204. Article 39 of the implementing regulation indicates the procedures that are to be followed in the event that the official does not successfully complete the probationary period, and provides that the probationer must be notified in writing of the termination of his employment by the head of the Government department to which he has been appointed two weeks before the end of the probationary period. Similarly, article 40 of the implementing regulation states that the head of the Government department in which the official on probation is employed must issue a decision confirming the appointment of an official who has successfully completed the probationary period.

4. Disciplinary procedures and penalties applying to public officials

205. If it is established that an official who has been appointed to public office has violated any law, regulation, directive or decision applicable to the public service, one of the following disciplinary penalties shall be imposed, in accordance with the provisions of article 68 of the Civil Service Law:

1. A caution or admonition;
2. A warning;
3. A deduction from remuneration not exceeding 15 days' salary;
4. The withholding or deferral of a periodic increment for a period not exceeding six months;
5. Withholding of promotion in accordance with the provisions of the Act;
6. Suspension from work on half salary for a period not exceeding six months;
7. Demotion, warning of separation, retirement on a pension, or separation from the service.

206. Article 69 of the Act also provides that the administration may not impose a sanction on an official until he has been referred to a committee of inquiry and has been heard. The decision on the matter shall be recorded in a special report and the decision on the imposition of a sanction shall be accompanied by a statement of reasons.

C. Violation of the right to hold a public position, alleged to have been committed by official Palestinian bodies

207. In order to obtain an idea of the nature, scale and substance of the violations alleged in the Goldstone report, the Commission contacted all the Palestinian human rights organizations that have, in its opinion, reliably observed and documented the violations in the West Bank, including Al-Haq, the Independent Commission for Human Rights and the Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre. The purpose was to provide the Commission with all information on the infringement or violation by official Palestinian agencies of the right of Palestinians to hold a public position, in addition to their reports, statements and contributions.

208. The Commission also contacted Palestinian parliamentary blocs, namely, the Fatah movement bloc, the Change and Reform Bloc, which is affiliated to Hamas, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine bloc, the Democratic Front and the Palestinian National Initiative, in order to gain an understanding of the positions and views of those blocs with regard to the alleged violations and to obtain from them evidence to support or refute the allegations.

209. All the reports received by the Commission from those organizations agree that a number of violations were committed by official bodies, specifically the General Personnel Council and the directorates and departments of various Palestinian ministries. Reports and affidavits indicate that official bodies in the West Bank have committed a number of violations, which may be summarized as follows:

(a) Cancellation of appointment or dismissal by official Palestinian bodies in the West Bank of hundreds of employees in the teaching profession and other public positions, on the basis of their political affiliation. The Ministry of Education, in particular, issued hundreds of decisions pursuant to which the appointment of teachers assigned to the education sector was halted on the basis of recommendations by the Preventive Security Service and General Intelligence Service that persons should not be nominated or appointed to a public position;

(b) Refusal in principle to appoint any new staff, regardless of whether the official Palestinian bodies had obtained the prior agreement from the security services that is known officially as a security clearance procedure.

Any appointment, regardless of the nature and level of the position, has become subject to scrutiny by the security services, who investigate the political affiliation of the person applying for the position, on the basis of which they determine his political suitability for the position.

D. Complaints received by the Commission regarding alleged violations of the right to hold a public position

210. The Commission received more than 140 complaints from Palestinian human rights organizations and parliamentary blocs concerning dismissal from employment. It received 61 direct personal complaints from individuals in the West Bank.<sup>27</sup>

211. From the review and study of the substance of those complaints and the relevant attachments, the meetings held with human rights organizations and parliamentary blocs and the hearings held for complainants,<sup>28</sup> it became clear to the Commission that there is evidence to support allegations that official bodies in the West Bank violated the right of citizens to hold a public position.

212. The Commission is of the opinion that official bodies in the West Bank did in fact violate the right of Palestinians to hold public positions. It further believes that decisions by the security services in the West Bank to cancel and halt appointment procedures for staff in the public sector were based on a range of considerations and grounds, the most significant of which are the following:

---

<sup>27</sup> The Commission holds documentation on all these complaints; lists are annexed.

<sup>28</sup> The Commission heard the testimony of 51 persons concerning complaints about dismissal from employment.

1. The employee's political affiliation

213. From the scores of complaints and hearings with complainants, it was clear to the Commission that, in most cases where appointment procedures were cancelled, sympathizers of Hamas, or those close to it, were targeted; in some cases, Islamic Jihad sympathizers were targeted.

214. Most of the hearings the Commission held with complainants revealed the existence of a clear link between the dismissal of such persons and their political affiliation to Hamas. Many dismissed persons were investigated after dismissal on the grounds of political affiliation to Hamas, while some were dismissed following detention or arrest by the security services on the charge of belonging to Hamas.

215. One person who testified to the Commission commented on the reason for the termination of his services, saying, "... On 21 Ramadan 2008, I was summoned by the Preventive Security Service and detained for 10 days. I was released on the night before the Eid, without being charged. After that, in November 2008, I received a letter terminating my services ...".<sup>29</sup>

216. In other testimony to the Commission, it was stated, "... On 31 December 2008, I received a letter discharging me from work and requiring me to return anything in my possession. When I consulted the Director of Education, he told me that he had no part in my dismissal and that the letter dismissing me had come from the Ministry. Prior to my dismissal, I had been called in for questioning by the Preventive Security Service, during which they asked me about my political affiliation to Hamas. I believe that the reason for my dismissal is related to my membership of Hamas ...".<sup>30</sup>

217. Another person stated, "... On 8 February 2009, I received a letter cancelling my appointment on the grounds that the approval of the competent agencies was not forthcoming and requiring me to return anything in my possession. I knew that those agencies were the Preventive Security and General Intelligence Services. I learned that I had been dismissed because of my political affiliation to Hamas. I had previously been detained for a month because of my political affiliation. In the course of my work, I had been professionally assessed and obtained an evaluation of "good". I was dismissed for political, not professional, reasons, and I believe that my dismissal on the grounds of my political affiliation is a violation of the law ...".<sup>31</sup>

218. Persons have been penalized for their stance in elections and, according to numerous affidavits, have been dismissed from their employment because they had supported Hamas in the 2005 election campaign, or voted for the Hamas bloc in the second elections for the Palestinian Legislative Council or voted for the Hamas-affiliated student bloc in the West Bank university student councils.

219. At one of the hearings, it was stated, "... On 22 April 2008, I was appointed to the tenured position of teacher at Aqraba Elementary School for Boys. The school is attached to the South Nablus Directorate of Education, situated in the village of Howwarah. On 17 December 2008, I was surprised to receive notice of dismissal from the job in the form of a letter from the Ministry of Education (No. ME40/937810406), stating, '... given that the competent bodies have not approved your nomination/appointment to the staff of the Ministry of Education and Higher Education, kindly return anything you may have in your possession'. After I received the notice terminating my employment, the South Nablus Director of Education told me to ask the Preventive Security and General Intelligence Services why they had not recommended approval of my appointment ... General Intelligence refused to see me until several acquaintances had intervened to facilitate a meeting with General Intelligence in Nablus. I was seen by two officers whose names I do not know. They questioned me, saying, 'You voted for Hamas and are a supporter of Hamas' and demanded that I should state which side is legitimate. After questioning, they told me that the interview was over and the upshot was that General Intelligence did not recommend my nomination for appointment because I had voted for Hamas ...".<sup>32</sup>

<sup>29</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-57/2010.

<sup>30</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-58/2010.

<sup>31</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-62/2010.

220. In another hearing, it was stated, "... after that, I checked with the Education Office in Nablus and was told to see the security bodies. About three months after the letter was sent, I was summoned by General Intelligence. My interrogation revolved around the legislative elections ...".<sup>33</sup>

221. In another affidavit, it was stated, "... I went to General Intelligence in Nablus and was informed that there was no problem. I am a graduate of the Department of Mathematics of Al-Najah National University and when I presented myself at General Intelligence, they asked me who I had voted for in the University elections. I told them I had left the ballot blank. They asked me about the legislative elections and I told them that I had not taken part in them ...".<sup>34</sup>

222. In another affidavit, it was stated, "... On 15 February 2009, I received a message from the school secretary that I should present myself to the North Nablus Directorate of Education. I went there on the same day and was given a letter stating that the competent bodies had recommended that my appointment should be cancelled. The same day, I went to the General Personnel Council and Ministry of Education in Ramallah, who led me to understand that I should check with the security services. Three days later, I proceeded to the Preventive Security Service, where I was told that there was no problem ... I went to General Intelligence in Hebron ... where it was indicated that I had been reported to be a Hamas activist ... After that, they interviewed me in March 2009 and asked me about problems at Hebron University when I was a student at the Polytechnic Institute. They concentrated on my participation in the student elections ... and asked me my opinion of Hamas and whom I had voted for ...".<sup>35</sup>

223. The affidavit of one of the persons heard by the Commission stated, "... On 1 November 2009, I received notice of dismissal. When I checked with the Ministry, they told me to see the Preventive Security and General Intelligence Services. When I presented myself at the General Intelligence Directorate and Preventive Security in Jenin, they questioned me ... The questions were not about my political affiliation but about whom I had voted for and the split in Gaza. I do not know the reason for my dismissal from work and no political charge has been levelled against me ... The security services did, however, accuse me of working for Hamas during the elections ...".<sup>36</sup>

---

<sup>32</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-50/2010.

<sup>33</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-51/2010.

<sup>34</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-52/2010.

<sup>35</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-60/2010.

<sup>36</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-61/2010.

2. Cancellation of appointment because of close affiliation to Hamas

224. It is clear to the Commission that negative recommendations have been made by the Palestinian security services in respect of several persons, resulting in a refusal to approve their appointment to a public position on the grounds of close affiliation to Hamas.

225. A female teacher testified to the Commission that, "... On 28 August 2006, I was appointed to Carmel Secondary School, then transferred to another school, where I worked for three years in a non-tenured position. On 4 March 2009, I received a letter from the South Jenin Directorate of Education cancelling my appointment, discharging me from work and requiring me to return anything in my possession. I did not check personally with the security bodies; my father did that and was told that they had received a report about me ... and that my dismissal from work was for political reasons. The reports on my teaching had been excellent and I had never received any warning notice or been investigated. I was an excellent teacher in Islamic education. I believe that the problem is related to my husband, who was imprisoned by the occupying Power because he belongs to Hamas. That is why I was dismissed, not for incompetence at work ...".<sup>37</sup>

226. In another affidavit, it was stated, "... I was dismissed on 9 September 2009. I was not notified of my dismissal and only learned about it when my replacement arrived. When I checked with the South Jenin Directorate of Education, I was told that I had been dismissed because the Preventive Security and General Intelligence Services had not recommended my appointment. When I checked with the two Services, they would not see me but informed me that my husband had been detained by Preventive Security, accused of belonging to Hamas. They told me that if my husband left Hamas, I would be appointed. I was told unequivocally that the reason for my dismissal was that my husband belonged to Hamas".<sup>38</sup>

227. At another hearing, it was stated, "... Up to now, I do not know the reasons for the termination of my service. I went to the Independent Commission for Human Rights and then to the teachers' federation, where I was told that the reason for my dismissal was that one of my relatives belongs to Hamas ...".<sup>39</sup>

E. The Commission's view of violations alleged to have been committed regarding the freedom to hold public positions in the West Bank

228. As a result of the hearings held by the Commission for complainants and human rights organizations concerned with monitoring and documenting violations by official bodies in the West Bank of the right of Palestinians to hold public positions, the Commission believes it is true that violations occurred and that official Palestinian bodies in the West Bank infringed the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law and the Civil Service Law (of 1998 as amended) regarding the right to hold public positions, in the following respects:

229. The Ministry of Education in particular, and other Government bodies in general, stipulate that employees must obtain the approval of the security services as a condition for appointment to a public position. The Commission is of the view that this measure is unlawful and, moreover, represents a clear violation by Government bodies of the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law and the Civil Service Law (1998), given that article 24 of the latter exhaustively stipulates the conditions for appointment, namely, that the candidate for appointment should be Palestinian or Arab, no less than 18 years of age, enjoy full civil rights, and not have been found guilty in a competent Palestinian court of a felony or a misdemeanour involving dishonour or breach of trust, unless his moral standing has been restored.

<sup>37</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-52/2010.

<sup>38</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-56/2010.

<sup>39</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. f-w/D-57/2010.

230. The Law and its implementing regulation explicitly stipulate that an employee on probation must be informed of the termination of his employment two weeks before the end of the probationary period, which is one year. However, the Ministry of Education and Higher Education and other Government bodies have not complied with that stipulation.

231. Furthermore, cancellation of an employee's appointment during the probationary period should, as stated in the Law and its implementing regulation, be based on professional considerations related to the results of the assessment of employee performance during the probationary period. That assessment is based on the principles and criteria of competence, professional behaviour, performance of duties, diligence at work, personal attributes, working manner and productivity. By contrast, nowhere at all among the justifications for termination of employment is there any condition or stipulation requiring that a security investigation or a recommendation from the security services be taken into consideration.

232. Accordingly, cancellation pursuant to a security service's demand of an employee's appointment during the probationary period or more than one year after appointment to the post is a clear violation by the official bodies of the provisions of the law. Official bodies therefore transgressed and acted arbitrarily in issuing decisions refusing appointment or a tenured position on that basis, which is not provided for by the Law or its implementing regulation.

233. In order to gain an understanding of the legal basis for the stipulation by official bodies that employees should obtain security service approval as a new condition of appointment, the Commission consulted the General Personnel Council and learned that the measure had been adopted in the public sector on the basis of an official letter sent to the President of the Council on 9 September 2007. In that letter, the then Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers demanded that the General Personnel Council should consider a security investigation part of the appointment process. The letter also made it obligatory for the Council to liaise with the security services in order to implement the measure.

234. The letter of the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers referred to a Council of Ministers' resolution that had been adopted at weekly session No. 18 of 3 September 2007 concerning the conducting of a security investigation as part of the appointment process. However, the Commission was not able to gain access to that resolution. It was merely informed officially by the current Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers that the Council, at the aforementioned session, had held security clearance to be a condition for the appointment of staff, pursuant to the Civil Service Law.<sup>40</sup>

---

<sup>40</sup> Copies of this correspondence are contained in annex 17 to the present report.

235. The Commission is of the view that staff dismissals or appointment cancellations were not prompted by professional concerns or related to the criteria for holding a public position. It has been established that such measure were taken on the basis of employees' political affiliation or their political views, and therefore constituted discriminatory act as defined by the Discrimination (Employment and Occupation) Convention, which was adopted at the forty-second session of the General Conference of the International Labour Organization (ILO) on 25 June 1958 and entered into force on 15 June 1960. Article 1 of that Convention defines discrimination in employment as follows:

1. For the purpose of this Convention the term "discrimination" includes:

(a) any distinction, exclusion or preference made on the basis of race, colour, sex, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, which has the effect of nullifying or impairing equality of opportunity or treatment in employment or occupation;

(b) such other distinction, exclusion or preference which has the effect of nullifying or impairing equality of opportunity or treatment in employment or occupation as may be determined by the Member concerned after consultation with representative employers' and workers' organizations, where such exist, and with other appropriate bodies.

236. Paragraph 23 of Human Rights Committee General Comment No. 25, on the right to participate in public affairs, voting rights and the right of equal access to public services, adopted at the Committee's fifty-seventh session in 1996, states that in order to ensure access on general terms of equality [to public service positions], the criteria and processes for appointment, promotion, suspension and dismissal must be objective and reasonable. Affirmative measures may be taken in appropriate cases to ensure that there is equal access to public service for all citizens.

237. Basing access to public service on equal opportunity and general principles of merit, and providing secured tenure, ensures that persons holding public service positions are free from political interference or pressures. It is of particular importance to ensure that persons do not suffer discrimination in the exercise of their rights under article 25, subparagraph (c), on any of the grounds set out in article 2, paragraph 1.

238. Paragraph 1 of Human Rights Committee General Comment No. 18, on non-discrimination, adopted at the Committee's thirty-seventh session in 1989, states that non-discrimination, together with equality before the law and equal protection of the law without any discrimination, constitute a basic and general principle relating to the protection of human rights. Thus, article 2, paragraph 1, of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights obligates each State party to respect and ensure to all persons within its territory and subject to its jurisdiction the rights recognized in the Covenant without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. Article 26 not only entitles all persons to equality before the law as well as equal protection of the law but also prohibits any discrimination under the law and guarantees to all persons equal and effective protection against discrimination on any ground such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. Similarly, article 25 of the Covenant provides that every citizen shall have the right to take part in the conduct of public affairs, without any of the distinctions mentioned in article 2 [of the Covenant].

239. The Commission believes that the term “discrimination”, as employed in the Covenant, must be understood as including any distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference on any ground, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, which seeks or brings about the obstruction or hindrance of the recognition of the enjoyment or exercise of all rights and freedoms by all persons equally.

240. On this basis, the Commission is of the view that the dismissal of an employee on grounds of political affiliation or suspension of the right to hold a public position on the basis of a specific political affiliation discriminates between citizens and shows preference based on political affiliation and is inconsistent with the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law, article 9, which affirms that all Palestinians are equal before the law and the courts, without distinction as to race, sex, colour, religion, political views or disability.

241. The Commission is of the view that the cancellation of the appointment of citizens in the public sector on the ground that they voted for a certain political body is a clear violation of an individual’s right to participate in political life, as guaranteed and affirmed by the Palestinian Basic Law, article 26 of which provides thus:

Palestinians shall have the right to participate in political life both as individuals and in groups. In particular, they shall have the following rights:

1. To form, establish and join political parties in accordance with the law;
2. To form and establish unions, guilds, associations, societies, clubs and popular institutions in accordance with the law;
3. To nominate candidates and vote in elections in order to select representatives, who shall be elected by public ballot, in accordance with the law;
4. To hold public office and positions in accordance with the principle of equality of opportunity;
5. To conduct private meetings without the presence of police officers, and to conduct public meetings, gatherings and processions, within the limits of the law.

242. The Commission believes that the Council of Ministers, as the body responsible under the Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003, article 69, for following up the implementation of laws, ensuring compliance with their provisions and taking necessary actions in that regard, must intervene to stop the application of security clearance measures, given that those measures are inconsistent and incompatible with the Palestinian Basic Law, which explicitly guarantees the right of Palestinians to hold public positions. They are also incompatible with the Civil Service Law, which contains no provisions with regard to such measures.

243. The Commission considers that, in order to remedy violations arising from security clearance measures and consequent violations of citizens’ basic rights and freedoms, the Palestinian Council of Ministers must annul all decisions concerning the cancellation of appointments, reinstate all those who have been affected by those measures, and grant them compensation for losses incurred, pursuant to article 32 of the Palestinian Basic Law, which affirms that any violation of a personal freedom or of the sanctity of a person's private life or of any of the rights or liberties that have been guaranteed by law or by this Basic Law shall be considered a crime. Criminal and civil cases resulting from such violations shall not be subject to any statute of limitations. The National Authority shall ensure just reparation for any such harm suffered.

244. From the reports that it received and the hearings that it held, it is apparent to the Commission that scores of employees had their appointments cancelled more than a year after they had taken up a public position. In the Commission's view, this represents a clear infringement by Palestinian National Authority administrative bodies of the provisions of the Civil Service Law and its implementing regulation.

245. Article 30 of the above-mentioned Law provides for a one-year probationary period during which a Government department or body will evaluate the performance of a new employee. If the evaluation is unfavourable or if the new employee proves unsuitable for the post to which he was appointed, he will be notified of the termination of his employment two weeks before the end of the one-year probationary period. However, if he successfully completes the probationary period and there are no unfavourable comments on his performance, the head of the competent Government department must take steps to confirm him in the post permanently.

246. Accordingly, the Commission considers that all employees who complete the one-year probationary period have the legal right to be confirmed in a public post. Moreover, termination of their services on the basis of a former position is held to be tantamount to arbitrary dismissal from the civil service.

F. Violation by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip of the right to hold a public position

247. While the Commission's mandate in respect of the right to hold a public position is restricted to investigating the situation in the West Bank, or the areas under the control and administration of the Palestinian National Authority, the Commission is of the view that it is important to draw attention to the manner in which the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip has also violated and infringed this right.

Appointment based on political affiliation

248. Most, if not all, appointments to public positions in the Gaza Strip are made on the basis of a person's political-affiliation background. If there is any question that a person is affiliated with Fatah or any group supporting or under the protection of that movement, he is disqualified and prevented from filling the vacant post.

249. The security services of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip play a role similar to that of the security services in the West Bank with regard to performing security checks on persons who are the subject of appointment procedures. They also control and decide who is acceptable and may be permitted to fill the vacant post. Those services also have the authority to intervene and stop or cancel an appointment, or to terminate a person's employment.

250. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip employs indirect methods of excluding personnel who do not support it. It is well known that the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank has continued to pay the salaries of civil servants in the Gaza Strip, on condition that they do not report to work places run by the de facto authority in the Strip.

251. Because such employees do not in fact report to work, the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip justifies their termination on the basis of the Civil Service Law, articles 90 and 100, the first of which provides as follows:

1. An employee who is absent from work without permission for a period exceeding 15 consecutive days shall forfeit his post unless he presents a valid excuse.

2. In such cases, absence shall be calculated on the basis of full salary or otherwise, as the case warrants.

252. Article 100, on the other hand, provides:

The employee's service shall cease, with forfeiture of the post, in either of the following two cases:

- (a) Absence, in accordance with the provisions of article 90 of this Law;
- (b) In the event of absence from work without permission or valid excuse for more than 30 non-consecutive days in a year, service shall be considered to be terminated as from the day following the completion of that period, provided that a written warning has been given after 15 days of absence.

253. On the basis of these provisions, the de facto authority has dismissed thousands of employees and replaced them with staff who belong to or are sympathetic to Hamas. The civil service in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has therefore become politicized in the full sense of the term, which, in addition to having negative repercussions on the civil service sector in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, will have a number of adverse consequences, the most important of which are the following:

- The employee's allegiance will be to the party, not to the job and its requirements;
- The employee will hide behind his position and his value to the party, which will grant him immunity in the event that he is called to account or prosecuted for any breach on his part of the requirements of the post;
- The employee's service is tied to his party orientation and, in consequence, he may fail to provide services relating to his function to anyone who is a partisan of a group that is not acceptable to his party.

254. The right to work is undoubtedly one of the most important components of the body of economic, social and cultural rights that has been established and is guaranteed by human rights instruments. Furthermore, it represents the premise for and the legal and material foundation of individuals' real enjoyment of all social, economic and cultural rights and freedoms as well as other civil and political rights and freedoms.

255. Human rights and freedoms and their constituent elements are interrelated and interdependent: they cannot therefore be broken into separate parts or fragmented. Consequently, it is not possible to respect some of those rights and enable individuals to enjoy them while at the same time allowing other rights to be abrogated and denied. Political rights are meaningless in the absence of social, economic and cultural rights, which, similarly, cannot be enjoyed by individuals who have no civil or political rights.

256. The various human rights and freedoms are complementary and must either be granted to individuals in full, in which case we can affirm that those rights exist; or they are diminished and divided, or some are recognized while others are denied, which in practice means that no rights exist, given that those that do are useless and devoid of value.*

257. The interrelated nature of human rights is not restricted to their various fields and principles, but extends to the individual branches of those rights: every primary human right on freedom includes a series of related or subsidiary rights, and the abrogation or elimination of any right or freedom unquestionably results in the abrogation and elimination of its subsidiary rights. Thus, in the area of social and economic rights, the withdrawal of the right to work entails, ipso facto, the removal and denial of all other rights established for the individual in that area, because the primary condition for those rights is missing. Indeed, the right to form unions or to strike, and the right to equal rights, pay and holidays and so on are useless and of no value if the grounds and justification for the existence of those rights, namely, the right to employment, does not exist.

258. The same applies to civil rights, one of the main pillars of which is the individual's right to life and personal integrity. Consequently, the abrogation of or lack of respect for that right automatically entails the denial and abrogation of all other rights, which lose all value and no longer have any raison d'être. Again, the same remarks apply to the individual's right to education, because all the rights that derive from it are devoid of meaning if the right to equality and non-discrimination, the right to freedom of opinion and expression, the right to humane treatment, and other rights, are denied.

259. The Commission therefore considers that when some Palestinians are deprived of the right of access to a public position they are not only denied the right to work and earn a livelihood, but also deprived of other rights, including, inter alia, the right to social security, suitable housing and health care; the right to marry and raise a family; and the right to a decent standard of living, dignity and education. An individual who loses his source of income and his livelihood will inevitably face difficult living conditions and be compelled to forfeit many rights which, without an income, he will not be able to exercise and enjoy.

---

* The United Nations General Assembly, in its resolution 32/130 of 1977, stressed the unity and integration of human rights as follows:

“(a) All human rights and fundamental freedoms are indivisible and interdependent; equal attention and urgent consideration should be given to the implementation, promotion and protection of both civil and political, and economic, social and cultural rights;

“(b) The full realization of civil and political rights without the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights ...”, etc.

The same was affirmed in the body of the Declaration on the Right to Development, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 41/128 of 4 December 1986, which provides “... that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are indivisible and interdependent and that, in order to promote development, equal attention and urgent consideration should be given to the implementation, promotion and protection of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights ...”.

VI. Violation of press freedoms in the West Bank

A. Press freedoms in current legislation and international covenants

260. The Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003 affirms freedom of opinion and expression and freedom of the press in more than one of its articles. Article 19 provides as follows:

Freedom of opinion may not be prejudiced; every person has the right to express his opinion and circulate it orally, in writing, or in any other form of expression or art, with due consideration to the provisions of law.

261. Similarly, article 27 of the same Law provides as follows:

1. The establishment of newspapers and all other information media shall be the right of all and shall be guaranteed by this Basic Law. The sources of financing thereof shall be subject to the scrutiny of the law.

2. The freedom of the audio, visual and printed media, the freedom to print, publish, distribute and broadcast and the freedom of those working in these fields shall be guaranteed under this Basic Law and related laws.

3. Censorship of the media shall be prohibited. No warning, suspension, confiscation, cancellation or restriction shall be imposed on the media except by law and in pursuant to a judicial ruling.

262. The Palestinian Press and Publications Law (No. 9 of 1995) deals with press freedoms in more than one passage; article 2 of the Law provides:

The press and printing are free and freedom of opinion is guaranteed to every Palestinian, who may express his opinion freely in speech, writing, photographs or drawings in any form of expression or medium.

263. Article 3 of the Law affirms the following:

The press shall be free to present news, information and comment and shall contribute to the dissemination of ideas, culture and knowledge within the limits of the law and with due respect for public duties, rights and freedoms and for the freedom and sanctity of the private lives of others.

264. Article 4 of the same Law provides:

Freedom of the press includes the following:

- (a) Informing citizens of events, ideas and trends and providing them with information at the local, Arab, Islamic and international levels;
- (b) Providing opportunities for citizens to publish their views;
- (c) Seeking out, from their various sources, information, news and statistics of interest to citizens and analysing, discussing, publishing and commenting on them within the limits of the law;
- (d) The right of journalistic publications, news agencies, editors and journalists to maintain the confidentiality of their sources of information or news obtained confidentially unless, in the course of a criminal case, the court rules otherwise with a view to safeguarding the security of the State, preventing crime or ensuring justice;

- (e) The right of citizens, political parties, cultural and social organizations and unions to express their views and ideas and publish their accomplishments in their various fields of activity.

265. Article 6 of the Law states:

The authorities shall seek to facilitate the task of journalists and researchers by providing information on their programmes and projects.

266. Article 7 of the same Law requires journalists and publications to refrain from publishing anything contrary to public order, providing as follows:

- (a) Publications shall refrain from publishing anything contrary to the principles of freedom, national responsibility, human rights and respect for the truth, and shall consider freedom of thought, opinion, expression and information a public right comparable to their own rights;
- (b) Periodicals intended for children and adolescents shall not contain any images, stories or news items that are incompatible with Palestinian mores, values or traditions.

267. Article 8 of the Law defines journalistic duties and ethics, emphasizing the need for all journalists to abide fully by the pertinent professional ethics, including the following:

- (a) To respect the rights and constitutional freedoms of individuals and their right to conduct their private lives as they wish;
- (b) To present material in an objective, comprehensive and balanced manner;
- (c) To be accurate, impartial and objective in commenting on news and events;
- (d) To refrain from publishing anything likely to give rise to violence, extremism or hatred or promote racism or sectarianism;
- (e) To refrain from exploiting journalistic material in order to promote or detract from any commercial product.

268. In the area of international human rights instruments, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 18, provides as follows:

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance.

269. Furthermore, the Universal Declaration and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights both affirm the right to freedom of opinion and expression. Article 19 of the Declaration provides:

Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

270. Article 19 of the Covenant reads as follows:

1. Everyone shall have the right to hold opinions without interference.

2. Everyone shall have the right to freedom of expression; this right shall include freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas of all kinds, regardless of frontiers, either orally, in writing or in print, in the form of art, or through any other media of his choice.
3. The exercise of the rights provided for in paragraph 2 of this article carries with it special duties and responsibilities. It may therefore be subject to certain restrictions, but these shall only be such as are provided by law and are necessary:
  - (a) For respect of the rights or reputations of others;
  - (b) For the protection of national security or of public order (ordre public), or of public health or morals.

271. Article II of the Declaration on Fundamental Principles concerning the Contribution of the Mass Media to Strengthening Peace and International Understanding, to the Promotion of Human Rights and to Countering Racialism, Apartheid and Incitement to War, proclaimed by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at its twentieth session, on 28 November 1978, provides:

1. The exercise of freedom of opinion, expression and information, recognized as an integral part of human rights and fundamental freedoms, is a vital factor in the strengthening of peace and international understanding.
2. Access by the public to information should be guaranteed by the diversity of the sources and means of information available to it, thus enabling each individual to check the accuracy of facts and to appraise events objectively. To this end, journalists must have freedom to report and the fullest possible facilities of access to information. Similarly, it is important that the mass media be responsive to concerns of peoples and individuals, thus promoting the participation of the public in the elaboration of information.
3. With a view to the strengthening of peace and international understanding, to promoting human rights and to countering racialism, apartheid and incitement to war, the mass media throughout the world, by reason of their role, contribute to promoting human rights, in particular by giving expression to oppressed peoples who struggle against colonialism, neo-colonialism, foreign occupation and all forms of racial discrimination and oppression and who are unable to make their voices heard within their own territories.
4. If the mass media are to be in a position to promote the principles of this Declaration in their activities, it is essential that journalists and other agents of the mass media, in their own country or abroad, be assured of protection guaranteeing them the best conditions for the exercise of their profession.

272. Article III of the Declaration reads:

1. The mass media have an important contribution to make to the strengthening of peace and international understanding and in countering racialism, apartheid and incitement to war.
2. In countering aggressive war, racialism, apartheid and other violations of human rights which are inter alia spawned by prejudice and ignorance, the mass media, by disseminating information on the aims, aspirations, cultures and needs of all peoples, contribute to eliminate ignorance and misunderstanding between peoples, to make nationals of a country sensitive to the needs and desires of others, to ensure the respect of the rights and dignity of all nations, all peoples and all individuals without distinction of race, sex, language, religion or nationality and to draw attention to the great evils which afflict humanity, such as poverty, malnutrition and diseases, thereby promoting the formulation by States of the policies best able to promote the reduction of international tension and the peaceful and equitable settlement of international disputes.

B. Alleged violations of freedom of the press by the Palestinian authorities

273. In order to obtain an idea of the nature, scale and substance of the violations alleged in the Goldstone report, the Commission contacted all the Palestinian human rights institutions that have, in its opinion, reliably observed and documented the violations in the West Bank. The purpose was to provide the Commission with all information that had been collected and documented by those institutions, in addition to their reports, statements and contributions.

274. All the reports of the organizations concerned with monitoring and documenting press freedoms and the exercise by Palestinians of the freedom of opinion and expression, in addition to the statements issued and contributions submitted by those organizations, indicated that press freedoms in the West Bank were the object of a number of violations, the most important of them being the following:

(a) The arrest and detention of journalists by the Palestinian security services and their interrogation with regard to their journalistic work, their political affiliation or their audio, visual or written publications;<sup>41</sup>

(b) The torture and subjection of some to degrading and humiliating treatment when detained or arrested by Palestinian security services, who disregard the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 3 of 2001) concerning the requirement that such persons should be transferred to the Office of the Public Prosecutor or the civil courts and that they should not be held in custody for more than 24 hours;

(c) The obstruction of the practice of journalism by the security services on grounds relating to journalists' political affiliation or in order to prevent them from publishing or researching subjects which the security services did not wish to have investigated;

(d) The confiscation of professional items and equipment and materials, which the security services retained in order to peruse their content or prevent journalists from using them, thereby thwarting the journalists in their work.

C. Complaints received by the Commission concerning alleged violations of press freedoms in the West Bank

275. On the basis of complaints and the hearings conducted by the Commission with journalist complainants regarding the unlawful practices to which they had been subjected in the West Bank, as well as the reports of the Palestinian Centre for Development and Media Freedoms (MADA), and human rights organizations, specifically, the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights in Gaza, the Independent Commission for Human Rights and the Samir Kassir Foundation, the Commission came to the conclusion that the law enforcement agencies had violated press freedoms and the rules and guarantees which must be respected and applied in the case of arrest and detention of journalists. The most serious violations noted by the Commission during the hearings it conducted with journalists included the following:

<sup>41</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. m/S-40/2010.

- Arrest and detention of journalists by security services, on the basis of journalists’ work;
- Subjection of detained journalists to torture and ill-treatment;
- Attacks on and hampering of journalists in the performance of their work;
- Confiscation of professional items and equipment;
- Threatening and intimidation of journalists;
- Pressure to compel some journalists to collaborate with security agencies;
- Disregard by the detaining services of court release orders in respect of detained journalists.<sup>42</sup>

276. The following statements, documented by the Commission, are evidence of the violations to which journalists have been subjected because of their journalistic work. The statements were documented by the Commission during the hearings it conducted with journalists who complained about their subjection to excesses or violations perpetrated by Palestinian National Authority agencies in the West Bank.

277. One of the violations documented by the Commission in this area was the arrest of the journalist Mustafa Ali Abdallah Sabri, who was detained by all the security services — General Intelligence, Preventive Security and Military Intelligence — because of his work as a journalist. The statements made by him to the Commission on 8 May 2010 contain the following: “On 14 August 2007, I was arrested by the General Intelligence Service in the city of Qalqilya after being summoned by telephone. I was detained by that Service for five days. During detention I was interrogated about my work as a journalist, and during the period of interrogation I was subjected to torture, shabah and degrading and harsh treatment, being held throughout the period of detention in a cell 180 centimetres long by 90 centimetres wide. After five days of detention I was released, after signing an agreement to respect the laws of the Palestinian National Authority ... I was also arrested on 5 May 2008, this time by the General Intelligence Service in Qalqilya, and detained for three days, during which they did not question me at all ... On 29 July 2008, I was summoned by General Intelligence Service for publishing in the press the facts about the humiliation to which I had been subjected by that Service, and was detained for 14 days. After that, I was transferred to the military court on the charge of having attacked a General Intelligence Service officer. He was an officer whom I had pushed, during one of my detentions, after he slapped me in the face. I remained in detention until 11 September 2008, when I was released by the military police pursuant to a Palestinian Supreme Court ruling that I should be released on that date ... The moment I stepped out of the door of the military police centre in Qalqilya, a General Intelligence Service force apprehended me and transported me to General Intelligence Service headquarters, where I remained in detention until 19 September 2008 ... On 21 April 2009, a force from the Preventive Security Service in Qalqilya arrested me. On that occasion my home was searched and my press archives were confiscated. After 15 days of detention I was transferred to the city hospital because of elevated glucose levels and high blood pressure. I remained there for two days. Before being taken to hospital I had been subjected to beating, torture and shabah ... Forty-three days after my arrest I was transferred to the headquarters of the Preventive Security Service in Ramallah, where the situation was much worse, inasmuch as I was subjected to shabah for 18 days, hanging from the window or the door with my eyes blindfolded and my hands cuffed. While I was being subjected to shabah, the doctor, when he came for a visit, finding me stretched in shabah, requested that I should be transferred to a hospital in Ramallah. After I was given first-aid treatment, they returned me to shabah ... On 15 July 2009, the Palestinian Supreme Court ruled that I should be released. The Preventive Security Service did not execute the court order immediately, but delayed its execution for 10 days ...”<sup>43</sup>

---

<sup>42</sup> These violations appear in the section on detention and torture in the West Bank.

278. In another testimony regarding the arrest, detention and interrogation of journalists by the security services in relation to their work as reporters, one journalist reported to the Commission that on 11 November 2007, after he had finished filming an interview in her home in Hebron with the wife of the President of the Legislative Council, who is in the detention of the Israeli occupying forces, a Preventive Security force arrested him and his colleague in a degrading manner as they emerged from the President’s home and took them to Service headquarters in Hebron, where they confiscated their cameras and tape of the interview and interrogated them about their work at the Al-Aqsa television channel. They were detained for 20 days, after which they were released on bail.

279. In September 2008, the same journalist was arrested and detained for 15 days by the General Intelligence Service in Bethlehem on a charge of working for the Al-Aqsa satellite channel. He was again arrested by the security service in Bethlehem in July 2009 after being requested to appear at the headquarters of the service in that city. According to his testimony to the Commission, during that detention he was subjected to shabah, beating with whips and harsh and degrading treatment. He was released a month after his arrest.

280. In his testimony regarding that detention he said: “... They put me directly into a cell without questioning me; then they subjected me, blindfolded, to shabah and took turns beating me with a hose about seven times. I shouted to them that I was a journalist and should not be treated in that manner, whereupon they struck me in the face with the hose. I reacted by getting free of the bonds and pulled the cover off my head. The person who had been beating me stepped back and called the officer, and at that moment I saw around me some 10 people who were being tortured and subjected to shabah. When the officer arrived, they threw me on the ground and beat me. I kept screaming until the interrogation chief arrived. He also slapped me and ordered me not to argue and to keep quiet, then tied me and subjected me to shabah again...”<sup>44</sup>

281. The same journalist was detained for 15 days in September 2009 by the Military Intelligence Service, and again in January 2010, and was also placed under arrest for 10 days by the General Intelligence Service because of his work as a journalist.

<sup>43</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. S/D-4/2010.

<sup>44</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. S/D-5/2010.

282. In another hearing, held at the headquarters of the Commission on 4 May 2010, the journalist Sa'id Khwairi testified that on 24 January 2009 he had been arrested by the Preventive Security Service in Nablus after receiving a summons by telephone to appear at Service headquarters in that city.

283. As reported by Mr. Khwairi, immediately after arrest he was subjected to interrogation that focused on personal information, professional matters relating to his work as a journalist, his work at Al-Quds Satellite Channel and his connection to the Al-Aqsa Satellite Channel. On the second day, the journalist was transferred to Al-Junaid Prison, where he was subjected during his detention to a number of sessions that focused on the same information, until his release on 1 March 2009. He stated that he was placed in a cell in which not even the minimum health requirements were met. Conditions were so bad that he was taken to hospital. He also testified that he was told that if he wanted to end his detention, he should explain his connection with Hamas and the Al-Aqsa Satellite Channel as well as the connection of Al-Quds Satellite Channel with Hamas. He said that he felt that he was under constant surveillance by the Palestinian security services.<sup>45</sup>

284. On 29 March 2009, General Intelligence Service men in the village of Deir Istiya, Salfit Governorate, intercepted Mr. Khwairi and the crews of Al-Quds Satellite Channel and the Ramattan News Agency while they were interviewing people in the village. The members of both crews were taken to General Intelligence Service headquarters in Salfit Governorate and questioned about the nature of their work in the village.

285. Journalist Qais Omar Darwish Omar [Abu Samra] stated in the hearing held at Commission headquarters on 4 May 2010, that on 21 February 2009, he, a native of the northern West Bank village of Saniriya, in Qalqilya Governorate, and working as a correspondent for the Jordanian newspaper Al-Haqiqa al-Dawliya and the Internet site IslamOnLine, received a written notice summoning him to appear at Preventive Security Service headquarters in Qalqilya. Next day, 22 February 2009, he duly reported and was detained for three days, during which he was questioned regarding about matters related to his work as a journalist.

286. On 22 June 2009, the Preventive Security Service in the West Bank arrested Qais, at his home in the village of Saniriya, Qalqilya Governorate, in the northern West Bank. He remained in detention for 88 days, during which he was subjected to lengthy periods of torture, including whipping, slapping and shabah; humiliation and ill-treatment; and psychological pressure exerted by sleep deprivation.

287. He mentioned in his statement that during his interrogation he was asked about his relationship to Hamas at the time of his university studies. He was also questioned about his work as a journalist and asked to cooperate with the Preventive Security Service in ascertaining the names of Hamas members in his village. He indicated that after his detention he had begun to suffer from panic and fear of being injured.<sup>46</sup>

288. During a hearing with a journalist who asked to remain anonymous, it emerged that he had been arrested in Nablus on 5 March 2008 by the

---

<sup>45</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. S/D-3/2010.

<sup>46</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. S/D-2/2010.

Preventive Security Service and detained for 78 days, in the course of which he was asked about the nature of his journalistic work. He was not subjected to any physical torture, but endured psychological torture as a result of being confined in a prison cell for 40 days.

D. Opinion of the Commission on allegations of violations of press freedom

289. As a result of its hearings with complainants and human rights organizations concerned with press freedom, the Commission believes that the Palestinian authorities violated the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003, the Press and Publications Law (No. 9 of 1995) and the Code of Penal Procedure (Law No. 3 of 2001) concerning press freedom in the following areas:

290. It was clear to the Commission that all the arrests of the journalists who spoke to the Commission were made for political reasons by Palestinian National Authority security forces in the West Bank. Journalists were targeted on the grounds of their political affiliation or opinions, not on the basis that they had committed any violation of the rules governing the exercise of their profession and press freedoms that would have justified their being questioned.

291. Accordingly, the Commission considers that the detention and arrest to which the journalists were subjected on the above-mentioned grounds were illegal acts, because they were a blatant violation of the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law, article 9, which affirms that all Palestinians are equal before the law and the courts, without distinction as to race, sex, colour, religion, political views or disability. Furthermore, article 19 of the Basic Law provides that freedom of opinion may not be prejudiced and that every person has the right to express his opinion and circulate it orally, in writing, or in any other form of expression or art, with due consideration to the provisions of law. Article 27 of the Basic Law also guarantees the freedom of the audio, visual and written media as well as the freedom to print, publish, distribute and broadcast, together with the freedom of individuals working in that field.

292. The successive arrest by the security agencies of the same journalist, who was no sooner released by one agency than he was rearrested and detained by another, implies, on the one hand, a lack of effective coordination between the security agencies and, on the other hand, a lack of mutual respect among the security agencies that enables one such agency to arrest a journalist who has just been released by another. Such procedures, in the view of the Commission, also mean that journalists are subjected to increased pressure and intimidation, because they constantly feel that they are being pursued, and this may affect their way of thinking and prompt them to carry out their work in accordance with the wishes and orientation of the authorities.

293. With regard to the lack of liability and accountability of persons who violate human rights and freedoms and to journalistic immunity and the inadmissibility of prosecuting or holding journalists accountable for their professional activity, the Commission considers that the failure to hold accountable those who violate human rights and the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the Palestinian Basic Law may have encouraged certain persons to violate the safeguards and protections for and inviolability of journalists that is set forth in national legislation.

294. It became clear to the Commission that the Palestinian Union of Journalists had done nothing to protect journalists from being prosecuted or held accountable on the basis of their professional activity; the Union had therefore failed to carry out its professional role in defence of its members.

295. The Commission considers that bringing any journalist before the military judiciary or the Office of the Military Prosecutor or arresting and detaining a journalist on the basis of an arrest warrant issued by the Office of the Military Prosecutor or the military judiciary is not only a violation of the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003 and the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 3 of 2001), but is also a gross violation of the Press and Publications Law, all articles of which, and article 42 in particular, restricted to the Public Prosecutor and the competent civilian courts the authority to investigate journalists and hold them accountable in the event of their transgressing the duties and rules of the journalistic profession.

E. Violation of press freedoms in the Gaza Strip

296. While the Commission had no mandate pursuant to the Goldstone report to inquire into press-related violations in the Gaza Strip, it considers it appropriate to draw attention to the significance of reports of violations of freedom of the press in the Gaza Strip that it has obtained and documented. It is convinced that those violations must be mentioned and that they require the intervention of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip in order to protect, guarantee and safeguard the inviolability of journalists in the Gaza Strip.

297. The violations of press freedoms in the Gaza Strip that have come to the attention of the Commission include the following.

298. On 19 March 2009, a journalist named Sakher Madhat Abu al-Awn, a correspondent of the Palestinian office of Agence France Presse, went to the headquarters of the internal security agency of the Ministry of the Interior of the de facto authority in Gaza, where he was interrogated as to the nature of his journalistic activity and accused of vilifying Hamas. The interrogators also asked about the nature of his work in the Union of Journalists and his relations with the International Federation of Journalists and the Federation of Arab Journalists and obtained his e-mail address and password.

299. On 29 November 2008, members of the police force of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip stopped journalist Ala Salama, who lives in the town of Rafa and works as a correspondent of the local Al-Quds Radio station, when he was returning from the Rafa crossing point to his home in the town after finishing his work as a journalist covering developments in connection with the travel of pilgrims from the Gaza Strip. The policemen forced him into a jeep, blindfolded him and took him to some unidentified place, beating him up on the way there.

300. On 10 June 2009, the journalist Mohammed Zahdi al-Mashharawi, a correspondent of the Al-Quds satellite television channel, was attacked in Gaza City by members of the security service while he was covering a visit to Al-Shifa Hospital by an international delegation headed by Sheikha Hessa Al-Thani, United Nations Special Rapporteur on Disability.

301. On 12 August 2009, two security guards from the Ansar security compound belonging to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip stopped a crew from the Al-Ittijah Satellite Channel that was carrying out its professional duties in the main street leading to the camp. The security guards took the crew, comprising the journalist Mazen al-Balbisi, correspondent, cameraman Jifara al-Safadi, and assistant cameraman Abdulrahman Zaqut, to headquarters, where an officer confiscated and destroyed the tape that was in the camera.

302. On 14 August 2009, the Ministry of the Interior of the de facto authority prevented the journalists and other media representatives from covering the events that took place in the town of Rafah in the south of the Gaza Strip which involved members of the security services and gunmen from the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades, on the one hand, and gunmen from the group Jund Allah, led by Sheikh Abdul Latif Musa, on the other hand. The confrontation left over 28 people dead, including Sheikh Abdul Latif Musa, and dozens wounded. On 18 August 2009, the Ministry of the Interior of the de facto authority issued a press release claiming that the media had been prevented from filming the events in Rafah in order to protect the lives of the journalists and the feelings and sensitivities of the public.

303. On 31 August 2009, members of the Internal Security Service intercepted Ma'an News Agency correspondent Ibrahim Muhammad Qanan and cameraman Ahmad Ghabayin, while they were working in the al-Namsawi district in western Khan Younis. The two journalists had been preparing a report on United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) projects that had been disrupted by the blockade when they were intercepted by three members of the Internal Security Service, who took them in their vehicle to Service headquarters, where the two journalists remained inside the vehicle, in the courtyard. An officer came and inspected their press passes and questioned them as to the nature of their work and their relations with Palestine television.

304. On 10 October 2009, the journalist Ayman Muhammad al-Shaikh Salama, a correspondent of the Al-Quds satellite television channel, was severely beaten by a policeman while in the al-Amal district to the west of the town of Khan Younis in the south of the Gaza Strip while he was gathering information on the campaign to eliminate acts of aggression being conducted by Khan Younis municipality in cooperation with the police. The journalist was taken to Nasser Hospital in the town.

VII. Violation of freedom to form associations in the West Bank

305. The Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003 affirms the right of Palestinians to form associations and to participate in political life. Article 26 of the Law provides as follows:

Palestinians shall have the right to participate in political life both as individuals and in groups. In particular, they shall have the following rights:

1. To form, establish and join political parties in accordance with the law;
2. To form and establish unions, guilds, associations, societies, clubs and popular institutions in accordance with the law;
3. To nominate candidates and vote in elections in order to select representatives, who shall be elected by public ballot, in accordance with the law;
4. To hold public office and positions in accordance with the principle of equality of opportunity;
5. To conduct private meetings without the presence of police officers, and to conduct public meetings, gatherings and processions, within the limits of the law.

306. The Law of Palestinian Charitable Associations and Community Organizations (Law No. 1 of 2000) affirms the legal right of Palestinians to form and establish associations and community organizations for various community activities, and article 1 of the Law provides that Palestinians have the right freely to engage in social, cultural, professional and scientific activities, including the right to establish and run associations and community organizations.

307. Palestinian legislation, in its approach to the right to form associations, conforms to the provisions and principles of international human rights law, in particular, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, both of which explicitly recognize the right to form associations as one of the fundamental rights and freedoms which States are bound to guarantee and make available to individuals.

308. That right was affirmed and guaranteed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 20, which provides that everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association. The right to form associations is also affirmed in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, article 22, which provides that everyone has the right to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and join trade unions for the protection of his interests.

309. Because the right to form associations is one of the general rights and freedoms enshrined in the Basic Law, that right acquires the status and significance of a general right, which is to say that it belongs to the category of rights that require constructive action by a State, which should organize and establish them through explicit recognition of their legal status and affirmation of the enjoyment thereof by all members of society without distinction or discrimination.

310. The fact that this right has acquired the status of a general freedom imposes several obligations on States, principally, the mandatory duty of the State to intervene in a serious and effective manner to regulate the general freedoms and codify them in laws in order to guarantee that individuals are able to enjoy and exercise them.

