solution by systematically eroding a contiguous, independent, viable and sovereign Palestinian State, based on the pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem serving as the capital of Palestine, in accordance with international law, the pertinent United Nations resolutions, including, inter alia, Security Council resolution 2334 (2016) and General Assembly resolution 77/26, as well as the Madrid principles and the Arab Peace Initiative.

99. The Committee urges the Government of Israel to refrain from seizing Palestinian land, stop carrying out demolitions, including of donor-funded structures, and end all forced evictions and forcible displacement of Palestinians, in particular in Area C of the West Bank and East Jerusalem. The recent announcement by the occupying Power of a dramatic increase in the construction of settlement units, its attempts to retroactively “legalize” illegal outposts and its decision to allow settlers into previously vacated settlements to resume settlement activities are particularly concerning and must be halted.

C. Action with the Secretary-General, the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council

100. The Committee concurs with the stance of the Secretary-General on the question of Palestine, which is based on international law and numerous United Nations resolutions, and it urges him to continue leveraging his good offices to pursue a just resolution to the question of Palestine.

101. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace affirmed in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution 77/25, including by ensuring that Member States and intergovernmental organizations take tangible measures to implement their obligations under these resolutions, the foremost of which is to distinguish between Israel and the territories that have remained under its occupation since 1967, as well as the obligation not to aid, assist or recognize as legitimate any illegal measures taken by the occupying Power in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

102. The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit his reports to the Council on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\) in written format and, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the resolution, to include references to the implementation of the provision by Member States. Pursuant to paragraph 11 of the resolution, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions, including the use of sanctions on States and private entities violating Council resolutions.

103. The Committee encourages the Security Council and the Middle East Quartet to actively pursue opportunities to revitalize the peace process and to seek multilateral mechanisms to revive the much-needed dialogue between Palestine and Israel, as that is essential for promoting a just solution to the conflict.

104. The Committee concurs with the findings of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel that discrimination against Palestinians and the continued occupation of Palestinian territory are the leading causes of the region's ongoing tensions, instability and conflict. The Committee raises deep concern regarding the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including land seizures, unlawful killings, forced displacement, movement restrictions and denial of the human rights of Palestinians. Those actions, which are akin to apartheid under international law, demand urgent scrutiny and action to safeguard human rights.

105. The Committee notes that any initiative aimed at achieving a just solution to the question of Palestine must, first and foremost, take into account the legitimate rights and aspirations of the Palestinian people, engage the Palestinian leadership and be based on the two-State solution, in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

106. The Committee appreciates the decision by the General Assembly to implement the recommendation made in the report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel (A/77/328) to urgently request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the legal consequences of, inter alia, the continued refusal on the part of Israel to end its occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. In addition, the Committee calls on the Security Council to consider further action, as requested under paragraph 92 (b) of the report, to require Israel to bring its permanent occupation to an end.

107. The Committee insists that the Israeli air, land and sea blockade of Gaza, as well as all restrictions imposed by the occupying Power, be lifted in accordance with Security Council resolution 1860 (2009), and it urges the international community to address the plight of the Palestinian people with a human-rights-based approach, rather than a humanitarian one.

D. Advocacy and outreach with the international community and civil society

108. The Committee calls upon regional organizations, in particular LAS, the European Union, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and OIC to take a politically active role in stopping the annexation and facilitating an end to the occupation and a just solution to the question of Palestine. Any comprehensive resolution will require a regional approach, such as the approach set out in the Arab Peace Initiative.

109. The Committee fully supports the ongoing efforts by Algeria, Egypt and other Member States, as well as the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, to promote calm and a just and lasting peace to the question of Palestine. The Committee commends the Government of Algeria for its efforts in promoting Palestinian unity and welcomes the Algiers Declaration of 13 October 2022 as a crucial step towards intra-Palestinian reconciliation and the establishment of a unified Palestinian leadership. In addition, the Committee encourages the organization of elections to strengthen democracy and democratic institutions in the State of Palestine and the Palestinian administration.

110. The Committee further welcomes the recommendations made in the report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel, which was presented to the Human Rights Council on 8 June. The Committee urges Member States to carefully review the use by Israel of anti-terror legislation to designate Palestinian civil society organizations as terrorist organizations and restrict their funding, with a view to delegitimizing and isolating them, undermining their activities and ending international funding and support for them.

E. Action by Member States and regional organizations

111. The Committee calls on Member States and regional organizations to put pressure upon Israel, the occupying Power, to fulfil its responsibilities to safeguard Palestinian civilians under international law and to engage in a meaningful process of negotiations leading to the establishment of an independent and viable State of Palestine, with East Jerusalem as its capital, living in peace and security within internationally recognized borders.

112. The Committee deems unilateral decisions taken by Member States to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of embassies from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as null and void, as those actions violate Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 476 (1980), 478 (1980) and 2334 (2016). The Committee welcomes decisions taken by Member States to rescind their recognition of West Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and rejoin the international consensus in that regard, and it calls on other Member States to rescind similar decisions.

113. The Committee welcomes the update issued on 30 June by OHCHR to the database of business enterprises involved in certain activities relating to settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

114. The Committee notes the alarming financial shortfall facing UNRWA and reiterates the call by the Secretary-General for Member States to provide the Agency with predictable, sustained and sufficient funding to assist Palestine refugees. The Committee notes that a further decline in the Agency's financial situation and interruption of its indispensable operations could have significant humanitarian, political and security consequences for the region and beyond.

115. The Committee urges Member States to officially recognize the State of Palestine in order to promote the two-State solution. The Committee calls on Member States to support the fiscal stability of the Palestinian Government and strengthen Palestinian institutions, in order to improve the economic and social conditions of the population in the State of Palestine. The Committee notes that efforts by the parties and the international community to stabilize and improve conditions on the ground should be linked to a credible political framework to resolve the conflict justly and comprehensively.

116. The Committee will continue to encourage all supporters of the two-State solution to assist with the resumption of meaningful multilateral negotiations towards the achievement of a peaceful settlement on the basis of the long-standing international parameters for a just solution. The Committee vows to continuing advocating for initiatives in support of that goal, including holding an international peace conference leading to a two-State solution.

F. Action by the Secretariat and other United Nations entities

117. The Committee conveys its gratitude to the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs for its support for the Committee's work. It requests the Division to continue to provide substantive and secretariat support for all aspects of its mandate. The Committee encourages the Division to continue to disseminate information on the question of Palestine by broadening its outreach and promoting multilingualism on the Committee's website and social media platforms. It also requests the Division to continue to implement projects, including capacity-building for officials of the State of Palestine, that promote inclusivity and gender balance and encourage South-South and triangular cooperation between countries and regional and subregional organizations.

118. The Committee requests the continuation of the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications, which has made an important contribution to informing the media and the public.

Question of Palestine

Economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people, in accordance with Assembly resolution 69/20.

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people

Summary

Throughout history, colonization and occupations have always had economic dimensions. This is also the case in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, where the occupation imposes heavy economic costs on the Palestinian people and their economy. The estimation of these costs is an essential first step for reversing the damage caused by the occupation, achieving the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and forging a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. However, not all losses inflicted by the occupation can be evaluated in monetary terms, and no estimation of the cost of the occupation should be used for advocating monetary compensation as a substitute for ending the occupation. In the previous century, there were several international legal precedents where economic costs had been taken into account as key elements for negotiating durable solutions to intractable conflicts. Previous studies have suggested that the Palestinian economy could be twice its current size, had the occupation not occurred. There is a need to establish within the United Nations system a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework for estimating the economic costs of the occupation and to report on the results to the General Assembly, not only to fulfil the request contained in resolution 69/20, but also to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

* Any designations employed and the presentation of the material in the present document do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of the Secretariat of the United Nations concerning the legal status of any country, territory, city or area, or of its authorities, or concerning the delineation of its frontiers or boundaries. In accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, references to the Occupied Palestinian Territory or territories pertain to the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Use of the term "Palestine" refers to the Palestine Liberation Organization, which established the Palestinian National Authority. References to the "State of Palestine" are consistent with the decision of the General Assembly, in its resolution 67/19.

I. Objective

1. Almost half a century of Israeli occupation of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem (Occupied Palestinian Territory), has established and continues to reinforce an asymmetrical power relationship between Israel and Palestine. On the one hand, the Palestinian people are denied access to their own land, water and natural resources, while their property and assets are being confiscated or destroyed. On the other hand, Israeli settlements continue to expand and new ones are built, the settler population continues to grow and the detrimental consequences of the occupation are now engrained in the daily lives of the Palestinian population under occupation. Forty-eight years of policies and measures, imposed by the occupying authority, have set the Palestinian economy on a debilitating path of dependence and inflicted on the Palestinian people enormous direct and indirect costs.

2. On 25 November 2014, the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/20. In paragraph 9 of the resolution, the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to report to the Assembly on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. On 24 November 2015, the Assembly, in paragraph 9 of its resolution 70/12, noted with appreciation the efforts of UNCTAD to compile the report and called for the exertion of all efforts for the provision of necessary resources to expedite the completion of the report.

3. From the outset, it must be stated that any estimation of the economic costs of the occupation is not to be, and should not be, considered a substitute for ending it. Moreover, not all occupation-related damages can be measured in monetary terms. No monetary value can be attached to the agony of the loss and destruction of life, livelihood, liberty, community, shelter, culture and homeland. It must be made clear that the assessment of the economic costs of the occupation is, at best, a partial measure of the losses and costs incurred owing to the occupation and an essential first step towards reversing its damaging impact, achieving the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and ultimately ending the occupation.

4. Determining the economic costs of the occupation is a dynamic process that changes and evolves with the intensity of actions taken by the occupying authority. No single document is capable of reporting comprehensively on the historical, ongoing and future economic costs of the occupation. Therefore, the objective of the present report is to make the case for establishing within the United Nations system a sustainable and comprehensive framework to systematically, rigorously and periodically report to the General Assembly on the economic costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people, until the cessation of the occupation. Accordingly, the report highlights historical precedents for similar situations, reviews some of the previous work done in this area, elaborates on the degree of complexity and scope of the proposed framework and reporting structure, reflects on how the assessment could be accomplished and evaluates the resources required for UNCTAD to establish the framework and report to the Assembly.

II. From a thriving economy to a deformed economic structure

5. The economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory was a viable and thriving one before the occupation in June 1967. It generated significant production and income that sustained a growing population of 1 million people and generated a gross domestic product (GDP) per capita of about $1,349 in 2004 prices,¹ which was sufficient for it to be considered a lower-middle-income economy at that time. Tragically, it has become a land on the verge of economic and humanitarian collapse.

6. In 2014, the GDP growth rate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory turned negative, for the first time since 2006. The Gaza Strip is becoming increasingly unliveable and could become totally unliveable by 2020 (see TD/B/62/3). According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, the unemployment rate in Gaza was 45 per cent in 2014, with over 63 per cent of Gaza's young people unemployed, which is the highest rate in the world. Female unemployment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was around 40 per cent and more than 60 per cent in Gaza. Nearly 40 per cent of Palestinians live below the poverty line. Clean water is a rarity, with at least 90 per cent of Gaza's water supply unfit for human consumption. Electricity in Gaza is also sporadic and unreliable, available only four to six hours a day, and a properly functioning sewage treatment system no longer exists.²

A. Some perspective on the economics of occupation

7. Throughout history, colonization and military occupations have consistently had economic objectives, which take various shapes and forms but have typically involved the exploitation and the impoverishment of the occupied (see A/70/35, annex). In its less severe form, the occupier changes the economic balance in the occupied country in its favour and in favour of the settler population. In its most severe form, the economic dimension entails the appropriation of the resources of the occupied people, displacing, replacing, impoverishing and marginalizing them.

8. The economic dimension of occupation could be described as acts and measures taken by the occupier to appropriate to itself the assets, natural resources and economic benefits that rightfully belong to the colonized people and country and undermine the capacity of the occupied people to access and use their resources, move freely within their homeland and conduct normal trade, economic and social transactions with neighbours and traditional trading partners.

9. Such measures deprive the people under occupation of not only their freedom, land and resources, but also their internationally recognized human right to development and the ability to produce, which thus forces them to consume products mainly produced by the occupier. Denying the current generation of occupied people their right to development also denies future generations their rights to work, education, safe water and food security, as well as other basic economic and human rights.

² See S. Roy, "The Gaza Strip's last safety net is in danger", The Nation, 6 August 2015.

10. In the Palestinian case, since the onset of the occupation in June 1967, Israel assumed total control of the Occupied Palestinian Territory's economy until the establishment of the Palestinian National Authority in 1994. However, the Palestinian people have never enjoyed full, sovereign control over their economy and society, for many reasons. The principal factors are set out in the following paragraphs.

11. The decisive factor is that the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, remain under occupation, under the following conditions: tight restrictions on the movement of people and goods, the systematic erosion and destruction of the productive base, loss of land, water and other natural resources, a fragmented domestic market and separation from neighbouring and international markets, the tight blockade on Gaza since 2007, the expansion of Israeli settlements, the construction of the separation barrier and the establishment of the closure policy in the West Bank and the isolation of East Jerusalem from the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

12. The second factor is the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations, which was intended to define the Palestinian economic policy framework and space during the five-year interim period following the establishment of the Palestinian National Authority in 1994. Two decades on, and to date, the Protocol continues to restrict the policy space available to Palestinian policymakers and has practically reinforced a quasi-customs union that ensures Palestinian economic dependence on Israel.

B. Deformed economic structure with low productivity

13. The relationship between the Israeli economy and that of the Occupied Palestinian Territory remains that of two dissimilar and unequal economies, whereby the large, dominant economy practices policies that keep the small economy weak and dependent. The Palestinian labour market best epitomizes the dynamics of the relationship. Immediately following the 1967 occupation, low-skill employment of Palestinians in Israel became the most important factor in the relationship between the two economies. In addition, the income from the export of Palestinian labour to Israel, which could have been channelled into productive investment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, became instead a major source of the financing of imports from Israel, deepening the dependence of the Occupied Palestinian Territory on Israel and solidifying the system of benefits to the occupier from the captive Palestinian economy.

14. The impact of the labour flows had two consequences. On the supply side, they induced higher wages in the domestic economy that did not arise from any increase in domestic productivity. That increased the cost of production, reduced the profitability of local production and precipitated a contraction in domestic agricultural and industrial production. On the demand side, the increase in income from the earnings of workers in Israel increased aggregate demand without an increase in production. That increase in demand for tradable goods was met by an increase in imports, and the increase in demand for non-tradable goods was met by an increase in prices.

15. This "Dutch disease" type of change in relative prices ultimately contributed to a contraction in the tradable goods sectors (agriculture and industry) and stimulated the non-tradable sectors (construction and services). It set in motion a continuous process of de-agriculturalization and de-industrialization,³ thus depriving the Palestinian people of their ability to produce and, in the process, cultivating a dependence on the Israeli economy and donor aid. Figure 1 shows the structural deformation of the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory over the past four decades. During the period 1975-2014, the contribution of the tradable goods sector to GDP dropped by half, from 37 to 18 per cent, while its contribution to employment decreased from 47 to 23 per cent.

16. Another explanation for the ongoing de-agriculturalization and de-industrialization processes in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is those sectors' particular vulnerability to the confiscation of Palestinian land and natural resources and the excessive Israeli restrictions on the movement of Palestinian goods and labour. Since the onset of the occupation in 1967, the Palestinian people have lost access to more than 60 per cent of West Bank land and two thirds of its grazing land. In Gaza, half of the cultivable area and 85 per cent of fishery resources are inaccessible to Palestinian producers. Furthermore, Israel has been extracting water above the level determined by article 40 of appendix 1 to annex III to the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip of 28 September 1995 by confiscating 82 per cent of Palestinian groundwater for use inside its borders or its settlements, while the Palestinians are left with no choice but to import from Israel over 50 per cent of the water needed for consumption.⁴ The World Bank has observed that only 35 per cent of irrigable Palestinian land is actually irrigated, which costs the economy 110,000 jobs and 10 per cent of GDP.⁵

Neary, "Booming sector and de-industrialization in a small open economy", Economic Journal, vol. 92, pp. 825-848, December 1982, and UNCTAD, "Rebuilding the Palestinian tradable goods sector: towards economic recovery and State formation", document UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2010/1.

17. In the industrial sector, the occupation and the uncertainty it breeds stifles investment and condemns the Palestinian private sector to small-scale operations with low capital intensity and low efficiency. The World Bank indicated that micro and small enterprises dominate the Palestinian business scene, with 90 per cent of firms employing less than 20 workers.⁶ The small size of firms is correlated with low capital intensity and low labour productivity, with labour productivity in small firms at $10,000, which is only one third of that of large firms. According to the International Monetary Fund, during the period 1994-2010, the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory experienced a technological regression, with a 0.5 per cent annual decline in total factor productivity. Had the trend of growth of the previous period continued, real GDP per capita in the Occupied Palestinian Territory would have been 88 per cent higher than its level in 2010. In the period 2013-2015, the industrial sector witnessed further deterioration, as indicated by a 9 per cent drop in the industrial production index of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics.⁷

18. According to data released by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, in the past two decades, most of the Palestinian economic indicators have deteriorated, with serious ramifications for the welfare of the Palestinian people. Table 1 shows that, during the period 1995-2014, the population grew by 3.6 per cent annually, while real GDP per capita grew by only 1 per cent. Average productivity failed to grow, and unemployment increased by 9 percentage points, to 27 per cent. The trade deficit, at 40 per cent of GDP, continued to be extremely high, while economic dependence on Israel increased, as reflected in Israel's greater share in the Palestinian trade deficit, which increased from 49 to 58 per cent during that period. Efforts by the Government of Palestine to reduce expenditure and undertake serious fiscal reforms notwithstanding, the budget deficit has not improved in the past 20 years. Reliance on donor support continues to be heavy, as reflected by the high level of current transfers, which today hover around 10 per cent of GDP.

III. Conceptual basis for the economic costs of occupation

19. As early as the 1940s, contributions were made in the academic literature in the field of economics with regard to the valuation of the cost of societal and individual losses resulting from external injuries.⁸ Those contributions pivot around the compensation principle, which is based on the understanding that, if a change in a situation would result in some persons being better off and others worse off, those who gain could compensate those who lose in such a way that, on balance, everyone would be better off. This conception of economic loss of injuries (compensation) also assumes that societal welfare losses are the sum of individual losses owing to the loss of private goods, in addition to the societal losses of public goods (those goods of which one individual's consumption does not diminish their availability to other members of society).

20. Economic loss owing to, or in compensation for, external injuries is synonymous with indemnification in the legal meaning of the undoing of damage done and losses suffered. Total indemnification means, in essence, a return to the situation that existed before the loss was incurred. If it is done by way of restitution, the prior situation is restored in specie. If it is done wholly or partially by way of compensation, the consequences of the damage are liquidated, although the prior situation is not restored in the true sense of the word.⁹

21. In economic theory, there are three approaches for ascertaining the cost for those who suffer damages and losses as a consequence of actions by other parties. The first approach, the income approach, is widely used, in particular by courts around the world, to measure the losses of injured parties solely on the basis of the income streams that would have prevailed in the absence of the injury as compared with the existing streams. The second, the asset approach, builds on the income approach by adding the missed opportunities to the income streams lost owing to the injury. The third, the utility approach, is more general because it allows for the inclusion of a wider range of losses and admits individual variations in responses to and consequences of injuries.

22. In general, a more comprehensive approach anchored in the asset and utility approaches would more aptly account for the range of losses than would the income approach. However, the exact approach and the degree to which the asset and utility approaches are combined should depend on the type and specific characteristics of loss and the economic sector in which the loss occurred.

IV. Legal framework: historical precedents

23. The United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, which was established by the President of the Human Rights Council on 3 April 2009, concluded in its report to the General Assembly (A/HRC/12/48) that Israel's continuing occupation emerged as the fundamental factor underlying violations of international law and undermining prospects for development and peace.

24. In its note on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people, contained in the annex to the Report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (A/70/35), UNCTAD detailed some relevant precedents where economic costs had been taken into account as key elements for negotiating durable solutions to complex and intractable conflicts. The precedents included:

(a) Decision by the Permanent Court of International Justice of 1928 in the landmark case concerning the factory at Chorzów;¹⁰

⁹ See N. Robinson, Indemnification and Reparations: Jewish Aspects (New York, International Press, 1944).

¹⁰ Case concerning the Factory at Chorzów (Claim for Indemnity) (Merits) (Germany v. Poland), Publications of the Permanent Court of International Justice, Collection of Judgments, Series A, No. 17, case No. 13

(b) General Assembly resolution 194 (III) on the refugee question and compensation;

(c) Pinheiro Principles on the refugees and reparation payments in the post-Cold War era;¹¹

(d) Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.¹²

V. Some earlier estimates of the economic costs of the occupation

25. It follows from the previous discussion that there are costs borne by the people under occupation and costs related to the damage caused by the actions of the occupying authority (see A/AC.25/W.81/Rev.2, annexes I and II, and General Assembly resolution 194 (III)). The structural deformation of the economy, discussed in section II above, is just one element of those costs for the Palestinian people. A comprehensive assessment of the economic costs of the occupation requires the undertaking of a complicated, detailed and integrated process capable of estimating the direct and indirect economic costs in all economic sectors. To date, however, no systematic assessment or comprehensive records have been made of the economic costs and consequences of Israeli policies, actions and measures in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Thus far, all efforts made to quantify the economic costs of the occupation have been done on ad hoc basis, mostly by UNCTAD. The literature on the subject includes the case studies described in the following paragraphs.

26. In its report on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people: developments in the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory (TD/B/62/3), UNCTAD indicated that, in 2014, 9,333 productive trees were destroyed or vandalized in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, whereas, in January 2015 alone, another 5,600 trees were vandalized. Furthermore, the direct damages of the three Israeli military operations in Gaza, in the period between 2008 and 2014, were at least 3 times the amount of Gaza's GDP. The total cost of destruction is much higher when taking into account the indirect costs that arise from the loss of human capital and the stream of future incomes from destroyed or damaged productive assets.

27. In its study on Palestinian fiscal revenue leakage to Israel under the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations,¹³ UNCTAD estimated Palestinian revenue leakage from taxes on imports and the fiscal loss incurred by smuggling goods from Israel into the Occupied Palestinian Territory at $305 million annually, about 3.2 per cent of GDP or 17 per cent of total Palestinian public revenue in 2010-2011. If captured, the leaked revenue could expand the Palestinian fiscal policy space and thereby increase annual GDP by about 4 per cent and generate about 10,000 additional jobs per year. Moreover, the study calls for further research to estimate fiscal losses from other sources, including:

(a) Leakage of revenue from taxes levied by Israel on the incomes of Palestinians working in Israel and settlements. Under the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations, Israel is required to transfer social security, and other, tax revenue to the Government of Palestine;

(b) Seigniorage revenue loss from using the Israeli currency in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, estimated to be between 0.3-4.2 per cent of gross national income;

(c) Revenue loss from under-pricing imported goods in invoices, owing to the lack of Palestinian control and oversight over borders and the lack of access to proper trade data;

(d) Revenue loss related to the lack of control over land and natural resources;

(e) Financial resources loss related to goods and services imported through the Palestinian public sector, such as petroleum, energy and water;

(f) Loss of customs revenue as a result of not applying the World Trade Organization rules of origin on goods with less than 40 per cent of Israeli content;

(g) Fiscal loss from the smaller tax base caused by the decimation of the productive base and the loss of natural resources to the occupation.

28. In its report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, the World Bank¹⁴ followed the UNCTAD study and its account of losses by estimating other sources of Palestinian revenue losses. The World Bank suggested a loss of $285 million (2.2 percent of GDP in 2014) from seven sources in a single year. The overlap between the World Bank and UNCTAD estimates, however, is about $55 million.¹⁵ After excluding overlapping items, the sum of those estimates suggests an annual loss of 5 per cent of GDP ($640 million in 2015). The World Bank report further indicated that Israel also retained a stock of $668 million of un-transferred Palestinian revenues (5.3 per cent of GDP). This is a cumulative, nominal figure, however, which does not take into account the impact of inflation and interest earnings over time.

¹⁴ World Bank, "Economic monitoring report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee", 19 April 2016.

29. UNCTAD has been assessing different aspects of the economic and employment costs incurred by the Palestinians on account of the Israeli occupation. It is estimated that:

(a) From 2000-2005, cumulative GDP loss was $8.4 billion (real 1994 dollars), twice the size of the Palestinian economy;

(b) By 2005, at least one third of the pre-2000 physical capital of the Occupied Palestinian Territory had been lost;

(c) Losses caused by the Israeli military campaign in Gaza from December 2008 to January 2009 were half the size of the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory ($4 billion, real 2004 dollars);

(d) More than 2.5 million productive trees, including 800,000 olive trees, have been uprooted since 1967;

(e) Only 35 per cent of the potentially irrigable land in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is actually irrigated. This costs the economy 110,000 jobs per year and 10 per cent of GDP;

(f) At least 10 per cent of the most fertile land of the West Bank has been lost to the construction of the separation barrier;

(g) The Government of Palestine and Palestinian farmers are prohibited from maintaining, upgrading or constructing water wells;

(h) Fishing off the coast of Gaza is restricted to a range of 3 to 6 nautical miles, instead of the 20 miles stipulated in article XI of annex I to the Agreement on the Gaza Strip and the Jericho Area of 4 May 1994.

30. UNCTAD has assessed the cost of the shrunken economic policy space owing to the occupation and the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations.¹⁶ The study used the UNCTAD econometric model of the Palestinian economy to simulate the prospects of the economy under various policy options. It assessed the impact of an integrated policy alternative that includes features of expanded fiscal, exchange rate, trade and labour policies. The study showed that if a sovereign State of Palestine were empowered with the relevant policy instruments, annual GDP could increase by 24 per cent and unemployment could drop by 19 per cent (see figs. 2 and 3).

31. In its study, the World Bank provided partial estimates of the costs of the occupation in Area C (61 per cent of the West Bank) in the following sectors: agriculture, Dead Sea minerals exploitation, stone mining and quarrying, construction, tourism, telecommunications and cosmetics.¹⁷ The study estimated the costs of the occupation in Area C at 23 per cent of GDP ($2.9 billion in 2015) in direct costs, in addition to 12 per cent of GDP ($1.5 billion in 2015) in indirect costs, for a total cost of 35 per cent of GDP. Furthermore, the fiscal cost of the occupation in Area C was estimated at $800 million in lost revenue, equivalent to 50 per cent of the Palestinian fiscal deficit. The study also contended that Palestinian employment could rise by 35 per cent if the occupation of Area C were ended.

32. Another recent study by the World Bank, on the Palestinian telecommunications sector, concluded that the total revenue loss for the Palestinian mobile telephone sector during the period 2013-2015 was in the range of $436 to $1,150 million, including the Palestinian fiscal loss of $70 to $184 million.¹⁸ The direct cost was in the range of 1 per cent of annual GDP.

33. In its resolution ES-10/17 of 24 January 2007, the General Assembly established the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The main focus of the Register of Damage is on the damage emanating from the construction of the separation barrier in the West Bank, and it does not cover any other measure taken by the occupying Power. Its mandate is to serve only as a record of the damage caused to all natural and legal persons concerned as a result of the construction of the separation barrier by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem. As at February 2016, the Register of Damage had completed the claim of damages in seven of nine affected Palestinian governorates. A total of 52,870 claim forms and over 300,000 supporting documents were collected in 233 Palestinian communities, with a population of 946,285. Of the total number of collected claims, 20,459 have been processed and reviewed by the Board of the Office of the Register of Damage for inclusion in the Register of Damage. The vast majority of the claims were categorized as agricultural losses.

34. The Ministry of National Economy of the State of Palestine and the Applied Research Institute — Jerusalem have estimated the cost of the occupation in 2010 at $6.9 billion or 85 per cent of GDP.¹⁹ This cost does not include the impact of the Israeli security measures but focuses mainly on the impact of the tight restrictions imposed on the Palestinian people and their lack of ownership and access to their own natural resources, most of which are exploited by Israel. The estimated cost took into account the impact of the following factors: the blockade on Gaza, restrictions on water and natural resources (including natural gas fields), mobility and other restrictions on domestic and international trade and people, loss of Dead Sea tourism, uprooted trees and public utility costs.

35. The Applied Research Institute — Jerusalem assessed the direct cost and forgone revenue from the restrictions imposed by Israel on the mobility of people and goods in the West Bank, as well as the restrictions on access to, and the development of, the natural gas fields, fishery, irrigation water and agricultural sectors.²⁰ The assessment also calculated the direct cost of the destruction of Palestinian infrastructure, house demolitions in the West Bank and the military operation in Gaza in 2014. The study estimated these specific direct costs at 74 per cent of GDP ($9.95 billion). However, the study covered only the direct cost of some, not all, of the constraints imposed by the occupation and therefore significantly underestimated the total direct and indirect costs.

36. The study conducted by Walid Mustafa focused on the Israeli restrictions on Palestinian activities in order to take advantage of natural resources in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including building stone, sand in the Gaza Strip, phosphate and mineral resources in the Dead Sea, petroleum and natural gas.²¹ The Israeli expropriation of building stone in Area C was estimated at about $900 million annually (0.7 per cent of 2015 GDP). The study maintained that Israel had seized Gaza's sea basin and had denied Palestinians the right to explore for and develop oil and gas resources in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

37. Following General Assembly resolution 194 (III), in which the Assembly stipulated refugees' right to return and compensation, Atif A. Kubursi conducted a study on Palestinian losses in 1948 and elaborated on the rights of refugees in terms of restitution of property and compensation for lost opportunity from property and human capital losses.²² The study indicated that, from 1948 to 2000, the cumulative material and human capital losses suffered by Palestinian refugees stood at $173 billion and $275 billion, respectively, in 2000 prices.

VI. Typology of losses and methodology

A. Concept of losses and their typology

38. As indicated in section I above, not all of the occupation-related costs can be measured in monetary terms, and any assessment of the economic costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people is, at best, a partial measurement of the losses and costs incurred since the onset of the occupation. However, the first step towards evaluating the economic costs of the occupation that can be measured monetarily is to identify their type.

39. The typology of the costs incurred by the Palestinian people under the occupation that follow from the “de-development” policies and measures imposed by the occupying authority on the Palestinian economy calls for identifying, monitoring and measuring such losses in a systematic and periodic manner. This includes, but is not restricted to, the following types of losses:

- (a) Physical;
- (b) Water and other natural resources;
- (c) Human capital;
- (d) Opportunity and economic;
- (e) Microeconomic, macroeconomic and fiscal;
- (f) Community and neighbourhood;
- (g) Psychosocial.

40. The identification and quantification of each of those losses is the critical core of the methodology of metering the economic costs of the occupation. For each type of loss, the conceptual question is to determine: (a) the actions taken by the occupying Power that could be considered harmful to the Palestinian economy and people; and (b) the appropriate monetary value of the cost that could be assigned to each action taken by the occupying Power. Arriving at a tenable answer is necessarily complicated and multidimensional, requiring expertise in economics, law, history and politics.

41. Preliminary assessment suggests that the methodologies for evaluating the economic costs of the occupation should depend on the specificity of the type of loss under consideration and the economic sector in which it occurred. Therefore, to avoid double counting and link each type of loss to the economic base from which it arises, each type of loss would be assessed by sector and type of asset. Any additional costs arising from the utility approach could be added to the list without duplication. The best way to portray the essence of this approach is through the matrix format shown in table 2.

42. Upon determining the type of losses, questions arise with regard to: (a) how these losses can be measured and what is the appropriate methodology required to do so; (b) how these losses span across the different sectors of the economy; and (c) the extent to which the overlapping types of losses and classification of losses by sector influence the methodology of quantifying these costs of the occupation.

B. Methodology, periodicity and data

43. A comprehensive evaluation of the economic costs of the occupation requires detailed and interrelated methodologies capable of estimating the direct and indirect economic costs of all types of losses in all sectors of the economy. The overall methodology should ensure consistency of evaluation, on the basis of best practices and sound theories, and should be:

(a) Concise, so that it may be treated as a stand-alone document. It should be comprehensible, in particular to those involved in policymaking and negotiation;

(b) Flexible. The methodology must be kept under regular review and should be amended as and when necessary;

(c) Consistent, rather than subtle and arbitrary. The methodology should allow easy processing, consistency and accuracy of the valuation work by relying on generally accepted valuation principles and international valuation standards;

(d) Able to be audited and verified. The methodology should rely, as much as possible, on reliable historical evidence from past assessments in order to minimize areas of subjective judgment applied in the valuation and thus take into account the difficulty of obtaining new evidence and records.

44. Although there are a number of specific methodologies that could be applied to the estimation of the economic costs of the occupation, they could be grouped into two general approaches, a macro (or top-down) approach and an accounting (or bottom-up) approach. Each approach has its own positive and negative aspects, and its use should depend on the type of loss and the sector within which the loss occurs, as well as the availability of data and resources needed for the application of the chosen approach. With this in mind, it seems that a social accounting matrix (macro/top-down) approach is more appropriate for assessing the economic costs of the occupation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, given the multiplicity of sectors, types of losses and groups affected. Nevertheless, for a small number of losses, the accounting approach will have to be considered. Therefore, the methodology can be a mix of more than one approach, depending on the type of loss and the economic sector.

45. In general, there is no shortage of methodologies but there may be shortage of data. Prior to undertaking the full assessment exercise, exploration of the availability of data and the possibility of accessing and generating new data should take place. This will require additional resources and close cooperation with the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, which should be one of the main national partners in this exercise.

46. As for the periodicity and frequency of the evaluation exercise, it is envisaged that an annual report will be submitted to the General Assembly, on an ongoing basis. Any new costs emanating from the continuation of the occupation and the recent damaging measures will be included in the report under a separate heading. In addition to this annual report, 8 to 10 analytical studies should be conducted to build an inventory of the losses, which should be connected to earlier evaluations of the historical cost of the occupation since 1967. A summary of these analytical studies should be submitted to the Assembly in the context of the first three to four annual reports.

VII. Institutional set-up, implementation and outputs

A. Institutional set-up and implementation

47. In the light of UNCTAD's existing mandate, its proven expertise on the Palestinian economy and its capacity to convene and coordinate the work of several bodies within the United Nations system, the General Assembly, in its resolution 69/20, requested UNCTAD to report on the economic costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people.

48. With a view to facilitating future negotiations for a just, lasting, peaceful settlement of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict, UNCTAD is in a technical position to establish within the United Nations system a framework to estimate the historical and recurrent economic costs of the occupation in a systematic, comprehensive, scientific and evidence-based way on regular basis, and will report, document, update and keep an inventory of historical and new actions taken by the occupying Power, specifically those which have a damaging economic impact on the Palestinian people, their livelihoods and their immediate and future ability to maintain a viable and efficient economy.

B. Outputs and activities

49. The establishment of the framework for estimating the economic costs of the occupation would involve substantial additional work, including defining the conceptual dimension of the economic costs of the occupation within the United Nations framework, proposing and identifying relevant methodologies, developing models and calibrating, evaluating and maintaining them, developing databases and compiling data annually, updating and assessing the ongoing and historical economic costs of the occupation and regularly reporting to the General Assembly on such matters. This will require a mix of both regular budget and extrabudgetary resources.

50. It is expected that the evaluation exercise and building an inventory of the ongoing and historical economic costs of the occupation may take about four years (two bienniums) of work. This would include producing three annual reports to the General Assembly, beginning with the second year of implementation. The quantification of the historical economic costs of the occupation would require two to four studies focusing on issues related to methodology, data, legal precedents and opinions and other pertinent issues. In addition, six to eight studies should be conducted, each of dedicated to a specific type of loss.

51. Table 3 lists the expected outputs and activities for the implementation of the exercise, for the first four years of the task of estimating and reporting the economic costs of the occupation.

VIII. Conclusions and recommendations

52. The present report does not report on the qualitative or quantitative aspects of the economic costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people, rather it underscores to Member States the critical importance of this assignment and the need to equip the international community with an objective understanding and specific measurements of the effects of the occupation on the Palestinian people. An accurate assessment of these costs may also ensure accountability on the part of the occupying authority towards fulfilling its obligations under international law.

53. Furthermore, the examination of the economic costs of the occupation, as well as other obstacles to trade and development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, is essential for signifying the magnitude of the losses and the difficulties the Palestinian people have endured and continue to endure under the occupation, identifying policies for placing the Palestinian economy on the path of sustainable development and facilitating future negotiations for a just settlement of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict and for a lasting peace in the Middle East.

54. To make an accurate assessment of the damages inflicted by the occupation, a calculation must first be made of the resources and policies required for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and placing the economy on a sustainable development track that safeguards the interests and capacities of the present generation while at the same time expanding the potential of future generations. This would serve as the basis for peace in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which would be solidified by a thriving, free economy able to meet the present and future needs of its people and protect the fragile environment from further degradation exacerbated by poverty.

55. It should be stressed that the economic costs of the occupation, and any estimation of them, are not and should not be perceived as, nor used for, advocating monetary compensation as a substitute for ending the occupation. Furthermore, not all of the losses, damages and destruction inflicted by the occupation can be evaluated or measured in monetary terms.

56. All previous studies on the economic costs of the occupation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were performed on ad hoc basis, and not within a single comprehensive framework that could add up the different types of losses and the direct and indirect costs in all economic sectors. They have just scratched the surface of the much larger economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. Without the occupation, the Palestinian economy could easily produce twice the GDP it currently generates, while the chronic trade and budget deficits, as well as poverty and unemployment, could recede and the economic dependence on Israel could end.

57. There is therefore an urgent need to establish within the United Nations system a systematic, rigorous, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework:

(a) To take an inventory of, and regularly record and update, the actions taken by the occupying authority, in particular those which continue to inflict damage and economic costs for the Palestinian people and their lives and livelihoods;

(b) To estimate and update the recurrent and new economic costs of such actions in a systematic and evidence-based way and on regular basis;

(c) To report annually to the General Assembly on those costs;

(d) To identify the resources and policies required for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

58. The need for such a framework was recognized by the General Assembly, and, in paragraph 9 of its resolution 69/20, the Assembly requested UNCTAD to report to it on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. The request is a testament to UNCTAD's proven expertise on the Palestinian economy and its constraints and development prospects, as well as to UNCTAD's technical and professional capacity to lead and coordinate the work of other United Nations entities in implementing this important task.

59. UNCTAD is technically well positioned within the United Nations system to assume the responsibilities of the evaluation of the economic costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people. The task cannot be implemented with the resources currently available, however. Additional resources are required for UNCTAD to fulfil the request of the General Assembly. Allocating those additional resources should be done through the appropriate United Nations mechanisms with support from the donor community to secure additional extrabudgetary resources.

60. Member States are invited to consider requesting UNCTAD to take an inventory of, and regularly record, update and estimate the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people and to report thereon to the General Assembly on an annual basis.

I. Objective, mandate and limitations

1. The present report is submitted in response to General Assembly resolutions 69/20, 70/12, 71/20 and 72/13, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to assess and report on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people.

2. The report follows the report transmitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session (see A/71/174), in which UNCTAD emphasized that occupation imposes heavy economic costs on the Palestinian people and stressed the need to evaluate those costs and understand their impact on the prospects for the welfare of the Palestinian people and the economic development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. UNCTAD recommended the establishment within the United Nations system of a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework to estimate the economic costs of occupation and report the results to the General Assembly, not only to fulfil the aforementioned resolutions, but also to achieve a realistic pursuit of the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and for forging a just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

3. The report builds on the previous report on this subject by drawing the framework and parameters for examining the economic cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people, as well as guiding the future work of economists in their implementation of the General Assembly resolutions. It has to be stressed, however, that the detailed work of assessing, estimating and reporting on the historical and recurrent costs of occupation needs to be based on solid objective and scientific grounds, and within the international framework set by the relevant United Nations resolutions. This requires more resources than are currently available, and therefore has not been addressed in this report.

II. Some indicators of the cost of occupation

4. Not all occupation-related costs can be assigned a monetary value. Losses that cannot be assigned a monetary value include, but are not limited to, loss of life, normal family and community life, human dignity and loss of neighbourhood, culture, shelter and homeland. Therefore, the most that any assessment of the costs of occupation can achieve is a partial tally of a much greater loss.

5. The severe security measures and restrictions imposed by Israeli authorities over the years have taken a heavy toll on the Palestinians. Those measures, along with recurring periods of violence and hostilities, unilateral steps and internal Palestinian divisions, have resulted in extensive and systemic damage to the Palestinian economy, including inter alia an erosion of the productive base; the confiscation of land, water and other natural resources; restrictions on the movement of people, labour and goods; obstacles to accessing international markets; more than a decade of closure of the Gaza Strip; and the costly fragmentation of the Palestinian economy into three disjointed, disintegrated regions, in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

6. There are significant restrictions on Palestinian development in Area C (more than 60 per cent of the West Bank area and some 10 per cent of its Palestinian population) and more than two thirds of grazing land, and more than 2.5 million productive trees have been destroyed under the occupation since 1967.¹ In 2013 the World Bank estimated that if businesses and farms were permitted to develop in

Area C, this would add as much as 35 per cent to the Palestinian gross domestic product (GDP).²

7. In the Gaza Strip, the cost of three conflicts between Israel and militant groups in Gaza from 2008 to 2014 is estimated to be at least three times the potential annual GDP of Gaza.³ In addition, restrictions on fishing off the coast of Gaza render 85 per cent of fishery resources inaccessible to Palestinian fishermen, and half of the cultivable area remains unreachable for producers.

8. Partial estimates from 2014 revealed that the Palestinian revenues that leak to the Israeli treasury represent approximately 3.6 per cent of GDP. If captured, these revenues could expand Palestinian fiscal space and increase annual GDP by about 4 per cent and generate 10,000 additional jobs per year.⁴

9. By 2005, at least one third of pre-2000 Palestinian physical capital had been lost. Had the pre-Oslo Accords growth trend continued, Palestinian GDP per capita could have been at least double its current size.⁵ In its report of 2016 to the Trade and Development Board, UNCTAD stated that, without occupation, the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory could produce twice the GDP it currently generates.⁶

10. However, as indicated in the UNCTAD report of 2016 to the General Assembly (A/71/174, para. 56), all previous studies on the economic costs of the occupation were not conducted within a single comprehensive framework that could calculate the different types of losses and the direct and indirect costs in all economic sectors. UNCTAD concluded that the previous studies had merely scratched the surface of the much higher economic costs of occupation, and therefore recommended the establishment within the United Nations system of a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework for estimating, documenting and reporting the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people.

III. Acts and measures that impose occupation-related cost

11. There are many acts and measures that could impede economic development in an occupied territory, and therefore could add to the economic cost of the occupation. In this regard, UNCTAD in its report of 2018 to the Trade and Development Board elaborated on how half a century of occupation and appropriation of land and resources has impoverished the Palestinian people.⁷

12. The following sections provide examples of impacts of the Israel occupation. Further studies and research are needed to compile a full list of similar acts and to assess the full negative impact of each act.

A. Construction of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

13. The settlements impose economic costs on the Palestinian population. Land is taken for the area of the settlements, thereby depriving Palestinians of the use of the land for productive purposes. Furthermore, large areas of land have been confiscated to connect the settlements with roads in the territory of Israel. The General Assembly, in its resolution 72/13 of 30 November 2017, on the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, drew attention to the alarming findings, as reflected in the recent report on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people: developments in the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which, among other things, contained information concerning the economic costs of the settlements.⁸

14. According to a recent report of the Secretary-General, “Besides allocating land for the purposes of constructing settlement housing and infrastructure, Israel supports the maintenance and development of settlements through the delivery of public services and the encouragement of economic activities, including agriculture and industry. Population growth in Israeli settlements is stimulated by housing, education and tax benefits. Similar incentives are provided for settlement industries.”⁹ According to Security Council resolutions 446 \(1979\) and 2334 \(2016\), the establishment by Israel of settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, has no legal validity and constitutes a flagrant violation under international law.

15. In Addition, goods produced in the settlements compete with Palestinian produced goods, as reflected by the fact that Palestinian imports from Israel were consistently more than 50 per cent of Palestinian total imports.¹⁰

B. Construction of the “barrier”

16. In its advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the International Court of Justice indicated that the wall inhibited economic activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.¹¹ The construction has caused major disruptions to economic activity and involved the taking of significant tracts of land. It has particularly affected economic activity in the “seam zone”, that is, areas on the western side of the “barrier” within the West Bank. At least 10 per cent of the most fertile land in the West Bank has been lost because of the construction of the “barrier”. Palestinians who live in the seam zone need special permits to access their lands. A special permit or “prior coordination” is required for Palestinian farmers to access farm land designated as “closed” in the seam zone. If they are granted approval, farmers must cross designated gates along the “barrier” or checkpoints in order to reach their land. During the olive harvest of 2017, 76 gates were designated for agricultural access, down from 84 gates the previous year. Limitations on access have therefore forced some permit holders to stop cultivation altogether or shift to rain-fed and low-value crops. The takeover of land by Israel for settlements, for the wall and for related purposes constitutes a cost of occupation for the Palestinian people.