311. Among the most important of the obligations imposed on the Palestinian National Authority by the freedom to form associations is the mandatory duty to refrain from any action or activity that is likely to restrict or impede the enjoyment by individuals of that right, or to derogate from it without good reason or legitimate justification that might require or justify such action. Those obligations also imply the duty to refrain from influencing individuals or preventing them from freely exercising this right.

A. Agencies entitled to register associations and monitor their activities at the level of the National Authority

312. Under the provisions of the Law of Charitable Associations and Community Organizations, the registration and monitoring of the work of community associations and organizations in the Palestinian territories is carried out by two governmental agencies, namely, the Ministry of the Interior and the competent ministry.

1. Palestinian Ministry of the Interior

313. The Palestinian Ministry of the Interior is responsible for registering charitable associations and community organizations and for recognizing them as legal persons after the entities concerned have submitted an application for registration that fulfils the legal conditions under Palestinian law, namely:

(a) Submission of an application in writing for registration of the association together with three copies of the association's by-laws to the Department for the Registration of Associations in the Palestinian Ministry of the Interior.

This condition is specified and emphasized in the Law of Charitable Associations and Community Organizations, article 4, paragraph 1, which stipulates that founders must submit a written application to the competent department of the Ministry of the Interior in compliance with all the relevant conditions, signed by at least three of the founders authorized to register and sign on behalf of the association or organization. The application must be accompanied by three copies of the by-laws signed by the members of the founding committee.

(b) Article 5 of the Law specifies the information that must be included in the by-laws of the association or organization.

Taking into consideration the provisions of the Law, by-laws must include the following information:

1. The name of the association or organization, its address, its purpose and its main headquarters;
2. The financial resources of the association or organization and how they are used or disposed of;
3. Conditions for and types of membership, reasons for termination of membership and membership fees;

4. The organizational structure of the association or organization, and the rules governing the amendment of its by-laws, and its merger or unification;
5. Procedures for convening the general assembly;
6. The means of financial supervision;
7. Rules governing the dissolution of the association or organization: how the resources and property of the association or organization are to be disposed of in the event of its dissolution.

(c) Issuance of a decision by the Minister of the Interior on the registration of the association.

314. When the founders submit an application for registration, and their application is in compliance with the requirements of the law, the Minister of the Interior shall issue a decision accepting the registration of the association or organization within two months of the submission of the application. Should no decision have been taken within two months of receipt of the application by the Ministry of the Interior, the association or organization shall be deemed to be registered under the Law, in accordance with article 4.

315. The Law also affirms, in article 4, paragraph 4, the right of the founders of the association, in the event that the Minister of the Interior issues a decision rejecting the application for registration, to contest the decision before the competent court, namely, the Supreme Court, within a period of 30 days from the date of receipt in writing of the decision rejecting the application of the association or organization.

(a) Law of Charitable Associations and Community Organizations

316. Under the Law of Charitable Associations and Community Organizations, the competence of the Ministry of the Interior with respect to such associations is restricted to the following:

- Registering associations or community organizations that meet the requisite conditions;
- Auditing, in accordance with article 6 of the Law, the finances of the association. In this connection, the Act makes it a condition that the minister of the competent ministry shall issue a letter of authorization to the Minister of the Interior requesting that the Ministry of the Interior audit the finances of the association in order to establish that the assets of the association have been used for the purposes for which they were allocated and in accordance with the provisions of the Law and the by-laws of the association or organization;
- Receiving statements concerning amendments or changes that have been made to the location of headquarters, by-laws, objectives or purposes of the association or organization or any complete or partial change in its board of directors, in accordance with article 12 of the Associations Law;
- Forming of transitional committees to manage the association as specified in article 22 of the Law, which entitles the Minister of the Interior to appoint a transitional committee from among the members of the general assembly of the association or organization to carry out the functions of the board of directors for a maximum period of one month; and the convening the general assembly within the same period to elect a new board of directors.

317. The competence of the Minister of the Interior to appoint such transitional committees shall be limited and shall not be exercised other than in one of the following two cases:

- If all members of the board of directors of the association or organization resign;
- If some of the members of the board of directors of the association or organization resign and the remaining members of the board are unable to regard themselves as constituting a transitional committee, in which case the Minister shall convene the general assembly of the association within one month of those resignations in order to elect a new board of directors.

(b) Annulment of the registration of the association and termination of its status as a body corporate

318. Under the above-mentioned law, the competence of the Minister of the Interior includes the power to annul the registration of an association and terminate its status as a body corporate if, within a period of one year from its being registered by the Ministry, an association has not commenced operations, unless that inactivity is caused by force majeure.

(c) Dissolution of an association and the termination of its status as a body corporate

319. On the basis of article 37 of the Law, the Minister of the Interior is entitled to issue a decision dissolving an association or organization in cases where an association or organization substantially violates its own by-laws or contravenes any of the basic requirements of the Law pertaining to the registration and constituting a fundamental consideration in the decision by the Ministry to register and accredit that association or organization.

320. Accordingly, any transgression or violation by the association or organization of the basic requirements exhaustively listed in article 5 of the Law empowers the Minister of the Interior to dissolve it.

321. In order to ensure that there is no unjust exercise of executive power in putting this procedure into effect, the Law explicitly provides that the Ministry must issue a written warning to the association or organization concerning the nature of the violation that it has committed against its by-laws before issuing the decision to dissolve it. The Law also obliges the Ministry to grant an association a grace period of three months in which it may rectify the violation and restore the status quo ante.

322. If the association or organization responds to the warning and remedies the violation of its by-laws, the warning is regarded as never having been issued and it is not permissible to dissolve the association or organization or terminate its status as a body corporate.

323. In order to guarantee that the Ministry of the Interior does not act in an arbitrary fashion and exploit its competence and authority with respect to existing associations and organizations, article 38 of the Law asserts the right of associations and organizations that have been adversely affected by the Minister's decision to dissolve them to contest that decision before the Supreme Court. In such cases, an association is entitled to continue to operate until such time as a final ruling is handed down.

2. The competent ministry

324. The competent ministry is the ministry within whose purview the main activity of the association falls: the nature of the objectives and purposes of an association as defined in its by-laws determines which ministry shall be considered competent. For example, the Palestinian Ministry of Health is the competent ministry with respect to associations working in the field of health and the Ministry of Education is the competent ministry with respect to associations concerned with education, the eradication of illiteracy or teacher training.

325. Pursuant to the above-mentioned Law, the competent ministry is the body with the authority to monitor the work of associations and supervise performance of their obligations and application of their by-laws and the provisions of the Law.

B. The rights of associations under the Palestinian Law on Associations

326. The body of legislation governing the activities of associations on Palestinian soil consists of the Law on Associations (No. 1 of 2000) and Council of Ministers Decision No. 9 of 2003 concerning the implementing regulation for that Law.

327. The Law consists of nine sections and 45 articles, which address various legal issues relating to associations and organizations, including the nature of the legal relationship between associations and the executive authority.

328. The 70 provisions of the regulation adopted by Council of Ministers Decision No. 9 of 2003 serve as guidelines for implementing the Law on Associations and for the registration and operation of associations.

329. The main rights and obligations attached to the registration and operation of associations under the Law and its implementing regulation may be summarized as follows:

1. An association has the right to register if it meets the conditions for registration. The law affirms that any association that meets those conditions has the right to be registered.

2. Associations have the right to open branches and conduct income-generating projects. The Law on Associations, article 15, states that associations and organizations are entitled to organize activities and establish income-generating projects provided the revenues are used to cover the expenses of activities that they undertake in the public interest. Associations and organizations may set up branches inside Palestine.

3. The authorities may not interfere with the composition of association boards, or with the holding and conduct of meetings and activities. The implementing regulation, article 46, provides that an association shall be administered by its board as provided for in its by-laws, including its basic statute, so long as there is no conflict with the Law on Associations. Every association shall have a board of directors and a general assembly. No government agency may interfere with or seek to influence the conduct of the meetings, elections or activities of any association.

4. No association may be dissolved without prior notification and a three-month grace period in which to settle its affairs.

5. An association shall not be subject to seizure of assets, closure or search of its headquarters except by order of the competent legal authority. The Law on Associations, article 41, provides that it is not permissible to seize the assets of any association or organization, or to close or conduct a search of its headquarters or any of its premises or branches without an order issued by a competent judicial body.

6. Associations have the right to amend their by-laws and goals on condition that they inform the competent department or ministry within one month of the date of such amendment. The implementing regulation, article 45, states that the founders of an association shall have the right to establish its by-laws freely and without interference from any Government agency.

7. An association has the right to legal appeal. In order to protect associations and organizations from abuse of authority by the Government, the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations affirms that an association or organization adversely affected by a ministerial decision to dissolve it or revoke its registration has the right to appeal that decision before the competent legal body, namely, the Supreme Court. The same Law provides that if the registration of any association or organization is revoked by ministerial decision, the reasons must be stated in writing. The association or organization has the right to contest the decision before the competent court.

C. Alleged violations by the Palestinian authorities of the freedom to form associations

330. In order to obtain an idea of the nature and scale of violations alleged by the Goldstone report in this regard, the Commission contacted all the Palestinian human rights institutions that, in its opinion, reliably observed and documented such violations in the West Bank. These included Al-Haq, the Independent Commission for Human Rights, the Palestinian Network of Non-Governmental Organizations and the Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre. It asked those institutions to supply the Commission with documented instances of infringement or violation by the Palestinian authorities of the right of Palestinians to form charitable associations and non-governmental organizations.

331. The reports received by the Commission from those institutions were unanimous in stating that a number of violations of the right to form associations had been committed by the authorities in the West Bank, notably the Ministry of the Interior and the security services. The accounts of violations committed by the authorities in the West Bank contained in those reports may be summarized as follows:

1. Transitional committees consisting of persons who were not members of associations were appointed to administer and run those associations in the place of boards elected by association members. According to the complaints division of the Independent Commission for Human Rights, 11 such transitional committees appointed by the Palestinian Ministry of the Interior replaced elected boards in the West Bank in 2009.<sup>47</sup>

<sup>47</sup> "The status of associations under the Palestinian National Authority in 2009: report of the Palestinian Independent Commission for Human Rights," Special Report No. 68, p. 13.

2. Supreme Court decisions overturning orders by the authorities to appoint transitional committees for associations were not enforced.

3. Palestinian security services prohibited some associations from carrying out their work and threatened board members with arrest if they defied such prohibitions.

4. Palestinian security services searched the headquarters of associations and confiscated documents and equipment.

5. Association branches were shut down and barred from operating.

6. Associations were required to submit administrative and financial reports to the Ministry of the Interior.

7. The Ministry of the Interior made prior approval a requirement for the opening of bank accounts.

8. The Ministry of the Interior made security service approval of founding members a requirement for the registration of the association.

D. Complaints received by the Commission of alleged violations of the freedom to form associations

332. The Commission received five complaints of violations by the Ministry of the Interior and the security services of the right to form associations.<sup>48</sup> After examining those complaints and supporting documents, holding hearings for the complainants on 4 and 8 May 2010, and for the representatives of the relevant human rights organizations,<sup>49</sup> it became clear to the Commission that there was evidence to support the allegations of violation by the authorities in the West Bank of the above-mentioned right. Testimony by witnesses at hearings held by the Commission in the West Bank confirmed that the authorities had committed the following violations.

333. Interim committees had been appointed to administer and run some associations in place of the boards elected by association members. A number of human rights institutions interviewed by the Commission confirmed that this violation had occurred.<sup>50</sup> It was also confirmed by testimony from the Chairman of the Board of the Islamic Society for Orphan Care — Yatta, in Hebron Governorate. He testified that, on 19 August 2008, although the Society had received no warning from the Ministry of the Interior concerning any violation or illegal procedure on its part, he was surprised by the appearance at the Society of a group of persons that included an official of the Ministry of the Interior and an official of the Preventive Security Service. They presented him with an order issued by the Minister of the Interior, bearing the number 110 of 2008, informing him that persons who were not members of the Society had been appointed as an interim committee in order to administer and run the Society in place of its elected board, which was dismissed by the order. They took the keys to Society premises. Subsequently, the dismissed board members filed an appeal against the order of the Minister of the Interior before the

---

<sup>48</sup> These complaints were documented by the Commission and a list is annexed.

<sup>49</sup> The Commission held hearings for the relevant institutions on 20, 25, and 26 May 2010. Testimony was heard from Al-Haq, the Palestinian Independent Commission for Human Rights, the Palestinian Network of Non-Governmental Organizations and the Jerusalem Legal Aid Centre.

<sup>50</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-35/2010, and statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-37/2010.

Palestinian Supreme Court. On 24 June 2009, the Court ruled that the order of the Minister of the Interior should be overturned. However, as of the date of the complainant's appearance before the Commission, the Ministry of the Interior had not complied with that ruling.<sup>51</sup>

334. Among the violations confirmed by the Commission was the closure of some associations ordered by the security services, which had prevented them from operating. The security services had threatened board members with arrest if they defied the order.

335. The chairman of one association testified that, on 29 May 2008, a General Intelligence unit shut down his association's headquarters and seized documents and other items. The Preventive Security Service also shut down a tailor's workshop attached to the association and seized its contents.

336. The same witness also testified that the closure order had been issued by General Intelligence headquarters in Ramallah on 28 May 2008 and executed the following day. A General Intelligence force raided the association, seized property and documents, and informed him that its activities had been banned and that any member of its board attempting to enter association headquarters would be arrested.

337. When the chairman of that association went to the Palestinian Ministry of Culture to enquire about the closure order he was informed that, because it was licensed, his association could continue to operate, but the Ministry could not guarantee the safety of any of its members. He was also informed by a Ministry official who dealt with associations that no order to close the association had been issued by the Ministry, and that the association's quarrel was with the security services. That official advised the association to solve its problem directly with the security services. As of the date of the chairman's testimony, the association remained closed. The General Intelligence Service confiscated the association's furniture, which, according to the witness, was subsequently used at the General Intelligence headquarters in Salfit.<sup>52</sup>

338. Other witnesses testified that the association's headquarters had been raided, all its documents seized, its operations banned, and its board members repeatedly summoned for interrogation. It was barred from operating by the Military Intelligence and Preventive Security Services. The association received no official written notice of closure or ban on operations. It was only informed orally. As of the date of that testimony, the association remained unable to open its headquarters or carry out its work.<sup>53</sup>

339. Some institutions that testified before the Commission also reported that the Ministry of the Interior had blatantly interfered in the activities and meetings of associations by insisting that it should be allowed to attend, supervise or monitor the associations' electoral processes and that the election results should be certified by the Ministry of the Interior.<sup>54</sup>

---

<sup>51</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-27/2010.

<sup>52</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-30/2010.

<sup>53</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-28/2010. The same incident appears in a statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-29/2010.

<sup>54</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-35/2010.

E. The Commission's findings on alleged violations of the right to form associations in the West Bank

340. The Commission conducted hearings at which both complainants and human rights organizations testified about violations of the right to form associations. An official interview was conducted with the Director of Public Relations and NGO Affairs of the Ministry of the Interior.<sup>55</sup> The Chairman of the Commission also met the Minister of the Interior, and the Commission considered the report submitted to the Commission by the Ministry of the Interior of the Palestinian National Authority on the Ministry's obligations with respect to the Goldstone report recommendations.<sup>56</sup> The Commission found that it was indeed the case that there had been violations and infringements of the freedom to form associations and that the Palestinian authorities had violated the provisions of the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations and its implementing regulation in the following respects.

341. The orders from the Minister of the Interior appointing interim committees for some associations were not consistent with the provisions of the law. In particular, the committees in question were made up of persons who were not members of the associations. They were not appointed for a temporary one-month period for the purpose of conducting new elections for the association boards, and were therefore in violation of the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations (No. 1 of 2000), article 22, paragraph 2, which provides that the Minister shall appoint a transitional committee from among the members of the general assembly in order to carry out the tasks of the board of directors for a period of time not exceeding one month, and to convene the general assembly within the same period of time in order to elect a new board of directors.

342. In the report which it submitted to the Commission, the Ministry of the Interior explicitly acknowledged the appointment of 20 interim association committees in 2009. However, the Commission was unable to assess the accuracy of that information.

343. In the course of shutting down the headquarters of some associations, the security services violated provisions of the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations and, in particular, article 41, which prohibits seizure of the assets of any association or organization, or closing or conducting a search of its headquarters or any of its premises or branches without an order issued by a competent judicial body. In view of the fact that the closures, searches and seizures were done without an order from the competent judicial body, all such orders produced were null and void and illegal because they blatantly contravened the provisions of the Law.

344. Interference by the Ministry of the Interior in the conduct of association meetings was illegal. Such interference was in violation of the implementing regulation of the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations, which explicitly prohibits the authorities from interfering with or influencing the conduct of an association's meetings, elections or activities.

345. The requirement that applicants wishing to found associations obtain security service approval was a violation of the provisions of the Law on Associations and its implementing regulation. Neither the Law nor the regulation includes such a requirement in the list of conditions for applicants registering an association. Moreover, the Commission regards the imposition of such a condition to be a blatant violation and infringement of the right of Palestinians to form associations, which is a constitutional right guaranteed by the Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003. This practice must be discontinued.

<sup>55</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. j/D-31/2010.

<sup>56</sup> The report was submitted to the Commission on 20 April 2010.

346. The requirement by the Ministry of the Interior that it be provided with annual administrative and financial reports also constitutes a violation of the provisions of the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations. That Law, in article 13, explicitly identifies the government agency exclusively possessing the authority to require submission of such reports as “the competent Ministry,” and for the Palestinian Ministry of the Interior to do so was therefore a violation of the provisions of the law.

347. The Commission took note in this regard of the implementing regulation of the Law on Associations, article 49, which provides that associations must submit their financial and administrative reports to the registration department of the Ministry of the Interior. That is a blatant violation of the provisions of the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations, and that provision should be ignored or amended in order to make it consistent with the Law on Associations.

348. Proper exercise by Palestinians of their right to form associations requires that the Ministry of the Interior rectify these violations by ceasing all practices, measures or activities that go beyond its competence under the Law on Charitable Associations and Community Organizations and its implementing regulation.

VIII. Violation in the West Bank of freedom to assemble peacefully

A. The freedom of peaceful assembly under Palestinian legislation

349. The Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003 affirms that Palestinians have the right to participate in political life both as individuals and in groups. They have the following rights in particular:

1. To form, establish and join political parties in accordance with the law;
2. To form and establish unions, guilds, associations, societies, clubs and popular institutions in accordance with the law;
3. To nominate candidates and vote in elections in order to select representatives, who shall be elected by public ballot, in accordance with the law;
4. To hold public office and positions in accordance with the principle of equality of opportunity;
5. To conduct private meetings without the presence of police officers, and to conduct public meetings, gatherings and processions, within the limits of the law.

350. The Law on Public Assemblies (No. 12 of 1998), article 2, provides for the right of citizens freely to hold public assemblies, meetings and marches, and prohibits infringement of that right except in accordance with the restrictions provided for in that Law, which are as follows:

- The organizers of a gathering must send written notification to the governor or chief of police at least 48 hours prior to the scheduled time of the gathering;
- Such notification must be signed by at least three of the gathering's organizers and must specify the place, time and purpose of the gathering;
- The governor or chief of police may place restrictions on the duration of the gathering or route of the march for the purpose of maintaining the flow of traffic, provided that he inform the organizers of such conditions in writing within 24 hours of receiving the notification.

351. Palestinian legislation on freedom of assembly is consistent with international human rights law, and in particular with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, both of which explicitly include freedom of assembly among the basic rights and freedoms that States must provide to individuals.

352. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 20, provides that everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, article 22, provides that everyone shall have the right to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and join trade unions for the protection of his interests.

B. Alleged violations by the Palestinian authorities of the freedom of peaceful assembly

353. In order to gain a sense of the scope and nature of violations alleged by the Goldstone report in this regard, the Commission contacted all the Palestinian human rights institutions involved in observing and documenting such violations in the West Bank. It asked those institutions to supply the Commission with documented instances of infringement or violation by the Palestinian authorities of the right of Palestinians to assemble peacefully.

354. The reports received by the Commission from those institutions stated that a number of violations of the right to freedom of assembly had been committed by the authorities in the West Bank, notably, the Ministry of the Interior and the security services. The accounts contained in those reports of violations committed by the authorities in the West Bank may be summarized as follows.

355. On 28 December 2008, the security services in the city of Hebron attacked participants at a march held in solidarity with the Gaza Strip after the Israeli aggression. The march, in which various Islamic and national factions took part, began on Sunday, 28 December 2008 in front of Red Cross headquarters. A number of demonstrators displayed Hamas banners, prompting the security services to intervene. Security services personnel fired into the air after some demonstrators threw stones at members of the security forces. Several citizens were injured in the attack on them by security forces personnel, including former National Unity Government Minister Issa Khairi al-Jabari and citizen Nabil Issa al-Jabari.

356. On Friday 2 January 2009, the Hamas movement called for a march in solidarity with the Gaza Strip in response to the Israeli aggression there. The march was scheduled to begin after Friday prayers at the Al-Husayn ibn Ali Mosque in Hebron. As the worshippers were leaving the Mosque after Friday prayers, a paramilitary police unit arrived and prevented the march from proceeding towards the main road. Meanwhile, participants pelted police and security men with stones and injured more than 10 of them. A number of participants were also injured when security personnel beat them with batons in an attempt to break up the march. Several rounds of gunfire were fired into the air, but no gunfire injuries were reported.

357. On 2 January 2009, families of prisoners being detained by the Palestinian National Authority in Hebron Governorate held a protest in front of the military checkpoint north of the Hebron Government office building at approximately 11.15 a.m. The protestors held signs demanding the release of their relatives. In the meantime, a military force comprising several security services arrived and a women's military force was called. The protest was broken up when the protesters were attacked with batons and sprayed with gas, which caused numerous casualties. Citizen Lami Khatir was detained.

358. On 2 January 2009, national and Islamic forces held a peaceful demonstration in Ramallah in solidarity with the people of the Gaza Strip and in protest against the Israeli attack on Gaza. During the march a number of participants raised Hamas flags. Palestinian security forces intervened and used force to break up the march. A number of participants were injured and some 20 persons were arrested.

359. On 5 January 2009, the student bodies at Birzeit University organized a peaceful demonstration which proceeded from the campus of the university towards the Attara intersection, where the occupying forces maintained a military checkpoint. When at least 400 male and female students reached the centre of the town of Birzeit, Palestinian security forces attempted to prevent them from continuing to the Israeli checkpoint. The participants clashed with the security forces, which resorted to force in order to disperse the gathering. As a result, at least 50 male and female students were injured.

360. As regards alleged violations of freedom of assembly, the Commission received a single complaint, from Mr. Issa al-Ja'bari, who declined to attend the hearing convened by the Commission. The representatives of human rights organizations heard by the Commission referred to individual acts and violations carried out by certain members of the security services in attendance at peaceful gatherings. However, the situation has effectively prevented the Commission from forming a firm conviction regarding the nature of the violations of freedom of assembly. Nevertheless, the Commission believes that the following points must be stressed:

- The Palestinian authorities should respect freedom of assembly. They should allow and facilitate its exercise in accordance with the obligations and procedural principles established by law;
- The authorities and the security services should operate on the assumption that peaceful gatherings are a right and a fundamental freedom. The security services should be present in order to protect participants and facilitate their movement, rather than to restrain them;
- Any attempt on the part of the authorities to prevent or hinder the exercise of that right through restrictions or procedures not provided for by law constitutes a violation of the right to freedom of assembly;
- Human rights organizations have alleged that violations were committed by the security services in dispersing peaceful gatherings. However, the authorities have not effectively investigated the allegations, and have not responded in earnest to the reports, statements and comments of human rights organizations.

IX. Detention and torture in the Gaza Strip

361. Hamas forcibly seized power and took control of the Gaza Strip on 14 June 2007. Since then, that Palestinian territory has been controlled and administered by Hamas and its armed forces and groups, particularly the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades. The Brigades were especially prominent in the first few months, as Hamas sought to impose and consolidate its control of the Gaza Strip. The Brigades clearly assumed a security role, taking fundamental responsibility for law enforcement, arrests, imprisonment, questioning and prosecution. During that phase, the Brigades administered a number of imprisonment and detention centres.

362. Since those events, the Palestinian territory has been controlled and governed by two administrations. The official Palestinian administration, represented by the Palestinian National Authority and its institutions and security apparatus, continued to govern the West Bank, or what is known in Palestinian terms as the northern governorates. The Gaza Strip, which is known as the southern governorates, fell under the control of Hamas and elements of the armed forces, administration and parties affiliated to or supportive of Hamas.

363. After Hamas took power, a series of events convulsed the Palestinian territories, and both sides perpetrated violations. As a result, respect for human rights and freedoms deteriorated.

364. Both sides curtailed and infringed several rights and freedoms, including the right to life; the right to freedom of opinion and expression; the right to assume public office; the right to freedom of association; the right of peaceful assembly; the right to respect for private life; the right to liberty and security of person; the right not to be subjected to arbitrary arrest or detention; the right not to be subjected to arbitrary or unlawful interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence; the right not to be subjected to torture or to degrading treatment that violates human dignity; the right to receive and impart information; and freedom of the press. These and other rights were frequently and repeatedly violated by both sides on the pretext that the situation was extraordinary, or that certain measures were necessary in order to preserve security and public order in the areas under their control.

365. In terms of implications and repercussions, what is happening and being decided in the Gaza Strip goes beyond the conduct of domestic affairs. In practice, it would be closer to the truth to state that a new, independent system of government and institutions is being formed. A number of facts point towards that conclusion:

- The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip has refused to recognize or comply with decisions and orders issued by the President and administration of the Palestinian National Authority;
- The military and security institutions of the Palestinian National Authority have ceased to fulfil their duties in the Gaza Strip. Their authority has been assumed by Hamas, its Executive Force, and the internal security forces, which were reformed under new leadership after Hamas had seized power;
- All security and military installations under the Palestinian National Authority have been taken over by the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades;
- The leadership of the Palestinian police force has been replaced, and connections with the official police force in the West Bank severed;

- Senior officials have been isolated and replaced with Hamas sympathizers. Public sector institutions and structures have been reformed in accordance with the wishes and orientation of Hamas;
- The Palestinian judicial authority has been placed under new leadership. A Supreme Justice Council independent from that of the Palestinian National Authority has been formed. The new body has been tasked with administering the judiciary and supervising appointments, promotions and similar functions. Judges at courts in the Gaza Strip have been replaced with individuals affiliated to Hamas. A new head of the Supreme Court of Gaza has been appointed. The legal system of Hamas is now independent from the legitimate judiciary;
- The Palestinian Public Prosecutor was relieved of his functions with immediate effect and, in violation of his prerogative for staffing and supervision, the Office of the Public Prosecutor has been staffed with individuals loyal to Hamas.

A. Parties responsible for preserving security in the Gaza Strip

366. After forcibly seizing power, Hamas took control of the security apparatus and, in particular, the intelligence and preventive security services. A new body known as the Internal Security Agency was formed with responsibility for law enforcement throughout the Gaza Strip. The Agency, which is part of the de facto Ministry of the Interior, is staffed with Hamas sympathizers and elements of the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades and Executive Force,<sup>57</sup> the latter having been merged with the newly formed Interior Security Agency. The Agency also incorporated members of the original security forces and army who chose to <sup>57</sup> On 20 April 2006, the Minister of the Interior of Palestine decided to form a new security service, the Executive Force, under his direct control. Its function was to assist him in reining in the state of anarchy and restoring peace and public order. The establishment of the Executive Force sparked a major crisis in relations between the Presidency and the Government. The President rejected the Force and issued a presidential decree explicitly refusing to recognize or cooperate with it.

The decree in question, Presidential Decree No. 28 of 2006, reads as follows:

The Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, President of the Palestinian National Authority, Commander-in-Chief of the Palestinian Forces,

Having considered the Palestinian Basic Law of 2003 as amended and the Law of 2005 concerning service in the security forces,

Acting in the public interest and in exercise of his prerogatives,

Decrees as follows:

Article 1

The decision of the Minister of the Interior dated 20 April 2006, which establishes a new security force comprising armed resistance groups under his direct responsibility, is hereby revoked. That decision contravenes the Law of 2005 concerning service in the security forces, article 3, which states that any new security force must form a part of the three agencies specified therein.

Article 2

The decision of the Minister of the Interior dated 20 April 2006 concerning appointments and promotions of officers is revoked. According to the Law of 2005 concerning service in the security forces, articles 19 and 20, the Minister does not have the authority to make such appointments and promotions. That Law entrusts that task to the Committee of Officers, whose decision is binding once it is endorsed by the President of the Palestinian National Authority.

Article 3

All leaders, officers, non-commissioned officers and members of the security forces are requested not to comply with the decisions specified in articles 1 and 2, and to consider them null and void.

The concerned parties are requested to take all necessary steps in order to implement the provisions of this Decree, which shall be binding from the date of its issuance and shall be published in the Official Gazette.

retain their positions. However, they were required as a precondition to sever all ties to the Government in the West Bank.

367. As events in the Gaza Strip have shown, the Internal Security Agency is assisted in enforcing the law by elements of Hamas and, in particular, the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades, which are the primary military wing of Hamas. Those forces have been called upon in particular situations, notably when the security and stability of the de facto authority are threatened.

368. The Internal Security Agency fulfils the following functions in the Gaza Strip:

- Preserving public order and security; protecting life, property and assets;
- Preventing, detecting and investigating crime; arresting and prosecuting offenders;
- Administering prisons and guarding prisoners;
- Enforcing laws, regulations and orders; assisting the authorities in the fulfilment of their duties in accordance with the law;
- Directing and policing road traffic;
- Supervising gatherings and processions in streets and public places.

B. Legislation setting forth the duties of law enforcement officials in the Gaza Strip

369. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip has continued to enforce the legislation enacted before the split. The following are still applicable: Law No. 8 (2005) concerning service in the security forces, which sets forth the mission, duties and obligations of security forces in the Gaza Strip; Law No. 6 (1998) concerning reform and rehabilitation centres (prisons); Law No. 12 (1998) concerning public gatherings; the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 3 of 2001); the Revolutionary Penal Code (1979) of the Palestine Liberation Organization; and (Law No. 74 of 1936 as amended), the Penal Code that was in force under the British Mandate.

370. In the second half of 2008, members of the pro-Hamas Change and Reform Bloc in the Legislative Council of the Gaza Strip issued the Law of 2008 concerning criminal procedure in the army, which is currently enforced by military courts in the Gaza Strip.

C. Conditions for arrest and detention under current legislation and international instruments

371. As has been explained, the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip continues to apply the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law; the Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 3 of 2001), Law No. 6 (1998) concerning prisons, and the Law concerning service in the security forces. As a result, the security services in the Gaza Strip remain bound by the conditions for arrest, detention and imprisonment set forth in the Code of Criminal Procedure.

372. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must therefore comply with all of those provisions. In particular:<sup>58</sup>

- No person may be subjected to coercion or torture. All persons deprived of their freedom shall receive appropriate treatment;
- Individuals may be arrested or imprisoned only pursuant to an order issued by the competent authority;
- Law enforcement officials must take statements from arrested individuals immediately. If there is no justification for their release, they must be transferred to the competent deputy public prosecutor within 24 hours;
- Homes may be entered and searched only with a warrant issued by the Office of the Public Prosecutor, or in the presence of a member of the Office. The resident of the home must have been accused of perpetrating or being an accessory to a crime or offence. Alternatively, there should be strong evidence that the individual is concealing objects connected with a crime;
- The Office of the Public Prosecutor has sole responsibility for prosecutions. The Code of Criminal Procedure, article 99, states that the deputy public prosecutor must conduct a physical inspection of the suspect prior to questioning, document any visible injuries and establish their cause;
- Suspects are entitled to legal representation during the investigation;
- After the prisoner has been questioned, the Office of the Public Prosecutor may request that the competent court extend his detention in accordance with the law;
- Law enforcement officials must immediately convey the detainee to a police station. Where there is no warrant, the prison official who takes the detainee into custody must immediately ascertain the reasons for detention. Such custody shall in no event exceed 24 hours, and the Office of the Public Prosecutor shall be notified immediately;
- Individuals may be detained or imprisoned only in a prison or in a legally specified place of detention. Prisoners may be accepted only pursuant to an order from the competent authority, and may not be detained beyond the period specified in the order;
- If it is decided that a detainee should be released on bail, the official responsible or the director of the prison shall release him, provided that he has not also been arrested or detained on some other charge;
- Prisons must be inspected. The Code of Criminal Procedure provides that the Office of the Public Prosecutor and the heads of the courts of first instance and courts of appeal shall inspect prisons and other places of detention under their jurisdiction in order to ensure that no person is unlawfully imprisoned or detained. They shall examine and make copies of the prison records and detention orders. They shall make contact with inmates in order to hear any grievances. Directors and officials shall offer them every assistance in obtaining the information sought.

---

<sup>58</sup> The guarantees incumbent on the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip are the same as those set out in the section on detention and torture in the West Bank. In order to avoid repetition, specific references have not been included.

373. The conditions set forth in international instruments, specifically, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment, continue to apply to arrest and imprisonment procedures in the Gaza Strip.<sup>59</sup>

374. The Commission believes that the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip has a duty and a responsibility to respect the obligations referred to, for a number of reasons, including the following:

- The Basic Law of Palestine incorporates most of those obligations. It follows that many of those safeguards have become binding as a part of domestic legislation. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must therefore respect and enforce them;
- The principles enshrined in those instruments have acquired force of law. This applies specifically to the right to life and human dignity, and to the prohibition of torture and other degrading treatments that violate human dignity. Such principles are incumbent on all the international contracting parties, i.e. States, and also on other parties, including the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip, which cannot use the pretext that it is not a party to those agreements and has not declared its commitment to them;
- In the Declaration of Independence, which is a constitutional document, the Palestine Liberation Organization announced its adherence to the Universal Declaration on Human Rights. The latter is therefore binding on Palestinians, including Hamas, which participated in legislative elections in accordance with domestic law, the Basic Law, the Oslo Accords and the Declaration of Principles concluded between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Israeli side.

375. In view of Hamas's forcible seizure and exercise of power, the Commission believes that events in the Gaza Strip constitute internal armed conflicts as defined by the Protocol additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the protection of victims of non-international armed conflicts (Protocol II), concluded in 1977. Protocol II, article 1, reads as follows:

1. This Protocol, which develops and supplements Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 without modifying its existing conditions of application, shall apply to all armed conflicts which are not covered by Article 1 of the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflicts (Protocol I) and which take place in the territory of a High Contracting Party between its armed forces and dissident armed forces or other organized armed groups which, under responsible command, exercise such control over a part of its territory as to enable them to carry out sustained and concerted military operations and to implement this Protocol.

2. This Protocol shall not apply to situations of internal disturbances and tensions, such as riots, isolated and sporadic acts of violence and other acts of a similar nature, as not being armed conflicts.

376. The Commission believes that Hamas, having seized, taken over and subsequently exercised effective power in the Gaza Strip, is committed not only to the aforementioned instruments, but also to the safeguards provided for in Protocol II as binding international law.

<sup>59</sup> Those guarantees and conditions have been described in the section regarding detention and torture in the West Bank. In order to avoid repetition, they are not repeated here.

377. Article 4 of the Protocol states as follows:

1. All persons who do not take a direct part or who have ceased to take part in hostilities, whether or not their liberty has been restricted, are entitled to respect for their person, honour and convictions and religious practices. They shall in all circumstances be treated humanely, without any adverse distinction. It is prohibited to order that there shall be no survivors.

2. Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing, the following acts against the persons referred to in paragraph 1 are and shall remain prohibited at any time and in any place whatsoever:

(a) Violence to the life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder as well as cruel treatment such as torture, mutilation or any form of corporal punishment;

(b) Collective punishments;

(c) Taking of hostages;

(d) Acts of terrorism;

(e) Outrages upon personal dignity, in particular humiliating and degrading treatment, rape, enforced prostitution and any form of indecent assault;

(f) Slavery and the slave trade in all their forms;

(g) Pillage;

(h) Threats to commit any of the foregoing acts.

3. Children shall be provided with the care and aid they require, and in particular:

(a) They shall receive an education, including religious and moral education, in keeping with the wishes of their parents, or in the absence of parents, of those responsible for their care;

(b) All appropriate steps shall be taken to facilitate the reunion of families temporarily separated;

(c) Children who have not attained the age of fifteen years shall neither be recruited in the armed forces or groups nor allowed to take part in hostilities;

(d) The special protection provided by this Article to children who have not attained the age of fifteen years shall remain applicable to them if they take a direct part in hostilities despite the provisions of subparagraph (c) and are captured;

(e) Measures shall be taken, if necessary, and whenever possible with the consent of their parents or persons who by law or custom are primarily responsible for their care, to remove children temporarily from the area in which hostilities are taking place to a safer area within the country and ensure that they are accompanied by persons responsible for their safety and well-being.

378. Moreover, Hamas must respect and comply with the following safeguards contained in article 6 of the Protocol:

2. No sentence shall be passed and no penalty shall be executed on a person found guilty of an offence except pursuant to a conviction pronounced by a court offering the essential guarantees of independence and impartiality.

In particular:

(a) The procedure shall provide for an accused to be informed without delay of the particulars of the offence alleged against him and shall afford the accused before and during his trial all necessary rights and means of defence;

(b) No one shall be convicted of an offence except on the basis of individual penal responsibility;

(c) No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence, under the law, at the time when it was committed; nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than that which was applicable at the time when the criminal offence was committed; if, after the commission of the offence, provision is made by law for the imposition of a lighter penalty, the offender shall benefit thereby;

(d) Anyone charged with an offence is presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law;

(e) Anyone charged with an offence shall have the right to be tried in his presence;

(f) No one shall be compelled to testify against himself or to confess guilt.

3. A convicted person shall be advised on conviction of his judicial and other remedies and of the time limits within which they may be exercised.

4. The death penalty shall not be pronounced on persons who were under the age of eighteen years at the time of the offence and shall not be carried out on pregnant women or mothers of young children.

D. Human rights violations perpetrated by Palestinian security services during arrest and detention

379. In order to obtain an idea of the nature and scale of the violations alleged in the Goldstone report, the Commission contacted all of the Palestinian human rights institutions that have, in its opinion, reliably observed and documented the violations in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. These included the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, the Al-Mezan Centre and the Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights in the Gaza Strip. The Commission also contacted human rights institutions active in the West Bank which have documented the human rights situation in the Gaza Strip, including Al-Haq, the Al-Dameer Association, the Independent Commission for Human Rights and the Jerusalem Legal Aid Centre. The purpose was to provide the Commission with all information that had been collected and documented by those institutions, in addition to their reports, statements and contributions.

380. All the reports, testimonies and statements received by the Commission from those organizations are in agreement that law enforcement officials of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip committed violations in the performance of arrests and detentions. Reports and statements noted that the security services in the Gaza Strip had committed a number of violations in the performance of arrest, detention and investigation procedures, which may be summarized as follows:

1. Such arrests were linked to the Palestinian political situation, in that the detainees were affiliates, supporters or sympathizers of the Palestinian National Liberation Movement (Fatah);
2. Law enforcement officials in the security services of the Gaza Strip, in the majority of cases of arrest and detention, failed to respect due legal process;
3. Detainees were mistreated and subjected to cruelty;
4. Detainees were not referred to the Office of the Public Prosecutor within the statutory time limits prescribed by the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure;
5. Civilian detainees were brought before military courts;
6. Detainees were subjected to torture and other forms of humiliating and degrading treatment as a means of extracting confessions regarding acts ascribed to them or to others.

E. Complaints received by the Commission concerning detention-related violations

381. The Commission received complaints from human rights organizations, parliamentary blocs, relatives of detained persons and released detainees concerning arrest and detention-related human rights violations by law enforcement officials in the Gaza Strip. Eleven complaints were submitted directly by individuals in the Gaza Strip.<sup>60</sup>

382. After reviewing and studying the above-mentioned complaints and their attachments, the Commission found that the claims were substantiated. The individuals heard by the Commission via videoconference<sup>61</sup> from the Gaza Strip stated that officials had committed the following violations.

383. Law enforcement officials belonging to the Internal Security Service did not identify themselves; they wore masks while conducting raids, searches and arrests.

384. The majority of the complainants heard by the Commission in connection with imprisonment, torture and killings referred to that practice. One of the witnesses said: "I was imprisoned on 12 February 2009. I was taken from in front of my house by masked Internal Security men armed with handguns. They took me in a green Jeep Magnum, a military vehicle."<sup>62</sup>

385. Another witness said: "On the day of the ceasefire after the Gaza conflict, six masked youths attacked a supermarket owned by my brother. They took my brother and vandalized the supermarket. About a quarter of an hour later, they came to the house where my brother and I live".<sup>63</sup>

386. Another complainant said: "A dozen or so masked men in civilian clothes came to my house. I was not at home at the time. My father met them and said that I was not there. He sent my brother to fetch me and I came home. They

---

<sup>60</sup> These complaints were documented by the Commission and a list is annexed.

<sup>61</sup> The Commission spoke to 11 individuals about complaints regarding detention.

<sup>62</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-1/2010.

<sup>63</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-2/2010.

told me that they had come for me. When my father asked them to identify themselves, they showed their Internal Security identification”.<sup>64</sup>

387. Another statement said: “At about 1 a.m., I was awoken by unusual knocking on the door. I went and asked who was knocking. They said it was the police and told me to open the door. I did so, and four individuals came in. They were wearing masks with only their eyes showing. They were armed with Kalashnikovs, and one of them had a handgun. I asked them what they wanted; they said they wanted to search the house”.<sup>65</sup>

388. Individuals were imprisoned and detained in places other than those designated by law. Some were held in a mosque. Others were held and questioned in hospitals, homes and undisclosed locations.

389. One of the testimonies states as follows: “On 17 January 2009, some Internal Security agents came to my house with a search warrant from Internal Security. They searched the house, then took me away with them. They told my wife: ‘We will bring him back in half an hour’. I found the house surrounded by over 20 individuals, some of them soldiers and some civilians, all wearing black masks. A man took me away and said, ‘Do you know in whose company you are?’ I answered, ‘Internal Security’. They took me to a place called Ali Ibrahim Wadi. Before I arrived, they pulled a mask over my head and the questioning began. They questioned me on the charge that I was collaborating with the Ramallah Government. They accused me of spying on the Al-Qassam organization and sending reports to that Government. All of them beat me from every direction”.<sup>66</sup>

390. Another account states as follows: “They said to me, ‘Hamada, we want you for five minutes’. When my father asked for their identity, they showed Internal Security cards. They took me on foot to the road that runs by the building site. There, they pulled my jacket over my head and took me to an abandoned house. I do not know who owned it. They said, ‘You have five minutes to confess to how you got the weapons you have’. They started to hit my face and whip my legs. They kept hitting me continuously for 30 to 45 minutes, then they brought me out and told me I was under house arrest for three months”.<sup>67</sup>

391. All the security agencies, whether or not they are legally authorized to make arrests, failed to respect the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure, which provides that no arrest warrant may be executed without a court order. Rather, individuals were brought to security headquarters by force or seized in raids. On other occasions the person was summoned by telephone to a meeting with the security body, whereupon he was immediately apprehended and arrested.

392. When entering and searching homes, the security services did not respect the requirement to show judicial orders. Numerous homes were broken into and searched without any such order being shown, which constitutes a clear violation of the sanctity of those homes.

393. Legal provisions governing the duration of custody were violated. In ordinary circumstances, as previously mentioned, the pertinent Palestinian laws allow the authorized agency to detain and arrest persons for a period of 24

---

<sup>64</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-3/2010.

<sup>65</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-6/2010.

<sup>66</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-6/2010.

<sup>67</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-3/2010.

hours. After that period, the arrested person must immediately be released or transferred to the Office of the Public Prosecutor or the competent court in order for their status to be determined.

394. In the majority of cases of arrest which it documented, the Commission found that the security services ignored those time limits and did not observe the binding legal provisions. Many persons were detained for periods longer than those provided by law. Moreover, none of the detainees were brought before the Office of the Public Prosecutor or the competent court.

395. Violence, abuse, beatings and humiliation occurred during imprisonment. In many cases, the security services of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip treated prisoners in a degrading manner that violated human dignity. Force and violence were used. As shown by the statements obtained by the Commission from arrested persons or their relatives concerning the facts surrounding arrest, the Palestinian security services in general did not comply with the rules and criteria governing arrests, in particular those relating to proper treatment and the avoidance of beating, degradation and recourse to violence.

396. One of the testimonies heard by the Commission states as follows: “On 18 January 2009 at 9 p.m., two policemen came to my home. They said, and I quote: ‘You are being asked for by the Chief of Police’. I went with them, as I thought, to the police station, but found that I was in fact being taken to the premises of the Red Crescent in Khan Younis. Before I arrived there, they told me that police headquarters had moved. They then took me to another place, the new housing units in the Al-Amal neighbourhood. Ten minutes later, a group of masked men arrived and took me to a place some 30 metres away from the housing units. The masked men, 15 or so people, began to beat me with truncheons. They did not say anything or accuse me of anything. After they had beaten me for about half an hour, they called a Red Crescent emergency vehicle, which took me, along with another person who had been beaten, to the Nasser Hospital”.<sup>68</sup>

397. Another testimony states as follows: “After the war and the Israeli attack of January 2009, my house in Izbet Abd Rabbo, in east Jabaliyah, was destroyed by the Israelis. They stationed themselves in a part of the house. I was in the house with my wife, my 25-year-old disabled son and my other children. When the war ended and the Red Cross let me leave, I left the house and stayed with in-laws in the Sheikh Radwan area. I was not able to obtain clothes for myself or my family, so I borrowed some clothes from volunteers in Sheikh Radwan. The clothes were threadbare, and made me look suspicious and different from the locals. I was approached by four individuals in civilian clothes who refused to identify themselves. They were carrying wireless devices and driving a Skoda marked as a taxi. They blindfolded me and took me to an undisclosed location, where I was interrogated for five days. During that time, a number of accusations were made against me, notably that I was collaborating with Ramallah and Israel, on the grounds that there were Umm al-Fahem, Abu Dhabi and Ramallah numbers in my mobile phone. I denied all of the accusations during the questioning. Only one kind of food was brought to me. I was kept blindfolded with my hands tied, which was torture. My feet were tied throughout the day except during meals. I was allowed to go to the toilet once a day. The worst torture was that none of my relatives or family knew where I was. However, I was not verbally abused, hit or humiliated. The greatest surprise came after five days, when they apologized to me”.<sup>69</sup>

---

<sup>68</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-7/2010.

398. As regards torture resulting in death, the accounts heard by the Commission show that numerous detainees were beaten, tortured or treated in a manner that violated their human dignity, in order to extract information or confessions regarding their own or other peoples’ actions or words.

399. It is clear from those accounts that the security services in the Gaza Strip used extremely harsh methods of extracting information and confessions. Those methods resulted in the deaths of a number of prisoners, including one Jamil Nasr. The victim’s mother, Nuha Issa Assaf of the Al-Daraj neighbourhood, Gaza City, made the following statement: “My son was less than 20 years old. Jamil was working in the tunnels. They imprisoned him on 9 March 2009. We have a neighbour named Muhammad Isam Abu Thurayya; the people who imprisoned him were the judicial authorities investigating the theft of 130,000 shekels from Muhammad. They accused some other people alongside my brother, and took him to the ‘Abu Musa Halas Cafe’, a torture centre in the Al-Daraj neighbourhood. The investigators tortured him in order to make him confess, using every form of torture. They kept him for four days. During all of that time, he was tortured and denied food and drink. On 12 March 2009, he was moved to the Al-Tuffah police station. My son was in a very bad state. We went to the Al-Tuffah police station on the Friday to visit him. They let us see him for 10 minutes. Whenever I looked at him, he would put a hand over his head. He told us that he was vomiting his food and that there was blood in his urine. We asked the policeman who was present to take him to hospital. After my husband threatened to go to the Red Cross, he was brought under guard to the Al-Shifa Hospital in Gaza City and placed in intensive care. He was losing consciousness, and the Hospital was carrying out dialysis because he had suffered kidney failure. He remained in that condition for 12 days, and then died despite an attempt to resuscitate him. That was on Monday at 2 a.m. The corpse was autopsied on the order of the Office of the Public Prosecutor and without our permission. We have obtained a medical report, which I will provide to the Commission, stating that he died as a result of torture”.

F. Opinion of the Commission regarding arrest and detention procedures in the Gaza Strip

400. It transpires from the cases of imprisonment in the Gaza Strip which were documented by the Commission that law enforcement officials frequently went beyond, and indeed violated, the applicable conditions and safeguards. On the basis of the Commission’s hearings, in addition to the reports and information provided by Palestinian human rights organizations, particularly significant points emerge that are set forth below.

401. On the basis of those hearings, reports and documents, the Commission believes that the security services of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip imprisoned sympathizers of Fatah and others in reaction to the political disagreement between Fatah and Hamas. Most of those arrests proved to be motivated by political considerations, and therefore constitute arbitrary and unlawful imprisonment.

402. It is clear from the hearings that most of the complaints of mistreatment and abuse involved the Internal Security Service in the Gaza Strip.

<sup>69</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. T-ayn-ghayn-9/2010.

403. It is clear that the Office of the Public Prosecutor of the Gaza Strip was remiss in performing the role entrusted to it by law, because it was incumbent on the members of the Office, under article 126 of the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure, to inspect prisons and other places of detention under their jurisdiction in order to ensure that no person is unlawfully imprisoned or detained. They are also responsible for consulting and making copies of prison records and detention orders and for contacting inmates and hearing any grievances. Moreover, the directors and officials shall offer them every assistance in obtaining the information sought.