17. The evident and extensive nature of the damage caused by the construction of the wall led the General Assembly in 2006, by its resolution ES-10/17, to establish the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The only focus of the Register is on the damage emanating from the construction of the wall; it does not cover any other measure taken by the occupying Power. Its mandate is to serve only as a record, in documentary form, of the damage caused to all natural and legal persons concerned as a result of the construction of the wall, including in and around East Jerusalem. Damages are grouped into six categories, namely, agriculture (A); commercial (B); residential (C); employment (D); access to services (E); public resources and other (F). The vast majority of claims are categorized as agriculture losses.¹²

C. Failure to promote economic development under occupation

18. If an occupying Power fails to ensure the economic development in the occupied territory over a long period of time, the negative economic consequences can be serious.

19. UNCTAD explains, for example, how the collection of Palestinian trade taxes by Israel negatively affects economic development. In accordance with the Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (Paris Protocol), signed in Paris in 1994, Israel collects value added tax on Palestinian imports from Israel, clears Palestinian imports transiting through Israel's ports, collects customs and value added tax on those imports and transfers (clears) this tax revenue to the State of Palestine, which accounts for about three fourths of Palestinian public revenue; this enables it to exercise undue control over Palestinian fiscal affairs. UNCTAD reports and studies have highlighted the consequences of Israel's recurrent withholding of Palestinian clearance revenue as well as the annual leakage of hundreds of millions of dollars of Palestinian fiscal revenue to Israel because of this clearance mechanism.¹³ The UNCTAD report of 2013 estimates that preventing Palestinian revenue from leaking to Israel would increase total public revenue by 17 per cent, covering 18 per cent of the public wage bill.¹⁴

20. Subsection E below contains further discussion of the failure by the occupying Power to promote economic development in different economic and social sectors in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

D. Military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

21. Between 2008 and 2014, Gaza witnessed three major conflicts with Israel. Early conservative estimates for the military operation between December 2008 and January 2009 indicate economic losses to be around $2.5 billion.¹⁵ The impact on the productive base of the local economy of the Gaza Strip could be a complete economic paralysis. A more recent estimate by the International Monetary Fund suggests that the 2008–09 conflict damaged more than 60 per cent of Gaza's total capital stock, while the 2014 conflict destroyed 85 per cent of what was left of the capital stock.¹⁶ This indicates the destruction of 94 per cent of the capital stock in the Gaza Strip.

22. In its report of 2015 to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, the World Bank estimated that the direct cost for the last two military operations of 2012 and 2014 was $3.2 billion. Therefore, the direct cost of the three wars could add up to $5.7 billion. However, this is a minimal estimate that does not include the indirect costs that arise from lost or degraded human capital, the economic multiplier effect and backward and forward linkages and future income streams from destroyed or damaged productive assets.¹⁷

E. Acts affecting economic sectors, natural resources, labour market and social sectors

23. As indicated above, previous studies had only scratched the surface of the total and cumulative cost of occupation, which suggests that the magnitude of the cost is huge. The cost emanates from Israeli practices in numerous sectors of the Palestinian society and economy. The following paragraphs list of some the sectors affected by those practices.

24. Agriculture. An UNCTAD study entitled The Besieged Palestinian Agricultural Sector indicates that Israel has taken control of large areas of Palestinian land for the construction of settlements, roads for settlers and the “barrier”. Consequently, since 1967, Palestinians have lost access to more than 60 per cent of West Bank land and more than two thirds of grazing land. In the Gaza Strip, half of the cultivable area is inaccessible to Palestinian producers.¹⁸

25. Manufacturing. A recent UNCTAD study indicated that “in the industrial sector, occupation and related uncertainty, and the restrictions on movement and access, have stifled investment and limited the Palestinian private sector to small-scale operations with low capital intensity and efficiency”. Effectively, the Israeli restrictions have stunted Palestinian industry through control of borders and by restraining Palestinian production and importation of input materials needed in manufacturing.¹⁹

26. Fisheries constitute part of the economic wealth of a country. However, fishing off the coast of the Gaza Strip, the only area in the Occupied Palestinian Territory with an access to the sea, was restricted at times to 3 nautical miles and sometimes extended to 6 or 9 nautical miles, instead of the 20 miles stipulated in the Oslo Accords. As a result, 85 per cent of fishery resources are inaccessible to Palestinian fishers.²⁰ The Palestinian fishing industry has collapsed almost completely, the reach of fishermen steadily declining since 2000. Moreover, the yield from allowed fishing areas has declined, because of overfishing and the contamination caused by the dumping of sewage water into the sea after the destruction of the sewage treatment facility during the Israeli military operation in December 2008 to January 2009.²¹ A fact-finding mission of the Human Rights Council, which examined the 2008–2009 military operation of Israel in Gaza, noted that Israel “controls the territorial sea adjacent to the Gaza Strip and has declared a virtual blockade and limits to the fishing zone, thereby regulating economic activity in that zone”.²²

27. Communications. Israel restricts Palestinian telephone providers with respect to the bands they can use. A study on the Palestinian telecommunications sector concluded that the loss for the Palestinian mobile telephone sector in 2013–2015 was in the range of $436 million to $1,150 million.²³

28. Tourism. The Occupied Palestinian Territory contains sites important to world history, potentially making tourism a major industry. However, the occupation has damaged the Palestinian capacity to take advantage of tourism, because valuable tourism assets, such as East Jerusalem, are under occupation. The Palestinian tourism industry is also hindered by other factors such as the restrictions imposed by Israel on movement, access and physical development.²⁴

29. Mining and offshore minerals. Israel has granted leases for drilling in gas fields off the coast of Gaza. As a result, Palestinians have not been able to develop the gas field known as Gaza Marine, which was discovered in the 1990s.²⁵ According to a report by UNCTAD, two high-quality gas fields have been discovered: one entirely within the waters of the Gaza Strip, the other on the border with Israel. The occupying Power has not allowed Palestinians to develop and use the offshore natural gas fields discovered off the Mediterranean coast, which could provide badly needed energy for the development of the entire Occupied Palestinian Territory.²⁶ A recent Palestinian study on restrictions placed by Israel on Palestinian activities relating to natural resources in the Occupied Palestinian Territory indicates that expropriation of building stone in Area C by Israel was estimated at about $900 million annually (0.7 per cent of GDP in 2015), and stated that Israel had denied Palestinians the right to explore for oil and gas resources in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.²⁷

30. Underground aquifers/water. Underground water is part of the wealth and natural resources of a territory or a country. According to a World Bank assessment of 2009, only 35 per cent of irrigable Palestinian land is irrigated, costing the Palestinian economy up to 110,000 jobs per year and 10 per cent of GDP.²⁸ Agricultural activities have therefore become less viable and many farmers have been forced to abandon cultivation.

31. Labour market. Restrictions imposed by Israel limit employment opportunities in the domestic Palestinian economy.²⁹ Therefore, a significant number of Palestinian workers are resorting to jobs in Israel and its settlements. Palestinian workers can be subjected to wage discrimination and violence from settlers.³⁰

32. Nutrition, housing and medical services. Measures targeting Palestinian agriculture have hampered food production, and policies on labour and employment have limited the income available for the purchase of food.³¹ The housing situation is rendered worse by demolitions, which are carried out as a punitive measure or for inability to obtain construction permits, which are virtually impossible to obtain.³² Israeli measures and restrictions on mobility in the Occupied Palestinian Territory have had a negative impact on the medical sector and the quality of medical care available to the Palestinians. Prolonged closure and three conflicts in Gaza have impeded the importation of medical equipment.

33. The list above is an indicator of the magnitude, complication and multi-dimensionality of the assessment and documentation of all aspects of the cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. It has to be stressed, however, that this list is not exhaustive, and almost all the costs associated with it have not been assessed. This will require securing new resources without which this task cannot be accomplished.

IV. Conclusion and recommendations

34. Economic development is a policy goal, a desideratum for all peoples. It becomes especially important for the entire international community to promote development, and the international community should ensure that the occupying Power promotes economic development.

35. There is an urgent need to establish within the United Nations system a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework to assess the costs of occupation and report the results to the General Assembly to fulfil the requests in the relevant resolutions towards achieving a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. The establishment of such a system will require securing additional resources.

Economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: fiscal aspects

Note by the Secretary-General

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people:
fiscal aspects

Summary

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 69/20, 70/12, 71/20, 72/13 and 73/18, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to assess and report on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people.

I. Introduction

1. Since 1967, the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip have been under Israeli military occupation and the Palestinian people have endured adverse policies that have affected their economy and all aspects of life. The signing of the Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization in Paris in 1994, was expected to improve the Palestinian economic situation. However, Palestinian economic development remains elusive and characterized by poor growth performance, chronic fiscal and trade deficits and high dependency on the economy of the occupying Power. Following decades of denying the Palestinian people the right to freely access their natural resources or to make optimal use of their financial resources, the issue of economic losses incurred due to the occupation has been drawing increased attention. Since 2014, various Palestinian and other studies have addressed Palestinian fiscal losses resulting from current trade and economic relations with the occupying Power. The first of those studies was published by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in 2014 and addressed the leakage of Palestinian revenue under the Protocol.¹

2. In the present report, UNCTAD builds on findings made in previous studies and reports as well as on new quantitative analysis, and examines the fiscal costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people. Those costs severely constrain the capacity of the State of Palestine to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals. The fiscal costs of the occupation are a part of the overall economic losses caused by the occupation and consist of two components: Palestinian fiscal leakage to Israel under the Protocol, and other fiscal losses resulting from policies and measures imposed under the prolonged occupation. In the present report, light is shed on both parts by estimating the value of the fiscal leakage through some significant channels and by taking a new look at other significant fiscal losses related to the occupation.

A. Objectives

3. Accordingly, the objectives pursued in the report are:

(a) To map channels of fiscal leakage that had not been not identified in previous studies, such as leakage from direct taxes; tax evasion through undervaluation of goods imported from Israel and the rest of the world in the declaration of their actual value; and losses resulting from withholding Palestinian clearance revenue;

(b) Based on a consistent estimation methodology, on reviews of studies by international organizations and on agreements concluded, to update the estimate of the fiscal leakage to Israel and of other fiscal losses incurred by the State of Palestine as a result of restrictions imposed by the occupying Power, and documenting the sources of that fiscal leakage and those fiscal losses;

(c) To estimate the fiscal leakage to Israel, which is part of the overall Palestinian fiscal losses caused by the Israeli military occupation. As indicated previously, those overall fiscal losses are a part of the overall economic costs of the occupation borne by the Palestinian people.

¹ United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) Palestinian Fiscal Revenue Leakage to Israel under the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations (Geneva, 2014).

B. Concepts and limitations of the analysis

4. The report focuses on one element of the economic costs of the occupation, namely the Palestinian fiscal losses, or what could be termed the fiscal costs of the occupation. One of the components of those fiscal costs is fiscal leakage to the Israeli treasury. That includes all Palestinian public revenues, as identified in the Protocol, that leak to the Israeli treasury because of the Protocol's inadequate implementation or because of measures imposed by Israel. Therefore, as stipulated in the Protocol, those leaked resources should be reimbursed to the Palestinian treasury. In 2016, the Palestinian Authority received two payments from Israel totalling $300 million to compensate for previously leaked public revenues related to health stamps, equalization levies, border exit fees and value added tax.²

5. On the other hand, the fiscal costs of the occupation represent all Palestinian public revenues lost as a result of the protracted occupation, regardless of whether they leak to Israel. In other words, they represent the additional fiscal revenue that the Palestinian Authority could have raised if the occupation had not existed and the Palestinian people had had full control over their economic affairs.

6. Therefore, the fiscal costs of the occupation include both the fiscal resources leaked to the Israeli treasury and fiscal revenues foregone because they have been collected neither by Israel nor by the Palestinian Authority. However, there may well be other sources of Palestinian fiscal losses that are not covered in the present report and need further investigation. Those may include:

(a) Fiscal leakage resulting from the flow of Palestinian service imports from Israel;

(b) Fiscal losses resulting from the lack of control over natural resources and the inability of the Palestinian people to adopt economic, trade and industrial policies of their own;

(c) Fiscal losses resulting from the delay in transferring deductibles from the wages and compensations of Palestinians working in Israel and its settlements (such as health stamps and pensions);

(d) Updated estimates of fiscal losses resulting from severely restricted access to the parts of the West Bank designated by the Oslo Accords as Area C, which make up more than 60 per cent of the West Bank,³ and the untapped investment potential relating to natural resources such as oil, natural gas, minerals and resources in the Dead Sea;

(e) Other economic losses caused by occupation measures and policies such as military operations, siege, closure, demolition of buildings and uprooting of productive trees.

II. The Protocol on Economic Relations and estimates of Palestinian fiscal losses

7. As part of the Oslo Accords, the Palestinian economic, trade and taxation policy framework was incorporated in the Protocol on Economic Relations of 1994. Under the Protocol, the West Bank and Gaza Strip came under the jurisdiction of the ³ See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Occupied Palestinian Territory: Area C", available at www.ochaopt.org.

Palestinian Authority for a five-year transitional period. As the overarching policy framework for the management by Palestinians of their economic affairs, the Protocol constituted a precedent that legitimized previously unacknowledged Palestinian economic rights, such as the right and power to levy direct taxes, to reconstitute direct trade relations with Arab countries, to formulate policies related to importing, banking, insurance, water, energy and other domains, and to establish the autonomous Palestinian Monetary Authority to assume, to a limited extent, the supervisory tasks of a central bank without issuing a national currency.

8. Originally the Protocol was intended to shape the Palestinian economic policy framework during a five-year interim period ending in 1999. However, it continues to shape the Palestinian economic policy framework to this day.⁴ According to some studies, a number of provisions of the Protocol have not been implemented by Israel.⁵

9. As has been argued in several reports and studies, the policy framework, along with measures imposed by Israel, are the main reason for the fiscal fragility of the State of Palestine, and fiscal losses, including leakages to Israel. In its pioneering 2014 study,⁶ UNCTAD showed that the annual fiscal leakage resulting from imports from Israel and customs evasion represented 3.6 per cent of the Palestinian gross domestic product (GDP) or 18 per cent of tax revenues. In another study, UNCTAD estimated that goods smuggled from Israel accounted for 26 per cent of Palestinian imports from Israel ($890 million) in 2013. In other words, customs duties and value added tax on those goods leak to Israel.⁷

10. The World Bank has estimated the Palestinian fiscal losses resulting from the lack of access to Area C (over 60 per cent of the West Bank) at $800 million in 2012.⁸ In its report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee in 2016,⁹ the World Bank estimated the fiscal leakage resulting from the following sources: undervaluation or misdeclaration of imported goods; compensation for Palestinian workers withheld by Israel; excessive administrative fees levied by Israeli customs to process Palestinian imports transiting through ports in Israel; and Palestinian indirect imports from Israel. In another study, the World Bank estimated that between 2013 and 2015 the Palestinian Authority lost value added tax in the range of $70 million to $184 million due to losses in the Palestinian wired and wireless telecommunications sector.¹⁰

11. In three reports to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, the State of Palestine pointed out that the implementation of certain articles of the Protocol on Economic Relations would increase Palestinian public revenue by about $300 million per year (2 per cent of GDP in 2017).¹¹ The sources of fiscal leakage mentioned in these reports were: the outdated mechanism of clearance of Palestinian imports through Israel; the excessive administrative fees levied to clear those imports; the unfair distribution of revenue from exit fees paid by Palestinian passengers exiting the Occupied Palestinian Territory; the withholding, by Israel, of deductions from wages of Palestinians working in Israel and the settlements, in particular the equalization levy, the health stamp, social security and the pension funds; indirect imports, and public revenue from Area C.

12. In a recent study, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia used a computable general equilibrium model to measure the cost and impact of the restrictive measures imposed on the Palestinian economy by the occupying Power. The study showed that those measures were the main reason for the weak economic performance and restricted access to scarce Palestinian resources. The study suggested that reducing the restrictions in Area C would increase Palestinian GDP by 12 per cent and reduce unemployment by 27 per cent.¹²

III. Estimating a part of the fiscal costs of the occupation for the Palestinian people

13. As discussed in subsection I.B above, the fiscal costs of the occupation arise from the current trade regime and current economic relations with Israel, from the constraints created by the Israeli military occupation and from the lack of Palestinian control in the economic sphere. The present section contains estimates of the fiscal leakage and other fiscal losses based on data from 2015 and on previous studies. It further includes an assessment of non-recurring sources of fiscal leakage and losses resulting from the withholding by Israel of Palestinian clearance revenue. Those three elements together result in an estimate for the fiscal costs of the Israeli occupation borne by the Palestinian people over the period 2000–2017.

A. Estimated cost of fiscal leakage

14. In the present subsection, only those sources of Palestinian fiscal leakage to Israel are examined for which data were currently available. However, it is important to keep in mind that there are other potential sources of fiscal leakage; those should be assessed once data become available.

1. Estimated fiscal leakage from indirect imports

15. Indirect imports are Palestinian imports that are registered as if they originate from Israel, but that actually originate from a third country. As stipulated in the Protocol on Economic Relations, Palestinian imports from Israel that satisfy rules of origin are exempt from Palestinian import tax. Therefore, revenues from taxes on indirect imports (i.e., imports originating in a third country) should be transferred to the Palestinian Authority but are leaked to the treasury of Israel instead. The methodology used to estimate fiscal leakage from this source was the following:

(a) Palestinian imports from Israel were assessed at the eight-digit level of the Harmonized System Nomenclature and Classification of Goods of the World Customs Organization. Each commodity was grouped by type of effective import tax (customs duties and purchase tax);

(b) The calculations excluded all imported goods on which import taxes had already been paid, as well as goods that may be imported from Israel only (such as public sector purchases, fuel, gas, energy, vehicles, engines, fresh agricultural products made in Israel, cigarettes and tobacco), because the Palestinian Authority collects the majority of taxes on those commodities directly through the clearance system. Since no value added tax is levied on agricultural products, those were also excluded from the calculations;

(c) All goods imported from Israel but not subject to import taxes were excluded;

(d) The Bank of Israel indicates that 38.3 per cent of Palestinian imports from Israel are indirect imports.¹³ This percentage is used to calculate the tax revenues from indirect imports based on the current Israeli tariff schedule for goods, based on the following:

(i) The value of goods imported from Israel subject to customs duties multiplied by the applicable tariff rate;

(ii) The value of goods imported from Israel subject to purchase tax multiplied by the purchase tax rate;

(iii) Value added tax was calculated on import taxes, then the value added tax collected through the clearance system was deducted to obtain the net or value added tax difference;

(iv) Applying the 38.3 per cent indicated by the Bank of Israel on the values calculated for the above three items.

16. Based on this methodology and on data for 2015, fiscal leakage from all indirect import taxes, whether customs duties, purchase tax or value added tax, was estimated at $129 million, representing 1 per cent of Palestinian GDP and around 4.9 per cent of total tax revenue.

2. Estimated fiscal leakage resulting from the evasion of customs duties and taxes

17. Although the evasion of customs duties and taxes is widespread, there are no precise estimates owing to a lack of hard data, which in turn results from a lack of control over borders and over Area C, which, as will be remembered, covers more than 60 per cent of the West Bank. Therefore, estimates are based on the opinion of experts and findings made in previous studies.

18. According to previous studies, it is estimated that 25 to 35 per cent of total Palestinian goods imported from Israel enter the Palestinian market without any documentation.¹⁴ However, in an interview with UNCTAD conducted on 15 July 2018, the Head of the Tobacco Department of the Palestinian Customs Authority estimated that, in addition to the officially registered imports from Israel, another 40 per cent of that volume was being smuggled to the Palestinian market. The methodology used for the present report is based on the conservative estimate that

¹⁴ UNCTAD, Palestinian Fiscal Revenue Leakage.

30 per cent on average of the goods that enter the Palestinian market do not have documentation. However, that estimate is not applied to electricity imports, which accounted for 16 per cent of Palestinian imports from Israel in 2015. To estimate fiscal leakage from tax and customs evasion, the following calculations were made:

- Palestinian imports from Israel in 2015 – excluding electricity – were valued at $2,565 million. Applying the 30 per cent estimate results in a value of smuggled goods from Israel to the Palestinian market of some $770 million
- Not all smuggled imports from Israel were subject to import taxes, thus some smuggled imports did not result in revenue losses. Records of actual imports show that 69 per cent of goods imported from Israel were subject to import taxes. Accordingly, the value of smuggled goods subject to import taxes amounts to approximately $531 million
- The average rates of customs and purchase tax on all imports are 13 per cent and 6 per cent, respectively
- The average customs rate on a basket of Palestinian imports from Israel was 13 per cent, while the average customs rate on a basket of Israeli imports from the rest of the world was 6.5 per cent
- The rates of customs and purchase tax were calculated based on actual imports from Israel in 2015 by classifying each commodity separately at the eight-digit level of the Harmonized System and the Israeli tariff schedule in that year
- The customs rate of 13 per cent and the purchase tax rate of 6 per cent are applied to the estimated $531 million of smuggled goods subject to customs and purchase taxes in 2015
- A value added tax rate of 16 per cent is applied to the estimated value of smuggled goods, as well as to the value of import taxes that were supposed to have been paid on those goods

19. Based on those calculations, the leakage of Palestinian public revenues to the Israeli treasury resulting from the evasion of customs duties and taxes is estimated to have been no less than $202 million in 2015, equivalent to 1.6 per cent of Palestinian GDP and 7.6 per cent of total Palestinian tax revenues that year.

3. Estimated fiscal leakage from administrative fees on clearance revenue

20. According to the Protocol on Economic Relations, Israel charges a 3 per cent fee for collecting clearance revenue on behalf of the Palestinian Authority; this is referred to as handling fees or administrative fees. When the Protocol was being negotiated, in 1994, Palestinian clearance revenue amounted to only around $624 million, resulting in handling fees of only $18 million in that year. Since then, the revenues of the Palestinian Authority have tripled, leading to a significant increase in the administrative fees paid to Israel. In 2017, Israel collected over $2.3 billion in import taxes and deducted handling fees of around $70 million.¹⁵ The World Bank concludes that, based on the share of Palestinian imports within the total volume handled by the Israeli customs service (i.e., Palestinian and Israeli imports put together), the fee should be reduced from 3 per cent to 0.6 per cent, which would increase Palestinian revenues by $40 million to $50 million, money that is currently being deducted by Israeli customs.¹⁶

21. In addition, in 1996, Israel started collecting a 3 per cent handling fee on Palestinian imports of fuels and petroleum derivatives such as gasoline, diesel and ¹⁵ State of Palestine, "Stopping fiscal leakage".

¹⁶ World Bank, "Economic monitoring report".

kerosene. There are no administrative costs involved in direct imports from Israel, similar to products purchased according to arrangements between the private sectors in the two countries.¹⁷

22. According to data supplied by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, between 1996 and 2017, Palestinian purchases of petroleum and its derivatives amounted to about $11.2 billion (subject to, on average, 65 per cent excise duty and other taxes). The central clearing data of the Palestinian Ministry of Finance show that, during the same period, excise levied on fuels contributed 32 per cent of total clearance revenue. The total value of clearance revenue collected during the same period was $23 billion. The 3 per cent administrative fees on that amount equals about $699 million, of which $224 million was unilaterally deducted in the form of fees imposed on Palestinian tax revenues accruing from direct fuel imports from Israel.

23. According to the State of Palestine, administrative fees deducted by Israel in 2015 amounted to $64 million. $24 million was charged for handling Palestinian imports of petroleum products and fuel.¹⁸ As discussed above, that amount should not have been deducted as fees and therefore should be considered as part of the fiscal leakage. The remaining $40 million should have been reduced to $8 million by applying a rate for administrative fees reduced from 3 per cent to 0.6 per cent, as recommended by the World Bank, which implies a fiscal leakage of $32 million. Hence, in 2015, Palestinian fiscal leakage to the Israeli treasury in administrative and handling fees relating to Palestinian clearance revenue are estimated at $56 million, representing 0.44 per cent of GDP, or more: $24 million relating to petroleum excise, and $32 million to other import taxes.

4. Estimated fiscal leakage associated with the Palestinian telecommunications sector

24. The Palestinian telecommunications and information sector is of growing significance to the Palestinian economy. The World Bank, in a report published in 2016, was the first to address the sector's economic and financial losses owing to constraints imposed by the occupying Power, estimated between $436 million and $1,150 million during the period 2013–2015. This means that foregone value added tax accounted for $70 to $184 million during that period, or an annual loss between 1.2 and 3 per cent of GDP. Assuming that the loss, in 2015, as a ratio to GDP, was the midpoint of the upper and lower range percentages (i.e., 2.1 per cent), the losses in terms of potential output in that sector stand at $266 million for that year, in addition to the associated fiscal losses in foregone value added tax, estimated at $42.6 million, equivalent to 0.33 per cent of GDP or 1.6 per cent of total Palestinian tax revenues in 2015.

5. Estimated fiscal leakage from commercial and economic activities in Area C

25. Under the Protocol on Economic Relations, Israel is obliged to apply the Palestinian tax system to levy value added tax and income tax in Area C on behalf of the Palestinian Authority and transfer that revenue to the Palestinian treasury based on the principle of the place of final consumption and geographic location of income generation. Around 2,000 Israeli commercial enterprises or individuals work in Area C performing various activities; services, industry, agriculture, fuel, gas, and retail.¹⁹ Israel collected value added tax, income tax, property tax, and operational fees from those enterprises and transferred those to the Palestinian Authority until 2000. Israel has since stopped doing so or has stopped providing any information about the activities of the enterprises.

¹⁸ Government of Palestine's Report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee. September, 2018.

26. The Palestinian Government estimates that, during the period 2001–2017, Israel collected $320 million in value added tax, income tax, property tax and other fees in Area C that was not transferred to the Palestinian treasury.²⁰ This figure represents 0.25 per cent of the Palestinian GDP during that period. Hence, Palestinian fiscal leakage resulting from commercial and economic activities in Area C in 2015 may be estimated at $32 million, or 1.2 per cent of total tax revenues in that year.

6. Estimated fiscal leakage from the passenger exit fees at the Karamah/Allenby bridge

27. In the Protocol concerning Redeployment and Security Arrangements, the two sides agreed that Israel should collect a $26 fee from each passenger exiting across the Karamah/Allenby bridge, and transfer to the Palestinian Authority its share, calculated as follows:

- Fee revenues from the first 750,000 passengers will be equally divided between the two sides. The Palestinian Authority will pay Israel $1 per passenger for services. This means that 46.2 per cent of the revenue goes to the Palestinian treasury and 53.8 per cent goes to the Israeli treasury.
- For fee revenues from all passengers thereafter, $16 per passenger is destined for the Palestinian Authority and $10 per passenger for Israel, i.e., 61.5 per cent goes to the Palestinian treasury and 38.5 per cent goes to the Israeli treasury.

28. Since 1994, transfers to the Palestinian Authority have been irregular and partial. From time to time, Israel unilaterally raised the exit fees without consultation with the Palestinian side. Based on estimates by the World Bank, in 2015, fiscal leakage from this source amounted to $12.2 million (0.1 per cent of GDP).²¹ Based on calculations by the Palestinian Authority, accumulated exit fees due to the Palestinian treasury but withheld by Israel are estimated at around $145 million.²²

B. Estimated annual fiscal leakage from the sources surveyed

29. The total value of fiscal leakage resulting from the six main sources discussed above are estimated at $473.4 million in 2015, which represents about 3.7 per cent of the Palestinian GDP or 17.8 per cent of total Palestinian tax revenues that year. In other words, had fiscal leakage to Israel been stopped, the budget deficit of the Palestinian Authority in 2015 (on a commitment basis) could have been reduced by 33 per cent, from $1,431 million to $ 950 million (from 11.3 per cent to 7.6 per cent of GDP). It is difficult to quantify the impact of the fiscal losses on the achievement, or lack thereof, of the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. However, it is clear that severe shortages of public revenue do prevent the Palestinian Authority from making tangible progress towards achieving the Sustainable Development Goals, in particular Goal 1 (End poverty in all its forms everywhere), Goal 3 (Ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all ages), Goal 4 (Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all), Goal 6 (Ensure availability and sustainable management of water and sanitation for all), Goal 8 (Promote sustained, inclusive and sustainable economic growth, full and productive employment and decent work for all), and Goal 16 (Promote peaceful and inclusive societies for sustainable development, provide access to justice for all and build effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels).

30. On 17 February, the Israeli Government began to implement the law adopted by the Knesset in July 2018 that required the Israeli Government to freeze, from the clearance revenue it collects on behalf of and transfers to the Palestinian Authority, an amount equal to the sums paid by the Palestinian Authority “directly or indirectly” to Palestinians, or to the families of Palestinians convicted by Israeli courts of involvement in alleged “terrorist activities” or other security-related offences, as defined by Israeli law, or who were killed while carrying out such activities. The legal view of Israel is that such payments violate the obligation of the parties to the Oslo Accords to take all measures necessary to prevent acts of terrorism, crime and hostilities directed against each other and to prevent incitement. Accordingly, on 17 February, Israel announced that it would freeze approximately $139 million of the Palestinian Authority’s clearance revenue over the course of 2019, amounting to a little over 6 per cent of the total amount of revenue transfers in 2018.

31. On 21 February, the Palestinian Authority informed the Israeli Government of its rejection of this unilateral decision, stating that, under the Protocol on Economic Relations, no amount may be deducted without the consent of both parties, and that it would not cease its social welfare payments to the families of prisoners. The Palestinian Authority has since refused to accept any clearance revenue transfers from Israel, noting that it will accept the revenue only if the full amount payable is transferred. Clearance revenue from Israel constitutes up to 65 per cent of the total revenue of the Palestinian Government. The decision has prompted the Palestinian Government to take severe austerity measures, including reduced salary payments to Government employees, the cessation of all promotions, appointments, bonus payments, purchases of property and cars and, and a reduction of expenses paid for travel, hospitality and fuel. In addition, the Palestinian Authority has delayed the transfer of welfare payments to some of the poorest families. The Palestinian Authority has not published a budget for 2019. The impact should be addressed in a future analysis.

C. Other fiscal losses related to the occupation

32. Palestinian losses of public resources caused by the protracted occupation represent all public revenue that could have been collected by the Palestinian treasury in the absence of the occupation. There are direct and indirect fiscal losses resulting from the occupation, which includes but is not limited to military operations and actions, the closure imposed on the Gaza Strip, movement and access restrictions in force on the West Bank, the demolition of buildings and the uprooting of trees.

1. Estimated fiscal losses resulting from Israeli control over Area C

33. In a study, the World Bank discussed the huge output, labour and tax revenues that Area C has the potential to contribute to the Palestinian economy.²³ Area C represents 60 per cent of the land area of the West Bank. Since Area C is still under Israeli control, the right of the State of Palestine to benefit from the Area’s economic potential is limited. According to the World Bank, the likely potential benefit from alleviating the restrictions imposed by Israel in Area C is equal to 35 percent of Palestinian GDP, a potential increase in tax revenue of 7.6 per cent of GDP ($960 million in 2015).²⁴ In its more recent report, the World Bank again emphasized that losses resulting from not tapping the economic potential of Area C were estimated at $3.4 billion per year.²⁵ This situation has weakened the Palestinian economy, stripping it of the ability to benefit from those economic resources in agriculture, tourism, trade and natural resources. The economic resources could have reduced the Palestinian budget deficit.

²³ Niksic, Nasser Eddin and Cali, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy.

2. Estimated fiscal losses from undervaluation of imports

34. Manipulation of actual values of imports is common across many countries. Often merchants opt to forge bills to reduce their tax liabilities. However, the prevalence of undervaluation differs from one country to another, depending on how strict or weak law enforcement is. In the Palestinian case, the World Bank indicates that undervaluation is higher for imports from third countries than for imports from Israeli sources.²⁶ This is ascribed to the higher costs entailed and the Israeli restrictions affecting Palestinian direct importation from third countries, which may explain why Palestinian merchants depend heavily on imports from Israel. The following methodology was used to estimate losses from undervaluation of imports from Israel:

- All goods that cannot be undervalued were excluded: public sector purchases of electricity, fuel, gas and some other commodities that are imported into the Palestinian market under agreements with large companies
- The World Bank estimate for undervaluation of imports from Israel of 23 per cent was adopted.²⁷ Thus, the real value of the imports in question is estimated at the declared value divided by 77 per cent
- The value added tax rate of 16 per cent was applied on the difference between the real and declared values in the customs declaration

35. The estimated undervaluation, i.e., the difference between the real and declared values of imports from Israel, was $210 million in 2015, which implies that the loss in Palestinian value added tax revenues amounted to $33.7 million.

36. Losses from undervaluation of imports from the rest of the world were estimated using the same methodology, with two facts being taken into consideration: first, the level of undervaluation of third-country imports was estimated at 32 per cent;²⁸ second, those imports were subject to all import taxes (including customs duties and purchase tax). Unlike the World Bank approach, in which the Israeli average tariff rate for the Palestinian import basket was used, the methodology followed in the present report was based on detailed records of imports, at the eight-digit level of the Harmonized System, to estimate the fiscal losses from undervaluation of imports from third countries, specifically:

- All goods that cannot be undervalued, such as cars and cigarettes, were excluded
- Imports exempt from import taxes were excluded on the assumption that they were not being undervalued
- The World Bank estimate of 32 per cent for undervaluation of imports from third countries was adopted.²⁹ Thus, the real value of those imports is estimated at the declared value divided by 68 per cent

²⁵ Niksic, Nasser Eddin and Cali, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy.

²⁶ World Bank, "Economic monitoring report".

²⁷ Ibid.

²⁸ Ibid.

- All Palestinian imports from third countries were identified at the eight-digit level of the Harmonized System. Based on the World Bank estimate of 32 per cent (in the previous step), the real value – not the declared value – was used and the relevant customs and purchase tax rates were applied to calculate the import taxes that should have been collected
- The World Bank estimate of 32 per cent was applied to calculate tax revenues based on the actual value of that imports, assuming that the collected taxes (for undervalued imports) equalled 68 per cent of the total tax revenue that should have been collected had the actual value of the goods been declared. In other words, total tax revenue that should have been collected based on the estimated real value of imports equalled actual collected taxes divided by 68 per cent
- The difference was calculated between the estimated value of import taxes and the actual amounts collected (for undervalued imports).

37. Using this methodology, the total losses resulting from the undervaluation of imports from third countries are estimated at $138.6 million. That is more than the losses caused by the undervaluation of imports from Israel because imports from third countries are subject to customs duties, purchase tax and value added tax. In the case of imports from Israel only the value added tax revenues are lost owing to undervaluation.

38. Hence, total tax revenue lost owing to undervaluation of Palestinian imports in 2015 are estimated at $172.3 million (1.36 per cent of GDP): $33.7 million relating to imports from Israel plus $138.6 million relating to imports from third countries. It should be noted that the Israeli treasury could also incur losses in tax revenue if the Israeli exporter undervalued the same goods.

3. Estimated fiscal losses from shuttle trading at the Karamah/Allenby crossing with Jordan

39. In addition to losses associated with smuggling goods from Israel, there are fiscal losses resulting from the smuggling of goods from the local market and the Jordanian market as well, in particular of cigarettes and tobacco. The smuggling of cigarettes and tobacco is driven by the high taxes imposed on cigarettes of up to 85 per cent of the value. Revenue from the tobacco tax constitute 25 per cent of domestic revenues.

40. The household survey of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics indicates that tobacco imports make up 71 per cent of cigarettes and tobacco consumed.³⁰ Their value is $450 million. On the other hand, the Head of the Tobacco Department of the Customs Authority of the Palestinian Ministry of Finance stated on 15 July 2018 that tobacco consumption was estimated at $550 million. The $100 million difference between the two figures is an indication of the magnitude of the tobacco smuggling.

41. According to the same source, in 2017, tax revenues from tobacco amounted to $420 million. The illicit trade in tobacco, in which tax and customs duties are evaded, constituted 30 per cent of the Palestinian tobacco market, which resulted in $110 million in lost revenues per year. Half of the smuggled cigarettes likely came from Jordan across the Karamah/Allenby bridge.

42. Accordingly, if only the tax evasion from the smuggled tobacco from Jordan is considered, and local products are excluded, the estimated fiscal loss is at least at $55 million in 2015 (0.43 per cent of GDP). These losses are also the result of the fact that Israel prevents Palestinian customs personnel from being present to fulfil their duties at border crossings and at the Karamah/Allenby bridge.

³⁰ Palestinian Bureau of Statistics, "Palestinian Expenditure and Consumption Survey (October 2016–September 2017): Press report on the levels of living in Palestine – expenditure, consumption and poverty" (Ramallah, 15 April 2018).

D. Recurrent fiscal leakage and losses: the fiscal cost of the occupation

43. In sections B and C, estimates were given of the leakage of Palestinian fiscal revenue to Israel and of Palestinian fiscal losses due to the occupation that are not the result of leakage. The sum of these two components represents the fiscal costs of the Israeli occupation to the Palestinian people. However, the assessments and estimates in the present report do not exhaust all sources of probable fiscal leakage or fiscal losses. They cover only those sources about which data are currently available. In other words, the estimates presented in the report could be revised as more data and evidence become available.

44. As concluded above, and summarized in table 1, the estimated total annual recurrent Palestinian fiscal leakage and losses, i.e., fiscal costs, resulting from the occupation that can be quantitatively substantiated are enormous. They are estimated at $1.66 billion, which is equivalent to 13.1 per cent of GDP or 62.6 per cent of total tax revenue in 2015.

E. Estimated non-recurring fiscal leakage and losses from withholding clearance revenue by Israel

45. Another measure is the repeated suspensions and delays by Israel in transferring clearance revenue to the Palestinian Ministry of Finance without any prior arrangement or warning. Israel collects Palestinian tax revenues on behalf of the Palestinian Authority that it should transfer to the Palestinian Ministry of Finance on a monthly basis through the clearing system. From 1997 to 2015, Israel froze

Palestinian clearance revenue from time to time for varying periods, sometimes for more than 24 months. The total of the dues withheld during that period amounted to $2.4 billion.³¹

46. Vulnerability to the withholding of Palestinian clearance revenue not only undermines the ability of the Palestinian Authority to plan and administer its finances and development projects, it also poses a challenge to the Authority's ability to meet its financial obligations, in particular the wage bill and current expenditures from the public budget. To cope with the ensuing crises, the Authority is forced to resort to borrowing from domestic banks, thereby incurring the costs of extremely high interest rates accruing on credit denominated in new Israeli shekels. In addition, the Israeli treasury profits from the interest paid on the dues withheld at interest rates paid on bank deposits in Israel. Interests on withheld revenue is another channel of costs incurred by the Palestinian treasury and a source of leakage to the Israeli treasury. The fiscal costs have been estimated using the interest rates the Palestinian Government pays on the loans it receives from domestic banks, while fiscal leakage to Israel has been estimated using the interest rate on bank deposits in Israel.

47. As shown in table 2, the cumulative Palestinian fiscal leakage and losses arising from this source is estimated at $150.9 million (for leakage) and $336 million (for losses).

IV. Estimated cumulative fiscal leakage and fiscal costs of the occupation during the period 2000–2017

48. The estimates of the fiscal costs of the occupation given above are based on the data and information available at the time of the analysis. That also applies to the amount of Palestinian clearance revenue withheld by Israel. In the present section an estimated monetary valuation is presented of the fiscal leakage and the fiscal costs of the occupation as they accumulated over the period 2000–2017. The year 2000 has been selected as the start because it was the first year after the Palestinian Interim Self-Government Authority was to end its transitional mandate.

49. Fiscal leakage is an ongoing problem; resources had been leaking even before 2000. As shown in table 1, the annual fiscal leakage from the Palestinian treasury to the Israeli treasury is estimated at 3.74 per cent of the Palestinian GDP. The annual leakage for the period 2000–2017 has been estimated on the basis of that rate; the total represents the accumulated leakage of funds that should have gone to the Palestinian treasury during the 18-year period under consideration (see table 3).

50. Since the Israeli treasury retained the funds instead of transferring them to the Palestinian Authority, it is assumed that they were kept as deposits in Israeli banks, collecting interest at the rates applicable at the time. As shown in table 3, the cumulative fiscal leakage that could be substantiated for the period 2000–2017 stands at $5.6 billion without interest. The accumulated interest has been calculated at $1 billion for the same period. Adding that amount results in an estimated total fiscal leakage of $6.6 billion, or about 4.4 per cent of GDP over that period, equivalent to 21 per cent of total Palestinian public revenue.

^a The annual fiscal leakage and the fiscal costs of the occupation have been calculated by multiplying the estimated rates of 3.74 per cent and 13.11 per cent shown in table 1 with the annual Palestinian GDP. The annual figures also include the interest accumulated on the Palestinian clearance revenue withheld, as shown in table 2.

^b Interest rates on bank deposits based on Bank of Israel rates

^c Interest rates on lending in new Israeli shekels based on the rates of the Palestine Monetary Authority.

51. The fiscal costs of the occupation, on the other hand, are a graver problem, as those include both the fiscal leakage and the loss of other public revenue that could have been realized by the Palestinian treasury if the Palestinian Authority had full control over its fiscal affairs and there were no occupation. As indicated in table 1, the annual fiscal costs of the occupation are estimated at 13.1 per cent of GDP. The costs resulting from lost public revenue is exacerbated by the fact that the Authority is forced to bear additional costs because it has to borrow money from local banks at high interest rates to cope with the loss of resources and to meet its financial obligations. Table 3 shows the estimated cumulative monetary value of the fiscal costs of the occupation, including the cost of borrowing. The cumulative fiscal costs during the 18 years under consideration, without interest, are estimated at $19.5 billion. Adding the interest increases the losses by $28.2 billion, bringing the total valuation to $47.7 billion. That amount is more than three times the output of the Palestinian economy in 2017, and some 32 per cent of cumulative GDP during those 18 years.

V. Summary of results

52. Estimates of the fiscal costs of the occupation in 2015, based on those that could be mapped in the present analysis, came to $1.7 billion, or 13.1 per cent of GDP for that year. Of that amount, fiscal leakage to the Israeli treasury accounted for $473 million (3.7 per cent of GDP). Other fiscal losses – not leaked to Israel – accounted for the remaining $1.2 billion (9.4 per cent of GDP).

53. An extrapolation of the analysis to cover the period 2000–2017 results in an estimated cumulative fiscal leakage of more than $5.6 billion during those 18 years, equivalent to 39 per cent of the 2017 GDP. This amount could have increased the overall Palestinian tax revenues by 17.6 per cent and reduced the current public deficit on a cash basis by 42 per cent. Interest accrued on fiscal revenue captured by the Israeli treasury during the same period adds $1 billion, increasing the estimated cumulative fiscal loss to the Palestinian Authority from leakage alone to $6.6 billion, or an annual loss equivalent to 4.4 per cent of GDP.

54. In addition to the leakages to Israel, the cumulative fiscal cost of the occupation for the Palestinian people for the period 2000–2017 is estimated at $19.4 billion, equivalent to 134 percent of the GDP in 2017, i.e., the output of the Palestinian economy over one year and four months. When the compound interest of about $28.2 billion is added, the estimated fiscal costs of the occupation resulting only from the sources surveyed in the present report amounts to $47.7 billion during the period 2000–2017. That equals more than three times of what the Palestinians produced in 2017.

VI. Conclusions and recommendations

55. The analysis and figures provided in the present report highlight a number of enduring problems that have worsened over the years, namely: the smuggling of goods from Israel and from illegal settlements to the Palestinian market; increased fiscal leakage resulting from indirect imports via Israel; the inability of the Palestinian Authority to enforce the proper invoicing of imports and the transport of imports from Israel or any third country; control by Israel of Area C (more than 60 per cent of the West Bank) and lack of access enabling the Palestinians to operate there. All of these and other measures imposed by the occupying Power have compounded the challenges facing the Palestinian Government in collecting revenue and have resulted in a loss of large parts of that revenue, which has led to a chronic budget deficit and has further shrunk the fiscal and policy space available to Palestinian policymakers.