404. Consequently, it was incumbent on the Office of the Public Prosecutor of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip not only to intervene in order to prevent any arrest or detention that fell outside the remit of the prisons, but also to initiate public prosecutions against anyone in breach of these conditions as the perpetrator of a crime. It has also been established that the Office of the Public Prosecutor failed to intervene in order to prevent members of the security apparatus and other armed groups from usurping the prerogatives of the powers which, under the law, had the status of judicial police. Such practices became widespread.

405. It is clear that violations of human dignity, including treatment during arrest, beating, abuse, humiliation and the subjection of arrested persons to torture or to physical or psychological pressure in order to obtain information or confessions were not isolated cases of individual conduct in the detention and investigation centres of the Internal Security Service. Such practices occurred in all of the cases of arrest and detention documented or heard by the Commission. They therefore appear not to have been limited to an individual or a specific area; they were used universally in order to manage detainees, conduct investigations and obtain confessions. The Internal Security Service has thus breached the provisions of the Palestinian Basic Law, article 13, which affirms that no person shall be subject to coercion or torture and that all persons deprived of their freedom shall receive appropriate treatment.

406. Law enforcement services in the Gaza Strip used numerous forms and methods of torture, including the following:

- Severe beatings delivered with hands, feet and truncheons;
- Collective beating of the detainee, with more than one person involved in the beatings and other acts of aggression;
- Whipping with water hoses;
- Shabah, where the detainee's hands are tied behind him and pulled up by fastening the bonds to a door, window or other object, so that the person subjected to this form of torture remains virtually suspended in the air, a process that may last for periods of varying duration, even several days in succession, the person being granted brief periods of respite;
- Threats and intimidation;
- Detention in cramped cells measuring roughly 1 metre by 2 to 3 metres;
- Beatings on the soles of the feet with sticks, done by shackling and raising the detainee's feet, whereupon he is beaten with sticks or clubs for variable lengths of time, then required to walk in order to obscure the blood congestion resulting from the beating.

407. Lack of effective supervision of detention centres contributed to the scale and frequency of torture. The Commission has found that the parties legally responsible for detention centres administered by the Intelligence and Preventive Security Services did not exercise effective supervision.

408. The Commission believes that the lack of genuine, effective accountability for agents guilty of torture and unlawful detention encouraged the widespread use of torture.

409. The Commission therefore believes that the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must recognize and fulfil its responsibilities to hold accountable and prosecute all who break the law with regard to arbitrary and illegal arrests and the crime of torture and other forms of harsh and degrading treatment.

X. Violation of the right to life in the Gaza Strip

410. In the Palestinian Basic Law as amended in 2003, the right to life does not receive the attention given to the other basic rights and freedoms set forth in chapter II. In our view, that is one of the shortcomings of the Basic Law. The right to life is the original right from which all other human rights are derived; its omission or denial detracts from their value.

411. The right to life and personal safety is inherent, and may not be infringed in any circumstance, even when society or the State is affected by an extraordinary event.

412. The right to life is enshrined in international human rights instruments. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 3, states that everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, article 6, provides that every human being has the inherent right to life. This right shall be protected by law. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life.

413. Human Rights Committee General Comment No. 6, adopted at the Committee's sixteenth session in 1982, states that the right to life enunciated in article 6 of the Covenant is the supreme right from which no derogation is permitted even in time of public emergency. It is the foundation on which all other human rights depend.

414. In order to obtain an idea of the nature and scale of the violations alleged in the Goldstone report, the Commission contacted all of the Palestinian human rights institutions that have, in its opinion, reliably observed and documented the violations in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. These included the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, the Al-Mezan Centre and the Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights in the Gaza Strip. The Commission also contacted human rights institutions active in the West Bank which have documented the human rights situation in the Gaza Strip, including Al-Haq, the Al-Dameer Association, the Independent Commission for Human Rights and the Jerusalem Legal Aid Centre. The purpose was to provide the Commission with all information that had been collected and documented by those institutions, in addition to their reports, statements and contributions.

415. The reports, testimonies and accounts provided by those organizations are all in agreement that dozens of killings took place in the Gaza Strip. The 2009 report of the Independent Commission for Human Rights refers to 22 extrajudicial killings and 23 killings in unclear circumstances.<sup>70</sup> Al-Haq states that 33 individuals were killed during the first four months of 2009.<sup>71</sup>

416. Analysis of incidents monitored and documented by these organizations shows that violation of the right to life in the Gaza Strip has taken various forms, including the following:

- Direct killing and extralegal and extrajudicial executions by law enforcement agencies in the Gaza Strip or by armed groups affiliated to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip, targeting persons charged with committing certain acts or convicted by the military and civil courts;
- The arrest of individuals and their liquidation, after interrogation, by agencies affiliated to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

<sup>70</sup> Annual report of the Independent Commission for Human Rights, p. 68 et seq.

<sup>71</sup> Al-Haq provided a report giving the names of the victims.

A. Complaints received by the Commission concerning violations of the right to life

417. The Commission received a series of complaints from Palestinian human rights organizations, parliamentary blocs and victims' relatives concerning violation of the right to life in the Gaza Strip by security agencies affiliated to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip or by groups affiliated to Hamas.

418. After reviewing and studying of the substance of those complaints and their attachments and the hearings held for victims' relatives,<sup>72</sup> it became clear to the Commission that there is evidence to support the truth of allegations of violation of the right to life by the security services affiliated to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip. The statements of persons in the Gaza Strip, which the Commission heard via videoconference,<sup>73</sup> affirm that the security services in the Gaza Strip, the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades and other armed groups affiliated to the de facto authority have committed violations of the right to life.

B. Opinion of the Commission regarding violations of the right to life

419. After analysing everything uncovered by the hearings held for the relatives of murder victims, the Commission is of the view that the law enforcement agencies in the Gaza Strip carried out widespread extralegal executions during the Israeli assault on the Gaza Strip.

420. Extralegal and summary execution is defined as the execution of political opponents or persons suspected of committing an offence by armed forces, officials or groups supported by Government agencies, without prior judicial measures. The phrase, "extralegal and summary execution" includes arbitrary execution, whether for political reasons or for religious or ideological reasons.

421. Review of the murder of numerous individuals in the Gaza Strip indicates that the description of extralegal execution clearly applies.

1. The targeted killings of convicted persons by the security services affiliated to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip

422. Numerous testimonies heard by the Commission affirm the reality of targeted killings. In his statement, the father of one victim said, "... Akram was killed during the Israeli assault on Gaza ... They sent word to us to go to Al-Shifa Hospital in Gaza, where I identified Akram's body in the mortuary. I found six bullet holes in his chest and head. I did not see who fired the shots but he was a prisoner in Saraya prison in Gaza ... He had been sentenced to death before Hamas seized power ...".<sup>74</sup>

423. The father of another victim stated, "... On 26 March 2003, my son was arrested by the authorities on suspicion of having committed murder. He was tried and sentenced to death the same year, having been accused of three murders. He was tried by a civil court, the Gaza Court of First Instance. My son was held at Saraya prison, awaiting execution. The verdict was appealed before the Court of Cassation which, to date, has not delivered its ruling. On 28 December 2008, during the Israeli assault on Gaza, the Saraya facility was bombed by the Israelis, after which my son escaped with other prisoners and came home. After a few days, he went to the Rafah area, where the Internal Security Service arrested him on 20 January 2009. He was held until 21 January 2009, when he was executed with another person, by the name of Said Zaghil. His body was taken to Al-Shifa Hospital. He had a bullet hole behind the ear. An autopsy was conducted by the pathologist at the hospital, who stated that he had been killed by a bullet that was lodged in his brain. The pathologist and prosecutor's office refused to provide us with a report determining the cause of death ...".<sup>75</sup>

<sup>72</sup> The Commission held 17 hearings for the relatives of murder victims.

<sup>73</sup> The Commission heard the testimony of 11 persons concerning complaints relating to murder.

<sup>74</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-21/2010.

2. The targeted killing of accused persons by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip

424. Numerous testimonies heard by the Commission substantiate allegations of such killings.

425. The wife of a victim of execution stated the following: "... My husband was arrested about a year and a half before the war and charged with spying for Israel. He confessed under torture and remained in custody. He was being held at Saraya when the war began. When the Israelis bombed Saraya, he was injured when a wall fell on his shoulder and leg, causing bleeding, and he was taken to hospital. While he was receiving treatment there, three persons dressed in military uniform appeared and shot him in the head. The hospital was full of people and it was in full view of the police. I was in the hospital, at reception, and heard the shot fired. I went to the place and found him lying on the bed with two shots to the head, one in his forehead and the other close to his nose. The gunmen were unmasked but I do not know which faction they belonged to ...".<sup>76</sup>

426. The statement of the wife of another victim included the following: "... My husband's brother received an anonymous call, telling him, 'Go and look for your brother where he has been dumped.' Following this call, we went out to look for him. Eventually, we were told that there were bodies at Al-Shifa Hospital, so we went to the hospital mortuary and found my husband there, with three bullet holes in his head, abdomen and chest ... Previously, on 29 January 2009, my husband had called to say that he was in a safe place and in safe hands. In 2008, my husband had been charged with murder and acquitted by the court but was taken back to prison a few days after his release, on 22 October 2008. When I checked with the legal affairs section at Saraya prison, they told me that they suspected my husband was an Israeli agent. Forty days later, I visited my husband and they told me that he was an Israeli agent. On ... I received notification from the military judiciary that I had to present myself to them. They interrogated me and told me that my husband had enemies whom they suspected of the murder. It is my belief that the Internal Security Service killed my husband ...".<sup>77</sup>

427. One of the complainants heard by the Commission stated the following: "... He was to have appeared before the court but no verdict had been delivered by the time of the Hamas takeover in Gaza. After the coup, he was acquitted and released. He was shown on television saying that he had been unjustly treated. He stayed at home for eight months. Then they arrested someone who informed against my son. He was arrested and taken back to prison, where he was at the time of the assault on Gaza. When Saraya prison was bombed by Israel, my son made his way out along with others and came home. He then went to his grandfather's house in Khan Younis. There, Arafat Abu'l Rish appeared with a group of masked men, took him from his grandfather's house and beat him in the street... They took him to a vacant plot and killed him there, in full view of everyone ...".<sup>78</sup>

<sup>75</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-18/2010.

<sup>76</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-20/2010.

<sup>77</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-22/2010.

428. Another complainant heard by the Commission stated: "... My husband, aged 40, was arrested on 25 July 2008, accused of belonging to Fatah. While under arrest, he was tortured. He told me that the methods they tortured him with included loss of blood and cuffing in the shabah position. For three months there was no information about him until, during the war against Gaza, the detainees were freed and my husband was among them. He had been held at Saraya prison in Gaza City but had not been convicted of anything ... My husband was accused in connection with explosions in Gaza. They took him from Saraya and murdered him in an area known as Nafaq, with two shots to the head, one from each side. I saw my husband when we were contacted by people from the hospital and were told we had to come and take Hamza. We found him in the mortuary. To this day, I do not know who murdered my husband and I have heard nothing. The day he got out of Saraya prison, he came home but was shot in the legs by the Internal Security Service. He arrived at the house bleeding. I brought a doctor to the house for him and he treated him. There was no damage to the bone. He had been receiving treatment for 20 days or more when, one night, masked men came to the house, terrifying the household. We hid him from them then, but another time masked men came to the house and took him away. I do not know who they were or where they took him. Their faces were covered and they wore civilian clothes. They were armed with pistols. They took my husband at around midnight ... He was shot at 4 a.m. The masked men came in a military vehicle. I believe that the Internal Security Service killed my husband. My husband was an ordinary citizen but he belonged to Fatah ...".<sup>79</sup>

429. Another complainant said, "At 1 a.m. on Thursday, 29 January 2009, there was a knock at the door. My husband and the children and I were asleep. My husband, may God have mercy on him, got up and opened the door to find a group of armed and masked men. There were about 15 of them, possibly more. He tried to shut the door to prevent them from coming in. Before that, however, he asked them who they were and they said that they were the security services. We were trying to stop them ... but after that he stopped resisting and opened the door. All of them came into the house ... and took my husband away with them but we did not know where to. In the morning, I went to the police station and reported the incident ... At around noon on 2 February 2009, my husband's cousin came to tell me that my husband had been found at Kamal Adwan Hospital ... with torture marks visible on his body and a bullet hole in his head ...".<sup>80</sup>

430. The Commission's review of the list of persons killed in the first quarter of 2009 in the Gaza Strip<sup>81</sup> shows that some 17 persons found guilty, accused or detained by the security services in the Gaza Strip had been killed.

3. Targeted killing by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip of persons sympathetic to the political opposition

431. One of the statements heard by the Commission contained the following: "... On Tuesday, 27 March 2009, a group of heavily armed masked men arrived at my house in three military jeeps and knocked at the door. My wife went to

<sup>78</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-19/2010.

<sup>79</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-14/2010.

<sup>80</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-gahyn-13/2010.

<sup>81</sup> The Commission obtained this list from Al-Haq organization.

the door before me and asked them who they were. They told her they wanted Usama. I went out to ask them who they were and they told me they were from the Internal Security Service. I asked them for a warrant from the Public Prosecutor before I would hand over my son to them. They refused, saying that they were Internal Security and produced identification cards. I told them that Usama would not come out even if they brought down the house on us. I was eventually able to send a message to my cousin, who is a Hamas official. My cousin arrived and asked me what was going on. I asked him, in his capacity as a local official, to take Usama under his protection. He said that there was nothing against him. Afterwards, Usama came out and they put him into one of the jeeps. We learned the next day that they had taken him to Bilal ibn Rabah Mosque in the Zeitoun district. Bound hand and foot, he was guarded by one unarmed man. He asked the guard to undo his shackles so that he could go to the toilet, whereupon he pushed the guard and fled but was pursued by two other guards who demanded he give himself up. They fired three shots, the third one hitting him in the shoulder but, although bleeding, he carried on running until he reached a shop door. At that point, the police arrived and took Usama to Al-Shifa Hospital. When he arrived at the hospital, a doctor who knew him took him to the operating theatre to perform surgery. The doctors reassured Usama's relatives and transferred him to the intensive care ward. However, Internal Security men came in, entering through the radiology department and using the doctors' elevator. They took him on the bed from the intensive care ward to the lift. According to the medical report in my possession, they suffocated him: the report states that the cause of death was asphyxiation. Having suffocated him, they left him in the lift and asked one of the hospital staff to confirm whether or not he was dead ... The reason for my son's death was that he was a prominent member of Fatah. In 2006, he was kidnapped for three days ... I might add that, at 11 p.m., someone came and told me, 'We regret Usama's death but ask you not to appear in front of the media and we will consider him a martyr.' That person is well known. His name is Ahmed Atallah and he is in charge of the military judiciary. I refused, so they sent five or so armed and masked men in a car to warn me not to appear on television ... After my appearance on the satellite channels, the Hamas spokesman, Ihab al-Ghoussein, made a statement saying that my son had been killed as a result of a family feud and that there would be an investigation. Subsequently, Taher al-Nunu came on and said that Usama's murder was due to a family feud and that there would be an investigation".<sup>82</sup>

C. Extralegal execution in the Gaza Strip in the light of international human rights law

1. Commitments deriving from instruments aimed at countering extralegal execution

432. Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/50 on safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty, adopted on 25 May 1984, affirms the need for States to observe all the legal safeguards in respect of the death penalty and the conditions of its implementation. Paragraphs 4 to 9 of the annex to that resolution provide as follows:

4. Capital punishment may be imposed only when the guilt of the person charged is based upon clear and convincing evidence leaving no room for an alternative explanation of the facts.

<sup>82</sup> Statement documented by the Commission and registered as No. q-ghayn-23/2010.

5. Capital punishment may only be carried out pursuant to a final judgement rendered by a competent court after legal process which gives all possible safeguards to ensure a fair trial, at least equal to those contained in article 14 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, including the right of anyone suspected of or charged with a crime for which capital punishment may be imposed to adequate legal assistance at all stages of the proceedings.
6. Anyone sentenced to death shall have the right to appeal to a court of higher jurisdiction, and steps should be taken to ensure that such appeals shall become mandatory.
7. Anyone sentenced to death shall have the right to seek pardon, or commutation of sentence; pardon or commutation of sentence may be granted in all cases of capital punishment.
8. Capital punishment shall not be carried out pending any appeal or other recourse procedure or other proceeding relating to pardon or commutation of the sentence.
9. Where capital punishment occurs, it shall be carried out so as to inflict the minimum possible suffering.

433. As is evident, those provisions and principles establish a set of safeguards — safeguards which must be granted to the accused to enable him to defend himself and counter any violation of or arbitrary action against his rights.

434. Moreover, the tenets and provisions of international law categorically and unequivocally prohibit any authority, whether a civil authority in an independent region and State or a military authority in an occupied territory, from carrying out physical elimination, premeditated killing and the arbitrary and extralegal execution of individuals, regardless of the reasons and motives for doing so, and regardless of whether the authorities seek to inflict punishment for specific actions and practices or the intent is to take revenge, retaliate or deter and terrorize the population.

435. The Principles on the Effective Prevention and Investigation of Extra-legal, Arbitrary and Summary Executions, annexed to Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/65 of 24 May 1989, state that Governments shall prohibit by law all extra-legal, arbitrary and summary executions and shall ensure that any such executions are recognized as offences under their criminal laws, and are punishable by appropriate penalties which take into account the seriousness of such offences. Exceptional circumstances including a state of war or threat of war, internal political instability or any other public emergency may not be invoked as a justification of such executions.

436. Paragraph 2 of the Principles states that, in order to prevent extra-legal, arbitrary and summary executions, Governments shall ensure strict control, including a clear chain of command over all officials responsible for apprehension, arrest, detention, custody and imprisonment, as well as those officials authorized by law to use force and firearms.

437. The Principles set forth other provisions, including:

- Governments shall ensure that persons deprived of their liberty are held in officially recognized places of custody, and that accurate information on their custody and whereabouts, including transfers, is made promptly available to their relatives and lawyer or other persons of confidence.
- Qualified inspectors, including medical personnel, or an equivalent independent authority, shall conduct inspections in places of custody on a regular basis, and be empowered to undertake unannounced inspections on their own initiative, with full guarantees of independence in the exercise of this function. The inspectors shall have unrestricted access to all persons in such places of custody, as well as to all their records.

- Governments shall make every effort to prevent extra-legal, arbitrary and summary executions through measures such as diplomatic intercession, improved access of complainants to intergovernmental and judicial bodies, and public denunciation. Intergovernmental mechanisms shall be used to investigate reports of any such executions and to take effective action against such practices. Governments, including those of countries where extra-legal, arbitrary and summary executions are reasonably suspected to occur, shall cooperate fully in international investigations on the subject.
- There shall be a thorough, prompt and impartial investigation of all suspected cases of extra-legal, arbitrary and summary executions, including cases where complaints by relatives or other reliable reports suggest unnatural death in the above circumstances. Governments shall maintain investigative offices and procedures to undertake such inquiries ... [The investigation] shall include an adequate autopsy, collection and analysis of all physical and documentary evidence, and statements from witnesses. The investigation shall distinguish between natural death, accidental death, suicide and homicide.
- The investigative authority shall have the power to obtain all the information necessary to the inquiry. Those persons conducting the investigation shall have at their disposal all the necessary budgetary and technical resources for effective investigation. They shall also have the authority to oblige officials allegedly involved in any such executions to appear and testify. The same shall apply to any witness. To this end, they shall be entitled to issue summons to witnesses, including the officials allegedly involved, and to demand the production of evidence.
- ... Governments shall pursue investigations through an independent commission of inquiry or similar procedure. Members of such a commission shall be chosen for their recognized impartiality, competence and independence as individuals. In particular, they shall be independent of any institution, agency or person that may be the subject of the inquiry. The commission shall have the authority to obtain all information necessary to the inquiry and shall conduct the inquiry as provided for under these Principles.
- Complainants, witnesses, those conducting the investigation and their families shall be protected from violence, threats of violence or any other form of intimidation. Those potentially implicated in extra-legal, arbitrary or summary executions shall be removed from any position of control or power, whether direct or indirect, over complainants, witnesses and their families, as well as over those conducting investigations.
- Governments shall ensure that persons identified by the investigation as having participated in extra-legal, arbitrary or summary executions in any territory under their jurisdiction are brought to justice. Governments shall either bring such persons to justice or cooperate to extradite any such persons to other countries wishing to exercise jurisdiction. This principle shall apply irrespective of who and where the perpetrators or the victims are, their nationalities or where the offence was committed.

- ... an order from a superior officer or a public authority may not be invoked as a justification for extra-legal, arbitrary or summary executions. Superiors, officers or other public officials may be held responsible for acts committed by officials under their hierarchical authority if they had a reasonable opportunity to prevent such acts. In no circumstances, including a state of war, siege or other public emergency, shall blanket immunity from prosecution be granted to any person allegedly involved in extra-legal, arbitrary or summary executions.
- The families and dependents of victims of extra-legal, arbitrary or summary executions shall be entitled to fair and adequate compensation within a reasonable period of time.

438. The Commission affirms that it bases its case on the sum of its findings on extralegal executions, the substance of the hearings and the safeguards to protect persons against such practices and crimes established by international principles and standards.

2. Failure of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip to prosecute and hold accountable the perpetrators of crimes of extralegal killing

439. The connivance of the authorities may, perhaps, be confirmed by the statement one woman made to the Commission: "... On 14 January 2009, during the war ... I opened the door to find masked men, one of whom entered the house ... They told me that they wanted Zahir. My husband's sister called to him to come to the masked men and I came down with my husband. They took my husband outside and, after a minute, I went into the street. I saw the masked men running away with my husband and I ran after them, screaming. The masked men went into the Bayyarat area and I returned home and then submitted a report to the police. The next day, we received the news that he had been found dead, his hands and neck bound, and was in the Kamal Adwan Hospital. The family went to fetch him from the hospital. I accuse Hamas of killing my husband. Two days after the incident, Hamas released a statement announcing that his death was the result of the war and that they considered him a martyr. We received threats by mobile telephone and were told not to speak about the incident. I know that it was Hamas men who killed my husband. Hamas held them in custody for two weeks. They made us give an undertaking not to interfere and that Hamas would hold them to account."

440. The lack of real accountability for the perpetrators of these violations in the Gaza Strip and the failure of the de facto authority to assume responsibility for protecting persons from such violations has led to the widespread incidence of extralegal executions. Those who carry out such practices know that they are immune and protected by the authorities from accountability or prosecution.

441. Accordingly, the Commission is of the view that the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must undertake to implement a policy of non-impunity and affirm that no person, commander, official or individual is immune from prosecution and accountability for crimes and violations committed against rights and freedoms.

442. The seizure of power in the Gaza Strip by the members of Hamas does not exempt them or members of affiliated armed organizations and groups from the duty of respect for the rights and freedoms of individuals, specifically, respect for the right to life and the impermissibility of punishing any person without a fair trial. They must also avoid infringements against the dignity and humanity of individuals and subjecting them to torture or other forms of degrading or inhuman treatment.

XI. Conclusions

443. After reviewing the status of human rights and freedoms in the Palestinian territories, hearing the accounts of Palestinian human rights organizations that document violations and monitor the human rights situation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and completing the investigation of all parties connected with the violations which the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission alleges were committed, the Commission came to the following conclusions.

444. Most of the arrests in the Palestinian territories of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are related to the Palestinian political situation. In the view of the Commission, arbitrary arrests are the result of the political split and the existence of two authorities, in the West Bank and Gaza, inasmuch as most of the arrests made in the West Bank target persons belonging to or associated with Hamas, its supporters and others protected by political forces or groups allied with or sympathetic to Hamas, while the arrests made in the Gaza Strip target persons belonging to or associated with Fatah, its supporters and others protected by political forces or groups allied with or sympathetic to Fatah.

445. Law enforcement officials in the security services in the West Bank and the security services belonging to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip do not, in most arrest and detention cases, comply with the rules on legal procedure; furthermore, detainees are subjected to ill-treatment and cruelty.

446. Law enforcement officials in the security services in the West Bank and the security services belonging to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip do not fulfil the legal requirement whereby detainees must be transferred to the Public Prosecutor within the statutory time limits, as prescribed by the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure.

447. Civilian detainees are brought before the military judiciary in both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

448. In many cases the security services in the West Bank ignore and fail to execute civil court release orders or execute those orders fraudulently.

449. Detainees are subjected to torture and other forms of humiliating and degrading treatment, as a means of extracting confessions from them regarding acts ascribed to them or to others, both by the security services in the West Bank and by the security services of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

450. Cases of direct killing and extrajudicial execution by law enforcement agencies, or by armed groups connected to the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip, targeting persons accused of committing certain acts or sentenced by the military and civil courts have been noted, as have cases of civilians being detained and then eliminated, after interrogation, by the agencies of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

451. Failure by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip to prosecute and hold to account those who perpetrate crimes of extrajudicial execution and the absence of real accountability for those who commit such violations have been noted, as has the shirking by that authority of its responsibility to protect individuals against such violations. This has led to the widespread occurrence of extrajudicial executions by individuals, who are reassured by the knowledge that they are immune and will be shielded by the authority from accountability or prosecution.

452. Various violations by official bodies, specifically, the Ministry of the Interior and the security services in the West Bank, have been noted in respect of the right to form associations, including the appointment of transitional committees comprising persons who are not members of those associations to run them in the place of elected association members. Cases of the Palestinian security services prohibiting associations from carrying out their work and threatening to arrest members of their boards of directors should they defy such prohibitions have also been noted, as well as other violations of the law;

453. A number of violations by official agencies, specifically, the General Personnel Council and the departments and directorates of various Palestinian ministries, of the right to hold a public position in the West Bank has been noted. The most serious of such violations is the cancellation of the appointment or the dismissal, by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank, of hundreds of persons employed in education and other public positions, on the basis of the political affiliation of the dismissed person, and the refusal of the security services to recommend their appointment. The security services of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip play a similar role when they carry out what are known as security clearance procedures, and determine appointments on the basis of a person's political affiliation;

454. A series of violations of press freedoms in the Palestinian territories, both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, were noted. The most egregious of these included the arrest, detention and interrogation of journalists by the security services on the basis of their journalistic work, in relation either to their political affiliation or to their publication of written, audio or visual material; the subjection of some of them to torture and degrading and humiliating treatment during their detention or arrest by the security services; and the prevention and hindrance by the security services of the practice of journalism either because of the political affiliation of the journalists or in order to prevent the journalists from publicizing or researching subjects which the security services did not wish to be investigated.

XII. Recommendations

455. In view of the foregoing, and following the completion by the Commission of its work pursuant to the legal mandate defined in General Assembly resolution 64/10, the Commission submits the following set of recommendations.

456. The Office of the Military Prosecutor and the military judiciary should be instructed to: refrain from taking decisions on the arrest and detention of civilians; discontinue the interference of the military courts in the affairs of the civil courts; and hand over all persons arrested and detained by the military judiciary to the competent civil courts.

457. The protocol of cooperation and understanding between the Office of the Public Prosecutor and the Office of the Military Prosecutor, concluded between the two parties on 28 June 2006, should be rescinded. Under that protocol, the Office of the Public Prosecutor granted permission to the Office of the Military Prosecutor to exercise the competence and powers conferred on the Public Prosecutor by law with regard to the institution and conduct of public proceedings in respect of the offences provided for in the Penal Codes of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

458. The security services of the Palestinian National Authority must respect legal requirements when exercising the powers to apprehend, detain and arrest and must not effect any arrest or detention without having obtained a prior judicial order. They must also observe the time limits relating to custody specified in the Code of Criminal Procedure; refrain from holding detainees or prisoners anywhere other than in the places designated for that purpose; and respect the sanctity of homes and private places, which they must not enter or search without a prior court order. The competent Palestinian authorities must also prohibit the exercise by the Military Intelligence Service of the power to detain and arrest with regard to non-military persons.

459. The Palestinian Office of the Public Prosecutor must make use of its powers to inspect prisons and places of detention under its jurisdiction in order to ensure that no unlawfully arrested person or inmate is held there, and must intervene to prevent detentions or arrests from being effected other than in prisons. The Office of the Public Prosecutor must also take action to prevent security service individuals, especially in the Military Intelligence Service, who do not have judicial police authority from arrogating to themselves the powers of those who do possess that authority under the law;

460. All law enforcement officials must respect and execute civil court orders relating to the release of detainees. The Commission has confirmed that some security services, including the Preventive Security Service, the General Intelligence Service and the Military Intelligence Service, refuse to execute civil court orders for the release on bail of detainees or persons held in custody. Such persons continue to be detained regardless of the civil court order for their release.

461. The arrest and detention of civilians by the Office of the Military Prosecutor and the military judiciary must cease, inasmuch as they constitute a clear and outright arrogation of the authority of the civil judiciary, in addition to depriving civilians of the right to appear before the appropriate court, as affirmed and guaranteed by national laws and international human rights instruments. Furthermore, the Commission is of the opinion that the arrogation by the Office of the Military Prosecutor and the military judiciary of the power to arrest and detain civilians has set a precedent for the exercise by all military security services of judicial police functions with respect to civilians, thus curtailing the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the Basic Law and the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure.

462. The Office of the Military Prosecutor and the military judiciary must cease the practice of trying cases that fall within the jurisdiction of the civil courts and relate to persons whose disputes and offences those courts are competent to try. That practice constitutes a clear attack on individuals' rights and freedoms, particularly in view of the fact that the Palestinian civil judiciary, through its highest judicial authority, namely, the Supreme Court, has affirmed in dozens of court decisions that the trial and arrest of Palestinian civilians by the Office of the Military Prosecutor and the military judiciary are unlawful and cannot be permitted.

463. All persons detained and arrested by the Palestinian National Authority and the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip who have not been brought before the competent civil courts must be released.

464. All forms of torture, physical abuse and ill-treatment in the course of interrogations and investigations must be banned. The Commission has established that the security services have gone to extremes in their use of all forms of torture and degrading treatment during the various stages of detention for the purpose of extracting information and inducing detainees to confess to acts or statements ascribed to them or to others.

465. The official authorities in the West Bank must discharge their responsibility to hold accountable and prosecute those who violate the law, whether by acts of arbitrary detention, by crimes of torture or other forms of cruel or degrading treatment or by violations of other rights and freedoms. Indeed, the Commission is convinced that the absence of effective and genuine accountability for those who have committed the crime of torture and the members of the security services who have broken the rules and regulations governing arrest and detention has helped to increase the frequency of such violations and been conducive to their occurrence.

466. The Palestinian National Authority must investigate all crimes of extrajudicial killing and execution that have taken place in the Gaza Strip, in order to ensure the accountability of those who ordered the crimes to be committed, those who instigated their perpetration and those who committed them. The perpetrators of the crimes must not escape punishment and must be held to account.

467. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must take the requisite legal steps to end raid, search and arrest operations by masked persons acting in violation of the law. It also has the obligation to bring to an end operations involving the arrest and detention of persons in places other than those designated by law.

468. The security services of the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must abide by the provisions of the Palestinian Code of Criminal Procedure which state that no arrest may be effected without a prior court order; that the sanctity of homes and private places must be respected and may not be entered without a prior court order; and that the permitted custodial time limits must be respected.

469. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must ban all forms of torture, physical abuse and ill-treatment in the course of interrogations and investigations. The Commission has established that the security services belonging to the de facto authority have gone to extremes in their use of all forms of torture and degrading treatment during the various stages of detention.

470. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must discharge its responsibilities under national law and international humanitarian law by prosecuting and holding to account those who violate the law, whether by extrajudicial execution, by acts of arbitrary detention or by crimes of torture or other forms of cruel or degrading treatment.

471. The de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must cease to refer civilians to military courts, for such referral constitutes a violation of the rights of the accused person, who must be tried before the appropriate court.

472. It is incumbent on the Palestinian National Authority and the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip to redress the situation of all public employees who have been dismissed from their posts by returning them to those posts in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and compensating them for the damage sustained, given that most cases of dismissal were based on political affiliation rather than professional grounds or grounds of competency.

473. The condition imposed by Government agencies in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip that an employee must obtain the approval of the security services as one of the requirements for appointment to an official post must be abolished, inasmuch as such approval is unlawful and constitutes a clear violation by Government agencies of the Palestinian Basic Law and the Civil Service Law.

474. The security services in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip must cease to arrest, interrogate and prosecute journalists by reason of the work they perform and must not hamper journalists in their work, inasmuch as such acts constitute a clear and explicit violation of the right to freedom of opinion and expression and freedom of the press, which are guaranteed under both national and international law.

475. Interference by the Ministry of the Interior of the Palestinian National Authority in the work of community associations by appointing transitional committees comprising persons who are not members of those associations to run associations in the place of elected associations members must cease, inasmuch as that practice is in violation of the law.

476. The Ministry of the Interior of the Palestinian National Authority must respect and execute Palestinian Supreme Court decisions that reverse official decisions in connection with the appointment of transitional committees to run associations.

477. The security services of the Palestinian National Authority must respect the work of community-based associations and cease to interfere in their affairs; moreover, they must not close them, search them or seize their assets without valid legal grounds.

478. The Palestinian National Authority and the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip must ensure that all victims of violations of human rights and freedoms receive compensation and justice proportionate to the degree and gravity of those violations.

479. With respect to torture and other forms of degrading treatment, the competent Palestinian authorities must remedy the shortcomings and deficiencies of penal legislation in the Palestinian territory by adopting clear legislative texts that criminalize and punish such practices in a manner that is in keeping with their gravity. The Commission deems it necessary for such laws to be consistent with the provisions of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which entered into force in 1987, because that Convention is a peremptory legal reference that must be respected and applied by all who are subject to international law.

480. The Palestinian National Authority should form a Palestinian committee of judicial authorities, civil society organizations and official bodies to follow up the implementation of the present recommendations.

481. Palestinian combatants, in their armed struggle to obtain their legitimate right of self-determination, must respect the rules governing the behaviour of combatants during fighting established in the principles and provisions of international humanitarian law and public international law and comply fully with the guarantees and principles pertaining to the protection of civilians in international armed conflicts laid down in those rules.

482. The United Nations must discharge its legal responsibility to ensure that the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, freedom and liberation from Israeli occupation and hegemony is implemented, because the continuation of the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory has resulted not only in the denial of the collective rights of the Palestinian people, but also in the abandonment and disappearance of the human rights and freedoms of Palestinians, who are subjected at every turn to the erosion of their dignity and humanity by the acts and practices of the occupier, including murder, disappearance, banishment, confiscation of property, prevention of movement and travel, and the oppressive siege of the Gaza Strip.

Annexes

1 to 22 to the report of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report: violations allegedly committed by Palestinians

Contents

No.	Subject	Date	Page
1.	General Assembly resolution 64/10	1 December 2009	179
2.	Decree of the President of the Palestinian National Authority establishing the Commission	25 January 2010	181
3.	Statute of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission	7 February 2010	183
4.	Resignation of Commission member Mr. Nasser Al-Rayyes and acceptance thereof	7 February 2010	193
5.	Requests to provide the Commission with documented reports of human rights violations falling within the scope of its mandate, sent to the following non-governmental organizations:		194
	The Independent Commission for Human Rights	14 March 2010	194
	Al-Haq	14 March 2010	194
	The Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights	14 March 2010	194
	The Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre	14 March 2010	194
	The Democracy and Workers' Rights Centre	14 March 2010	194
6.	Letter to Mr. Omar Qinawi, Deputy Chief of Egyptian Intelligence	3 April 2010	200
7.	Letter to Mr. Ahmed ben Helli, Deputy Secretary-General of the League of Arab States	3 April 2010	201
8.	Copy of the notice placed in newspapers by the Commission in April	April 2010	202
9.	Press conference held by the Commission and press release	8 April 2010	204
10.	Invitation to the Change and Reform Bloc to meet the Commission	13 April 2010	209
11.	Request to the Secretary-General of the Legislative Council to arrange a meeting with representatives of the parliamentary blocs and lists, and with the coordinators of the parliamentary groups	13 April 2010	210
12.	Letters to the following rights organizations requesting them to post the Commission's notice on their websites:	13 April 2010	211
	Gaza Mental Health Centre		211
	Committee for the Defence of Rights and Freedoms		211
	Independent Commission for Human Rights		211
	Red Cross, Gaza		211
	Al-Mezan Centre for Human Rights		211
	United Nations, Gaza		211
	Palestinian Centre for Human Rights		211
	Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights		211
13.	Covering letter from the Minister of the Interior of the Palestinian National Authority enclosing a report on claims regarding the Ministry of the Interior	15 April 2010	220

No.	Subject	Date	Page
14.	Request to the Samir Kassir Foundation to provide the Commission with its documentation on violations of press freedom	18 April 2010	221
15.	Letter to the Independent Commission for Human Rights concerning coordination of hearings with victims of and witnesses to violations involving murder/arrest and torture in the Gaza Strip to be conducted by videoconference at the offices of the Independent Commission for Human Rights in Ramallah and Gaza	28 April 2010	222
16.	Letter to the Chairman of the General Personnel Council, requesting a copy of the security directives issued by the Council of Ministers, and the response	2 May 2010	223
17.	Letter to the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers, requesting that the Commission should be provided with security resolutions relating to public sector employees, and the response	2 May 2010	226
18.	Invitation to community organizations in the West Bank to attend hearings at the headquarters of the Commission:	17 May 2010	229
	Palestinian Network of Non-Governmental Organizations		229
	Independent Commission for Human Rights		229
	Al-Haq		229
	Democracy and Workers' Rights Centre		229
	Jerusalem Legal Aid Centre		229
	Al-Dameer Association		229
	Treatment and Rehabilitation Centre for Victims of Torture		229
19.	Letter from the United Nations concerning the date for delivery of the report	4 June 2010	237
20.	Invitation to the Director of Public Relations and Non-Governmental Organization Affairs, Ministry of the Interior, to attend a hearing	7 June 2010	240
21.	Invitation to the Minister of the Interior to attend a hearing	8 June 2010	241
22.	Letter to the Governor of the Palestine Monetary Authority requesting the legal basis for procedures for the opening of bank accounts by associations and the reply thereto	14 June 2010	242

Annex 1

General Assembly resolution 64/10

64/10. Follow-up to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the relevant rules and principles of international law, including international humanitarian and human rights law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,<sup>1</sup> which is applicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Recalling also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights<sup>2</sup> and the other human rights covenants, including the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>3</sup> the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>3</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,<sup>4</sup>

Recalling further its relevant resolutions, including resolution ES-10/18 of 16 January 2009 of its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolution 1860 (2009) of 8 January 2009,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council, including resolution S-12/1 of 16 October 2009,

Expressing its appreciation to the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, led by Justice Richard Goldstone, for its comprehensive report,<sup>5</sup>

Affirming the obligation of all parties to respect international humanitarian law and international human rights law,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians, and reaffirming the obligation to ensure the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Gravely concerned by reports regarding serious human rights violations and grave breaches of international humanitarian law committed during the Israeli military operations in the Gaza Strip that were launched on 27 December 2008, including the findings of the Fact-Finding Mission and of the Board of Inquiry convened by the Secretary-General,<sup>6</sup>

Condemning all targeting of civilians and civilian infrastructure and institutions, including United Nations facilities,

<sup>1</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

<sup>2</sup> Resolution 217 A (III).

<sup>3</sup> See resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>4</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1577, No. 27531.

<sup>5</sup> A/HRC/12/48.

<sup>6</sup> A/63/855-S/2009/250.

Stressing the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in order to prevent impunity, ensure justice, deter further violations and promote peace,

Convinced that achieving a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

1. Endorses the report of the Human Rights Council on its twelfth special session, held on 15 and 16 October 2009;<sup>7</sup>

2. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict<sup>5</sup> to the Security Council;

3. Calls upon the Government of Israel to take all appropriate steps, within a period of three months, to undertake investigations that are independent, credible and in conformity with international standards into the serious violations of international humanitarian and international human rights law reported by the Fact-Finding Mission, towards ensuring accountability and justice;

4. Urges, in line with the recommendation of the Fact-Finding Mission, the undertaking by the Palestinian side, within a period of three months, of investigations that are independent, credible and in conformity with international standards into the serious violations of international humanitarian and international human rights law reported by the Fact-Finding Mission, towards ensuring accountability and justice;

5. Recommends that the Government of Switzerland, in its capacity as depositary of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War,<sup>1</sup> undertake as soon as possible the steps necessary to reconvene a Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to ensure its respect in accordance with article 1;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly, within a period of three months, on the implementation of the present resolution, with a view to the consideration of further action, if necessary, by the relevant United Nations organs and bodies, including the Security Council;

7. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

*39th plenary meeting
5 November 2009*

---

<sup>7</sup> A/64/53/Add.1.

Annex 2*Decree of the President of the Palestinian National Authority establishing the Commission*Decree No. ( ) 2010*Concerning the formation of an independent commission to follow up the Goldstone report

The President of the State of Palestine,
Chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization Executive Committee,
President of the Palestinian National Authority,

On the basis of the provisions of the Amended Basic Law of 2003 and its amendments,

Having considered the Decision of the Prime Minister dated 14 January 2010,

Having considered also the Goldstone report,

By virtue of the powers with which he is invested, and in the interests of the public, has decided as follows:

Article 1

To form an independent commission to follow up implementation of the recommendations made in the Goldstone report with respect to the Palestinian National Authority, composed of the following:

1. Issa Abu Sharar, Chairman
2. Zuhair al-Surani, member
3. Ghassan Farmand, member
4. Yasser al-Amuri, member
5. Nasser Rayyes, member

Article 2

1. To authorize that Commission to undertake the investigative duties and responsibilities required of it pursuant to the Goldstone report, and to work in accordance with the timetable provided for in that report.
2. The Commission shall submit its recommendations and the outcome of its work to the relevant authorities.

Article 3

The Commission shall appoint the experts and specialists it considers most appropriate to assist it in performing its duties.

Article 4

All relevant official and unofficial parties shall cooperate with the Commission and provide it with all the facilities and information necessary for it to perform its duties.

Article 5

All the relevant parties shall implement the provisions of this Decree with effect from its publication. The Decree shall be published in the Official Gazette.

Ramallah, 25 January 2010

(Signed) Mahmoud Abbas
President of the State of Palestine
Chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization Executive Committee
President of the Palestinian National Authority

Annex 3

Statute of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission

Statute of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Pursuant to the decree of the President of Palestine issued on 25 January 2010 on the establishment of an independent investigation commission of inquiry in follow-up to the Goldstone report, and having considered United Nations General Assembly resolution 64/254; and the report of the Fact-Finding Mission headed by Justice Richard Goldstone that was established by the Human Rights Council with a view to investigating the facts in connection with the recent conflict in Gaza; and the international standards and principles governing the rules and procedures used for investigations into violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law,

The Commission adopts the following Statute:

Part I

Headquarters and mandate of the Commission

Headquarters of the Commission

Article 1

1. The headquarters of the Commission shall be in the city of Ramallah.
2. Unless otherwise decided, the Commission shall hold its meetings at its headquarters.
3. The Commission shall perform its functions and exercise its authority in the manner set forth in the present Statute, both within and beyond the Palestinian territories, as required.

Language of the Commission

Article 2

Arabic shall be the official language of the Commission and its working groups.

Mandate of the Commission

Article 3

1. The Commission shall be an independent legal person and shall enjoy the legal competence necessary for the performance of its functions and the fulfilment of its objectives.
2. The Commission shall perform its mandate to investigate the Palestinian contraventions and violations referred to in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission that was established by the Human Rights Council and headed by Justice Richard Goldstone.

Competence of the Commission ratione loci and *ratione materiae

Article 4

The Commission shall perform its mandate and exercise its authority as specified in its Statute throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Limits of the competence of the Commission

Article 5

The Commission shall have no competence or jurisdiction beyond the Palestinian contraventions and violations referred to in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission that was established by the Human Rights Council.

Article 6

In the course of its duties, the Commission shall:

1. Investigate the violations attributed to Palestinians in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission;
2. Collect information, evidence and data related to its functions;
3. Record allegations or complaints of violations of human rights in the areas within its mandate;
4. Hold hearings;
5. Issue orders to obtain from official agencies such documents, papers, administrative orders, medical records and other sources of information as it shall deem necessary;
6. Summon persons and witnesses;
7. Make field visits to Government sites, detention centres and reform and rehabilitation centres;
8. Receive evidence and statements from witnesses and organizations located outside the Occupied Palestinian Territory;
9. Request any person or entity to submit to it any material in the possession of, held by or under the control of such person or entity, or anything else that the Commission regards as being relevant to the subject of the investigation or the hearing;
10. Take possession of any material or item connected with the investigation.

Legal framework governing the work of the Commission

Article 7

In the performance of its work and functions, the Commission shall be governed by the provisions of international human rights law, international humanitarian law, the firmly established and definitive principles of international law, the obligations of Palestine arising from its membership of the United Nations, the unilateral obligations of Palestine to respect and apply the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the body of domestic legislation in force in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

---

Part II*Legal personality of the Commission and the conditions of its independence*Acquisition and loss of the legal personality of the Commission

Article 8

The existence of the Commission as a legal person shall commence with the issuance of the Presidential decree on its establishment and shall terminate upon completion of the purpose for which it was established or upon its dissolution by the entity that established it.

Independence of the members of the Commission

Article 9

1. The members of the Commission shall be independent in the performance of their work and shall be subject to no authority other than the law.
2. In the performance of their work, the members of the Commission shall not accept any instructions, guidance or interference from any authority, entity or person.

Oath of office

Article 10

1. Before assuming his functions, every member of the Commission shall take the following oath: "I swear by Almighty God that I shall perform my work as a member of this Commission with complete independence, integrity and impartiality and that I shall respect the law and the Statute of the Commission".
2. The Chairman of the Commission shall take the oath before the other members of the Commission present, and the members of the Commission shall take the oath before the Chairman of the Commission.

Commitments by members

Article 11

Members of the Commission undertake to be ready at all times to respond to a call from the Chairman to attend a meeting. They undertake to attend all investigation meetings and hearings, in order to ensure the proper conduct of the work of the Commission, unless excused from attending by an unforeseen eventuality that is justified under the rules and principles.

Duties of Commission members

Article 12

No member of the Commission shall be permitted, while a member of the Commission, to engage in any work or activity that is incompatible with his duties in the Commission. Members of the Commission shall also be prohibited from making any announcement or statement or from participating in any activity or work likely to cast doubt on his independence, impartiality or integrity.

Resignation

Article 13

1. The notice of resignation of a member of the Commission shall be submitted to the Chairman.
2. The Chairman shall inform the members immediately of any notice of resignation he receives.
3. The notice of resignation of the Chairman shall be submitted to the Commission Rapporteur.
4. The resignation of the Chairman or of a member of the Commission shall take effect from the date on which it is accepted by the members of the Commission, and the member who has resigned shall be immediately informed of that date.

Minimum number of members of the Commission

Article 14

1. If a member of the Commission resigns, the Commission shall continue its work with the remaining members.
2. If the Chairman of the Commission resigns, the Commission shall meet in order to elect from among its members a new Chairman to replace him.
3. The minimum number of members of the Commission shall be three.
4. If the number of members of the Commission falls below the required minimum, the Commission shall cease to carry out its work until such time as the required number is restored.
5. The Commission shall transmit to the President of the Authority the names of the persons proposed for membership of the Commission.

Competence of the Chairman of the Commission

Article 15

1. The Chairman shall represent the Commission at the local and international levels.
2. He shall supervise the work of the Commission and its subsidiary bodies.
3. He shall supervise the smooth running of the administrative work of the Commission.
4. He shall chair the meetings of the Commission and guide its discussions.
5. He shall ensure that the provisions of the present Statute are applied.
6. He shall call to order and adjourn all the meetings of the Commission.
7. During discussion of any agenda item, the Chairman may propose to the Commission the establishment of a time limit for each speaker as well as a limit on the number of times a member may speak during discussion of a particular issue. He may also close the list of speakers.
8. The Chairman may propose the postponement or closure of discussions as well as the adjournment or postponement of meetings.

---

Rapporteur of the Commission

Article 16

1. The Commission shall elect a rapporteur from among its members.
2. If the Chairman ceases to be a member of the Commission or resigns as Chairman, the Rapporteur shall assume the chairmanship pending the election of a new chairman.
3. The election referred to shall be by secret ballot and the candidate who receives the greatest number of member votes shall be elected.

Part III

Investigation meetings and hearings

Quorum

Article 17

Meetings of the Commission shall be valid if a simple majority of its members is present.

Procedures and guidelines for meetings

Article 18

The Commission may adopt any directives, guidelines or procedures, either general or specific, with respect to investigation meetings.

Orderly conduct of meetings

Article 19

1. No person may speak at a hearing unless that person has asked for the floor and has received the consent of the Chairman.
2. The Chairman may not prohibit a person from taking the floor other than for a reason required by the present Statute; in the event of disagreement on that matter, the Chairman shall seek the opinion of the members of the Commission who are present and shall make his decision without discussion on the basis of a relative majority.
3. If a speaker uses inappropriate language or mentions a matter that is improper or incompatible with the Statute, the Chairman shall draw the speaker's attention thereto and remind him of his duty to observe the Statute and, when necessary, may prevent him from continuing to speak.

Attendance at meetings

Article 20

1. Hearings shall be closed meetings, attendance at which shall be restricted to members of the Commission and persons who are being heard.
2. Apart from members of the Commission, the meetings may be attended only by members of the secretariat, interpreters and persons assisting the Commission, unless the Commission decides otherwise.

Impartiality and independence of members

Article 21

If one of the members of the Commission considers, for personal reasons, that he should withdraw from participation in the investigation, he shall immediately inform the Chairman of the Commission, who shall be permitted to appoint another member to replace him.

Invitation to victims and witnesses

Article 22

1. With a view to hearing their statements, the Commission shall invite victims of human rights violations referred to in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission to meet it, and shall request them to provide proof and evidence in support of their statements.

2. The Commission may investigate any evidence or data that it regards as having a bearing on the matter and, where possible, shall carry out its investigation at the scene of the events.

3. The Commission shall decide whether the evidence and data submitted by the parties are acceptable and reliable.

4. It shall establish the conditions and procedures for the hearing of witnesses.

5. It shall hold its investigative meetings with at least two members of the Commission in attendance.

6. The Commission may send one or more of its members to the scene of the events to carry out on-site inspections.

7. The Palestinian authorities shall ensure that the members of the Commission and the persons accompanying them have the privileges and immunities necessary for the exercise of their functions.

Immunity

Article 23

Immunity and the special procedural rules related to the official status of a person, whether under national or international law, shall not prevent the Commission from exercising its competence with respect to that person.

Hearings of persons

Article 24

The Commission may hear the statements of any person if it considers that the person has something to say that is important and necessary for the performance of its functions.

Invitation and summons

Article 25

The Commission shall invite persons whose testimony it wishes to hear or summon them to attend by means of notifications signed by the Chairman of the Commission; such notifications shall specify the time and place for the attendance of the person to whom the notification has been sent.

Refusal to attend

Article 26

If a person who is requested to attend refuses to do so or to comply with the notification of the Commission, the Chairman shall be entitled to call on the competent bodies to undertake the necessary legal procedures to induce the person to respect the Commission's request.

Oath to be taken by witnesses and experts

Article 27

The Commission shall ask witnesses and experts to take an oath to be decided by the Commission.

Verbal complaints

Article 28

If a person is unable, on account of disability or inability to read or write, to submit a complaint or request to the Commission, that person may present a solicitation, request, complaint, comment or testimony by audio-visual or other electronic means.

Investigation records

Article 29

A record shall be made of statements made by any person being heard and shall be signed by the registrar of the hearing, the members of the Commission attending the hearing and the person being heard. The date, time and place of the hearing shall be indicated in the record as well as the names of all those present during the hearing. The record shall also indicate any failure by a person to sign and the reasons for such failure.

Sound and video recording

Article 30

1. Any person appearing before the Commission shall be informed, in a language that he understands and speaks well, that a sound or video recording will be made of the hearing and that he has the right to object to such recording if he so wishes.
2. If a person appearing before the Commission objects to the making of a sound or video recording, what is said shall be recorded in written form.
3. If the hearing is interrupted, the incidence and time of the interruption shall be recorded before the end of the sound or video recording, as well as the time when the hearing is resumed.
4. At the conclusion of a hearing, the person appearing before the Commission shall be given the opportunity, prior to the closure of the record of the hearing, to clarify anything that he has said.
5. When the sound or video recording of a hearing has been completed, the seal of the Commission shall be affixed to the original recording tape in the presence of the person who has been heard and signed by the members of the Commission present and that person.

Documents of the inquiry

Article 31

All the documents relating to any investigation shall be entrusted to the Rapporteur of the Commission and shall be inventoried and kept under his responsibility until the investigation is concluded.

Assistance of experts

Article 32

1. The Commission may decide to seek the assistance of experts or advisers as it may deem appropriate.
2. Persons whose assistance is sought by the Commission shall be subject to the instructions and directives of the Chairman.

Confidentiality of the information and documents of the Commission

Article 33

1. No member of the Commission may divulge any item of information, report or document obtained by the Commission in the course of its investigation and hearings.
2. Throughout the period of their assignment and after it has expired, the members of the Commission, those assisting the investigation, experts and other persons assisting the Commission shall be under an obligation to maintain the confidentiality of the evidence and information with which they become acquainted while carrying out their work.

Confidentiality of investigation evidence and documents

Article 34

The Commission shall keep photocopied records at its headquarters of all investigation documents and evidence it has obtained, and only the members of the Commission, during the period of their assignment, shall have the opportunity to study those records.

Establishment of committees

Article 35

The Commission may establish special working groups and committees with limited membership to assist it in the procedures of the hearings and the inquiry, the recording of facts, the gathering of information and documents and other matters arising from the performance of Commission functions.

Decisions of the Commission and quorum for voting purposes

Article 36

1. The Commission shall take its decisions by consensus.
2. Any member who objects or has a reservation with respect to a decision shall be entitled to record the reasons and justifications for his objection or reservation and the reservation shall be kept with the decision.

---

Part IV*Protection of witnesses and informants and protective measures*Protection of informants and witnesses

Article 37

1. The Commission shall provide the necessary protection and ensure the safety of victims and witnesses that provide information on violations who may face threats or have reason to believe that they may face threats or be interrogated or pursued by known or unknown parties.

2. The word “witness” shall mean anyone who has provided evidence or testimony, or will provide evidence or testimony, or who describes specific events that he witnessed; the protective measures shall be extended to all members of the family of an informant or witness and to members of his household.

3. The term “victim” shall apply to natural persons who suffer as a result of the perpetration of any crime falling within the scope of the competence of the Commission; the term “victim” shall also cover legal persons whose possessions have suffered direct harm or who have been prevented directly or indirectly from exercising their functions.

Protective measures

Article 38

Should the Commission be concerned that any actual or potential witness may be subjected to persecution, harassment or harm it shall:

1. Hear evidence in camera or in any place that the Commission regards as meeting the requirements of confidentiality and protection;
2. Keep the identity of providers of information and witnesses secret;
3. Avoid divulging or using evidence that is likely to reveal the identity of a witness;
4. Take any measures that the Commission considers appropriate in order to protect witnesses.

Relieving informants and witnesses of liability

Article 39

Victims who provide information on violations and witnesses shall be relieved of criminal, civil and administrative liability in respect of the events they have reported or the evidence they have submitted.

Prohibition on the calling of informants or witnesses to testify

Article 40

No party may issue a writ of summons to persons who provide information on violations, or to witnesses, and may not ask them to present testimony or submit information concerning their statements or the content or tenor of the evidence they gave to the Commission.

Part V

Final clauses

Preparation of the report of the Commission

Article 41

1. At the end of the inquiry, the Commission shall draft its report based on the outcome of the investigation it has conducted.
2. The Chairman shall submit the report to the parties concerned, together with all the recommendations that the Commission considers appropriate.
3. The Chairman shall record the date on which the report is sent to the parties concerned.

Implementing regulations

Article 42

The Commission shall issue such implementing regulations as it shall deem necessary in order to ensure the application of the provisions of the present Statute. It shall also issue financial and administrative rules concerning remuneration, allowances and expenses in connection with the performance of Commission functions, means of payment or reimbursement, and travel and subsistence allowances for those attending investigation meetings or to cover the cost of the travel and accommodation of the members of the Commission and the experts and officials accompanying them.

Commission documents

Article 43

1. Immediately after submitting its report, the Commission shall assemble and archive all its documents and records in special boxes which shall be closed and sealed with the seal of the Commission.
2. The boxes shall be kept by the Supreme Court of Palestine for a period of six months from the date of submission of the final report.
3. On the expiry of the said period, the boxes shall be opened and the documents and records of the Commission shall be destroyed in the presence of the Chairman and members of the Commission.

Amendments to the Statute

Article 44

The Commission may amend the present Statute by a decision of a majority of its members.

Annex 4*Resignation of Commission member Mr. Nasser Al-Rayyes and acceptance thereof*Al-Haq

6 February 2010

H.E. Mr. Mahmoud Abbas

Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization

President of the Palestinian National Authority

Subject: My release from the Commission which you established pursuant to the report of Justice Richard Goldstone

Sir,

I wish to begin by conveying to you my sincere gratitude for the confidence you displayed by personally choosing me as a member of the Independent Investigation Commission thereby conferring on me a juridical and national responsibility that fills me with pride. Unfortunately, however, the requirements of impartiality, objectivity and independence mean that I am unable to act as a member of the Commission, as it is clear to me from a study of the legal conditions set forth in the United Nations model protocol on national commissions of inquiry that national authorities, in establishing a commission of inquiry, have an obligation to ensure no commission member has close links with any member of the Government or Governmental entity, any political party or organization involved in the perpetration of the alleged violations or any organization or group connected with the victims which might impair the credibility of the commission.

I am a legal adviser to a Palestinian organization involved with human rights and freedoms and with monitoring and documenting possible violations of, and offences against, those rights and freedoms. In both my personal capacity and through al-Haq organization, I also have links with and am the legal representative of numerous persons and bodies that have suffered from attacks against their rights and freedoms. Moreover, I was one of those who took part in the meetings of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission chaired by Justice Richard Goldstone and testified on the situation of human rights and freedoms in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

On the basis of the foregoing reasons, and in order to safeguard the impartiality and independence of the Commission and leave no room for any criticism, diminution, prejudice or suspicion with respect to its impartiality or independence on the part of any entity, I am hereby submitting my request to be excused from serving on the Commission. Nonetheless, I remain ready, both as an individual and as the representative of an entity, to offer help, information and technical advice as well as any support and assistance that the Commission may need. Both I and the institution are confident that such support for the success of the Commission will enable it to achieve the objective for which it was established and which is a patriotic and juridical responsibility.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Nasser Al-Rayyes
Adviser to the organization Al-Haq

Annex 5

Requests to provide the Commission with documented reports of human rights violations falling within the scope of its mandate, sent to the following non-governmental organizations:

- The Independent Commission for Human Rights
- Al-Haq
- The Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights
- The Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre
- The Democracy and Workers' Rights Centre

14 March 2010

Ms. Randa Siniora

Executive Director, Independent Commission for Human Rights

Re: The establishment of an independent commission pursuant to the Goldstone report

Madam,

On 25 January 2010, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, and pursuant to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict that was headed by Judge Richard Goldstone, the Palestinian President issued a decree concerning the establishment of an independent commission to investigate Palestinian human rights violations cited in that report.

The Commission is chaired by Judge Issa Abu Sharar, and its members include Judge Zuhair al-Surani, Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser al-Amuri. It is investigating violations of human rights and freedoms that were committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will carry out its mandate to investigate violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank in the following areas:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture, that is to say, unjustified arrest on the basis of an individual's political affiliation;
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding such organizations;
- Violation of freedom of the press;
- Violation of freedom of assembly;
- Discrimination in the public service sector on the basis of political affiliation.

The following violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the Gaza Strip will also be investigated:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment

We at the Commission appreciate the outstanding role you play in defence of human rights and freedoms, and we hope that you will assist the Commission in achieving its goals by providing it with any documentation your organization has obtained of violations which fall within the scope of the Commission's mandate that occurred between 27 December 2008 and the end of March 2009. As part of its work the Commission will conduct a hearing with your institution, the time and location of which will be determined in due course.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

14 March 2010

Mr. Shawan Jabarin

General Director, Al-Haq

Re: The establishment of an independent commission pursuant to the Goldstone report

Sir,

On 25 January 2010, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, and pursuant to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict that was headed by Judge Richard Goldstone, the Palestinian President issued a decree concerning the establishment of an independent commission to investigate Palestinian human rights violations cited in that report.

The Commission is chaired by Judge Issa Abu Sharar, and its members include Judge Zuhair al-Surani, Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser al-Amuri. It is investigating violations of human rights and freedoms that were committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will carry out its mandate to investigate violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank in the following areas:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture, that is to say, unjustified arrest on the basis of an individual's political affiliation;
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding such organizations;
- Violation of freedom of the press;
- Violation of freedom of assembly;
- Discrimination in the public service sector on the basis of political affiliation.

The following violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the Gaza Strip will also be investigated:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment

We at the Commission appreciate the outstanding role you play in defence of human rights and freedoms, and we hope that you will assist the Commission in achieving its goals by providing it with any documentation your organization has obtained of violations which fall within the scope of the Commission's mandate that occurred between 27 December 2008 and the end of March 2009. As part of its work the Commission will conduct a hearing with your institution, the time and location of which will be determined in due course.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

14 March 2010

Ms. Sahar Francis

Director, Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights

Re: The establishment of an independent commission pursuant to the Goldstone report

Madam,

On 25 January 2010, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, and pursuant to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict that was headed by Judge Richard Goldstone, the Palestinian President issued a decree concerning the establishment of an independent commission to investigate Palestinian human rights violations cited in that report.

The Commission is chaired by Judge Issa Abu Sharar, and its members include Judge Zuhair al-Surani, Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser al-Amuri. It is investigating violations of human rights and freedoms that were committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will carry out its mandate to investigate violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank in the following areas:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture, that is to say, unjustified arrest on the basis of an individual's political affiliation;
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding such organizations;
- Violation of freedom of the press;
- Violation of freedom of assembly;
- Discrimination in the public service sector on the basis of political affiliation.

The following violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the Gaza Strip will also be investigated:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment

We at the Commission appreciate the outstanding role you play in defence of human rights and freedoms, and we hope that you will assist the Commission in achieving its goals by providing it with any documentation your organization has obtained of violations which fall within the scope of the Commission's mandate that occurred between 27 December 2008 and the end of March 2009. As part of its work the Commission will conduct a hearing with your institution, the time and location of which will be determined in due course.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

14 March 2010

Mr. Issam Aruri

General Director, Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre

Re: The establishment of an independent commission pursuant to the Goldstone report

Sir,

On 25 January 2010, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, and pursuant to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict that was headed by Judge Richard Goldstone, the Palestinian President issued a decree concerning the establishment of an independent commission to investigate Palestinian human rights violations cited in that report.

The Commission is chaired by Judge Issa Abu Sharar, and its members include Judge Zuhair al-Surani, Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser al-Amuri. It is investigating violations of human rights and freedoms that were committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will carry out its mandate to investigate violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank in the following areas:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture, that is to say, unjustified arrest on the basis of an individual's political affiliation;
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding such organizations;
- Violation of freedom of the press;
- Violation of freedom of assembly;
- Discrimination in the public service sector on the basis of political affiliation.

The following violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the Gaza Strip will also be investigated:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment

We at the Commission appreciate the outstanding role you play in defence of human rights and freedoms, and we hope that you will assist the Commission in achieving its goals by providing it with any documentation your organization has obtained of violations which fall within the scope of the Commission's mandate that occurred between 27 December 2008 and the end of March 2009. As part of its work the Commission will conduct a hearing with your institution, the time and location of which will be determined in due course.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

14 March 2010

Mr. Hasan Barghouthi

General Director, Democracy and Workers' Rights Centre

Re: The establishment of an independent commission pursuant to the Goldstone report

Sir,

On 25 January 2010, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, and pursuant to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict that was headed by Judge Richard Goldstone, the Palestinian President issued a decree concerning the establishment of an independent commission to investigate Palestinian human rights violations cited in that report.

The Commission is chaired by Judge Issa Abu Sharar, and its members include Judge Zuhair al-Surani, Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser al-Amuri. It is investigating violations of human rights and freedoms that were committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will carry out its mandate to investigate violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank in the following areas:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture, that is to say, unjustified arrest on the basis of an individual's political affiliation;
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding such organizations;
- Violation of freedom of the press;
- Violation of freedom of assembly;
- Discrimination in the public service sector on the basis of political affiliation.

The following violations committed by the Palestinian authorities in the Gaza Strip will also be investigated:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment

We at the Commission appreciate the outstanding role you play in defence of human rights and freedoms, and we hope that you will assist the Commission in achieving its goals by providing it with any documentation your organization has obtained of violations which fall within the scope of the Commission's mandate that occurred between 27 December 2008 and the end of March 2009. As part of its work the Commission will conduct a hearing with your institution, the time and location of which will be determined in due course.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 6

Letter to Mr. Omar Qinawi, Deputy Chief of Egyptian Intelligence

3 April 2010

General Omar Qinawi

Sir,

Allow me to begin by expressing our utmost gratitude and appreciation to you for graciously agreeing to meet in your office in Cairo on 27 February 2010 with the Chairman and members of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report. We noted your solidarity, your genuine interest in the Palestinian cause and situation, and your evident readiness to provide whatever support you can to assist the Commission in the successful completion of its tasks.

The Commission apprised you of its options for carrying out the portion of its work related to the Gaza Strip if the de facto authority in Gaza persisted in its refusal to allow the Commission to pursue its mandate to investigate violations attributed to the authority. Those options were as follows:

1. To appoint an independent working group composed of experts of proven integrity, professionalism and impartiality to carry out the Commission's tasks in the Gaza Strip. In order to strengthen the group's professional credentials, we proposed that it should be headed by Mr. Cherif Bassiouni, an individual who is trusted and recognized by regional and international parties for his professionalism and long experience in that kind of work.
2. To delegate the task of investigating alleged Palestinian actions in the Gaza Strip to Palestinian civil society institutions that monitor and document such violations.
3. In the event that the two preceding options were rejected, the Commission proposed that meetings with institutions operating in the Gaza Strip should be held in the Arab Republic of Egypt, in order to hear testimony on human rights violations attributed to Palestinians in Gaza, and meet some of the victims of those violations.

You expressed the readiness to communicate on the Commission's behalf with relevant parties in the Gaza Strip. We should like you to inform us what has been accomplished in that regard.

We reiterate our gratitude and appreciation for your efforts, and hope to continue our cooperation and coordination in carrying out the Commission's tasks.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 7*Letter to Mr. Ahmed ben Helli, Deputy Secretary-General of the League of Arab States

3 April 2010

Mr. Ahmed ben Helli

Deputy Secretary-General of the League of Arab States

Sir,

Allow me to begin by expressing our utmost gratitude and appreciation to you for graciously agreeing on 25 February 2010 to meet the Chairman and members of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report. We noted your solidarity, your genuine interest in the Palestinian cause and situation, and the evident readiness of both yourself and Dr. Amre Moussa, Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, to overcome potential obstacles to progress in condemning the violations and crimes committed by the occupier against the Palestinian people.

The Commission apprised you of its options for carrying out the portion of its work related to the Gaza Strip if the de facto authority in Gaza persisted in its refusal to allow the Commission to pursue its mandate to investigate violations attributed to the authority. Those options were as follows:

1. To appoint an independent working group composed of experts of proven integrity, professionalism and impartiality to carry out the Commission's tasks in the Gaza Strip. In order to strengthen the group's professional credentials, we proposed that it should be headed by Mr. Cherif Bassiouni, an individual who is trusted and recognized by regional and international parties for his professionalism and long experience in that kind of work.
2. To delegate the task of investigating alleged Palestinian actions in the Gaza Strip to Palestinian civil society institutions that monitor and document such violations.
3. In the event that the two preceding options were rejected, the Commission proposed that meetings with institutions operating in the Gaza Strip should be held in the Arab Republic of Egypt, in order to hear testimony on human rights violations attributed to Palestinians in Gaza, and meet some of the victims of those violations.

You expressed the willingness of both the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States and yourself to intervene in order to enable the Commission to carry out its work in the Gaza Strip, and we hope that you have succeeded in that endeavour.

We should like you to inform us what has been accomplished in that regard. We reiterate our gratitude and appreciation for your efforts, and hope to continue our cooperation and coordination in pursuit of our common goals.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 8*Copy of the notice placed in newspapers by the Commission in April*Notice

The Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report by decree of the President of the Palestinian Authority in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, announces that it is initiating an investigation into violations of human rights and freedoms that are alleged to have been committed in the West Bank and Gaza Strip between 28 December 2008 and 31 March 2009.

The Commission's mandate covers the following violations alleged to have been committed by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding those associations
- Violation of freedom of the press
- Violation of freedom of assembly
- Discrimination on the basis of political affiliation in the hiring and firing of employees in the public service sector.

The following violations alleged by the report to have been committed in the Gaza Strip will also be investigated:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment.

Any person who has been a victim of any of the above violations should file a complaint, either in person or through a relative or agent, with the Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report. The relevant forms can be filled out in person at Commission headquarters, or the complaint may be sent to Commission staff via fax, telephone or e-mail.

The Commission guarantees confidentiality, privacy, protection and immunity for all complainants and informants

Complaints may be submitted to Commission headquarters from any governorate in the West Bank or the Gaza Strip until 20 April 2010. Commission working hours are from Sunday to Thursday, from 9.00 a.m. to 4.00 p.m.

Address of the Commission: Ground Floor, Abraj al-Wataniyyah Building
Al-Quds Municipality Road
El-Bireh City

Telephone No.: 022410731, 022410833

Fax No.: 022410732

E-mail: ipalestinecgi@gmail.com

اللجنة الفلسطينية المستقلة للتحقيق وفقاً لتقرير غولدستون

اعلان

تعن اللجنة الفلسطينية المستقلة للتحقيق وفقاً لتقرير غولدستون، والشكيلة بقرار من رئيس السلطة الوطنية الفلسطينية، اعمالاً لقرار الجمعية العامة للأمم المتحدة رقم ٢٠٠٨/١٢/٢٨ ولغاية ٢٠٠٩/٢/٣١، حيث ستمارس اللجنة ولايتها في التحقيق بالانتهاكات للدعى بارتكابها طبقاً للتقرير في الضفة الغربية بالجوانب التالية:

- * الاعتقال التعسفي والتعذيب.
- * انتهاك حرية تكوين الجمعيات، واستهداف وعدم تمكين للنظمات الأهلية من ممارسة عملها، وعدم تنفيذ قرارات المحاكم المتعلقة بهذه الجمعيات.
- * انتهاك الحريات الصحفية.
- * انتهاك حرية التجمع السلمي.
- * التمييز على اساس الانتماء السياسي في التعيين وفصل الموظفين لعاملين على خلفية الانتماء السياسي.
- * كما ستحقق اللجنة في الانتهاكات للدعى بارتكابها وفقاً للتقرير في قطاع غزة والتمثلة بالأمور التالية:
- * القتل.
- * الاعتقال التعسفي.
- * التعذيب وسوء المعاملة.

على ككل شخص تضرر من الانتهاكات سالفة ان يتقدم بشكوى شخصية او بواسطة قريب او وكيل، الى اللجنة الفلسطينية المستقلة للتحقيق وفقاً لتقرير غولدستون، سواء بالتوجه المباشر الى مقر اللجنة، لتعبئة النماذج الخاصة بذلك، او عبر ارسال الشكوى بالفاكس أو الاتصال الهاتفي مع طاقم اللجنة ابو عبر لبريد الالكتروني.

تقدم الشكاوى في مقر اللجنة، من كافة محافظات الوطن في الضفة الغربية وقطاع غزة، لغاية ٢٠١٠/٤/٢٠.

عنوان اللجنة: مدينة البيرو، شارع القدس (البابية)، بنهاة أبراج الوطنية،
 لطابق الأرضي، هاتف رقم ٠٢٢٤١٠٧٣١ او ٠٢٢٤١٠٨٣٣ فا كس رقم ٠٢٢٤١٠٧٣٢
 البريد الالكتروني:

Copy of the notice placed in newspapers by the Commission in April 2010

Annex 9

Press conference held by the Commission and press release

Wattan Media Centre

At a press conference at the Wattan Media Centre, the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents an overview of its plan of work

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission held a press conference at the Wattan Media Centre, attended by Commission Chairman Issa Abu Sharar and Commission members Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser al-Amuri, to inform the Palestinian public of progress achieved since its establishment by presidential decree on 25 January 2010.

Judge Issa Abu Sharar, Chairman of the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report, underlined the Commission's independence, professionalism and impartiality as an investigative fact-finding Commission, and stressed that the Commission would not countenance any attempt to interfere with or influence its work. He noted that the Commission was authorized to receive complaints and hear testimony from the victim of any violations that fell within its mandate. The Commission also had the authority to interview any Palestinian official implicated in such violations.

Abu Sharar added that investigations would focus on violations committed by Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, including killings, arbitrary arrest, torture, violation of the freedom to form associations and to assemble peacefully, and discrimination on the basis of political affiliation in the hiring and firing of dozens of Government employees.

Abu Sharar also drew attention to attempts made by the Commission since its establishment to gain access to the Gaza Strip in order to report on the Palestinian situation in its entirety, as requested by the United Nations. In that regard, he affirmed that the Commission's mandate covered all Palestinian territory and that as an independent entity, the Commission was unaffected by the current political polarization. He stressed that the Commission's failure would have negative consequences for Palestinians and might even result in the establishment of an international commission.

Abu Sharar invited anyone who had been a victim of any violation in the West Bank or the Gaza Strip to file a complaint with the Commission. He stressed that all files would be handled confidentially, and that the Commission would protect informants and victims. The Commission Chairman commended the cooperation shown by human rights institutions in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip that had submitted data and reports on the human rights situation during the period that fell within the scope of the Commission's mandate.

Abu Sharar closed his remarks by reiterating that the Commission's work would be conducted with impartiality and objectivity, and would rely for legal guidance on international human rights law, international humanitarian law, the Palestinian Basic Law, and other legislation in force in Palestine.

Wattan Media Centre — Al-Maahad Street, Ramallah, Palestine — P. O. Box 859 Ramallah — Tel. No.: 02 2980053/02 2987412 — Fax No.: 02 2959253 — E-mail: wattanmediacenter@wattan.tv

Wattan Media Centre*Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report informs civil society organizations that it is ready to begin collecting complaints

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report, in accordance with a recommendation adopted at its thirteenth meeting, held at its headquarters in Ramallah on Monday, 12 April 2010, sent letters to non-governmental human rights organizations asking them to publish on the home pages of their websites the Commission's notice that it was ready to receive complaints.

Wattan Media Centre — Al-Maahad Street, Ramallah, Palestine — P. O. Box 859 Ramallah — Tel. 02 2980053/02 2987412 — Fax 02 2959253 — E-mail: wattanmediacenter@wattan.tv

7 April 2010

Press Release

On 25 January 2010, His Excellency the Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas issued a decree establishing an independent investigation commission pursuant to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict. The decree was in response to General Assembly resolution 64/10, which urged parties to set up national commissions to investigate the violations they are alleged by that report to have committed.

In response to that request, the Palestinian President established the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission, comprising the following members:

Judge Issa Abu Sharar (Chairman);
Judge Zuhair al-Surani (member);
Mr. Ghassan Farmand (member);
Mr. Yasser al-Amuri (member);
Mr. Nasser al-Rayyes (member).

The Commission defined its tasks and mandate with reference to the Goldstone report as being to investigate violations alleged by that report to have been committed in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Those violations include the following:

- Arbitrary arrest and torture
- Violation of the freedom to form associations, targeting of non-governmental organizations in order to prevent them from carrying out their activities, and failure to comply with court decisions regarding such organizations
- Violation of freedom of the press
- Violation of freedom of assembly
- Discrimination in hiring and firing of employees in the public service sector on the basis of political affiliation.

The Commission will also investigate the following violations which are alleged to have been committed by the Palestinian authorities in the Gaza Strip:

- Killings
- Arbitrary arrest
- Torture and ill-treatment.

In addition, the Commission will investigate violations of international humanitarian law that are alleged by the report to have been committed by Palestinians in the Gaza Strip during the Israeli aggression there.

As soon as it had been established, the Commission met with a view to discussing the nature of its mandate and competence and means of carrying out its tasks. In order to safeguard its objectivity, independence and impartiality, the Commission deemed it necessary to begin by drafting a Statute based on international norms and principles and, in particular, the United Nations model protocol for national commissions of inquiry.

With a view to ensuring transparency, credibility and impartiality, Mr. Nasser al-Rayyes recused himself from the Commission because his membership conflicted with the provisions of the United Nations model protocol for national commissions of inquiry, notably the provision that commission members should not be closely associated with any individual, government entity, political party or other organization potentially implicated in the alleged violations, or an organization or group associated with the victim. Mr. al-Rayyes had served as a legal advisor to Al-Haq, a Palestinian human rights institution that not only monitors and documents violations and infringements of human rights and freedoms, but had also been involved in the defence of a number of individuals and institutions whose rights and freedoms had been violated. Al-Haq was one of the institutions that had met the Fact-Finding Mission headed by Judge Goldstone, which had interviewed its legal advisor on the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. His resignation was accepted and the Commission decided to proceed with the remaining members.

After drafting its Statute and establishing its legal authority on the basis of the provisions and principles of international human rights law, international humanitarian law, the Palestinian Basic Law, and the relevant legislation in force in Palestine, the Commission decided to consider international precedents from analogous situations. It travelled to Cairo to meet Mr. Cherif Bassiouni, a renowned international legal expert who headed investigative commissions in the former Yugoslavia. The Commission discussed with him the specifics of its legal authority and ways of carrying out its mandate, particularly in the Gaza Strip.

While in Cairo, the Commission also met Mr. Ahmed ben Helli, Deputy Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, in order to discuss ways of enabling the Commission to carry out its work in the Gaza Strip. The following possibilities were open to the Commission in that regard:

1. The Commission would be permitted to operate in the Gaza Strip, given that its Statute made clear that it would conduct its work with the utmost professionalism and without being affected in any way by political considerations.
2. If that first option, which we considered to be the most professional and acceptable, was denied, the Commission would try to appoint an independent working group composed of experts of demonstrated integrity, professionalism and impartiality to carry out the Commission's tasks in the Gaza Strip. We proposed that such a group be headed by Mr. Cherif Bassiouni, an individual trusted and recognized by regional and international parties because of his professionalism and long experience in that kind of work.
3. The third option was for the Commission to delegate the task of investigating actions alleged to have been committed by Palestinians in the Gaza Strip to Palestinian civil society institutions that monitor and document violations.
4. In the event that all the preceding options were rejected, the Commission proposed to meet the relevant institutions in Egypt in order to hear testimony on human rights violations attributed to the Palestinians in Gaza, and meet Palestinian victims of human rights violations.

In view of the fact that the Commission received no response to its proposals, it has decided to conduct its tasks in accordance with the following timetable:

- (a) On 4 April 2010, the Commission placed notices in local newspapers that ran for two consecutive days, explaining the nature of its tasks and the violations falling within the scope of its investigation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The notices invite anyone who has been a victim of violations falling within the scope of the Commission's mandate in the West Bank or the Gaza Strip to file a complaint either in person or, if that was impossible, through a relative or agent. Given the obstacles to travel, the Commission decided to facilitate the process by offering victims the option of submitting their complaint via fax or e-mail.

- (b) The Commission has begun to gather and document reports, statements and letters from human rights institutions regarding violations falling within the scope of its mandate, and urges any Palestinian institutions that have documented such violations to contact the Commission and provide it with the relevant documents.
- The deadline for submission of complaints is 20 April 2010, after which the Commission will begin to study and analyse them.
  - The Commission will hold meetings with Palestinian human rights associations and local media institutions in order to discuss documented testimony and reports of violations alleged to have been committed by the Authority, and interview them about matters under investigation. Hearings will be held for the victims themselves to testify about their experiences.
  - After those hearings, the Commission will meet the Palestinian authorities in order to discuss violations alleged to have been committed by them and interview them on the matters under investigation.
  - At the designated time, the Commission will prepare a draft report summarizing its investigation of violations alleged to have been committed by the Palestinian side and making appropriate recommendations.
  - The Commission will then submit its final report to the competent parties.

Timetable for Commission activities in the Gaza Strip

- Given the difficulty of access by the Commission to the Gaza Strip and the political obstacles to fulfilment of the Commission's mandate there, it has been decided after consultations among Commission members to defer drafting an action plan and timetable for the investigation of violations alleged to have been committed by the authorities in the Gaza Strip until the League of Arab States responds to our request.

---

Annex 10

Invitation to the Change and Reform Bloc to meet the Commission

13 April 2010

Members of the Change and Reform Bloc

Re: Arranging a meeting with the Change and Reform Bloc

Sirs,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and, pursuant to a recommendation adopted at the Commission's thirteenth meeting that coordination of its work should be facilitated by holding a meeting with the Change and Reform Bloc of the Legislative Council, would be grateful if you could make arrangements for such a meeting to take place on Thursday, 15 April 2010 at 10.00 a.m. at Commission headquarters.

Accept, Sirs, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 11

Request to the Secretary-General of the Legislative Council to arrange a meeting with representatives of the parliamentary blocs and lists, and with the coordinators of the parliamentary groups

13 April 2010

Mr. Ibrahim Khreisheh

Secretary-General of the Palestinian Legislative Council

Re: Arranging a meeting with the heads of the parliamentary blocs in the Legislative Council

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and, pursuant to a recommendation adopted at the Commission's thirteenth meeting to facilitate coordination of its work by holding a meeting with the representatives of the parliamentary blocs and lists, and with the coordinators of the parliamentary groups, would be grateful if you could make arrangements for such a meeting to take place on Sunday, 18 April 2010 at 12.00 noon at Commission headquarters.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

---

Annex 12*Letters to the following rights organizations requesting them to post the Commission's notice on their websites:

- Gaza Mental Health Centre
- Committee for the Defence of Rights and Freedoms
- Independent Commission for Human Rights
- Red Cross, Gaza
- Al-Mezan Centre for Human Rights
- United Nations, Gaza
- Palestinian Centre for Human Rights
- Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights

13 April 2010

Mr. Eyad el-Sarraj
Gaza Mental Health Centre

Re: Publication of notice

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

12 April 2010

Mr. Adel Abu Jahal
Chairman of the Committee for the Defence of Rights and Freedoms
Palestinian Bar Association

Re: Distribution of notice

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at Palestinian Bar Association headquarters and distribute it to the greatest possible number of lawyers and others, with the proviso that the text of the notice must be adhered to.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

13 April 2010

Ms. Randa Siniora
Independent Commission for Human Rights

Re: Publication of notice

Madam,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

13 April 2010

Red Cross Headquarters

Re: Publication of notice

Sirs,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Sirs, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

13 April 2010

Mr. Issam Younis
Al-Mezan Centre

Re: Publication of notice

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

13 April 2010

Mr. Jamal Hamad, Spokesman
United Nations Headquarters
Gaza

Re: Publication of notice

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

13 April 2010

Mr. Iyad Alami
Palestinian Centre for Human Rights

Re: Publication of notice

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

13 April 2010

Mr. Khalil Abu Shammala
Al-Dameer Association for Human Rights

Re: Publication of notice

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments, and with reference to the above matter, would be grateful if you could display the enclosed notice at the headquarters of your organization and post it on the home page of your organization's website.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 13

Covering letter from the Minister of the Interior of the Palestinian National Authority enclosing a report on claims regarding the Ministry of the Interior

Palestinian Liberation Organization
Palestinian National Authority
Minister of the Interior

15 April 2010

Judge Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Sir,

Pursuant to the instructions of President Abu Mazen, please find attached the report of the Ministry of Interior concerning the claims regarding the Palestinian National Authority Ministry of the Interior set forth in the Goldstone report.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Said Abu Ali
Minister of the Interior

[Added by hand:]

On the basis of the Commission decision, we adopt the letter and attached report as a Commission document.

[signature illegible]

20 April 2010

Annex 14*Request to the Samir Kassir Foundation to provide the Commission with its documentation on violations of press freedom

Ref: ICGR/5/57/2010

18 April 2010

Ms. Giselle Khoury
Chairperson of the Board of Directors
Samir Kassir Foundation

Madam,

On 25 January 2010, in implementation of General Assembly resolution 64/10, His Excellency the Palestinian President, Mahmoud Abbas, issued a decree establishing the Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report, with the goal of investigating violations of human rights and freedoms, including violations of press freedoms, that are alleged by the Goldstone report to have been committed in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In view of our interest in investigating violations of press freedoms in the Palestinian territories by the Palestinian authorities in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, we would be grateful if you would kindly provide us with all reports and statements your Foundation has documented and issued on the status of press freedoms in the Palestinian territories between 1 January 2009 and the present date. Please note that, in the interests of transparency, professionalism and impartiality, the Commission report will credit your Foundation as the source of all the quotations or data taken from such reports and statements.

In conclusion, we express our deep appreciation for your pioneering role and effort in defence of freedom of the press and dissemination of the culture of democracy in the Arab world. We hope that we will continue to cooperate and coordinate in enabling the Commission to fulfil its duties.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 15

Letter to the Independent Commission for Human Rights concerning coordination of hearings with victims of and witnesses to violations involving murder/arrest and torture in the Gaza Strip to be conducted by videoconference at the offices of the Independent Commission for Human Rights in Ramallah and Gaza

28 April 2010

Ms. Randa Siniora
Executive Director
Independent Commission for Human Rights

Re: The holding of simultaneous hearings in the West Bank and Gaza Strip

Madam,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments and would like to inform you that it will hold hearings with a select group of victims of human rights violations in the Gaza Strip during the first week of May 2010.

Given the impartiality and credibility of the Independent Commission for Human Rights and its commitment to the standards of protection for those who report violations and to other international safeguards, and in view of the impossibility of travelling to the Gaza Strip, the Commission would like to hold those sessions simultaneously, via videoconference, at the offices of the Independent Commission for Human Rights in the Gaza Strip and in Ramallah in the West Bank, in order to make it possible for the members of the Commission to hear the victims of violations.

We would appreciate a prompt response, in order to enable the administrative team to arrange a timetable for the hearings that does not conflict with your working hours and commitments.

In conclusion, we express our deep appreciation for your pioneering role and effort in defence of human rights and freedoms. We hope that we will continue to cooperate and coordinate in enabling the Commission to fulfil its duties.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 16*Letter to the Chairman of the General Personnel Council, requesting a copy of the security directives issued by the Council of Ministers, and the response

Ref: ICGR/12/76/2010

2 May 2010

Mr. Hussein al-Araj
Chairman, General Personnel Council

Re: Providing the Commission with a copy of the resolution concerning the security check

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments and would like to request you to provide it with a copy of the directives issued to the General Personnel Council by the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers, pursuant to which a security check is considered to be an essential condition for appointment to a public position, in accordance with resolution 18, adopted on 9 September 2007 by the Council of Ministers.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Palestinian National Authority
General Personnel Council

Date: 6 May 2010

Judge Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Re: Providing the Commission with a copy of the resolution concerning the security check

Sir,

The General Personnel Council presents its compliments, and refers to your letter of 2 May 2010, in which you requested a copy of the directives issued to the General Personnel Council by the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers, pursuant to a security check is considered to be an essential condition for appointment to a public position, we attach a copy of the letter dated 9 September 2007 which we received from the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers concerning the above matter.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Hussein al-Araj
Chairman, General Personnel Council

Palestinian National Authority
Council of Ministers
Secretariat of the Council of Ministers

Ref: 2007/CSCM/2115

Date: 9 September 2009

Mr. Jihad Hamdan
Chairman, General Personnel Council

Re: Conduct of security check

Sir,

The Secretariat of the Council of Ministers presents its compliments and advises you of the resolution of the Council of Ministers adopted at weekly session No. 18, held on 3 September 2007, pursuant to which a security check is to be conducted as part of the appointment process. The General Personnel Council is responsible for the appointment process and must therefore liaise with the security services in this regard.

Kindly take the measures necessary to implement the resolution.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Saadi al-Krunz
Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers
Head of the Prime Minister's Office

Annex 17

Letter to the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers, requesting that the Commission should be provided with security resolutions relating to public sector employees, and the response

Ref: ICGR/2/75/2010

2 May 2010

Mr. Naim Abu Hommos
Secretary-General of the Palestinian Council of Ministers

Re: Request for copies of Council of Ministers resolutions that are pertinent to the Commission's work

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments and would like to request Your Excellency to provide it with a copy of resolution 18, adopted by the Council of Ministers at its session on 9 September 2007, pursuant to which a security check is considered to be an essential condition for appointment to a public position. We would also like to request you to provide the Commission with a copy of the directives issued by the Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers pursuant to that resolution.

Thank you for your cooperation and interest in enabling the Commission to fulfil its task.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Palestinian National Authority
Council of Ministers
Secretariat of the Council of Ministers

Ref: CSCM/2010/1000

Date: 11 May 2010

Mr. Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman, Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Re: Security

Sir,

The Secretariat of the Council of Ministers presents its compliments and, with reference to your letter of 2 May 2010 requesting a copy of the Council of Ministers resolution concerning security, we would like to explain to you that, in the course of its deliberations during session 18 on 9 September 2007, the Council of Ministers discussed security measures as one of the conditions for the appointment of staff, in accordance with the Civil Service Law. The Council considered that this measure is normal, and is applied in many countries of the world, given the sensitivity of work in Government establishments and the Government's desire to maintain the security and safety of Government establishments and departments, thereby enabling it to provide the population with optimum service.

Thank you for your understanding and cooperation.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Naim Abu Hommos
Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers

Palestinian National Authority
Council of Ministers
Secretariat of the Council of Ministers

Ref: 2007/CSCM/2115

Date: 9 September 2009

Mr. Jihad Hamdan
Chairman, General Personnel Council

Re: Conduct of security check

Sir,

The Secretariat of the Council of Ministers presents its compliments and advises you of the resolution of the Council of Ministers adopted at weekly session No. 18, held on 3 September 2007, pursuant to which a security check is to be conducted as part of the appointment process. The General Personnel Council is responsible for the appointment process and must therefore liaise with the security services in this regard.

Kindly take the measures necessary to implement the resolution.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Saadi al-Krunz
Secretary-General of the Council of Ministers
Head of the Prime Minister's Office

Annex 18

Invitation to community organizations in the West Bank to attend hearings at the headquarters of the Commission:

- Palestinian Network of Non-Governmental Organizations
- Independent Commission for Human Rights
- Al-Haq
- Democracy and Workers' Rights Centre
- Jerusalem Legal Aid Centre
- Al-Dameer Association
- Treatment and Rehabilitation Centre for Victims of Torture

17 May 2010

Coordinating Committee of the Palestinian Network of Non-Governmental Organizations

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with your organization concerning violations of human rights

Ladies and Gentlemen,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by your organization to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 10 a.m. on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Ladies and Gentlemen, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

17 May 2010

Ms. Randa Siniora

Director-General of the Independent Commission for Human Rights

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with the Independent Commission for Human Rights concerning violations of human rights

Madam,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by the Independent Commission for Human Rights to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 10.30 a.m. on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

17 May 2010

Mr. Sha'wan Jabarin

Director-General of Al-Haq

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with Al-Haq concerning violations of human rights

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by your organization to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 11.30 a.m. on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

17 May 2010

Mr. Hassan Barghouti

Director-General of the Democracy and Workers' Rights Centre

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with the Democracy and Workers' Rights concerning violations of human rights

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by your organization to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 11 a.m. on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

17 May 2010

Mr. Issam Aruri

Director-General of the Jerusalem Legal Aid Centre

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with your organization concerning violations of human rights

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by your organization to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 1 p.m. on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

17 May 2010

Ms. Sahar Francis

Director-General of Al-Dameer Association

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with your organization concerning violations of human rights

Madam,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by your organization to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 12 noon on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

17 May 2010

Mr. Mahmoud Sahwil

Director-General of the Treatment and Rehabilitation Centre for Victims of Torture

Subject: Arrangements for a hearing with your organization concerning violations of human rights

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. Having concluded its hearings with complainants who alleged that rights and freedoms within the Commission mandate had been violated, the Commission feels it necessary to complete its investigation by holding hearings with civil society organizations, in order to take their statements on the violations allegedly committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank.

In view of the attention paid by your organization to monitoring, documenting and following up cases of arrest, torture, dismissal from employment, peaceful assembly and associations, the Commission wishes to invite you to come to its headquarters at 12.30 p.m. on Thursday, 20 May 2010, or to mandate whomsoever you may consider appropriate, with a view to hearing your organization's views. We also hope that you will provide us with copies of any relevant official correspondence and any replies from the parties concerned.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar

Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 19*Letter from the United Nations concerning the date for delivery of the report

Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations

New York, 4 June 2010

Top priority

Sir,

I have the honour to transmit herewith a letter dated 27 May 2010 from the United Nations Secretariat concerning General Assembly resolution 64/254, of 26 February 2010, entitled "Second follow-up to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict". In that letter, the Secretariat requests to be provided by 12 July 2010 with written information regarding steps that the Palestinian side may have taken or be in the process of taking with a view to conducting investigations that are independent, credible and in conformity with international standards into the serious violations of international humanitarian and international human rights law reported by the Fact-Finding Mission, towards ensuring accountability and justice. That information will enable the Secretary-General of the United Nations to prepare a report on implementation of the above-mentioned resolution, pursuant to paragraph 5 thereof.

Please take the necessary action, in order to permit us to duly relay the requisite information to the United Nations Secretariat by the aforementioned date.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Riyad Mansour
Ambassador
Permanent Observer

Please convey a copy to H.E. the Minister for Foreign Affairs

H. E. Mr. Salam Fayyad
Prime Minister

UNITED NATIONS  NATIONS UNIES

POSTAL ADDRESS - ADRESSE POSTALE : UNITED NATIONS N Y 10017
CABLE ADDRESS - ADRESSE TELEGRAPHIQUE : UNATIONS NEWYORK

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL CABINET DU SECRETAIRE GENERAL

REFERENCE:

The Secretariat of the United Nations presents its compliments to the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations and has the honour to refer to General Assembly resolution 64/254 of 26 February 2010, entitled "Second follow-up to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict".

In operative paragraph 2 of that resolution, the General Assembly:

"Reiterates its call upon the Government of Israel to conduct investigations that are independent, credible and in conformity with international standards into the serious violations of international humanitarian and international human rights law reported by the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission [on the Gaza Conflict], towards ensuring accountability and justice".

In operative paragraph 3 of that same resolution, the General Assembly:

"Reiterates its urging for the conduct by the Palestinian side of investigations that are independent, credible and in conformity with international standards into the serious violations of international humanitarian and international human rights law reported by the Fact-Finding Mission, towards ensuring accountability and justice"

In operative paragraph 4 of its resolution, the General Assembly:

"Reiterates its recommendation to the Government of Switzerland, in its capacity as depositary of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War,<sup>2</sup> to reconvene as soon as possible a Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to ensure its respect in accordance with article 1, bearing in mind the convening of such a Conference and the statement adopted on 15 July 1999 as well as the reconvening of the Conference and the declaration adopted on 5 December 2001".

In operative paragraph 5 of its resolution 64/254, the General Assembly:

"Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly, within a period of five months, on the implementation of the present resolution, with a view to the consideration of further action, if necessary, by the relevant United Nations organs and bodies, including the Security Council".

In order to assist the Secretary-General in fulfilling his responsibilities under this last paragraph, the Secretariat hereby requests the Permanent Observer Mission to provide the Secretariat by 12 July 2010 with written information regarding the steps that the Palestinian side may have taken, or be in the process of taking, further to the urging of the General Assembly in operative paragraph 3 of its resolution.

The Secretariat is sending similar notes verbales to the Permanent Mission of Israel to the United Nations and the Permanent Mission of Switzerland to the United Nations requesting written information regarding steps taken further to the exhortation and the recommendation of the General Assembly in operative paragraphs 2 and 4, respectively, of its resolution.

The Secretariat of the United Nations avails itself of this opportunity to express to the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations the assurances of its highest consideration

27 May 2010

Annex 20

Invitation to the Director of Public Relations and Non-Governmental Organization Affairs, Ministry of the Interior, to attend a hearing

Ref: ICGR/18/107/2010

7 June 2010

Ms. Fadwa Shaer
Director of Public Relations and Non-Governmental Organization Affairs Ministry of the Interior

Re: Attendance at hearing

Madam,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. As you will be aware, on 25 January 2010, in implementation of General Assembly resolution 64/10, the Palestinian President issued a decree establishing an independent commission to follow up the Goldstone report, with the goal of investigating infringements and violations referred to in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission headed by Judge Richard Goldstone.

The Commission, consisting of Judge Issa Abu Sharar, Chairman, and Judge Zuheir Sourani, Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser Amouri, members, was established in order to investigate violations of human rights and freedoms committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will exercise its mandate to investigate violations in numerous fields that were committed by Palestinian bodies in the West Bank, including violation of the freedom to form associations, the targeting of non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and obstruction of their work, and the failure to implement court rulings relating to NGOs.

In view of the fact that the Commission received a number of complaints alleging that the Ministry violated the right to establish associations, and given that the Commission has concluded its hearings with complainants and civil society organizations in respect of this matter, we hope that you, in the interests of the success of the Commission's work and accomplishment of its purpose, will report to the Commission's office at 10.30 a.m. on Tuesday, 8 June 2010, in order to enable it to hear your observations on the violations allegedly committed by the Ministry.

Accept, Madam, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

To cancel or arrange another appointment, please contact Ms. Maram Masruji,
telephone No.: 0598934224

Annex 21*Invitation to the Minister of the Interior to attend a hearing

Ref: ICGR/18/108/2010

8 June 2010

H.E. Mr. Said Abu Ali
Minister of the Interior

Re: The scheduling of a hearing at Commission offices

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. As you will be aware, on 25 January 2010, in implementation of General Assembly resolution 64/10, the Palestinian President issued a decree establishing an independent commission to follow up the Goldstone report, with the goal of investigating infringements and violations referred to in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission headed by Judge Richard Goldstone.

The Commission, consisting of Judge Issa Abu Sharar, Chairman, and Judge Zuheir Sourani, Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser Amouri, members, was established in order to investigate violations of human rights and freedoms committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will exercise its mandate to investigate violations in numerous fields that were committed by Palestinian bodies in the West Bank, including arrest and torture, violation of the freedom to form associations, the targeting of non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and obstruction of their work, failure to implement court rulings relating to NGOs and violation of press freedoms and the right to peaceful assembly.