56. To cover these fiscal costs caused by the occupation and the ensuing financing gaps, the Palestinian Government has increasingly relied on international aid, borrowed from local banks, accumulated arrears with the domestic private sector and rationalized its expenditures. Those measures have slowed down the drivers of economic growth by reducing developmental expenditure to less than 3 per cent of total public expenditure in recent years. These conditions have resulted in an increasingly weak and fragile Palestinian economy characterized by inadequate and deteriorating public services and weak aggregate expenditure, in particular expenditure for investment and development purposes.

57. In conclusion, the fiscal losses, the narrow policy space available to Palestinian decision makers and the lack of control over economic affairs have undermined the capacity of the Palestinian Government to adopt effective financial, tax and development policies. The economic policy framework and its implementation should be consistent with Palestinian development needs and priorities, and should facilitate the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the economic security of the State of Palestine as called for in several resolutions adopted by the Security Council and the General Assembly, such as Council resolutions 1850 \(2008\) and 1860 \(2009\), and Assembly resolution 72/13.

58. To achieve that, a fundamental change is needed in many working arrangements, including those relating to: border crossing points and access by Palestinian officials to those points, as well as to Area C; import policies and import surveillance mechanisms; and the exchange of information, data and records concerning imports. Furthermore, as was done in 2016, Israel and the Palestinian Authority may consider negotiating some of the topics raised in the present report to address and rectify all outstanding issues, resolve accumulated dues to the Palestinian people and establish a mechanism by means of which the Government of Israel may share with the Palestinians all the information related to Palestinian trade and fiscal resources.

59. Given the heavy fiscal costs of the occupation, the Palestinian people are much farther away from reaching the Sustainable Development Goals, if it can reach them at all, than it would be without the occupation. There is a need to secure additional resources for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to strengthen the capacity of UNCTAD to support the Palestinian people in those efforts.

60. Humanitarian and economic support are crucial to creating an environment that favours negotiations to resolve the conflict. However, no amount of humanitarian or economic support will resolve the conflict itself. Humanitarian or economic support can only be complementary to a legitimate political process but will not replace political rights or statehood. The United Nations maintains its long-standing position that lasting and comprehensive peace can only be achieved through a negotiated two-State solution. The Secretary-General will continue to ensure that the United Nations works towards the establishment of an independent, democratic, contiguous and viable Palestinian State, living side by side in peace with a secure Israel, with Jerusalem as the capital of both States consistent with relevant Security Council resolutions and international law.

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: the Gaza Strip under closure and restrictions

Summary

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 74/10, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to continue to report to it on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people.

Since Hamas took control of Gaza, 2 million Palestinians have been subject to an prolonged Israeli closure and severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade in the 365 km² Gaza Strip. Moreover, the Gaza Strip has been the subject of three major rounds of military hostilities since 2008. The result is the near collapse of the regional Gaza economy while trade is severely restricted from the rest of the Palestinian economy and the world. Between 2007 and 2017, the poverty rate in Gaza increased from 40 to 56 per cent; the poverty gap increased from 14 to 20 per cent; and the annual minimum cost of eliminating poverty quadrupled from $209 million to $838 million (constant 2015 USD).

The endogeneity, overlapping of different causal factors and measurement problems limit the methodologies that could be used to estimate the cost borne by the Palestinian people due to the ongoing prolonged closure and severe economic and movement restrictions on Gaza and the three major military operations that took place during the period 2007–2018. Furthermore, the cost of the closure and restrictions blockade cannot be estimated separately from that of military operations. Nonetheless, an estimation of counterfactual growth paths (scenarios) for Gaza – that is, assuming that the closure, restrictions and military operations did not occur – from 2007 onwards, gives some indication of the economic losses (in terms of Gross Domestic Product (GDP)) by measuring the deviation of the counterfactual scenarios from the historical GDP values.

Focusing on the period 2007–2018, and using econometric analysis of household survey data, the estimated cumulative economic cost of the Israeli occupation in Gaza under the prolonged closure and severe economic and movement restrictions and military operations would amount to $16.7 billion (constant 2015 USD): equivalent to six times the value of the GDP of Gaza, or 107 per cent of the Palestinian GDP, in 2018. Scenario analysis suggests that, had the pre-2007 trends continued, the poverty rate in Gaza could have been 15 per cent in 2017 instead of 56 per cent, while the poverty gap could have been 4.2 per cent instead of 20 per cent.

Lifting what amounts to the blockade of Gaza is essential for it to trade freely with the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the world and restore the right to free movement for business, medical care, education, recreation and family bonds. Only by fully lifting the debilitating closure, in line with Security Council resolution 1860 \(2009\), can we hope to sustainably resolve the humanitarian crisis.

I. Introduction, objective and scope

1. For 13 years, following the take-over of the Gaza Strip by Hamas in June 2007, the Palestinian people living there have been under a prolonged Israeli closure and severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade. Effectively, nearly 2 million people are mostly confined to a 365 km² enclave with one of the highest population densities in the world. The entry of goods into the Gaza Strip has been reduced to only basic humanitarian products.¹ In addition to the prolonged closure and severe economic and movements restrictions, Gaza was the subject of three major rounds of hostilities during a six-year timespan (starting December 2008) that have resulted in the destruction of the productive base, while the ensuing severe crisis has transformed the Gaza Strip into a humanitarian case and condemned it to profound aid-dependency. Moreover, the intra-Palestinian division poses significant challenges to the development of Gaza.

2. Focusing on the period prior to 2012, the United Nations warned that the ongoing trends should be reversed, for Gaza to be “a liveable place” in 2020.² Now, in 2020, according to the analysis in the present report, Gaza has witnessed one of the worst economic performances globally and the world’s highest unemployment rate,³ and more than half of its population lives below the poverty line. The vast majority of the population has no access to clean water, electricity or a proper sewage system, and the Gaza Strip experiences major environmental deterioration. Since the beginning of the closure and severe economic and movement restrictions in 2007, the Palestinian people in Gaza have experienced 13 years of continued deterioration in the conditions surrounding them. Efforts at revival have been made, with interventions focused on humanitarian relief and large infrastructure and other development projects.

3. The objective of the report is to elaborate on the situation and to estimate the economic cost of the Israeli closure and restrictions and recurrent hostilities for the Palestinian people in the Gaza Strip, with a focus on the socioeconomic conditions of households during the period 2007–2018.⁴ First, the report uses the household expenditure and consumption survey and census data to estimate the impact of the Israeli closure, restrictions and military operations on (a) the rate and gap of poverty at the household level; and (b) the minimum cost of eliminating poverty. Second, the report estimates the economic cost in terms of the potential economic growth that could have been realized if the closure, restrictions and military operations had not occurred. Third, the report proposes a set of recommendations to mitigate the impact of the ongoing closure and restrictions on Gaza.

4. It should be emphasized that the scope of estimates in the report is limited to the economic cost of the Israeli occupation that resulted from the prolonged closure, severe economic and movement restrictions and recurrent military operations during the period 2007–2018. The estimates do not assume an end to the occupation and all the restrictive measures it imposes on the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In other words, the estimates account only for a part of the total cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people in Gaza.

⁴ The present report covers that period because it comprises the two most recent censuses, produced by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, as well as the most up-to-date macro data available at the time of writing.

II. Gaza: the cost of closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities

5. Many restrictions were imposed on the Gaza Strip in the early 1990s. Following its takeover by Hamas in June 2007, Israeli restrictions were intensified to what in effect amounted to a blockade, when the occupying power severely tightened the restrictions on the movement of goods and people in and out of Gaza. Despite some fluctuations over the years, restrictions on movement remain tight.⁵

A. Closure: land, sea and airspace

6. Prior to 2007, Gaza had five border crossing points with Israel for pedestrians and goods: Karam Abu Salem (Kerem Shalom) for goods; Beit Hanoun (Erez) for pedestrians; the Ash Shuja'iah (Nahal Oz) fuel pipeline, closed since 2010; Al Montar (Karni), closed since 2007; and the Sufa crossing point, closed since 2008. Only the first two crossing points remain open, partially and for special cases. From June 2007, Gaza crossing points were closed for nearly the entirety of the working day; in 1999, they had been fully open. Effectively, the prolonged closure and severe movement restrictions tightly confine 2 million people in an area of 365 km². The economic significance is that trade and factors of production (labour or production inputs) are allowed to move in or out of the Gaza Strip in a severely restricted manner.

7. In addition to its control over the commercial and pedestrian land crossings of the Gaza Strip, Israel controls its sea and airspace. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Israel has defined a risk zone that ranges from 100 to 500 metres into Gaza near the border and has instituted an access-restricted area or "buffer zone" that ranges from 100 to 300 metres into Gaza, in which farmers' access is permitted only on foot, with a 100-metre no-go zone along the border with Israel.⁶ Moreover, agricultural land near the fence has been subject to destruction.⁷ At sea, the area agreed upon in the Oslo Accords to be open to fishing extends to 20 nautical miles (NM) from the coast, but has rarely exceeded 12 NM in practice. The area in which fishing has been permitted by Israel has ranged between 3 and 6 NM since 2006, with occasional extensions to 9 NM for a few weeks at a time and more recently to 12 to 15 NM. People working in the fishing industry are subjected to frequent violence, and those deemed by the Israeli navy to have exceeded the boundaries are arrested, have their boats confiscated and are sometimes shot at, killed or injured.⁸

B. Restrictions on the mobility of people and goods

8. Only two crossings are currently used for pedestrian travel in and out of Gaza: Beit Hanoun (Erez) to Israel and Rafah to Egypt. The Erez crossing is controlled by Israel and mainly limited to humanitarian cases or people with special permits, in addition to traders and businessmen. It is the only gateway to the West Bank and East

Jerusalem. Between 2007 and 2018, the Rafah crossing was open for 2,126 days and closed for 2,257 days, with the closure mainly occurring from 2014 to 2017.⁹

9. By 2010, three of the four crossings for goods between Gaza and Israel had been shut down. From 2007 to 2010, Israel imposed additional restrictions, allowing into Gaza only basic humanitarian products “vital for the survival of the civilian population”. From June 2007 until June 2010, an average of 2,400 trucks per month entered Gaza from Israel, compared with 10,400 in 2005.¹⁰ In 2018, that average increased to 8,970, but it is still below the 2005 figure, when the population of Gaza was 33 per cent smaller than its level in 2018.

10. According to the Israeli human rights organization Gisha, according to documents from the Israeli Ministry of Defense, between 2007 and 2010, Israel employed mathematical formulas to determine the minimum amount of goods that could be allowed into Gaza. Those formulas were based on an estimate of the inventory of basic goods and products, the daily per capita consumption for each good and the number of inhabitants of Gaza. When a low warning limit was reached for some products, the Israeli authorities increased the inflow of those products, unless there was an intentional reduction policy.¹¹

11. Another constraint on productive activities is the list of “dual-use” civilian goods that Israel does not allow Palestinians to import because they might have potential military applications. The list contains 56 items requiring “special approval” to be brought into Gaza and the West Bank, including civilian machinery, spare parts, fertilizers, medical equipment, appliances, telecommunication equipment, metals, chemicals, steel pipes, milling machines, optical equipment and navigation aids. For Gaza the list contains an additional 61 items, including construction materials; raw material for the productive sectors, for example wood and pesticides; medical equipment; and water pumps, which are used during seasonal flooding. Despite some easing of restrictions, in particular for construction materials, since the 2014 military operation, applications for the import of other items on the dual-use list have been subject to frequent rejections or significant delays.¹² In recent months, Israel has granted one-off permits for certain items, particularly in Gaza.¹³

C. Impact of recurrent hostilities

12. In addition to the prolonged closure and severe economic and movement restrictions, the Gaza Strip was the subject of three consecutive major hostilities over six years that claimed the lives of 3,804 Palestinians and 95 Israelis.¹⁴ In October 2014, the Secretary-General said that the destruction following the operation between 8 July and 26 August had been “beyond description”.¹⁵

13. In its report, the United Nations country team said that the three military operations had had the following impacts:¹⁶

(a) During the hostilities that lasted from 27 December 2008 to 18 January 2009, nearly 1,400 Palestinians and 13 Israelis were killed. In addition, 5,380 people were wounded,¹⁷ and some 60,000 homes were damaged or destroyed, leaving some 20,000 people homeless;

(b) During the eight-day hostilities in November 2012, 174 Palestinians, including 107 civilians, and 6 Israelis, including 3 civilians, were killed, and some 10,000 homes damaged;

(c) During the hostilities from 8 July to 26 August 2014, 2,251 Palestinians, including at least 146 civilians, and 71 Israelis, of whom 5 were civilians, were killed, and 171,000 homes were damaged, 17,800 of which were rendered completely uninhabitable, thereby displacing their 100,000 inhabitants.

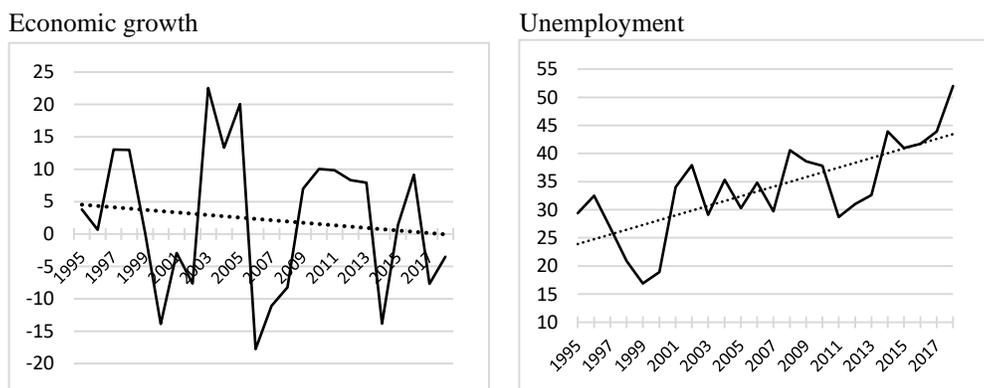

III. Gaza: closure, restrictions, recurrent hostilities and the economy

14. In the 24-year period from 1994 to 2018, the real GDP of Gaza grew by 48 per cent (see figure 1 below), while its population grew by 137 per cent, resulting in a 37 per cent drop in real GDP per capita. The latter plummeted from the equivalent of 96 per cent of the West Bank GDP per capita in 1994 to 30 per cent in 2018. Meanwhile, unemployment in Gaza jumped by 22 percentage points, reaching 52 per cent, among the highest rates in the world (see figure 1).¹⁸

A. Palestinian economy in the Gaza Strip, 1994 to 2018

15. The Palestinian economy in Gaza has gone through three structural phases. During the period 1994–1999, following the signing of the Oslo Accords, optimism prevailed for a final status solution; the regional Gaza economy grew on average by 6.1 per cent annually, while the West Bank grew by 10.7 per cent. In 2000, following the outbreak of the second intifada, Israel prohibited Palestinian workers from Gaza from working in Israel. Between 2000 and 2006, much of the Palestinian public and private infrastructure and institutions was destroyed, and the movement of Palestinian workers and goods was severely restricted. The Gaza economy grew by just 2 per cent annually between 2000 and 2006. Gaza continues to suffer from severe restrictions on land, air and maritime movement, coupled with recurrent hostilities since July 2007. From the onset of the imposition of the closure and severe economic and movement restrictions from 2007 to 2018, the economic growth of Gaza fluctuated sharply and grew on average by just 0.8 per cent annually, while the West Bank – also under occupation and facing restrictions, measures and control – grew by 6.6 per cent annually.

16. The share of Gaza in the Palestinian economy halved from 37 per cent in 1995 to 18 per cent in 2018 (see figure 2). Prior to 2007, its share in the Palestinian economy had never dropped below 31 per cent and averaged around 35 per cent. Moreover, investment in Gaza virtually disappeared, falling from 11 per cent of GDP in 1994 to just 2.7 per cent in 2018.¹⁹ Non-building investment remained minimal, at 0.2 per cent of GDP.

17. The performance of the regional Gaza economy has always been far below its potential owing to the occupation and its accompanying restrictive measures. The closure and severe economic and movement restrictions imposed on the Gaza Strip since 2007 and the subsequent recurrent hostilities continue to impede the realization of its full economic potential and have cultivated a profound economic and humanitarian crisis. Table 1 presents some economic indicators for 2006 (before) and 2018 (after).

18. In the 11-year period from 2007 to 2018, the economy of Gaza grew by just 4.8 per cent. Its share in the Palestinian economy contracted by 13 percentage points, from 31 per cent in 2006 to 18 per cent in 2018; GDP per capita shrank by 27 per cent, unemployment increased by 49 per cent and poverty increased by 42 per cent. Almost all GDP components remain below their 2006 levels.

B. Negatively affected productive sectors

19. In addition to the above-mentioned severe restrictions imposed on the agricultural and fishing sectors, the agriculture and manufacturing (tradable goods) sectors have also been hindered by restrictions on imports of technology and raw materials, which have limited their ability to expand, maintain competitiveness and create jobs. Certain fertilizers and a range of common pesticides feature on the Israeli “dual-use” list. Similarly, the inputs necessary for even basic manufacturing have been severely restricted, as they also feature on the list.

20. The destruction of infrastructure in Gaza by prolonged closure, severe economic and movement restrictions and recurrent rounds of hostilities have had a grave impact on access to electricity and clean water, as well as on the environment. Electricity shortages have severely suppressed key productive activities. In 2017 and 2018, electricity supply was restricted to 4 to 6 hours a day, and shortages continued to disrupt everyday life and hinder the delivery of basic services.²⁰ The availability of electricity in the whole Gaza Strip increased from about 6 hours per day in January 2018 to about 11 hours in January 2020.²¹ However, that does not mean that an average household in Gaza has access to electricity for 11 hours per day, as the electricity supply is insufficient to power all households at the same time.

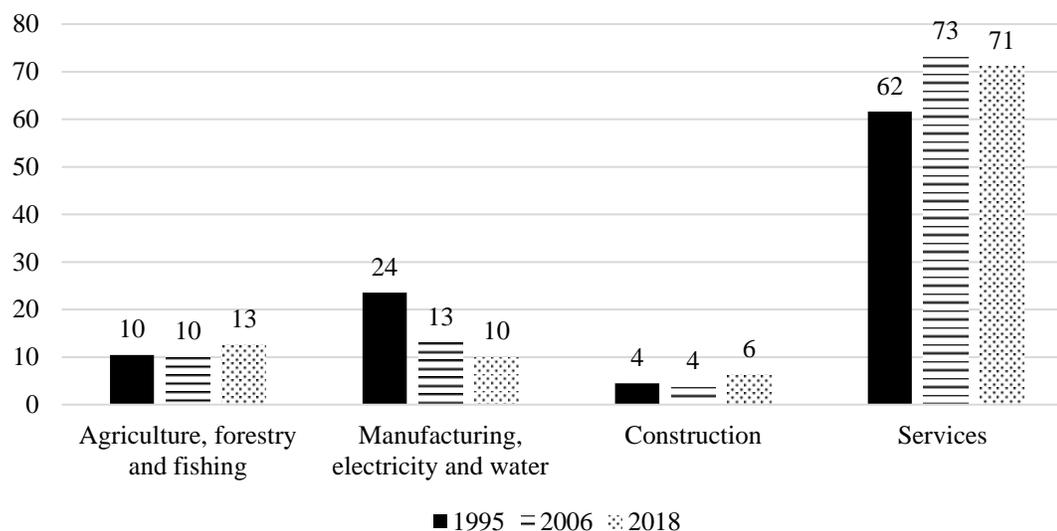

21. Consequently, the Gaza economy has undergone a reversal in industrialization and agriculturalization. The share of agriculture and manufacturing in the regional Gaza economy declined from 34 per cent in 1995 to 23 per cent in 2018 (see figure 3 below), while their contribution to employment fell from 26 to 12 per cent. This raises a serious concern related to the future development of the economy of the Gaza Strip and its capacity to realize economies of scale and expand employment.

22. Section IV below further elaborates on the impact of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities in Gaza, with a focus on how poverty has spread and deepened between 2007 and 2017.

IV. Impact of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities on poverty in Gaza

23. Using the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics surveys and census data,²² the present section traces the deterioration of household living conditions and welfare in Gaza between 2007 and 2017. The impact that the prolonged closure, severe economic and movement restrictions and military operations have had in terms of the cost for the Palestinian people will be assessed with respect to the poverty headcount and the poverty gap.²³ This makes it possible to estimate the increase in the minimal cost required to lift all households out of poverty, between 2007 and 2017.²⁴

A. Poverty in Gaza between 2007 and 2017²⁵

24. The sections below contain an analysis of the evolution of the level and depth of poverty in Gaza over the period 2007–2017 by applying two analytical methods:

²² See www.pcbs.gov.ps/default.aspx.

²³ “Headcount” refers to the proportion of households below the poverty line. Headcounts are an inaccurate measure of poverty in that they do not reflect its depth, and confound all households below the poverty line, without considering the fact that the degree to which different poor households fall below the poverty line may differ greatly. For example, the headcount poverty index would count a household as being below the poverty line whether it was \$0.01 below or \$100 below. The “poverty gap” addresses that inaccuracy by summing up the “distance” (in monetary terms) separating each household from the poverty line, ascribing a weight of 1 to all households below the poverty line and zero to those above. Intuitively, it represents the average percentage shortfall of households with respect to the poverty line. For the previous two hypothetical configurations, for a poverty line of \$200, the poverty gap would be equal to $0.01 \div 200 = 0.00005$ in the first case (a very small number), and equal to $100 \div 200 = 0.5$ in the second.

first using a sample from survey data; and second covering the population from the census.²⁶ The analysis covers poverty in Gaza, both over time and in comparison with the West Bank.

1. Survey-based method

25. The survey-based method directly uses the sample data in the Palestinian expenditures and consumption survey of 2007 and 2017 to calculate the relationship between total expenditure per adult equivalent and individual, household and location characteristics in the survey.²⁷ Taking the Eurostat and European Union definition of the poverty line as being 60 per cent of the national median total household expenditures per adult equivalent,²⁸ the real poverty lines for the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 2007 and 2017 are $123 and $255 (constant 2015 USD), respectively, per month.

26. The sample data in the two Palestinian expenditures and consumption surveys indicate severe deterioration in the welfare of households in Gaza between 2007 and 2017, as the proportion of households below the poverty line increased from 46.1 to 64.4 per cent and the poverty gap widened from 15.9 to 25.7 per cent.

2. Empirical best prediction method

27. One limitation of the above survey-based results is that they are based on relatively small samples. Recent developments in poverty mapping and small area estimation make it possible to improve the survey-based methods by combining survey and census data.²⁹ The Occupied Palestinian Territory is similar to most countries in that census data do not include information on household or individual consumption, expenditures or income. However, the Palestinian expenditures and consumption surveys and the decadal censuses (2007 and 2017) do collect data on a relatively broad set of common variables, including: location (urban, rural, refugee camp); characteristics of the household head (e.g., educational attainment); household demographic characteristics; employment status and sector of employment; access to basic services, such as water, through public networks; and the household's dwelling and physical assets.

28. To obtain the headcount and depth of poverty, the empirical best prediction method uses a three-step approach: first, the Palestinian expenditures and consumption survey data are used to estimate statistical regression equations of household expenditures per adult equivalent, as well as the household's characteristics (the estimation of the empirical best prediction is presented in the

²⁸ See https://ec.europa.eu/eurostat/statistics-explained/index.php/Glossary:At-risk-of-poverty_rate.

²⁹ See Chris Elbers, Jean O. Lanjouw and Peter Lanjouw, "Micro-level estimation of poverty and inequality", Econometrica, vol. 71, No. 1 (January 2003); and Isabel Molina, J.N.K. annex to the present report); second, the estimated coefficients obtained from the regressions are combined with the census data (for a much larger number of households) to impute the household's level of expenditures per adult equivalent; and third, the imputed measures of household expenditures are used to recalculate the headcount and poverty gap measures for each year.

29. Following those three steps, the empirical best prediction poverty indicators for 2007 and 2017 are presented in table 2 below, along with those of the survey-based method. The poverty headcount (rate) in 2007 is equal to 40.1 per cent, lower than the 46 per cent estimate of the survey-based method. This rises to 56 per cent in 2017, which is lower than the 64.5 per cent estimate of survey-based method, yet still demonstrates a very large increase over the 10-year period. Concomitantly, the empirical best prediction measure of the poverty gap in Gaza increases from 13.9 to 19.9 per cent between 2007 and 2017. While the magnitudes are lower than those of the survey-based method, they are still extremely large.

B. Estimated poverty cost of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities in Gaza

30. Building on the previous analysis, it is possible to calculate the smallest aggregate annual lump-sum transfer that will suffice to lift all households out of poverty (i.e., the minimum cost of eliminating poverty). A comparison between that cost in the two years of the most recent census – 2007 and 2017 – captures the poverty cost of the prolonged closure and severe economic and movement restrictions imposed and the military operations conducted by the occupying power. This is calculated as follows:

$$\text{Minimum cost of eliminating poverty} = \text{poverty gap} \times \text{poverty line} \times 12 \text{ months} \times \text{number of adult equivalents per household} \times \text{number of households.}$$

Using the poverty gap estimated by the empirical best prediction method (see table 2 above), the minimum real cost of eliminating poverty in constant 2015 USD in Gaza are:

$$2007 \text{ cost} = 0.1395 \times 123.7 \times 12 \times 4.49 \times 224848 = \text{real } $209 \text{ million;}$$

$$2017 \text{ cost} = 0.1987 \times 255.2 \times 12 \times 3.97 \times 347035 = \text{real } $838 \text{ million.}$$

31. The minimum yearly real cost of eliminating poverty has quadrupled between 2007 and 2017. The difference of $629 million (constant 2015 USD) between those years measures the cost of the prolonged closure and severe economic, movement restrictions and recurrent hostilities in terms of poverty. The difference represents 22.3 per cent of the Gaza GDP, or 4 per cent of the Occupied Palestinian Territory GDP, in 2017. This points to the degree of the cost of reversing the impact of the Israeli closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities on the welfare of households in Gaza.

32. The above analysis indicates that Gaza has suffered heavy blows to its economy and environment, as well as to the well-being of its population. However, the question remains as to what would have happened had Gaza not experienced closure, movement and economic restrictions and military operations. Section V below focuses on that question by estimating the loss of potential output during the period 2007–2018.

V. Estimated economic and poverty cost of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities: 2007–2018

A. Assessments of the impact of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities

33. Some attempts have been made to assess the impact of one or two of the military operations that Gaza endured over the 10 years in question. However, no attempt has been made to estimate the cumulative economic cost of the prolonged Israeli closure, the severe economic and movement restrictions and the military operations in Gaza. The present section contains a brief summary of previous assessments and estimates of the cumulative cost between 2007 and 2018.

34. The International Monetary Fund estimates that the damage of the Israeli military strike in 2008 and 2009 is equivalent to over 60 per cent of the total capital stock of Gaza, while the damage of the 2014 strike is equivalent to 85 per cent of its capital stock that existed after the 2008–2009 strike,³⁰ and that growth rates could have been three times the actual rates if Gaza had had the same access to production inputs as the West Bank.³¹

35. The World Bank indicates that, in 2014, in the 50 days that the hostilities took place, $460 million was shaved off the Gaza economy,³² and that lifting the closure could generate additional cumulative growth in the range of 32 per cent by 2025, while relaxing the dual-use list could generate an additional 11 per cent growth by 2025.³³

36. UNCTAD indicates that the direct economic losses of the 50-day military operation that started in December 2008 was about $2.5 billion (see TD/B/56/3). It also estimates that the value of assets damaged in Gaza as a result of the 2012 and 2014 military operations was more than $2.7 billion, and that, during the two operations, over 64,000 residential units and at least 1,000 industrial and commercial establishments were totally or partially damaged (see TD/B/62/3).

37. Following the 2014 military operation, the Palestinian National Authority estimated the cost of the reconstruction and recovery of Gaza at $3.9 billion.³⁴

B. Estimation of the economic cost of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities (2007–2018)

38. The endogeneity, overlapping of different causal factors and measurement problems limit the methodologies that could be used to estimate the cost borne by the Palestinian people due to the ongoing prolonged closure and severe economic and movement restrictions on Gaza and the three major military operations that took place during the period 2007–2018. Furthermore, the cost of this closure and restrictions cannot be estimated separately from that of those military operations. Nonetheless, an estimation of counterfactual growth paths (scenarios) for Gaza – that is, assuming that the closure, restrictions and military operations did not occur – from 2007 onwards, gives some indication of the economic losses (in terms of GDP) by measuring the deviation of the counterfactual scenarios from the historical GDP values.

39. Based on Gaza growth trends prior to 2007 and the relation between the regional economies in Gaza and the West Bank, two counterfactual growth paths (scenarios) were assessed. The actual historical economic performance in Gaza during the period 2007–2018 is used as a baseline scenario for estimating the potential economic losses. Scenario 1 assumes that the Gaza economy follows its own average historical growth for the period 1995–2006 and would continue to grow by 3.7 per cent annually from 2007 onwards. Scenario 2 assumes that, after 2007, the share of Gaza in the Occupied Palestinian Territory’s economy remains the same as in 2006. That assumes that Gaza grew at the same rate as the West Bank, i.e. 6.6 per cent annually, during the assessment period 2007–2018.

40. As shown in table 3 below, scenario 1 suggests that the annual real GDP of Gaza would have been, on average, 23.3 per cent higher than the baseline scenario, and that the cumulative economic (GDP) loss for the period 2007–2018 could reach $7.8 billion (constant 2015 USD), or 50 per cent of the Palestinian GDP in 2018. Scenario 2 indicates that the GDP of Gaza could have been, on average, 50 per cent higher than the baseline, and the cumulative economic (GDP) loss for the period could be $16.7 billion (constant 2015 USD); or 107 per cent of the Palestinian GDP in 2018.

41. As for the real per capita GDP (see figure 4 below), scenario 1 estimates that it could have reached $2,153 (constant 2015 USD) in 2018, or 46.7 per cent ($695) higher than the baseline level. Scenario 2, estimates that real GDP per capita could have reached $2,997 in 2018, which is $1,539 or 105.5 per cent higher than the actual level recorded in that year.

Figure 4
Gaza Strip: estimated real GDP per capita under two scenarios

(Constant 2015 USD)

42. The loss in potential GDP in the two counterfactual scenarios is significant, as it indicates that GDP per capita could have been considerably higher than it is today. However, it should be stressed that in both scenarios assume growth rates under occupation. In other words, they assume the persistence of all the restrictive measures imposed by the occupation in Gaza and the West Bank, with the only difference being the prolonged closure and severe economic and movement restrictions and the three major military operations. Furthermore, scenario 2 is more relevant as it shows that, if the closure and restrictions had not existed and those military operations had not happened, there would have been no rational reason to prevent the regional Gaza economy from maintaining its share in the Palestinian economy. Therefore, the estimates presented here are conservative and partial and do not include the total cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people in Gaza. Rather, they only capture the economic cost that resulted from the prolonged closure, the severe economic and movement restrictions and the military operations in Gaza during the period 2007–2018.

43. It is also important to emphasize that the above estimates do not include other costs that occurred during the Israeli military operations, such as the destruction of infrastructure, residential units and commercial structures. Evidently, the reconstruction that followed cost the Palestinian people and the international community billions of dollars.

44. Unlocking the economic potential of Gaza – by measures such as the construction of air and seaports, lifting all restrictions on access and movement, allowing full access to water and electricity, and utilizing the oil and natural gas off the shore of Gaza – would have a far greater impact than the estimates reported above.³⁵

C. Impact of the economic cost of the closure, restrictions and recurrent hostilities on poverty in Gaza

45. The present section extends the above analysis of the two counterfactual scenarios to the household level data to ascertain their implications on poverty. The tool for doing so is the growth incidence curve.³⁶

46. Growth incidence curves offer a transparent way to understand changes in the distribution of household expenditures over time. While the mean growth rate of household expenditures over a period of time is a useful datum, it says nothing about how different categories of households have benefitted (or not) from increases in average expenditures. For example, we can consider two categories of households: those below and those above the poverty line. If growth is pro-poor, a given mean increase in household expenditures per adult equivalent should benefit poor households more than non-poor households; the opposite is true if growth is not pro-poor. The curve plots out that relationship for each quantile of the population distribution: the horizontal axis represents each quantile of the distribution; and the vertical axis measures the percentage change in each quantile's total household expenditures over the period under consideration.

47. The growth incidence curve estimated for the Occupied Palestinian Territory, for the period 2007–2017 is presented in figure 5 below. The solid horizontal line in the figure represents the mean growth rate of household expenditures per adult equivalent. Any quantile of the population that benefitted more than the mean will be on a portion of the curve above that horizontal line; any quantile of the population that benefitted less than the mean will be below the line in the curve. Pro-poor growth corresponds, graphically, to a curve that is above the mean level of growth for lower quantiles of the expenditure distribution and below it for higher quantiles, leading to a downward-sloping curve. As indicated by the slope of the curve in figure 5, economic growth in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has been largely pro-poor. The poorest of the poor – those in the extreme left-hand portion of the curve – appear to have benefited more than the rest of the population.

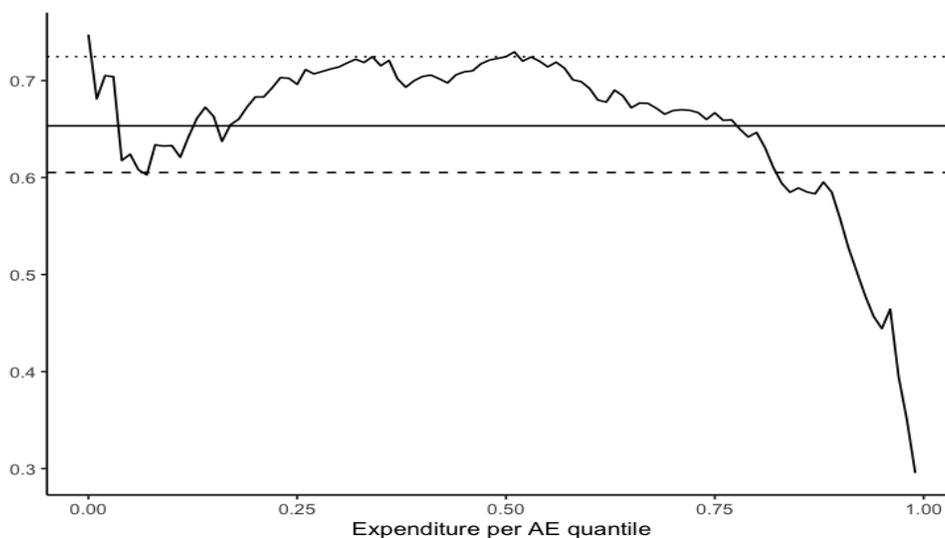

48. The economic growth rates estimated for scenarios 1 and 2 in the previous section imply different levels of real GDP per capita over the period under consideration. Real GDP per capita in 2017 for scenarios 1 and 2 would have been 37.4 and 86.1 per cent higher than the actual, respectively. The analysis here assumes that the average level of expenditures per adult equivalent would have followed the increases in GDP per capita of the two scenarios, but that those increases would have been distributed to different households proportional to their relative position along the growth incidence curve in figure 5.³⁷ Once the counterfactual values of household expenditures per adult equivalent are constructed, the direct (survey-based) and empirical best prediction methods described above are applied, while maintaining the poverty line at its actual monthly 2017 level of $255 (constant 2015 USD) per adult equivalent.

³⁷ For example, according to the Occupied Palestinian Territory growth incidence curve, a household in the twenty-fourth percentile of the distribution would have experienced a 70.2 per cent increase in its expenditures per adult equivalent between 2007 and 2017. Since the mean increase of household expenditures per adult equivalent was equal to 65.33 per cent, that household would then be assigned an increase in expenditures per adult equivalent of $(70.24 \div 65.33) \times 37.4$ per cent in scenario 1 and $(70.24 \div 65.33) \times 86.1$ per cent in scenario 2.

* From row 2 in table 2, above.

49. The results in table 4 represent another way of capturing the cost of the prolonged closure and recurrent hostilities, which are part of the larger cost of occupation, from a microeconomic perspective. Scenario 1, measured using the empirical best prediction method, shows a reduction in the poverty rate from 56.2 per cent to 35.1 per cent, while scenario 2 shows an even greater reduction, to 15 per cent. Concomitantly, scenario 1 shows a reduction in the poverty gap from 19.9 per cent to 11.9, and to 4.3 per cent using scenario 2. Given that the minimum total annual cost of eliminating poverty is directly proportional to the poverty gap, the results indicate that under scenario 1 those costs would have been halved, whereas in scenario 2 they would have been one-fifth only.

VI. Conclusion and recommendations

50. The increasing burden of poverty in Gaza calls for an immediate response. Economic growth should be restored, and the economic trajectory should be freed of the prolonged closure, the severe economic and movement restrictions and the attendant destruction. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development recommends that the international community, Israel and the State of Palestine consider the following:

(a) Only by fully lifting the debilitating Israeli closure, in line with Security Council resolution 1860 (2009), can we hope to resolve sustainably the humanitarian crisis. Furthermore, the indiscriminate launching of rockets and mortars towards Israeli civilian population centres is prohibited by international humanitarian law, and Palestinian militants must cease that practice immediately. Gaza should be allowed to trade freely with the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as well as with neighbouring Arab and global markets, and free movement should be restored for businesses, medical care, education, recreation and family unification.

(b) Priority should be given to the reconstruction of infrastructure, private and public structures and the productive base of Gaza, as well as the construction and operation of air and seaports;

(c) The electricity crisis should be addressed by rehabilitating, upgrading and securing fuel for the operation of the Gaza power plant at full capacity and constructing a water desalination plant to secure clean water supply for the population;

(d) The State of Palestine should be enabled to develop the offshore natural gas fields discovered in the 1990s in the sea area off the coast of Gaza. As elaborated by UNCTAD,³⁸ this would secure the required resources for the rehabilitation, reconstruction and recovery of the local Gaza economy.

51. Furthermore, given the widening gap in the living conditions between Gaza and the West Bank, it is critical that the important Egyptian-led intra-Palestinian reconciliation efforts continue. The United Nations stands firm in its support of the efforts by Egypt in that regard, and the Secretary-General calls upon all Palestinian factions to make serious efforts to ensure the reunification of Gaza and the occupied West Bank under a single, democratic, national government. Gaza is and must remain an integral part of a future Palestinian State as part of a two-State solution. It is high time to reintegrate it politically, administratively, fiscally, economically and socially, including East Jerusalem. The international community can play a key role in that regard.

52. Humanitarian and economic support will not replace political rights or statehood. The United Nations maintains its long-standing position that a lasting and comprehensive peace can only be achieved through a negotiated two-State solution. The Secretary-General will continue to ensure that the United Nations works towards the establishment of an independent, democratic, contiguous, sovereign and viable Palestinian State, living side-by-side in peace and security with Israel, with Jerusalem as the capital of both States.

Annex

Estimation of the empirical best prediction method

1. The first step of the empirical best prediction method is to estimate the statistical relationship that links household expenditures per adult equivalent to the household's observable characteristics, where these must be available in both the census and the household survey data. The table below shows the results of regressing log expenditures per adult equivalent (in constant 2015 USD) on the set of standard covariates, at the national level. To maximize comparability between the synthetic income measures that will be constructed using census data and the estimated coefficients, a common set of covariates over the two sample surveys were maintained in the two regression for 2007 and 2017.

2. There are two differences in the set of covariates for 2007 and 2017 regressions: (a) possession of a mobile telephone, which did not appear in the 2007 questionnaire; and (b) access to electricity, which was an issue in 2007 but no longer in 2017 (note that access to electricity does not take into account whether electricity is actually available, which, more often than not, is not the case in Gaza).

3. The regression results in the table reveal several interesting features. First, the divergence between households in Gaza and the West Bank is substantial: the expenditures per adult equivalent for a household in Gaza, is lower than a household in the West Bank by 44.1 and 43.2 per cent, in 2007 and 2017, respectively. Second, the household head's level of educational attainment remains an important determinant of expenditures. Third, the household employment status is paramount in terms of its expenditures. Employment in Israel, for instance, is associated with 21.3 and 16.3 per cent higher expenditures per adult equivalent, in 2007 and 2017, respectively. However, employment in Israel is not available to the Gaza workforce, which deepens the welfare divergence between Gaza and the West Bank. Fourth, characteristics of the household's dwelling, and its assets, are significantly associated with its expenditures per adult equivalent.

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: poverty in the West Bank between 2000 and 2019

Summary

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 75/20, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to report to it on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. The report builds on, and complements, the findings of the previous report, issued in 2020 (A/75/310).

Following the outbreak of the second intifada in the occupied Palestinian territory, on 28 September 2000, Israel tightened its closure policy and implemented more stringent measures in the territory. The impact of those actions on the fragile regional economy of the West Bank was not only a contraction by one third of its size between 2000 and 2002. More importantly, they have had a long-lasting negative impact that has affected all economic sectors for 20 years.

Even with high dependence on employment in Israel and its settlements, the West Bank regional economy experienced two decades of jobless growth, fostering an average of 18 per cent unemployment between 1995 and 2019. Without employment in Israel and in the settlements, the unemployment rate could have been 16 percentage points higher, at par with the extremely high rate in Gaza. The cumulative economic cost of the stricter Israeli measures during the period 2000–2019 is estimated at four and a half times the size of the West Bank regional economy in 2019.

The cost of occupation, in poverty terms, is also substantial, with the poorer segments of the population disproportionately affected. Had the tighter Israeli restrictions, imposed after the second intifada, not occurred, the 2004 poverty rate in the West Bank could have been 11.7 per cent, or only one third of the observed 35.4 per cent. The analysis conducted indicates that the real minimum cost of eliminating poverty in the West Bank jumped from $73 million (constant 2015 United States dollars) in 1998 (before the second intifada) to $356 million in 2004, and to $428 million in 2007.

The evolving and cumulative cost of occupation cannot be reversed without ending the occupation, in line with relevant United Nations resolutions. All mobility restrictions in the occupied Palestinian territory need to be lifted, and the contiguity of its constituent parts, including East Jerusalem, needs to be re-established. Palestinian public and private operators should be allowed to function in Area C, which represents at least 60 per cent of the West Bank. The United Nations maintains its position that a lasting and comprehensive peace can only be achieved through a negotiated two-State solution.

I. Introduction, objective and limitation

1. The present report follows four previous reports prepared by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), and submitted to the General Assembly, on the economic cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people (A/71/174, A/73/201, A/74/272 and A/75/310). The topic of the present report builds on, and complements, the findings of the previous report, which was focused on poverty and the cost of occupation in the Gaza Strip. The same indicators are used, and the same approach deployed, to evaluate the corresponding costs in the West Bank during the period 2000–2019. The year 2000 was selected as a starting date for the assessment because it was the first year that followed the imposition of additional detrimental measures and a stricter closure policy by the occupying Power after the outbreak of the second intifada, in September 2000.

2. As set out below, after the outbreak of the second intifada in the occupied Palestinian territory, Israel imposed a complex system of mobility restrictions,¹ which has effectively turned the West Bank into isolated islands. Those measures paralysed economic activity, inflicted serious dislocations and significant income losses and thus aggravated pre-existing and deep-seated structural weaknesses and vulnerabilities. They have entailed long-lasting effects, including volatile economic growth, persistently high unemployment and poverty rates and chronic internal and external deficits. Until the occupation is ended, those ramifications will continue to restrict Palestinian economic development and add to the cumulative cost of occupation for the Palestinian people.

3. The report provides details on and estimates of the economic cost of the Israeli closures and restrictions for the Palestinian people, with a focus on the socioeconomic conditions of households in the West Bank. The economic cost is estimated in terms of the potential economic growth that could have been realized if the additional harmful measures and stricter closure policy, imposed following the outbreak of the second intifada, had not occurred. It uses data from household expenditures and consumption surveys and census data to estimate the impact of Israeli policies on the poverty rate and poverty gap at the household level, leading to estimates of the minimum cost of eliminating poverty in the West Bank. The final section of the report contains some conclusions and recommendations.

4. It should be stressed that the estimates in the report are limited to the economic cost of occupation that resulted from the direct and long-lasting impact of the additional restrictive measures imposed by Israel on the West Bank following the outbreak of the second intifada, during the 2000–2019 period. The estimates presented therefore account only for a small part of the total cost of the Israeli occupation of the West Bank.