In view of the fact that the Commission received a number of complaints and heard statements from persons and organizations concerning violation by the security services affiliated to the Ministry of the rights of detainees, some of whom were subjected to torture, and violation by the Ministry's department for NGOs of right to establish associations, we hope that Your Excellency, in the interests of the success of the Commission's work and accomplishment of its purpose, will meet the members of the Commission at the Commission's office at a time to be arranged with Your Excellency, in order to enable it to hear your observations on the violations allegedly committed by the Ministry.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman

Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Annex 22

Letter to the Governor of the Palestine Monetary Authority requesting the legal basis for procedures for the opening of bank accounts by associations and the reply thereto

14 June 2010

H.E. Mr. Jihad al-Wazir
Governor, Palestine Monetary Authority

Re: Request to provide the Commission with a copy of the Palestine Monetary Authority resolution that stipulates that the Ministry of the Interior must approve applications from associations to open bank accounts

Sir,

The Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to the Goldstone report presents its compliments. As you will be aware, on 25 January 2010, in implementation of General Assembly resolution 64/10, the Palestinian President issued a decree establishing an independent commission to follow up the Goldstone report, with the goal of investigating infringements and violations referred to in the report of the Fact-Finding Mission headed by Judge Richard Goldstone.

The Commission, consisting of Judge Issa Abu Sharar, Chairman, and Judge Zuheir Sourani, Mr. Ghassan Farmand and Mr. Yasser Amouri, members, was established in order to investigate violations of human rights and freedoms committed by the Palestinian National Authority in the West Bank and by the de facto authority in the Gaza Strip.

The Commission will exercise its mandate to investigate violations in various areas committed by Palestinian bodies in the West Bank, including violations of the freedom to form associations, which became apparent through our hearings with individuals and organisations. When we questioned the Director of Public Relations and Non-Governmental Organization Affairs of the Ministry of the Interior on certain matters relating to the stipulation by the Ministry of the Interior that associations must obtain the approval of the Ministry before they could be authorised to open a bank account, she stated that the measure had been put in place pursuant to a resolution of the Palestinian Monetary Authority, concerning which the Authority had officially notified the Ministry.

Kindly provide us with a copy of that resolution. The Commission also hopes that the Monetary Authority will explain the legal justification for that measure, if there is one.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report

Palestine Monetary Authority

Date: 22 June 2010

Justice Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report
Ramallah, Palestine

Re: Procedures for the opening of bank accounts by associations

Sir,

With reference to the above subject and your letter No. ICGR/12/111/2010 of 14 June 2010 requesting a copy of the Palestine Monetary Authority resolution which stipulates that associations must obtain Ministry of the Interior approval before the opening of bank accounts may be authorised, we have the pleasure to provide the following clarification:

1. The procedures for the opening of bank accounts in all sectors are regulated by instruction No. 9/2009 of 24 December 2009, clause 8/1/5 of which regulates the opening of accounts by associations on the basis of the provisions of the Banking Law. The approval of the Ministry of the Interior or Ministry of Labour, as appropriate, is required for accounts to be opened. That requirement is part of the framework for the regulation of the relationship between banks and the banking authorities and is consistent with the Money Laundering Law.
2. It is considered important to obtain Ministry of the Interior or Ministry of Labour approval of association accounts because of the need for the following:
  - (a) To ascertain that the association's registration remains valid and has not been cancelled or undergone change, particularly given that a bank account may be opened some time after the association has been registered;
  - (b) To ascertain the accuracy of the names of persons authorised by the Ministry of the Interior to sign on behalf of the association at the bank, any changes occurring thereto and the extent of the power to sign.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of our highest consideration.

[signatures illegible]
Palestine Monetary Authority

National Anti-Money Laundering Committee Financial Follow-up Unit Palestine

No: NALC/121/7/2010

Date: 6 July 2010

Justice Issa Abu Sharar
Chairman
Palestinian Independent Investigation Commission
established pursuant to the Goldstone report
Ramallah, Palestine

Re: Legal justification

Sir,

The National Anti-Money Laundering Committee presents its compliments, and having studied your letter No. ICGR/12/111/2010 of 14 June 2010, enquiring about the legal justification for the letter of approval for associations to open bank accounts, I have the pleasure to provide the following clarification:

The Basic Law guarantees and safeguards public freedoms, and legal provisions regulate the rights and duties of natural and legal persons, thereby ensuring legal stability and embodying the concept of a legal basis for the regulation of relations in society.

The crime of money laundering is transnational, which has prompted the international community to formulate international standards to eradicate that crime and protect society from its harmful effects. "Know your customer" is a first step towards combating money laundering and fostering transparency in the early stage of a relationship with a customer, be it a natural or a legal person. The Money Laundering Law, article 5, paragraph 1, grants the competent authorities the power to investigate the extent to which registered legal persons are transparent.

On the basis of the foregoing, and in order to promote the creation of a transparent environment, particularly in respect of the banking sector, and pursuant to the principles of jurisprudence and the rule which says, "the particular qualifies the general", article 6 of the Money Laundering Law (Law No. 9 of 2007), obliges financial institutions to identify and verify customers, whether natural or legal persons, by means of documents, data and official records. That requirement is set forth in detail in the annex to instruction No. 1/2009 concerning anti-money laundering issued by the National Anti-Money Laundering Committee. That instruction stipulates the requirements for dealing with natural or legal persons, which include a letter from the competent ministry identifying the authorised account signatories on behalf of an association, in order to ensure that they are vouched for by a trusted official body. That measure is held to be consistent with and based upon the provisions of the Law. Furthermore, under article 13 of the same Law, the supervisory authorities, of which, under the provisions of the law, the Palestine Monetary Authority is one, are granted regulatory powers to issue instructions on the rules for identifying and verifying natural and corporate customers.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Signed) Jihad al-Wazir
Chairman, National Anti-Money Laundering Committee

---

Annex III*Note verbale dated 12 July 2010 from the Permanent Mission of Switzerland to the United Nations addressed to the Secretariat

The Permanent Mission of Switzerland to the United Nations presents its compliments to the Secretariat of the United Nations and has the honour to refer to its note of 27 May 2010 requesting the Permanent Mission to report on steps taken by Switzerland in implementation of paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 64/254 of 26 February 2010 entitled "Second follow-up to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict".

In compliance with the specified deadline, the Permanent Mission has the honour to transmit herewith its report to the Secretariat.

Appendix

Status of the talks on follow-up to paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 64/254

1. On 26 February 2010, the United Nations General Assembly adopted resolution 64/254 entitled “Second follow-up to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict”. In paragraph 4 of the resolution, the General Assembly reiterated “its recommendation to the Government of Switzerland, in its capacity as depositary of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, to reconvene as soon as possible a Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to ensure its respect in accordance with article 1, bearing in mind the convening of such a Conference and the statement adopted on 15 July 1999 as well as the reconvening of the Conference and the declaration adopted on 5 December 2001”.

2. The General Assembly first recommended that Switzerland take such action on 5 November 2009 in resolution 64/10. In accordance with that recommendation, and in its capacity as depositary of the 1949 Geneva Conventions, Switzerland organized a round of consultations in Geneva in December 2009. The outcome of that round is contained in the annex to the Secretary-General’s report of 4 February 2010 (A/64/651). The preliminary consultations, in which only a limited number of actors took part, failed to reveal a dominant trend for or against the holding of a Conference of High Contracting Parties, or a view on the contribution to the civilian population affected of a reconvened Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention; in other words, it was uncertain what results could be expected for what issues. Switzerland had been encouraged to hold its own discussions on topics that could be addressed at such a Conference.

3. In order to implement the recommendations of the General Assembly and follow up the outcome of the round of consultations, Switzerland appointed an Ambassador on special mission with the specific task of managing the process. Switzerland also conducted deliberations on the topics that could be addressed at the Conference, bearing in mind that the Conference must be inclusive, constructive, consensual and conducive to a concrete result.

4. The question of access to Gaza emerged from the deliberations as a possible topic. Working with specialists in the subject, Switzerland devised an access regime and presented it through a series of talks in New York, Washington and Brussels. It transpired from those talks that the question of establishing a regime for access to Gaza should be distinct from that of convening a Conference of High Contracting Parties. The urgent nature of the situation in Gaza required a swift response on the part of the international community. A Conference of High Contracting Parties therefore did not appear to be the appropriate forum to consider the issue. It was also pointed out that the General Assembly’s recommendations to Switzerland applied not merely to the Gaza Strip but to the Occupied Palestinian Territory as a whole. With those concerns in mind, Switzerland continued its deliberations and identified two further topics that could be examined at a Conference of High Contracting Parties: the operationalization of common article 1 of the Geneva Conventions, and the legal issues related to situations of prolonged occupation.

5. In order to sound out the opinions of the High Contracting Parties and other interested parties on these topics, assess whether their positions had developed, and inform them of the steps it had taken since February 2010, Switzerland decided to hold another series of talks in Geneva from 25 June to 6 July 2010.

6. On that occasion, Switzerland held talks with the directly interested parties, other interested parties in the region, the permanent members of the Security Council, the outgoing and incoming Presidents of the European Union, the coordinators of the regional groups, and a number of High Contracting Parties from all of the regional groups. The League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights were all informed.

7. The talks were conducted in an oral and informal manner. At them, Switzerland reiterated its belief that a Conference of High Contracting Parties should be inclusive, constructive and consensual, and should not act as a platform for political accusations. The Conference should be aimed at promoting a significant improvement in the situation of the civilian population, and should contribute to strengthening international humanitarian law. Switzerland expressed those considerations and sought the views and ideas of the High Contracting Parties and other interested parties consulted. The positions adopted at the talks fell into three categories:

- (1) A first group was in favour of convening a Conference.
- (2) A second group was firmly opposed to convening a Conference.
- (3) A third group comprising a significant number of the High Contracting Parties consulted did not have a definitive opinion for or against the holding of a Conference, but expressed reservations concerning the added value of another Conference and feared that it could be used for political purposes.

8. In sum, once again the talks did not reveal a dominant trend for or against the holding of a Conference of High Contracting Parties. Nor did they clarify whether there was a prevalent opinion among the High Contracting Parties and other interested parties with regard to the content and modalities of such a Conference. However, it did become apparent that the third group would not be able to form a view on whether or not a Conference was necessary until it had a clearer idea of the possible agenda, modalities and outcome.

9. In order to conduct more in-depth deliberations on those questions and to engage in dialogue with all concerned actors, Switzerland was encouraged to continue the discussions through an informal working group. Switzerland will take the necessary measures towards that end as soon as possible.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
14 September 2022

Original: English

---

Seventy-seventh session

Item 69 of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights

Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel

Note by the Secretary-General****

The Secretary General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution S-30/1.

---

* A/77/150.

** The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent information.

Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel

Summary

The Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel hereby submits its first report to the General Assembly. The report addresses the Israeli occupation of Palestinian land, its purported de jure and discernible de facto annexation, the human rights implications for Palestinians and the legal consequences of such actions.

I. Introduction

1. In its resolution S-30/1, the Human Rights Council established an independent international commission of inquiry with a mandate to investigate, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in Israel all alleged violations of international humanitarian law and all alleged violations and abuses of international human rights law leading up to and since 13 April 2021.

2. The Commission is made up of three members: Navanethem Pillay (South Africa), Miloon Kothari (India) and Christopher Sidoti (Australia). Secretariat support is provided by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR).

3. In its first report to the Human Rights Council, at its fiftieth session (A/HRC/50/21), the Commission noted the strength of credible evidence that Israel has no intention of ending the occupation, has clear policies for ensuring complete control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and is acting to alter the demography through the maintenance of a repressive environment for Palestinians and a favourable environment for Israeli settlers. The present report will be focused on those elements with a view to investigating the human rights and legal consequences of the prolonged occupation, including whether, as part of its occupation regime, Israel has, to all intents and purposes, “annexed” wholly or partly the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and providing concrete recommendations to relevant stakeholders.

II. Methodology and cooperation

4. In its resolution S-30/1, the Human Rights Council called upon all relevant parties to cooperate fully with the Commission and to facilitate its access. The Commission is grateful to the Government of the State of Palestine for its continued cooperation with the Commission. The de facto authorities in Gaza contacted the Commission and indicated their willingness to cooperate. The Government of Egypt continued to indicate its willingness to cooperate with the Commission but has not yet responded to the Commission’s request to be given access the Gaza Strip through the Rafah crossing.

5. The Commission continues to regret the lack of cooperation on the part of Israel, along with its refusal to allow entry into Israel and to permit access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, despite the desire of the State of Palestine to allow the Commission to visit.

6. The report is based on interviews conducted with primary and secondary sources up to 31 July 2022, as well as on research, in-person and online discussions with stakeholders and submissions received following a call for submissions issued on 22 September 2021.

III. Applicable international law and the occupation regime

7. The Commission laid out the applicable international legal framework in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in Israel in its previous report to the Human Rights Council<sup>1</sup> and in its terms of reference.<sup>2</sup> The Occupied Palestinian Territory, including

---

<sup>1</sup> A/HRC/50/21, paras. 14–25.

<sup>2</sup> Available at www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/2022-01/TORs-UN-Independent\_ICI\_Occupied\_Palestinian\_Territories.pdf.

East Jerusalem and Gaza, and the occupied Syrian Golan are currently under belligerent occupation by Israel, to which international humanitarian law applies concurrently with international human rights law.

8. It is unclear in international law and practice when a situation of belligerent occupation becomes unlawful. While the origins of the situation are different, the International Court of Justice found in an advisory opinion that the continued presence of South Africa in Namibia was illegal. In addition, in examining the continued refusal of South Africa to abide by Security Council resolutions, the Court found that by occupying the territory of Namibia without title, South Africa incurred international responsibilities arising from a continuing violation of an international obligation.<sup>3</sup>

9. The occupation of territory in wartime is, under international humanitarian law, a temporary situation, which deprives the occupied Power of neither its statehood nor its sovereignty. Occupation as a result of war cannot imply any right whatsoever to dispose of territory.<sup>4</sup> Protected persons who are in occupied territory must not be deprived of their rights under international humanitarian law and international human rights law as a result of any attempts to annex the whole or part of the occupied territory.

10. A number of legal experts have identified several principles that, when adhered to, may be used to determine the legality of an occupation. These include whether sovereignty and title are not vested in the occupying power, the occupying power is entrusted with the management of public order and civil life in the occupied territory, the people under occupation are the beneficiaries of that trust in view of their right to self-determination, and the occupation is temporary.<sup>5</sup>

11. In the present report, the Commission focuses on two indicators that may be used to determine the illegality of the occupation: the permanence of the Israeli occupation, already noted in its previous report to the Human Rights Council at its fiftieth session,<sup>6</sup> and actions amounting to annexation, including unilateral actions taken to dispose of parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory as if Israel held sovereignty over it.

12. With regard to annexation, the Commission finds it important to distinguish between de jure and de facto annexation. De jure annexation is the formal extension of a State's sovereignty into a territory recognized under its domestic law (but not necessarily under international law). De facto annexation is a term that was used by the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory:<sup>7</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council Resolution 276 (1970), Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1971, p. 16, paras. 108, 109, 111, 115, 117–127 and 133.

<sup>4</sup> See International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), commentary of 1958 on article 47 of the Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War. Available at <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=C4712FE71392AFE1C12563CD0042C34A>.

<sup>5</sup> See Orna Ben-Naftali, Aeyal Gross and Keren Michaeli, "Illegal occupation: framing the Occupied Palestinian Territory", Berkeley Journal of International Law, vol. 23, No. 3 (2005), pp. 554 and 555. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 has identified the following test of illegality: annexation, permanence of occupation, not acting in the best interests of the occupied people and not administering the territory in good faith (see A/72/556, paras. 28–38).

<sup>6</sup> See A/HRC/50/21, paras. 69 and 70.

<sup>7</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, paras. 75–78.

The Court considers that the construction of the wall and its associated régime create a “fait accompli” on the ground that could well become permanent, in which case, and notwithstanding the formal characterization of the wall by Israel, it would be tantamount to de facto annexation.<sup>8</sup>

13. De facto annexation implies a gradual or incremental process in which it is not always clear at what point the threshold has been crossed. The transition involves establishing “facts on the ground” that are intended to be irreversible and permanent while avoiding any formal proclamation in order to evade diplomatic and political repercussions.<sup>9</sup>

IV. Nature of the control exerted by Israel in the territories that it occupies<sup>10</sup> and the situation inside Israel

A. East Jerusalem

14. Israel has applied its domestic law to East Jerusalem since 1967, through several dedicated laws, and it has also transferred ownership of land to the State to facilitate the expansion of its control and the establishment of Israeli settlements<sup>11</sup> on Palestinian land.<sup>12</sup> In 1967, Israel unilaterally incorporated 70,000 dunams<sup>13</sup> of Palestinian land into the municipal area of Jerusalem.<sup>14</sup> By means of a series of laws, Israel has also enabled its Government to transfer property rights from Palestinians in East Jerusalem to the State and allowed Israeli settler organizations to initiate eviction proceedings.<sup>15</sup> The designation of national parks has further served to expand Israeli-controlled areas and strategic contiguity.<sup>16</sup> Over one third of East Jerusalem has been expropriated for the construction of Israeli settlements, and only 13 per cent of the annexed area is currently zoned for Palestinian construction.<sup>17</sup> More recent developments, such as government decision 3790 (2018), have raised concerns that

<sup>8</sup> Ibid., para. 121.

<sup>9</sup> See A/73/447, para. 30.

<sup>10</sup> For the purposes of the present report, “the territories that Israel occupies” and equivalent terms are a reference to East Jerusalem, the Syrian Golan, Gaza and the West Bank outside East Jerusalem.

<sup>11</sup> In United Nations reports on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the term “settlements” is used in English versions and “colonies” in French versions. In the present report, the Commission adheres to those usages and will examine the legal terminology in the future.

<sup>12</sup> In accordance with the Land (Acquisition for Public Purposes) Ordinance of 1943, as amended in 1946. See Efrat Cohen-Bar and others, Trapped by Planning: Israeli Policy, Planning, and Development in the Palestinian neighborhoods of East Jerusalem (Jerusalem, Bimkom – Planners for Planning Rights, 2014). See also Ir Amim, “Settlements and national parks”, available at www.ir-amim.org.il; and Amnon Ramon and Yael Ronen, Residents, not Citizens: Israeli Policy towards the Arabs in East Jerusalem 1967–2017 (Jerusalem Institute for Policy Research, 2017), pp. 49, 50 and 56.

<sup>13</sup> The following conversion rates have been used for the purposes of the present report: 1 acre equals 4.04686 dunams; 1 hectare equals 10 dunams; one km<sup>2</sup> equals 999.64 dunams.

<sup>14</sup> See A/HRC/22/63, para. 25. See also Cohen-Bar and others, Trapped by Planning, p. 8.

<sup>15</sup> See Norwegian Refugee Council, “Legal memo: the absentee property law and its application to East Jerusalem”, February 2017; Amnesty International, Israel’s Apartheid against Palestinians: Cruel System of Domination and Crime against Humanity (London, 2022), p. 114; and Adalah, “The legal implications of land registration procedures implemented by Israel in East Jerusalem”, 14 July 2022, available at www.adalah.org.

<sup>16</sup> Terrestrial Jerusalem, “The strategic encirclement of Jerusalem’s old city – the emergence of a settler-controlled biblical realm”, 2022, on file, pp. 7 and 8; and Ir Amim, “Settlements and national parks”.

<sup>17</sup> See United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “The planning crisis in East Jerusalem: understanding the phenomenon of ‘illegal’ construction”, April 2009.

the Government of Israel is paving the way for the establishment of new settlements and further dispossession of Palestinians.<sup>18</sup>

15. To date, 14 settlements have been established in East Jerusalem with a total population of more than 229,000 persons.<sup>19</sup> The restrictive planning and zoning regimes in East Jerusalem, which have obstructed adequate housing, infrastructure and livelihoods for Palestinians, have contributed to shrinking space for Palestinians.<sup>20</sup> Israeli policies continue to encroach on Palestinian homes and spaces, with at least 218 Palestinian households in East Jerusalem currently at risk of imminent forced eviction owing to cases brought before Israeli courts, primarily by Israeli settler organizations.<sup>21</sup> The Commission notes that the choice of location of some new settlements, such as Gi'vat Hamatos, further reduces the likelihood of ending the occupation and violates the right of Palestinians to self-determination.<sup>22</sup> An outer layer of settlements, beyond the municipal boundaries of Jerusalem, has also contributed to severing the geographical contiguity between East Jerusalem and the rest of the occupied West Bank. This includes the plan for the E1 area in eastern Jerusalem (outside the municipal boundary), intended to reinforce the settlements in the Ma'ale Adumim area and connect them with Jerusalem, which would divide the West Bank into two separate entities.<sup>23</sup>

16. The legislative and administrative measures undertaken by Israel since 1967 have been firmly rejected by the Security Council and the General Assembly. Following the enactment of the Basic Law: Jerusalem, Capital of Israel in 1980, which solidified the purported de jure annexation of East Jerusalem, the Security Council reaffirmed that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible. It further decided not to recognize the Law and such other actions by Israel that, as a result of the Law, are intended to alter the character and status of the city.<sup>24</sup>

B. The Syrian Golan

17. The Syrian Golan, in the south-eastern part of the Syrian Arab Republic, was occupied by Israel in the war of 1967. Part of the area, including the town of Qunaytirah, was returned to the Syrian Arab Republic in the Agreement on Disengagement between Israeli and Syrian Forces of 1974.<sup>25</sup> The occupied Syrian Golan was purportedly annexed in 1981 through a dedicated law under which Israel extended its jurisdiction, law and administration to the Golan.<sup>26</sup> The Security Council has definitively rejected that act as unlawful.<sup>27</sup> Only the United States of America has recognized the purported annexation.

<sup>18</sup> See www.gov.il/he/departments/policies/dec3790\_2018 (in Hebrew).

<sup>19</sup> See Peace Now, "Jerusalem". Available at <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/jerusalem>.

<sup>20</sup> See A/HRC/49/85, para. 11. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "West Bank, East Jerusalem: key humanitarian concerns", 21 December 2017; and Cohen-Bar and others, Trapped by Planning, p. 39.

<sup>21</sup> See A/HRC/49/85, para. 25, A/76/336, para. 35, and S/2021/584, para. 6.

<sup>22</sup> See, for example, Peace Now, "Givat Hamatos – a new Israeli neighborhood in East Jerusalem", 13 October 2011.

<sup>23</sup> A/HRC/49/85, para. 6.

<sup>24</sup> See Security Council resolution 478 (1980). See also United Nations, Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, "The status of Jerusalem" (New York, 1997), p. 24. Available at www.un.org/unispal/wp-content/uploads/2016/07/The-Status-of-Jerusalem-English-199708.pdf.

<sup>25</sup> S/11302/Add.1.

<sup>26</sup> Law on the Golan Heights of 1981. Available in Hebrew at https://fs.knesset.gov.il/10/law/10\_lsr\_211778.PDF.

<sup>27</sup> See Security Council resolution 497 (1981).

18. On 1 June 1967, approximately 90,000 Syrians were living in the Golan. One month later, that number was 6,396. A delegation of the International Committee of the Red Cross noted that most of the refugees from the Golan had been expelled.<sup>28</sup> From 1967, settlements were used in the Golan to create facts on the ground that irreversibly established Israeli control over the territory. Today, there are 34 settlements in the Golan. In December 2021, the Government of Israel approved a plan to add 7,300 housing units in the Golan over the following five years to double the number of residents there, as well as to establish two new settlements.<sup>29</sup>

C. Gaza

19. Israel occupied the Gaza Strip in the war of 1967 and proceeded to expropriate land and establish settlements shortly afterwards. By 1997, it had established 19 settlements on 23,000 dunams of land, housing some 5,000 settlers.<sup>30</sup> Although Israel disengaged from Gaza in 2005, the Commission notes that Israel continues to occupy the territory by virtue of the control it exercises over, inter alia, the airspace and territorial waters of Gaza, as well as its land crossings at the borders, supply of civilian infrastructure, including water and electricity, and key governmental functions such as the management of the Palestinian population registry.<sup>31</sup>

20. Gaza has also been subjected to blockade imposed by Israel and support by Egypt since the de facto authorities assumed certain governance functions in 2007. This blockade has been tightened and loosened several times since then. It restricts the movement of people and goods into and out of the territory. The blockade has been widely condemned as a policy that may amount to collective punishment.<sup>32</sup>

D. Israel

21. The Commission has found several similarities between the treatment of Palestinians by Israel inside Israel in the period since 1948, and its policies in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

22. Between 1948 and 1966, approximately 85 per cent of the Palestinians in Israel lived in three areas that were subject to a military regime and came under three military governors.<sup>33</sup> Israel maintained that it had instituted the regime for security reasons, since each of the three areas shared a border with “enemy countries”. According to a government investigation into the military regime, Israel had sought to address a perceived risk that Palestinians residing inside Israel would collaborate with neighbouring Arab countries against its security interests; another purpose was to control and reduce the number of Palestinian refugees seeking to return to their homes.<sup>34</sup>

<sup>28</sup> See Akevot Institute, “Displacement in the Heights: how the population of the Golan Heights vanished in 1967”, 19 September 2022, illustration marked as “Annex to Moreillon’s letter”. Available at www.akevot.org.il/en/article/displacement-in-the-golan/#popup/acfbb382d6c3e88ba2b9e112e710a627.

<sup>29</sup> See www.gov.il/he/departments/news/spoke\_golan261221 (in Hebrew).

<sup>30</sup> See A/52/172-E/1997/71, para. 26.

<sup>31</sup> See A/HRC/50/21, para. 16.

<sup>32</sup> See A/74/468, para. 22, A/73/420, para. 7, and A/72/565, para. 28.

<sup>33</sup> See <https://storymaps.arcgis.com/stories/81adbee036594229ac65032b8fb80e07?locale=he> (in Hebrew).

<sup>34</sup> Akevot Institute, “Security settlements and the question of land: the Ratner Committee report on military rule and its secret annex”, 24 February 1956.

23. Although the military regime ended in 1967, its legacy continues. In 2022, Palestinian citizens of Israel are still subjected to discriminatory policies including the confiscation of land, demolitions and evictions that affect in particular the Bedouin in the Negev and Palestinians residing in other areas of Israel. In addition, several Israeli laws discriminate against Palestinian citizens of Israel. For example, the Nation State Law of 2018 gives only Jews the right to self-determination in Israel and removes the status of Arabic as an official language alongside Hebrew.<sup>35</sup> In addition, the Citizenship and Entry into Israel Law (Temporary Order) restricts further family reunification and hinders the right to marry the person of one's choice.<sup>36</sup>

E. The West Bank outside East Jerusalem

24. Under the Oslo Accords, the West Bank was divided into three areas: A, B and C (excluding East Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip). Over 60 per cent of the West Bank was designated as Area C, where Israel retains near-exclusive control.<sup>37</sup> While not replacing obligations under international law, the Accords assigned the Palestinian Authority civil and security jurisdiction over Area A and civil control over Area B. The Accords provided that the Palestinian Authority would gradually assume control over the West Bank in a phased manner, except for issues that would be negotiated in permanent status negotiations.<sup>38</sup>

The Israeli settlements enterprise

“In light of the current negotiations on the future of Judea and Samaria, it will now become necessary for us to conduct a race against time. During this period, everything will be mainly determined by the facts we establish in these territories and less by any other considerations. This is therefore the best time for launching an extensive and comprehensive settlement momentum (...)”

Source: World Zionist Federation, “Settlement in Judea and Samaria – strategy, policy and plans” (A/36/341-S/14566, annex).

25. From the beginning of the occupation, Israel has established or facilitated the establishment of hundreds of civilian settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in an enterprise that is the most significant driver of its protracted occupation and that is in contravention of international law. Israel has spent billions of dollars on the construction of settlements and of infrastructure to support them, including roads, water and sewerage systems, communications and power systems, <sup>35</sup> See CERD/C/ISR/CO/17-19, paras. 13–15, and CCPR/C/ISR/CO/5, para. 10. See also Adalah, “The discriminatory laws database”, 25 September 2017; Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Center, “Families divided: Israel passes new citizenship law, fortifies apartheid regime”; and Adalah, “Adalah petitions Israeli Supreme Court against new citizenship law banning Palestinian family unification”.

<sup>36</sup> See Knesset, “Knesset plenum passes Citizenship and Entry into Israel Bill into law”, 10 March 2022; Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Center, “Families divided”; and Adalah, “Adalah petitions Israeli Supreme Court”.

<sup>37</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Area C of the West Bank: key humanitarian concerns”, update, August 2014.

<sup>38</sup> See Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and Gaza Strip (A/51/889-S/1997/357, annex), art. XI, para. 2.

security systems, and educational and health care facilities.<sup>39</sup> One of the core principles of the laws of belligerent occupation is that the occupying Power must protect the fundamental interests of the population under occupation, including through the prohibition of the transfer of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies.<sup>40</sup> Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention was intended to prevent the transfer by occupying Powers of portions of their own population to occupied territory for political or racial reasons or to colonize the territories.<sup>41</sup>

26. While all Israeli settlements are considered illegal under international law, Israel makes a distinction between “authorized” settlements and unauthorized outposts, which it considers illegal. Nonetheless, Israel has been providing outposts with essential services including electricity and security and has been allocating them farming and grazing land.<sup>42</sup> In April 2022, the Israeli Attorney General’s Office issued a legal opinion according to which outposts located on “State land” could be connected to the official electricity grid.<sup>43</sup> To date the Government of Israel has retroactively authorized 23 outposts by bringing them within the jurisdiction of nearby settlements or granting them independent settlement status. According to Peace Now, two established outposts have been evacuated, but the Government is reportedly in the process of retroactively authorizing at least 12 more.<sup>44</sup>

27. Israel has attempted through legislative action to authorize settlements and outposts built on private Palestinian land. The 2017 Regularization Law applies to settlements built on private Palestinian land or without prior authorization before the Law came into effect.<sup>45</sup> In 2020, the Supreme Court of Israel annulled the law on the grounds that it infringed rights codified in the Basic Law: Human Dignity and Liberty, as it would result in the expropriation of private Palestinian land and transfer the ownership of the land to settlers.<sup>46</sup> The Court decided, however, that outposts built on private Palestinian land could be authorized if they had been established in “good faith”. In 2022, the Supreme Court determined that the outpost Mitzpeh Kramim need not be evacuated because the expropriation of private land met the good-faith test and that “market regulations”<sup>47</sup> applied to outposts.<sup>48</sup> In the decision, the Court effectively gave carte blanche to the approval of outposts on private Palestinian land in the West Bank.

<sup>39</sup> See TD/B/EX(71)/2, paras. 40 and 66. See also Kerem Navot, “The Wild West: grazing, seizing and looting by Israeli settlers in the West Bank”, May 2022. See also Yesh Din, Plundered Pastures: Israeli Settler Shepherding Outposts in the West Bank and Their Infringement on Palestinians’ Human Rights, position paper, December 2021.

<sup>40</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, arts. 27 and 49.

<sup>41</sup> See ICRC, commentary of 1958 on article 49 of the Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War. Available at <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/ihl/COM/380-600056?OpenDocument>.

<sup>42</sup> See Kerem Navot, “The Wild West” and Yesh Din, “Plundered pastures”.

<sup>43</sup> On file. According to the legal opinion, Palestinian villages in Area C may also be connected to the official electricity grid.

<sup>44</sup> See Peace Now, “West Bank population”. Available at <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/population>.

<sup>45</sup> The Judea and Samaria Settlement Regulation Law (2017). Available in Hebrew at www.nevo.co.il/law\_html/law01/501\_553.htm.

<sup>46</sup> Supreme Court decision of 9 June 2020 in cases Nos. 1308/17, 2055/17. Available in Hebrew at <https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=HebrewVerdicts%5C17%5C080%5C013%5Cv48&fileName=17013080.V48&type=2>.

<sup>47</sup> The term “market regulations” refers to land purchased from the Commissioner of Government Property and Abandoned Lands in Judea and Samaria that was believed to be State land at the time of the transaction, when in fact it was private property. See <https://lawjournal.huji.ac.il/sites/default/files/2020-11/mishpatim-50-2-307.pdf> (in Hebrew).

<sup>48</sup> Supreme Court Decision of 27 July 2022 in case No. 6364/20. Available in Hebrew at <https://storage.googleapis.com/haaretz-cms-prod/df/d2/89f3ad634b02a194f7aac204a15b/gada.pdf>.

28. Between June 2021 and June 2022, six new outposts were established.<sup>49</sup> During that period, several members of the Government explicitly expressed support for the erection of outposts as well as for judicial decisions retroactively authorizing them.<sup>50</sup> On 20 July 2022, hundreds of settlers gathered in six separate locations to establish new outposts. The Israeli security forces issued a statement declaring such actions illegal<sup>51</sup> and deployed significant military and civilian police forces. However, despite announcing their plans in advance, settlers were allowed access to the locations, erected temporary structures and were only later removed by security forces.<sup>52</sup>

29. Funding for settlements and outposts reportedly comes from a variety of State and non-State sources, private donors and funds raised through Israeli and non-Israeli non-profit groups,<sup>53</sup> including private organizations, such as Nahala and Amana.<sup>54</sup> The Settlement Division of the World Zionist Organization plays a key role in establishing and supporting settlements and outposts. The Settlement Division was established in 1971 and is funded by the Government of Israel, although it is not a State entity. The Settlement Division actively supports and funds outposts. For example, it supports the regularization of outposts with regard to their connection to the electrical grid and the preparation of building plans.<sup>55</sup>

30. The establishment, maintenance and expansion of Israeli settlements throughout the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem, has fragmented and isolated Palestinians from their lands as well as from other Palestinian communities. The Commission emphasizes that wherever settlements are located, they have a cascading impact on Palestinians throughout the West Bank. By largely failing to enforce the law, continuing to retroactively authorize outposts, ignoring settler violence originating in outposts<sup>56</sup> and not applying legal sanctions against settlers breaking the law, Israel sends a clear message to settlers that outposts are a viable, quasi-legal option for erecting new settlements and expanding Israeli presence in the West Bank.

<sup>49</sup> Peace Now reported of four instances between June 2021 and June 2022 in which outposts were founded but settlers evicted immediately after their foundation, and a rise in demolition of small outposts of “hill-top” youth. See Peace Now, “The government of unequivocal annexation: deepening of the settlement project, dispossession and oppression – one year of the Israeli government headed by Yair Lapid and Naftali Bennett”, June 2022.

<sup>50</sup> See https://twitter.com/Ayelet\_Shaked/status/1549851212199202821 (in Hebrew); and <https://twitter.com/gidonsaar/status/155230355646777537> (in Hebrew).

<sup>51</sup> Joint statement by the Israel Defense Forces and Israel police of 20 July 2022. Available in Hebrew at www.idf.il/%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D/2022/%D7%99%D7%95%D7%9C%D7%99/%D7%90%D7%99%D7%95%D7%A9-%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%97%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%91%D7%99%D7%98%D7%97%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%A9%D7%98%D7%97%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A6%D7%91%D7%90%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A1%D7%92%D7%95%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%97%D7%95%D7%A7-%D7%9E%D7%90%D7%97%D7%96%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%91%D7%9C%D7%AA%D7%99-%D7%97%D7%95%D7%A7%D7%99%D7%99%D7%9D/.

<sup>52</sup> See www.inn.co.il/news/571834 (in Hebrew). See also Hagar Shezaf, “Israeli forces evacuate short-lived outposts set up by West Bank settler movement”, Haaretz, 21 July 2022; and Hagar Shezaf, “Settlers camp out in six locations across the West Bank, planning to establish new outposts”, Haaretz, 20 July 2022.

<sup>53</sup> Uri Blau, “From N.Y.C. to the West Bank: following the money trail that supports Israeli settlements”, Haaretz, 7 December 2015. See also http://peacenow.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2020/11/TheCombina\_Heb1.pdf, pp. 7 and 8 (in Hebrew).

<sup>54</sup> See A/HRC/49/85, para. 42. See also Hagar Shezaf, “How a Jewish settler group raised millions to set up illegal outposts”, Haaretz, 20 July 2022.

<sup>55</sup> See www.gov.il/BlobFolder/reports/work\_plan290622/he/work\_plan290622.pdf, art. 7 (in Hebrew).

<sup>56</sup> See paras. 67 and 68 of the present report.

Expropriation and exploitation of land and other natural resources

31. Since the occupation began, Israel has used military justifications to issue permanent and temporary closure orders for vast areas in the West Bank. In practice, much of the land has been used not for military purposes but for the construction of settlements. Israel has declared approximately 18 per cent of the West Bank closed military zones, including in area C.<sup>57</sup> Over half of Area C (1.765 million dunams) has been officially designated closed military zones. Israeli settlers have cultivated over 14,000 dunams of land in closed military areas, some of which is private Palestinian land.<sup>58</sup>

32. In a decision issued in 1979, the Supreme Court of Israel determined that the expropriation of land by military orders for the construction of settlements contravened international law.<sup>59</sup> However, Israel continued to declare military firing zones that were then used for other purposes. In the 1980s, the area of Masafer Yatta in the south Hebron hills was declared a restricted military zone, referred to as firing zone 918, which affected dozens of Palestinian families who had lived in the area since before 1948.<sup>60</sup> Newly released minutes of meetings between officials of the Government of Israel and the Settlement Division indicate that Israel established military zones for non-military reasons, including for the establishment and expansion of settlements.<sup>61</sup> In 1981, then Minister of Agriculture Ariel Sharon met with the Settlement Division and proposed the establishment of a firing zone in the south Hebron hills with the explicit purpose of countering the spread of the Arab villagers on the mountainside toward the desert.<sup>62</sup>

33. Israel has declared large areas of land State land, relying on the 1967 Order Regarding Government Property (Judea and Samaria) (No. 59), 5727-1967, which stipulates that the Custodian of Absentee Property Department may take possession of government property and take any measures he or she deems necessary for that purpose.<sup>63</sup> Israel has declared over 750,000 dunams in the West Bank State land under the Order.<sup>64</sup> Israel has also used a process of mapping land (which it has termed the “survey lands” procedure) that is based on the Ottoman Land Code to determine

<sup>57</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “The humanitarian impact of Israeli-declared ‘firing zones’ in the West Bank”, August 2012.

<sup>58</sup> See Kerem Navot, A Locked Garden: Declaration of Closed Areas in the West Bank, March 2015, pp. 10–15.

<sup>59</sup> Supreme Court decision of 22 October 1979 in case No. 390/79. Available in Hebrew at <https://hamoked.org.il/items/1670.htm>. See also B’Tselem, Under the Guise of Legality: Israel’s Declarations of State Land the West Bank (Jerusalem, February 2012), pp. 9 and 12.

<sup>60</sup> See B’Tselem, “Masafer Yatta communities Israel is trying to drive out”, 1 January 2013. Available at www.btselem.org/south\_hebron\_hills/masafer\_yatta.

<sup>61</sup> See Yuval Abraham, “Classified document reveals IDF ‘firing zones’ built to give land to settlers”, +972 Magazine, 11 July 2022.

<sup>62</sup> See Akevot, “Document exposed by Akevot: Ariel Sharon instructed IDF to create training zone to displace Palestinians”, 9 August 2020, available at www.akevot.org.il/en/news-item/document-revealed-by-akevot-ariel-sharon-instructed-idf-to-create-training-zone-to-displace-palestinians/. See also minutes of meeting between the Committee for Settlement of the Government and the World Zionist Organization, 12 July 1981, available in Hebrew at www.akevot.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/1981-07-12-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%AA-%D7%A9%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%9C%D7%94%D7%AA%D7%99%D7%A9%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%A4%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%98%D7%95%D7%A7%D7%95%D7%9C-%D7%9E%D7%9C%D7%90-%D7%9E%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%A2%D7%A7%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA.pdf.

<sup>63</sup> See B’Tselem, Land Grab: Israel’s Settlement Policy in the West Bank, (Jerusalem, May 2002), p. 52. See also B’Tselem, Under the Guise of Legality, p. 13.

<sup>64</sup> See Kerem Navot, Blue and White Make Black: The Work of Blue Line Team in the West Bank, December 2016, pp. 6 and 42.

whether land is uncultivated or is insufficiently cultivated and so may be classified as State land.<sup>65</sup>

34. Parcels of land in the West Bank have been designated as nature reserves and parks. To date, Israel has declared about 48 nature reserves with a total area of approximately 383,600 dunams, representing around 12 per cent of Area C and around 7 per cent of the entire West Bank.<sup>66</sup> In January 2020, the Minister of Defence of Israel declared seven new national parks on over 130,000 dunams of land, and the expansion of 12 existing reserves. According to Peace Now, 20,000 dunams of that land is privately owned by Palestinians who will be barred from cultivating it or further building on it.<sup>67</sup>

35. In addition to expropriating land, Israel has taken control of all water resources in the West Bank and has been using much of the water for its own purposes. Through military order No. 92 (1967), Israel asserted its control over the three primary sources of water in the West Bank and prohibited Palestinians from constructing new water installations or maintaining existing installations without a military permit. At the same time, Israel has developed its own water infrastructure for its settlements and has done the same in Israel.<sup>68</sup>

36. Land has also been used for Israeli industrial and economic activity through the establishment of industrial zones throughout the West Bank. Israel has encouraged companies to move their operations to those zones by providing financial incentives, permits and licenses that are rarely granted to companies providing services to Palestinians.<sup>69</sup> Israel has taken strong measures to discourage States and businesses from distinguishing between Israeli-manufactured products and those coming from settlements.<sup>70</sup>

37. As at 2015, there were 11 Israeli-operated quarries in Area C producing 10 million to 12 million tons of raw materials including rock, gravel and other minerals. Of those, approximately 10 million tons was transferred to Israel. West Bank quarries generate growing revenue for Israel and form an important component

<sup>65</sup> Ibid., pp. 6, 7 and 39.

<sup>66</sup> See Peace Now, “The Minister of Defense approved the declaration of the largest nature reserve in 25 years in the West Bank”, 24 May 2022.

<sup>67</sup> See https://twitter.com/naftalibennett/status/1217372351911866369?ref\_src=twsrc%5Etfw%7Ctwcamp%5Etweetembed%7Ctwterm%5E1217372351911866369%7Ctwgr%5Edc7765b546f118b60ef9d4da93dbb32b48287d60%7Ctwcon%5Es1\_&ref\_url=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.zman.co.il%2F88980%2F (in Hebrew). See also Hagar Shezaf, “Israeli defense chief approves new West Bank nature reserves to ‘develop Jewish settlement’”, Haaretz, 15 January 2020; and Peace Now, “The Minister of Defense approved the declaration of the largest nature reserve in 25 years in the West Bank”.

<sup>68</sup> See A/HRC/48/43, para. 18. See also United Nations, “Israel’s policy on the West Bank water resources”, 1980, available at www.un.org/unispal/document/auto-insert-206852/; Jerusalem Media and Communication Centre, Israeli Military Orders in the Occupied Palestinian West Bank (1967–1992), available at www.jmcc.org/Documentsandmaps.aspx?id=622; and Amnesty International, “Israel/Occupied Palestinian Territories: demand dignity: troubled waters – Palestinians denied fair access to water”, 27 October 2009.

<sup>69</sup> See A/HRC/37/39, paras. 43 and 44.

<sup>70</sup> See, for example, Middle East Monitor, “Israel threatens Norway with ‘adverse’ impact following change in settlement labels”, 13 June 2022; Barak Ravid, “Israel considers suing EU over decision to label settlement products”, Haaretz, 19 November 2015.

of the Israeli raw materials market.<sup>71</sup> In 2015, Israel received 74,102,235 shekels<sup>72</sup> from royalties and user fees paid by quarries operating in the West Bank.<sup>73</sup>

38. Quasi-governmental entities have played a role in expropriating land and managing its allocation to settlements.<sup>74</sup> The Jewish National Fund, for example, was established in 1901 with the aim of purchasing land in the region for Jewish settlement. After 1967, it acquired land from Palestinians in the West Bank to facilitate the establishment of settlements and expanded its other areas of activity to supporting settlements.<sup>75</sup> In August 2022, Israeli media reported that the Jewish National Fund had voted to allocate 61 million shekels for the purchase of land owned by Palestinians in the Jordan Valley, located on a closed military zone.<sup>76</sup>

39. Land is a key natural resource, integral to the Palestinian identity and economy. Palestinians currently can build on less than 1 per cent of the land in Area C,<sup>77</sup> owing to Israeli planning policies and the expropriation of more than 2 million dunams of land by Israel since 1967. Israel has expropriated land throughout the West Bank for a variety of purposes, including settlement construction, industrial zones, farming and grazing land for settlers, and roads, in contravention of international law.<sup>78</sup>

40. Under international law, an occupying Power is entitled to a limited use of natural resources of an occupied territory. Article 55 of the Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907 stipulates that an occupying Power may only act as administrator and usufructuary of public buildings, real estate, forests, and agricultural estates. In doing so, it must safeguard the capital of those properties and administer them in accordance with the rules of usufruct. In addition, articles 28 and 47 of the Hague Regulations, along with article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, prohibit the act of pillage. This applies to all types of property, whether belonging to private persons or to the State.<sup>79</sup> Pillage is also a war crime under the article 8 (2) (b) (xvi) of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.

Restrictive planning, zoning and development

41. Under the Oslo Accords, planning, zoning and development in Area C was to be undertaken temporarily by Israel. However, this responsibility has still not been passed on to the Palestinian Authority, which has severely restricted Palestinian

<sup>71</sup> Ministry of Housing, report by the Committee to Examine Land Policies in the Quarrying Sector, April 2015, pp. 10 and 11. Available in Hebrew at www.gov.il/BlobFolder/policy/balnikov/he/balnikov\_final\_report\_26042015.pdf.

<sup>72</sup> As at 2 September 2022, the conversion rate was 3.40 shekels for one United States dollar.

<sup>73</sup> See <https://s3-eu-west-1.amazonaws.com/files.yesh-din.org/%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%99%D7%A8+%D7%A2%D7%9E%D7%93%D7%94+%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%A6%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/38443.pdf> (in Hebrew).

<sup>74</sup> For more on the World Zionist Organization, see para. 31 of the present report.

<sup>75</sup> See Peace Now, “Involvement of KKL-JNF and the settlement division in the settlements”, p. 2. Available at http://peacenow.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2020/02/KKL\_Settlement-Division-Fact-Sheet.pdf.

<sup>76</sup> See Hagar Shezaf, “Israel recruited the Jewish National Fund to secretly buy Palestinian Land for settlers”, Haaretz, 15 July 2021. See also Hagar Shezaf, “JNF approves funds to buy Palestinian-owned Jordan Valley land at Israel’s request”, Haaretz, 3 August 2022; and <https://peacenow.org.il/jnf-tender-for-land-registration> (in Hebrew).

<sup>77</sup> See TD/B/EX(71)/2, para. 33.

<sup>78</sup> See B’Tselem, State Business: Israel’s Misappropriation of land in the West Bank through Settler Violence (Jerusalem, November 2021), p. 7; See also B’Tselem, Land Grab, p. 47; and Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Area C of the West Bank: key humanitarian concerns”, update, August 2014.

<sup>79</sup> See ICRC, commentary of 1958 on article 33 of the Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War. Available at <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=36BD41F14E2B3809C12563CD0042BCA9>.

development opportunities.<sup>80</sup> Israel has used its control of planning and zoning to impose substantial restrictions on building and construction that apply primarily to Palestinians, restrict Palestinians' use of land, and support the development of settlements.

42. Israel prohibits Palestinian construction in 70 per cent of Area C because of its designation as State land, natural reserves or military zones; in addition, Israel imposes substantial zoning restrictions in the remaining 30 per cent.<sup>81</sup> Most Palestinian applications for building permits are rejected by Israel on the grounds that the relevant area has not been zoned for construction, even when the land is owned by the applicant.<sup>82</sup> Permits are rarely given to Palestinians for building residential structures or structures for economic activities, or to develop infrastructure. Over the 10-year period lasting from 2009 to 2018, only about 2 per cent of applications for construction permits was approved.<sup>83</sup> In 2019 and 2020, 32 plans and permits for Palestinians were approved and 310 plans were rejected, while the Civil Administration of Israel approved plans for 16,098 units in Israeli settlements.<sup>84</sup>

43. According to Israeli regulations, construction also needs to be aligned with British Mandate regional outline plans that zone extensive areas for only a few main uses: roads, agriculture, development, and nature and beach reserves.<sup>85</sup> The Israeli Civil Administration and the Israeli courts continue to rely on these outdated plans when deciding on Palestinian construction permit requests while, at the same time, approving hundreds of new master plans to change the zoning to allow for the construction of Israeli settlements.<sup>86</sup>

44. While the Palestinian Authority is officially responsible for the provision of education and medical and other services in Area C, the Civil Administration controls the issuance of permits for construction and for the expansion of schools and clinics and in doing so significantly impedes the Palestinian ability to provide such services.<sup>87</sup> Palestinians in Area C consequently suffer from insufficient and inadequate planning, which disproportionately affects marginalized communities such as Bedouin and herding communities.<sup>88</sup>

45. Statements made by Israeli officials indicate that Palestinian construction is seen as an impediment to Israeli settlement of the West Bank, requiring action such as confiscation, demolitions and displacement, as well as a reduction in the number of international aid projects for infrastructure for Palestinians in

<sup>80</sup> See United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), Spatial Planning in Area C of the Israeli Occupied West Bank of the Palestinian Territory, Report of an International Advisory Board, May 2015, p. 10.

<sup>81</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, OCHA Special Focus, "Restricting space: the planning regime applied by Israel in Area C of the West Bank", December 2009. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Area C of the West Bank: key humanitarian concerns", update, August 2014; and TD/B/EX(71)/2, para. 33.

<sup>82</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Bulletin for the Occupied Palestinian Territory January–May 2021. Available at www.un.org/unispal/document/ocha-humanitarian-bulletin-for-occupied-palestinian-territory-jan-may-2021/.

<sup>83</sup> See Peace Now, "(Dis)approvals for Palestinians in Area C – 2009-2020", 31 January 2021.

<sup>84</sup> Ibid.