5. Those estimates do not include the impact of the restrictions in 2020 and 2021 associated with the coronavirus disease (COVID-19), nor the potentially substantial economic cost of events triggered by the threat of eviction of Palestinian families and confiscation of their properties in the Shaykh Jarrah neighbourhood of East Jerusalem in May 2021. The ensuing confrontations spread to the rest of the West Bank. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 31 Palestinians were killed, 7,516 injured and 798 arrested.² Most of the fatalities resulted from the use by Israeli security forces of live ammunition in the context of demonstrations or clashes or in response to attacks or attempted attacks. On the Israeli side, 1 person was killed and 137 were injured, including 90 members of Israeli security forces (see S/2021/584).

6. The economic cost of the recent tensions in the occupied Palestinian territory is likely to be enormous. Upon request by the General Assembly, that cost could be assessed and accounted for, then reported to the Assembly.

II. The lasting impact of restrictions in the West Bank

7. Subsequent to the failure of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization to reach an agreement at the conference held in July 2000 at Camp David, Maryland, in the United States of America, the second Palestinian uprising (intifada) broke out on 28 September 2000. In response, Israel immediately tightened its existing restrictions and imposed a total closure on the occupied Palestinian territory. According to the Israeli Information Center for Human Rights in the Occupied Territories (B'Tselem), the number of closure days increased dramatically in October 2000, reaching 244 days in 2001, then declined to 122 in 2006 before dropping to 34 days in 2007.³

8. On 29 March 2002, Israel launched its Operation Defensive Shield in the West Bank, which started with the reoccupation of Ramallah, followed by the other Palestinian cities. The Israel Defense Forces announced the official end of the operation on 21 April 2002. However, the incursions and re-incursions into Palestinian towns and cities from which the Israeli forces had withdrawn continued even beyond 2002 (see A/ES-10/186).

9. The term “closure” refers to the restrictions that Israel imposed on the free movement of Palestinian goods and labour across borders and within the West Bank and Gaza. Israel claims that such restrictions are required for security reasons. They take three forms: (a) internal closure within the West Bank and between the West Bank and Gaza, reinforced periodically by curfews; (b) the external closure of crossings between Israel and the West Bank and between Israel and Gaza; and (c) the external closure of international crossings between the West Bank and Jordan and between Gaza and Egypt.⁴

10. Under external border closure, Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza are not allowed to enter Israel or East Jerusalem or travel to Jordan. This contributes to disconnecting them from the rest of the world. Under internal closure, Palestinians are not allowed to move between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip or between urban centres within the West Bank and surrounding villages.⁵ Furthermore, Israel imposed full curfews on Palestinian cities and villages, which sometimes lasted for several months. That paralysed economic activity and deprived large segments of the population of their income and heightened their vulnerability to various types of shocks. Palestinians who worked in Israel could not make it to their workplace under curfew conditions, and the demand for non-regular wage workers throughout the West Bank diminished. Self-employed Palestinians in urban areas and refugee camps could not open shops.

11. In addition to the closures, curfews and destruction of private and public infrastructure, Israel withheld, and did not transfer to the Palestinian National Authority, public revenues from taxes on Palestinian imports (clearance revenues) from December 2000 to December 2002. This not only undermined the ability of the Authority to plan and manage its finances and fund development projects, but also posed a significant challenge to its ability to meet its financial obligations, in particular footing civil service wages and covering current expenditures.⁶

12. The complex system of mobility restrictions, which Israel tightened after October 2000, has effectively turned the West Bank into an archipelago of islands fragmented by physical barriers in the form of permanent and flying checkpoints, metal gates, earth mounds, earth walls, roadblocks and trenches, in addition to curfews. Palestinians were either restricted or entirely prohibited from using 41 roads covering more than 700 km of roadway. By 2005, 300 of those barriers were still in place, and the barrier wall constructed by Israel in the West Bank had created new physical and economic constraints.⁷ In 2020, there were 593 movement obstacles in the West Bank, and construction of the 710 km barrier wall, which is more than twice the length of the Green Line (corresponding to the June 1967 border), had reached 64 per cent.⁸

A. The direct impact of measures imposed by Israel following the outbreak of the second intifada

13. The direct impact and costs of the additional restrictive measures and stricter closure policy imposed by Israel on the West Bank after the outbreak of the second intifada include the following:

(a) The cumulative economic cost in terms of lost potential income over the 2000–2004 period is estimated at $6.4 billion, or 82 per cent of the Palestinian gross domestic product (GDP) in 1999 (see TD/B/52/2);

(b) The loss of physical capital is estimated at $3.5 billion, as a result of the destruction of private and public infrastructure and capital stock and the overuse of surviving physical capital, which represents 30 per cent of pre-2000 Palestinian capital stock (ibid.);

(c) In 2004 alone, 1,399 houses in the West Bank and Gaza were destroyed, rendering 10,683 people homeless. In the four years ending August 2004, 2,370 housing units were destroyed in the Gaza Strip, with approximately 22,800 people left homeless (ibid.);

(d) Palestinians are restricted from conducting business in Area C, which represents more than 60 per cent of the area in the West Bank. In 2013 the World Bank estimated that the lifting of restrictions on Palestinian economic activities in Area C would add 35 per cent to the Palestinian GDP;⁹

(e) The overall damage to the economy during the first 15 months following the outbreak of the second intifada was estimated at $2.4 billion, raw physical damage was estimated at $305 million, and lost investment opportunities were estimated at $1.2 billion;¹⁰

(f) About half of Palestinian households lost more than 50 per cent of their usual income, and about 16 per cent of them suffered from precarious living conditions. It is reported that the median monthly income in the occupied Palestinian territory decreased from NIS 2,500 ($750) before September 2000 to NIS 1,500 ($450) at the end of 2004.¹¹

B. The long-lasting impact of restrictions and closures

14. The additional restrictive measures and stricter closure policy imposed by Israel on the West Bank after the second intifada have aggravated the Palestinian economy's pre-existing and deep-seated structural weaknesses and vulnerabilities to external shocks arising from the prolonged occupation, as manifested by volatile economic growth, persistently high unemployment rates and chronic internal and external deficits.¹²

15. Two decades after the second intifada, the complex matrix of restrictions and controls over the Palestinian economy is still in place (see TD/B/65\(2\)/3). The only contiguous part is Area C, which is inaccessible to Palestinian producers, even though it has the most valuable natural resources, such as fertile land, minerals and stones, as well as tourist attractions (see TD/B/67/5).

16. Daily life in the West Bank is constrained by measures taken by the occupying Power that result in casualties among civilians and the demolition of homes and productive assets. Moreover, the construction of the barrier wall and the installation of hundreds of checkpoints by the occupying Power disrupt the movement of Palestinian people and goods and hinder production and trade.¹³ Furthermore, the uncertainty of the permit system for the employment of Palestinian labour in the Israeli economy and Israeli settlements has a negative impact on household consumption and the entire economy. Those factors have been mutually reinforcing, thereby deepening the structural distortions of the Palestinian economy.¹⁴

C. Distorted, unsustainable and jobless growth

17. Since the Oslo Accords and the establishment of the Palestinian National Authority in 1994, the Palestinian economy has gone through three phases. In the first phase, corresponding to the period 1995–2000, hopes for a final status agreement were high, Israeli restrictions were less severe, donor support was dedicated mainly to finance development, and the Palestinian government was able to more or less balance its recurrent budget. During that period, the West Bank regional economy registered 10.7 per cent annual growth, with the unemployment rate reaching an all-time low, at 9.5 per cent in 1999, as illustrated in figures I and II.

18. During the second phase, corresponding to the period 2000–2006, Israel tightened its closure policy and imposed further restrictive measures in the West Bank, in addition to its military operations. Meanwhile, GDP per capita fell by 35 per cent in three years, from $3,146 (2015 constant United States dollars) in 1999 to $2,040 in 2002, while the unemployment rate tripled, from 9.5 per cent to 28.5 per cent (see figure II). The poverty rate rose from 11.6 per cent in 1998 to 40.7 per cent in the West Bank in 2004.

19. In the phase corresponding to the period 2007–2019, the annual growth rate of real GDP and real GDP per capita in the West Bank were 6.2 per cent and 4.0 per cent, respectively. After 2007, Israeli restrictions were eased, but they remained significant obstacles to economic growth and development. During that period, growth was volatile, ranging from 13.1 per cent in 2008 to 1.6 per cent in 2019. Such volatility is usually associated with a weak capacity for employment generation. During this third phase, the unemployment rate in the West Bank was high, hovering around 18 per cent.

20. The incapacity of the constrained West Bank regional economy to generate jobs forces many Palestinians to seek employment in Israel and its settlements.¹⁵ Figure II shows a strong negative correlation between the share, in total West Bank employment, of Palestinians working in Israel and the settlements and the overall unemployment rate. This reflects the dependence of the West Bank regional economy on Israel and its settlements for employment.

21. Without employment in Israel and its settlements, unemployment in the West Bank would have been much higher, at levels not far from the extremely high rates in Gaza, blockaded since 2007.¹⁶ On average, West Bank unemployment would have been 16 percentage points higher during the period 1995–2019 (see figure II). In 2019, without employment in Israel and its settlements, unemployment could have been as high as 37 per cent, instead of the recorded 17 per cent. But even with employment in Israel, the West Bank regional economy has not been able to reduce, or even stabilize, its unemployment rate since 1999. In other words, the West Bank went through two decades of jobless growth and arrested development.

III. Economic costs of the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, 2000–2019

22. In 2018, the World Bank estimated that a 10 per cent easing of road obstacles to improve market access would increase local output by 0.6 per cent and that GDP per capita would be much higher than its observed level. Furthermore, some relaxation of other restrictions by Israel could, by 2025, enlarge the Palestinian economy by 33 per cent.¹⁷

23. According to a 2013 World Bank study, the closures reduce firm profitability and labour demand and, consequently, decrease the probability of being employed. They also reduce hourly wages and the number of days worked, while increasing the number of working hours per day. The study estimated that checkpoints alone cost the West Bank regional economy at least 6.0 per cent of its GDP, and that placing one checkpoint one minute away from a locality reduces the probability of being employed by 0.41 per cent, the hourly wage by 6.3 per cent and working days by 2.6 per cent.¹⁸ According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, the economy loses 60 million work-hours yearly (equivalent to $274 million) as a result of mobility restrictions.¹⁹

24. Estimates of the economic costs incurred by the Palestinian people as a result of the significant tightening of Israeli closures and restrictions in the West Bank, in addition to its military operations, following the outbreak of the second intifada are provided below. As explained above, the direct result was the shrinking of the regional economy of the West Bank by one third during the period 2000–2003. It should be noted, however, that the reduction in the size of the economy has triggered a long-lasting cost that will continue to accumulate as long as those restrictions continue and as long as the occupying Power prevents the rebuilding of the eroded economic base.

25. On 28 September 2000, immediately after the outbreak of the second intifada, the occupying Power significantly tightened mobility and other restrictions imposed on the West Bank. It is difficult to determine the date on which those restrictions were relaxed to their pre-intifada levels. The estimation of the direct, long-lasting cost of the Israeli restrictions imposed after the second intifada is therefore based on a counterfactual growth path (scenario) of the West Bank regional economy that assumes that the significantly tighter Israeli restrictions, stricter closure policy and military operations were absent during the period 2000–2006.

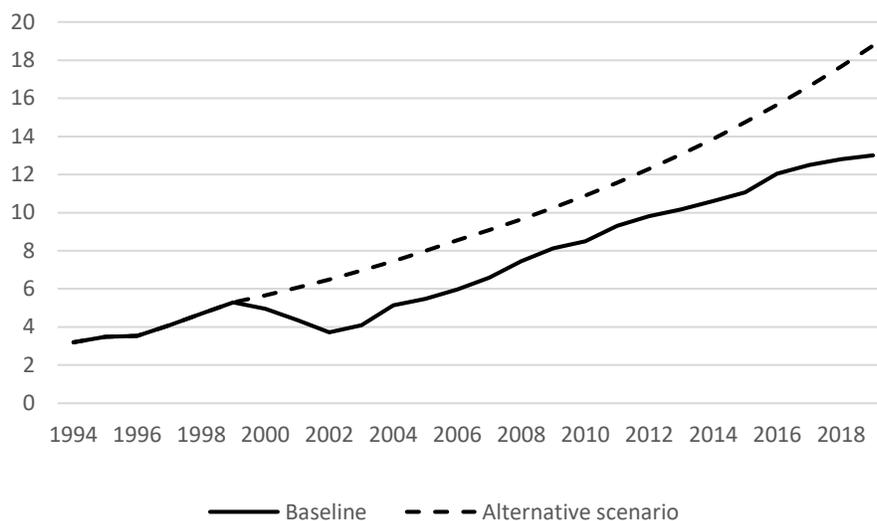

26. It should be stressed that this exercise is not aimed at answering the question, “What if there was no occupation?” Rather, it is designed to explore the implications and economic cost of the Israeli closures, restrictions and military operations that followed the outbreak of the second intifada by exploring what the situation could have been, had those events not occurred.

27. A counterfactual growth scenario was constructed, on the basis of the growth rate in the West Bank in the period prior to the second intifada (1995–1999) and the period that followed (2007–2019), for the period 2000–2006. That alternative scenario presumes that, between 2000 and 2003, the 29.5 per cent contraction of the West Bank regional economy did not occur, nor did the economic rebound of the three years that followed. Instead, it is assumed that, in the period 2000–2006, the economy grew at the compounded annual rate of 7.1 per cent, which was the average annual growth rate for the periods 1995–1999 and 2007–2019.

28. The results shown in figure III and table 1 suggest that the loss of potential GDP reflected by the counterfactual scenario is significant, in the sense that per capita output would have been significantly higher than it actually was. Under the alternative scenario, during the period 2000–2019, annual West Bank GDP would have been, on average, 35 per cent higher as compared with the observed (baseline) scenario, leading to a cumulative loss in potential real GDP of $57.7 billion (constant 2015 United States dollars), which is equivalent to four and a half times the 2019 GDP of the West Bank and three and a half times the 2019 GDP of the occupied Palestinian territory.

29. Without the tighter Israeli restrictions, stricter closure policy and military operations following the outbreak of the second intifada, it is estimated that the West Bank GDP per capita would have been $2,142, or 44 per cent, higher than it was in the baseline scenario in 2019 (see table 1). It is important to stress that the above results are only estimates of lost potential GDP, they do not include the cost of damage and destruction of assets by the Israeli military operations and other measures.

IV. Estimated poverty cost of occupation

30. This section provides an assessment of the deterioration in the welfare and living conditions of Palestinians in the West Bank as a result of the tighter restrictions that Israel imposed on the West Bank after the second intifada. Using the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics household survey data and census data, the poverty headcount, poverty gap and minimal cost of eliminating poverty were estimated for the period 1998–2017.²⁰

31. To evaluate the impact of the Israeli restrictions, poverty indicators are also estimated under the assumption that those restrictive measures had not been imposed, as in the counterfactual growth scenario described above. For the following analysis, the same terminologies and methodologies were applied as for the estimation presented by UNCTAD in its 2020 report to the General Assembly (A/75/310).

32. The poverty headcount is defined as the proportion of households living below the poverty line.²¹ Headcounts do not take into account the severity or depth of poverty, which is reflected by how far a given household falls below the poverty line. The poverty gap addresses that issue by adding the distance, in monetary terms, separating each household from the poverty line. The poverty gap therefore represents the average percentage shortfall of households relative to the poverty line.

33. The two poverty indicators were measured for selected years to assess the impact of the Israeli restrictive measures: (a) 1998, before the second intifada; (b) 2004, during the second intifada; (c) 2007, soon after the second intifada; and (d) 2017, more than a decade after the second intifada. As explained in the previous report (A/75/310), poverty indicators are estimated using two methods: the survey-based method and the empirical best prediction method. The latter improves the accuracy of poverty measures by combining information from expenditure and consumption surveys with the large sample available from census data.

A. Poverty in the West Bank²²

34. Using the relatively smaller household survey data set, the mean expenditure per adult equivalent²³ and the poverty line of 60 per cent of the national median total household expenditures per adult equivalent²⁴ are calculated for 1998, 2004, 2007 and 2017. The problem with that poverty line, when assessing the evolution of poverty in the West Bank over time, is that the median level of income (and thus 60 per cent of that median level) fell systematically in the wake of the second intifada, as can be seen in table 2.

35. Using this method, only the level of poverty relative to each year's income distribution is considered, and not the precipitous fall in absolute living standards engendered by the restrictive Israeli measures. It is therefore not surprising that, using the above definition, the poverty rate and the poverty gap remained roughly constant. In contrast, when the 1998 poverty line ($176) was used, the evolutions of the poverty headcount and poverty gap differed greatly, as they correctly reflected the fact that the additional restrictive measures imposed after the second intifada led to a drastic fall in living standards in the West Bank.

1. Survey-based method

36. The survey-based method directly uses the sample data in the Palestinian expenditures and consumption surveys to calculate the relationship between total expenditure per adult equivalent and individual, household and location characteristics in the survey. The survey samples indicate that the percentage of households in the West Bank living below the corresponding year's poverty line was 11.6 in 1998, 15.2 in 2004, 13.5 in 2007 and 13.7 per cent in 2017. Similarly, the poverty gap remained stable over time, between 2.8 and 4.0 per cent in the selected years.

37. Nevertheless, when the poverty line was kept at its 1998 level (see table 3), the poverty rate increased from 11.6 per cent in 1998 to 35.4 per cent in 2004, following the introduction of the post-intifada restrictions. It declined slightly, to 30.2 per cent, in 2007, but only returned to its pre-second intifada level 20 years later, in 2017. The poverty gap quadrupled, from 2.8 per cent in 1998 to 11.0 per cent in 2004, and only returned to its 1998 level in 2017.

38. The Gini coefficients generated from survey data also indicate that the impact of the Israeli restriction was more severe on the poorer segments of the population. This, in turn, led to an increase in inequality after the second intifada.²⁵ The Gini coefficient increased from 0.325 in 1998 to 0.362 in 2004, and again to 0.393 in 2007, before declining to 0.336 in 2017. Thus, it took 20 years for inequality to return to its 1998 level.

2. Empirical best prediction method

39. To mitigate the potential inefficiency of estimating of poverty indicators using the small sample from the survey-based method, the empirical best prediction method combines the survey data with much more extensive census data.²⁶ Explanations concerning the empirical best prediction method and the underlying regression analysis are presented in the annex to the present report.

40. As with most countries, Palestinian census data do not include information on household consumption, expenditures or income. However, through the Palestinian expenditures and consumption surveys of 2004, 2007 and 2017 and the censuses of 2007 and 2017, data are compiled on a relatively broad set of common variables, including location (whether a household lives in an urban or rural area or in a refugee camp); characteristics of the household head (such as educational attainment); demographic characteristics of the household; sector of employment; employment status; access to basic services, such as public water; characteristics of the dwelling; and household assets.

41. As shown in table 3, the poverty headcount and gap measured using the empirical best prediction method are approximately 6 percentage points higher than their survey-based counterparts. The poverty headcounts using the empirical best prediction method in 2004, 2007 and 2017 are estimated at 21, 19 and 20 per cent, respectively. Concomitantly, the measure of the poverty gap in the West Bank using the empirical best prediction method is higher than the survey-based method by about 2 percentage points in each of those years.

42. However, when the 1998 poverty line of $176 is used, the evolutions of the poverty headcount and the poverty gap are completely different, and it becomes clear that the tighter restrictions, imposed following the intifada by the occupying Power, led to a substantial increase in poverty. As shown in the bottom half of table 3, by holding the poverty line at its 1998 level, the poverty rate increased from 11.6 per cent in 1998 to 40.7 per cent in 2004, and was still at 35.2 per cent in 2007. It only returned to its pre-second intifada level 20 years later, in 2017. The poverty gap was nearly two and half times higher in 2004 using the 1998 poverty line, reaching 14.3 per cent, and also only returned to its 1998 level in 2017.

B. Estimated post-second intifada poverty cost of restrictions and closures in the West Bank

43. The minimum cost of eliminating poverty is equivalent to the least monetary aggregate of annual lump-sum transfer needed to lift all households up to the poverty line. It is calculated as follows:

$$\text{minimum cost of eliminating poverty} = \text{poverty gap} \times \text{poverty line} \times 12 \text{ months} \times \text{number of adult equivalents per household} \times \text{number of households.}$$

Using the poverty gap estimated by the empirical best prediction method (see table 3), the minimum real cost of eliminating poverty in constant 2015 United States dollars in the West Bank in 1998, 2004, 2007 and 2017 was calculated and is reported in table 4.

44. Following the tighter closures and restrictions imposed by Israel after the second intifada, the annual minimum real cost of eliminating poverty in the West Bank increased nearly fivefold between 1998 and 2004, from $73 million (constant 2015 United States dollars) to $356 million, reaching $428 million in 2007 (almost six times the minimum cost in 1998). The difference between the 1998 minimum cost and that of the years that followed is a measure of the cost of the Israeli measures in terms of poverty. As presented in table 4, that difference was equivalent to more than 5 per cent of the West Bank GDP in 2004 and 2007. Some 17 years after the second intifada, the percentage difference was 0.7 per cent of the GDP, which reflects the long-lasting effects of the restrictive Israeli measures.

V. Impact of the economic cost of occupation on poverty in the West Bank

45. The question of what the poverty rate and poverty gap would be had the tighter Israeli restrictions, stricter closure policy and military operations not been imposed following the outbreak of second intifada is addressed in this section. The answer is determined by estimating the poverty indicators associated with growth rates of the West Bank regional economy in the counterfactual scenario set out in table 1.

46. The device used for answering that question is the growth incidence curve,²⁷ which offers a transparent way to understand changes in the distribution of household expenditures over time. The mean growth rate of household expenditures is a useful indicator, but does not provide any idea about how different categories of households have benefited, or not benefited, from increases in average expenditures. If growth is pro-poor, a given mean increase in household expenditures per adult equivalent should benefit poor households more than non-poor households. Graphically, pro-poor growth corresponds to a growth incidence curve that is above the mean level of growth for lower quantiles of the expenditure distribution, and below it for higher quantiles, leading to a downward-sloping curve (see figure IV).

47. The immediate effect of the tighter Israeli closures and restrictions imposed on the West Bank after the second intifada was more severe for the poorer segments of the population, as illustrated by the upward sloping nature of the top two growth incidence curves shown in figure IV. It was only after the restrictive measures were somewhat relaxed in the past decade that growth in the West Bank became relatively pro-poor (bottom growth incidence curve in figure IV).

Figure IV

West Bank: growth incidence curves, 1998–2004, 2004–2007 and 2007–2017

(Percentage change in total household expenditures)

Source: UNCTAD calculations.

Note: The growth incidence curve plots the distribution of households' expenditure per adult equivalent over the entire population: the horizontal axis represents each quantile of the distribution, and the vertical axis measures the percentage change in the total household expenditures of each quantile over the analysis period. The horizontal solid line in each of the above graphs represents the mean growth rate of household expenditures per adult equivalent, and the dotted line and the dashed line represent growth at the mean and median, respectively. Any quantile of the population that benefited more than the mean will be on the curve above the horizontal solid line; any quantile of the population that benefited less than the mean will be on the curve below that line. A pro-poor growth therefore corresponds to a downward-sloping curve.

Abbreviation: AE, adult equivalent.

48. The counterfactual poverty headcount and poverty gap were estimated by applying the economic growth rate of the counterfactual scenario (see table 1), the survey-based method and the monthly poverty line of 1998, namely, $176 per adult equivalent (constant 2015 United States dollars). For 2004, it was assumed that the relative growth of each household's expenditures per adult equivalent would have followed that of the 1998–2004 growth incidence curve. For 2017, in order to ascertain what might have happened had a more pro-poor growth pattern been obtained, it was assumed that the relative growth of each household's expenditures per adult equivalent would have followed the 2007–2017 growth incidence curve for the entire 1998–2017 period.

49. The results are in line with the previous analysis: the counterfactual poverty rate in 2004 would have been 11.7 per cent, in contrast to the actual rate of 35.4 per cent. Similarly, the poverty gap in the counterfactual scenario would have been 4.8 per cent instead of the recorded 11.0 per cent (see table 5). For 2017, the counterfactual poverty rate would have been 6.0 per cent instead of 10.3 per cent, and the poverty gap would have increased slightly, to 4.5 instead of 2.5 per cent.²⁸

50. The clear finding is that the post-second intifada closure policy and restrictions thwarted West Bank economic expansion and led to massive losses in inhabitants' livelihoods, in particular for households living below the 1998 poverty line.

VI. Conclusions and recommendations

51. The tighter closures and restrictions imposed by Israel on the West Bank after the second Palestinian intifada have aggravated the economy's deep-seated and structural weaknesses and vulnerability to internal and external shocks. This is manifested by volatile economic growth, chronic fiscal and external deficits and persistently high unemployment and poverty rates. Not only did those measures have harmful short-term effects, but, more importantly, they also had long-lasting impacts that continue to constrain the regional economy of the West Bank until today.

52. The West Bank regional economy experienced two decades of jobless growth, with the unemployment rate averaging 18 per cent between 1995 and 2019. Without employment in Israel and its settlements, the unemployment rate would have been 16 percentage points higher, at par with the extremely high rate in the Gaza Strip, which has been under closure since 2007. The cumulative economic cost of the tighter Israel restrictions during the period 2000–2019 is estimated at $58 billion (constant 2015 United States dollars), equivalent to four and a half times the size of the regional economy of the West Bank, or three and a half times the size of the entire economy of the occupied Palestinian territory in 2019.

53. In terms of poverty, the impact of the tighter Israeli restrictions was severe and long-lasting, especially for the poorer segments of the population in the West Bank, who were less able to benefit from the economic recovery after the second intifada until 2007. Without the tighter Israeli restrictions imposed after the second intifada, the poverty rate in the West Bank would have been equal to 11.7 per cent in 2004, instead of 35.4 per cent, while the poverty gap would have been equal to 4.8 per cent instead of 11.0 per cent. Furthermore, the real minimum cost of eliminating poverty in the West Bank jumped from $73 million (constant 2015 United States dollars) in 1998 to $356 million in 2004, and $428 million in 2007.

54. Member States may wish to consider the following:

(a) Terminating and reversing the evolving and cumulative cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people cannot be realized without ending the occupation, in line with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

(b) The fulfilment of paragraph 9 of General Assembly resolution 75/20 requires the establishment, within the United Nations system, of a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework to assess the costs of occupation and report the results to the Assembly. The establishment of such a framework will require securing additional resources (see A/71/174, paras. 2, 10 and 35; and A/73/201).

55. Israel, as the occupying Power, should:

(a) Enable the Palestinian public and private sectors to develop agricultural, industrial, commercial and mining business in Area C (at least 60 per cent of the area in the West Bank), which contains the most valuable natural resources, including fertile land, minerals, stones and tourist attraction sites in the occupied Palestinian territory;

(b) Lift all the mobility restrictions in the occupied Palestinian territory and re-establish the contiguity of the territory by reconnecting East Jerusalem and all the cities and villages in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip with each other. Gaza is, and must remain, an integral part of a future Palestinian State as part of a two-State solution. The focus must be on lifting the debilitating closures in Gaza, in line with Security Council resolution 1860 \(2009\) and, ultimately, returning to a peace process that will end the occupation and create a viable two-State solution;

(c) End and reverse all settlement activities in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, as called for by the Security Council in its resolution 2334 \(2016\), in which it reaffirms that the establishment by Israel of settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, has no legal validity and constitutes a flagrant violation under international law.

56. The State of Palestine may wish to consider implementing pro-poor and inclusive growth strategies that target the poor and involve large-scale investment in employment-intensive sectors, so as to reduce poverty and generate sufficient decent job opportunities in the domestic economy and, consequently, reduce dependence on the precarious employment situation in Israel and its settlements.

57. The Palestinian people's right to statehood cannot be replaced by humanitarian and economic assistance, essential as these may be in the interim. The United Nations will continue to work towards the realization of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East on the basis of relevant United Nations resolutions, including resolutions 242 \(1967\), 338 \(1973\), 1397 \(2002\), 1515 \(2003\), 1850 \(2008\), 1860 \(2009\) and 2334 \(2016\), an end to the occupation that began in 1967 and the establishment of a sovereign, democratic, viable and contiguous Palestinian State, existing side by side in peace with a secure Israel. It is only by realizing the vision of two States living side by side in peace, security and mutual recognition, with Jerusalem as the capital of both Israel and the State of Palestine, and all final status issues resolved permanently through negotiations, that the legitimate aspirations of both peoples will be achieved.

Annex

Estimation of the empirical best prediction method

1. The empirical best prediction method follows three steps to estimate the poverty headcount and gap. First, data from the expenditures and consumption surveys are used to estimate regression equations for household expenditures per adult equivalent on the basis of the observable characteristics of households. Second, the estimated coefficients of the regressions are combined with the census data to impute household expenditures per adult equivalent for the larger sample of households included in the census.¹ Third, the imputed measures of household expenditures are used to recalculate the poverty headcount and poverty gap measures for each year. For the statistical relationship linking household expenditures per adult equivalent to the household characteristics to be estimated, this information must be available in both the survey data and the census data that constitute the basis for the estimation.

2. The table below shows the results of regressing log expenditures per adult equivalent (in constant 2015 United States dollars) on the set of standard covariates, at the national level. To maximize comparability between the synthetic income measures that will be constructed using census data and the estimated coefficients, a common set of covariates over the three sample surveys were maintained in the regressions for 2004, 2007 and 2017. There are three exceptions, namely: employment abroad in 2004; employment in Israel and the settlements in 2004; and access to electricity in 2017. Of course, the regressions should not be interpreted in causal terms.

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: the toll of the additional restrictions in Area C, 2000–2020

Summary

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 75/20, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to report to it on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. This report complements the findings of previous UNCTAD reports submitted to the Assembly (A/71/174, A/73/201, A/74/272, A/75/310 and A/76/309).

With the onset of the occupation in 1967, Israel implemented a long-term policy for the establishment of settlements in Area C of the occupied West Bank and in occupied East Jerusalem. To facilitate the expansion of settlements, Israel imposed strict restrictions on Palestinian economic activities in Area C, over and above those imposed in Areas A and B of the West Bank. Israel, the occupying Power includes 70 per cent of Area C within the boundaries of the regional councils of settlements, rendering that area off limits for Palestinian development. Meanwhile, Palestinian access to the remainder of Area C remains heavily restricted.

A variety of controls imposed by occupation constrain economic development in Areas A and B in the West Bank. These include the ban on the importation of certain technology and inputs under the dual-list system and a myriad of mobility and other restrictions which inflate the cost of production and undermine competitiveness of Palestinian producers in domestic and foreign markets.

This report estimates the economic cost of the additional restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in the remainder of Area C. The annual cost of these restrictions is estimated at 25.3 per cent of West Bank gross domestic product (GDP) and the cumulative GDP loss during the period 2000–2020 is estimated at $50 billion ($45 billion constant 2015 dollars), about three times West Bank GDP in 2020 and over 2.5 times Palestinian GDP in the same year. The cost is estimated based on an innovative, well-established methodology which uses nighttime luminosity captured by satellite sensors over a span of time.

Moreover, the contribution of Area C settlements and of occupied East Jerusalem, to the economy of Israel is estimated at an average of $30 billion (constant 2015 dollars) per year, or 2.7 times annual Palestinian GDP during the period 2000–2020. In other words, the cumulative contribution of settlements to the economy of Israel between 2000 and 2020 is estimated at $628 billion (constant 2015 dollars), or 2.7 times Palestinian GDP during that period.

Full Palestinian access to all of Area C is a sine qua non for the sustainable development of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and for the emergence of a viable, contiguous Palestinian State based on the two-State solution, in line with relevant United Nations resolutions. This requires ending and reversing settlement activities and lifting all restrictions on Palestinian development in Area C and beyond. As envisioned in General Assembly and Security Council resolutions, a lasting and comprehensive peace can be achieved only through a negotiated two-State solution.

I. Objective and limitation

1. The present report is an addition to five previous reports, prepared by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and submitted to the General Assembly, on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. This report adds to the findings of its predecessors, providing further aspects of the complex and extensive economic cost exacted by the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

2. The present 2022 report focuses on the economic cost of the Israeli occupation of Area C, which accounts for about 60 per cent of the total area of the occupied West Bank. While the occupation also imposes significant restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in Areas A and B, it imposes more restrictions in Area C. This report estimates the cost of these additional restrictions to economic activities in Area C, outside the settlements. The cost to economic activities is estimated by applying an innovative yet well-established methodology that uses nighttime luminosity (NTL), captured by satellite sensors over a span of time, to estimate economic activity.

3. The estimation covers the period 2000–2020. The year 2000 was chosen as a starting point for the estimation, as it was supposed to be the first year following the end of the five-year “interim period”¹ stipulated by the 1993 Oslo Accords. Nevertheless, more than two decades later, the political and economic arrangements of the said interim period continue to shape the reality of Palestinian life on the ground and Israeli settlements, which are illegal under international law, continue to expand in Area C, inflicting considerable damage on the livelihood of the Palestinian people not only in Area C but throughout the entire Occupied Palestinian Territory. The inability of Palestinian producers to access the resources of Area C pre-empts positive spillover effects to the rest of the Palestinian economy through forward and backward linkages. Furthermore, the loss of potential income undermines the fiscal capacity of the Palestinian Government and thus undermines the development of the whole economy.²

4. The report considers these economic costs from two perspectives. First, it estimates conservatively the potential Palestinian gross domestic product (GDP) that has been lost but could have been realized if Palestinian economic activities in Area C (excluding the settlements in that Area and not including East Jerusalem) had been subjected to the same level of restrictions imposed by the occupying Power on economic activities in Areas A and B in the West Bank. Second, it offers an estimation of the portion of Israeli GDP produced in East Jerusalem and in settlements elsewhere in the West Bank.

5. It should be stressed that the estimation in this report accounts for only a fraction of the cost for the Palestinian people emanating from the Israeli occupation of Area C during the period 2000–2020. The estimation includes neither the cost of the presence of settlements and the associated loss of land and natural resources nor the cost of the first layer of restrictions deployed in Areas A, B and C. The cost estimated here pertains only to the additional restrictions on economic activity applied in Area C over and above those imposed on Areas A and B. It is an even smaller fraction of the staggering total cost that occupation imposes on the whole of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as documented by UNCTAD and other international organizations.

² See Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

II. Settlements, restrictions and the fragmentation of the West Bank

6. The occupying Power deploys a matrix of administrative and physical controls over Palestinian resources, trade and the movement of people. It claims that such restrictions are required for security reasons. In the West Bank, divided into different administrative areas, the multilayer control system that impedes the movement of Palestinian people and goods includes application of a stringent permit regime, bureaucratic controls and hundreds of permanent and flying checkpoints, gates, earth mounds, roadblocks and trenches in addition to the Wall and the physical presence of settlements and the infrastructure networks that sustain them. This matrix of control transforms the West Bank into an archipelago of scattered islands and increases the travel distance between towns and localities as well as the transportation cost. Elements of this complex control system are mutually reinforcing and ultimately contribute to the expansion of settlements.

7. In accordance with the stipulations of the 1993 Oslo Accords, the occupied West Bank was divided into three administrative areas. Area A was placed under the civil and security administration of the Palestinian National Authority. It represents about 18 per cent of the total area of the West Bank and includes the Palestinian cities and most of the Palestinian population of the West Bank. Area B, which represents approximately 22 per cent of the area of the West Bank, is largely rural and subject to Palestinian civil control and joint Israeli-Palestinian security control. Area C, which accounts for about 60 per cent of the area of the West Bank, incorporates all Israeli settlements and is fully under Israeli civil and security control.

8. The Oslo Accords stipulate that Area C would gradually be transferred to the Palestinian National Authority over the course of a five-year period, ending in 1999. However, settlements continued to grow relentlessly, further fragmenting the West Bank and undermining Palestinian livelihoods not only in Area C but throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

9. Areas A and B are subdivided into 166 islands with no contiguity and surrounded by Area C, which is the only contiguous part of the West Bank. Area C is largely inaccessible to Palestinian producers, although it is the largest area and has the most valuable natural resources, such as fertile land, minerals, stone, tourist attractions and ingredients for cosmetic products. The wall, together with the settlements, deepens the economic, physical, administrative and legal fragmentation of the occupied Palestinian territory (figure I).

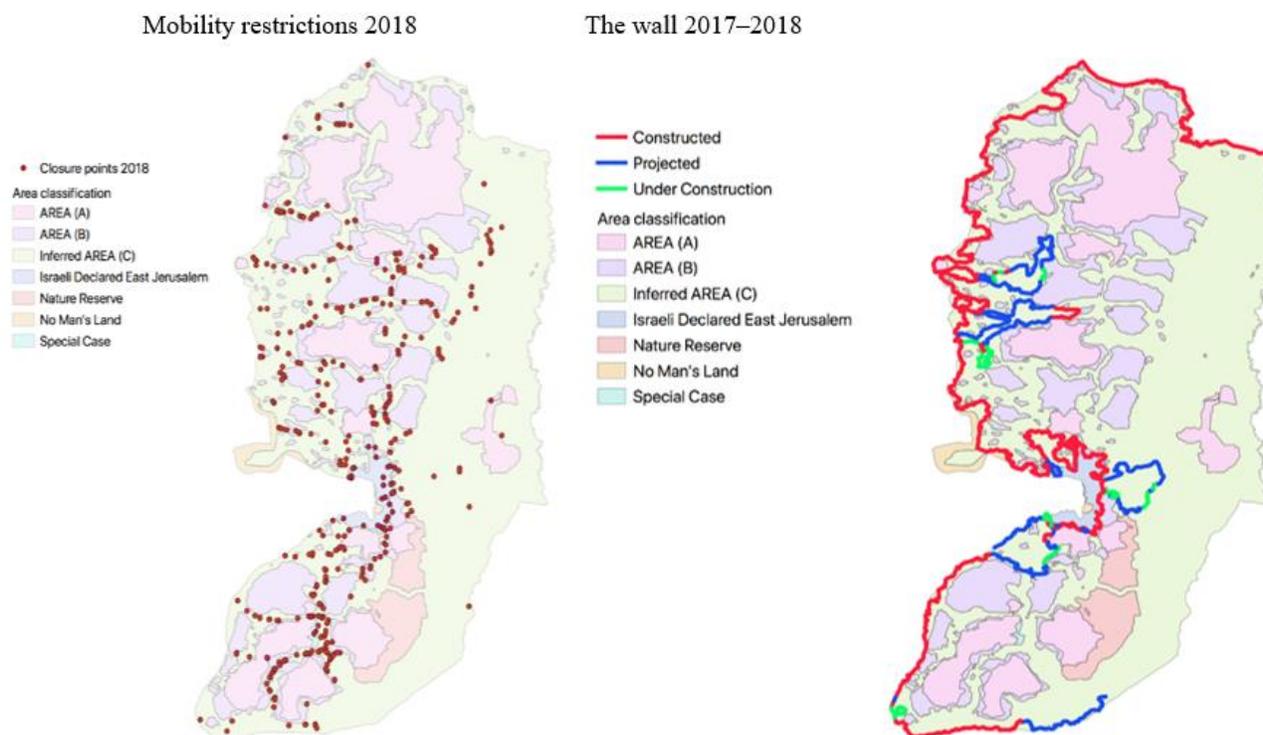

10. In 1967, Israel began establishing settlements in the occupied West Bank, with the growth of settlements in recent years bringing 70 per cent of Area C within the boundaries of their regional councils and rendering that chunk off limits for Palestinian use and development (figure II). Palestinian access to the remainder of Area C is heavily restricted. The present report estimates the economic cost of the additional restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in the remaining 30 per cent of Area C. Those restrictions facilitate the establishment of settlements and their expansion, they foster the setting aside of land and natural resources for settlers and create a difficult environment which forces the Palestinian population to leave Area C.

11. The occupying Power provides significant incentives to facilitate industrial and agricultural ventures, and hundreds of thousands of Israeli citizens were encouraged to move to subsidized settlements, where standards of living are, on average, higher than in Israel.³

12. The settler population rose from 198,315 in 2000 to 311,136 in 2010 and to more than 650,000 in early 2021.⁴ However, in several resolutions, the Security Council emphasized the illegality of settlements and the acquisition of territory by force. In its resolution 2334 (2016), the Council reaffirmed that establishment by Israel of settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, has no legal validity and constitutes a flagrant violation under international law and a major obstacle to the achievement of the two-State solution and a just, lasting and comprehensive peace.

13. Through settlements and by supporting and subsidizing related residential and agricultural activities, the occupying Power appropriates Palestinian natural resources, including water, while limiting the ability of Palestinian farmers to dig wells and access the water they need.⁵

14. Settlements create a structure of dispossession, they determine the land and roads Palestinians cannot use, the route of the wall and the location of checkpoints, and otherwise restrict the movement of Palestinian people, including workers, and goods. Palestinians and settlers do not have equal rights in the territory controlled by Israel, as attested, inter alia, by different laws and unequal access to factors of production, land, roads, infrastructure, water resources and basic services.⁶

15. “Outposts” in the occupied West Bank are also being established. In the first half of 2021, there were 150 outposts, devoted mostly to agricultural and animal production. Outposts are illegal even under Israeli law, yet some receive public and State support through various direct and indirect means.⁷ They are often integrated into the infrastructure networks serving settlements, which enables them to receive water and electricity, among other vital services. Settlers in some outposts have access to mortgages, roads and, in some cases, schools and other facilities. Once outposts have been established, the occupying Power retroactively regularizes some of them and integrates them into official settlements. In 2020, plans were advanced to retroactively authorize four outposts as “neighbourhoods” of existing settlements.⁸

16. Another factor detrimental to the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory has been the construction of the “Barrier” by Israel in the West Bank, which began in 2002. The wall encroaches deeply into Palestinian land: 85 per cent of the wall will be built on Palestinian land and not along the internationally recognized pre-1967 borders (the Green Line). As a result, when finished, its length will be 712 km, or more than twice the length of the Green Line (320 km). Consequently, 9.4 per cent of the area of the West Bank (527 km²), including East Jerusalem, now lies in the “seam zone”, between the wall and the Green Line (figure I), resulting in a significantly negative impact on economic activity inside the zone.⁹

17. The legal position on the wall was set out by the International Court of Justice following the request of the General Assembly for an advisory opinion. The International Court of Justice found that the construction of the wall by the occupying Power in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem and its associated regime, are contrary to international law.¹⁰ The loss to Palestinian industry and agriculture stemming from this takeover of land constitutes a cost of occupation for the Palestinian people.

18. Settlements, outposts and the wall in the occupied West Bank inflict a heavy economic cost on the Palestinian people, dispossess them of their inalienable right to development, entrench occupation and pre-empt a meaningful, sustainable two-State solution.

19. A dearth of jobs in the constrained domestic economy forces a large number of Palestinian workers to seek employment in Israel and settlements in the occupied territory. This dependency on employment in the Israeli economy has accelerated in recent years. With the exception of a small percentage employed in the information technology and health sectors, most Palestinians are employed as unskilled workers in different sectors, such as construction and agriculture. By early 2022, the number of Palestinians employed in Israel and settlements had reached 153,000, or one fifth of the West Bank employed labour force. Employment in Israel and settlements generates substantial income for West Bank workers who earn close to $3 billion per year, about a quarter of West Bank GDP, and thus support aggregate demand in all sectors of the Palestinian economy.¹¹

20. However, Palestinians employed in Israel and settlements lack social protection and are exposed to exploitation, under a permit regime, by middlemen and employers who wield undue power over them.¹²

21. Empirical research suggests that employment in Israel and settlements exerts a variety of negative impacts on Palestinian GDP growth.¹³ It undermines the competitiveness of the Palestinian economy by dampening the incentives to invest in human capital, decreasing skill supply in some sectors and raising domestic wages without corresponding productivity growth. Furthermore, employment is unpredictable, precarious and extremely sensitive to political and security crises. It cannot be a substitute for rejuvenating the Palestinian labour market by lifting all economic restrictions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

III. Previous estimates of the economic impact of occupation

22. In addition to the reports prepared for submission to the General Assembly, UNCTAD has produced a series of studies on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. Those studies cover a wide range of issues including the impact of occupation on the human right to development of the Palestinian people, the economic cost of the unrealized oil and natural gas potential in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the leakage of Palestinian fiscal resources to Israel. Below is a brief overview of some of the quantitative assessments of the cost of occupation.