<sup>85</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Restricting space". See also Limor Yehuda and others, One Rule, Two Legal Systems: Israel's Regime of Laws in the West Bank, Association for Civil Rights in Israel, October 2014, p. 100.

<sup>86</sup> See UN-Habitat, Spatial Planning in Area C, p. 23.

<sup>87</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Restricting space".

<sup>88</sup> See UN-Habitat, Spatial Planning in Area C, p. 10.

Area C.<sup>89</sup> Demolitions are linked to the expansion of settlements, as large-scale demolition orders are issued in locations where Israeli settlements have been allocated land for expansion.<sup>90</sup> The Commission notes that the planning and zoning regime applied by Israel reflects a clearly discriminatory approach, as it is a highly restrictive one targeted at Palestinian construction, while a much more permissive regime is applied to planning and zoning in settlements.

Extension of Israeli law in the West Bank

46. Since the start of the occupation, Israel has extended its legal domain in the West Bank, which has resulted in far-reaching changes to the applicable law and, in practice, two sets of applicable law: military law and Israeli domestic law, which has been extended extra-territorially to apply only to Israeli settlers. This has been done through military orders,<sup>91</sup> legislation<sup>92</sup> and Supreme Court decisions<sup>93</sup> and includes criminal law, national health insurance law, taxation laws and laws pertaining to elections.<sup>94</sup> There are also separate legal systems for enforcing traffic laws and an institutional and legislative separation in the planning and building regime.<sup>95</sup>

47. This dual legal system provides greater enjoyment of human rights for Israelis than for Palestinians and is therefore discriminatory. It forms part of the complaint by the State of Palestine against Israel under the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination.<sup>96</sup> There are stark differences between the two legal systems, in particular with regard to criminal law, with significant implications for the rights of Palestinians. For example, under military law, holding and waving Palestinian flags during demonstrations and assemblies of Palestinians is regarded as a security threat, so that Palestinians' freedom of expression and freedoms of peaceful assembly and association are severely restricted.<sup>97</sup>

<sup>89</sup> See B'Tselem, "The annexation that was and still is", no date, p. 4, available at www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202010\_the\_annexation\_that\_was\_and\_still\_is\_eng.pdf. See also <https://main.knesset.gov.il/Activity/committees/ForeignAffairs/News/pages/pr290720.aspx> (in Hebrew).

<sup>90</sup> See UN-Habitat, Spatial Planning in Area C, p. 20. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Demolitions and forced displacement in the occupied West Bank, January 2012", 26 January 2012; and Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Resource Centre, "Rule of law: a veil of compliance in Israel and the oPt 2010–2013", March 2014, p. 9.

<sup>91</sup> Military Order Concerning the Administration of Local Councils (Judea and Samaria) (No. 892), 5741–1981, and Military Order Concerning the Administration of Regional Councils (Judea and Samaria) (No. 783), 5739–1979.

<sup>92</sup> Law to Extend the Emergency Regulations (Judea and Samaria—Jurisdiction and Legal Aid).

<sup>93</sup> For example, Supreme Court decision in case No. 04/10104, sect. 2 (4), p. 95. Available in Hebrew at https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=PediVerdicts/61/2&fileName=SA2\_2\_10104-04.pdf&type=4.

<sup>94</sup> See Limor Yehuda and others, One Rule, Two Legal Systems, p. 6. See also Yesh Din, The Israeli Occupation of the West Bank and the Crime of Apartheid: Legal Opinion, position paper, June 2020, pp. 40–42.

<sup>95</sup> See Limor Yehuda and others, One Rule, Two Legal Systems, pp. 7 and 8.

<sup>96</sup> See https://tbinternet.ohchr.org/Treaties/CERD/Shared%20Documents/1\_Global/INT\_CERD\_ISC\_9325\_E.pdf, paras. 146–156.

<sup>97</sup> See Order Concerning the Prohibition of Acts of Incitement and Hostile Propaganda (Judea and Samaria) (No. 101), 5727–1967.

V. The intent underlying the occupation regime applied by Israel

48. In its official position on the settlements, Israel notes the Jewish presence in the territory for thousands of years and the recognition in the Mandate for Palestine, adopted by the League of Nations in 1922, of the “historical connection of the Jewish people with Palestine”.<sup>98</sup> Palestinians have vehemently opposed Israeli settlements, noting that they “have no legal validity, constitute flagrant breaches under international law, namely the Fourth Geneva Convention, and constitute a major obstacle to peace”.<sup>99</sup>

49. From the early days of the occupation, Israel has emphasized external security threats as a key factor in its settlements policy. In 1977, the head of the World Zionist Organization Settlement Division, Mattityahu Drobless, prepared what is known as the Drobless settlement plan for the West Bank (issued in 1978), in which he recalled the large “eastern rejectionist front” including the Syrian Arab Republic, Iraq, the Islamic Republic of Iran and Saudi Arabia as a key threat to the eastern border of Israel, which required Israel to ensure that the border was as far as possible from dense urban, industrial and economic centres on the coastal plain. Establishing settlements was seen as a buffer for mobilizing the army and protecting the country.<sup>100</sup> It placed civilians at risk, contrary to international law.<sup>101</sup> Israel now has a peace treaty with Jordan, which alone borders the West Bank. The settlements now are directed towards internal control, not external threats.

50. The Commission acknowledges the significant detrimental impact of armed attacks and security incidents on Israeli and Palestinian citizens and residents. For example, during the second intifada, between September 2000 and August 2007, altogether 1,024 Israelis were killed by Palestinian armed groups in the West Bank and in Israel, 69 per cent of them civilians. During the same period, 4,228 Palestinians were killed by Israeli forces, approximately 59 per cent of them civilians.<sup>102</sup> While Israel may take measures within its own territory to ensure the security of its civilian population, many of its actions are undertaken in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and are based on the premise that Palestinians are a security risk, and that it is therefore justifiable to limit their rights.<sup>103</sup> The Commission notes that, while Israel has a duty to ensure the safety and well-being of its own citizens, its duty in the occupied territory is also to ensure the overall protection, security and welfare of people under occupation.<sup>104</sup> International law cannot be selectively applied; it must be implemented in its entirety.

51. The Commission notes that successive Governments of Israel, regardless of political composition, have promoted the expansion of settlements while officially stating support for the “two-State solution”.<sup>105</sup> Although Israel has occasionally acted to implement some policies for Palestinians – such as allowing them access to work <sup>98</sup> See note by the Secretary-General on the question of Palestine: text of Mandate (A/292). See also Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Israeli settlements and international law”, 30 November 2015, available at www.gov.il/en/Departments/General/israeli-settlement-and-international-law.

<sup>99</sup> See S/PV.7853.

<sup>100</sup> See A/36/341-S/14566, annex.

<sup>101</sup> See www.molad.org/images/upload/files/National-security-and-settlements.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>102</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, OCHA Special Focus “Israeli-Palestinian fatalities since 2000 – key trends”, August 2007.

<sup>103</sup> B’Tselem, Forbidden Roads: Israel’s Discriminatory Road Regime in the West Bank (Jerusalem, August 2004), p. 3.

<sup>104</sup> ICRC, “West Bank: Israel must abide by international humanitarian law”, 13 September 2018.

<sup>105</sup> For the most recent example, see United States of America, White House, “Remarks by President Biden and Prime Minister Yair Lapid of the State of Israel”, 14 July 2022.

in Israel and approving extremely limited construction,<sup>106</sup> those do little to improve the overall lives of Palestinians or to advance an end to the occupation and a real, just solution. On the contrary, the continuous expansion by Israel of settlements and related infrastructure actively contributes to the entrenchment of the occupation and makes the “two-State solution” an increasingly unviable option. This strategy has allowed successive Governments of Israel to uphold the appearance of agreement with the international community while maintaining its permanent occupation and de facto annexation policies largely undisturbed.<sup>107</sup>

52. Israeli officials have publicly expressed their country’s intention to make the settlements irreversible and annex all or part of Area C. On 10 September 2019, then Prime Minister Netanyahu announced his intention to annex the Jordan Valley and northern Dead Sea region, if and when he would be re-elected.<sup>108</sup> Although the plan was later shelved, in August 2020, he asserted, referring to Israeli sovereignty over the West Bank: “The issue of sovereignty is still on the table”.<sup>109</sup>

53. In a speech to settlers in Elkana on 17 May 2022, then Prime Minister Bennet emphasized the perpetual nature of the settlements, as already comprising an integral part of the State of Israel:

With the help of God, we will also be here at the celebrations of Elkana’s fiftieth and seventy-fifth, 100th, 200th and 2,000th birthdays, within a united and sovereign Jewish State in the Land of Israel.<sup>110</sup>

VI. Human rights consequences of the occupation<sup>111</sup>

54. The Commission notes with serious concern that, despite regular reports by numerous United Nations bodies and the international community, the level of violence and Israeli measures to sustain its occupation have increased over time, as well as the number of persons affected.<sup>112</sup> The extensive human rights violations and abuses, along with violations of international humanitarian law noted in these reports, are a direct result of the Israeli occupation. This section does not cover the full range of rights that are affected by the occupation and is focused primarily on Area C of the West Bank. The Commission emphasizes that all areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory are affected by Israeli occupation policies, which include incursions and raids by the Israeli security forces throughout the West Bank and East Jerusalem that often result in civilian casualties that include children.<sup>113</sup>

<sup>106</sup> See A/76/433, para. 34.

<sup>107</sup> Akiva Eldar, “Israel’s New politics and the fate of Palestine”, The National Interest, vol. 120 (August 2012), p. 6.

<sup>108</sup> See www.kan.org.il/item/?itemid=58577 (in Hebrew).

<sup>109</sup> Prime Minister Netanyahu in a speech on 13 August, 2020. Available in Hebrew at <https://13tv.co.il/item/news/politics/politics/netanyahu-press-uae-1109997/>.

<sup>110</sup> Prime Minister Bennett, during a visit to the Elkana local council to mark its forty-fifth anniversary, 17 May 2022. Available in Hebrew at www.youtube.com/watch?v=LeY\_IYNC8ik.

<sup>111</sup> The quotes that follow in boxes have been taken from interviews conducted with victims in the period May–July 2022, unless stated otherwise. The present chapter is based on meetings with interlocutors and interviews with victims and witnesses in the period March–July 2022.

<sup>112</sup> See, for example, A/HRC/49/87, para. 5.

<sup>113</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Facebook page entitled “UN human rights – Palestine”, post of 1 July 2022. Available at www.facebook.com/UNHumanRightsOPT.

A. Coercive environment

“They come at night when we are asleep, and they throw stones at the doors and windows. We do not go out, but they provoke us until we go out. They provoke us with very harsh insults: We will deprive you of the land and burn and expel you, this place is ours, and we will get it back.”

Palestinian woman, Governorate of Hebron

55. Israel has created and is maintaining a complex environment of coercion,<sup>114</sup> which includes the demolition of homes and the destruction of property, excessive use of force by security forces, mass incarceration, settler violence, restricted movement through checkpoints and roads, and limitations on access to livelihoods, basic necessities, services and humanitarian assistance.<sup>115</sup>

56. The 34,000 Palestinians living in or near the H2 area of Hebron are separated from the rest of the city by 22 checkpoints and experience a coercive environment on a daily basis.<sup>116</sup> They struggle to get access to even basic medical care in violation of their right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health.<sup>117</sup> This especially affects pregnant women, the elderly and those with disabilities in need of emergency treatment and health care.

57. Where this coercion leads people to leave their homes, it can also constitute an element of the crime against humanity of deportation or forcible transfer of population under article 7 (1) (d) of the Rome Statute. In July 2022, 19 Palestinian households, comprising 100 people, left their herding community of Ra’s al-Tin in Area C. Some of the families told the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs that they had moved because their living conditions had become intolerable, citing occupation-related coercive measures imposed on them by the Israeli authorities and by Israeli settlers, who are often armed. Some community members said that Israeli officials had explicitly ordered them to move into Area B.<sup>118</sup>

58. The coercive environment has an especially severe impact on Palestinian children, who experience a constant military presence, frequent clashes and acts of violence, restrictions on movement, and home demolition and destruction of infrastructure and property. Since the beginning of 2022, a total of 20 children have been killed in the West Bank and there are currently 56 outstanding demolition orders against schools in the West Bank including East Jerusalem.<sup>119</sup> Since 1967, thousands of children have been displaced and forcibly transferred as a result of the demolition of 28,000 Palestinian homes. Consequently, children’s right to the highest attainable

<sup>114</sup> For example A/HRC/34/39, para. 41.

<sup>115</sup> See Norwegian Refugee Council, “Impacts of annexation on humanitarian relief and development in the West Bank: frequently asked questions”, June 2020, on file.

<sup>116</sup> See B’Tselem, “List of military checkpoints in the West Bank and Gaza Strip”, 11 November 2021. See also Médecins sans frontières, “We are all afraid”: Settler attacks against Palestinians in Hebron on the rise”, 16 August 2021.

<sup>117</sup> See Médecins sans frontières, “Providing mental health care to Palestinians living under occupation”, 6 May 2022. See also Idit Avrahami and Noam Sheizaf, H2: The Occupation Lab, documentary film, 2022.

<sup>118</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “About 100 Palestinians leave Ras a Tin”, 3 August 2022.

<sup>119</sup> United Nations, “Statement of Lynn Hastings, United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator in the Occupied Palestinian Territory”, 28 August 2022.

standard of mental and physical health is severely compromised.<sup>120</sup> Reports indicate a high rate of school dropouts, with specific risks of child labour for boys and early marriages for girls. Girls are often taken out of school out of concern for their safety in the coercive environment, while boys drop out largely because of pressure to contribute to the household finances. Boys also face specific human rights violations, including an increased risk of death and injury inflicted by Israeli security forces during clashes, incidents of stone-throwing and protests, as well as incarceration.<sup>121</sup>

“My daughter and I were going out one day and when we were crossing the Wadi al-Ghrus checkpoint, the soldiers told me my daughter had metal on her. They said it was in her bra and they wanted to check it. I asked why they wanted to search her in the street when there was no female soldier there to do it. I refused to put her through that, but they did not listen, and in the end they refused to allow us to pass.”

Palestinian woman, Governorate of Hebron

59. The cumulative effects of occupation practices, including restrictions on movement, have affected the equal rights of women and girls and impeded their self-reliance. Women and girls are specifically vulnerable to gender-based violence as they go about their everyday activities.<sup>122</sup> Searches by male soldiers and harassment, including at checkpoints, have affected the movements of women and girls and have served to deprive them of equal access to family life, education, health care and employment.<sup>123</sup> Women and girls have also been subjected to harassment and violent attacks by settlers.<sup>124</sup> Victims and witnesses have reported the use of racist and sexist language by male and female settlers and soldiers directed towards them or towards female family members, causing them anxiety, fear and feelings of humiliation.<sup>125</sup>

<sup>120</sup> See Save the Children, “‘Danger is our reality’: the impact of conflict and the occupation on education in the West Bank of the occupied Palestinian territory”, 2020, p. 5. See also Save the Children, “‘Hope under the rubble’: the impact of Israel’s home demolition policy on Palestinian children and their families”, pp. 4–6, 12 and 13; and Occupied Palestinian Territories Education Cluster, Education Cluster Strategy Palestine 2020–2021, 2020, p. 9.

<sup>121</sup> See Occupied Palestinian Territories Education Cluster, Education Cluster Strategy Palestine 2020–2021, pp. 8–11. See also E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, pp. 30 and 31; A/HRC/43/67, para. 51.

<sup>122</sup> See TD/B/67/5, para. 33; A/HRC/46/63, para. 21; A/HRC/50/21, para. 61; and E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p.11. For a definition of gender-based violence, see Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, general recommendation No.19, para. 6 and general recommendation No. 35 (2017), para. 14.

<sup>123</sup> Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, arts. 10–12. Also reported by multiple other sources, for example B’Tselem, “Occupation routine: soldiers detain Palestinian girl, 13, after settlers claim to see her holding knife”, 30 June.

<sup>124</sup> See A/HRC/12/48, footnote 713; A/HRC/35/30/Add.1, paras. 66 and 67; A/HRC/46/63, para. 11; and CEDAW/C/ISR/CO/6, paras. 30 and 31.

<sup>125</sup> See B’Tselem, “Sexism, homophobia and harassment by settlers and soldiers: life’s routine in Hebron (video)”, 11 July 2021. See also B’Tselem, “‘You can take your camera and stick it straight up your big ass’”, 29 August 2017; and Idit Avrahami and Noam Sheizaf, H2: The Occupation Lab.

B. Demolitions, forced evictions, forced displacement and transfer

“The demolition of houses, as you know, threatens the existence and the safety of us as human beings. Therefore, it has a noticeable direct psychological and emotional impact on us, especially women and children, as the home is the safest place for them.”

Palestinian man, Governorate of Hebron

60. The occupation policies implemented by Israel result in violations of the right of Palestinians to an adequate standard of living.<sup>126</sup> Palestinian homes are frequently demolished, since Palestinians are largely unable to obtain a building permit and so build without one. Israeli authorities issued almost 20,000 demolition orders in Area C between 1988 and 2020.<sup>127</sup> To date, more than 8,500 structures have been demolished in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>128</sup>

61. International humanitarian law provides that private property in occupied territories must be respected and cannot be confiscated.<sup>129</sup> It also provides that any destruction by the occupying Power of property belonging individually or collectively to private persons, or to the State, or to other public authorities, or to social or cooperative organizations, is prohibited, except where such destruction is rendered absolutely necessary by military operations.<sup>130</sup>

62. The demolition and confiscation of livelihood structures, such as shops, animal shelters, walls and warehouses, as well as of infrastructure, such as water pipes, cisterns and roads, has had a substantial impact on Palestinians’ access to livelihoods. Since the beginning of 2022, Israel has demolished 500 structures in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, 153 of which were related to agriculture and 136 to livelihoods.<sup>131</sup>

63. Bedouin and herder communities are at a particular risk of demolitions, forced evictions and forcible transfer. Israeli authorities have used overt coercion in forcing them to leave their homes and make way for Israeli use of the land. Among those affected are the Palestinian herder communities in Masafer Yatta, which have been subjected to several waves of demolitions and evictions.<sup>132</sup> On 4 May 2022, the Supreme Court of Israel ruled that the forcible transfer of Palestinians and the demolition of their communities in Masafer Yatta were legal.<sup>133</sup> The ruling violates international legal prohibitions on the destruction of property and deportation or forcible transfer of the civilian population of an occupied territory.

<sup>126</sup> International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, art. 11. See also E/C.12/ISR/CO/4, paras. 48 and 49.

<sup>127</sup> See B’Tselem, “Planning Policy in the West Bank”, 11 November 2017. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Demolition orders against Palestinian structures in Area C – Israeli Civil Administration data”.

<sup>128</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Data on demolition and displacement in the West Bank” (follow the link “more breakdowns”). Accessed on 23 August 2022.

<sup>129</sup> The Hague Regulations, art. 46.

<sup>130</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 53.

<sup>131</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Data on demolition and displacement in the West Bank” (follow the link “more breakdowns”). Accessed on 23 August 2022.

<sup>132</sup> A/HRC/49/85, para. 26.

<sup>133</sup> Supreme Court decision in case No. 413/13 and case No. 1039/13. Available in Hebrew at <https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=HebrewVerdicts%2F13%2F130%2F004%2Fn89&fileName=13004130.N89&type=2&fbclid=IwAR03oMksoLjnT2qD1Zk1eEhbmrrFbGhCXm517cdRVh1GQB9B2eR6FmHUkr0>.

C. Settlements and violence

“Even though settlers have repeatedly attacked members of my family, none of my complaints to the police have been taken seriously. I filed complaints both with the Israeli police and the Palestinian liaison office, but nothing has happened and no one has been charged. No one is held accountable, and the violence continues.”

Palestinian man, Governorate of Hebron

64. Settler violence is a key manifestation of the coercive environment, with incidents increasing in number and severity over the years. From January to July 2022, there were 398 settler attacks in the West Bank, with 84 attacks resulting in casualties. By comparison, there were 496 attacks during the whole of 2021 and 358 attacks in 2020.<sup>134</sup> The severity of the attacks has also increased; recently there have been verified reports of settlers carrying out attacks while Israeli security forces were nearby, and of Israeli security forces attacking Palestinians alongside settlers.<sup>135</sup> The Defence Minister of Israel reportedly reaffirmed in December 2021 the position that the Israeli military is responsible for intervening in settler attacks. In practice, the military permits settlers to be armed and rarely intervenes to protect Palestinians.<sup>136</sup> The Commission emphasizes that Israel as the occupying Power bears responsibility for protecting Palestinians against settler attacks. Such attacks violate the right of Palestinians to life, liberty and security of the person. Victims also have a right to an effective and timely remedy, including reparations, which is not ensured in relation to settler violence.<sup>137</sup>

65. The laws of belligerent occupation require that the occupying Power take measures to restore and ensure, as far as possible, public order and safety to the population under occupation. International law specifically requires protected persons to be treated humanely and to be protected at all times, in particular against all acts of violence or threats thereof.<sup>138</sup>

66. Israeli courts have charged few persons suspected of committing violent acts against Palestinians, which contributes to a prevailing climate of impunity.<sup>139</sup> Accountability measures have been particularly deficient in cases where settlers or the military alongside settlers have killed Palestinians.<sup>140</sup> On the whole, the civilian and military security forces of Israel rarely protect Palestinians from settler violence. They have been documented standing by and observing violent attacks by settlers and, on occasion, collaborating with such attacks. Judicial authorities rarely hold settlers accountable.

67. A significant number of settler-related violent incidents in the West Bank is linked to outposts.<sup>141</sup> The combination of inadequate Israeli action to prevent the

<sup>134</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians report, 2–15 August 2022”, 19 August 2022.

<sup>135</sup> A/HRC/49/85, para. 13.

<sup>136</sup> Yaniv Kubovich and Amos Harel, “Israeli army and police blame each other as settler violence rages on”, Haaretz, 7 February 2022.

<sup>137</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, art. 2, para. 3, and arts. 6 and 9.

<sup>138</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 27.

<sup>139</sup> A/HRC/49/85, para. 20.

<sup>140</sup> Ibid., paras. 21 and 22.

<sup>141</sup> Ibid., para. 40. See also Peace Now, “Violent settlement: the connection between illegal outposts and settler violence”, November 2021, available at http://peacenow.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2021/12/settlers\_report\_eng.pdf.

building of outposts or dismantle them, and the absence of significant accountability for settler violence has given settlers a general sense of lawlessness and impunity. The village of Burin near Nablus, for example, has repeatedly been attacked by settlers coming from the direction of the Giv'at Ronin outpost. During some of the attacks, settlers were reportedly escorted by Israeli security forces, who took no action to stop them.<sup>142</sup>

68. In addition to settler violence, the erection of outposts and settlements generates violence, including lethal force, against Palestinians when they engage in protests. One example is the Evyatar outpost, south of Nablus, which was erected by settlers on 3 May 2021. In reaction to its establishment, Palestinians from Bayta town, on whose land the outpost was established, held almost daily demonstrations. Demonstrators threw stones and, on some occasions, Molotov cocktails toward Israeli forces. Israeli forces responded with live ammunition, rubber-coated metal bullets, tear-gas canisters and stun grenades, killing at least 10 Palestinians, including two children, and injuring more than 6,000 Palestinians, according to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.<sup>143</sup>

D. Deprivation of natural resources, livelihoods and an adequate standard of living

“We are not leaving our land. Our land is our main source of income, it’s our land and our fathers’ and grandfathers’ land. Where else would we go and what else would we live from?”

Palestinian man, Governorate of Hebron

69. Israeli policies outlined in the present report, such as those on the expropriation of natural resources and on building restrictions, have directly affected the economic, social and cultural rights of Palestinians, including their rights to housing, an adequate standard of living, food, water and sanitation, health care and education.

70. The complete control exerted by Israel over water resources is a key factor preventing Palestinians from accessing affordable and adequate water. This control, coupled with prohibitions on the construction of new water installations or carrying out maintenance on existing installations without a military permit, has put Palestinians at a heightened risk of water scarcity. Palestinians purchase water from official or private providers at a high cost, around six times higher than the national price.<sup>144</sup> The price of trucked water in the West Bank is three times more than the national price of piped water.<sup>145</sup>

<sup>142</sup> B’Tselem, “Burin, Nablus District: settlers attack Israeli activists with stones and clubs and vandalize cars”, 2 March 2022. See also B’Tselem, “Israeli settlers escorted by soldiers attack homes with stones in Burin, Nablus District”, 18 July 2022.

<sup>143</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Data on casualties”, available at www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties. See also A/HRC/49/85, paras. 42–49.

<sup>144</sup> A/HRC/48/43, paras. 26–35 and 43.

<sup>145</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Reliefweb, “Challenges accessing water in the West Bank”, 14 April 2021.

“Women are the cornerstones of our society. We do the cleaning, the cooking, and we produce the dairy products and herd the sheep. The occupation deprives us of electricity, water, roads, education – all of this affects the lives and the role of women in our communities. The men work outside the village and are not always here.”

Palestinian woman, Governorate of Hebron

71. The lack of affordable water affects herders in rural areas, as they require more water to maintain their livestock. In addition, as part of its demolition policies, Israel often confiscates water cisterns belonging to herder communities. For example, in the village of al-Jawaya in the south Hebron hills, three water cisterns were confiscated by the Civil Administration on 19 July 2022.<sup>146</sup> Women and girls are particularly affected by the shortage of water, as they have additional water-related needs for their hygiene and privacy, and are expected to secure water for domestic consumption, cleaning and washing, and for the care for children, the elderly and sick, and livestock.<sup>147</sup>

72. Palestinian agriculture has suffered as a result of Israeli water policies, land expropriation and waste dumping.<sup>148</sup> Land available for Palestinian agriculture has been reduced from 2.4 million dunams in 1980 to around 1 million dunams in 2010, while the share of agriculture in the Palestinian gross domestic product has declined from 35 per cent in 1972 to just 4 per cent in recent years.<sup>149</sup>

73. Women have suffered disproportionately from the decline of the agricultural sector because alternative employment opportunities have failed to emerge.<sup>150</sup> While approximately 60 per cent of Palestinian women worked in agriculture prior to the occupation, currently only 8 per cent work in the sector, mainly because of the loss of land and water.<sup>151</sup> Moreover, other employment opportunities in Israel and Israeli settlements are primarily in the construction sector and/or require passage through Israeli checkpoints, which make them less viable for women.<sup>152</sup> The labour force participation rate of Palestinians in the West Bank is sharply different for women and men. For women, it is estimated at 17 per cent, for men at 74 per cent. The rate for women remains among the 10 lowest in the world.<sup>153</sup> Women’s right to livelihoods is

<sup>146</sup> B’Tselem, “Israel demolishes home and 2 livestock enclosures and rest tent, and confiscates 3 water containers, al-Jawaya, South Hebron Hills”, 19 July 2022.

<sup>147</sup> See E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, pp. 23 and 35. See also Bimkom, “The effect of forced transfer on Bedouin women”, 2017; and Abdel-Rahman Al-Tamimi, Environmental Challenges in Palestine “Gender Perspectives”, Palestinian Working Women Society for Development (October 2021), pp. 16, 26 and 27.

<sup>148</sup> See Women’s Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling, “WCLAC’s shadow report for the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 66th Session – Israel Review, 2019”, p. 11. Available at <http://www.wclac.org/files/library/19/10/yekz3kqu2vf4q0o3xolozc.pdf>.

<sup>149</sup> See United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, The Besieged Palestinian Agricultural Sector, pp. 7 and 8. See also TD/B/67/5, para. 31.

<sup>150</sup> See TD/B/67/5, para. 31, and Women’s Centre for Legal Aid and Counselling, “WCLAC’s shadow report”, p. 11.

<sup>151</sup> See International Labour Organization (ILO), The Situation of Workers of the Occupied Arab Territories: Report of the Director-General – Appendix, 2021 (ILO document ILC.109/DG/APP/2021), p. 18.

<sup>152</sup> See TD/B/67/5, para. 31.

<sup>153</sup> As at 2019. See E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, p. 32.

further harmed by persistent income gaps and by their limited control over other economic assets such as land and property.<sup>154</sup>

74. The Commission finds that the policies that Israel has implemented have had a serious impact on the environment in violation of its obligations as an occupying Power to safeguard public and private properties of occupied territory, unless justified by military necessity.<sup>155</sup> They include construction, such as that of the wall, the destruction of olive, grape and orange orchards to the detriment of both biodiversity and ecosystems, the transfer of Israeli hazardous waste to treatment plants in the West Bank in contravention of the Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal,<sup>156</sup> the transfer of electronic waste,<sup>157</sup> the overexploitation of natural resources including water,<sup>158</sup> the lack of air-pollution control for Israeli industries in the West Bank and the considerable damage caused to agricultural land.<sup>159</sup>

VII. Conclusions

A. Legality of the occupation: permanency and de facto annexation

75. The Commission finds that there are reasonable grounds to conclude that the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory is now unlawful under international law owing to its permanence and to actions undertaken by Israel to annex parts of the land de facto and de jure. Actions by Israel that are intended to create irreversible facts on the ground and expand its control over territory are reflections as well as drivers of its permanent occupation. The settlement enterprise is the principal means by which those results are achieved. Statements made by Israeli officials provide further evidence that Israel intends the occupation to be permanent, as does the absence of actions intended to end the occupation, including in respect to a “two-State solution” or any other solution. By continuing to occupy the territory by force, Israel incurs international responsibilities arising from a continued violation of an international obligation, and remains accountable for any violations of the rights of the Palestinian people.

76. The Commission concludes that Israel treats the occupation as a permanent fixture and has – for all intents and purposes – annexed parts of the West Bank, while seeking to hide behind a fiction of temporariness. Actions by Israel constituting de facto annexation include expropriating land and natural resources, establishing settlements and outposts, maintaining a restrictive and discriminatory planning and building regime for Palestinians and extending Israeli law extraterritorially to Israeli settlers in the West Bank. The International Court of Justice anticipated such a scenario in its 2004 advisory opinion, in which it stated that the wall was

<sup>154</sup> See State of Palestine, Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, press report on the labour force survey results, 7 August 2019, p. 24, available at http://pcbs.gov.ps/portals/\_pcbs/PressRelease/Press\_En\_7-8-2019-lf\_3-en.pdf. See also E/ESCWA/CL2.GPID/2020/TP.29, pp. 32 and 33.

<sup>155</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 53.

<sup>156</sup> See United Nations Environment Programme, State of Environment and Outlook Report for the occupied Palestinian territory 2020 (Nairobi, 2020), p. 112. See also www.basel.int/TheConvention/Overview/tabid/1271/Default.aspx.

<sup>157</sup> See TD/B/EX(71)/2, para. 48.

<sup>158</sup> See A/HRC/48/43. See also Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “Israel’s exploitation of Palestinian resources is human rights violation, says UN expert”, 18 March 2019.

<sup>159</sup> See B’Tselem, “Made in Israel: exploiting Palestinian land for treatment of Israeli waste”, December 2017, p. 14.

creating a fait accompli on the ground that could well become permanent and tantamount to de facto annexation. This has now become the reality.

77. The Commission emphasizes that the occupation and de facto annexation policies of Israel have had a severe impact on Palestinian lives throughout the West Bank and constitute grave violations and abuses of human rights as well as violations of international humanitarian law. The commitment of Israel to supporting this enterprise has resulted in a series of policies that are intended to sustain and extend the enterprise, which have negatively affected all areas of Palestinian life. They include evictions, deportations and the forcible transfer of Palestinians within the West Bank, the expropriation, looting, plundering and exploitation of land and vital natural resources, movement restrictions and the maintenance of a coercive environment with the aim of fragmenting Palestinian society, encouraging the departure of Palestinians from certain areas and ensuring that they are incapable of fulfilling their right to self-determination. The Commission stresses that business enterprises are contributing to the expropriation and exploitation by Israel of Palestinian land and resources and are supporting the transfer of Israeli settlers into the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

78. The Commission has specifically paid attention to gender-based violations and finds that the policies implemented by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory are having a pervasive discriminatory effect on Palestinian women. Those policies have placed women in a position of substantial economic and social vulnerability in comparison to men. The structural reasons that make women and girls vulnerable to the de facto annexation policies implemented by Israel remain unaddressed by all duty bearers. Victims of gender-based violence, including of attacks, harassment and threats directed at women and girls by settlers, are not afforded protection from Israel or recourse to justice in areas under its control. All duty bearers, including Israel, have the obligation to take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination and violence against women, including by private actors.<sup>160</sup>

79. The Commission considers that the security concerns asserted by Israel as justifications for many of its policies cannot be looked at in isolation. Although Israel has some legitimate security concerns, the Commission finds that a significant number of the policies and actions implemented by Israel in the West Bank are not intended to address these concerns, but rather that security is often used to justify the territorial expansion of Israel. In addition, and notwithstanding security concerns, all actions implemented by Israel must remain in conformity with applicable international law. The permanent dispossession of the Palestinian people and the denial of their basic rights will never be a recipe for achieving sustainable security.

80. Moreover, certain “security” policies, including settler-only roads, closures, restrictions on the freedom of movement and punitive home demolitions, are based on discriminatory and otherwise unlawful measures and appear to constitute collective punishment against an entire population. The Commission emphasizes that, as the occupying Power, Israel has the duty to ensure the protection, security and welfare of the people living under its occupation and to guarantee that they can live as normal a life as possible, in accordance with their own laws, culture and traditions.

81. The purported de jure annexation by Israel of East Jerusalem is unequivocally unlawful, null and void, and has been recognized as such by the United Nations. The

---

<sup>160</sup> Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, art. 2. See also Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, general recommendation No. 35 (2017), para. 24.

Commission emphasizes that the situation for Palestinians in East Jerusalem continues to deteriorate as Israel expands its East Jerusalem settlements and applies measures and policies intended to further reduce Palestinian space and coerce them to leave their homes.

82. Israel remains in occupation of Gaza by virtue of the control exercised over, inter alia, its airspace and territorial waters, its land crossings at the borders and its supply of civilian infrastructure, including water and electricity.

83. In relation to the situation in Israel itself, the Commission has reviewed the treatment of Palestinian citizens of Israel and notes that they are still subjected to discriminatory laws and public policies, including in the areas of education, housing and construction, and employment, a matter that the Commission intends to examine in a future report.

84. In the view of the Commission, the permanent occupation and de facto annexation by Israel, including the actions undertaken by Israel as identified in the present report, cannot remain unaddressed. The International Court of Justice should be requested to advise on the legal consequences of the continued refusal by Israel to end its occupation and of the steps it has taken to entrench its control and expansion into the occupied area through de facto annexation, and on the obligations of third States and the United Nations to ensure that Israel respects international law.

B. International criminal law

85. The Commission concludes that some of the policies and actions carried out by the Government of Israel that are leading to permanent occupation and therefore to de facto annexation may constitute elements of crimes under international criminal law. Specifically, the Commission draws attention to the establishment of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in a breach of article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. Consistent with the preliminary examination findings of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court,<sup>161</sup> the Commission finds on reasonable grounds that war crimes may have been committed under article 8 (2) (b) (viii) of the Rome Statute in relation to the transfer of parts of the occupying Power's own population into the West Bank.

86. The Commission also finds that the policies identified in the present report that have contributed to the forced displacement of the Palestinian population from certain areas, altered the demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and resulted in Palestinian communities being almost completely encircled by Israeli settlements, may constitute the crime against humanity of deportation or forcible transfer of population under article 7 (1) (d) of the Rome Statute. Such policies, appear to form part of an intentional, widespread and systematic attack directed at the Palestinian population with the aim of forcibly transferring them from parts of the West Bank to alter the demographic make-up. These acts may also amount to the crime against humanity of persecution under article 7 (1) (h) of the Rome Statute.

87. The Commission also finds that the looting, plundering and exploitation of natural resources by both private persons and commercial entities for private or personal use, as highlighted in paragraph 37 of the present report, may amount to the war crime of pillage under the article 8 (2) (b) (xvi) of the Rome Statute.

---

<sup>161</sup> Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, "Situation in Palestine: summary of preliminary examination findings". Available at www.icc-cpi.int/sites/default/files/items/Documents/210303-office-of-the-prosecutor-palestine-summary-findings-eng.pdf.

88. Along with the direct perpetration of such crimes and the responsibility of political leaders, military commanders and other superiors, the Commission intends to explore the criminal responsibility of persons facilitating the commission of crimes through actions that aid, abet or otherwise assist.

C. Third-party responsibility

89. The International Court of Justice has emphasized that, under article 1 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, every State party is under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and not to render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation created by such construction. It has further expressed the view that the United Nations, especially the General Assembly and the Security Council, should consider what further action is required to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and the associated regime.<sup>162</sup>

90. Articles 146 to 148 of the Fourth Geneva Convention further require States parties to provide penal sanctions for persons committing, or ordering to be committed, grave breaches. Several such grave breaches have been identified in the present report, such as the unlawful deportation or transfer, or unlawful confinement of a protected person, and the extensive destruction and expropriation of property not justified by military necessity and carried out unlawfully and wantonly.

VIII. Recommendations

91. The Commission recommends that the Government of Israel:

(a) Comply fully with international law and end without delay its 55 years of occupation of the Palestinian and Syrian territories;

(b) Comply with its obligations under international humanitarian law and international human rights law, including, specifically, with regard to the obligation to respect, protect and fulfil the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and its right to freely utilize natural resources, under international human rights law, including article 1 of both the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

92. The Commission recommends that the General Assembly:

(a) Urgently request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the legal consequences of the continued refusal on the part of Israel to end its occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, amounting to de facto annexation, of policies employed to achieve this, and of the refusal on the part of Israel to respect the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, and on the obligations of third States and the United Nations to ensure respect for international law;

(b) Transmit the present report to the Security Council and request that it consider further action to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the permanent occupation imposed by Israel, and call upon the Security Council to require Israel to immediately bring its permanent occupation to an end.

<sup>162</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I. C. J. Reports 2004, p. 136, paras. 159 and 160.

93. The Commission recommends that the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court prioritize the investigation into the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and, in addition to identifying direct perpetrators and those exercising command responsibility, investigate those aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in the commission of crimes under the Rome Statute, including by providing the means for their commission.

94. The Commission recommends that the Security Council urgently consider measures to ensure that Israel immediately complies with its international legal obligations and with prior Council resolutions, including those in which the Council has called for an end to the occupation, has declared the acquisition of territory by force inadmissible and has found that settlement activity constitutes a flagrant violation of international law.

95. The Commission recommends that States Members of the United Nations uphold their obligations under international law, including their extraterritorial human rights obligations, and obligations under the common article 1 to the four Geneva Conventions and articles 146, 147 and 148 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, including by investigating and prosecuting persons suspected of committing or otherwise aiding and abetting or assisting in the commission or attempted commission of crimes under international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
5 September 2023

Original: English

---

Seventy-eighth session

Item 73 of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights

Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel

Note by the Secretary-General**

The Secretary General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution S-30/1.

---

* A/78/150.

** The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent information.

Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel

Summary

The Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel hereby submits its second report to the General Assembly. The report examines the use of force by Israel and the de facto authorities in Gaza.

I. Introduction and methodology

1. In its previous report to the General Assembly (A/77/328), the Commission found reasonable grounds to conclude that the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory is now unlawful under international law, owing to its permanence and to actions undertaken by Israel to annex parts of the land de facto and de jure. The Commission focused the present report on the use of force in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in Israel, examining practices and policies, analysing the human rights and legal consequences of force used and identifying root causes of recurring violence and protracted conflict.

2. The report is based on interviews conducted with primary and secondary sources up to 31 July 2023, open-source research, meetings with stakeholders, public hearings and submissions received following a call issued on 2 November 2022.

3. In selecting cases for in-depth analysis in the present report, the Commission identified emblematic cases that took place on or after May 2021 that are representative of a wider trend. Information that met the criteria of reliability and authenticity was included and analysed under the standard of proof of “reasonable grounds to conclude”.

4. The Commission sent requests for information to Israel, the State of Palestine and the United States of America. The State of Palestine provided the Commission with information. No response was received from Israel or the United States. In articulating the Israeli position on actions reviewed in the present report, the Commission relied only on available official documents and open sources. Israel continues to fail to respond to the Commission’s request to grant access to its territory and to the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

II. Applicable legal framework

5. In its terms of reference<sup>1</sup> and in its previous reports to the General Assembly and Human Rights Council,<sup>2</sup> the Commission laid out the applicable international legal framework in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in Israel. The Commission reiterates that the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem and Gaza, and the occupied Syrian Golan are currently under belligerent occupation by Israel, to which international humanitarian law applies concurrently with international human rights law.<sup>3</sup> The Commission emphasizes that those two legal frameworks apply, notwithstanding the Israeli Government’s justification of its conduct as defence against “terrorism”.<sup>4</sup> The Commission considers that Israeli security forces operations in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, analysed in the present report fall under the law enforcement paradigm, governed by international human rights law, and operations in Gaza fall under the conduct of hostilities paradigm, regulated by international humanitarian law and international human rights law.

---

<sup>1</sup> Available at http://www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/2022-01/TORs-UN-Independent\_ICI\_Occupied\_Palestinian\_Territories.pdf.

<sup>2</sup> See A/77/328, para. 7, and A/HRC/50/21, paras. 14–25.

<sup>3</sup> See A/77/328, para. 7; A/HRC/50/21, paras. 16 and 20; and Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, at p. 178, para. 106.

<sup>4</sup> The Commission notes that the term “terrorism” is not clearly defined under international law.

The use of force in law enforcement under international human rights law

6. Israel, as the occupying Power, is obligated to restore and ensure, as far as possible, public order and safety in the occupied area and, accordingly, is authorized to conduct law-enforcement operations, including policing activities.<sup>5</sup> The use of excessive or disproportionate force is prohibited, deriving from, inter alia, the right to life, the right to physical and mental integrity and the prohibition of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, as provided in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to which both Israel and the State of Palestine are parties.<sup>6</sup> In the absence of active hostilities in the cases examined, the Commission applies international human rights law governing the law enforcement paradigm.<sup>7</sup> Law enforcement officials may use force only when it serves a legitimate law enforcement purpose, when it is strictly necessary and when it is proportionate.<sup>8</sup> Reasonable precautions should be taken to prevent loss of life and injury.

7. The use of lethal force by law enforcement officials, that is, the use of a firearm, is permissible only in self-defence or to protect life.<sup>9</sup> When using firearms in circumstances permitted under international law, law enforcement officials must exercise restraint in order to minimize damage and injury and to preserve human life.<sup>10</sup> The use of deadly force in law enforcement should be exceptional and is permissible only under the narrowest prescribed circumstances.

The use of force in conduct of hostilities under international humanitarian law

8. The Commission applies international humanitarian law to incidents related to the conduct of hostilities. The three fundamental principles are distinction, precaution and proportionality.<sup>11</sup>

9. The principle of distinction requires parties to an armed conflict to distinguish between civilians and civilian objects on the one hand and combatants and military objectives on the other.<sup>12</sup> It prohibits direct attacks against civilians and the means and methods of warfare that may lead to indiscriminate attacks.<sup>13</sup> The principle of precaution requires that the parties take all feasible measures to minimize the loss of civilian life and damage to civilian objects, including providing effective advance warnings to the civilian population prior to an attack.<sup>14</sup> The principle of proportionality requires that the parties ensure that the expected incidental loss of

<sup>5</sup> See Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907, art. 43 and Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 64. See also Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2005, p. 168, at p. 231, para. 178.

<sup>6</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, arts. 6 (1) and 7.

<sup>7</sup> Nils Melzer, Interpretative guidance on the notion of direct participation in hostilities under international humanitarian law (Geneva, International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), 2009), pp. 59 and 71.

<sup>8</sup> See United Nations, Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials, adopted at the Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, Havana (1990), principles 4 and 5; General Assembly resolution 34/169, annex, art. 3; and CCPR/C/GC/36.

<sup>9</sup> See United Nations, Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms, principle 9.

<sup>10</sup> See ibid., principles 5 (a) and (b).

<sup>11</sup> These principles apply to international and non-international armed conflicts. See ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law database, rules 1, 7, 14 and 15.

<sup>12</sup> See ibid., rules 1, 7 and 71; Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflicts, art. 48; and Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1996, p. 226, at p. 257, para. 78.

<sup>13</sup> ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law database, rules 11 and 12.

<sup>14</sup> Protocol I Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949, art. 57 (2) (a) (ii); ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law database, rule 20.

civilian life and damage to civilian objects are not excessive when compared with the military advantage of an attack.<sup>15</sup>

10. Should an incident initially governed under the law enforcement paradigm rise to the level of conduct of hostilities, the legal framework governing the law enforcement paradigm for use of force continues to apply to civilians who do not directly participate in the hostilities. However, combatants and civilians directly participating in hostilities may be targeted, taking into account the core principles of international humanitarian law and only for the duration of their participation in hostilities.

11. The Commission notes that Israel has invoked Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, citing self-defence against an armed attack, to justify its military operations. In 2004, the International Court of Justice held that Israel is unable to rely on Article 51 in relation to an attack emanating from the Occupied Palestinian Territory, given that the whole of the Territory is under its effective control.<sup>16</sup> The Commission reiterates the important distinction between jus ad bellum and jus in bello, and notes that Israel is obliged to follow international humanitarian law in all its military operations.

III. Demonstrations

A. Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem<sup>17</sup>

12. Palestinians living in occupied territory since 1967 have legitimately asserted their right to self-determination in various ways, including through demonstrations. The Commission reviewed Israeli security forces responses to such demonstrations and analysed cases from 2021 to 2023.

13. During the military Operation Guardian of the Walls, conducted over 11 days in May 2021, Israeli security forces used live ammunition to suppress demonstrations held across the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, killing 15 Palestinians, including 3 children, and injuring 774, including 64 children.<sup>18</sup> Israeli security forces reportedly used lethal force, including live ammunition, to suppress protests when there was no danger posed to the lives of members of Israeli security forces or civilians present at the scene.<sup>19</sup> The Commission observes that the routine use of excessive force by ISF in these demonstrations in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, has been documented in United Nations reports for decades.

14. In April 2022 and April 2023, Israeli security forces used excessive force to disperse Palestinians gathering to protest at the Aqsa Mosque. On 22 April 2022, violent demonstrations erupted in the early morning hours at the Aqsa Mosque compound. According to information verified by the Commission, Israeli security forces, including the Police Counter-Terrorism Unit (Yamam) and Israeli Security Agency (Shabak), entered Al-Aqsa Mosque, sparking protests, with calls by protesters for the preservation of the Mosque's sanctity. Palestinian protesters gathered in front of the Mughrabi gate at the entrance of Aqsa Mosque compound and threw stones at Israeli security forces personnel entering through the gate to confront the protesters. Israeli security forces used large amounts of 40 mm black-tipped

<sup>15</sup> Ibid., rule 14.

<sup>16</sup> See Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, at p. 194, paras. 138–139.

<sup>17</sup> The use of force by Palestinian duty bearers in the context of demonstrations held in June 2021 following the killing of Nizar Banat was examined by the Commission in A/HRC/53/22.

<sup>18</sup> A/76/333, para. 13. The Commission has included disaggregated data in the present report when available.

<sup>19</sup> Ibid.

sponge bullets, stun grenades and tear gas.<sup>20</sup> Black-tipped sponge bullets have high kinetic energy and are capable of causing serious injury. This resulted in serious injuries to civilians, including journalists, who were clearly identifiable as such. At least two journalists were injured. Some protesters were hit by projectiles above the knee or waist. Reportedly, 57 persons were injured that day.<sup>21</sup>

15. In one specific incident, a Palestinian protester from East Jerusalem was injured during the protests and, weeks later, died in hospital. A video from the incident showed him running away from Israeli security forces in the Aqsa Mosque compound and collapsing mid-run.<sup>22</sup> Israeli authorities initially stated that the victim had fallen as he was running, hitting his head on the ground.<sup>23</sup> However, one Israeli official later admitted in a media interview that the victim had been shot.<sup>24</sup> The Commission verified and analysed video footage and has reasonable grounds to conclude that the victim was hit by a projectile, likely a black-tipped sponge bullet, which led to his collapse on the ground. The victim was admitted to Hadassah Hospital at Mount Scopus and later transferred to Hadassah Hospital at Ein Karem where, after 21 days in a coma, he was declared dead on 14 May. The Commission's investigation into this incident is continuing. A medic was also shot in the head with a sponge bullet and injured while trying to provide assistance.<sup>25</sup>

16. The Israeli police's demonstration dispersal procedure, published in June 2021,<sup>26</sup> lists 24 permitted "less-lethal" demonstration dispersal means.<sup>27</sup> The procedure lists sponge bullets as an acceptable means for demonstration dispersal, but the rules of engagement for their use are redacted in the version accessed by the Commission.<sup>28</sup> The Commission has documented information that, in 2014, Israeli police started using reinforced sponge bullets, known as "black bullets", which has resulted since in greater harm to victims.<sup>29</sup> The Association for Civil Rights in Israel, an Israeli non-governmental organization, documented 30 cases of injuries as a result of the use of sponge bullets between July 2014 and August 2016, 17 of which involved loss or damage to eyesight.<sup>30</sup> The Commission notes that lawful use of force and firearms must minimize damage and injury and respect and preserve human life.<sup>31</sup>

<sup>20</sup> Interviews on file. See also para. 16 of the present report and Vice News, "Death of a protestor", 17 March 2023, available at https://www.vicetv.com/en\_us/video/death-of-a-protestor/63bc8f4f998d95260906c987.

<sup>21</sup> See <https://www.facebook.com/watch/?v=1856579334549459>.

<sup>22</sup> See Vice News, "Death of a protestor", available at https://www.vicetv.com/en\_us/video/death-of-a-protestor/63bc8f4f998d95260906c987.

<sup>23</sup> Document and interviews on file.