23. UNCTAD (2021) assessed the cost associated with the major shock to the occupied West Bank economy resulting from the restrictions and closure policy implemented by the occupying Power following the outbreak of the second Intifada, which erupted in September 2000. The study estimates that if these restrictions had been less stringent, the GDP of the West Bank would have been, on average, 35 per cent higher than its actual level, leading to a cumulative real GDP increase of $58 billion (in constant 2015 dollars) between 2000 and 2019, equivalent to 4.5 times the GDP of the West Bank in 2019 or 3.5 times the GDP of the occupied Palestinian territory in 2019. Had it not been for these restrictions, the poverty rate in the West Bank in 2004 could have been 11.7 per cent, one third of the actual rate of 35.4 per cent.¹⁴

24. UNCTAD (2020) assessed the impact of the prolonged Israeli blockade and economic and movement restrictions on poverty and socioeconomic conditions in Gaza. It estimated the cumulative economic cost of these factors and of military operations at $16.7 billion (in constant 2015 United States dollars), equivalent to six times the value of Gaza GDP, or 107 per cent of Palestinian GDP, in 2018. In addition, the poverty rate in Gaza could have been 15 per cent in 2017 instead of the actual rate of 56 per cent.¹⁵

25. UNCTAD (2019) examined the economic cost of the unrealized oil and natural gas potential in Gaza and Area C; with reference to the Meged oil and natural gas field, located inside the occupied West Bank in Area C and exploited by Israel. Its reserves are estimated at about 1.525 billion barrels of oil, in addition to some natural gas. The potential of the Meged field ranges between 375 and 534 barrels per day.¹⁶

26. UNCTAD (2019) assessed the leakage of Palestinian fiscal resources to the treasury of the occupying Power. Most of the leakage originates in the occupied West Bank and is rooted in the asymmetric economic relation between the Palestinian Authority and Israel enshrined in the Protocol on Economic Relations (Paris Protocol).¹⁷ The study estimated Palestinian fiscal losses in 2015 at $1.7 billion, or 13.1 per cent of GDP. Furthermore, cumulative total fiscal leakage and losses during the period 2000–2017 were estimated at $5.6 billion, equivalent to 39 per cent of Palestinian GDP in 2017. Adding cumulative interest on fiscal leakage for the same period ($1 billion) raises the cumulative total to $6.6 billion.

27. Restrictions on Palestinian movement have increased the travel time between all Palestinian major population centres by a median of 51 per cent and the cumulative economic cost of longer travel time is substantial. For example, before the construction of the wall, Palestinians travelled from Ramallah to Hebron, through East Jerusalem, over a 50 km road. The restrictions have resulted in a lengthening of the road to 80 km which, together with the checkpoints, has led to a doubling of the average travel time from 55 to 107 minutes. Delays in the movement of the Palestinian workforce caused by longer roads and procedural restrictions are estimated to have cost the economy $274 million annually, or 1.7 per cent of GDP in 2018. The environmental costs of longer travel and vehicular delays at gates and checkpoints are self-evident.¹⁸

28. The World Bank (2013) assessed the impact of closures in the occupied West Bank and concluded that they substantially reduced the probability of being employed, hourly wages and the number of days worked, while increasing the number of working hours per day. Much of that impact was driven by reduced firm profitability and labour demand. Checkpoints alone cost the West Bank economy a minimum of 6 per cent of its GDP. Furthermore, placing one checkpoint one minute away from a locality reduced its residents' probability of being employed by 0.41 percentage points, their hourly wage by 6.3 percentage points and working days by 2.6 percentage points.¹⁹

29. The World Bank (2018) concluded that lifting road obstacles just enough to improve market access by 10 per cent would increase local output in the occupied West Bank by 0.6 per cent. Furthermore, in the absence of roadblocks, West Bank GDP per capita would increase by up to 6.1 per cent above the observed level;²⁰ and some easing of other restrictions by Israel would, by 2025, triple the economic growth rate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.²¹

30. The World Bank (2013) estimated that if restrictions on Palestinian producers were removed, the potential additional output gains alone would amount to at least $2.2 billion annually, or 23 per cent of 2011 Palestinian GDP.²²

IV. Methodology: nighttime luminosity and economic activity

A. Nighttime luminosity in economic analysis

31. Nighttime luminosity (NTL) is a measure of visible night lights on Earth captured by satellites from outer space. NTL has considerable potential for economic analysis because it reflects human economic activities. Consequently, NTL has recently been increasingly used to estimate GDP in countries where economic data are poor and in areas and subregions where such data do not exist.

32. In this report, a measure of NTL in a specific area on Earth is obtained by averaging pixel-level NTL values within that area.²³ The unit of measurement is light intensity which is equal to the number of nanowatts per square centimetre per steradian ($\text{nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$). For a specific area, NTL is usually presented as an average over a specific period: a month, a quarter or a year. The source of NTL data used in the following analysis is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).²⁴

33. The use of NTL as a proxy for economic activity was pioneered in a groundbreaking 2012 paper by Henderson, Storeygard, and Weil.²⁵ The authors of the study had developed a statistical framework for using satellite data on night lights to enhance official income measures, especially in countries with poor national income accounts. The study was followed by many others, whose aim was to quantify the relationship between NTL and economic activity.²⁶ NTL has also been used to forecast GDP or growth rates using elasticity of GDP with respect to NTL.²⁷ In recent years, the World Bank and IMF published several studies that use NTL data as a proxy for economic activity.^{28,29}

34. Levin and others (2020) showed a primary advantage of NTL over official statistics: NTL permits the estimation of GDP at the level of disaggregated geographical units especially where GDP data do not exist or are of poor quality.³⁰ This is of the utmost relevance to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including to the analysis presented in this report, because NTL would allow the estimation of separate GDPs for Area C, for East Jerusalem and for Israeli settlements elsewhere in the occupied West Bank, as well as disaggregation of Israeli GDP following exclusion of the value of output produced in occupied East Jerusalem and in settlements elsewhere in the West Bank.

²⁴ The annual NTL data were obtained from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Black Marble annual product (VNP46/VJ146). NASA generated this product based on state-of-art application of the data from the Day/Night Band (DNB) sensor of the Visible Infrared Imaging Radiometer Suite (VIIRS). Black Marble annual NTL data have a spatial resolution of 15 arc-second and are available from January 2012 to the present. The data are cloud-free and atmospheric-, terrain-, vegetation-, snow-, lunar- and stray light-corrected. See <https://blackmarble.gsfc.nasa.gov> for further details.

²⁷ Elasticity measures the percentage change in NTL when GDP changes by 1 percentage point, or vice versa.

B. Trends in NTL in the West Bank: settlements and Areas A, B and C

35. Over the period 2012–2020, annual average NTL exhibited a noticeable upward trend across the entire occupied West Bank but was much higher in settlements compared with the rest of the West Bank (figure III). Annual average NTL in occupied East Jerusalem and in settlements elsewhere in the West Bank was about $16 \text{ nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$ and tended upward from 2012 to 2020. If East Jerusalem is excluded, the annual average NTL in settlements was slightly lower but still relatively high at above $10.4 \text{ nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$. Moreover, the NTL of those settlements alone was about twice that of the whole West Bank (excluding East Jerusalem), for which the average annual NTL was about $5.2 \text{ nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$. Such significant differences are indicative of substantial economic disparities between Israeli settlements and Palestinian-controlled areas in the West Bank.

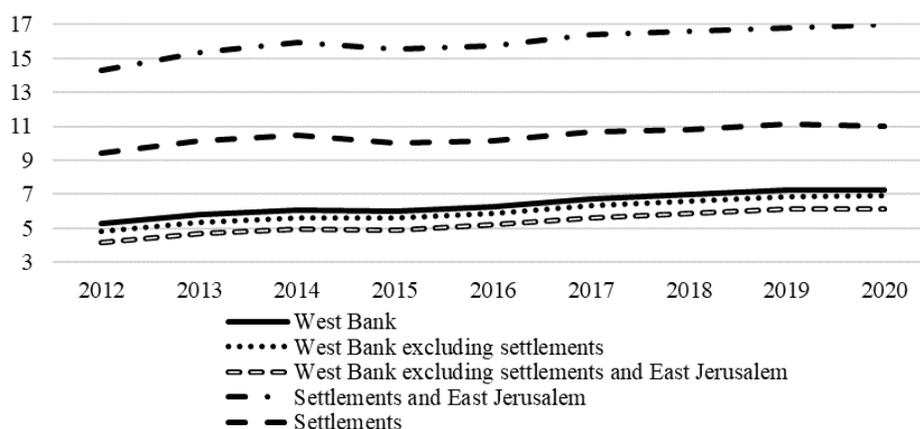

36. Furthermore, the data indicate significant disparities across areas A, B, and C in terms of growth and levels of NTL between 2012 and 2020 (figure IV). The right panel of figure IV shows that between 2012 and 2020 for the whole Area C (including settlements) the NTL grew from 4.8 to $5.9 \text{ nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$. This is a much more intense level of growth of NTL compared with that for Area C when settlements are excluded. In the latter case, annual average NTL grew from 3.5 to $4.5 \text{ nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$.

37. NTL increased during the period 2012–2020 in all three Areas of the West Bank, but Area C had the lowest level of growth of NTL compared with Areas A and B, with Area A registering the highest annual average NTL (left panel of figure IV). The NTL gap between Area C and Areas A and B is even greater if NTL from settlements elsewhere in the West Bank is removed from NTL of Area C.

38. Figure V shows the trends in NTL in the three West Bank administrative areas, where NTL from occupied East Jerusalem is not included and NTL from settlements elsewhere in the occupied West Bank has been excluded. Over the period 2012–2020, average annual NTL in Area C, excluding settlements in the Area and not including East Jerusalem, was 46 per cent lower than in Areas A and B.

Figure VI

39. There is a large difference between average annual NTL in the area under Palestinian control (composed of the occupied West Bank, excluding occupied East Jerusalem and the settlements elsewhere in the West Bank) and average annual NTL in the area under the complete control of Israel (Area C, occupied East Jerusalem and those Israeli settlements).

40. As shown in figure VI, that difference is vast, implying a huge disparity in the levels of economic activity in occupied East Jerusalem and in settlements elsewhere in the occupied West Bank compared with areas under Palestinian control. During the period 2000–2020, average annual NTL in the areas of the occupied West Bank that were under partial control of the Palestinian National Authority grew from 4.2 to 6.1 $\text{nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$. Meanwhile, in the area controlled by the occupying Power, average annual NTL grew from 14.1 to 17 $\text{nWcm}^{-2}\text{sr}^{-1}$. Average annual NTL in the areas of the occupied West Bank under Palestinian control was in the range of one third of that in areas under the complete control of Israel. This indicates that economic activity in areas under the control of the Palestinian Authority is much weaker compared with economic activity in areas controlled by the occupying Power.

V. Cost of occupation and size of the economy of the settlements in Area C and occupied East Jerusalem

41. Area C accounts for about 60 per cent of the area of the occupied West Bank. Area C is the only contiguous part of the West Bank and has the most fertile land and the most valuable natural resources. Furthermore, it has geographical space badly needed for Palestinian demographic expansion and economic development. The boundaries of Area C now incorporate Israeli settlements and have been reinforced by closure points and the wall. The ongoing expansion of settlements dispossesses Palestinians of large swaths of Area C land and inflicts huge economic and human costs on the Palestinian people.

42. The present section estimates part of this economic cost of occupation of Area C in terms of the potential Palestinian GDP lost since the end of the Oslo interim period (1994–1999) as a result of the inability to develop the 30 per cent of Area C located outside the boundaries of the regional councils of Israeli settlements and not including East Jerusalem at the same rate observed in Areas A and B. It is crucial to note that the calculated cost does not assume the dismantling of settlements, full Palestinian access to Area C or the lifting of any restrictions imposed on areas A and B: it assumes only that the level of restrictions on Palestinian development in the 30 per cent of Area C concerned was the same as the level of restrictions applied by Israel in Areas A and B. This section therefore estimates only the cost of the additional restrictions imposed on Palestinian economic activity in Area C, over and above those imposed on Areas A and B.

43. This partial estimate is followed by an estimation of the cumulative contribution of settlements to the economy of Israel between 2000 and 2020 as a direct result of occupation and control of the resources of Area C and of East Jerusalem.

A. Some aspects of the economic cost of the occupation of Area C

44. Section V.A attempts to answer the following question: What if, in the year 2000, 30 per cent of Area C of the West Bank had been available for Palestinian expansion and development while being subjected to the same level of economic restrictions imposed in Areas A and B, which are significant but not as stringent as those applied in Area C? Section V.A consequently provides indicators of the economic cost of the occupation of Area C by estimating the potential level of GDP which was not realized because of the additional restrictions imposed on Area C following the end of the interim period in 1999, when a permanent settlement of the conflict was expected to bring to an end the occupation of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza.

45. Official GDP statistics pertaining to the Occupied Palestinian Territory compiled by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics are at the national level and are disaggregated only to the levels of the West Bank and Gaza. However, as mentioned earlier, this issue can be overcome using NTL to estimate economic activity at disaggregated levels of smaller geographical units.

46. Figure V depicts NTL trends in West Bank administrative areas where, for Area C, NTL from settlements has been excluded and NTL from East Jerusalem is not included. On average, over the period 2012–2020, luminosity in this part of Area C was 46 per cent lower than that in Areas A and B.

47. This section estimates the cost of the additional restrictions imposed on Area C by using NTL as a proxy for economic activity and calculating the elasticity of GDP with respect to NTL. For this purpose, a counterfactual scenario has been developed based on the conservative assumption that if Area C had been subjected to the same level of restrictions as that imposed on Areas A and B, Palestinian economic development in Area C would have been on a par with the level of development in Areas A and B. The assumption implies that average NTL (per unit of area) in Area C would be equal to the mean of average NTL in Area A and average NTL in area B during the sample period 2012–2020.³¹

48. Accordingly, the mean of average NTL of Area A and average NTL of Area B is applied to Area C, with the assumption that the actual level of average NTL in Area C, outside settlements and not including East Jerusalem, is derived entirely from Palestinian activities. The fact that such NTL reflects activities by settlers and other Israelis suggest that the assumption will bias the estimated cost downward. This bias would reinforce the conservatism of the estimation of the economic loss resulting from the restrictions on Palestinian development in Area C.

49. The weighted average mean of NTL in Area A, NTL in Area B and NTL in Area C in the occupied West Bank is calculated using the relative sizes of Areas A, B and C as weights. Figure VII compares the actual average NTL in the West Bank with the counterfactual weighted average NTL implied by the counterfactual scenario. The gap between them is an indicator of unrealized GDP. It turns out that the annual counterfactual NTL is, on average, 28 per cent higher than the actual NTL in the West Bank.

50. Following the methodology developed by Henderson, Storeygard and Weil (2012), the elasticity of GDP with respect to NTL is utilized to estimate the unrealized potential GDP gains in the counterfactual scenario. Through use of quarterly GDP and NTL data, the elasticity in the occupied West Bank is estimated at 0.903. This means that a 1 per cent increase in average NTL is associated with a 0.903 per cent increase in GDP.³²

51. Applying this elasticity to the difference between the actual and counterfactual NTL levels provides an estimation of lost potential GDP resulting from the additional restrictions on Palestinian economic activities in Area C. The methodology suggests that if Palestinian economic activity in 30 per cent of Area C had been subjected to the same level of restrictions that had been imposed by the occupying Power on Areas A

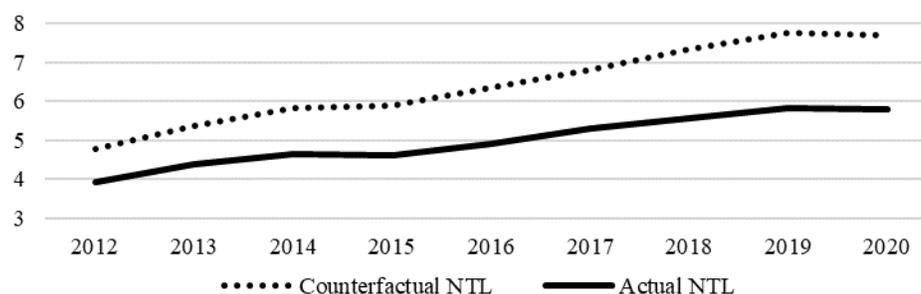

³¹ Areas A and B are the best comparator for establishing what the Palestinian economic activity level in Area C could have been if Palestinians had been allowed to develop Area C under the same level of restrictions. Actual NTL data for Area A and B are driven by economic activity and population density, given that Palestinians are allowed to develop those areas to some degree, while Area C is largely off limits. That is the whole point of the analysis.

and B, the size of the West Bank economy would have been 25.3 per cent larger than what was observed.

52. The cumulative GDP losses during the period 2000–2020 amount to $45 billion (in constant 2015 dollars) or $50 billion in 2020 dollars (figure VIII and table 1). This is equivalent to about three times GDP in the occupied West Bank in 2020 and over 2.5 times Palestinian GDP in the same year.

B. Size of the economy of settlements in Area C and occupied East Jerusalem

53. Section V.A assessed part of the cost of occupation of Area C in terms of the additional restrictions imposed by occupation outside settlements. Section V.B provides some indicators of the cost imposed by the presence of the settlements in Area C by assessing their contribution to the economy of Israel. For this purpose, this section estimates the GDP generated by the occupying Power in those settlements between 2000 and 2020 using Palestinian land and natural resources.

54. As Palestinians face severe restrictions on developing or investing in Area C, Israel's long-term policy for the establishment and expansion of settlements in the occupied West Bank continues despite adoption of numerous General Assembly and Security Council resolutions. By early 2021, Israel had established more than 280 settlements in the West Bank, populated by more than 440,000 Israeli citizens excluding East Jerusalem.³³

55. The Government of Israel provides generous incentives to settlers and entrepreneurs, notably underpriced land taken from Palestinians, reduced land fees for investors, tax benefits, housing benefits, business subsidies, industrial zone subsidies and employment subsidies.³⁴ In some areas, corporations pay one third of the tax rate paid in Israel. Generous support is provided for farming cooperatives to accommodate new farmers; in some areas, farmers are exempt from the levy on employing migrant workers; and new farmers receive financial subsidies of up to $307,000 and up to $25,000 per herd for open field livestock grazing.³⁵ In addition, the Government of Israel encourages teachers in key disciplines to move to designated national priority areas by offering them a wage increase of up to 70 per cent for several years. Such incentives and benefits have resulted in significant expansion of industrial zones and of investment in agricultural production. By 2019, there were 11 Israeli industrial complexes in Area C. The various incentives motivated hundreds of thousands of Israeli citizens to move to subsidized settlements in the occupied West Bank, where standards of living are higher than those prevailing in Israel.³⁶

56. As a result of the expansion of economic activity in settlements in Area C, the average annual NTL emanating from occupied East Jerusalem and from settlements in Area C is twice that emanating from Israel (figure IX), indicating that GDP per capita generated in East Jerusalem and in settlements in the West Bank is higher than that in Israel.

57. It is therefore possible to use the ratio of the population of East Jerusalem and of settlements elsewhere in the West Bank in the total Israeli population, as reported by Israel, to conservatively estimate the lower bound of Israeli GDP, also as reported by Israel, that could be attributed to occupied East Jerusalem and to settlements elsewhere in the occupied West Bank. This can be done by assuming that the relative contribution of the population to GDP in both areas is the same. While this may underestimate the GDP generated in East Jerusalem and in those settlements, it does provide a useful indicator for assessing the economic dimension of the occupation and the settlement enterprise.

^b Population of East Jerusalem and of the settlements in the rest of the West Bank is included.

58. Table 2 shows that over the period 2000–2020, the population in Israel, in occupied East Jerusalem and in the settlements elsewhere in the occupied West Bank, if added together, grew from 6.3 million to 9.2 million and the share of that population living in East Jerusalem and in settlements elsewhere in the West Bank grew from 11 per cent in 2000 to 12.4 per cent in 2020. The GDP produced by the occupying Power in East Jerusalem and in those settlements is estimated by multiplying the share of East Jerusalem and of those settlements in that population by the total reported Israeli GDP.³⁷

59. GDP generated by Israel through the occupation of East Jerusalem and Area C of the West Bank between 2000 and 2020 is estimated at minimum, at $628 billion (constant 2015 dollars), or $852 billion in 2020 dollars. The estimated average annual GDP produced in East Jerusalem and in settlements elsewhere in the West Bank at current dollars is $41 billion or 227 per cent of total Palestinian GDP in 2021. The estimated size of GDP produced by Israel in settlements in Area C and East Jerusalem, using Palestinian land and natural resources, is an indicator of the cost of the presence of settlements there for the Palestinian people and suggests that ending the occupation of Area C will enable the Palestinian people to grow their economy severalfold.

³⁷ Using the population in East Jerusalem and settlements and multiplying that figure by GDP per capita would yield the same result.

VI. Conclusion and recommendations

60. The negative impact of the multilayered Israeli control system on Palestinian development and economic activity throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory is substantial. The restrictions on Palestinian economic activity are pronounced in Area C but are by no means limited to it. Gaza remains under closures that have gutted its economy and decimated its productive base. As the Palestinian people do not have a national currency, they use mainly the Israeli new shekel whose exchange rate is incompatible with the needs and level of development of the Palestinian economy. The exchange rate is one of the most important determinants of the prices in any economy. As the Israeli new shekel is too strong for the competitiveness of Palestinian producers, it can foster a high level of imports and weakens exports, GDP growth and job creation.

61. The annual cost of the imposition of additional restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in 30 per cent of Area C is estimated at one quarter of West Bank GDP and the cumulative cost over the period 2000–2020 is estimated at three times West Bank GDP in 2020. These estimates are extremely conservative and should be interpreted as lower bound indicators of only a fraction of the total economic cost of the occupation of Area C.

62. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development recommends that the international community call on Israel to shoulder its responsibilities under international law and:

(a) End and reverse all settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, consistent with Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), in which the Council reaffirmed that the establishment of such settlements has no legal validity and “constitutes a flagrant violation under international law” and a major obstacle to the achievement of the two-State solution and a just, lasting and comprehensive peace;

(b) Lift all restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in Area C, pending a comprehensive settlement, and allow for substantially increased Palestinian economic activity. Lifting such restrictions would provide the Palestinian economy with a badly needed economic and natural resource base for developing and reversing the current trend of increasing socioeconomic deprivation.

63. Furthermore, Member States may wish to consider the following:

(a) In line with the relevant United Nations resolutions, to exert all efforts necessary to bring an end to the occupation and reverse the evolving and substantial economic cost of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people;

(b) The cost of occupation poses a huge challenge in terms of resource mobilization. The Palestinian Government is saddled with a responsibility far greater than the resources and the limited policy space at its disposal. Palestinian national self-sufficiency may be pursued but cannot be fully achieved under occupation. Until the occupation is ended, to avert sharp socioeconomic and humanitarian crises, there is no substitute for reversing the ongoing negative trend in foreign aid and strengthening donor support to the Palestinian people to alleviate the adverse socioeconomic conditions imposed by occupation;

(c) The fulfilment of paragraph 9 of General Assembly resolution 75/20 requires the establishment, within the United Nations system, of a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework to assess the costs of occupation and report the results to the Assembly. The establishment of such a framework requires securing additional resources.

64. The Palestinian people's right to Statehood cannot be replaced by humanitarian and economic assistance, essential as these may be in the interim. The United Nations continues to work towards the realization of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East on the basis of relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 \(1967\), 338 \(1973\), 1397 \(2002\), 1515 \(2003\), 1850 \(2008\), 1860 \(2009\) and 2334 \(2016\), to end the occupation that began in 1967 and establish a sovereign, democratic, viable and contiguous Palestinian State, living side by side in peace and security with Israel within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders. It is only by realizing the vision of two States living side by side in peace, security and mutual recognition, with Jerusalem as the capital of both Israel and the State of Palestine, and all final status issues resolved permanently through negotiations, that the legitimate aspirations of both peoples will be achieved.

Letter of transmittal

[1 September 2024]

Mr. Secretary-General,

I have the honour to enclose herewith the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for submission to the General Assembly and circulation to all the competent bodies of the United Nations for necessary action, as appropriate, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 10 of Assembly resolution 77/22 of 30 November 2022.

The report covers the period from 2 September 2023 to 31 August 2024.

(Signed) Cheikh Niang
Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the
Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

Chapter I

Introduction

1. The present report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People has been submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/22, adopted on 30 November 2022. It covers the implementation by the Committee of its programme of work (A/AC.183/2023/1), formulated to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination. Its objectives include maintaining international awareness of the plight of the Palestinian people, mobilizing efforts aimed at achieving a just and comprehensive solution to the question of Palestine in accordance with international law and lasting Israeli-Palestinian peace, enhancing international solidarity with the Palestinian people and supporting the Government of the State of Palestine in its capacity-building efforts towards promoting a viable and sustainable independent State of Palestine.
2. Chapter II consists of an overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine during the reporting period, from 2 September 2023 to 31 August 2024.
3. Chapters III and IV contain an outline of the mandate of the Committee as set out by the General Assembly and information on the membership of the Committee and the organization of its work.
4. Chapter V covers the action taken by the Committee, including its participation in meetings of the Security Council and its continuing engagement with Member States, intergovernmental organizations and civil society. It also covers international conferences, including in virtual format, capacity-building and advocacy activities organized by the Committee and other mandated activities carried out by the Division for Palestinian Rights on behalf of the Committee.
5. Chapter VI provides an overview of the special information programme on the question of Palestine implemented by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 75/23.
6. The conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to the General Assembly are set out in chapter VII of the report.

Chapter II

Overview of the political context relating to the question of Palestine

7. The question of Palestine has remained on the agenda of the United Nations for more than 76 years. That period has been marked by a 57-year-long illegal occupation by Israel, grave breaches of international law, including international human rights and international humanitarian law, a 17-year-long blockade of the Gaza Strip and the continuing plight of millions of Palestine refugees. Since October 2023, the devastating military campaign being conducted by Israel in Gaza and increased Israeli military and settler violence in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, has brought heightened attention around the world to the long-standing injustice and suffering that the Palestinian people have endured. In March and again in June, the Security Council adopted resolutions in which it demands a ceasefire, yet it has failed to enforce them (see para. 20) This inaction on the part of the Council has endangered Palestinian lives, undermined peace efforts and jeopardized the two-State solution.

8. On 7 October 2023, Hamas and other Palestinian militant groups launched a major attack from Gaza into southern Israel that claimed the lives of over 1,200 Israelis and foreign nationals and injured more than 5,400 other persons; 255 hostages were taken to Gaza.¹ In response, Israel, the occupying Power, launched extensive and indiscriminate aerial, land and maritime bombardments that have been described as the most devastating collective punishment of civilians in modern history, causing massive loss of human life and destruction.²

9. The Israeli military campaign has resulted in unprecedented Palestinian casualties. The majority of the victims have been children and women, and some families have been wiped out entirely. This military campaign triggered a humanitarian catastrophe that has been marked by the spread of starvation, famine and disease, the displacement of the entire population of Gaza and the dispossession of vital civilian infrastructure. That dispossession is evidenced by the widespread destruction of homes and other civilian infrastructure, including hospitals, universities, schools and businesses, stripping the community of its foundational support systems and services. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as at 21 August, the Israeli military campaign had resulted in more than 40,223 Palestinians being killed, of whom 12,927 were men, 10,627 children, 5,956 women and 2,770 elderly persons, and at least 92,981 others injured in Gaza,³ with thousands presumed buried under the rubble. Concurrently, Israel took further illegal measures to deepen its occupation, including through continued construction and expansion of illegal Israeli settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, seizure of Palestinian land, demolition of homes and displacement of Palestinian civilians. (see paras. 12–14)

10. On 6 December, the Secretary-General made an unprecedented appeal by invoking Article 99 of the Charter of the United Nations, urging the Security Council to “avert a humanitarian catastrophe” and calling for a full ceasefire in Gaza. Regrettably, that call had no tangible impact, leading the Secretary-General to decry the international community's inaction to stop the carnage as a "moral stain on humanity".⁴

11. The principles of distinction, proportionality and precaution and other rules of international humanitarian law have been severely breached in this conflict. Data in the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict (A/78/842-S/2024/384) indicate that children have suffered the highest number of grave violations in the conflict, and that 625,000 deeply traumatized children have been compromised by their inability to attend school since October 2023.⁵

12. The ongoing Israeli attacks have destroyed more than 80 per cent of infrastructure, including hospitals and the water and sanitation and electricity networks, in the Gaza Strip. Israeli-imposed access restrictions, combined with ongoing military operations, further obstructed relief efforts. With half of the population of Gaza facing catastrophic food insecurity,⁶ the Famine Review Committee of the Integrated Food Security Phase Classification has warned of an imminent elevated risk of famine across Gaza if the conflict and access restrictions continued.⁷

13. As the Israeli military aggression continues, reports have emerged of the suffering of Palestinian civilians who have been injured, maimed, orphaned, detained and tortured, and struggling to cope with severe shortages of food, basic necessities and medical supplies, as well as the worrisome spread of communicable diseases, including poliovirus, the containment of which could require massive efforts.⁸ Speaking on 2 July before the Security Council, the Senior Humanitarian and Reconstruction Coordinator for Gaza, Sigrid Kaag, highlighted the increasing decline in aid entering and being distributed in Gaza; that decline was then further exacerbated by Israeli military operations in Rafah, Khan Younis and other areas where people had taken shelter.⁹ The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights condemned the deliberate restrictions imposed by Israel on humanitarian aid to Gaza, and warned that the extent of those restrictions may amount to the use of starvation as a method of war, which constitutes a war crime.¹⁰ On 27 June, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), highlighting the plight of women, noted that at least 557,000 women in Gaza, including pregnant women, faced severe food insecurity.¹¹

14. Against this background, the Palestinian population in Gaza has also endured repeated displacement, forced to flee from one so-called safe zone to another pursuant to evacuation orders issued by Israel, only for these areas to become Israeli military targets. On 27 July, the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), Phillipe Lazzarini, in a post on the social media platform X (formerly known as Twitter), said that 86 per cent of Gaza was under Israeli military evacuation orders.¹² In addition, insecurity grew for humanitarian personnel throughout Gaza. Casualties among humanitarian workers surged during the reporting period, with at least 289 personnel killed. Of that number, 211 were United Nations staff – 207 from UNRWA and the rest from the World Health Organization, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the Department of Safety and Security.¹³ Several humanitarian workers from Palestinian and international non-governmental organizations (NGOs), including the World Central Kitchen, were also killed during the reporting period.

15. Violence in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem also surged, marked by intensified Israeli military and settler raids, as well as the expansion of illegal settlements and other related illegal measures. According to the Office of United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), in the period from 7 October to 20 November alone, Israeli security forces conducted more than 1,000 raids in Palestinian cities, refugee camps and villages across the West Bank, as well as in East Jerusalem.¹⁴ Between 7 October 2023 and 19 August 2024, more than 600 Palestinians were killed in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and approximately 1,270 attacks by Israeli settlers were recorded, resulting in around 120 Palestinian fatalities and injuries. As Palestinians faced eviction and dispossession, Israeli settlement expansion continued, with Israeli government ministers making open declarations about plans to build more settlements and transfer more Israeli settlers to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in grave breach of international law. As at 26 March, 4,780 new settlement units had been approved in Area C of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Since 7 October, the number of Palestinians displaced in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, owing to demolitions and seizures of Palestinian land and structures, including donor-funded structures, had more than doubled compared to the preceding 10 months, increasing from 1,252 to 3,070.¹⁵ Moreover, between 14 and 18 March, in the central and southern West Bank, settlers opened fire on Palestinians and their livestock, burned vehicles and crops, and established a new illegal settlement outpost in Lubban al-Gharbiyah.¹⁶ The escalation of Israeli settler attacks and violence in the West Bank led several Member States, including Australia, Canada, France and the United States of America to impose sanctions on a few extremist Israeli settlers.

16. In East Jerusalem, Israeli authorities increased their provocations and challenges to the historic and legal status quo at the holy sites, and they pushed to increase the Jewish presence and influence, in particular in Silwan and Shaykh Jarrah. On 27 July, the Minister of National Security of Israel made his second visit to the Haram al-Sharif since 7 October, provocatively aiming to assert Israeli sovereignty over the site. Jordan, the site's custodian, and other Member States condemned that provocation and recurrent violations of the status quo, warning of the dangers of rising tensions stoked by such illegal actions. On 7 August, in another incident of incitement, the Minister of Finance of Israel suggested that deliberately starving Palestinian civilians in Gaza could be “justified and moral”, drawing condemnation by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights¹⁷ and several Member States.

17. In order to prevent catastrophic famine in the Gaza Strip, on 6 March, the Government of South Africa urgently requested the International Court of Justice to reinforce the provisional measures that the Court had indicated in its order of 26 January 2024.¹⁸ Taking into account the planned assault by Israel on Rafah, where 1.4 million Palestinians were sheltering, the Court responded to the request of South Africa by ordering strengthened provisional measures on 24 May.¹⁹ On 26 March, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 affirmed, in a report entitled “Anatomy of a genocide” (A/HRC/55/73), that the actions of Israel in Gaza constituted genocide. In another consequential judicial development, on 20 May, the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, Karim Khan, requested arrest warrants for senior Israeli officials and Hamas leaders for war crimes and crimes against humanity.²⁰ The request of the Prosecutor was consistent with the findings set out in the report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel of 27 May (A/HRC/56/26) and with the statement issued on 25 June by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories.²¹

18. OHCHR, in a report released on 31 July,²² noted that, since October, Israel had placed thousands of Palestinians in arbitrary, prolonged and incommunicado detention. In addition, United Nations human rights experts reported widespread abuse, torture, sexual assault and rape of Palestinians, resulting in at least 53 deaths during the reporting period. They called for international intervention and an International Criminal Court investigation.²³ Since 7 October, a total of 9,500 Palestinians, including children and women, have been imprisoned. Of that number, one third have been held without charge or trial, and many have been arbitrarily abducted and detained.

19. Amid the ongoing Israeli assault on Gaza and increasing hardships for the population, UNRWA remained a vital lifeline for millions of Palestine refugees. Despite Israeli attempts to discredit, defund and dismantle the Agency, as well as significant funding gaps and restricted access to Gaza, UNRWA continued to deliver on its General Assembly mandate. Since October, UNRWA has delivered food to 1.9 million people, conducted 3.4 million medical consultations, including psychosocial support, produced 112,000 m³ of water daily, provided emergency shelters to thousands of displaced families and maintained humanitarian efforts across the Occupied Palestinian Territory.²⁴ The Secretary-General urged the international community to support the Agency after Israel accused 12 UNRWA staff of colluding in the attack of 7 October. Those allegations caused some donors to temporarily withhold funds at a time of immense humanitarian needs. In July, 123 Member States endorsed a statement of shared commitments on UNRWA, in which they reaffirmed their unwavering support for the Agency’s mandate and critical role in the region,²⁵ with many donors resuming funding.

20. Since 7 October, both the General Assembly and Security Council have been heavily engaged in addressing the crisis, albeit with limited success in establishing a ceasefire, protecting the Palestinian civilian population under Israeli occupation and addressing the humanitarian catastrophe in Gaza. On 27 October, the General Assembly, at its tenth emergency special session, adopted, with overwhelming support, resolution ES-10/21, in which it called for an “immediate, durable and sustained humanitarian truce leading to a cessation of hostilities”. The Security Council struggled to find consensus on the crisis owing to the exercise of veto power on several occasions, causing the General Assembly to reconvene its tenth emergency special session in October and December. In March, the Security Council adopted resolution 2728 \(2024\), in which it called for a ceasefire during the month of Ramadan. However, it failed to enforce the resolution. In June, the Council adopted resolution 2735 \(2024\), in which it endorsed a ceasefire proposal and three-phase plan for Gaza. However, neither were implemented during the reporting period. Ceasefire negotiations between Israel and Hamas, facilitated by Egypt, Qatar and the United States and aimed at halting the violence and addressing the humanitarian crisis in Gaza, continued throughout the reporting period. However, they have yet to produce tangible results. The conflict continues, while the death toll and misery of Palestinians increases.

21. The Israeli military campaign in Gaza has threatened regional stability, prompting the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process to repeatedly urge restraint, including in a statement delivered before the Security Council on 25 June.²⁶ Efforts to broker a humanitarian ceasefire continued amid rising tensions in the Middle East, including in the aftermath of the killing of a Hamas leader in Tehran on 31 July. In response to that incident, the Secretary-General called for urgent international action to avert further regional escalation and emphasized the need for all efforts to be focused on a Gaza ceasefire, the release of Israeli hostages and increased aid.²⁷

22. On 19 July, in a landmark development, the International Court of Justice, responding to a request that the General Assembly made in its resolution 77/247, issued an advisory opinion in which the Court determined that the prolonged presence of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, to be unlawful and that Israel has an obligation to bring an end to its presence as rapidly as possible.²⁸ In addition, the Court affirmed the obligation of Member States not to recognize or support the unlawful presence of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and it called on the General Assembly and the Security Council to determine the modalities required to bring to an end as rapidly as possible the Israeli occupation.²⁹ The advisory opinion reaffirmed the views of Member States, Palestinians, United Nation experts,³⁰ scholars and civil society, as well as the findings of the legal study that the Committee commissioned concerning the illegality of the ongoing Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory (A/78/378-S/2023/694).

23. On 18 April, the United States vetoed a Security Council resolution concerning the bid of the State of Palestine for full membership of the United Nations. In response, the General Assembly voted on 9 May to affirm the eligibility of the State of Palestine for membership of the United Nations and to grant it additional rights in the Assembly. To bolster these efforts, the Committee urged more countries to recognize the State of Palestine. As a result, during the reporting period, Armenia, the Bahamas, Barbados, Ireland, Norway, Slovenia, Spain and Trinidad and Tobago recognized the State of Palestine, bringing to 149 the number of countries that had recognized the State of Palestine as at 9 August.

24. On June 20, in the light of the ongoing Israeli assault and mounting death toll in Gaza, 32 United Nations human rights experts reiterated their demand to States and companies for an immediate halt to arms transfers to Israel. At least 11 Member States, including Bahrain, Belize, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Brazil, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Honduras, Jordan, South Africa and Türkiye, have taken decisive actions in response to the deteriorating situation, such as recalling ambassadors to Israel and severing diplomatic relations, while others have given consideration to imposing economic, trade and travel restrictions. Global calls to stop arms transfers to and impose diplomatic and economic sanctions on Israel continued throughout the reporting period as Israel persisted with its aggression and occupation.

25. Israel also continued to withheld tax revenues from the Palestinian Authority and threatened to isolate Palestinian banks from the global financial system, further undermining the Palestinian Authority. On 23 July, in yet another attempt to achieve Palestinian reconciliation, 14 Palestinian factions signed a declaration in Beijing that was negotiated under the auspices of China to strengthen Palestinian national unity.

Mandate of the Committee

26. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly in its resolution 3376 \(XXX\) of 10 November 1975 with the task of recommending a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise their inalienable rights to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty and return to the homes and property from which they had been displaced, as recognized by the Assembly in its resolution 3236 \(XXIX\) of 22 November 1974. The mandate of the Committee has evolved over the years to include greater advocacy for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. Additional information about the Committee is available on the website maintained by the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat.³¹

27. On 30 November 2022, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the Committee (resolution 77/22) and requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the resources necessary for its programme of work (resolution 77/23) and to continue to implement the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications of the Secretariat (resolution 77/24). The mandates of the Committee, the Division and the Department will be reviewed only as necessary. The Committee's report will continue to be produced annually. The Assembly also adopted resolution 77/25, entitled "Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine", in which it reaffirmed the long-standing international position regarding the components of a just, lasting and comprehensive solution, in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

28. The work of the Committee is fully aligned with the decisions of the main intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations, such as the General Assembly, Security Council, Economic and Social Council, Human Rights Council and the International Court of Justice, as well as with the work of the Secretary-General and the programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, with which it collaborates extensively.

Chapter IV

Organization of work

A. Membership and officers

29. The Committee is composed of 25 Member States that represent different regional groups and that support the international consensus for a two-State solution: Afghanistan, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Cuba, Cyprus, Ecuador, Guinea, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tunisia, Türkiye and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).

30. The 24 observers of the Committee are Algeria, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, the Niger, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yemen, as well as the State of Palestine, the African Union, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

31. The Bureau of the Committee is elected each year from among the permanent representatives of Committee members. At its 415th meeting, on 31 January, chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected, in his personal capacity, Cheikh Niang (Senegal) as Chair. At its 416th meeting, on 11 March, the Committee elected, in their personal capacity, Gerardo Peñalver Portal (Cuba), Arrmanatha Christiawan Nasir (Indonesia), Ahmad Faisal Muhamad (Malaysia), Neville Melvin Gertze (Namibia) and Jaime Hermida Castillo (Nicaragua) as Vice-Chairs for the year. The new Permanent Representative of Cuba, Ernesto Soberón Guzmán, was elected as Vice-Chair on 26 June at the 417th meeting of the Committee.

32. Members of the Bureau represented the Committee at all international conferences organized by the Committee, including by chairing and moderating conference sessions, and on all delegation visits. On the margins of the conferences and during delegation visits, they held meetings with senior officials of the respective host countries. In accordance with established practice, the State of Palestine participates in the work of both the Committee and Bureau as an observer.

33. Committee members and observers have actively advocated for realization of the rights of the Palestinian people, including in the Security Council. Currently, four Committee members, Ecuador, Guyana, Malta and Sierra Leone, and one observer, Algeria, serve in the Security Council as elected members.

B. Participation in the work of the Committee

34. As in previous years, all States Members of the United Nations and observers wishing to participate in the work of the Committee were welcome to do so. The Committee also regularly engages with civil society representatives, including from Israel, and invites them to attend its activities.

Chapter V

Action taken by the Committee and the Division for Palestinian Rights in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 77/22 and 77/23

A. Introduction

35. The Committee implemented its programme of work to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, bring about an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and support the achievement of the two-State solution on the basis of the pre-1967 lines. Its activities are aligned with international law, including international humanitarian law and international human rights law; Security Council, General Assembly, Economic and Social Council and Human Rights Council resolutions; the advisory opinions of the International Court of Justice; the women and peace and security agenda; the programme of the United Nations country team; and the Sustainable Development Goals. The Committee has continuously adjusted its programme of work in line with developments on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and geopolitical developments relating to the question of Palestine.

36. The Committee supports the universally recognized rights of an occupied people and the right to self-determination, as enshrined in the Charter and other instruments of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law and the relevant United Nations resolutions. Since the 7 October attacks and the subsequent Israeli assault on Gaza, the Committee further engaged the diplomatic community through formal and informal intergovernmental processes to promote recognition of the State of Palestine, including through Bureau delegation visits and outreach meetings, and it raised public awareness on various aspects of the conflict, including its impact on women and children, through conferences, in-person, hybrid and virtual events, and the media, including social media. In addition, the Committee promoted partnerships with governments, relevant bodies of the United Nations system, including UNRWA, intergovernmental organizations, regional bodies and civil society organizations. It also implemented capacity-building projects for the State of Palestine and convened a commemoration of the Nakbah in May.

B. Mobilization of the diplomatic community

37. The Bureau closely monitored the rapidly evolving situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and held nine meetings in response. Following the events of 7 October, the Bureau postponed delegation visits that had been planned to start in November.

38. On 27 October, the Bureau met with the Chair of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel established by the Human Rights Council, Navanethem Pillay, and Commission member Christopher Sidoti, as well as the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, to discuss the latest developments, their respective reports to the General Assembly and ways to increase cooperation with the Committee.

39. On 10 November, the Bureau held its annual retreat in New York to reflect on the implementation of its 2023 programme of work and discuss 2024 activities, with heightened focus on advocacy needs concerning the conflict in Gaza.

40. The Bureau met on 10 January with the Permanent Representative of South Africa, who provided a briefing on the proceedings that her country had instituted at the International Court of Justice concerning violations by Israel of its obligations under the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in relation to the Palestinian civilian population in the Gaza Strip. On 6 February, the Bureau met with the President of the U.S./Middle East Project, Daniel Levy.

41. On 31 January, in a meeting chaired by the Secretary-General, the Committee elected the Permanent Representative of Senegal, Cheikh Niang, as Chair of the Committee. In addition, the Committee adopted its programme of work for 2024, heard a briefing by the Director of the UNRWA Representative Office in New York about the humanitarian crisis in Gaza and its impact on the Agency's ability to deliver essential support to the population and heard a briefing by South Africa on the proceedings that it had instituted at the International Court of Justice.

42. On 27 February, the Division for Palestinian Rights and the Department of Global Communications, on behalf of the Committee, held the annual briefing session for 25 new delegates of Member States.