<sup>24</sup> The official later reportedly retracted the comment. See Hind Hassan, "Death of a Palestinian protestor: how did Walid al-Sharif die?", Vice News, 18 March 2023. See also Vice News, "Death of a protestor", available at https://www.vicetv.com/en\_us/video/death-of-a-protestor/63bc8f4f998d95260906c987.

<sup>25</sup> Interviews and document on file. See also Vice News, "Death of a protestor", available at https://www.vicetv.com/en\_us/video/death-of-a-protestor/63bc8f4f998d95260906c987.

<sup>26</sup> See https://www.police.gov.il/menifa/90.220.010.11\_3.pdf (in Hebrew). The procedure is applicable to occupied East Jerusalem but not to the occupied West Bank, where military law applies.

<sup>27</sup> See also A/HRC/40/CRP.2, paras. 278–293. See also para. 15 of the present report.

<sup>28</sup> See https://www.police.gov.il/menifa/90.220.010.14\_2\_P.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>29</sup> See https://www.police.gov.il/menifa/90.220.010.11\_3.pdf (in Hebrew); B'Tselem, "Palestinian 10-year-old loses eye after Border Police unlawfully fire sponge round at him, East Jerusalem", 15 July 2015; and Association for Civil Rights in Israel, "Injuries caused by sponge bullets in East Jerusalem", 16 March 2016.

<sup>30</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, "Accounts of injuries from sponge-tipped bullets in East Jerusalem, July 2014–February 2016". Available at <https://law.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2016/03/List-of-people-wounded-by-sponge-bullets-July-2014-to-February-2016.pdf>.

<sup>31</sup> United Nations, Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms, principle 5 (b).

“Less-lethal” methods, if used in a manner that causes serious injury or death, may amount to serious human rights violations.<sup>32</sup>

17. In the West Bank, all demonstrations by Palestinians involving more than 10 persons require the permission of the Military Commander, which is rarely granted. Such demonstrations are therefore seen as unlawful under Israeli military law.<sup>33</sup> On that basis, at the discretion of the Military Commander, Israeli security forces have consistently employed lethal force to disperse Palestinian demonstrations whether they involved violence or not.<sup>34</sup> The Commission has no access to the classified Israeli security forces procedures on demonstration dispersal applicable to the West Bank. However, the Commission notes significant evidence that Israeli security forces use lethal force, including small-calibre rifles, to suppress demonstrations in situations where there is no reasonable threat to life.

18. Israeli security forces routinely use live ammunition to disperse Palestinian demonstrations in the West Bank, including “Ruger”<sup>35</sup> rifles loaded with small arms .22 LR rimfire ammunition.<sup>36</sup> In November 2021, the Israeli Ministry of Defence released data indicating that 12 Palestinians had been killed by Rugers between 2016 and 2021, 8 in 2021 alone.<sup>37</sup> Rugers have been used routinely against Palestinian demonstrators in the West Bank<sup>38</sup> despite admissions by Israeli security forces that the rules for using the Ruger are comparable to the rules for opening fire with live ammunition<sup>39</sup> and despite repeated incidents of killing of protesters and shooting of soldiers through “friendly fire”.<sup>40</sup> The Commission notes that live ammunition should only be used in situations where there is a serious threat to life.

19. Some Palestinian protesters in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, have thrown stones at armed Israeli security forces during demonstrations. The Commission understands most cases of stone-throwing in these contexts to be aimed at expressing protest, including as a result of Israeli security forces soldiers entering places of worship, villages and towns during funerals of persons killed by Israeli security forces, or as a general form of protest against the occupation. A January 2023

<sup>32</sup> Guidance on Less-Lethal Weapons in Law Enforcement (United Nations publication, 2020), section 7.5.

<sup>33</sup> Military Order No. 101 (1967), arts. 1 and 3 (a). The Order applies to Palestinians only and not to settlers.

<sup>34</sup> See <https://law.acri.org.il/he/wp-content/uploads/2014/10/right-to-demonstrate-OPT2014.pdf> (in Hebrew), p. 26.

<sup>35</sup> “Ruger” is a colloquial term used by Israeli security forces referring to small-calibre rifles that use small-arms .22 LR ammunition.

<sup>36</sup> See <https://twitter.com/idfonline/status/1660875308818472961> (in Hebrew); see also <https://www.kan.org.il/content/kan/kan-11/p-12043/%D7%A2%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%94-5/132715> (accessible with a virtual private network (VPN), with Israel as the location).

<sup>37</sup> See (in Hebrew) https://twitter.com/gaby\_lasky/status/1457313073337864193?ref\_src=twsrc%5Etfw%7Ctwcamp%5Etwembed%7Ctwterm%5E1457313073337864193%7Ctwgr%5E0b3c045f2733c3af99fce20e7a5b489e533e848a%7Ctwcon%5Es1\_&ref\_url=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.i24news.tv%2Fen%2Fnews%2Fmiddle-east%2Fpalestinian-territories%2F1636299412-deaths-caused-by-low-caliber-rounds-in-west-bank-rose-in-2021. See also <https://www.kan.org.il/content/kan/kan-11/p-12043/%D7%A2%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%94-5/132715> (accessible with a VPN, with Israel as the location).

<sup>38</sup> Including in situations categorized by Israeli security forces as disturbances of the peace. See, for example, <https://twitter.com/idfonline/status/1691324777405771776> (in Hebrew).

<sup>39</sup> See https://www.btselem.org/hebrew/firearms/20090301\_use\_of\_ruger\_rifle\_in\_demonstrations\_prohibit (in Hebrew); Avichai Mandelblit, Judge Advocate General of Israel, “Shooting at demonstrators”, faxed letter to Jessica Montell, B’Tselem, 2 July 2009, available at https://www.btselem.org/download/20090702\_jag\_response\_to\_letter\_on\_use\_of\_ruger\_rifles\_against\_demonstrators\_eng.pdf. See also <https://www.idf.il/media/nunohb4e/%D7%91%D7%A7%D7%A9%D7%94-%D7%A2%D7%9D-%D7%9E%D7%A2%D7%A0%D7%94-14.pdf> (in Hebrew).

<sup>40</sup> See, for example, <https://www.maariv.co.il/news/military/Article-875222> (in Hebrew).

clarification to the rules of engagement of the Israeli security forces in relation to stone-throwing clearly acknowledges that not all stone-throwing is an “imminent and real danger” to the life of soldiers. The clarification noted that “it is forbidden to shoot towards stone-throwers, unless there is a situation of imminent and real danger to life”.<sup>41</sup> The clarification distinguishes between situations in which there is an imminent and real danger to life and those in which there is not. As nearly half of Palestinians killed between November 2021 and October 2022, including several children, were killed in the context of stone-throwing (see A/HRC/52/75, para. 20), this clarification was arguably issued to reduce such cases. The Commission observes that stone-throwing does not normally pose an imminent threat to the lives of heavily armed and armoured military forces.<sup>42</sup> The Commission concludes that, in most cases in which Israeli security forces used lethal force against stone-throwers, there was no imminent threat to life and that the use of lethal force was not a necessary or proportionate response to the actions of the protesters, especially children.

20. Many of those killed by Israeli security forces in demonstrations have been targeted because Israeli security forces have labelled them “key instigators”. Israeli authorities have publicly acknowledged the policy of targeting “key instigators” with live fire during demonstrations following the Great March of Return in 2018. In that context, the Supreme Court of Israel dismissed a petition challenging the use of live ammunition against “main inciters” even if said inciters did not pose an immediate threat.<sup>43</sup> The Court held that “the use of potentially lethal force for the sake of dispersing a mass riot – from which an actual and imminent danger is posed to life or bodily integrity – is, in principle, permitted, subject to proving necessity and to proportionality”. The Court declined to examine how the rules were applied on the ground, deferring to the internal investigations of the Israeli security forces.<sup>44</sup> In 2019, the Israeli Army clarified its definition of “key instigators” as “persons who direct or order activities within the mob, such as coordinating the tactical placement and setting on fire of tires, coordinating people to contribute towards pulling back parts of the security infrastructure and so on”.<sup>45</sup> The Commission notes that the classification and targeting of an individual as a “key instigator” does not exist in international human rights law or international humanitarian law.

21. The Commission affirms the right of the Palestinian people to protest against the occupation. The Commission considers that dispersal of demonstrators by Israeli security forces in the West Bank should follow the international human rights law framework governing law enforcement and is concerned with the wrongful conflation of the law enforcement paradigm, which is governed by international human rights law, and the conduct of hostilities paradigm, which is governed by international humanitarian law. This conflation offers less protection to civilians and civilian objects when the operations are clearly law enforcement operations.

B. Israel

22. Over the 11 days of the Guardian of the Walls operation in May 2021, Israeli security forces dispersed demonstrations in mixed Jewish-Palestinian cities with the

<sup>41</sup> Document on file.

<sup>42</sup> The Commission is not aware of a single Israeli security forces soldier being killed as a result of stone-throwing.

<sup>43</sup> See Elena Chachko and Yuval Shany, “The Supreme Court of Israel Dismisses a Petition Against Gaza Rules of Engagement”, Lawfare, 26 May, 2018.

<sup>44</sup> High Court of Justice of Israel, petition HCJ 3003/18, judgment of 24 May 2018, available at <https://supremedecisions.court.gov.il/Home/Download?path=EnglishVerdicts/18/030/030/k08&fileName=18030030.K08&type=4>. See also A/HRC/40/74, paras. 35–36.

<sup>45</sup> Israel Defense Forces Editorial Team, “IDF Use of Potentially Lethal Force”, 13 February 2022.

use of lethal force. The Commission viewed ample evidence indicating that groups of armed settlers and other armed civilians were also directly involved in attacking Palestinians and suppressing demonstrations and that Israeli police failed to protect Palestinians from such attacks.<sup>46</sup> Hundreds of Palestinians with Israeli citizenship were arrested during and following the May 2021 escalation, while a significantly smaller number of Jewish Israelis were arrested for taking part in attacks against Palestinians. No fewer than 616 persons were indicted; of these, 545 were Palestinians with Israeli citizenship and 71 were Jewish Israelis.<sup>47</sup>

23. On 12 May 2021, Mohammad Kiwan, a 17-year-old Palestinian citizen of Israel, was shot and killed by Israeli police in Umm el Fahm in close vicinity to ongoing protests. Following an investigation by the Department of Internal Police Investigations (“Machash” in Hebrew), the family was informed on 15 September 2021 that the investigation found no evidence of wrongdoing. The Department noted that police forces had chased “rioters” into a car park, where the deceased and two others entered a car and drove towards the exit, hitting a police officer as they sped away. At that point, a second police officer fired two shots at the vehicle, one to the wheels and one to the back windscreen that hit Kiwan in the back of his head. The Department claimed that the shooter felt he was in imminent danger, as he thought that it was a “terror” attack and that that assessment was justified.<sup>48</sup> Despite this statement, available information on the case indicates that the shooting occurred while the vehicle was pulling away, with the police officer aiming at least one bullet at the level of the car’s windscreen and not at the wheels. On that basis, the shooting could not have been justified by the claim of imminent danger to the police officers.

24. Prime Minister Netanyahu and other Israeli Government officials framed these demonstrations as “a nationalistic incident”, insinuating that it was terrorism-related, thus reinforcing the idea that it was a situation that required a heavy response with Army involvement to suppress demonstrations.<sup>49</sup> Israeli authorities, relying on the 2016 Counter-Terrorism Law, charged 189 people with charges related to “terrorism”, 168 of whom were Palestinians with Israeli citizenship.<sup>50</sup>

25. Since January 2023, country-wide demonstrations have been held weekly to protest the proposed legislation by the Netanyahu Government intended to weaken judicial independence.<sup>51</sup> As at 30 July 2023, 123 Israeli citizens have reportedly been injured in these demonstrations, the majority from stun grenades, direct hits to the head by water cannons fired from close range and trampling by police horses. Some 702 demonstrators have reportedly been arrested.<sup>52</sup> In April 2023, the Association for Civil Rights in Israel requested that police stop using stun grenades against demonstrators, highlighting the inaccurate nature of the grenades and the indiscriminate harm they cause to groups of protesters.<sup>53</sup> The Association also noted the widespread use of stun grenades in the May 2021 demonstrations. The use of excessive force against largely peaceful assemblies violates the right to peaceful assembly and the prohibition on the excessive or disproportionate use of force by law enforcement.<sup>54</sup> On 6 July 2023, the Chief of Police for Tel Aviv resigned, noting that

<sup>46</sup> Documents on file.

<sup>47</sup> See https://fs.knesset.gov.il/25/agendasuggestion/25\_asg\_bg\_2622383.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>48</sup> Interview and documents on file.

<sup>49</sup> See <https://www.facebook.com/watch/?v=488360188948464> (in Hebrew).

<sup>50</sup> See https://fs.knesset.gov.il/25/agendasuggestion/25\_asg\_bg\_2622383.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>51</sup> See A/HRC/53/22, para. 12.

<sup>52</sup> See <https://13tv.co.il/item/news/domestic/internal/sdchi-903644433> (in Hebrew).

<sup>53</sup> See https://01368b10-57e4-4138-acc3-01373134d221.usrfiles.com/ugd/01368b\_845936dfeab24e698b4ca6b516729d18.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>54</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, arts. 4 and 21. See also United Nations, Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms, principles 4, 8 and 12–14; and CCPR/C/GC/37, para. 17.

he had been removed from his role owing to his reluctance to use excessive force against demonstrators. In a statement, he said: “I encountered an absurd reality in which ensuring calm and order was not what was required of me, but precisely the opposite.”<sup>55</sup>

IV. Search and arrest operations

26. Israeli security forces routinely conduct search and arrest operations to arrest Palestinians in the West Bank that result in death, injury and destruction of civilian property. The Commission has been informed that such operations have increased in number, frequency and force used since Operation Break the Wave was launched by Israeli security forces in March 2022 following several attacks by Palestinians against Israeli civilians.<sup>56</sup> In April 2022, then Prime Minister Naftali Bennett declared that there would be “no restrictions” on Israeli forces’ actions.<sup>57</sup> Data from the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs indicate that 2022 was the deadliest year for Palestinians in the West Bank since data collection began in 2005.<sup>58</sup> Moreover, 2022 was the deadliest year for Palestinian children in 15 years.<sup>59</sup> According to the Secretary-General’s annual report on children and armed conflict for 2022, 34 out of 42 children who were killed by Israeli security forces in the West Bank were killed using live ammunition, including during law enforcement operations and associated clashes (see A/77/895-S/2023/363, para. 88).

27. The first six months of 2023 continue that trend, with a 160 per cent increase in fatalities in the entire Occupied Palestinian Territory compared with the same period in 2022. In that period, 141 Palestinians, including 24 children, were killed in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the vast majority killed by Israeli security forces.<sup>60</sup>

Nablus operation of 22 February 2023

28. On 22 February 2023, Israeli security forces conducted a search and arrest operation in Nablus targeting three Palestinians suspected of planning and carrying out shooting incidents against Israeli security forces.<sup>61</sup> The three suspects were hiding in an empty building in the centre of town. They were killed following an exchange of fire with Israeli security forces that also involved members of Palestinian armed

<sup>55</sup> Maayan Lubell, “Tel Aviv police chief quits, citing government meddling against protesters”, Reuters, 6 July 2023.

<sup>56</sup> See, for example, Al-Haq, “Israel’s destructive attacks in the West Bank: infiltrating the Palestinian urban fabric to suppress resistance”. Available at <https://raids.alhaq.org>.

<sup>57</sup> Office of the Prime Minister of Israel, “PM Bennett’s statement at the Kirya in Tel Aviv with Defense Minister Gantz and Public Security Minister Barlev”, 8 April 2022.

<sup>58</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians report, 8–12 November 2022”, 25 November 2022.

<sup>59</sup> See Save the Children, “2022 becomes the deadliest year for Palestinian children in the West bank in over 15 years – Save the Children”, 23 November 2022. See also Human Rights Watch, “West Bank: spike in Israeli killings of Palestinian children”, 28 August 2023.

<sup>60</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “OPT: key facts and figures, January–June 2023” (on file).

<sup>61</sup> See (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D/2023/%D7%A4%D7%91%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%90%D7%A8/%D7%A0%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9C-3-%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%91%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A9%D7%9B%D7%9D-%D7%A4%D7%A2%D7%99%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%90%D7%99%D7%95%D7%A9-%D7%99%D7%94%D7%95%D7%93%D7%94-%D7%95%D7%A9%D7%95%D7%9E%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%92%D7%95%D7%91-%D7%94%D7%90%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%99%D7%9D>.

groups firing from nearby locations.<sup>62</sup> The operation resulted in the killing of 10 Palestinians, including at least 3 civilians, injury to 453 more and destruction of civilian property and infrastructure.<sup>63</sup>

29. Additional confrontations between Palestinian residents and Israeli forces developed in response to the operation, with Israeli forces reportedly firing live ammunition, rubber bullets and tear-gas canisters towards Palestinians, some of whom engaged in the throwing of stones and Molotov cocktails at the forces. At around 1 p.m., a 72-year-old Palestinian man was killed by Israeli security forces in the Qaysariyah neighbourhood in the old city of Nablus.<sup>64</sup> When two Palestinian men tried to retrieve his body from the road, they were shot and injured by Israeli security forces. While the Israeli security forces vehicles were withdrawing from the area, they were pelted with stones, rocks and other objects.<sup>65</sup> In the vicinity of the Rahmah medical clinic, one of the Israeli security forces vehicles slowed down and opened fire on a group of Palestinians standing in front of the clinic gate.<sup>66</sup> As a result, two Palestinian civilians were killed: a 65-year-old man and a 16-year-old boy. Three others were injured.

30. According to several sources, Israeli security forces fired at least 14 times at this group in front of the clinic. The forces claimed that they were returning fire at an armed man who had shot at them and then escaped into the group of civilians.<sup>67</sup> After viewing video footage from the incident, the Commission verified that an armed man had been shooting at the Israeli security forces convoy and then escaped in the direction of a mosque situated in the same building as the clinic. However, the armed man was no longer posing a threat to the lives of the Israeli security forces, and the shooting was carried out in the direction of a clear civilian location,<sup>68</sup> where civilians were hiding from the violence. The Commission finds that the use of force was disproportionate to the law enforcement purpose of the operation. In addition, the use of lethal force was not strictly necessary, given the number of civilians in the area and given that less lethal means were available to effect arrests. The Commission reiterates that law enforcement must exercise restraint to protect lives and minimize damage.

Jenin operation of July 2023

31. On 3 July 2023, Israeli security forces initiated Operation Home and Garden in Jenin refugee camp, whose stated objectives were to “neutralize terrorist infrastructure in the refugee camp, target terrorists, apprehend wanted individuals, neutralize command centres, dismantle weapon workshops and ammunition factories”. Israeli security forces claimed that at least 50 “terror” attacks had been

<sup>62</sup> Interviews on file.

<sup>63</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians report, 14–27 February 2023”, 4 March 2023.

<sup>64</sup> Interviews on file.

<sup>65</sup> See Miriam Berger, Evan Hill, Imogen Piner and Meg Kelly, “3D analysis shows how Israeli troops fired into group of civilians”, The Washington Post, 10 March 2023.

<sup>66</sup> Interviews on file.

<sup>67</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians report, 14–27 February 2023”.

<sup>68</sup> Interview on file.

launched from Jenin refugee camp since the start of 2023.<sup>69</sup> This followed at least two other, larger-scale “search and arrest” operations in Jenin, carried out in June 2023, which saw substantial resistance to Israeli security forces.<sup>70</sup> During the two-day operation, conducted in July, Israeli forces launched air attacks and ground raids in the largest military operation in the West Bank in 20 years.<sup>71</sup> According to the Palestinian Ministry of Health, 12 Palestinians, including 5 children, were killed during the operation and at least 143 were injured. This is the highest number of Palestinian fatalities in a single operation in the West Bank since 2005.<sup>72</sup> Israeli security forces claimed that none of the fatalities was a civilian<sup>73</sup> and that it arrested 30 people during this operation.<sup>74</sup>

32. In addition to carrying out arrests, as noted above, Israeli security forces were guided by a clear objective of targeting persons they defined as “terrorists”. The Commission verified one incident during the operation in which an unarmed 16-year-old boy was killed by Israeli security forces. In a statement to the British news publication The Times, the Israeli Army’s spokesperson claimed that the boy was armed with an automatic weapon and that he was a combatant.<sup>75</sup> A video of the incident, verified by the Commission, shows that he was not armed when he was killed. On 9 July 2023, the spokesperson published photos and screenshots collected by Israeli security forces as the justification for targeting the boy. The photos included images of the boy carrying weapons, posted on social media. The Commission has reviewed the social media posts suggesting that the boy was likely affiliated with Palestinian Islamic Jihad. Under international law, an individual’s affiliation with an armed group, even if proven, cannot be the sole basis for targeting and killing the person. The Commission acknowledges that the level of violence in Jenin between Israeli security forces and armed groups has increased in recent years. However, according to international human rights law applicable to the West Bank, lethal force

<sup>69</sup> See (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%90%D7%AA%D7%A8%D7%99-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%A4%D7%99%D7%A7%D7%95%D7%93-%D7%94%D7%9E%D7%A8%D7%9B%D7%96/%D7%9B%D7%9C-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/2023/%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A6%D7%A2-%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%A0%D7%94-%D7%A4%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%98%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%91%D7%92-%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9F-%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%A8-%D7%A4%D7%99%D7%92%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%99%D7%94%D7%95%D7%93%D7%94-%D7%95%D7%A9%D7%95%D7%9E%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%90%D7%A1-%D7%92%D7%90%D7%A4-%D7%A6%D7%94%D7%9C-%D7%A9%D7%91%D7%9B>.

<sup>70</sup> See para. 35 of the present report.

<sup>71</sup> United Nations, Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “Israeli air strikes and ground operations in Jenin may constitute war crime: UN experts”, press release, 5 July 2023. See also United Nations, Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “Comment by the UN Human Rights Chief Volker Türk on Israeli-Palestinian violence”, press release, 4 July 2023.

<sup>72</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israeli forces’ operation in Jenin: situation report #1 as of 17:00, 6 July 2023”, 6 July 2023.

<sup>73</sup> <https://twitter.com/IDF/status/1676525337344081921>.

<sup>74</sup> See (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D/2023/%D7%99%D7%95%D7%9C%D7%99/%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A6%D7%A2-%D7%91%D7%92-%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9F-%D7%92%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9F-%D7%99%D7%94%D7%95%D7%93%D7%94-%D7%95%D7%A9%D7%95%D7%9E%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%90%D7%A1-%D7%92%D7%99%D7%94%D7%90%D7%93-%D7%9B%D7%9C%D7%99-%D7%98%D7%99%D7%A1-%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A6%D7%94%D7%9C-%D7%A9%D7%91%D7%9B-%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%A0%D7%94-%D7%A4%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%98%D7%99%D7%9D/>.

<sup>75</sup> <https://twitter.com/LtColRichard/status/1678154988382560258>.

can only be used in situations where the person poses an imminent threat to life.<sup>76</sup> Additional precautions must be taken when the person is a child.

33. According to several sources, during the operation, Israeli tear-gas canisters and sound grenades landed on the premises of health facilities.<sup>77</sup> Israeli security forces severely damaged civilian objects such as roads, the main water pipeline and the electricity grid.<sup>78</sup> At the end of the two-day operation, most parts of Jenin refugee camp were left without electricity and drinking water. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 460 homes in the camp were damaged; of those, 23 were destroyed and 47 made uninhabitable.<sup>79</sup> The widespread, sometimes intentional,<sup>80</sup> destruction by Israeli security forces of civilian infrastructure, including roads, water and electricity, may amount to a war crime.

34. Israeli forces carried out over 20 air strikes using armed drones, including Hermes 450 (referred to by Israeli security forces as “Zik”<sup>81</sup>), on many targets inside the Jenin camp. The aerial attack was followed by the ground operation, conducted by the Israeli Security Agency and elite units of the Israeli security forces, including Duvdevan, Egoz, Sayeret Tzanhanim, Sayeret Haruv and Maglan, as well as border police and the Police Counter-Terrorism Unit (Yamam).

35. The use of combat units and aerial attacks in the Jenin operation and the rhetoric used by Israeli security forces indicating that the operation had wider objectives than strictly “search and arrest”<sup>82</sup> reflect the increasing militarization of such operations and a growing reliance on large-scale military power by the Israeli security forces in the West Bank. This also indicates a complete disregard for adhering to the international human rights law obligations governing law enforcement activities. Immediately before the Jenin operation, on 19 June 2023, in another operation targeting two suspects, the Israeli security forces deployed helicopters to facilitate the retrieval of its personnel following an exchange of fire with Palestinian armed groups and following those groups’ use of improvised explosive devices. On 21 June 2023, Israeli security forces carried out a targeted killing of three suspects in Jenin using an armed drone. The Commission notes that that type of drone had been used in the past

<sup>76</sup> United Nations, Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms, principle 9.

<sup>77</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israeli forces operation in Jenin: flash update #2 as of 16:30, 4 July 2023”, 4 July 2023. See also <https://twitter.com/MSF/status/1676248475191717890>.

<sup>78</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israeli forces’ operation in Jenin: situation report #1”.

<sup>79</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israeli forces operation in Jenin: 40 per cent of households in Jenin Refugee Camp still lack access to water as of 17:00 Jerusalem time, 11 July 2023”, 11 July 2023.

<sup>80</sup> According to statements of the Israeli security forces. See, for example (in Hebrew), <https://www.idf.il/%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D/2023/%D7%99%D7%95%D7%9C%D7%99/%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A6%D7%A2-%D7%91%D7%92-%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9F-%D7%92%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9F-%D7%99%D7%94%D7%95%D7%93%D7%94-%D7%95%D7%A9%D7%95%D7%9E%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%90%D7%A1-%D7%92%D7%99%D7%94%D7%90%D7%93-%D7%9B%D7%9C%D7%99-%D7%98%D7%99%D7%A1-%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A6%D7%94%D7%9C-%D7%A9%D7%91%D7%9B-%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%A0%D7%94-%D7%A4%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%98%D7%99%D7%9D>.

<sup>81</sup> See <https://www.iaf.org.il/217-24418-he/IAF.aspx> (in Hebrew).

<sup>82</sup> See paras. 31 and 32 of the present report.

primarily for aerial attacks in Gaza.<sup>83</sup> The Commission is concerned that Israeli authorities are increasingly applying the conduct of hostilities paradigm to the West Bank, causing West Bank operations to increasingly resemble those carried out in Gaza.

Withholding bodies

36. The Israeli authorities withhold the bodies of deceased combatants or persons suspected of having posed a threat to Israeli security. Israeli authorities are currently withholding the bodies of 142 Palestinians, including 14 boys and 5 women.<sup>84</sup> The de facto authorities in Gaza are currently withholding the bodies of two Israeli soldiers.<sup>85</sup> Israeli authorities routinely withhold the bodies, including those of children, of those killed in incidents linked to search and arrest operations and those killed in the context of attacks against Israelis. These withheld bodies are used as bargaining chips in negotiations.<sup>86</sup> In 2020, then Minister of Defence Bennet explained the policy as follows: “We [also] hoard the bodies of terrorists to hurt and put pressure on the other side.”<sup>87</sup>

37. This practice has caused severe trauma to the families and has a particularly gendered impact on female relatives. One female relative told the Commission that widows face difficulties on every level: financially, socially and emotionally. Those difficulties have been exacerbated by not being provided enough information about the bodies’ location and the difficulties encountered in registering deaths. A Palestinian widow described the trauma she experienced in 2021 when her husband’s body was returned to the wrong family in a numbered plastic bag and subsequently returned to Israel without the authorities providing her with any information. Families described this as an extension of the occupation policies of Israeli, which fragment and collectively punish the Palestinian people. The withholding of bodies is a violation of customary international humanitarian law, which requires the parties to “endeavour to facilitate the return of the remains of the deceased upon request of the party to which they belong or upon the request of their next of kin”.<sup>88</sup>

Gender impact

38. Fewer women and girls are killed and injured by Israeli security forces compared with men and boys. This should be seen within the social context in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, where women and girls participate less frequently in

<sup>83</sup> See (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%90%D7%AA%D7%A8%D7%99-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%96%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%A2-%D7%94%D7%90%D7%95%D7%95%D7%99%D7%A8-%D7%95%D7%94%D7%97%D7%9C%D7%9C/%D7%9B%D7%9C-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/2022/%D7%9E%D7%A2%D7%A8%D7%9A-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%98%D7%9E%D7%9E%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A0%D7%97%D7%A9%D7%A4%D7%AA-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%94-52-%D7%96%D7%99%D7%A7/>. See also <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=V-H6KpdGZv4&t=3s> (in Hebrew).

<sup>84</sup> Documents on file.

<sup>85</sup> See A/76/333, para. 41.

<sup>86</sup> Documents and interview on file. See also A/HRC/53/59, paras. 75–78; Defense for Children International Palestine, “Withheld bodies: no closure for Palestinian families waiting for their child’s remains”, 3 August 2020; Budour Hassan, The Warmth of Our Sons: Necropolitics, Memory, and the Palestinian Right to Mourn, Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Center (Jerusalem, 2019); and Adalah: Legal Center for Arab Minority Rights in Israel, “Adalah responds to Israeli Defense Minister Naftali Bennett’s order to withhold all Palestinian bodies”, 27 November 2019.

<sup>87</sup> See <https://103fm.maariv.co.il/programs/media.aspx?ZrqvnVq=HLJFGH&c41t4nzVQ=FJE> (in Hebrew).

<sup>88</sup> ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law database, rule 114.

the public domain (see A/HRC/40/CRP.2, paras. 592–598). These gender dynamics result in a disproportionate burden on women who have had to become caregivers to injured family members and primary breadwinners when men are killed, injured or detained, underscoring the context of intersecting forms of discrimination and violence against Palestinian women and girls (see A/HRC/35/10).

Case of Shireen Abu Akleh

39. The Commission has collected, analysed and preserved information relevant to the killing of Shireen Abu Akleh, a Palestinian-American journalist for Al-Jazeera who was shot and killed on 11 May 2022 in Jenin. The Commission has conducted open-source investigations; collected and preserved videos, photographs, reports and social media posts; and reviewed the investigations conducted by Bellingcat,<sup>89</sup> the Associated Press,<sup>90</sup> CNN,<sup>91</sup> The Washington Post,<sup>92</sup> The New York Times,<sup>93</sup> Forensic Architecture and Al-Haq,<sup>94</sup> Al-Jazeera<sup>95</sup> and the Committee to Protect Journalists.<sup>96</sup> In addition, eight individuals testified at the Commission’s public hearings in November 2022 and March 2023. The Commission sent formal requests for information to the Governments of Israel, the State of Palestine and the United States and did not receive responses from the Governments of Israel or the United States.

40. On the basis of its investigation, the Commission outlines the key facts of the morning of 11 May 2022. At around 5 a.m., Israeli security forces soldiers entered Jenin to arrest members of the Al-Hosari family at their house in the Jabriyat neighbourhood. Members of the media, including Ali Sammoudi (a freelance producer for Al-Jazeera), Majdi Bannoura (a cameraman for Al-Jazeera), Shatha Hanaysha (a journalist) and Shireen Abu Akleh, gathered at the Awda roundabout on Balat al-Shuhada’ Street by 6:24 a.m. to cover the events. The journalists wore blue protective vests labelled “press” and helmets. There were Palestinian civilians in the area, but it was calm and there were no clashes or gunshots in the immediate vicinity. The journalists began walking west on Balat al-Shuhada’ Street towards the intersection with New Camp Street. An Israeli security forces convoy was approximately 200 m south on New Camp Street. Hanaysha and Sammoudi both stated that the usual practice was to identify themselves as journalists to the Israeli security forces by showing their “press” vests. The Commission was informed that normally, if the Israeli security forces did not want the journalists to approach, soldiers would respond by throwing tear gas or stun grenades or by shooting the ground near the journalists as a warning. There was no warning to these journalists that morning.

41. At 6:31 a.m., the journalists, including Abu Akleh, started walking south on New Camp Street towards the convoy. A few seconds later, six shots were fired, as confirmed in a video analysed by the Commission. As Sammoudi ran back towards

<sup>89</sup> Bellingcat, “Unravelling the killing of Shireen Abu Akleh”, 14 May 2022.

<sup>90</sup> Joseph Krauss, “Review suggests Israeli fire killed reporter, no final word”, Associated Press, 24 May 2022.

<sup>91</sup> Zeena Saifi and others, “‘They were shooting directly at the journalists’: new evidence suggests Shireen Abu Akleh was killed in targeted attack by Israeli forces”, CNN, 26 May 2022.

<sup>92</sup> Sarah Cahlan, Meg Kelly and Steve Hendrix, “How Shireen Abu Akleh was killed”, The Washington Post, 12 June 2022.

<sup>93</sup> Raja Abdulrahim and others, “The killing of Shireen Abu Akleh: tracing a bullet to an Israeli convoy”, The New York Times, 28 June 2022.

<sup>94</sup> Forensic Architecture and Al-Haq, “Shireen Abu Akleh: the extrajudicial killing of a journalist”, 4 November 2022.

<sup>95</sup> Al-Jazeera, “The killing of Shireen Abu Akleh”, available at <https://www.aljazeera.com/program/fault-lines/2022/12/1/the-killing-of-shireen-abu-akleh>.

<sup>96</sup> Committee to Protect Journalists, “Deadly pattern: 20 journalists died by Israeli military fire in 22 years. No one has been held accountable” (New York, 2023).

Balat al-Shuhada' street, witnesses heard Abu Akleh screaming, "Ali's been hit! Ali's been hit!" Sammoudi fled to a nearby car and was later taken to the hospital. Approximately 10 seconds later, another seven gunshots were heard. Hanaysha took cover next to a concrete wall and behind a tree near Abu Akleh. She saw Abu Akleh fall to the ground. A few seconds later, three more gunshots were heard, and someone yelled "Shireen! Medic, medic! Stay where you are, don't move, don't move." Hanaysha remained behind the tree next to a concrete wall near Abu Akleh and shouted that Abu Akleh's head had been shot. Abu Akleh remained motionless, face-down on the ground.

42. Sharif Al-Azab, a resident of Jenin who was at the scene, climbed over the concrete wall and attempted to move Abu Akleh to safety. Another gunshot was heard, and Al-Azab took cover. Al-Azab helped Hanaysha climb over the concrete wall to safety and went back to Abu Akleh, who was still motionless. As he started to carry Abu Akleh, two more gunshots were heard, and he ducked for cover. As he carried Abu Akleh away, she remained motionless, with blood covering her head and hair. Al-Azab and others placed Abu Akleh in a car and took her to Ibn Sina Hospital. Abu Akleh was declared dead at the hospital.

43. Later that day, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel posted a video on Twitter and stated that "Palestinian terrorists, firing indiscriminately, are likely to have hit Al-Jazeera journalist Shireen Abu Aqla".<sup>97</sup> Two days later, Israeli security forces released findings of a preliminary investigation into the incident, concluding that it was not possible to unequivocally determine the source of the gunfire that hit and killed Abu Akleh. They provided two possible scenarios: first, that "hundreds of bullets" were fired by Palestinian gunmen from a number of locations, making them a possible source of the gunfire that hit and killed Abu Akleh; second, that, during an exchange of fire between Palestinian gunmen and Israeli security forces soldiers, Abu Akleh, who was standing nearby, behind a Palestinian gunman, was hit by a soldier's fire towards the Palestinian gunmen.<sup>98</sup> In July 2022, the United States Security Coordinator stated that it could not reach a definitive conclusion regarding the origin of the bullet that killed Abu Akleh; in addition, after reviewing the investigations of both the Israeli security forces and Palestinian Authority, it found that gunfire from security forces positions was likely responsible for the death of Abu Akleh, but that it was not intentional.<sup>99</sup> On 5 September 2022, the Israeli security forces released their final conclusions on their investigation, stating that, while it was not possible to unequivocally determine the source of the gunfire that killed Abu Akleh, there was a high possibility that Abu Akleh was accidentally hit by security forces gunfire, fired at armed Palestinian gunmen during an exchange of fire.<sup>100</sup> The report reiterated the two possibilities as stated in its preliminary investigation. The Military Advocate General found that there was no suspicion of a criminal offence that justified the opening of a Military Police investigation. The Palestinian Authority conducted its own investigation, which included an autopsy and a forensic examination of the bullet. The report stated that the cause of death was a "tear of the brain tissue caused by a penetrating gunshot injury into the cranial cavity". It identified the ammunition and type of rifle used and concluded that the shots that were fired by the Israeli security forces, one of which killed Abu Akleh, were deliberately targeted at the upper body region of the journalists with the intent to kill. In November 2022, the United

<sup>97</sup> https://twitter.com/IsraelMFA/status/1524279111547596805?tid=lk\_inline\_enhanced-template.

<sup>98</sup> Israel Defense Forces announcement, "Findings from the initial investigation into the shooting incident in which the journalist Shireen Abu Akleh was killed", 13 May 2022.

<sup>99</sup> Ned Price, Senior Advisor to the United States Secretary of State, "On the killing of Shireen Abu Akleh", United States Department of State press release, 4 July 2022.

<sup>100</sup> Israel Defense Forces Editorial Team, "Final conclusions of Shireen Abu Akleh investigation", Israel Defense Forces press release, 5 September 2022.

States Department of Justice informed the Ministry of Justice of Israel that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had opened an investigation into the case. On 6 December 2022, in response to the request of Al-Jazeera to the International Criminal Court to investigate the death of Abu Akleh, the then Prime Minister of Israel, Yair Lapid, stated: “No one will investigate IDF [Israel Defense Forces] soldiers and no one will preach to us about morals in warfare, certainly not Al-Jazeera.”<sup>101</sup>

44. The Commission has analysed all the evidence that it collected relevant to this killing. It has concluded, on reasonable grounds, that: (a) prior to the shooting of Abu Akleh, the area in and around the Awda roundabout, Balat al-Shuhada’ Street and New Camp Street was calm and there were no clashes or gunfire there; (b) there were no visibly armed Palestinians in the area; (c) Abu Akleh and the journalists were wearing vests marked “press” and helmets that clearly identified them as journalists; (d) immediately prior to the shooting of Abu Akleh, there was no exchange of gunfire or warnings from the Israeli security forces; (e) the Israeli security forces convoy was located approximately 200 m south of Abu Akleh on New Camp Street; (f) the gunfire came from the area where the Israeli security forces convoy was located; (g) the gunfire targeted the upper bodies of the journalists; and (h) after Abu Akleh was shot and remained on the ground, face-down and motionless, the man who attempted to retrieve her was shot at.

45. The Commission sought to identify the military unit involved in the killing of Abu Akleh on the basis of the forensic examination of open-source material, including Israeli security forces videos published on the army spokesperson’s website relevant to the Break the Wave operation in Jenin. The open-source investigation was conducted in compliance with international standards for digital open-source investigations. Technical examinations were carried out on forensically preserved evidence and involved video authentication, geolocation, chronolocation and frame-to-frame comparative analysis. The State of Israel did not cooperate with the investigation and did not respond to the Commission’s request for information. On the basis of its investigation, the Commission concludes on reasonable grounds that the Duvdevan Unit of the Israeli security forces participated in the operation in Jenin on 11 May 2022 and that soldiers of the Duvdevan Unit were likely to have been in the vehicle from which the shot that resulted in the death of Abu Akleh was fired. The Commission has also established the name of the individual who was the commander of the Duvdevan Unit in May 2022.

46. During law enforcement operations, lethal force is only permissible in self-defence or to protect the lives of others. In the case of Abu Akleh, the Commission concludes without doubt that Abu Akleh and the other journalists did not pose an imminent threat of death or serious injury to anyone and that there was no gunfire originating from Abu Akleh’s location or from near her. The Commission concludes on reasonable grounds that the Israeli security forces used lethal force without justification under international human rights law and intentionally or recklessly violated the right to life of Shireen Abu Akleh.

47. In an occupation, the wilful killing of a protected person constitutes a grave breach of article 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and is a war crime.<sup>102</sup> Abu Akleh and other journalists, who were clearly identifiable as journalists, were protected persons. Furthermore, under the doctrine of command responsibility, a military commander may be held criminally responsible for crimes committed by subordinates under his effective command and control, where the commander knew or should have known that the subordinates were committing crimes and he failed to prevent the commission of the crimes or to submit the matter to the competent authorities for investigation and prosecution.<sup>103</sup>

<sup>101</sup> Office of the Prime Minister of Israel, “PM Lapid responds to publication of Al Jazeera Appeal to the ICC to Investigate the death of Shireen Abu-Akleh”, press release, 6 December 2022.

<sup>102</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (2) (a) (1).

V. Recurring escalations of hostilities in Gaza

48. Israeli security forces have carried out repeated military incursions and aerial attacks in Gaza prior to and since Israel launched its disengagement plan in 2005. Israeli security forces carried out at least five large-scale military operations (2006, 2008–2009, 2012, 2014 and 2021) through ground incursions and/or heavy artillery shelling and air-to-surface missile attacks in one of the most densely populated areas in the world. Israeli security forces have also conducted targeted air-strike campaigns with the objective of killing specific persons associated with Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad (including in 2012, 2019, 2022 and 2023). Violence has recurred periodically at the land and sea borders of Gaza, including during the 2018 Great March of Return protests along the perimeter fence.<sup>104</sup>

49. These incursions and attacks are directly linked to the larger context of the Israeli occupation and the blockade of Gaza. Israel's occupation policies, described in depth in the Commission's previous report to the General Assembly, such as systematic discrimination, coercive environment, settlement expansion and impunity for settler violence, evictions and displacement of Palestinians from their homes, as well as the 16-year blockade of Gaza, have all served as a backdrop and catalyst for attacks on Gaza.<sup>105</sup> The blockade, which constitutes a collective punishment of the residents in Gaza, has significantly weakened the capacity of the population and public sector to respond to the devastation caused by repeated attacks. More than 600,000 people have been internally displaced as a result.<sup>106</sup> The impact of displacement, death and injuries of family members has been particularly dire for women, as it has been compounded by gendered dimensions of the economic hardship and by increased risks of sexual and gender-based violence. Displacement has also caused children to lose access to education, health care and other essential services.

50. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, since the beginning of 2008, incursions and attacks by Israeli security forces have killed 2,749 Palestinian civilians in Gaza, including 388 women, 240 girls and 606 boys. Of those, 2,198 were killed as result of Israeli aerial attacks and 393 by live ammunition.<sup>107</sup> In addition, 62,850 have been injured (including 7,214 women, 1,749 girls and 14,653 boys). More than 52,000 houses have reportedly been totally or partially destroyed and over 1,500 education facilities have been damaged. Crucial infrastructure vital to the health, energy, industrial, commercial, media and agricultural sectors in Gaza has also been damaged.<sup>108</sup>

<sup>103</sup> Rome Statute, art. 28 (a).

<sup>104</sup> See A/HRC/40/CRP.2.

<sup>105</sup> See A/77/328. See also A/HRC/49/83; S/2021/584; A/HRC/46/63, para. 7; and A/HRC/50/21, para. 69.

<sup>106</sup> See A/HRC/29/52, para. 23. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Overview: November 2021", Humanitarian Bulletin: Gaza after the May escalation – November 2021, 3 November 2021.

<sup>107</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Data on casualties". Available at <https://www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties>.

<sup>108</sup> See Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, "Destruction of residential houses between 2000 – 28 Feb 2023". Available at <https://www.mezan.org/en/page/20/Destruction-of-Residential-Houses>. See also Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, The Gaza Bantustan: Israeli Apartheid in the Gaza Strip (2021), pp. 26–28; and Safeguarding Health in Conflict Coalition and Insecurity Insight, Unrelenting Violence: Violence Against Health Care in Conflict (2021), p. 72.

51. Since 2008, Palestinian armed groups have launched more than 20,000 projectiles, including rockets and mortars, indiscriminately towards Israel, resulting in the death of more than 35 civilians in Israel<sup>109</sup> and the injury of 3,230 others.<sup>110</sup> The Izz al-Din al-Qassam and Al-Quds Brigades have acknowledged targeting cities and towns in Israel.<sup>111</sup> According to Israeli authorities, the attacks have damaged 4,508 buildings in several locations since 2021.<sup>112</sup> These attacks have caused constant anxiety, trauma and stress to the residents of affected areas of Israel, especially those living close to Gaza.<sup>113</sup> Over the years, armed groups have significantly improved their capacity in terms of stockpiles and range of weaponry, which has increased rates of fire and longer ranges of up to 250 km, although it still lacks precision capabilities.<sup>114</sup> Palestinian armed groups may also be responsible for killing at least 34 Palestinians in Gaza, including 4 women, 11 boys and 4 girls, through rockets that fell short in May 2021 and August 2022.<sup>115</sup> The targeting of civilian populations and the indiscriminate firing of munitions are war crimes.

<sup>109</sup> Data on file. These only include people killed as a result of direct hits.

<sup>110</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Data on casualties”.

<sup>111</sup> See (in Arabic)

<https://www.alqassam.ps/arabic/%D8%A8%D9%8A%D8%A7%D9%86%D8%A7%D8%AA-%D8%A8%D9%84%D8%A7%D8%BA%D8%A7%D8%AA-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%82%D8%B3%D8%A7%D9%85/5493/%D9%85%D8%B9%D8%B1%D9%83%D8%A9-%D8%B3%D9%8A%D9%81-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%82%D8%AF%D8%B3-%D9%86%D8%B5%D8%B1%D8%A9-%D9%84%D8%A3%D9%87%D9%84%D9%86%D8%A7-%D9%81%D9%8A-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%85%D8%AF%D9%8A%D9%86%D8%A9-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%85%D9%82%D8%AF%D8%B3%D8%A9>. See also (in Arabic) <https://www.alqassam.ps/arabic/%D8%A8%D9%8A%D8%A7%D9%86%D8%A7%D8%AA-%D8%A8%D9%84%D8%A7%D8%BA%D8%A7%D8%AA-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%82%D8%B3%D8%A7%D9%85/5745/%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%BA%D8%B1%D9%81%D8%A9-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%85%D8%B4%D8%AA%D8%B1%D9%83%D8%A9-%D8%AA%D9%86%D9%81%D8%B0-%D8%B9%D9%85%D9%84%D9%8A%D8%A9-%D8%AB%D8%A3%D8%B1-%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%A3%D8%AD%D8%B1%D8%A7%D8%B1-%D8%B1%D8%AF%D8%A7-%D8%B9%D9%84%D9%89-%D8%AC%D8%B1%D8%A7%D8%A6%D9%85-%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%A7%D8%AD%D8%AA%D9%84%D8%A7%D9%84>.

<sup>112</sup> See (in Hebrew) <https://www.gov.il/he/departments/news/sa060621-1>; <https://www.gov.il/he/departments/news/sa100822-3>; and <https://www.gov.il/he/departments/news/sa120523-3>.

<sup>113</sup> See Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel, “Operation Guardian of the Walls”, 10 May 2021. See also Meir Amit Intelligence and Terrorism Information Center, “Escalation from the Gaza Strip – Operation Guardian of the Walls – Summary”, 24 May 2021; Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Gaza Strip: escalation of hostilities as of 3 June 2021”, 6 June 2021; and (in Hebrew) <https://www.phr.org.il/%D7%94%D7%99%D7%A9%D7%92-%D7%9C%D7%9E%D7%96%D7%97-%D7%95%D7%A8%D7%9C%D7%90-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%A8%D7%94-%D7%91%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%90%D7%95%D7%9E%D7%94-%D7%9E%D7%AA%D7%9E%D7%A9%D7%9B%D7%AA-%D7%A9%D7%9C>.

<sup>114</sup> Document on file.

<sup>115</sup> See A/HRC/49/83, para. 11, and A/HRC/52/75, para. 10.

52. The Military Advocate General of Israel has failed to ensure meaningful accountability for victims, despite the gravity of many incidents relating to Gaza.<sup>116</sup> The Palestinian Centre for Human Rights has submitted 1,067 criminal complaints to the Military Advocate General and 2,891 civil complaints to the compensation office of the Ministry of Defence of Israel in relation to the killing and injury of Palestinians in Gaza during several attacks since 2008. Some 273 complaints have been referred for further examination to the General Staff Mechanism for Fact-Finding Assessments, established in 2014. The Commission is not aware of any measures taken by the State of Palestine to investigate and prosecute violations of international humanitarian law by Palestinian armed groups.

53. The Israeli strategy of carrying out repeated incursions in Gaza to weaken Palestinian armed groups has been referred to as “mowing the lawn” by some Israeli officials.<sup>117</sup> Israeli authorities routinely justify operations in Gaza by invoking security justifications and the need to defend Israel from rocket fire by Palestinian armed groups.<sup>118</sup> Israeli officials have also increasingly admitted to using preventive strikes intended at deterrence, including in the 2022 and 2023 operations.<sup>119</sup>

54. From 10 to 21 May 2021, Israeli security forces conducted the largest-scale attack since 2014, with air strikes and shelling from land and sea in response to rockets fired by armed groups in Gaza.<sup>120</sup> According to United Nations reports, Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad fired 3,240 rockets and 1,158 mortar rounds into Israel, and Israeli security forces fired 1,768 missiles and 2,455 shells into Gaza. The escalation was triggered by protests against occupation policies such as evictions and dispossession in East Jerusalem.<sup>121</sup> Operation Guardian of the Walls was stated by

<sup>116</sup> A/HRC/49/25, paras. 8 and 10. See also (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/media/xopltjsi/%D7%9E%D7%A2%D7%A0%D7%94-%D7%9C%D7%91%D7%A7%D7%A9%D7%94-%D7%91%D7%A0%D7%95%D7%A9%D7%90-%D7%90%D7%9B%D7%99%D7%A4%D7%AA-%D7%94%D7%97%D7%95%D7%A7-%D7%91%D7%A0%D7%95%D7%92%D7%A2-%D7%9C%D7%A2%D7%91%D7%99%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%97%D7%99%D7%99%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%A0%D7%92%D7%93-%D7%A4%D7%9C%D7%A1%D7%98%D7%99%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%95%D7%A8%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A9%D7%9D-%D7%91-2021.pdf>; and (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%90%D7%AA%D7%A8%D7%99-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%94%D7%A4%D7%A8%D7%A7%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%98%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%94%D7%A6%D7%91%D7%90%D7%99%D7%AA/%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99-%D7%A6%D7%95%D7%A7-%D7%90%D7%99%D7%AA%D7%9F/%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%9E%D7%A1-6>.