43. On 11 March and 26 June, the Committee conducted elections to fill the remaining vacancies in the Bureau (see para. 31). In March, South Africa provided an update on the proceedings that it had instituted at the International Court of Justice. At the Committee meeting of 26 June, a legal counsel for the State of Palestine, Paul Reichler, delivered a briefing on proceeding related to the International Court of Justice advisory opinion on the legal consequences arising from the policies and practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

44. The Chair led Bureau delegations on visits to Trinidad and Tobago and Guyana from 22 to 26 April. Those visits were instrumental in encouraging Barbados, Jamaica, Trinidad and Tobago and the Bahamas to recognize the State of Palestine. The Chair participated in the fifteenth summit of the Heads of State and Government of OIC, which was held in Banjul on 4 and 5 May. On 1 July, a Bureau delegation participated in a joint seminar with OIC in Jeddah, and it visited Riyadh on 2 July to hold meetings with the Government of Saudi Arabia. The Bureau delegation continued onto Indonesia, where it held meetings on 4 and 5 July with government and civil society representatives to harness support for the Palestinian people and to mobilize collective efforts for accountability and a just solution. During the visit to Indonesia, the Bureau held its first meeting with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to mobilize regional support for Palestinian rights.

45. The Bureau harnessed traditional and social media for global outreach and advocacy. Since the outbreak of the conflict in Gaza, it has issued several press statements. On 17 October, the Bureau condemned the mass killing and wounding by Israel of civilians in Gaza and called for an immediate ceasefire. On 14 February, the Bureau warned of a possible Israeli invasion of Rafah. On 28 February, it called for solidarity and support to sustain UNRWA in the face of a smear campaign by Israel, suspensions of funding for the Agency and the humanitarian suffering of Palestine refugees in Gaza (see para. 19). On 23 July, the Bureau welcomed the landmark advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and called for rapid action by the international community to uphold its obligations to bring an end to the Israeli occupation and ensure the realization of self-determination by the Palestinian people.

46. The Committee delivered statements at quarterly debates of the Security Council on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, on 24 October, 23 January, 18 April and 19 July, highlighting the catastrophic situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and called for collective action to end the Israeli military onslaught in Gaza, achieve the two-State solution and realize the rights of the Palestinian people, including the rights to self-determination and independence.

C. Raising awareness on the question of Palestine

47. The Committee continued to raise awareness about the political, human rights and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with a focus on the conflict in Gaza, including the situation of Palestinian women, children and young persons. It organized up-to-date briefings by experts and exchange of ideas on specific issues during virtual and in-person Committee meetings, side events and conferences, and it continued to disseminate publications and information through social media platforms. Details regarding each activity can be found on the Committee's website.

48. On 12 December, the Committee convened a panel discussion on the theme "2023 conflict in Gaza: the responsibility to prevent genocide". Renowned legal scholars, including from Israel, and civil society representatives discussed the real possibility that Israel may be committing the crime of genocide, as defined in article II of the Genocide Convention, against the Palestinian people in the Gaza Strip.

49. On 13 March, the Committee organized a virtual event on the theme "Conflict in Gaza: impact on Palestinian women and children" on the margins of the sixty-eighth session of the Commission on the Status of Women. An all-female panel composed of representatives from UNRWA, the United Nations Population Fund and Save the Children International, as well as a Palestinian physician from Gaza, discussed the impact that the conflict has had on the lives of thousands of Palestinians families. The participants noted that 70 per cent of the casualties in Palestinian families were women and children, and that women bore a heavy burden as primary caregivers.

50. On 3 and 4 April, at the United Nations Office at Geneva, the Committee convened a conference of civil society organizations working on the question of Palestine, under the theme "Building bridges with international civil society to address the ongoing Nakbah". The participants focused on the role of civil society worldwide in advocating for a durable and sustainable ceasefire in Gaza and in achieving accountability for war crimes committed by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

51. On 17 May, the Committee held a commemorative panel discussion on the theme "1948–2024: the ongoing Palestinian Nakbah" at United Nations Headquarters in New York. In all, 53 Member States and Observers and approximately 60 representatives of civil society, as well as members of the public, attended the event. The panellists discussed, inter alia, the origins of the question of Palestine in the United Nations, following the adoption by the General Assembly of the partition plan in 1947, the Organization's continuing responsibilities until a just solution is found, the catastrophic humanitarian situation throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the obligations of all States under international law vis-à-vis the grave injustice that has been inflicted on the Palestinian people, including the duty to prevent genocide pursuant to the order issued by the International Court of Justice on 26 January.

52. On 1 July, the Committee and OIC jointly held a symposium on the theme "Jerusalem and the Gaza conflict: Palestinian identity and existence under threat of erasure" at OIC headquarters in Jeddah. The event was attended by representatives of the majority of OIC member States and other diplomatic figures. Panellists and participants discussed the plight of Palestinians in East Jerusalem, "colonial" Israeli urban planning and the intensification of the Israeli settler project in the Occupied Palestinian Territory – all of which were occurring in the shadow of the Gaza conflict. They urged States to recognize the State of Palestine and hold Israel accountable for its grave violations of international law and human rights law.

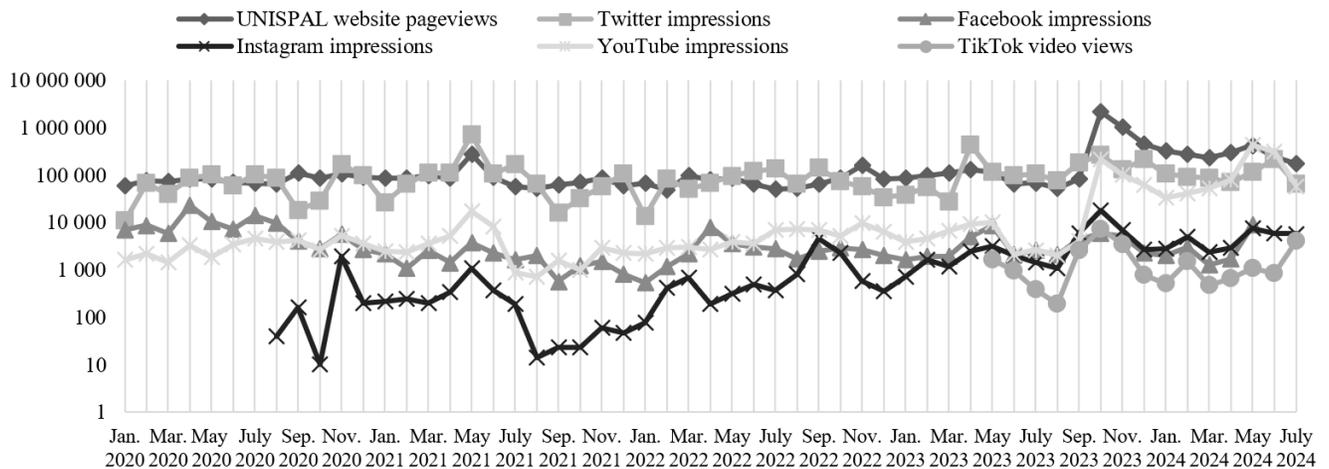

53. As mandated by the General Assembly, the Committee commemorated the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November at United Nations Headquarters in New York. The event featured statements by the President of the General Assembly, the President of the Security Council and the Deputy-Secretary-General in which they reaffirmed Palestinian rights and need for a just and lasting solution. The Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine read a message from the President of the State of Palestine. The representatives of the African Union, LAS, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and OIC delivered statements. The Chair of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the Reverend Peter Makari, speaking on behalf of civil society organizations, also delivered statements. The commemoration was attended by 105 Member States and 5 NGOs, and messages of solidarity were received from 47 States.³² The speakers underscored the long-standing position of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine and called on Israel to comply forthwith with international law and cease its violations and oppression of the Palestinian people. Similar commemorations were held at the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna.

54. A photo exhibit entitled “Palestine: a land with a people” was unveiled at United Nations Headquarters in New York as part of the commemoration of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The exhibit, which was displayed from 29 November to 6 January, depicted the Palestinian people’s journey before, during and after the Nakbah, highlighting both their suffering and resilience.

55. Through strategic use of digital resources, the Committee continued to inform and engage a growing international audience, enhancing global understanding of the question of Palestine and combating misinformation and disinformation, in particular after the events of 7 October. The graph below illustrates the growth trends of the digital tools that the Committee uses to support its advocacy and awareness-raising efforts. The Committee’s website had 5.6 million pageviews during the reporting period, becoming a key information source. Since January 2020, there has been a steady growth in web page visits, followers on social media channels and mailing list subscribers, with the mailing list alone now having 16,564 subscribers. The mailing list and website were crucial for distributing the Committee’s multilingual publications and statements (see para. 58), while the Committee’s digital platforms, including its account on X (formerly known as Twitter), which has more than 25,000 followers, and its YouTube channel, which has more than 11,800 subscribers and has received 1.5 million views, have become key sources of information about and updates on the Committee’s activities.

Source: United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs (July 2024).

Abbreviation: UNISPAL, United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine.

56. The United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, now in its thirtieth year of operation, remains an indispensable resource for diplomats, researchers and the public, averaging 500,000 page views per month. It holds a growing catalogue of more than 44,000 documents and is the largest, most comprehensive online repository on the subject. The collection ranges from the latest United Nations documents to rare records dating back decades. Moreover, documents are increasingly being disseminated in Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian and Spanish, in addition to English.

57. The Division for Palestinian Rights, in collaboration with the Office of Information and Communications Technology, continued to improve the accessibility of UNPal, an artificial-intelligence-based chatbot for the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine website. Other enhancements to the website are aimed at making it more accessible to everyone, including speakers of all the official languages and persons with disabilities.

58. As part of its monitoring mandate, the Committee continued to produce publications for dissemination by the Division for Palestinian Rights. They include a weekly publication on NGO action on the question of Palestine, monthly bulletins compiling all official documents of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations relating to the question of Palestine, quarterly newsletters on the activities of the Committee, an annual compilation of United Nations reports on the question of Palestine and an annual compilation of all resolutions issued by United Nations bodies on the question of Palestine.

59. On 1 September 2023, the Committee launched the groundbreaking study entitled “The legality of the Israeli occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem”, which was produced by the Irish Centre for Human Rights of the University of Galway, Ireland. This legal analysis, which the Committee commissioned after it had convened successive legal seminars on the subject, has provided advocates with the knowledge and international legal tools needed to pursue justice and accountability and to realize the rights of the Palestinian people. The study, which was translated into Arabic, French and Spanish, has been accessed more 53,609 times on the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine website. In addition, it was circulated as a document of the General Assembly and of the Security Council (A/78/378-S/2023/694) and was submitted to the International Court of Justice. The study served as a partial basis for the landmark advisory opinion that the Court issued on 19 July (see para. 22).

60. The Committee's publications were disseminated to a growing mailing list of subscribers, including research libraries, universities, political figures, members of the diplomatic community, students, NGOs, intergovernmental organizations and journalists. All the publications of the Committee are posted on its website.

61. The Committee, with support from OIC, distributed 2,724 United Nations exhibit booklets worldwide, including to Member States and United Nation offices, and began the process of translating them into French and Spanish, with a view to broadening outreach. The electronic versions of the booklets registered 9,362 views.

D. Cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and United Nations system entities

62. The Committee continued to cooperate with intergovernmental organizations. It jointly organized with OIC the annual International Conference on the Question of Jerusalem. The African Union, LAS and OIC regularly attended Committee meetings as observers and participated in its work. The Chair participated in key OIC events and the Bureau held consultations with ASEAN (see para. 44).

63. In the course of its activities, the Committee, through the Division for Palestinian Rights, continued its long-standing cooperation with the United Nations system, including UNDP, United Nations country teams, UNRWA, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, the Department of Global Communications (including the United Nations information centres), the Human Rights Council, OHCHR, UN-Women, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations System Staff College.

64. The Committee continued to collaborate with NGOs in promoting Palestinian rights. Representative of civil society organizations, including from the State of Palestine and Israel, were invited to all public events (see paras. 48–53). As customary, a civil society representative was also invited to speak at the Committee's commemoration of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see para. 53).

E. Capacity-development

65. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 77/23, the Committee continued to offer training, both in-person and online, aimed at enhancing the capacity of officials of the State of Palestine.

66. In collaboration with UNITAR, the Committee supported the participation of six officials (four female and two male) from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the State of Palestine and the Palestinian International Cooperation Agency in a training course entitled "The art of speechwriting" from 16 October to 5 November. The course strengthened the individual capacity of diplomats working in roles requiring refined skills in speechwriting and public speaking.

67. From 30 October to 8 December, the Committee conducted its annual six-week capacity-building programme for two Palestinian career diplomats (one male and one female), with an emphasis on multilateral diplomacy, peace, security and global developments shaping the agenda of the United Nations. The programme offered insights into the Organization's formal and informal processes, including the seventy-eighth session of the General Assembly.

Chapter VI

Action taken by the Department of Global Communications in accordance with General Assembly resolution 77/24

68. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 77/24 of 30 November 2022, the Department of Global Communications continued to implement its special information programme on the question of Palestine.

69. From 30 October to 1 December, the Department held its annual training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists in New York and Washington, D.C. The programme was renamed the Shireen Abu Akleh Training Programme for Palestinian Broadcasters and Journalists in honour of the Palestinian journalist Shireen Abu Akleh, who was killed on 11 May 2022. The four Palestinian journalists who participated in the programme attended briefings with United Nations officials and met with representatives of the Committee to Protect Journalists, Al Jazeera, the Washington, D.C., International Film Festival and the Middle East Institute.

70. The Department continued to update the web page on the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People in the six official languages, and it provided technical support for the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine website.

71. The social media accounts of the United Nations, with more 71 million followers in all six official languages, as well as Hindi, Kiswahili and Portuguese, continued to promote the Committee's events, including on a dedicated Trello board. The Department issued 256 press releases, in English and French, on the question of Palestine, including statements and messages by the Secretary-General, and provided live or on-demand coverage of General Assembly, Security Council and Committee meetings (see chapter V).

72. UN News published over 5,500 stories and audio pieces in the six official languages, as well as Hindi, Kiswahili, Portuguese and Urdu, generating 6.7 million pageviews from 4.2 million users. In addition, the Department provided on-the-ground insights into the tragic situation in Gaza and developments in the West Bank through interviews and features, including an Arabic-language profile of a Palestinian businesswoman who has dedicated her life to helping her community in Gaza.³³

73. UN Photo and the United Nations Photo Library captured and processed more than 1,400 relevant images, and more than 800 images were posted on the UN Photo website. In addition, UN Video created over 110 video packages, which were distributed through various United Nations platforms. UNifeed produced some 500 news video packages that were aired in 110 countries by various media outlets, including Al Jazeera, the British Broadcasting Corporation, Cable News Network and i24 News. Those packages covered such things as humanitarian updates from United Nations agencies in the field and the Secretary-General's annual trip to Egypt and Jordan.

74. The permanent exhibit "The United Nations and the Question of Palestine", which is part of the United Nations guided tour route, continued to raise awareness among visitors. Over 180,000 visitors saw the exhibit during the reporting period, and 123 students were educated about the question of Palestine in five briefings.

75. In connection with the commemoration of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (see para. 53), the Department facilitated the launch, at United Nations Headquarters, of a photo exhibit entitled "Palestine: a land with a people”. In addition, United Nations information centres around the world, including in Canberra, Manama, Mexico City, Moscow, Pretoria, Nairobi and Sana’a, Yemen, commemorated the occasion by organizing events and disseminating the Secretary-General’s message, including in local languages. On 30 November, the United Nations information centre in Nairobi, in collaboration with the Embassy of the State of Palestine to Kenya, as well as the United Nations Office at Nairobi, marked the occasion at the United Nations complex in Nairobi. More than 500 participants attended the screening of a documentary and an exhibition on Palestine culture. The Nairobi information centre supported the event by inviting the media and providing moderation, photography and social media services.

76. On 17 May, the Department held a “meet the author” event with Ardi Imseis, professor of international law and author of a book entitled The United Nations and the Question of Palestine: Rule by Law and the Structure of International Legal Subalternity.

77. Following the outbreak of the conflict in Gaza, United Nations information centres have been providing daily media monitoring for the Spokesperson of the Secretary-General and have supported the United Nations Communications Group crisis cell on Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory established by the Department of Global Communications. In addition, the information centres translated and disseminated press releases and messages of the Secretary-General and the Committee. The Italy desk of the United Nations Regional Information Centre for Western Europe published more than 100 articles in Italian on the crisis, arranged interviews and translated op-ed articles. The information centres also supported visits by high-level United Nations officials, such as the visits conducted by the Secretary-General and several other high-level United Nations officials to the region, including to Rafah. Media briefings were arranged, attracting significant international and national media coverage.

Chapter VII

Conclusions and recommendations of the Committee

78. In developing its recommendations set out below, the Committee has taken into account the deliberations at Committee and Bureau meetings, briefings received, outreach, international conferences and events involving Member States, civil society organizations and regional organizations, as well as recent United Nations resolutions.

A. Action by the Committee in response to the conflict and humanitarian crisis

79. The Committee strongly condemns the Israeli military campaign in Gaza. As at August 2024, more than 40,000 Palestinian had been killed and more than 92,000 men, women, children and elderly persons had been injured as a result of that campaign. It condemns the 7 October 2023 attack by armed Palestinian groups that resulted in the death of 1,200 Israelis and the injury of about 5,400 others; 255 others were abducted and taken as hostages into Gaza.

80. The Committee strongly condemns the disproportionate and indiscriminate military campaign that Israel is waging without regard for human life. This campaign has led to an ever-mounting death toll among Palestinians and caused them severe suffering, including mass displacement, starvation and spread of disease. It has also caused widespread destruction in the Gaza Strip and extensive trauma among the population. The Committee calls for an immediate and unconditional ceasefire, unrestricted humanitarian access, strict adherence to international humanitarian law to protect civilians, the release of hostages and prisoners, and an independent investigation into all human rights violations and war crimes perpetrated.

81. The Committee stresses that Israel, in its aggression against Gaza, has consistently failed to distinguish between civilians and combatants, as well as civilian and military objects, and breached its obligations as an occupying Power under the Fourth Geneva Convention. The Committee also stresses that the indiscriminate launching of rockets towards Israeli population centres by Palestinian armed groups is prohibited by international humanitarian law. The Committee reminds all parties that attacks on densely populated areas, hospitals, places of worship, schools and United Nations premises constitute war crimes and must cease forthwith, and that there must be accountability for all such grave breaches of international humanitarian law. The Committee urges all parties to comply fully with their obligations under international humanitarian and international human rights law, as well as General Assembly resolutions ES-10/21 and ES-10/22, Security Council resolutions 2712 \(2023\), 2720 \(2023\), 2728 \(2024\) and 2735 \(2024\), and Human Rights Council resolutions 55/28, 55/30, 55/31 and 55/32.

82. The Committee is alarmed by the humanitarian catastrophe caused by the Israeli military campaign, as a result of which the entire population of Gaza has been displaced multiple times and more than half a million Palestinians are facing famine. It calls for international solidarity and support for immediate humanitarian efforts in Gaza and urges Member States to pressure the Israeli authorities to allow safe unimpeded access for aid organizations bringing food, water, medicine, fuel and other essential supplies to Palestinians, and to prevent any actions aimed at obstructing the delivery of aid to the Palestinian people.

83. The Committee urges the international community to protect the Palestinian civilian population, including by establishing safe humanitarian zones, providing adequate shelter for displaced populations and meeting essential humanitarian and hygiene needs. The Committee strongly condemns the raids and attacks carried out by Israel against the last remaining places of refuge for displaced Palestinians in the Gaza Strip, including the repeated attacks against UNRWA facilities sheltering the displaced and refugee camps across Gaza. It deplores the evacuation orders issued by Israel, because they continue to cause the displacement of and inflict suffering on Palestinians and spawn fear and trauma among a population that is being repeatedly forced to flee and seek safety in a place where nowhere is safe. The Committee notes that refugee centres are crucial sources of humanitarian aid, providing essential food, medical care and shelter, and must be treated as safe zones and respected in accordance with international law.

84. The Committee demands action to address war crimes committed by Israel in Gaza, including by investigating the weaponization of starvation as a method of warfare and other war crimes prohibited under international law. The Committee also denounces Israeli military offensives aimed at obstructing humanitarian aid to Palestinian civilians, who, after enduring months of bombings, disease and hunger, continue to endure collective punishment potentially involving acts of genocide.

85. The Committee demands that measures be taken to enhance safety for aid workers, including by requiring Israel to establish and respect safe corridors and ensure the protection of humanitarian personnel, including UNRWA staff, and the continuous delivery of aid.

86. The Committee expresses its deep concern about escalating settler violence in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The increase in settler violence could further destabilize the area. In addition, the Committee calls for an immediate end to the use of lethal force by Israeli forces and armed settlers against Palestinian civilians, including children. The use of lethal force by Israeli forces and armed settlers has made 2024 the deadliest year on record for children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

87. The Committee condemns the expansion of illegal settlements and outposts and the continued suffering and dispossession of Palestinian communities, which are facing an ongoing Nakbah driven by Israeli State policy and acts of terror by extremists. The Committee calls on Israeli government officials to halt their provocations, rhetoric and incitement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

B. Action by the Committee in response to human rights violations

88. The Committee condemns the recurring human rights violations committed by Israel, the occupying Power, against the Palestinian civilian population in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as amply documented by international organizations, including the United Nations and its human rights mechanisms, as well as human rights organizations, including organizations from Israel.

89. The Committee condemns the punitive measures imposed by the Government of Israel to perpetuate the occupation, weaken the Palestinian Authority and repress the Palestinian people. The Committee calls on Israel to immediately reverse its punitive measures against the Palestinian Authority, disarm Israeli settlers and immediately stop settler violence and all settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and provide protection to Palestinian civilians, as called for in Security Council resolution 904 \(1994\) and General Assembly resolution ES-10/20 and in line with its obligations under international humanitarian law.

90. The Committee demands that the United Nations and the international community take additional measures to ensure accountability in response to the failure of Israel to fulfil its responsibility to investigate and prosecute acts committed by its agents or third parties that involve grave breaches of international humanitarian law and gross violations of the human rights of Palestinians. The Committee commends the Member States that have imposed sanctions against Israeli settlers involved in violence against Palestinians, and urges other Member States to act accordingly to ensure accountability.

91. The Committee urges Israel to uphold its obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law and to fully respect the status quo at the holy sites in Jerusalem, including the Aqsa Mosque compound, and to recognize the special role of Jordan as custodian of the compound. It condemns the attempts of Israel to change the historic and legal status of the holy sites and East Jerusalem, as well as to alter the demographic composition and character of East Jerusalem, in violation of international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

92. The Committee commends the Secretary-General and the relevant humanitarian mechanisms for their response to continued and escalating aggression and violence by Israel, including the disproportionate use of military force in densely populated civilian areas in Gaza and the West Bank. The Committee underscores the seriousness of the findings in the most recent report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict (A/78/842-S/204/384) with regard to grave violations against Palestinian children, and notes that Israeli security forces and armed Palestinian groups are among those responsible for these violations.

93. The Committee is deeply worried that OHCHR, in its report of 31 July (see para. 18), indicated that thousands of Palestinians have been detained in Gaza, the West Bank and Israel, including since October 2023, in violation of international human rights and international humanitarian law. The Committee strongly condemns the sexual violence committed against and the deaths, disappearances, torture and inhumane treatment of Palestinian prisoners in Israel, including men, women and children. It also denounces the actions of Israeli extremists who call for the right to rape Palestinian prisoners.

94. The Committee deplores the killing and silencing by Israeli forces of Palestinian journalists and media professionals in Gaza and the West Bank, who are central to exposing the atrocities, violations and acts of genocide being perpetrated in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

95. The Committee welcomes the order issued by the International Court of Justice in response to the proceedings instituted by South Africa. In that order, the Court indicates that Israel must “take all measures within its power to prevent the commission of all acts within the scope of Article II” of the Genocide Convention. The Committee also highlights the extreme vulnerability of civilians in Gaza owing to repeated Israeli military assaults, and demands that Israel ensure that its forces do not commit further genocidal acts.

96. The Committee welcomes measure taken by the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court aimed at holding Israeli leaders and the leaders of Palestinian armed group accountable for war crimes and crimes against humanity as a result of their actions in the Gaza conflict. It calls on the International Criminal Court to act on the Prosecutor’s request.

C. Action by the Committee in response to annexation and settlement activities

97. The Committee welcomes the landmark advisory opinion that the International Court of Justice issued on 19 July and calls on the General Assembly and Security Council to urgently implement it, including through the adoption of the modalities required to bring an end the unlawful Israeli occupation and a halt to all new settlement activities, to evacuate existing settlers, to make reparations for damages in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to support the realization by the Palestinian people of their inalienable right to self-determination. The Assembly, supported by the Council, should formulate a road map for ending the unlawful occupation. Such a road map should specify the obligations of all States, in accordance with the advisory opinion, and include clear benchmarks, and its implementation should be monitored. The Committee supports the call for all Member States to uphold international law and reject the unlawful presence of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to refrain from actions that assist or sustain that unlawful presence.

98. The Committee reiterates that the annexation of any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, is illegal. It calls on the Israeli authorities to cease all actions aimed at changing the demographic composition, status and character of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to abide scrupulously by its international legal obligations. Such illegal colonization measures violate the inalienable right to self-determination of the Palestinian people and undermine the prospect of achieving a two-State solution by systematically eroding a contiguous, independent, viable and sovereign Palestinian State, based on the pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem serving as its capital, in accordance with international law and the pertinent United Nations resolutions, including, inter alia, Security Council resolution 2334 (2016) and General Assembly resolution 77/26, as well as the Madrid terms of reference and the Arab Peace Initiative.

99. The Committee is gravely concerned at the stated objective of the Government of Israel to dramatically increase the number of settlers in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, with the Government openly referring to the occupied territory as the “land of Israel”, contrary to international law, countless United Nations resolutions and the international consensus on the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders. The Committee supports the demands made by the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council for the cessation of all such illegal activities, including expropriation of and encroachment on Palestinian land and demolition of Palestinian homes and properties.

100. The Committee urges the Government of Israel to refrain from seizing Palestinian land, stop conducting demolitions, including of donor-funded structures, and end all forced evictions and forcible displacement of Palestinians.

101. The Committee concurs with the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel that discrimination against Palestinians and the ongoing occupation and associated abuses, such as unlawful killings, forced displacement and denial of rights, resemble apartheid and are primary causes of the conflict. The Committee calls for urgent action to safeguard Palestinian human rights and condemns political attacks on the Special Rapporteurs and the Independent International Commission of Inquiry, which undermine their efforts to document abuses, advocate for Palestinian rights and promote accountability.

D. Action with the Secretary-General, the Security Council, the General Assembly, the Human Rights Council, the International Court of Justice and the International Criminal Court

102. The Committee concurs with the stance of the Secretary-General on the question of Palestine, which is based on international law and numerous United Nations resolutions, and it urges him to continue leveraging his good offices to pursue a just resolution to the question of Palestine. It calls on the international community to fulfil its political, legal, humanitarian and moral obligations in responding to the dangerous crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory that led the Secretary-General to invoke Article 99 of the Charter.

103. The Committee urges the Security Council and the General Assembly to ensure the speedy implementation of the long-standing parameters for peace affirmed in relevant United Nations resolutions, including Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution 77/25. Doing so includes ensuring that Member States and intergovernmental organizations take tangible measures to implement their obligations under those resolutions, in particular distinguishing between Israel and the territories that have remained under its occupation since 1967. In addition, Member States must refrain from aiding, assisting or recognizing the unlawful presence of Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as reaffirmed most recently in the International Court of Justice advisory opinion of 19 July.

104. The Committee requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit his reports to the Security Council on the implementation of resolutions 2334 \(2016\), 2728 \(2024\) and 2735 \(2024\) in written format and, pursuant to the applicable paragraphs of those resolutions, to include references to the implementation of the provision by Member States. Pursuant to those resolutions, the Committee also calls upon the Council to examine practical ways and means to secure the full implementation of relevant Council resolutions, including the use of sanctions on States and private entities violating Council resolutions.

105. The Committee calls on the Security Council to demand the immediate implementation of resolution 2735 \(2024\), in which a three-phase ceasefire deal is outlined, and to also demand an immediate halt to Israeli military actions. The Committee also calls on the Security Council to act urgently to facilitate the delivery of humanitarian assistance to Gaza, and calls for a peaceful resolution to the conflict, which has been delayed for too long. The Committee expresses concern over the failure of the Security Council to halt atrocities in Gaza, such as the killing of non-combatants, including men, women, children, young persons and elderly people, and strongly condemns the silence that normalizes these acts. It acknowledges the efforts of States, including Egypt, Qatar and the United States, to broker a ceasefire and the release of hostages and urges the continuation of those efforts until the suffering in Gaza has been brought to end.

106. The Committee urges further efforts to implement the mandate of the Senior Humanitarian and Reconstruction Coordinator for Gaza, as set out in Security Council resolution 2720 \(2023\), with the objective of expediting the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian civilian population in Gaza, and calls for Member States to support the Coordinator's efforts.

107. The Committee notes that any initiatives aimed at resolving the conflict in Gaza and ending the prolonged occupation in order to achieve a just solution to the question of Palestine must, first and foremost, take into account the legitimate rights and aspirations of the Palestinian people, engage the Palestinian leadership and be based on the two-State solution, in accordance with international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions.

108. The Committee commends the ongoing efforts of the International Court of Justice and the International Criminal Court in upholding international law and humanitarian principles in matters related to the question of Palestine and that are crucial for ensuring accountability, justice and the protection of Palestinian rights.

E. Advocacy and outreach with the international community and civil society

109. The Committee calls upon regional organizations, in particular LAS, the European Union, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and OIC, to take a politically active role in stopping the annexation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, by Israel and to take tangible measures, including with regard to accountability, in order to bring an end to the occupation and achieve a just solution to the question of Palestine. The Committee notes that any comprehensive resolution to the question of Palestine will require a regional approach, such as the approach set out in the Arab Peace Initiative.

110. The Committee fully supports the ongoing efforts by Member States, as well as the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, to promote calm and a just and lasting resolution to the question of Palestine. The Committee commends the recent efforts of Algeria, China and Egypt to promote Palestinian unity, as it recognizes that Palestinian unity is essential to ending the conflict and advancing the resolution of the question of Palestine.

111. The Committee recognizes the crucial role of global civil society in advocating for Palestinian rights and an end to the immense suffering in Gaza, and in urging Member States to heed the demands of the public and take decisive action in line with their international legal obligations. The Committee condemns the threats that have been made against civil society organizations and NGOs delivering aid in Gaza. It calls on Israel to reverse policies that restrict access for civil society organizations and hamper their vital work, and to ensure safe access for humanitarian workers.

F. Action by Member States and regional organizations

112. The Committee calls on Member States and regional organizations to act, collectively and individually, in line with international law to pressure Israel, the occupying Power, to fulfil its responsibilities to safeguard Palestinian civilians under international law, stop the assault on Gaza and the violence in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and end its unlawful occupation as rapidly as possible.

113. The Committee considers unilateral recognition of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the relocation of embassies to Jerusalem as being invalid, because those actions violate Security Council resolutions 476 \(1980\), 478 \(1980\) and 2334 \(2016\). It commends those States that have reversed such recognition and, in that connection, recalls the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 19 July.

114. The Committee welcomes General Assembly resolution ES-10/23, in which the Assembly reaffirms the right of Palestinians to self-determination and an independent State, and it urges the Security Council to recommend the admission of the State of Palestine as a full member of the United Nations, in line with the broad international consensus in that regard. The Committee also welcomes the recent decisions of several States to recognize the State of Palestine and urges those States that have yet to do so to take decisive action now, in keeping with the duty to uphold the Palestinian people's inalienable right to self-determination and independence.

115. The Committee encourages OHCHR to continue updating the database of business enterprises engaged in certain activities in relation to illegal Israeli settlement activity in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and stresses the importance of the database for accountability measures.

116. The Committee reaffirms its strong support for UNRWA and the Agency's indispensable role in providing services to millions of Palestine refugees, many of whom are now sheltering in its facilities in Gaza. The Committee urges continued political support for the Agency's mandate, which was established by the General Assembly, and urges donors to increase funding for UNRWA. In that connection, the Committee emphasizes the Secretary-General's recognition of the Agency's critical role and highlights the need to hold accountable those responsible for the deaths of United Nations staff. The Committee demands that Israel reverse its classification of UNRWA as a terrorist organization and stop its campaign to delegitimize UNRWA, as that undermines the Agency's crucial humanitarian efforts in Gaza and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in the other fields of operation in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria.

117. The Committee calls on Member States to support the fiscal stability of the Palestinian Authority and strengthen Palestinian institutions, in order to improve economic and social conditions in the State of Palestine, especially in view of the suffering and deprivation that the actions of Israel have caused.

118. Recognizing the vital role of legislative bodies in garnering support for the peaceful resolution of the question of Palestine, the Committee calls for parliamentary diplomacy to help bring an end to the Gaza conflict and the Israeli occupation and find a just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine.

G. Action by the Secretariat and other United Nations entities

119. The Committee requests the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs to continue providing secretariat support across all aspects of its General Assembly mandate, and to facilitate synergy, collaboration and cooperation with United Nations entities working on the question of Palestine. The Committee expresses its appreciation to the Division for supporting and adapting the Committee's communications and outreach tools, including its multilingual website, its social media accounts and audiovisual content pertaining to its activities, with a view to promoting the Committee's advocacy and awareness-raising efforts in the dynamic context of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

120. The Committee encourages enhanced collaboration with the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Global Communications, with a view to ensuring broader outreach. In addition, it encourages the Department to reinstitute its dedicated web portal on the Israel-Gaza crisis.

121. The Committee also welcomes the ongoing efforts to improve the targeted capacity-building projects for Palestinian officials and to promote inclusivity, gender balance and South-South cooperation.

Economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: the welfare cost of the fragmentation of the occupied West Bank

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: the welfare cost of the fragmentation of the occupied West Bank

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/22, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to continue to report to it on economic development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. The report complements previous UNCTAD reports submitted to the Assembly (A/71/174, A/73/201, A/74/272, A/75/310, A/76/309 and A/77/295).

In the occupied West Bank, Israel implements a series of administrative and physical barriers that control the movements of Palestinian people and limit their access to markets, both domestic and foreign, and to natural and economic resources. Area C accounts for more than 60 per cent of the area of the West Bank and is fully under the control of Israel. In tandem with the expansion of settlements, Israel imposes stricter restrictions on Palestinian economic activities in Area C over and above those imposed in Areas A and B of the West Bank.

The present report quantifies the impact of the relative share of Area C in Palestinian localities on household welfare, measured by expenditure using two cross-sectional data sets on 457 localities in 10 governorates. The exercise reveals that the greater the share of Area C in a locality, the stronger the negative impact on total household expenditure. The extent of this negative effect, however, is heterogeneous across West Bank governorates.

The present report complements previous reports and concludes that removing the additional restrictions on all of Area C would more than double household expenditure in the West Bank and significantly reduce poverty in Area C. Reducing restrictions in Area C to levels similar to Areas A and B, as a step towards ending the occupation, in line with relevant United Nations resolutions, could boost total Palestinian household expenditure substantially, by up to 200 per cent in some localities, and help to reduce poverty substantially across much of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. For instance, in 2017, total household expenditure in the West Bank, excluding Jerusalem Governorate, could have been $4.4 billion higher (in constant 2015 United States dollars) than it actually was. This is equivalent to a 57 per cent increase in total household expenditure in the West Bank. Transferring land currently categorized as Area C, as stipulated in the Oslo Accords, to Area A or B would amount only to a partial removal of restrictions, however. If all restrictions in the three Areas were removed, as a step towards ending the occupation, the positive economic impact would be much greater.

The report concludes that ending and reversing settlement activities, in line with Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\), and lifting all restrictions on Palestinian economic development, including in Area C, is a sine qua non for the eradication of poverty and achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the emergence of a viable, contiguous Palestinian State, based on the two-State solution, in line with relevant United Nations resolutions.

I. Objective and limitations

1. The present report is an addition to six previous reports, prepared by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and submitted to the General Assembly, on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. The report sheds light on the extensive economic cost exacted by the Israeli occupation of Area C and the fragmentation of the West Bank that it entails.
2. While the occupation imposes significant restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in Areas A and B, it enforces additional restrictions in Area C. The present report adds to the findings of the 2022 report (A/77/295) on the economic cost of the additional restrictions imposed by the occupation in Area C, which represents about 60 per cent of the total area of the occupied West Bank.
3. The present report quantifies the welfare impact of the relative share of Area C in Palestinian localities on household welfare, using expenditure as a proxy, by assuming a counterfactual scenario in which the share of Area C in each locality is set to zero. This implies that the restrictions in Area C are set at the level of the significant, but relatively less severe, restrictions imposed in Areas A and B.
4. The report estimates the above-mentioned cost from a microeconomic vantage point. Given the census and survey data sets used and the microeconomic nature of the exercise, the cost is estimated for one year, 2017, but the results apply to other years.

II. Background and context

5. With the onset of the occupation in 1967, Israel began establishing settlements in Area C of the West Bank. According to the non-governmental organization Peace Now, the settler population in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, rose from 198,315 in 2000 to almost 700,000 at the end of 2022.¹ These settlements inflict a significant economic cost on the Palestinian people, dispossess them of their inalienable right to development, entrench occupation and pre-empt a meaningful, sustainable two-State solution.
6. The Security Council, in several resolutions, has emphasized the illegality of settlements and the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force. In its resolution 2334 (2016), the Security Council reaffirmed that the establishment by Israel of settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, has no legal validity and constitutes a flagrant violation under international law and a major obstacle to the achievement of the two-State solution and a just, lasting and comprehensive peace.
7. In accordance with the 1993 Oslo Accords, the occupied West Bank was divided into three administrative areas. Area A was placed under the civil and security administration of the Palestinian Authority. It represents about 18 per cent of the total area of the West Bank, includes the Palestinian cities and is home to most of the Palestinian population of the West Bank. Area B represents approximately 22 per cent of the area of the West Bank, is largely rural and is subject to Palestinian civil control and joint Israeli-Palestinian security control. Area C, which accounts for about 60 per cent of the West Bank, incorporates all Israeli settlements and is fully under Israeli civil and security control (see A/77/295, p. 2).

8. As such, Palestinian physical and economic geography is fragmented by subdividing Areas A and B into 166 disconnected islands, leaving Area C as the only contiguous part of the West Bank (figure II). The Oslo Accords envisioned the gradual transfer of Area C to the Palestinian Authority over a five-year period ending in 1999. However, to the present day, the occupation continues, and Area C is largely inaccessible to Palestinian producers, although it is the largest of the three Areas and has the most valuable natural resources, such as water, fertile land, minerals and stone, as well as tourist attractions and Dead Sea resources for cosmetic products.

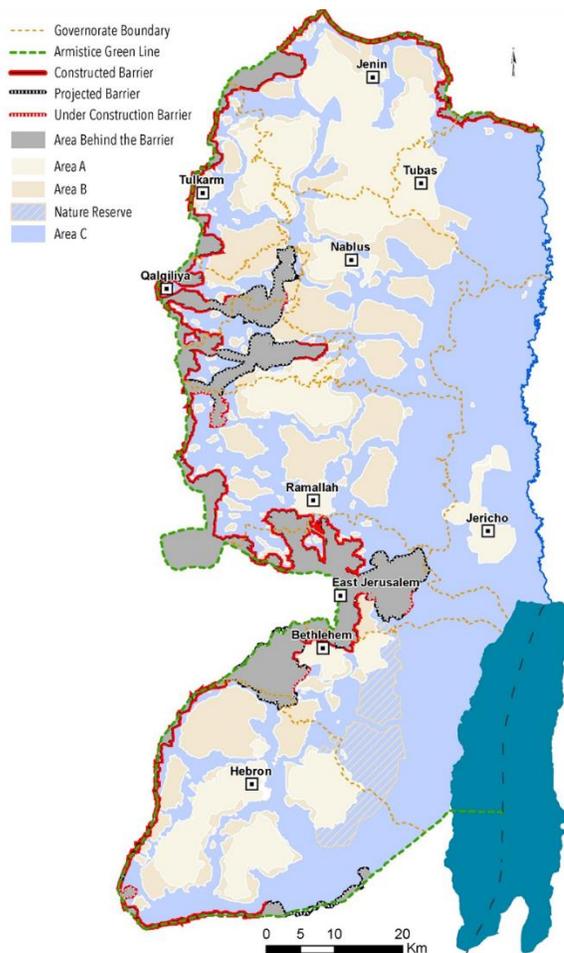

9. Instead of transferring Area C to the Palestinian Authority, Israel has continued to use a complex matrix of administrative and physical controls over the movement of Palestinian people and their access to their land and natural resources, citing security reasons (figure I). These restrictions on movement, trade and investment, combined with settlements, violence and the wall, serve to foster a coercive environment that alters the demographic composition by pushing Palestinians out of their land while settlements and the settler population grow (figure II) (see A/77/295).

10. The Israeli occupation exacts a significant negative impact on development by preventing Palestinians from building on over 99 per cent of Area C.² It is extremely difficult for Palestinians to obtain permits from the Israeli authorities to build residential structures or structures for investment or to develop infrastructure such as roads and networks for water and power. If a structure is built without a permit, as is often the case, the occupying Power demolishes it at the owner's expense. Over the years, the demolition and seizure of Palestinian structures and the human displacement they entail have increased. Schools, water pipes and donor-funded humanitarian structures are not exempt from demolitions.³ Owners are forced to demolish their own property, at their own expense, to avoid paying for the cost of demolition if carried out by the occupying Power, which may include additional fines.

³ United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "West Bank demolitions and displacement: December 2022", 21 February 2023.

It is estimated that between 2009 and 2021, in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, 7,400 Palestinian-owned structures were destroyed.⁴ Recently, both demolition and “self-demolition” have been increasing. The year 2022 witnessed the highest number of demolitions of Palestinian structures in over a decade. Israel demolished 954 structures, including water cisterns, storerooms, agricultural buildings, businesses and public buildings. As a result of the demolition of 193 residential structures, 1,032 Palestinians were displaced, half of them (508) minors. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 144 structures were demolished in East Jerusalem, including 74 demolished by their owners to avoid additional fines.⁵

11. Over the years, UNCTAD has published studies and reports for the General Assembly and the Trade and Development Board that have assessed various dimensions of the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. These covered a wide range of topics, including the impact of the occupation on the Palestinian people’s human right to development, the economic cost of the unrealized oil and natural gas potential, the leakage of Palestinian fiscal resources to the Israeli treasury and the contribution of the occupation to widespread poverty in Gaza, the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

12. UNCTAD (2022) estimated the annual cost of the additional restrictions imposed by Israel in 30 per cent of Area C at 25.3 per cent of West Bank gross domestic product (GDP).⁶ UNCTAD (2021) assessed the cost of restrictions and closure policy implemented by the occupying Power following the outbreak of the second intifada in 2000⁷ and concluded that those restrictions cost the economy of the West Bank 35 per cent of its GDP and increased the poverty rate by 200 per cent. UNCTAD (2020) concluded that, in Gaza, military operations, restrictions on movement and blockade increased the poverty rate from 40 to 64 per cent between 2007 and 2017.⁸ UNCTAD (2019) reflected on the economic cost of the unrealized oil and natural gas potential in Gaza and Area C (Meged oil and natural gas field) located inside the occupied West Bank and exploited by Israel.⁹ UNCTAD (2019) estimated the Palestinian fiscal resources that leak to the treasury of the occupying Power at 13.1 per cent of Palestinian GDP.¹⁰

13. The World Bank (2013, 2014 and 2018) has found that closures in the occupied West Bank substantially reduce the probability of being employed, hourly wages and the number of days worked while increasing the number of working hours per day. Checkpoints alone cost the West Bank economy about 6 per cent of its GDP.¹¹ Lifting road obstacles within the West Bank enough to improve Palestinians’ market access by 10 per cent would increase local output by 0.6 per cent, and, in the absence of roadblocks, GDP per capita in the West Bank would have been 4.1 to 6.1 per cent higher each year.¹² Overall, according to the World Bank, if restrictions on Palestinian producers in Area C were removed, with the occupation still in place, the potential additional output gains would amount to at least $2.2 billion annually, or 23 per cent of Palestinian GDP.¹³

III. Methodology and data

A. Special economic zones

14. Special economic zones are a policy instrument commonly used in most developing and many developed economies to accelerate development. They are geographically defined areas within which governments aim to promote investment, achieve structural transformation and accelerate development by providing fiscal, regulatory and other incentives, land use rights and other advantages, and infrastructure support. Among other goals, special economic zones may be used to target poorer regions. Special economic zones are typically subject to different economic regulations than other regions within the same country.¹⁴ Under the right circumstances, gains from special economic zones include boosting income, promoting exports, attracting foreign direct investment, job creation and advancing the development of targeted regions.¹⁵

15. UNCTAD (2019) explores the explosive growth of special economic zones and documents that more than 1,000 special economic zones were developed worldwide between 2014 and 2019. By 2019, there were some 5,400 zones in 147 countries, with more in the pipeline. In many cases, special economic zones have played a key role in structural transformation and have led to greater participation in global value chains.¹⁶

16. As shown above, the multilayered restrictions in Area C have a negative impact on Palestinian development. The share of Area C in Palestinian West Bank localities plays a role akin to an adverse (negative) special economic zone that, instead of fostering investment, suppresses it and prevents development. A cursory examination of the disincentives emanating from the restrictions imposed by the occupation in Area C suggests that designating part of a Palestinian locality as Area C introduces an adverse special economic zone whose negative impact spills over beyond the limits of the zone. The welfare cost of these adverse special economic zones will be explored in subsequent sections of the present report. It will be shown that ensuring that Palestinian investors have more access to Area C could eliminate poverty and boost total Palestinian household expenditure substantially.

B. Estimation of total household expenditure at the locality level

17. The 2007 and 2017 censuses of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics divide the West Bank into 523 localities in 11 governorates: Ramallah, Janin, Tubas, Tulkarm, Nablus, Qalqilyah, Salfit, Jericho, Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Hebron. The analysis hereafter excludes Jerusalem Governorate, as it is completely under Israeli control and no data are available.¹⁷ The analysis covers 457 localities in the 10 remaining governorates, excluding Jerusalem and its localities.

18. Table 1 presents a summary of the geographical characteristics of localities in the West Bank, excluding the governorate of Jerusalem and its localities. It shows that the average share of Area C per locality area is 52 per cent. The distribution is presented in figure III. The average shares of Areas A and B per West Bank locality area are 26 and 20 per cent, respectively (see table 1). Some localities are fully accounted for by Areas A, B or C. In addition, the average share of Palestinian locality area that falls within the municipal boundaries of Israeli settlements is 7.5 per cent, but varies significantly, from 0 to 93.5 per cent.¹⁸

Note: The data exclude Jerusalem and its localities.

¹⁸ The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics' division of the West Bank into localities was done for statistical reasons. The locality is the smallest geographical statistical unit in the census. It does not consider the Israeli settlements that are built on Palestinian land. Thus, some of the localities are within the Israeli settlements' municipal boundaries, but remain Palestinian land taken over by the occupying Power.

19. Total household expenditure by locality is estimated by the empirical best prediction method, which follows two steps to estimate the poverty headcount. The same methodology was used in previous UNCTAD reports submitted to the General Assembly (A/75/310 and A/76/309). First, data from the Palestinian Expenditure and Consumption Surveys are used to estimate regression equations for household expenditure per adult equivalent on the basis of the observable characteristics of households. Second, the estimated coefficients of the regressions are combined with census data to impute household expenditure per adult equivalent for the larger set of households included in the census. In order to estimate the statistical relationship linking household expenditure per adult equivalent to the household characteristics, this information must be available in both the survey and the census data.¹⁹

20. Palestinian censuses, like those of other countries, do not include data on household or individual consumption, expenditure or income. However, the Palestinian Expenditure and Consumption Surveys of 2011 and 2017 and the censuses of 2007 and 2017 compile data on a relatively broad set of common variables, including location, whether urban, rural or a refugee camp; characteristics of the head of household, such as education level and employment status; sector of employment; demographic characteristics of the household; access to basic services such as water; characteristics of the household dwelling; and household assets.

21. Estimates of expenditure per adult equivalent are based on the regression results provided in the annex to the present report. The results of weighted regressions of log expenditure per adult equivalent (in constant 2015 dollars) on the set of standard covariates interact with regional dummy variables of both the West Bank and Gaza for better regional estimates.²⁰ Inclusion of all census data enhances the efficiency of regional estimates, as the larger sample size improves precision and lowers the error term.

22. In order to maximize comparability between the synthetic expenditure measures constructed using census data and the estimated coefficients, a common set of covariates over the two sample surveys were maintained in the regressions for 2011 and 2017.²¹

23. The estimated average expenditure per adult equivalent and poverty rates by locality are mapped in figures IV and V. Expenditure per adult equivalent in general shows an increase between 2011 and 2017. The spatial distribution of expenditure per adult equivalent does not change much in general; it shows convergence, as growth is higher in areas with initially lower expenditure per adult equivalent in 2011 (see figure IV).

24. Between 2011 and 2017, the spatial distribution of poverty remained stable (see figure V), with the east and south poorer than the rest of the West Bank. In addition, the poorest regions in the West Bank are those that are fully or partially in Area C, namely, across the Jordan Valley and the south.

²¹ These estimates differ from those in A/75/310 and A/76/309 in three ways: first, A/75/310 and A/76/309 use a sample of the censuses (about 20 per cent) while the present report uses the full census. Second, in A/75/310 and A/76/309, Jerusalem is included, whereas it is not included in the present report. Third, in the present report, the regression is weighted; i.e. it incorporates household weight (the inverse of the selection probability of the household). These weights are used to correct or adjust baseline expansion factors in the regression.

25. Estimated total expenditures at locality level are quite heterogeneous, as shown in the histograms, using a logarithmic scale (figure VI). In 2011, mean total locality expenditure was $9.9 million and the median was $4.1 million. In 2017, the mean was $15.5 million while the median was $6.4 million. Large standard deviations of $30.0 million and $42.4 million, respectively, indicate significant inequality. As the two histograms show, the distribution shifted to the right between 2011 and 2017, reflecting a modicum of economic growth in the West Bank, with total expenditure increasing from $4.54 billion in 2011 to $7.11 billion in 2017.

Figure VI
West Bank: estimated total expenditure by locality, 2011 and 2017

Source: UNCTAD calculations.

26. Table 2 shows that, in real terms, estimated locality average expenditure per adult equivalent increased by 24.5 per cent between 2011 and 2017. However, given population growth, the average locality expenditure increased by 54 per cent, from $277 in 2011 to $345 in 2017.

27. Income measures constructed using survey or administrative data can be enhanced by recourse to night-time luminosity data. Locality-level average night-time luminosity, outside Israeli settlements' municipal boundaries, is used in the regression analysis to account for the unobserved variation in expenditure not captured by the small area estimates. Table 2 shows that locality average annual night-time luminosity outside Israeli settlements' municipal boundaries also increased by 34.5 per cent between 2011 and 2017.

IV. The welfare cost of the fragmentation of the occupied West Bank

28. Area C accounts for more than 60 per cent of the total area of the West Bank, is the only contiguous part of the West Bank and has the most fertile land and the most valuable natural resources.

29. While occupation also imposes significant restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in Areas A and B, the restrictions it imposes in Area C are more stringent, forcing the Area to play a role akin to an “adverse special economic zone” that disincentivizes Palestinian investment and undermines household welfare. The ongoing expansion of settlements dispossesses Palestinians of most of Area C and its natural resources, thus exacting a significant socioeconomic toll.

30. Section IV estimates part of the economic cost of occupation in Area C in terms of lost household welfare. It is crucial to note that the estimated cost is partial and does not include the cost of the restrictions imposed in areas A and B, which, it is assumed, would persist after a hypothetical modification of restrictions in Area C to resemble the restrictions in Areas A and B. The exercise estimates the negative impact of the share of Area C in Palestinian localities on household welfare, using the level of expenditure as a proxy. The estimated cost leaves out several channels other than expenditure through which occupation seriously undermines the general welfare of the Palestinian people.

31. The cost, in terms of percentage and dollar value, is measured using a counterfactual scenario that reverses the negative impact of Area C share in Palestinian localities on total household expenditure. Section IV.A below estimates the cost in percentage terms, while section IV.B measures the cost in dollar value.

A. Area C as an “adverse economic zone”

32. Section IV.A investigates the relationship between the share of Area C in the locality and the latter’s total household expenditure. An econometric model is developed with (a) total expenditure by locality as a function of a period dummy (= 1 for 2017 and 0 otherwise) to account for the growth in total expenditure and population, (b) nine governorate dummies (Ramallah is the excluded dummy) to account for the unobserved characteristics of the governorates, with Ramallah as the benchmark and (c) the logarithm of the locality’s area. The results presented in column 1 of table 3 report the corresponding estimates, where total locality expenditures are expressed in logarithmic form and standard errors are clustered at the governorate level to account for common shocks affecting localities within a given governorate. Even this bare-bones specification accounts for 31.5 per cent of the variance of the response variable.

33. The significant relationship between night-time luminosity outside settlements and Palestinian economic activity is established in the previous report by UNCTAD to the General Assembly.²² In column 2, in order to capture a significant portion of the residual variance owing to the small area estimates of total expenditure, the logarithm of the mean luminosity of the locality (outside the municipal boundaries of Israeli settlements) is added. The point estimate of the elasticity is close to 1, indicating that a 1 per cent increase in mean luminosity is associated, ceteris paribus, with a 1 per cent increase in Palestinian expenditure. In this specification, R² increases to 0.595, corroborating a strong link between luminosity and expenditure.

34. Column 3 adds the share (which varies between 0 and 1) of Area C in locality area. The column captures the unrealized potential gains of transferring Area C to greater Palestinian control. These gains can be estimated by observing the substantial variation in the share of localities under effective Palestinian control (Areas A and B) and the substantial number of localities lying at each extreme. Nevertheless, this share is time-invariant and therefore cannot, from a statistical perspective, exploit within-locality variance in the share to identify its effect, as there is none.

35. The precise point estimate associated with the share of Area C in the locality is presented in column 3. This number (-1.466) implies that if a hypothetical locality currently entirely inside Area C is reassigned entirely to Areas A or B, its total expenditure would increase by 146.6 per cent. A graphical representation of the relationship is illustrated in figure VIII, where the straight line represents the relationship between the share of Area C in the locality and the logarithm of total expenditure in the locality, while controlling for other covariates.

36. In column 4, the effect of the share of Area C in locality is allowed to vary by governorate. The coefficients vary from (-1.066) for Janin to (-2.084) for Jericho, with Ramallah (-1.426) close to the West Bank mean. The estimation results suggest that most of the differences are statistically significant at the usual levels of confidence. The observed heterogeneity in the marginal effect on total expenditure is illustrated in figure VIII, which plots the governorate-specific linear relationships.

37. The share of Area C in a locality has a negative impact on Palestinians' household welfare through several channels: it restricts them from living, developing, investing, building and accessing land, water and vital services such as health care and education.

B. The welfare cost of the occupation

38. To estimate the welfare cost of the additional restrictions imposed in Area C, a counterfactual scenario was developed. It involves the use of the aforementioned estimates to compute the potential gain in total estimated 2017 expenditure that could have accrued in West Bank localities had the total land of Area C been reallocated to Areas A or B. The unrealized potential gains reflect a part, not all, of the cost of the occupation stemming from reduced access (compared to Areas A and B) of Palestinians to their land and economic resources.

39. The logarithmic transformation of the dependent variable in the linear results presented in table 3 and figure VII renders them appropriate for computing the percentage gains that would accrue by assigning all land in a locality to Areas A or B.²³ For example, for the simple linear model presented in column 3 of table 3, the predicted value of the response variable is first computed. The “share of Area C in locality” variable is then set to zero in order to recompute the corresponding predicted response variable.

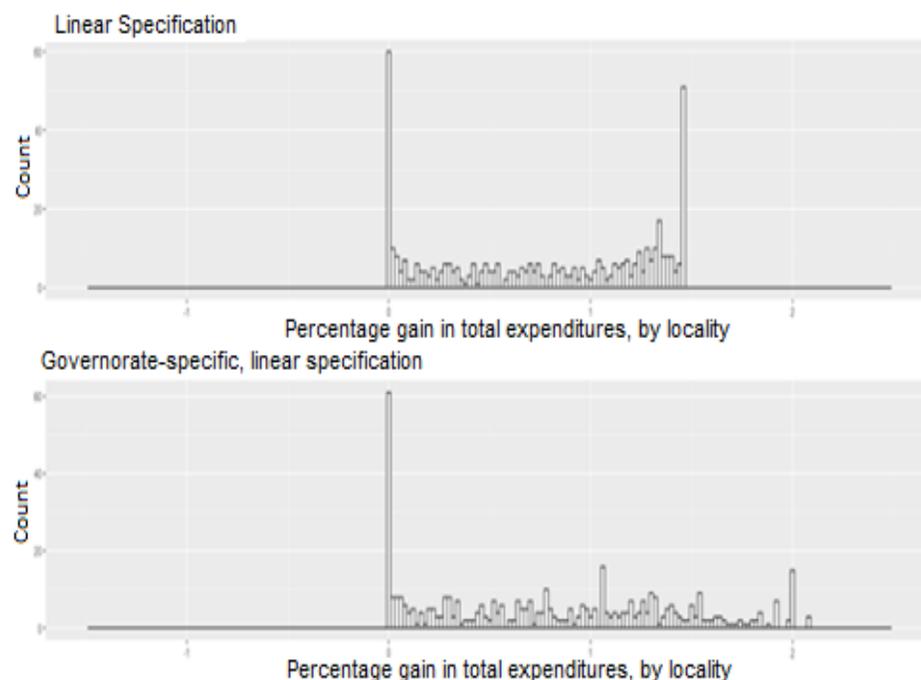

40. As both predictions for each locality are expressed in logarithmic terms, subtracting the first from the second gives the percentage gain in total expenditure for each locality. For columns 3 and 4 in table 3, the gain will necessarily be positive, given that the marginal effects of the share variable are all negative. As expected, the percentage gains are all positive for the two linear specifications. For the linear specification with a constant marginal effect in column 3 of table 3, the annual gains in 2017 vary between 0 and 150 per cent, with a mean gain of 77 per cent. As for the linear specification where the marginal effects are constant within governorates, the gains vary between 0 and slightly above 200 per cent in 2017, with a mean value of 80.9 per cent (see figure IX).

Figure IX

West Bank: histogram of annual estimated percentage expenditure gains, by locality, with different regression specifications

Source: UNCTAD calculations.

41. The regression results in table 3 contain an estimate of the percentage of negative impact of the share of Area C in a locality; that is, it measures the expectation of the log (expenditure). In order to estimate the negative impact in dollar terms, the regression specification should estimate $\log(E(y)) = Xb$. Therefore, a generalized linear model with a log link function is estimated, the results of which are presented in table 4.²⁴

42. The second specification is appropriate to compute the absolute gains when the counterfactual exercise is in aggregate dollars. For the generalized linear model specification in which the marginal effect of the share variable is constant, the estimated aggregate gain in 2017 from reassigning all Area C land to Areas A or B stands at $3.78 billion. However, owing to the heterogeneity of the impact of the share across governorates, evident from tables 3 and 5, it is more accurate to allow the impact of the share of Area C in localities to vary across governorates, in which case the corresponding annual gain is $4.4 billion in 2017 (in constant 2015 dollars).

²⁴ The model $(\log(E(y)) = Xb)$ in table 4 is not the same as $(E(\log(y)) = Xb)$ in table 3, because the mean of the log is not necessarily the same as the log of the mean. This will be particularly apparent when the variable is highly skewed, as is the case for total expenditure by locality.

43. The unrealized estimated $4.4 billion potential gain in household expenditure that would have materialized by reallocating Area C land to Areas A and B would have significantly enhanced household welfare by increasing their expenditure by 57 per cent in 2017. As can be seen in figures IV and V, this is especially relevant to the localities in the Jordan Valley and the southern parts of the West Bank, which are dominated by Area C and have the lowest expenditure per adult equivalent and the highest poverty rates.

44. The unrealized estimated $4.4 billion in additional expenditure would be sufficient to reduce poverty in localities where the share of Area C is greater than zero, and the positive spillover to the rest of the West Bank economy – through expansion of aggregate demand, forward and backward linkages and fiscal channels – would contribute significantly to the reduction of poverty everywhere else.

45. The findings of the present report demonstrate that lowering the restrictions imposed in Area C to the levels applied in Areas A and B, as a step towards ending the occupation, could improve the economic situation of the Palestinian people significantly. It follows that the economic gains will be much greater when the occupation is brought to an end, in line with relevant United Nations resolutions, and the conflict is resolved in line with international law, in pursuit of the vision of the two-State solution.

V. Conclusions and recommendations

46. The multilayered Israeli control on movements has a significant negative impact on Palestinian economic activity, development and household welfare throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In the West Bank, the restrictions on economic activity are more pronounced in Area C but are by no means limited to it.

47. In the previous report of UNCTAD to the General Assembly, the economic cost of the additional restrictions on Palestinian economic activity imposed by Israel in 30 per cent of Area C was estimated at 25.3 per cent of West Bank GDP. The present report complements the previous one and contains the conclusion that applying the same economic restrictions imposed in Areas A and B to Area C, i.e. removing the additional restrictions in all of Area C, could significantly enhance household expenditure and reduce poverty in localities partially or fully in Area C. In the present report, it is demonstrated that if the additional restrictions imposed in Area C are lowered to the levels imposed in Areas A and B, as a step towards ending the occupation, total expenditure in Palestinian localities would increase by a range of up to 200 per cent. Estimation results suggest that, in 2017, total household expenditure would have been $4.4 billion (constant 2015 dollars) higher than actual expenditure, which is equivalent to a 57 per cent increase in expenditure in the West Bank, excluding Jerusalem Governorate. The unrealized expenditure is not confined to 2017, as it applies to every year, at substantial rates.

48. The findings suggest that lowering the restrictions imposed in Area C could improve the economic situation significantly. The United Nations continues to work towards the realization of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East on the basis of relevant Security Council resolutions in order to end the occupation and establish an independent, sovereign, democratic, viable and contiguous State of Palestine, living side by side in peace and security with Israel, on the basis of the pre-1967 borders. In the present report, it is estimated that, absent the additional restrictions in Area C, Palestinian households would have spent 57 per cent more to access life-preserving, welfare-enhancing essential goods and services. The estimated forgone expenditure thus severely impoverishes the Palestinian people and limits their access to the essential goods and services that dominate their expenditure, such as food, education, health, transport, housing and communication.

49. The ratio of estimated expenditure to GDP is consistently high in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and household expenditure represents an essential component of aggregate demand. Previous UNCTAD reports suggested that the Palestinian economy is constrained on both the supply and demand sides. Greater spending by households stimulates economic growth, creates jobs, enhances fiscal revenue and expands the policy space available for the Palestinian Government without important inflationary consequences for an economy that lacks a sovereign, national currency.

50. Area C plays a role akin to an “adverse economic zone”. The present report estimates the negative impact of restrictions and the administrative fragmentation of the West Bank on the welfare of Palestinian households. When the occupation ends, the positive potential of introducing ordinary special economic zones should be considered in order to unlock the huge potential currently suppressed by the current situation on the ground.

51. The Secretary-General recommends that the international community call on Israel to comply with its responsibilities under international law by, among other things:

(a) Implementing Security Council resolutions, including resolution 2334 \(2016\), which reaffirms that the establishment of settlements has no legal validity and constitutes a flagrant violation under international law and a major obstacle to the achievement of the two-State solution and a just, lasting and comprehensive peace;

(b) Lifting all restrictions on Palestinian economic activity in Area C and beyond in order to provide the Palestinian economy with a much-needed economic and natural resource base for demographic expansion, development and realistic pursuit of the Sustainable Development Goals;

(c) Exerting all efforts necessary to bring an end to the occupation to arrest and reverse its evolving and substantial economic cost for the Palestinian people.

52. In addition, UNCTAD recommends that the international community take steps to:

(a) Reverse the ongoing trend of declining donor support to the Palestinian people, which is crucial for the mitigation of the adverse socioeconomic conditions imposed by Israel. The cost of the occupation poses a huge challenge in terms of resource mobilization. Until the occupation is ended, in order to avoid a further sharp deterioration in socioeconomic and humanitarian conditions, there is no current substitute for substantial foreign aid;

(b) Secure additional resources for the fulfilment of General Assembly requests to UNCTAD to assess and report on the economic cost of the occupation for the Palestinian people. This requires the establishment within the United Nations system of a systematic, evidence-based, comprehensive and sustainable framework to assess the economic costs of the occupation and report the results to the Assembly.

53. The Palestinian people's right to development, self-determination and statehood cannot be replaced by humanitarian and economic assistance, essential as these may be in the interim. The United Nations continues to work towards the realization of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East on the basis of relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 \(1967\), 338 \(1973\), 1397 \(2002\), 1515 \(2003\), 1850 \(2008\), 1860 \(2009\) and 2334 \(2016\), to end the occupation and establish an independent, sovereign, democratic, viable and contiguous Palestinian State, living side by side in peace and security with Israel, on the basis of the pre-1967 borders. It is only by realizing the vision of two States living side by side in peace, security and mutual recognition, with Jerusalem as the capital of both Israel and the State of Palestine, and all final status issues resolved permanently through negotiations, that the legitimate aspirations of both peoples will be achieved.

Question of Palestine

Economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: the economic impact of the Israeli military operation in Gaza from October 2023 to May 2024

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

Report prepared by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people: the economic impact of the Israeli military operation in Gaza from October 2023 to May 2024

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/22, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to continue to report to it on economic development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. The report complements previous UNCTAD reports to the Assembly (A/71/174, A/73/201, A/74/272, A/75/310, A/76/309, A/77/295 and A/78/303).

Since the early 1990s, Israel, the occupying Power, has imposed restrictions on the movement of goods and people in and out of Gaza. The restrictions have been greatly intensified since the 2007 takeover by Hamas of the Gaza Strip. For 17 years, 2.3 million Palestinian people have been confined to a small, 365 km² enclave with one of the highest population densities in the world. Entry of goods has been reduced to basic needs and humanitarian relief. In addition, Gaza has endured numerous extensive military operations in just over a decade and a half: in 2008–2009, 2012, 2014, 2021, 2022 and May 2023 and since October 2023. The restrictions, closures and recurrent military operations have resulted in the utter destruction of Gaza's infrastructure and productive base. The hollowing out of the economy has cultivated a profound dependency on external aid.

The war that followed the attacks by Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups on 7 October 2023 devastated the remnants of Gaza's economy and infrastructure. The intense military operations in Gaza resulted in an unprecedented humanitarian, environmental and social catastrophe and propelled Gaza from de-development to utter ruin. The far-reaching repercussions will linger for years to come, and it may take decades to return Gaza to the status quo ante.

The income loss in Gaza caused by 16 years of closures and severe economic and movement restrictions and repeated military operations is staggering. According to thorough estimations described in the present report, in the absence of those constraints, by the end of 2023 it is estimated that Gaza's gross domestic product (GDP) would have been, on average, 77.6 per cent higher than its actual level. This implies a conservatively estimated cumulative loss of $35.8 billion (in constant 2015 dollars) of unrealized GDP potential during the period 2007–2023 – equivalent to 17 times the GDP of Gaza in 2023.

The damage caused by the war between 7 October 2023 and 20 May 2024 reduced GDP per capita in Gaza by over one half, while other factors redoubled the income loss. Furthermore, physical damage to Gaza's infrastructure caused during the period from 7 October 2023 until the end of January 2024 was estimated at $18.5 billion – equivalent to seven times Gaza's GDP in 2022.

Once a ceasefire is reached, a return to the 2007–2022 growth trend would imply that it would take Gaza 350 years just to restore GDP to its level in 2022.

I. Objective and scope

1. The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 77/22, in which the Assembly requested the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to continue to report to it on economic development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the economic costs of the Israeli occupation for the Palestinian people. It adds to seven reports prepared by UNCTAD and submitted to the Assembly on the subject.

2. In the context of 57 years of Israeli occupation, Israel has imposed closures and severe economic and movement restrictions on Gaza since June 2007 and conducted a number of major military operations, which destroyed its infrastructure and the productive base of its economy. Prior to October 2023, the economy of Gaza was hollowed out and its people were nearly completely dependent on international aid. On 7 October 2023, Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups launched large-scale attacks on Israel and committed numerous acts of terror. Since then, Israeli sources have reported a total of over 1,500 Israelis and foreign nationals killed in this context, including at least 338 women and 38 children, and 690 members of the security forces. Around 6,200 Israelis and foreigners were injured, according to official Israeli sources. Furthermore, 33 attacks on Israeli medical facilities and personnel were recorded. In addition, some 250 people, both Israelis and foreign nationals, including approximately 65 women and 34 children, were abducted and taken into Gaza, with some subsequently released in November. Following the attacks on 7 October, Israel launched a military operation in Gaza. The ensuing war in Gaza destroyed nearly all of what was left of Gaza's economic base and life-sustaining infrastructure.

3. The objective of the present report is to evaluate the economic impact of the latest Israeli military operation in terms of three key indicators, using different time periods based on the availability of data: gross domestic product (GDP) loss, the time horizon for recovery, and the direct impact of the damage on economic activities from the war up until 20 May 2024. Furthermore, building on the findings of UNCTAD in 2020 (see A/75/310), the present report provides an assessment of the cumulative economic cost of the Israeli closures and other restrictions and the aforementioned military operations between 2007 and 2023 on Gaza. Finally, other data on the war, ongoing at the time of writing, are included up until 12 August 2024.

4. The military operation was still ongoing at the time of conclusion of the present report. Hence, all quantitative assessments are lower-bound, interim estimates of the loss and damage inflicted on Gaza in terms of the economic impact, cost and time frame for recovery.

II. Background and context

A. Before October 2023

5. Israel has occupied Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, since June 1967. Despite the unilateral disengagement in 2005, Israel has retained effective control over Gaza's airspace and areas around all land borders with Israel, including crossing points, and sea areas adjacent to Gaza, except for the 12 km border with Egypt, part of which was reoccupied by Israel in May 2024.

6. Since the early 1990s, the Palestinian people in Gaza have been subjected to prolonged, severe restrictions on their movement in and out of the Strip and a separation policy with the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Israel has restricted Gaza's exports and imports and banned or restricted the importation of critical production inputs and technology. Furthermore, for two decades, Israel has not allowed the construction and operation of airports or seaports. Since 2007, the restrictions have been greatly amplified. The blockade and closures by Israel of Gaza, one of the most densely populated areas in the world, since 2007, following the takeover by Hamas of the Gaza Strip the same year, may amount to collective punishment, which is prohibited by international law.

7. At just 365 km², Gaza's area has one of the highest population densities in the world – 6,085 people per square kilometre in 2023. Furthermore, citing security grounds, Israel restricts Palestinian access to areas within 300 m of the Gaza side of the perimeter fence, with areas several hundred metres beyond deemed not safe, thereby preventing, discouraging or restricting human and productive activities therein.¹ The resulting buffer zone along the eastern border of Gaza that entails 24 per cent of the total area of Gaza is effectively “off limits”, thus worsening the high population density problem.²

8. Several military operations were conducted by Israel in Gaza before October 2023, including in 2008–2009, 2012, 2014, 2021, 2022 and 2023. The operations caused internal displacement, death and repeated destruction of physical infrastructure, residential buildings, capital stock and productive assets, including agricultural land, rendering them unproductive, crops, livestock sheds, greenhouses, fruit trees, storage facilities, boats, fishing equipment, agribusinesses, irrigation canals, water pumping systems, electricity networks, Internet networks, factories, office buildings, educational facilities and healthcare centres.³

9. Prior to October 2023, much of the damage from previous military operations remained unrepaired, while the people suffered the consequences of living in chronic conflict conditions, with inadequate access to clean water, without electricity for much of the day and without a proper sewage system. Close to half of the workforce was unemployed, and two thirds of the population lived in poverty.⁴

10. The impact of military operations on the productive base of Gaza has been examined by the International Monetary Fund, which notes that the military operation in 2008–2009 destroyed the equivalent of over 60 per cent of the total capital stock, including machinery, buildings, tools and equipment, and that the military operation in 2014 resulted in the decline of 85 per cent of the capital stock that had survived the previous operation.⁵ The erosion of the capital stock has stunted growth potential, constrained productivity growth and entrenched poverty and dependency on international assistance.

11. A cycle of destruction and insufficient reconstruction was set in motion. In the period 2007–2022, Gaza's GDP grew only by 1.1 per cent, while the population grew by 61 per cent, leading to real GDP per capita shrinking by 27 per cent, from $1,994 in 2006 to $1,257 in 2022. Meanwhile, the share of Gaza in the Palestinian economy contracted from 31 per cent to 17.4 per cent as its growth performance lagged behind the economy of the occupied West Bank, which has also been operating well below potential.⁶

12. During the same period, Gaza's labour force grew by 112 per cent and the number of unemployed workers increased by 157 per cent. As a result, unemployment rose from 34.8 to 45.3 per cent, one of the highest figures in the world. A dearth of jobs has resulted in lost generations of impoverished, unskilled and deskilled workers.⁷

13. Key economic indicators before and after 2007 illustrate aspects of the de-development of Gaza. Upon the establishment of the Palestinian Authority in 1994, Gaza had about the same standard of living as the West Bank. However, the ratio of Gaza's GDP per capita to that of the West Bank fell from parity in 1994 to 44 per cent in 2007 and reached 28 per cent in 2021.⁸

14. UNCTAD estimated the impact of restrictions and military operations on household welfare, noting that, if the economy of Gaza had been allowed to continue to grow at the same pace as that of the West Bank, that is, by 6.6 per cent, the annual GDP of Gaza would have been 50 per cent higher in 2017 and GDP per capita would have been 105.5 per cent higher than its actual level in 2018.⁹

15. For over a decade and a half prior to October 2023, Gaza was largely removed from the national and international development agenda, as the recurrent destruction transformed Gaza into a humanitarian crisis area, with 80 per cent of the population dependent on international aid.¹⁰

B. Unparalleled devastation

16. Following the large-scale attacks by Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups on 7 October 2023, which included numerous acts of terror, Israel launched a large-scale military operation, which has resulted in a catastrophic situation for the 2.3 million inhabitants of Gaza, who were already living under dire social and economic conditions in view of 57 years of occupation and 17 years of closures. The military operation has caused a severe death toll, the destruction of civilian infrastructure, and multiple mass displacement of the Palestinians living in Gaza.

17. According to the Ministry of Health in Gaza, as at 12 August 2024, 39,897 Palestinians, the majority of them women and children, had been killed. At least 92,152 Palestinians had been injured and thousands more were missing, very likely trapped or dead under the rubble.¹¹ The prevalence of disability is expected to increase significantly as a result of injuries, compared with the estimates prior to October 2023 of 21 per cent of households reportedly having a member with a disability. By 29 July 2024, the death toll was a multiple of the combined toll of all past Israeli military operations since 2007.

18. The number of children killed over the first three weeks of bombing exceeded the combined total annual number of children killed in armed conflicts in more than 20 countries over the past three years.¹² By May 2024, more than 14,000 Palestinian children were killed. Thousands more were injured or lost family members, loved ones or friends, while about 17,000 children were estimated to be unaccompanied or separated.¹³

19. More than eight months into the operation, an estimated 1.7 million people, or nearly 80 per cent of the population of Gaza, were internally displaced, many of them displaced several times.¹⁴ The United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) estimates that nearly 1 million women and girls were displaced.¹⁵ Many of the displaced were sheltered in severely overcrowded schools run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), clinics and other public buildings, and some camped in open space near shelters.¹⁶

20. Displacement and the inability of people to leave Gaza have further severely aggravated the already extremely high density of a population lacking basic services and supplies, who only have access to unclean water and inadequate sanitation and hygiene systems. These conditions elevate public health risks to dangerous levels. Overcrowding and poor sanitary conditions at shelters contribute to the spread of infectious diseases and reinforce the impact of rising malnutrition on present and future health.¹⁷ The poliovirus was detected in July 2024 in environmental samples from Khan Yunis and Dayr al-Balah, and three children presenting suspected acute flaccid paralysis, a common symptom of polio, have since been reported in the Gaza Strip. Moreover, an estimated 52,000 pregnant women have been caught in the war, with an estimated 180 deliveries every day. However, only three overwhelmed maternity hospitals remain. Persons with disabilities have lost their assistive devices or these have been damaged, and they have been cut off from medical services and medication needed as a result of the destruction of hospitals and disruption of services. According to the United Nations Satellite Centre (UNOSAT), between 7 October and 26 November 2023, 37,379 buildings, or 18 per cent of the total structures in Gaza, were damaged.¹⁸ By 7 January 2024, 69,147 buildings were damaged; by 29 February, 88,868 buildings were damaged, equivalent to 35 per cent of Gaza's total structures.¹⁹ The number of damaged or destroyed buildings had reached 137,297 by 3 May 2024,²⁰ more than six times the number of buildings damaged in the 2014 military operation.²¹ The scale of destruction of housing and civil infrastructure, and the resulting rubble, has limited the movement of persons with disabilities and their access to protection, safety, essential services and humanitarian assistance.

21. By the end of July 2024, 88 per cent of school buildings had sustained some level of damage. Hospitals suffered heavy damage, 21 out of 36 hospitals were out of service, and 43 per cent (45 out of 105) of primary health facilities were not operational.²² Over 62 per cent of residential buildings were damaged or destroyed, and over 59 per cent of the water, sanitation and hygiene sector infrastructure was heavily damaged, impacting water and sanitation services. Meanwhile, about 62 per cent of Gaza's electricity feeder lines were damaged or destroyed.²³ The full closure of Gaza imposed on 9 October included shutting off Israeli-supplied water (two connection points were subsequently reopened) and electricity, as well as restricting the entry of all imports, including food and fuel.²⁴

22. Prior to 7 October 2023, nearly three in four adults in Gaza suffered ailments consistent with depression symptoms.²⁵ The damage to health facilities and the restrictions on the delivery of humanitarian supplies have caused major disruption to healthcare provision at a time of great need for mental and physical healthcare.

23. By mid-May 2024, about 625,000 students had lost access to education and effectively lost the school year – the third major interruption in the past four years. The large-scale destruction of educational and health infrastructure, houses, schools, universities and hospitals, missed school days, and mental health impact will have a lasting impact on the quality of life and lifetime earning potential of the active and future workforce. The extensive damage will set human development several decades back and undermine human capital formation for generations to come. The damage suffered by health and education facilities, lost school years, trauma, and various forms of disability have strong long-term consequences for health, productivity, employment prospects and quality of life.

24. Since 7 October 2023, Israel has intensified restrictions on the entry of humanitarian supplies, food, water, fuel and other needed items for the 2.3 million Palestinians of Gaza. Following the full closure of Gaza by Israel until 21 October, the humanitarian supplies being allowed entry have been far below what is required to meet the extensive needs of the people in Gaza. Between 8 October 2023 and 20 May 2024, the number of trucks allowed to enter Gaza dropped by 80 per cent.²⁶

25. The continued restrictions have precipitated a severe food security crisis as the population exhausted its ability to cope. A humanitarian crisis has spread across Gaza, with a high risk of famine persisting across the whole Gaza Strip. About 96 per cent of the population in the Gaza Strip (2.15 million people) faces high levels of acute food insecurity until September 2024. While the whole territory is classified as being at emergency levels of food insecurity (Integrated Food Security Phase Classification (IPC) phase 4), over 495,000 people, or 22 per cent of the population, are still facing catastrophic levels of acute food insecurity (IPC phase 5). In phase 5, households experience an extreme lack of food, starvation, and exhaustion of coping capacities.²⁷ Nearly 31 per cent, or one in three children under 2 years of age, was acutely malnourished in northern Gaza. In Rafah, where delivery of humanitarian aid was relatively less restricted during the early months of the operation, 10 per cent of children under 2 years of age were acutely malnourished.²⁸

26. Solid waste and rubble generated by the military operation pose long-term threats to public health, the environment, agricultural lands and the aquifer. By the end of April 2024, the military operation had left about 37 million tons of debris, with 200 kg of rubble per square metre in impacted areas.²⁹ It could take 14 years of work to remove the debris in an optimistic case scenario, assuming higher effectiveness in removal than for previous military operations.³⁰ For comparison, the 2014 military operation produced about 2.5 million tons of rubble, and its removal extended over two years after the termination of the operation. If the latest military operation had ended by April 2024, and debris removal were to proceed at the 2014 pace, it would take about 30 years to clear the rubble.³¹ If the complications arising from unexploded ordnance, estimated at over 10 per cent of ammunition fired, are taken into account, clearing the rubble may take even longer.³²

III. Economic impact of the war in Gaza

A. Economic collapse

27. By the end of January 2024, the damage to the infrastructure was estimated at about $18.5 billion, equivalent to about seven times Gaza's GDP in 2022. Residential buildings accounted for 72 per cent of the total damage, while commerce, industry and services sector buildings accounted for 9 per cent. The remainder is accounted for by infrastructure and services such as education, water, sanitation and hygiene, health, energy, information and communications technology, municipal services and transport.³³ The continuation of the war beyond January caused further damage and destruction.

28. Economic activity across all productive sectors in Gaza ground to a halt, except for minimum humanitarian health and food services provided under conditions of severe water, fuel and electricity shortages and severe access constraints. Figure I shows that the value added in all sectors saw extraordinarily large declines in the fourth quarter of 2023 compared with the fourth quarter of 2022: by 96 per cent in construction, 93 per cent in agriculture, 92 per cent in the industrial sector and 76 per cent in the services sector.

29. In the fourth quarter of 2023, Gaza registered its largest economic drop in recent history. GDP contracted by 81.3 per cent compared with the fourth quarter of 2022 and by 80.8 per cent compared with the third quarter of 2023. The GDP loss in the fourth quarter of 2023 amounted to $545 million (constant 2015 dollars), equivalent to 26 per cent of Gaza's GDP in 2023 (see figure II).³⁴

30. For the entirety of 2023, Gaza's economy contracted by 22.6 per cent. Over 90 per cent of that contraction took place in the fourth quarter, following 7 October 2023. The share of Gaza in the Palestinian economy dropped from 31 per cent in 2007 to 17 per cent in 2022 and to 14 per cent by the end of 2023.

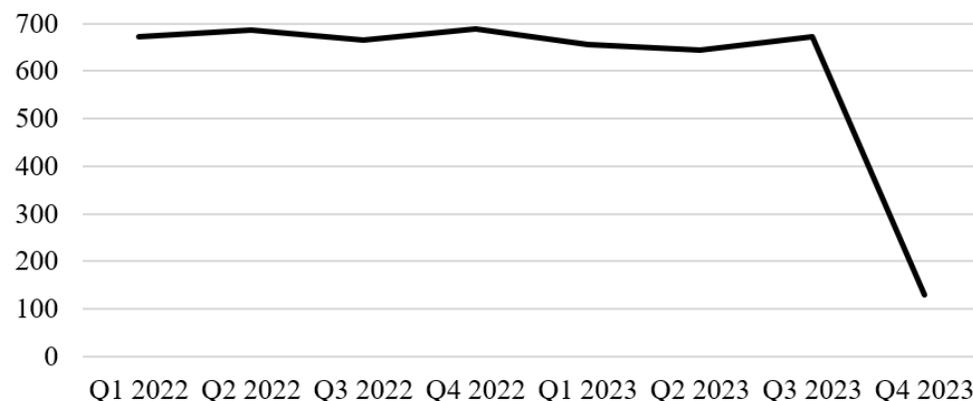

31. In the fourth quarter of 2023, GDP per capita contracted by 82.3 per cent compared with the fourth quarter of 2022 and by 81.4 per cent compared with the third quarter of 2022 (see figure III). For the entirety of 2023, GDP per capita contracted by 25 per cent compared with 2022, which represents just a third of its peak in 2005.³⁵

³⁴ The quarterly GDP contraction due to the Israeli military operation in 2014 was only 37 per cent. UNCTAD calculations based on Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics quarterly national accounts data, available at www.pcbs.gov.ps/statisticsIndicatorsTables.aspx?lang=en&table_id=3538.

32. By the end of the third quarter of 2023, unemployment in Gaza was at 45.1 per cent.³⁶ The International Labour Organization (ILO) estimates that 61 per cent of employment, or 182,000 jobs, has been lost compared with pre-October 2023 levels.³⁷ By December 2023, unemployment had reached 79.3 per cent. By the end of January 2024, Gaza had lost two thirds of its pre-October jobs (201,000 jobs), and unemployment reached 81.7 per cent in the first quarter of 2024, a rate likely to worsen or persist for as long as the military operation continues.³⁸

33. Gaza's economy was in a dire state prior to October 2023 and was among the worst performers in the world. Based on UNCTAD calculations provided in table 1, the income and employment impact of the war during its first three months was nearly equivalent to the cumulative impact of 16 years of closures and six past military operations.

34. UNCTAD estimates that, if the Israeli military operations and restrictions were to continue throughout 2024, Gaza's annual GDP may plunge below the level observed in the fourth quarter of 2023, implying the loss of over 80 per cent of pre-October 2023 GDP. The economy may contract by an additional 75.4 per cent in 2024 compared with 2023. GDP may fall from $2.1 billion in 2023 to $516 million – a loss of $1.55 billion. Combined with the $545 million GDP loss incurred in the fourth quarter of 2023, the total loss may reach $2.1 billion by the end of 2024 – equivalent to 100 per cent of Gaza's GDP in 2023. This income loss is separate from the cost of replacing the assets and infrastructure destroyed or damaged during the war following 7 October 2023.

35. The estimated reduction in absolute GDP would also imply a 76.2 per cent decline in per capita GDP in 2024, falling to $225 or 9 per cent of its 2005 peak and 18 per cent of its 2022 level. Meanwhile, unemployment would continue to hover around the 80 per cent level observed in the fourth quarter of 2023 and first quarter of 2024 if the war were to continue until the end of 2024.

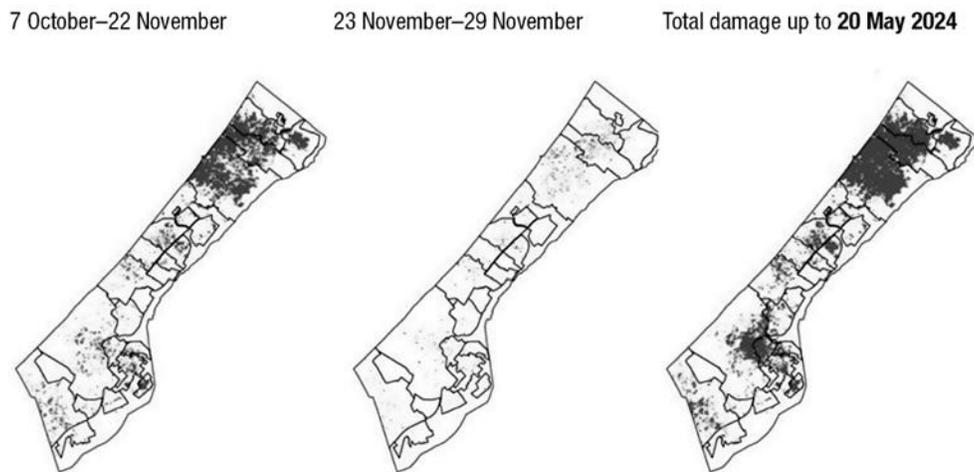

B. Immediate impact of the war on GDP per capita

36. A reliable method for estimating the immediate impact of the war following 7 October on economic activity in Gaza, given the lack of reliable, timely data, is to use satellite images of damage and night-time lights (NTL). NTL has been widely used as a measure of economic development and is available on a daily basis.³⁹ The Black Marble Visible Infrared Imaging Radiometer Suite night lights measurements are shown to be accurate proxies for economic activity, especially for highly disaggregated spatial units.⁴⁰ The maps in figure IV represent likely damage to human settlements (cities, towns, villages) across Gaza and are based on 40 x 40 m spatial resolution data. Each darker pixel on each map represents a 40 x 40 m area, which is likely to have been bombed in the corresponding time period.

37. To estimate the immediate impact of the damage on infrastructure and its downstream effect on economic activity caused by the war approximated by NTL, a panel of 365 grid cells of 1 km² was constructed for the whole of the Gaza Strip for the damage and NTL. Each cell was observed from 5 October 2023 to 20 May 2024 for both variables.

38. The three maps in figure V show damage to the Gaza Strip in comparison to the pre-7 October 2023 period, taken as a baseline (zero damage).⁴¹ Until 20 May, the average number of bombarded cells was 331 per square kilometre (52.9 per cent of each grid surface and of the total area of the Gaza Strip). The 1 km² grid cell with the highest number of bombarded 40 x 40 m cells is in Bayt Lahya, with 624 cells bombarded out of 625 (99.8 per cent of its grid surface). The map on the left shows the damage up to 22 November 2023; the one in the middle shows the damage caused between 23 and 29 November, which includes the seven-day humanitarian pause from 24 to 30 November; and the one on the right shows the damage up to 20 May 2024.

39. The NTL measurements are obtained from the Black Marble project of the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), using day/night boundary radiance during the night of each respective day, expressed in watt per steradian per square centimetre, aggregated at a 500 x 500 m level. NTL data are aggregated at a 1 x 1 km grid level, composed of four 500 m x 500 m units, for compatibility with the resolution of the damage maps.

Notes: The designations employed and the presentation of material on these maps do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of the Secretariat of the United Nations concerning the legal status of any country, territory, city or area or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries. The four maps in the figure show NTL in the Gaza Strip to illustrate the damage to economic activity. The map on the top left shows the average NTL for the nights between 22 September and 6 October (before the military operation). The map on the top right shows NTL on the night of 23 November (at the end of the first period of the data on damage). The map on the bottom left shows NTL on the night of 30 November (at the end of the seven-day humanitarian pause). The map on the bottom right shows NTL on the night of 21 May 2024.

40. The impact of the war on NTL is estimated by comparing the average change in NTL in grid cells that were damaged by bombing with the change in NTL in grid cells that were not bombarded, compared using the difference-in-differences estimation. The pre-war NTL average of the daily measurements between 22 September and

6 October is used for comparing the estimates, for more robust results when conducting various different model specifications.⁴²

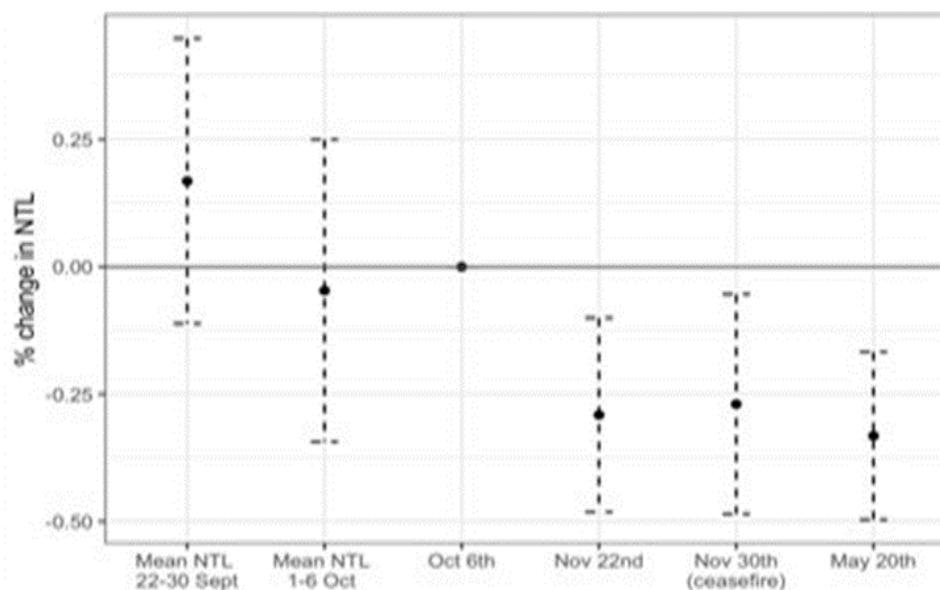

41. The first round of Israeli bombardment between 7 October and 22 November reduced NTL by 27.5–30.0 per cent. The cumulative effect of bombardment between 7 October and 30 November, which includes both the first round of bombing and the seven-day humanitarian pause, is a reduction in NTL of 20.2–25.8 per cent. The difference between the two estimates suggests that the seven-day humanitarian pause allowed NTL to recover by between 5 and 7 per cent.

42. The cumulative effect of the war between 7 October 2023 and 20 May 2024 was a reduction in NTL of 41.7–44.9 per cent. The estimate measures the change in average NTL before and after bombardment for grids that include at least one 40 x 40 m cell that was bombarded in that period. Two more NTL measurements are included in the data set: the average NTL for 22–30 September and the average for 1–6 October. These data points are included in order to evaluate the absence of pre-existing trends in the change in NTL which would invalidate the causal interpretation of the estimates, which is illustrated in figure VII.

43. In addition to the cumulative impact, the impact of the intensity of damage on NTL is considered: each extra damage caused by a bombarded 40 x 40 m cell within each 1 km² grid corresponds with an NTL loss of 0.088 per cent. This implies, in a linear setting, that the 1 km² grid which suffered the highest level of damage incurred an NTL loss of 55 per cent. When considering a non-linear estimate, the grid cells that suffered the highest level of damage experienced NTL loss greater than 60 per cent, as shown in figure VIII. It should be noted that excluding Rafah would yield an NTL loss of 47.2 per cent, around 2–3 per cent higher.

⁴² Difference-in-differences estimation attempts to measure the effects of a sudden change in the economic activity because of a certain event or policy referred to as a treatment. The estimation is done by taking the difference between the average change in NTL for damaged grids and undamaged grids between the pre-war levels and NTL at a certain date.

Figure IX
Log quarterly NTL and GDP per capita, Q1 2012–Q3 2023

Source: UNCTAD calculations based on quarterly Black Marble NTL data and Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics GDP per capita data.

Note: To use NTL as a predictor of GDP per capita, UNCTAD estimated the elasticity of quarterly GDP per capita in Gaza with respect to quarterly NTL from the first quarter of 2012 to the third quarter of 2023. At 1.22, the elasticity implies that a 1 per cent reduction in NTL is associated with a 1.22 per cent reduction in GDP per capita. As shown in the figure, NTL is a good predictor of GDP per capita. For example, looking at the impact of the 2014 war, NTL data closely mirror the decline in GDP per capita caused by the war, even in absolute terms.

44. The elasticity of NTL with respect to GDP per capita therefore implies a 33.6–36.6 per cent reduction in GDP per capita between 7 October and 22 November 2023. Once the seven-day humanitarian pause from 24 to 30 November is taken into account, the fall in GDP per capita between 7 October and 30 November 2023 is estimated to be in the range of 24.6 to 31.5 per cent. Between 7 October 2023 and 20 May 2024, the fall in GDP per capita is estimated to be between 50.9 and 54.8 per cent. It is crucial to note that the estimated GDP per capita loss accounts only for the effect of the damage caused by the war; it does not account for the impact of other factors on output.

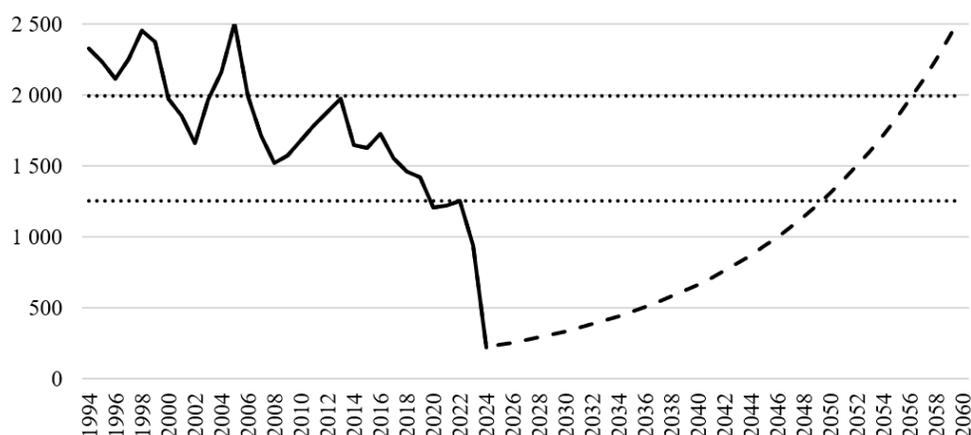

IV. Long-lasting impact: prospects for the recovery of Gaza

45. The possibility and speed of recovery of Gaza depend on the intensity and duration of the war, as well as the scope and speed of reconstruction, all of which were unknown as at 12 August 2024.

46. Assuming no military operation, and freedom of movement of goods and people and a significant level of investment, and population growth of 2.8 per cent per year, UNCTAD estimates that Gaza's GDP per capita will return to its 2022 level by 2050, to its 2006 level by 2057 and to its 1994 level by 2059 (see figure X).

Figure X

GDP per capita assuming 10 per cent average annual GDP growth (1994–2060)

Note: The upper dotted line represents the GDP level in 2006, while the lower dotted line represents the 2022 level.

47. However, it is important to note that the return of GDP per capita to pre-October 2023 levels does not mean restoration of well-being because GDP and GDP per capita recovery does not account for the cost of replacing damaged assets and infrastructure. Considering the reconstruction cost, in an optimistic scenario of double-digit growth rates facilitated by a large injection of foreign aid, it will take several decades for Gaza to return to the pre-October 2023 welfare levels.

48. Therefore, once a ceasefire is reached, a return to the pre-October 2023 status quo would not put Gaza on the path needed for recovery and sustainable development. UNCTAD estimates that, if the 2007–2022 growth trend returns, with an average growth rate of 0.4 per cent, it will take Gaza 350 years just to restore the GDP levels of 2022, with GDP per capita continuously and precipitously falling, driven by population growth. This underscores the urgency of a political horizon leading to a two-State solution and significant economic support by the international community to facilitate recovery from the immense damage caused by the war.

49. Ideally, the initial phase of reconstruction requires a substantial infusion of investment to rebuild vital institutions and infrastructure to foster economic recovery. This, in turn, would pave the way for the private sector and foreign direct investment to assume a prominent role in economic recovery.

50. At present, it is hard to ascertain the extent of foreign aid required to bring Gaza back to the level of socioeconomic conditions that prevailed prior to 7 October 2023, let alone what is needed to implement the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Preliminary UNCTAD estimations, and also considering recovery costs from past military operations, suggest that several tens, possibly more, of billions of dollars will be needed just to restore Gaza to pre-7 October 2023 conditions and that even more resources will be needed to create conditions conducive to sustainable development.

51. Immediate and robust budgetary support, alongside technical assistance and advisory services to the Government of the State of Palestine, will be important to avert the collapse of the Government and to enable it to address its challenges, strengthen its governance capacity, pave the way for long-term reconstruction, and prepare it to reassume its responsibilities in Gaza.

52. There is an urgent need for concrete steps towards unifying Gaza and the occupied West Bank politically, economically and administratively. Gaza is and must remain an integral part of an independent, democratic, contiguous, sovereign and viable Palestinian State, as part of resolving the conflict in line with international law, including relevant United Nations resolutions. This solution would need a unified infrastructure and enhance energy security across the Occupied Palestinian Territory. New modalities for dispensing relief have been proposed in response to the widespread devastation for the people of Gaza. One proposal suggests a two-year, renewable, unconditional universal emergency basic income programme as part of a comprehensive recovery plan to be implemented with support from the international community.⁴³ Said proposal foresees an unconditional monthly payment to cover the cost of a basic basket of essential goods and services, with an additional payment for the most vulnerable, including persons with disabilities. The level of income provided would depend on the available resources, but at $100–$150 per person per month, it is seen as a potentially highly beneficial approach.⁴⁴

53. Among the merits of the proposed universal basic income is ease of implementation with considerably lower administrative costs and fewer bureaucratic complications, thereby maximizing the net impact of foreign aid. Furthermore, direct cash payments will be more effective in stimulating the local economy, especially with regard to food production, than imported food aid, which tends to have a negative impact on domestic producers.

V. Cumulative cost of closures, other restrictions and recurrent military operations

54. Building on the methodology developed by UNCTAD,⁴⁵ the present section provides estimates of the cumulative economic cost exacted by 16 years of Israeli closures and economic and movement restrictions and of recurrent military operations in Gaza during the period 2007–2023.

⁴³ Palestine Economic Policy Research Institute, “‘Recovery dividends’: an emergency basic income for Palestine”, February 2024.

⁴⁵ See A/75/310.

55. Endogeneity, overlapping causal factors and measurement problems complicate estimation of the economic cost of the prolonged closures, economic and movement restrictions, and military operations that took place during the period 2007–2023 as well as Palestinian political division. Furthermore, the costs of closures and other restrictions cannot be delineated and estimated separately from the cost resulting from military operations. Nonetheless, a counterfactual growth path (scenario) can be estimated, a scenario in which the closures, other restrictions and military operations did not occur, and GDP implied by this hypothetical scenario, calculated. The deviation of GDP in the counterfactual scenarios from its baseline (actual) values reflects the combined cost of closures, other restrictions and military operations.

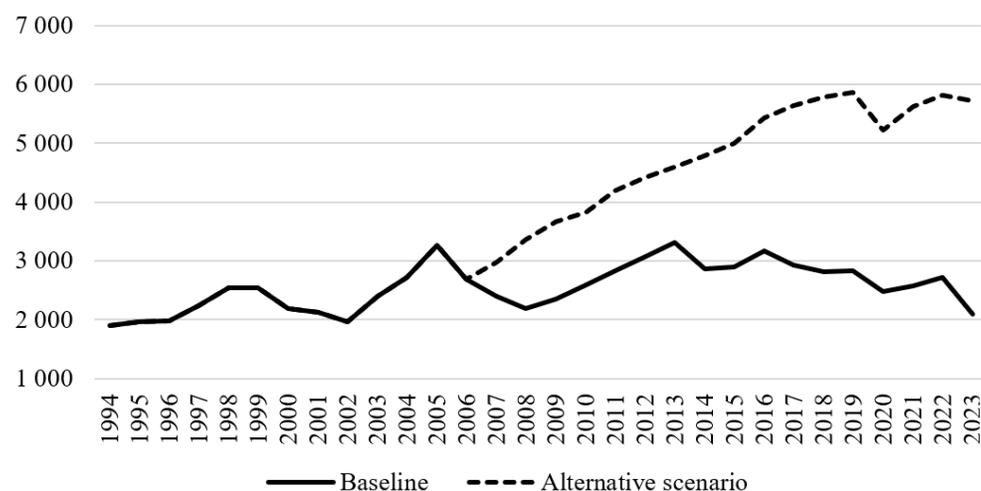

56. The counterfactual growth path (scenario) is constructed assuming that the share of Gaza in the Palestinian economy remained at the same level as in 2006. In other words, it is assumed that Gaza's economy grew at the same rate as that of the occupied West Bank during the assessment period 2007–2023. In reality, during these 16 years, Gaza's actual share in the Palestinian economy plunged from 31 per cent in 2006 to 14 per cent in 2023. The closures, restrictions and military operations are likely to be the key drivers of the steep decline in Gaza's share in the Palestinian economy. The economic cost is the difference between the baseline, which is the actual GDP and GDP per capita figures, and the counterfactual scenario figures.

57. If Gaza's economy had continued to grow at the same rate as that of the West Bank in the period 2007–2023, it is estimated that its annual GDP would have been, on average, 77.6 per cent higher than its actual level. This implies an estimated cumulative loss of $35.8 billion (in constant 2015 dollars) of unrealized GDP potential during the period 2007–2023. The sum is equivalent to 13 times Gaza's GDP in 2022 and 17 times its GDP in 2023 (see figure XI and table 2). Meanwhile, it is estimated that GDP per capita in 2023 would have been $2,575, or 172.3 per cent higher than its actual level (see figure XII and table 3).

58. The closures, other restrictions and military operations and war stunted Gaza's economy and resulted in significant GDP loss and fostered poverty and aid dependence. However, it should be stressed that the quantitative assessment based on the counterfactual scenario gives partial, lower-bound, conservative estimates for at least two reasons: (a) it assumes a growth performance under conditions of enduring occupation, where the constraints on economic activity are not fully lifted but persist at their significant pre-2007 levels; (b) it does not take into account the considerable negative impact of occupation on the economy of the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, extensively documented by UNCTAD, other United Nations organs, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and other organizations.

59. Therefore, the estimates provided in the present report are conservative and partial. By restricting the span of assessment, it leaves out the cost of 39 years of occupation from 1967 to 2006 and considers just a fraction of the total costs of the destruction of Gaza during the period 2007–2023. The toll exacted by the war in 2024 adds to the tally. Furthermore, the estimated cost above does not include the costs of replacing infrastructure, as well as public and private assets destroyed during several major military operations, including in 2008–2009, 2012, 2014, 2021, 2022 and May 2023 and during the war since October 2023, nor does it account for non-tangible assets such as human capital formation, likely to be strongly affected, as exemplified by the loss of education of one school year for children in Gaza.

VI. Concluding observations

60. I strongly condemn the horrific attacks by Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups in Israel on 7 October 2023 and the continued holding of hostages in Gaza. Nothing can justify these acts of terror. I reiterate my call for all hostages to be released immediately and unconditionally.

61. Civilians throughout Gaza face grave danger. A humanitarian ceasefire is needed immediately. The scope of death and destruction in Gaza as a result of the war has been catastrophic, unprecedented and horrifying. Nothing can justify the collective punishment of the Palestinian people. I unequivocally condemn the widespread killing and maiming of civilians in Gaza, including women and children.

62. Prior to October 2023, stringent air, sea and land closures and restrictions, including on the importation of technology and essential inputs, had a severe impact on Gaza's economy and precipitated a deep humanitarian crisis within the densely populated Strip. The socioeconomic challenges were daunting even before October 2023.

63. Since 7 October 2023, hostilities of an unprecedented intensity have taken place in Gaza. Economic activity across all productive sectors ground to a halt, except for minimum humanitarian, health and food services provided under conditions of severe water, fuel and electricity shortages and access constraints. The intense hostilities have made the already precarious living conditions far worse for the people of Gaza, half of them children.

64. Israel's military response and the war have resulted in a catastrophic situation for Gaza's 2.3 million inhabitants, who were already living under dire social and economic conditions in view of 57 years of occupation and 17 years of closures of Gaza. Monetary poverty has widened and deepened, while multidimensional poverty has engulfed the entire population, given deprivations in food, education, health and basic infrastructure.

65. Absent the closures, economic and movement restrictions and recurrent rounds of escalations and the war since 7 October at a minimum, Gaza would very likely have at least maintained its share in the Palestinian economy and its GDP would have been about 77.6 per cent higher and GDP per capita would have been about 172 per cent higher than the actual figures in 2023.

66. The constraints on the Palestinian economy in general, and in Gaza in particular, are not solely a consequence of recent events but are rooted in a prolonged 57-year occupation and 17 years of closures. Achieving sustainable development across the Occupied Palestinian Territory requires ending the occupation and extending substantial financial and political support from the international community.

67. The future of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory will be largely determined by the actions of the Government of Israel, the Government of the State of Palestine, donors and the international community. The vicious cycle of destruction and partial reconstruction must be broken by ending the occupation and by a negotiated two-State solution, based on international law and relevant United Nations resolutions.

68. A new approach to economic rehabilitation centred around peacebuilding cannot merely aim to restore the pre-October 2023 status quo. Only sustainable political solutions and lifting the debilitating Israeli closures, in line with Security Council resolution 1860 (2009), will restore hope to the long-suffering population of Gaza. Piecemeal, reversible measures cannot be a substitute for lifting the closure off Gaza to allow its economy to recover, and to trade normally and freely with the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the rest of the world.

69. There is an urgent need for concrete steps towards unifying Gaza and the occupied West Bank politically, economically and administratively. Gaza is and must remain an integral part of an independent, democratic, contiguous, sovereign and viable Palestinian State, as part of resolving the conflict in line with international law, including relevant United Nations resolutions. The international community should play a key role in facilitating such a solution by providing consistent political, technical and financial support.

70. Beyond a permanent ceasefire and immediate relief, the recovery and sustainable development of Gaza demand urgent action from the international community to inject massive aid for rebuilding the devastated Gaza Strip. Building Gaza back fully and better is not impossible. History shows that rebuilding war-torn societies is possible if the international community rallies together.

71. For this to succeed, there will be a need to convene an international conference for the reconstruction of Gaza during which donors can make credible pledges to a fund dedicated for reconstruction, relief and budget support for the Government of the State of Palestine. A comprehensive recovery plan for the State of Palestine, not just Gaza, is needed for fostering long-term recovery, peace and stability. The plan should address immediate humanitarian needs and prioritize the restoration of critical, life-sustaining infrastructure as part of a comprehensive intervention to facilitate the two-State solution and lay the economic foundations for lasting peace and stability in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Israel and across the region.

72. Rapid restoration of infrastructure and essential services is crucial for containing the long-term consequences of the recent, unprecedented war. There is a glaring, urgent need for an extensive recovery programme that prioritizes rebuilding the entire infrastructure, especially in such vital public goods as water, sanitation and hygiene, education, and health, in addition to the restoration of full public access to electricity. Throughout the recovery process, gender perspectives will need to be included to account for differentiated needs. Likewise, accessibility for persons with disabilities must be integrated into rebuilding and reconstruction in order to protect their rights and ensure their inclusion in society.

73. This solution would be enhanced by enabling a unified Government of the State of Palestine to develop the natural gas fields discovered in the 1990s in the Mediterranean Sea off the shore of Gaza to help to finance the reconstruction of infrastructure and rebuild the productive base of Gaza and enhance energy security across the Occupied Palestinian Territory.⁴⁶

74. Development gains can be maximized by fostering a synergy linking relief to development whereby donor-funded reconstruction efforts prioritize employing Palestinian workers and professionals and contracting Palestinian firms from Gaza, as well as the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

75. The ability of UNRWA to meet the growing needs of Palestine refugees across the Occupied Palestinian Territory has been significantly limited. UNRWA remains the largest humanitarian actor in Gaza by far and is the backbone of the humanitarian response. Its vital role in providing essential support, mitigating the impact of humanitarian crises and fostering regional stability is widely recognized and has become even more crucial during this war.

76. The Palestinian people's right to development, self-determination and statehood cannot be replaced by humanitarian and economic assistance, essential as these may be in the interim. The devastation and misery of the past months have reinforced a simple truth: Palestinians and Israelis can no longer wait to establish a viable political horizon. Now is the time to lay the foundations for a better future for Palestinians, Israelis and the people of the broader region. Israelis, Palestinians, the States of the region and the broader international community must urgently take steps that will enable the parties to re-engage on the long-delayed political path to achieving a two-State solution.

77. The United Nations remains committed to supporting Palestinians and Israelis in ending the occupation and resolving the conflict in line with international law and relevant United Nations resolutions and bilateral agreements in pursuit of the vision of two States – Israel and a fully independent, democratic, contiguous, viable and sovereign Palestinian State, of which Gaza is an integral part – living side by side in peace and security within secure and recognized borders, on the basis of the pre-1967 lines, with Jerusalem as the capital of both States.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

[without reference to a Main Committee (A/51/L.36 and Add.1)]

51/26. Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General¹ submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 50/84 D of 15 December 1995,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of a comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Affirming also the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Aware of the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the signing by the two parties of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements² in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993, as well as the subsequent implementation agreements, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995,

Noting with satisfaction the withdrawal of the Israeli army, which took place in the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area in accordance with the agreements reached by the parties, and the initiation of the Palestinian Authority in those areas, as well as the beginning of the redeployment of the Israeli army in the rest of the West Bank,

Noting also with satisfaction the successful holding of the first Palestinian general elections,

Aware that the United Nations has participated as a full, extraregional participant in the work of the multilateral working groups of the Middle East peace process,

Noting the establishment of the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories and its positive contribution,

Welcoming the convening of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, and all follow-up meetings,

Concerned over the serious difficulties facing the Middle East peace process and the deterioration of the socio-economic conditions of the Palestinian people as a result of the Israeli positions and measures,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects;

2. Expresses its full support for the ongoing peace process which began in Madrid and the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements² of 1993, as well as the subsequent implementation agreements, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip of 1995, and expresses the hope that the process will lead to the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East;

3. Stresses the necessity for the immediate and scrupulous implementation of the agreements reached between the parties and the commencement of the negotiations on the final settlement;

4. Calls upon the concerned parties, the co-sponsors of the peace process and the entire international community to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the success of the peace process;

² A/48/486-S/26560, annex.

5. Stresses the need for:

(a) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination;

(b) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

6. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194 (III) of 11 December 1948;

7. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic and technical assistance to the Palestinian people during this critical period;

8. Emphasizes the importance for the United Nations to play a more active and expanded role in the current peace process and in the implementation of the Declaration of Principles;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, for the promotion of peace in the region and to submit progress reports on developments in this matter.

Fifty-sixth session
Agenda item 41

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

[without reference to a Main Committee (A/56/L.22 and Add.1)]

56/36. Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions adopted at the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973,

Aware that it has been more than fifty years since the adoption of resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty-four years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 55/55 of 1 December 2000,¹

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of a comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Affirming also the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the signing by the two parties of the Declaration of Principles on Interim

Self-Government Arrangements in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993,² as well as the subsequent implementation agreements, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995,³

Recalling also the withdrawal of the Israeli army, which took place in the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area in 1995 in accordance with the agreements reached by the parties, and the initiation of the Palestinian Authority in those areas, as well as the subsequent redeployments of the Israeli army in the rest of the West Bank,

Noting with satisfaction the successful holding of the first Palestinian general elections,

Noting the appointment by the Secretary-General of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, and its positive contribution,

Welcoming the convening of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, as well as all follow-up meetings and the international mechanisms established to provide assistance to the Palestinian people, including the donor meetings held in Lisbon on 7 and 8 June 2000 and in Stockholm on 11 April 2001,

Expressing its deep concern over the tragic events in Occupied East Jerusalem and the Occupied Palestinian Territory since 28 September 2000, which have resulted in a high number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, and concerned also about the clashes between the Israeli armed forces and the Palestinian police and the casualties on both sides,

Expressing its deep concern also over the continued imposition of closures and restrictions by Israel on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, as well as the serious incursions into Palestinian-controlled areas and actions against Palestinian institutions,

Expressing its grave concern over the serious deterioration of the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and the difficulties facing the Middle East peace process,

Affirming the urgent need for the parties to implement the recommendations of the Sharm el-Sheikh Fact-Finding Committee (Mitchell Committee) and to resume negotiations towards a final peaceful settlement,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects;

2. Expresses its full support for the peace process, which began in Madrid, and the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993,² as well as the subsequent implementation agreements, and expresses the hope that the process will be reinvigorated and will soon lead to the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East;

3. Stresses the necessity for commitment to the principle of land for peace and the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973), which form the basis of the Middle East peace process;

4. Calls upon the concerned parties, the co-sponsors of the peace process and other interested parties, as well as the entire international community to exert all the efforts and initiatives necessary to reverse immediately all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000, in implementation of the recommendations of the Sharm el-Sheikh Fact-Finding Committee (Mitchell Committee), and in order to ensure a successful and speedy resumption of negotiations and conclusion of the peace process;

5. Stresses the need for:

(a) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to establish their independent State;

(b) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

6. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194 (III) of 11 December 1948;

7. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic and technical assistance to the Palestinian people during this critical period;

8. Emphasizes the importance for the United Nations to play a more active and expanded role in the current peace process and in the implementation of the Declaration of Principles;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, for the promotion of peace in the region and to submit progress reports on developments in this matter.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

[without reference to a Main Committee (A/57/L.37 and Add.1)]

57/110. Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967, 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973 and 1397 (2002) of 12 March 2002,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting that it has been fifty-five years since the adoption of resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty-five years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 56/36 of 3 December 2001,¹

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of a comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Affirming also the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,² as well as the existing agreements concluded between the two sides, and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Noting with satisfaction the establishment of the Palestinian Authority and the holding of the first Palestinian general elections, as well as the preparations being undertaken for the second elections,

Noting the appointment by the Secretary-General of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, and its positive contribution,

Welcoming the convening of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, as well as all follow-up meetings and the international mechanisms established to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Expressing its grave concern at the tragic events in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000 and the continued deterioration of the situation, including the rising number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the deepening humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people and the widespread destruction of Palestinian property and infrastructure, both private and public, including many institutions of the Palestinian Authority,

Expressing its grave concern also at the repeated incursions into Palestinian-controlled areas and the reoccupation of many Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides,

Gravely concerned at the increased suffering and casualties on both the Palestinian and Israeli sides, the loss of confidence on both sides and the dire situation facing the Middle East peace process,

Affirming the urgent need for the parties to cooperate with all international efforts, including the efforts of the Quartet of the United States of America, the Russian Federation, the European Union and the United Nations, to end the current tragic situation and to resume negotiations towards a final peace settlement,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects and of intensifying all efforts to that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the efforts of the Quartet;

² See A/48/486-S/26560, annex.

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002;³

4. Stresses the necessity for a commitment to the vision of the two-State solution and the principle of land for peace, as well as the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973) and 1397 (2002);

5. Also stresses the need for a speedy end to the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres and for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

6. Calls upon the concerned parties, the Quartet and other interested parties to exert all efforts and initiatives necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation and to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000, and to ensure the successful and speedy resumption of the peace process and the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement;

7. Stresses the need for:

(a) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

civilians on both sides, including the suicide bombings, the extrajudicial executions and the excessive use of force,

Acknowledging the importance of the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and of the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Stressing the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in revitalizing the peace process towards the resumption and acceleration of direct negotiations between the parties for the achievement of a final peace settlement, in accordance with the road map,

Welcoming the initiatives and efforts undertaken by civil society in pursuit of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Taking note of the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,⁵

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the ongoing efforts of the Quartet;

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002;⁶

4. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in implementation of the road map⁴ by taking parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard, and stresses the importance and urgency of establishing a credible and effective third-party monitoring mechanism including all members of the Quartet;

5. Welcomes the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map;

6. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, in this regard, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, with respect to the alteration of the character and status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Emphasizes the need for the parties, with the help of the international community, speedily and fully to resolve all remaining issues in the Gaza Strip, including a durable arrangement for the border crossings, the airport, the construction of the seaport, the removal of the rubble and the establishment of a permanent physical link between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, and welcomes the positive role being played in this regard by the Quartet Special Envoy for Disengagement;

8. Stresses the need for a speedy end to the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres and for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

9. Also stresses the need for the immediate implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings;

10. Calls upon the parties, with the support of the Quartet and other interested parties, to exert all efforts necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation, to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000 and to facilitate a speedy resumption of the peace process and the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement;

11. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations under international law, as mentioned in the advisory opinion² and as demanded in resolutions ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003 and ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and, inter alia, that it immediately cease its construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and calls upon all States Members of the United Nations to comply with their legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion;

12. Reaffirms its commitment, in accordance with international law, to the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders;

13. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls for the full implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

14. Stresses the need for:

(a) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

(b) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to their independent State;

15. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194 (III) of 11 December 1948;

16. Welcomes the recent agreement on movement and access between the two sides, and stresses the need to ensure that the commitments made therein are fully implemented in accordance with the timeline set out in the agreement;

17. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic, humanitarian and technical assistance to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority during this critical period to help to alleviate the humanitarian crisis being faced by the Palestinian people, rebuild the Palestinian economy and infrastructure and support the restructuring and reform of Palestinian institutions;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, towards the attainment of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and the promotion of peace in the region and to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on these efforts and on developments on this matter.

Agenda item 14

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly on 1 December 2006

[without reference to a Main Committee (A/61/L.34)]

61/25. Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted by its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967, 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397 (2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515 (2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544 (2004) of 19 May 2004,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting with concern that it has been fifty-nine years since the adoption of resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty-nine years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 60/39 of 1 December 2005,¹

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,² and recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Convinced that achieving a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

² See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1.

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Recalling its resolution 2625 (XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967,

Reaffirming also the illegality of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem, including measures such as the so-called E-1 plan and all other unilateral measures aimed at altering the status of the city and the territory as a whole,

Reaffirming further that the construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, are contrary to international law,

Expressing deep concern about the Israeli policy of closure and the severe restrictions, including curfews and the permit regime, that continue to be imposed on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian personnel and goods, throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a dire humanitarian crisis,

Concerned about the continued establishment of Israeli checkpoints in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the transformation of several of these checkpoints into structures akin to permanent border crossings inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which are severely impairing the territorial contiguity of the Territory and severely undermining efforts to rehabilitate and develop the Palestinian economy,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,³ and the agreements concluded between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515 (2003), of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,⁴ and stressing the urgent need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Welcoming the efforts of the Arab Foreign Ministers, demonstrated in the meeting of the Security Council on 21 September 2006, who called for, among other things, a solution to the conflict on the basis of relevant United Nations resolutions, especially from the Security Council, the Arab Peace Initiative and the road map,

Welcoming also the important contribution to the peace process of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, including in the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Welcoming further the “Stockholm Donor Conference on the Humanitarian Situation in the Palestinian Territories” of 1 September 2006 and encouraging further donor meetings, as well as the establishment of international mechanisms, and in this regard acknowledging the Temporary International Mechanism, to provide assistance to the Palestinian people to alleviate the financial crisis and the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by the Palestinian people,

Recognizing the efforts being undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, with international support, to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions, and emphasizing the need to preserve the Palestinian institutions and infrastructure,

Expressing its concern over the tragic events that have occurred in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000, including the large number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the widespread destruction of public and private Palestinian property and infrastructure, the internal displacement of civilians, and the serious deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian people,

Expressing its grave concern over the repeated military actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces, and emphasizing in this regard the need for the implementation by both sides of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings,

Welcoming the Palestinian truce initiative and its acceptance by Israel that came into effect on 26 November 2006, and urging both sides to maintain this truce, which could pave the way for genuine negotiations towards a just resolution to the conflict, and extend it to the West Bank,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides, including the suicide bombings, the extrajudicial executions and the excessive use of force,

Noting the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the importance of the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Stressing the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in revitalizing the peace process towards the resumption and acceleration of direct negotiations between the parties for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement, in accordance with the road map,

Welcoming the initiatives and efforts undertaken by civil society in pursuit of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Taking note of the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,⁵

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the ongoing efforts of the Quartet;

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002;⁶

4. Calls upon the parties themselves, with the support of the Quartet and other interested parties, to exert all efforts necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation, to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000 and to immediately resume direct peace negotiations towards the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement on the basis of relevant United Nations resolutions, especially from the Security Council, the Arab Peace Initiative, the terms of reference of the Madrid Conference and the road map;⁴

5. Calls upon the Quartet, together with the international community, to take immediate steps, including confidence-building measures between the parties, aimed at stabilizing the situation and restarting the peace process;

6. Stresses the need for a speedy end to the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres and for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

7. Also stresses the need for the immediate implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings;

8. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in respect of the implementation of the road map by taking parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard, and stresses the importance and urgency of establishing a credible and effective third-party monitoring mechanism, including all members of the Quartet;

62/83. Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967, 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397 (2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515 (2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544 (2004) of 19 May 2004,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting with concern that it has been sixty years since the adoption of resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947 and forty years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 61/25 of 1 December 2006,¹

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,² and recalling also its resolutions ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/17 of 15 December 2006,

Convinced that achieving a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

² See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1.

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Recalling its resolution 2625 (XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Reaffirming also the illegality of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem, including measures such as the so-called E-1 plan and all other unilateral measures aimed at altering the character, status and demographic composition of the city and the territory as a whole,

Reaffirming further that the construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, are contrary to international law,

Expressing deep concern about the continuing Israeli policy of closures and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian personnel and goods, via imposition of crossing closures as well as of checkpoints and a permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a dire humanitarian crisis,

Concerned about the continued establishment of Israeli checkpoints in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the transformation of several of these checkpoints into structures akin to permanent border crossings inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which are severely impairing the territorial contiguity of the Territory and severely undermining efforts and aid aimed at rehabilitating and developing the Palestinian economy,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,³ and the agreements concluded between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515 (2003), of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,⁴ and stressing the urgent need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Welcoming the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002,⁵

Welcoming also the convening of the international conference held at Annapolis, United States of America, on 27 November 2007, in particular the decision by the parties to launch meaningful, direct negotiations towards the achievement of a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and ultimately the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East,

Noting the important contribution to the peace process of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, including in the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Welcoming the convening of the meeting of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of the International Assistance to Palestinians, under the chairmanship of Norway, on 24 September 2007, as well as the Paris donors' conference of 17 December 2007 to mobilize donors in follow-up to the Annapolis conference to provide financial support to the Palestinian Authority to enable it to build a prosperous and viable Palestinian State and, in the meantime, to also provide assistance to alleviate the socio-economic and humanitarian crisis being faced by the Palestinian people, and acknowledging the contribution of the Temporary International Mechanism in this regard,

Recognizing the efforts being undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, with international support, to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions, and emphasizing the need to preserve the Palestinian institutions and infrastructure,

Expressing its concern over the negative developments that have continued to occur in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, including the large number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the widespread destruction of public and private Palestinian property and infrastructure, the internal displacement of civilians and the serious deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian people,

Expressing its grave concern over repeated military actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces, and emphasizing in this regard the need for the implementation by both sides of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides,

Noting the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the importance of the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Expressing concern over the unlawful takeover of Palestinian Authority institutions in the Gaza Strip in June 2007, and calling for the restoration of the situation to that which existed prior to June 2007 to allow for the resumption of a dialogue for the restoration of Palestinian national unity,

Stressing the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in revitalizing the peace process towards the resumption and acceleration of direct negotiations between the parties for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement, on the basis of United Nations resolutions, the road map and the Arab Peace Initiative,

Acknowledging the efforts being undertaken by civil society to promote a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Taking note of the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,⁶

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the ongoing efforts of the Quartet and of the League of Arab States;

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative, adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session⁵ and the follow-up steps being undertaken by the Ministerial Committee formed after reaffirmation of the Initiative by the Riyadh summit in March 2007;

4. Welcomes also the international conference convened at Annapolis, and encourages the parties to undertake immediate steps in follow-up to their joint understanding, including through active and serious resumed bilateral negotiations;

5. Welcomes further the appointment of the Quartet's Special Representative, Tony Blair, and his efforts to strengthen Palestinian institutions, promote Palestinian economic development and mobilize international donor support;

6. Calls upon the parties themselves, with the support of the Quartet and other interested parties, to exert all efforts necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation, to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000 and to sustain and accelerate direct peace negotiations towards the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement on the basis of relevant United Nations resolutions, especially of the Security Council, the terms of reference of the Madrid Conference, the road map⁴ and the Arab Peace Initiative;

7. Underscores the need for the parties to undertake, with the support of the Quartet and the international community, confidence-building measures aimed at improving the situation, promoting stability and fostering the peace process, recognizes in this respect recent developments such as the opening of a Gaza border crossing for agricultural goods and the release of some prisoners, and emphasizes the contribution of such measures to the overall environment between the two sides and the well-being of the Palestinian people in particular;

8. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in respect of the implementation of the road map by taking parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard;

9. Stresses the need for a speedy end to the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres, inter alia, by easing movement and access, including by the removal of checkpoints within the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and the need for respect and preservation of the territorial unity, contiguity and integrity of all of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

⁶ See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1, advisory opinion, para. 161.

10. Also stresses the need for an immediate and complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

11. Notes the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map, and the need for the parties to resolve all remaining issues in the Gaza Strip;

12. Stresses the need for the full implementation by both parties of the Agreement on Movement and Access and the Agreed Principles for the Rafah Crossing, of 15 November 2005, and the need, in specific, to allow for the opening of all crossings into and out of the Gaza Strip for humanitarian supplies, movement and access as well as for commercial flows, which are essential for improving the living conditions of the Palestinian people and ensuring the viability of the Palestinian economy;

13. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, and to cease all of its measures that are contrary to international law and unilateral actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, that are aimed at altering the character and status of the Territory, including via the de facto annexation of land, and thus at prejudging the final outcome of peace negotiations;

14. Demands, accordingly, that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations under international law, as mentioned in the advisory opinion² and as demanded in resolutions ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003 and ES-10/15 and, inter alia, that it immediately cease its construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and calls upon all States Members of the United Nations to comply with their legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion;

15. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls for the full implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

16. Reaffirms its commitment, in accordance with international law, to the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders;

17. Stresses the need for:

(a) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem;

(b) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to their independent State;

18. Also stresses the need for justly resolving the problem of Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194 (III) of 11 December 1948;

19. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic, humanitarian and technical assistance to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority during this critical period to help to alleviate the humanitarian crisis being faced by the Palestinian people, particularly in the Gaza Strip, to rehabilitate the Palestinian economy and infrastructure and to support the rebuilding, restructuring and reform of Palestinian institutions;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, towards the attainment of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and the promotion of peace in the region and to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-third session a report on these efforts and on developments on this matter.

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967, 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397 (2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515 (2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544 (2004) of 19 May 2004,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting with concern that it has been more than sixty years since the adoption of resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947 and forty-one years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 62/83 of 10 December 2007,¹

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,² and recalling also its resolutions ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/17 of 15 December 2006,

Convinced that achieving a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Recalling its resolution 2625 (XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Reaffirming also the illegality of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem, including measures such as the so-called E-1 plan and all other unilateral measures aimed at altering the character, status and demographic composition of the city and the territory as a whole,

Reaffirming further that the construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, are contrary to international law,

Expressing deep concern about the continuing Israeli policy of closures and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian personnel and goods, via the imposition of crossing closures as well as the continued establishment of checkpoints and the imposition of a permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a dire humanitarian crisis, as well as on efforts aimed at rehabilitating and developing the damaged Palestinian economy, and on the contiguity of the Territory,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,³ and the need for full compliance with the agreements concluded between the two sides,

Recalling also the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515 (2003), of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,⁴ and stressing the urgent need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Recalling further the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002,⁵

Recalling the convening of the international conference held at Annapolis, United States of America, on 27 November 2007, in particular the decision by the parties to launch meaningful, direct negotiations towards the achievement of a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and ultimately the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East,

Noting the important contribution to the peace process of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, including in the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Welcoming the reconvening of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of the International Assistance to Palestinians, under the chairmanship of Norway, at United Nations Headquarters on 22 September 2008, and affirming the importance of continued follow-up and fulfilment of pledges made at the Paris donors' conference of 17 December 2007 to mobilize donors to provide financial support to the Palestinian Authority to enable it to build a prosperous and viable Palestinian State and, in the meantime, to also provide assistance to alleviate the socio-economic and humanitarian crisis being faced by the Palestinian people, and acknowledging the contribution of the Palestinian-European Mechanism for the Management of Socio-Economic Aid of the European Commission in this regard,

Welcoming also the convening of the Bethlehem Conference on Private-Sector Investment from 21 to 23 May 2008, aimed at promoting an enabling environment for Palestinian private-sector growth and development,

Recognizing the efforts being undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, with international support, to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions, and emphasizing the need to preserve the Palestinian institutions and infrastructure,

Welcoming the outcome of the Berlin Conference in Support of Palestinian Civil Security and the Rule of Law, held on 24 June 2008, and calling for its speedy implementation,

Welcoming also the progress observed in Jenin, and calling upon the parties to continue cooperation benefiting both Palestinians and Israelis, in particular for promoting security and building confidence, and expressing the hope that such progress will be extended to other major population centres,

Expressing its concern over the negative developments that have continued to occur in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, including the large number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the acts of violence and brutality committed against Palestinian civilians by Israeli settlers in the West Bank, the widespread destruction of public and private Palestinian property and infrastructure, the internal displacement of civilians and the serious deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian people,

Expressing its grave concern over continuing military actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces, and emphasizing in this regard the need for the implementation by both sides of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings,

Taking note of the calm prevailing between the Gaza Strip and southern Israel since June 2008, and calling for its continued respect by both sides,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides,

Expressing concern over the unlawful takeover of Palestinian Authority institutions in the Gaza Strip in June 2007, and calling for the restoration of the situation to that which existed prior to June 2007 and for the continuation of serious efforts for the resumption of dialogue and the restoration of Palestinian national unity,

Stressing the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in advancing and accelerating the peace process negotiations between the parties for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement, on the basis of United Nations resolutions, the road map and the Arab Peace Initiative,

Acknowledging the efforts being undertaken by civil society to promote a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Taking note of the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,⁶

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the ongoing efforts of the Quartet and of the League of Arab States;

3. Further reaffirms the importance of the Arab Peace Initiative, adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session,⁵ and encourages continued serious efforts to follow up and promote the Initiative, including by the Ministerial Committee formed at the Riyadh summit in March 2007;

4. Reaffirms the importance of the international conference convened at Annapolis, and urges the parties to undertake, with the support of the Quartet and the international community, immediate and concrete steps in follow-up to their joint understanding, including through active and serious resumed bilateral negotiations;

5. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in respect of the implementation of the road map⁴ by taking immediate parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard;