<sup>117</sup> For example, in 2018, then Minister of Education, Naftali Bennett, stated, “If you don’t mow the lawn, the lawn will mow you”, referring to the need to carry out routine operations in Gaza to curb the activity of armed groups. See video (in Hebrew) available at <https://www.ynet.co.il/articles/0,7340,L-5340781,00.html>.

<sup>118</sup> See S/2021/463. See also (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%90%D7%AA%D7%A8%D7%99-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%A2%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%A-%D7%94%D7%A9%D7%97%D7%A8/%D7%9B%D7%9C-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%A8%D7%9E%D7%98%D7%9B%D7%9C-%D7%91%D7%99%D7%A7%D7%95%D7%A8-%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A7%D7%A8-%D7%A4%D7%99%D7%A7%D7%95%D7%93-%D7%93%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9D-%D7%94%D7%93%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%9D-%D7%A2%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%94%D7%A9%D7%97%D7%A8/>.

<sup>119</sup> See, for example, Office of the Prime Minister of Israel, “Statements by PM Lapid and Defense Minister Gantz”, 8 August 2022 and Office of the Prime Minister of Israel, “Statement by PM Netanyahu”, 9 May 2023.

<sup>120</sup> See A/HRC/49/83, para. 7.

<sup>121</sup> See ibid., para. 3.

Israeli authorities as intended to target armed groups and military infrastructure.<sup>122</sup> According to United Nations reports, the escalation resulted in the deaths of at least 241 Palestinians, including 60 children and 38 women, and 10 Israeli citizens and residents, including 3 women, 1 boy and 1 girl. At least 18 Palestinians, including 5 boys, 1 girl and 3 women, were killed, seemingly by rockets fired by Palestinian armed groups that fell short inside Gaza.<sup>123</sup>

55. On 16 May 2021, Israeli security forces launched approximately 150 air strikes on Gaza, targeting the Rimal neighbourhood and Wahdah Street, a densely populated area in central Gaza City. At approximately 1 a.m., 25 to 30 strikes hit the area in quick succession,<sup>124</sup> resulting in the complete destruction of three residential buildings belonging to the Abu al-Aowf and al-Kolak families in Wahdah Street. Witnesses reported to the Commission that the residents in these buildings were not given prior warnings.<sup>125</sup> At least 44 civilians were killed in these attacks, including 18 children (9 girls and 9 boys) and 14 women, and dozens were injured.<sup>126</sup> The neighbourhood suffered extensive damage, including to eight multi-storey buildings, ministerial buildings and electricity, water and communication networks.<sup>127</sup>

56. Reportedly, Israeli security forces sought to target underground tunnels and an underground command centre used by Hamas.<sup>128</sup> The Commission reviewed information indicating that Israeli security forces used the MK 84, guided by the Joint Direct Attack Munitions (known as GBU-31), a precision-guided air-delivered bomb, for this attack.<sup>129</sup> These bombs are “bunker busters” with deep penetrative and destructive capabilities that hit the streets close to buildings, leading to their collapse. The Commission notes that, under international law, Israeli security forces should have provided sufficient warning before using heavy-payload bombs in a densely populated area, on the presumption that these may cause extensive damage, including the destruction of buildings.

57. The Palestinian Centre for Human Rights has filed a complaint with the Israeli Military Advocate General, who has referred the case to the General Staff Mechanism for Fact-Finding Assessments for further examination. On the basis of the damage to civilian objects and the number of casualties, the Commission concludes that the attack by Israeli security forces in Wahdah Street resulted in incidental effects on civilians that were disproportionate to the expected military advantage. The Commission also notes that Israeli security forces failed to take proper precautionary measures to provide effective advance warning of their attacks.

58. On 9 May 2023, Israeli security forces launched Operation Shield and Arrow, during which it targeted three commanders of Al-Quds Brigades, the military wing of

<sup>122</sup> See ibid., paras. 7–8. See also (in Hebrew) <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pacxbPF1XNM>.

<sup>123</sup> See A/HRC/49/25, para. 11.

<sup>124</sup> See A/76/333, para. 7.

<sup>125</sup> Interviews on file.

<sup>126</sup> A/HRC/49/83, para. 9, and documents on file.

<sup>127</sup> See A/76/333, para. 7.

<sup>128</sup> Israel Defense Forces Editorial Team, “Operation Guardian of the Walls”, Israel Defense Forces, 14 June 2021. See also <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rrYHge7tqsQ> and (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%95%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D/2021/%D7%A4%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%99%D7%A7%D7%98-%D7%9E%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%95-%D7%AA%D7%A7%D7%A6%D7%99%D7%91-%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%90%D7%A1-%D7%9E%D7%A0%D7%94%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%A8-%D7%A2%D7%9C%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%9E%D7%97%D7%99%D7%A8-%D7%A2%D7%96%D7%94/>.

<sup>129</sup> Documents on file and Dor Palkovic, “Flying with JDAMs”, Israeli Air Force, 20 May 2019.

Palestinian Islamic Jihad in Gaza.<sup>130</sup> Over a five-day period, Israeli security forces conducted 323 air strikes on several sites across Gaza.<sup>131</sup> Palestinian armed groups launched over 1,200 rockets and more than 250 mortars towards Israel. Almost 300 were reported to have fallen short within Gaza, while approximately 400 were intercepted by the Israeli Iron Dome.

59. The aerial attack resulted in the deaths of 33 Palestinians, including at least 12 civilians. Reportedly, at least three of the Palestinian fatalities were caused by rockets fired from Gaza that had fallen short.<sup>132</sup> Some 100 housing units were destroyed and another 125 severely damaged. Essential infrastructure, such as schools, health-care facilities and electric and water lines, was also damaged.<sup>133</sup> More than 1,100 Palestinians were displaced.<sup>134</sup> The Rafah crossing between Gaza and Egypt was closed and Israeli authorities closed both crossings between Gaza and Israel, preventing the entry of food, medical supplies and fuel for the Gaza power plant.

60. One Israeli security forces attack, at 2 a.m. on 9 May 2023, targeted the Dawli apartment building, killing Tariq Ezz al-Din, a commander of Al-Quds Brigades, and his two children (a boy and a girl), who resided on the fifth floor.<sup>135</sup> Israeli security forces dropped three bombs on the building, one detonating in Ezz al-Din's apartment and another detonating in an apartment on the sixth floor, killing another three civilians (two men and one woman). The third bomb landed in the building's basement but did not explode. Six other persons were injured in the attack, including two boys and two women. The residential building was severely damaged, particularly the fifth and sixth floors, leaving it uninhabitable.

61. The Commission heard accounts from residents that they did not receive warnings prior to the attack. According to documents reviewed by the Commission, the building was hit with three GBU-39B bombs,<sup>136</sup> which are designed to limit collateral damage and should be capable of making pinpoint strikes.<sup>137</sup>

62. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu stated shortly after the attacks that the senior leadership of Palestinian Islamic Jihad had been targeted in Gaza in a pre-emptive attack to prevent future terrorist attacks in Israel, adding that the offensive could be expanded if needed.<sup>138</sup> The Israeli security forces announced that measures

<sup>130</sup> See United Nations, "Recent deadly escalation between Israeli forces, Palestinian armed groups 'another reminder' of volatile situation, Special Coordinator tells Security Council", press release, 24 May 2023. See also (in Hebrew) <https://twitter.com/netanyahu/status/1655958518543818753?s=20>; and Israel Defense Forces, "Operation Shield and Arrow – live updates", press release, 9 May 2023.

<sup>131</sup> See United Nations, "Recent deadly escalation".

<sup>132</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Protection of civilians report, 2-15 May 2023", 19 May 2023.

<sup>133</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Humanitarian situation in Gaza: flash update #5 as of 17:00, 15 May 2023", 16 May 2023. See also United Nations, "Recent deadly escalation".

<sup>134</sup> See United Nations, "Recent deadly escalation".

<sup>135</sup> Interview on file.

<sup>136</sup> See Amnesty International, "Israel/OPT: investigate possible war crimes during Israel's military offensive on Gaza in May 2023", 13 June 2023.

<sup>137</sup> See Israel Defense Forces Editorial Team, "Israeli Air Force: bombing Gaza or pinpoint strikes", Israeli Air Force, 11 March 2012.

<sup>138</sup> See Office of the Prime Minister of Israel, "PM Netanyahu's remarks at the start of the Security Cabinet meeting", press release, 9 May 2023. See also Office of the Prime Minister of Israel, "PM Netanyahu Speaks with Southern Local and Regional Council Heads", press release, 10 May 2023.

had been taken to prevent harm to “uninvolved” individuals.<sup>139</sup> Palestinian Islamic Jihad stated that 11 of its members had been killed during the operation.<sup>140</sup>

63. On the basis of the evidence before it, the Commission considers that Israeli authorities and Palestinian armed groups have failed to take effective precautionary measures to avoid civilian casualties wherever possible. Taking into account the military targets and the incidental effects of the air strikes, the Commission concludes that as the damage and casualties caused by the actions of Israeli security forces were not proportionate to the military advantage, said actions constitute a war crime.<sup>141</sup> The Commission finds that preventing the entry of food and medical supplies into Gaza is a violation of international humanitarian law.<sup>142</sup> The Commission also concludes that the use by Palestinian armed groups of rockets and mortars that are inherently indiscriminate in their nature constitutes a violation of the prohibition of indiscriminate attacks and is thus a war crime.<sup>143</sup>

64. In relation to the attack on the Dawli apartment building on 9 May 2023, the Commission finds that, although Israeli security forces have the capacity to ensure that civilian casualties are avoided, such means were not employed, therefore causing disproportionate incidental effects on civilians, including unnecessary deaths and injuries.

VI. Conclusions

65. The Commission finds that the increasingly militarized law enforcement operations of Israel and repeated attacks by Israel on Gaza are aimed at maintaining its unlawful 56-year occupation and serve (or are used) to weaken opposition to the occupation, fragmenting Palestinian political, economic and social cohesion, denying Palestinian self-determination and ultimately preventing the establishment of a free Palestinian State. The devastating results of regular military incursions and aerial attacks on Gaza and militarized law enforcement operations in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, fall primarily on civilians, with an increasing number of deaths and injuries. These disproportionately affect men and boys as the primary victims but also affect

<sup>139</sup> See (in Hebrew) <https://www.idf.il/%D7%90%D7%AA%D7%A8%D7%99-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A6%D7%A2-%D7%9E%D7%92%D7%9F-%D7%95%D7%97%D7%A5/%D7%9B%D7%9C-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A6%D7%A2-%D7%9E%D7%92%D7%9F-%D7%95%D7%97%D7%A5-%D7%9E%D7%91%D7%A6%D7%A2-%D7%A2%D7%95%D7%98%D7%A3-%D7%A2%D7%96%D7%94-%D7%94%D7%A0%D7%97%D7%99%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%A4%D7%99%D7%A7%D7%95%D7%93-%D7%94%D7%A2%D7%95%D7%A8%D7%A3-%D7%A1%D7%99%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%92%D7%99%D7%94%D7%90%D7%93-%D7%90%D7%A1%D7%9C%D7%90%D7%9E%D7%99-%D7%A4%D7%9C%D7%A1%D7%98%D7%99%D7%A0%D7%99-%D7%92%D7%90%D7%A4-%D7%AA%D7%A7%D7%99%D7%A4%D7%95%D7%AA-%D7%9E%D7%98%D7%95%D7%A1%D7%99-%D7%A7%D7%A8%D7%91-%D7%A1%D7%99%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%9C-%D7%AA%D7%A7%D7%99%D7%A4%D7%94-%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99%D7%9D-%D7%91%D7%9C%D7%99%D7%99%D7%91-%D7%9E%D7%AA%D7%92%D7%9C%D7%92%D7%9C%D7%AA/>

<sup>140</sup> See (in Arabic) <https://saraya.ps/post/66382>.

<sup>141</sup> ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law database, rule 14.

<sup>142</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 55.

<sup>143</sup> ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law database, rules 11–13.

women and girls, who bear the burden of becoming primary breadwinners and caregivers.

66. In its previous report to the General Assembly, the Commission stated that, while Israel has legitimate security concerns, these must be considered within the context of occupation and the severe power imbalance between the occupiers and the occupied. The prolonged occupation by Israel of the Palestinian territory has given rise to protests in which Palestinians have asserted their right to self-determination throughout the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza. The Commission has reviewed extensive information on actions undertaken to suppress demonstrations and concludes that the force used against Palestinian demonstrators as a crowd control measure is regularly excessive and is neither strictly necessary nor proportionate. Law enforcement officials must exercise restraint to protect lives and minimize injury and damage.

67. The Commission stresses that lethal force may be used only against demonstrators in strictly prescribed circumstances where necessary to prevent an imminent threat to life. When demonstrators are killed as a result of the use of lethal force even though they did not pose an imminent threat to life or serious injury, such actions violate the rights to life and to physical and mental integrity and may amount to arbitrary killing and, within the context of occupation, to the war crime of wilful killing.

68. The Commission finds that Israeli police use excessive force and indiscriminate means to disperse demonstrators in Israel and in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, resulting in serious harm to persons, including death and permanent injuries. The Commission observes that Israeli authorities are guided by a distinct hierarchy of methods in dispersing demonstrations, with the most lethal response, including live ammunition, used against Palestinians in the West Bank. Although Jewish Israeli demonstrators have been injured by police in demonstrations inside Israel, these have largely been non-life-threatening injuries.

69. Israel is increasingly applying the framework governing conduct of hostilities to its law enforcement operations, including to the suppression of peaceful demonstrations, despite an obligation to apply the framework governing law enforcement under international human rights law in these circumstances. The Commission emphasizes that Israel, as the occupying Power, is bound by international law to protect the population under its occupation. Israeli authorities must end the occupation immediately, unconditionally and totally and cease preventing the Palestinian people from exercising its right to self-determination.

70. The continuing unlawful occupation of the Palestinian territory has had an overwhelming impact on the lives of Palestinian children, who experience serious human rights violations, some of which may amount to international crimes. The Commission notes that 2022 was the deadliest year for Palestinian children in the West Bank in over 15 years. The Commission cannot understand why, despite the Occupied Palestinian Territory being classified as a “situation of concern” for the past 16 years, Israel has never been listed in the annexes to the Secretary General’s report on children and armed conflict.

71. Large-scale search and arrest operations aimed at disrupting networks of armed groups in the West Bank are increasing, and there have been hundreds of smaller-scale operations targeting particular individuals. Several search and arrest operations of the Israeli security forces in Jenin in 2023 appear to have included the unnecessary and disproportionate use of force. Israeli authorities’ use of war-related terminology, armed helicopters, aerial drone attacks and military combat units, and the amount and types of firepower used are evidence that they apply the framework governing conduct of hostilities to law enforcement operations in the West Bank, contrary to international law.

72. The Commission observes that Israeli authorities' broad application of the framework governing conduct of hostilities to law enforcement operations appears intended to attribute the concept of direct participation in hostilities to all Palestinian civilians engaged in any form of oppositional activities, including legitimate peaceful protest. The failure to distinguish between law enforcement operations and armed conflict results in far more permissive rules of engagement, which in turn lead to the killing and injury of more Palestinian civilians. The Commission finds that the application of the framework governing conduct of hostilities is also intended to diminish accountability and exempt the State from responsibility for the payment of compensation to victims under Israeli law.

73. The increasing use of force in Israeli security forces operations in the West Bank perpetuates cycles of protraction of conflict, fuelling endless killings and harm. These operations trigger protests, encourage greater armed resistance and lead to further attacks by Palestinian armed groups against Israelis or Israeli security forces, which in turn lead to more military operations. The use of force against the Palestinian population is thus both a driver and a root cause of conflict.

74. Israeli authorities often justify military operations in Gaza and the West Bank as necessary for security and deterrence, invoking the "mowing of the lawn" strategy.<sup>144</sup> Accordingly, operations are increasingly pre-emptive in nature, launched without an immediate threat and aimed at removing or reducing the capabilities of Palestinian armed groups, while harming entire populations in dense civilian locations in the process. The Commission finds that this was the motivation behind the July 2023 operation in Jenin and the 2023 attack on Gaza.

75. The Commission is deeply concerned by the persistent lack of accountability by all duty bearers and their failure to provide effective remedies to victims for violations of international law, including human rights and humanitarian law, committed in and from the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially Gaza. All parties to an armed conflict, including armed groups in Gaza, must abide by the rules of international humanitarian and human rights law.

76. In relation to military incursions and aerial attacks on Gaza, the Commission rejects Israeli authorities' use of pre-emption or deterrence as the legal basis justifying these actions. The Commission finds that such operations have had a devastating effect on civilians, civilian objects and structures. Specific attacks carried out during incursions into Gaza in 2021 and 2023 were disproportionate to the military necessity and lacked necessary precautions.

77. The Commission concludes that the repeated military incursions and aerial attacks on Gaza, which are now an annual occurrence, must be seen within the broader context of the Israeli occupation, which Israel has no intention of ending.<sup>145</sup> Such operations underpin the separation and isolation policies of Israel relating to Gaza and are a continuation of its de facto annexation policies in the West Bank. The political rift between Hamas and the Palestinian Authority has been used by Israeli authorities to further promote their policies of separation, isolation and fragmentation, with the objective of deflecting attention from the permanent occupation and the killing of civilians, who bear the brunt of this conflict.

<sup>144</sup> See para. 53 of the present report.

<sup>145</sup> See A/77/328, paras. 76–77.

VII. Recommendations

78. The Commission recommends that the Government of Israel:

(a) Recognize and respect the Palestinian people's right to self-determination;

(b) Comply fully with its international law obligations and end without delay its 56 years of occupation of the Palestinian territory and the occupied Syrian Golan;

(c) End all settlement construction and expansion in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and act effectively to prevent violence by settlers against Palestinians, including by holding settlers accountable for their acts of violence;

(d) Clearly distinguish between law enforcement operations and conduct of hostilities, and apply the framework governing international human rights law to law enforcement operations in line with its obligations as an occupying Power and under relevant treaties;

(e) Provide effective remedies for violations of international human rights law, including compensation, restitution, rehabilitation, public apologies and guarantees of non-repetition, and ensure that all those responsible for violations of international humanitarian and human rights law are held accountable;

(f) Publish in full the rules of engagement of the Israeli security forces and the Israeli police, in particular as they relate to the dispersal of demonstrations, and review and reform the rules of engagement with a view to strictly limiting and regulating the use of force and the use of lethal force in line with the international human rights law obligations of Israel;

(g) In relation to its military operations in Gaza, comply fully with its international humanitarian law obligations, including the fundamental principles of distinction, precaution and proportionality, and prohibit forms of combat that indiscriminately target civilians and civilian objects or that cause disproportionate harm to civilians or civilian objects;

(h) Ensure independent, impartial and thorough investigations into possible violations of international humanitarian law in Gaza;

(i) Release all withheld bodies of Palestinians and end the practice of withholding bodies and information from family members;

(j) Fully cooperate with the investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation into the death of Shireen Abu Akleh and with the International Criminal Court investigation into the Situation in the State of Palestine.

79. The Commission recommends that the State of Palestine ensure that all those responsible for violations of international humanitarian and human rights law are held accountable, and that it provide effective remedies for such violations.

80. The Commission recommends that the de facto authorities in Gaza, along with armed groups:

(a) Comply fully with international humanitarian and human rights law, including the fundamental principles of distinction, precaution and proportionality, and prohibit using means and methods that indiscriminately target civilians and civilian objects or that cause disproportionate harm to civilians or civilian objects;

(b) Stop all indiscriminate firing of rockets, mortars and other munitions towards civilian populations;

(c) Release all bodies of Israeli citizens held in Gaza;

(d) Ensure that all those responsible for violations of international humanitarian and human rights law are held accountable.

81. The Commission recommends that the International Criminal Court prioritize the investigation into the Situation in the State of Palestine, including the identification of those exercising command responsibility in the killing of Shireen Abu Akleh, and in all incidents that fall within the Court's jurisdiction.

82. The Commission recommends that the States Members of the United Nations refrain from recognizing, supporting, encouraging, aiding or assisting in any violations of international law committed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, by Israeli authorities or other groups, in line with Member States' obligations under common article 1 of the four Geneva Conventions, articles 146–148 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and the human rights treaties to which the State of Israel and the State of Palestine are parties.

83. The Commission recommends that the Secretary-General list Israel in the annexes of the next annual report on children and armed conflict, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1379 \(2001\) and subsequent resolutions, and institutionalize the country task force on monitoring and reporting in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
11 September 2024

Original: English

---

Seventy-ninth session

Item 71 of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights

Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel

Note by the Secretary-General****

The Secretary General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution S-30/1.

---

* A/79/150.

** The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent information.

Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel

Summary

The Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel hereby submits its third report to the General Assembly. The report examines treatment of detainees and hostages and attacks on medical facilities and personnel from 7 October 2023 to August 2024.

I. Introduction and methodology

1. In the present report, the Commission summarizes its factual and legal findings regarding attacks carried out since 7 October 2023 on medical facilities and personnel, as well as the treatment of detainees in the custody of Israel and the treatment of hostages held by Palestinian armed groups. This is the second report by the Commission regarding attacks that occurred on 7 October 2023 and thereafter.<sup>1</sup>

2. The Commission sent nine requests for information and access to the Government of Israel, two requests for information to the State of Palestine and one request for information to the Ministry of Health in Gaza. The State of Palestine and the Ministry of Health in Gaza provided information. No response was received from Israel.

3. The Commission applied the same methodology and standard of proof previously adopted for its investigations.<sup>2</sup> The Commission consulted multiple sources of information, collected thousands of open-source items and conducted remote and in-person interviews with victims and witnesses. The open-source material was forensically collected in accordance with international standards on the preservation of web-based content and rules of admissibility of digital evidence. Where needed, the open-source material was verified through comprehensive cross-referencing with a broad, varied collection of reputable sources and complemented by advanced forensic examination, including visual media authentication, geolocation and chronolocation analysis, metadata extraction and face recognition.

II. Applicable legal framework

4. The Commission reiterates that the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem and Gaza, and the occupied Syrian Golan are currently under belligerent occupation by Israel, to which international humanitarian law applies concurrently with international human rights law.<sup>3</sup> The Commission finds that Israel continues to occupy Gaza, as affirmed by the International Court of Justice in July 2024,<sup>4</sup> and has re-established its military presence in the Gaza Strip as of October 2023.<sup>5</sup> Israel is bound by the obligations of an occupying Power under the Fourth Geneva Convention and customary international law, including the Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907.

5. In conducting its legal analysis, the Commission took into account the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice in the case Legal Consequences arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in which the Court found that the continued presence of

<sup>1</sup> The first report was issued under the symbol A/HRC/56/26.

<sup>2</sup> The methodology and standard of proof are set out in the Commission's terms of reference, available at www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/2022-01/TORs-UN-Independent\_ICI\_Occupied\_Palestinian\_Territories.pdf.

<sup>3</sup> See A/77/328, para. 7; A/HRC/50/21, paras. 16 and 20; and Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, at p. 178, para. 106.

<sup>4</sup> Legal Consequences arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, advisory opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2024. The International Court of Justice, in para. 92 of its advisory opinion, stated that, "for the purpose of determining whether a territory is occupied under international law, the decisive criterion is not whether the occupying Power retains its physical military presence in the territory at all times but rather whether its authority 'has been established and can be exercised'", citing article 42 of the Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., paras. 93 and 94.

Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is unlawful owing to its sustained abuse of its position as the occupying Power, the annexation and assertion of permanent control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the continued denial of the Palestinian people's right to self-determination.<sup>6</sup> The Commission will set forth its recommendations on the modalities of implementing the International Court of Justice advisory opinion in a legal position paper. The investigative findings contained in the present report will be used in cases that are before the Court, including the case Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel).

III. Factual findings<sup>7</sup>

A. Attacks on medical facilities and personnel

6. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), between 7 October 2023 and 30 July 2024, Israel carried out 498 attacks on health-care facilities in the Gaza Strip. A total of 747 persons were killed directly in those attacks and 969 others were injured, and 110 facilities were affected.<sup>8</sup> WHO reported that 78 per cent of the attacks between 7 October 2023 and 12 February 2024 were carried out through military force, while 35 per cent involved obstruction of access and 9 per cent involved militarized search and detention operations. Attacks were widespread and systematic, starting in the north of the Gaza Strip (October to December 2023) and then later occurring in the centre (December 2023 to January 2024), the south (January to March 2024) and other areas (April to June 2024). The stated justification of the Israeli security forces for the attacks was that Hamas was using hospitals for military purposes, including as command-and-control centres.

7. Israeli security forces carried out air strikes against hospitals, causing considerable damage to buildings and surroundings, as well as multiple casualties; surrounded and besieged hospital premises; prevented the entry of goods and medical equipment and exit/entry of civilians; issued evacuation orders but prevented safe evacuations; and raided hospitals, arresting hospital staff and patients. Israeli security forces also obstructed access by humanitarian agencies.

8. According to the Ministry of Health in Gaza, 500 medical staff were killed between 7 October and 23 June.<sup>9</sup> The Palestine Red Crescent Society reported that 19 of its staff or volunteers had been killed since 7 October, and that many others had been detained and attacked. Medical personnel stated that they believed they had been intentionally targeted.

9. Hundreds of medical personnel, including three hospital directors and the head of an orthopaedic department, as well as patients and journalists were arrested by Israeli security forces in Shifa', Nasr and Awdah hospitals during offensives. In at least two cases, senior medical personnel died in Israeli detention (see paras. 70–72). Reportedly, 128 health workers remain detained by Israeli authorities as at 15 July, including four Palestine Red Crescent Society staff members.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid., para. 261.

<sup>7</sup> All information contained in the factual findings is based on confidential information on file and documented by the Commission from victims, witnesses and other reliable sources, unless specifically indicated.

<sup>8</sup> WHO, "oPt Emergency Situation Update, Issue 38, 7 Oct 2023–29 July 2024 at 16:00", 29 July 2024.

<sup>9</sup> See www.facebook.com/MOHGaza1994/posts/pfbid0reBJ7NVLrWBWN7TPkWGskTYGSEy42EiWzuo5C7UEEq6aVUJgM2r6zLLD1P63xmYBI (in Arabic).

10. As at 15 July, 113 ambulances had been attacked and at least 61 had been damaged.<sup>10</sup> The Commission documented direct attacks on medical convoys operated by the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the United Nations, the Palestine Red Crescent Society and non-governmental organizations. Access was also reduced owing to closure of areas by Israeli security forces, delays in coordination of safe routes, checkpoints, searches or destruction of roads.

11. The Commission investigated the 29 January attack in Tall al-Hawa on a Palestinian family and a Palestine Red Crescent Society ambulance that had been called to their aid. The family consisted of two adults and five children, including 15-year-old Leyan Hamada and 5-year-old Hind Rajab. They were attacked while trying to evacuate in their car. The ambulance, carrying two paramedics, Yousef Zeino and Ahmed al-Madhoun, was dispatched after its route had been coordinated with Israeli security forces. It was hit by a tank shell at a distance of some 50 m from the family's car. Hind was still alive at the time that the ambulance was dispatched. The presence of Israeli security forces in the area prevented access. As a result, the family members' bodies could not be retrieved from their bullet-ridden car until 12 days after the incident. The ambulance was found destroyed nearby, with human remains inside.

12. As at 15 July, of the 36 hospitals in Gaza, 20 were completely non-functional and only 16 were still partially operating,<sup>11</sup> with severe overcrowding and a bed capacity of only 1,490.<sup>12</sup>

13. The attacks on and destruction of hospitals and the scale of traumatic injuries across the Gaza Strip have overwhelmed the remaining medical facilities, leading to a collapse of the health-care system. The siege of Gaza, which has caused, inter alia, a lack of fuel and electricity, has severely affected the functioning of medical facilities and reduced the availability of life-saving equipment, medical supplies and medications. This has resulted in deprioritizing patients with chronic illnesses, leading to avoidable complications and death. Facilities have suffered from insufficient potable water and sanitation, damaged or limited communications systems, understaffing and lack of public health services.

14. Hospitals were also used as shelters from the hostilities, leading to even greater overcrowding and a greater risk to sheltering civilians during attacks. Overcrowding was observed, in particular, at Shifa' and Quds hospitals, which housed 50,000 and 12,000 internally displaced persons, respectively.

15. Medical facilities in the West Bank were also attacked. WHO documented 520 attacks on health-care facilities between 7 October 2023 and 30 July 2024, resulting in 23 people killed and 100 people injured.<sup>13</sup> The Palestine Red Crescent Society reported an increase in the use of excessive force, threats and harassment against its ambulance teams. On 30 January, Israeli security forces undercover forces, disguised as medical staff and civilian Palestinian women, raided Ibn Sina Hospital in Jenin, intentionally killing three Palestinian men.

16. Several medical facilities and personnel in Israel were attacked from 7 to 11 October by Palestinian armed groups. On 7 October, a paramedic was killed by members of Palestinian armed groups while treating wounded persons in a dental clinic in the kibbutz of Be'eri.<sup>14</sup> In addition, Barzilai Hospital in Ashkelon was struck

<sup>10</sup> WHO, "oPt Emergency Situation Update, Issue 36, 7 Oct 2023–15 July 2024 at 16:00", 15 July 2024.

<sup>11</sup> Ibid.

<sup>12</sup> WHO, "oPt Emergency Situation Update, Issue 32, 7 Oct 2023–30 May 2024 at 16:00", 30 May 2024, and WHO, "oPt Emergency Situation Update, Issue 39, 7 Oct 2023–5 August 2024", 5 August 2024.

<sup>13</sup> WHO, "oPt Emergency Situation Update, Issue 38, 7 Oct 2023–29 July 2024 at 16:00", 29 July 2024.

<sup>14</sup> See A/HRC/56/CRP.3, para. 212.

in two rocket attacks, one that occurred on 8 October and the other on 11 October. According to Israeli sources, 17 ambulances were damaged in various locations.<sup>15</sup> According to several sources, one ambulance based at the Nova festival on 7 October was targeted by Palestinian armed groups, resulting in the killing of the 18 people who had been hiding inside it.<sup>16</sup> In at least one case documented by the Commission, on 7 October, an Israeli ambulance transported Israeli security forces personnel.

17. Israel has also drastically decreased approval of permits to leave Gaza for medical treatment, primarily preventing patients from receiving treatment in hospitals in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Between October 2023 and 20 June 2024, only 5,857 of 13,872 patients who had applied for medical evacuation out of Gaza through the Rafah crossing were given approval. Only 54 per cent of evacuation requests made by cancer patients in that period were approved.<sup>17</sup> In July, Israel delayed the evacuation of 150 children from the Gaza Strip in need of specialized medical treatment.

Findings on Israeli security forces attacks against specific hospitals

18. The Commission investigated attacks on four hospitals in different areas of the Gaza Strip: the Nasr Medical Complex (Nasr Hospital hereafter) and Shifa', Awdah and Turkish-Palestinian Friendship (the Turkish Hospital hereafter) hospitals. Those include two major medical facilities and also hospitals that offer such specialized medical care as obstetrics, paediatrics and oncology. The Commission found that Israeli security forces attacked these facilities in a similar manner, suggesting the existence of operational plans and procedures for attacking health-care facilities.

19. While Israeli security forces issued evacuation orders to those hospitals, the Commission found that the orders were not feasible, not issued in a coordinated fashion and could not be implemented in a safe manner. They gave hospital administrations little time – just a few hours, in some cases – to evacuate hundreds of patients. Israeli security forces did not assist in the safe evacuation of patients. According to several sources, full evacuations were not possible without endangering patients' lives. At Awdah Hospital and Nasr Paediatric Hospital, Israeli security forces denied requests by medical staff to facilitate the movement of ambulances in order to make the evacuation process smoother, resulting in unsafe conditions for evacuation. Patients at those hospitals, in particular those who were in intensive care units and those who were critically injured, required special care while being moved.

20. The Commission received reports about the deliberate, direct targeting of hospitals, including Awdah, Shifa' and Nasr hospitals, with sniper fire. In one example, on 13 February, Israeli security forces issued an evacuation order to Nasr Hospital. Shortly after the order was issued, a handcuffed Palestinian detainee dressed in a white protective suit was observed in the hospital, allegedly ordered by Israeli security forces to notify the people to evacuate. Upon leaving the hospital, he was allegedly shot and killed by Israeli security forces.

21. From 6 November 2023, repeated attacks on Shifa' and Nasr hospitals, including attacks specifically directed against the maternity ward and intensive care unit of Shifa' Hospital, resulted in complete or near-complete closure of these facilities. The closures had serious ramifications for the rest of the already overwhelmed hospitals of Gaza, owing to the central role of those two hospitals in the overall health system. Satellite imagery of Shifa' and Nasr hospitals captured on

<sup>15</sup> Government of Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, "Swords of Iron: War in the South – Hamas' Attack on Israel", press release, 27 May 2024.

<sup>16</sup> For additional information on the attack on the Nova festival, see A/HRC/56/26, para. 16.

<sup>17</sup> WHO, "Medical evacuation of Gaza patients through Rafah Crossing, Oct 2023–20 June 2024".

4 April and 12 March, respectively, shows that the sites of those hospitals and surrounding roads were severely damaged.

22. According to the Media Office of the de facto authorities in Gaza, more than 500 bodies were found in mass graves located on hospital grounds, including at Shifa' and Nasr hospitals. Satellite images from 23 April show at least two possible mass graves at Nasr Hospital. The de facto authorities in Gaza have said that several bodies were found undressed and handcuffed, indicating that the victims might have been executed. One witness involved in the exhumation of bodies near Nasr Hospital told the Commission that he had seen bodies with gunshot wounds in the head or neck. Israeli security forces have denied burying bodies in mass graves, although they acknowledged that soldiers searching for the bodies of hostages had exhumed some mass graves.

23. On 1 November, the Turkish Hospital ceased operating because of damage caused by air strikes on 30 and 31 October, as well as a lack of fuel and electricity, resulting in the death of several patients, including owing to lack of oxygen. The Turkish Government, which funds the hospital, condemned the attacks, stating that the coordinates of the hospital had been shared in advance with Israeli security forces. From November, Israeli security forces occupied the hospital, which is located in the Israeli-controlled Netzarim corridor, and used it as a base from which to conduct operations. Satellite imagery from that period shows the construction of protective soil embankments and incremental damage to parts of the hospital caused by bulldozers. Videos posted on the social media platform X (formerly Twitter) show several Israeli security forces military vehicles in the hospital and Israeli security forces celebrating a religious festival within the premises.

24. The Turkish Hospital was the only dedicated oncology hospital in Gaza. Since its closure, about 10,000 cancer patients have been left without access to treatment. Consequently, patients have died owing to lack of adequate cancer treatment.

25. Awdah Hospital, the main reproductive health-care provider in northern Gaza, was targeted repeatedly by Israeli security forces from November 2023 to January 2024, and again in May. It was targeted despite the fact that the Israeli authorities had been given the hospital's geographical coordinates by Médecins sans frontières, which had informed all parties that it was a functioning hospital. Three doctors, including two from Médecins sans frontières, were killed in a strike on 21 November. The hospital was under siege in December, with some 250 people trapped inside facing severe shortages of food, water and medicine. During the siege, all males over 15 were ordered to exit the hospital in their underwear, and several medical staff, including the hospital director, were arrested. Several persons, including medical staff and a pregnant woman, were reportedly killed by snipers.

26. Until late February, Awdah Hospital, which had one of the only functioning maternity wards in North Gaza Governorate, was partially operational, receiving maternity patients well beyond its capacity. The hospital reportedly provided care to 15,577 maternity patients in the period from 7 October to 23 December with just 75 beds. On 27 February, the hospital administration announced that it was partially ceasing operations, owing to lack of fuel, electricity and medical supplies. The partial closure of the hospital had dire consequences for health-care services in North Gaza Governorate, in particular for maternity patients.

Allegations of use of hospitals for military purposes

27. Israeli security forces asserted that over 85 per cent of major medical facilities in Gaza were used by Hamas for terror operations, but did not provide evidence to substantiate that claim.<sup>18</sup> Israeli security forces alleged that there were tunnels underneath or connected to hospitals, and that Hamas stored weapons, hid personnel and operated headquarters from within and underneath hospitals. Israeli security forces stated that Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad had fired weapons from within hospital premises and that hostages were held either in hospitals or in tunnels underneath hospitals. Hamas has repeatedly denied such allegations. Several released hostages stated publicly that they had been held in a hospital (see para. 77). The Commission interviewed senior medical personnel at hospitals and they denied that there was any military activity, emphasizing that the hospitals' only role was to treat patients.

28. Israeli security forces stated in October that the Shifa' Hospital compound and the infrastructure beneath it were being used by Hamas as military headquarters. They released footage showing a tunnel network, allegedly beneath Shifa' Hospital and used by Hamas for military purposes, and footage of a tunnel shaft located close to a fence approximately 100 m from the hospital's main building. Israeli security forces stated that they had found large quantities of weapons inside the hospital during their attack in March, including in the maternity ward, and published photos of weapon caches allegedly found within the hospital. In February, Israeli security forces made similar statements and released footage of weapon caches allegedly found in Nasr Hospital.

29. The Commission documented an exchange of fire in and around the Shifa' Hospital premises that started on 18 March 2024, the first day of the Israeli security forces' raid of the hospital, and lasted until the end of March. Footage released by Hamas showed Israeli security forces personnel on the roof of the hospital releasing a surveillance drone. Israeli security forces drone footage of the operation shows an exchange of fire within the hospital premises and at the main gate. There was a significant number of patients, medical staff and internally displaced persons reportedly present at the hospital at the time.

Reproductive health care

30. Direct attacks on health-care facilities, including those offering sexual and reproductive health care and services, have affected about 540,000 women and girls who are of reproductive age in Gaza. In April, it was reported that only two of the 12 partially functioning hospitals offering sexual and reproductive health care were actually able to provide such services. Direct attacks against the main maternity wards in Shifa' and Nasr hospitals rendered them inoperative. Facilities specifically designated as sexual and reproductive health-care centres were directly targeted or forced to cease operations. Those facilities include Emirati Maternity Hospital, Awdah Hospital and Sahabah Hospital, which are the primary maternal health-care facilities in the south and north of Gaza. In parallel, several maternity wards in other hospitals were forced to close, including the maternity ward of Aqsa Hospital in January. The Basmah in vitro fertilization centre, the largest fertility clinic in Gaza, was the direct target of air strikes in December 2023 that reportedly resulted in the destruction of approximately 3,000 embryos.

31. The Commission documented unsafe conditions for women giving birth in hospitals, including lack of specialized personnel, medication and equipment. Medical professionals noted that it was extremely challenging to manage patients' pain and prevent infections, as hospitals were often lacking adequate supplies, including epidurals, anaesthesia and antibiotics. An emergency specialist who worked in Nasr Hospital in January described significant challenges in diagnosing and treating pregnant women because of the lack of reliable lab testing or equipment, leading to avoidable complications. Obstetricians stated that women had received very little obstetric care and that a number of them were suffering from vaginal infections that, if untreated, could lead to premature births, miscarriages or infertility. Medical personnel described receiving maternity patients suffering from malnutrition and dehydration, as well as various infections and anaemia.

<sup>18</sup> See x.com/IDF/status/1758071158946038180.

32. Women have increasingly been forced to give birth in unsafe conditions at home or in shelters or camps, with little or no medical support, increasing the risk of complications resulting in life-long injuries and death. Disruptions to electricity and telecommunication services made hotlines for home deliveries unreachable, compounding the risks for women. The continuing siege and hostilities posed barriers for the distribution of safe home delivery kits to pregnant women.

33. A sharp increase in emergency admissions has resulted in the deprioritization of reproductive health care at the few remaining functional medical facilities. Post-partum patients and their newborns were not given time for recovery after delivery. Instead, they were discharged within a few hours of delivery, mentally and physically fragile, in order to make space for new admissions. In addition, about 60,000 maternity patients were not adequately monitored owing to the unavailability of prenatal and postnatal care.

34. The hostilities have had a detrimental psychological impact on pregnant, post-partum and lactating women because of direct exposure to armed conflict and owing to displacement, famine and substandard health care. Obstetric emergencies and premature births have reportedly surged because of stress and trauma. An increase in miscarriages of up to 300 per cent has been reported since 7 October. Experts told the Commission that the long-term psychological and physical effects of such precarious conditions for women, newborns and the family remain unknown.

Paediatric care

35. Medical experts told the Commission that the destruction of medical infrastructure, lack of supplies and the targeting of health-care workers have compromised children's access to basic health care and treatment and, as a result, have had direct and indirect effects on children's health in Gaza. Children have been killed as a result of direct attacks on hospitals, with medical teams noting that the high number of child deaths is likely attributable to the fact that children represent a majority of the patients treated in hospitals for blunt and penetrating trauma.

36. Medical professionals told the Commission that they have treated children with direct gunshot wounds, indicating direct targeting of children. They also noted that child injuries were difficult to treat owing to lack of basic medical supplies and poor sanitation. The Commission had previously noted that children were particularly vulnerable to death and injury because of their age, stage of development and size.<sup>19</sup> Children were operated on without preoperative and post-operative care, increasing the risk of wounds becoming infected, including by insects and parasites, resulting in complications and, in some cases, death.

37. Attacks on health-care facilities have also indirectly affected children's health and significantly increased childhood mortality and morbidity. Attacks on the paediatric hospitals of Gaza, including Rantisi and Nasr hospitals, as well as attacks on larger hospitals, have forced children with pre-existing conditions to seek care at smaller facilities that lacking specialized paediatric staff and equipment. A doctor in Ahli Hospital stated that the hospital lacked the necessary medications and expertise for treating children with complex medical problems, such as severe asthma or epilepsy.

---

<sup>19</sup> A/HRC/56/CRP.4, para. 51.

38. In June, the United Nations Children's Fund estimated that almost 3,000 malnourished children were at risk of dying owing to the lack of food in southern Gaza. The situation was exacerbated by the continued attacks on the health-care facilities. Only two of the three stabilization centres for treating malnourished children in the Gaza Strip, one in North Gaza Governorate and one in Deir al-Balah Governorate, were functioning. The prolonged hospitalization of children without adequate nutrition and in an unhealthy environment was also found to be linked to malnutrition. A paediatric doctor projected that children living in hospitals for long periods with no access to proper nutrition would suffer from nutritional deficiencies resulting in long-term health consequences. The collapse of the health-care system has also affected the ability to provide vaccinations. Children under five are at risk of contracting polio because they are unvaccinated. The first case of polio in 25 years was reported by the Ministry of Health in Gaza on 16 August. In September 2024, both parties agreed to a brief humanitarian pause to facilitate a polio vaccination campaign in the Gaza Strip.<sup>20</sup>

39. Hospitals in Gaza can no longer offer mental health treatment and have few specialized staff to treat children suffering psychological conditions, including those exhibiting suicidal and self-harming thoughts.

40. Doctors told the Commission that, as a result of attacks on medical facilities and the limited treatment options available, infants and children in Gaza would likely suffer well into their adulthood. Short-term complications could include infants not meeting motor developmental milestones within the first year of life. In the medium-term, children would be unable to develop speech and meet language milestones, and their cognitive abilities could potentially be impaired in the long-term. A doctor summarized the situation by saying that the essence of childhood has been destroyed in Gaza.

B. Treatment of detainees by Israeli authorities

41. Between 7 October 2023 and July 2024, Israel arrested more than 14,000 Palestinians in Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.<sup>21</sup> Among that number were some 4,000 Palestinians arrested in Gaza, many of whom were transferred to facilities in Israel for interrogation. In addition, hundreds of members of Palestinian armed groups were arrested on 7 and 8 October inside Israel. Those arrested in Gaza and transferred to Israel were apprehended primarily under the Incarceration of Unlawful Combatants Act. They are being held in military-run facilities, primarily Sde Teiman camp in southern Israel, but some have been transferred to facilities administered by the Israel Prison Service. Thousands from the West Bank were arrested under military orders. In addition, thousands of Palestinian workers from Gaza who were in Israel legally on 7 October were detained in the Anatot facility in the West Bank, which is operated by the military. Some 3,000 of the detained workers were reportedly released and sent to Gaza in November in response to a petition filed with the High Court of Justice of Israel.

Arbitrary arrest and detention<sup>22</sup>

42. Thousands of Palestinians, mostly men, were arrested in Israeli military operations and attacks in Gaza and the West Bank, including journalists, human rights defenders, medical staff, patients, United Nations staff and relatives of suspects. Boys were also arrested. Many were not informed of the reasons for their arrest. Released detainees reported being interrogated about their potential involvement in the hostilities, including affiliation with Hamas, and the whereabouts of Israeli hostages. Several female human rights defenders, journalists and politicians from the West Bank were also arrested and detained under charges of “incitement to terrorism”.

<sup>20</sup> See x.com/DrTedros/status/1830156377202827297.

<sup>21</sup> See https://01368b10-57e4-4138-acc3-01373134d221.usrfiles.com/ugd/01368b\_f32f5ef6555f45d8b5a9659cc44383fc.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>22</sup> In addition to interviews and submissions, the Commission also consulted reports by the United Nations and human rights organizations, data from Israel Prison Service official sources, credible media, including The New York Times, Cable News Network and Haaretz, and investigative reports.

43. Israeli officials maintained that, following security screening and interrogation, “individuals found not to be involved in terrorist activities are released and returned to the Gaza Strip [...] as quickly as possible”.<sup>23</sup> However, the Commission found that detainees continued to be held by Israel, even after they had undergone security screenings and been found not to pose a real threat. These detainees included older persons, persons suffering from serious chronic diseases, pregnant women, children and medical personnel, as well as detainees known as “shawish” who were kept in custody to serve as intermediaries between or translators for the guards and other detainees and workers from Gaza.

44. According to official Israeli sources, detainees from Gaza undergo a hearing, interrogation or screening by a senior Israeli security forces officer “within 7 to 10 days”, while the detention of Palestinians from the West Bank is reviewed by a military judge. The Commission notes that many released detainees report that they still do not know the reason for their arrest, suggesting that they had not been given a hearing, or, if such a process had occurred, that they had not understood the proceedings.

Enforced disappearances

45. The Israeli authorities have not disclosed the names and whereabouts of the thousands of Palestinians from Gaza arrested since 7 October, including in response to several habeas corpus petitions to the High Court of Justice. Minimum safeguards against enforced disappearances have been removed as a result of a recently introduced ban on visits by ICRC and new amendments to the Incarceration of Unlawful Combatants Acts that prevent judicial review of detention for up to 75 days and lawyer visits for up to 90 days pending court approval. That situation has persisted, despite the Israeli authorities providing an email address that can allegedly be used to facilitate lawyer visits for Gaza detainees. As at 15 July, the Commission was aware of only one instance in which a lawyer had been permitted to visit a detainee from Gaza in Sde Teiman camp.

Release of detainees

46. Detainees from Gaza are being released by Israeli security forces at the Kerem Shalom crossing point with no procedures in place to ensure medical attention or support. This practice has had a particularly detrimental effect on children. The Commission notes that the procedure followed by the Israeli authorities for the release of child detainees has contributed to children from the Gaza Strip being separated from family, because they return unaccompanied, with limited ability to locate or communicate with their families. Released child detainees have shown signs of extreme psychological distress and trauma.

47. Palestinian detainees who were initially detained in the northern regions of Gaza were later released in the southern regions, far from their homes and families. The prohibition imposed by the Israeli security forces on returning to the north of the Gaza

<sup>23</sup> See www.idf.il/%d7%90%d7%aa%d7%a8%d7%99-%d7%99%d7%97%d7%99%d7%93%d7%95%d7%aa/%d7%99%d7%95%d7%9e%d7%9f-%d7%94%d7%9e%d7%9c%d7%97%d7%9e%d7%94/%d7%93%d7%95%d7%97-%d7%94%d7%a9%d7%a7%d7%99%d7%a4%d7%95%d7%aa/%d7%97%d7%a7%d7%99%d7%a8%d7%95%d7%aa/ (in Hebrew).

Strip and attacks against civilians attempting to return to the north have hindered the return of detainees to their places of origin and family unification.

Mistreatment during arrests and transfer

48. The Commission received numerous reports of detainees being stripped, transported naked, blindfolded, handcuffed tightly enough to cause injury and swelling, kicked, beaten, sexually assaulted and subjected to religious slurs and death threats, as well as having their property damaged during arrest and transfer to detention facilities in Israel and the West Bank.<sup>24</sup>

49. The Commission documented mistreatment during transfer of detainees from the Gaza Strip to detention facilities in Israel and the West Bank and during transfer between facilities. One released detainee told the Commission that he had been slapped on his face and threatened by an Israeli security forces interrogator at a “staging area” set up outside Zikim military base. The interrogator told him: “I will kill you and can make you disappear. You will not see the sun, and nobody will know where you are.” Another released detainee told the Commission that detainees were badly beaten during the journey between military and Israel Prison Service facilities. He noted that one detainee was punched in the jaw so hard that several of his teeth were broken.

50. On 22 June 2024, in the Jabariyat neighbourhood of Jenin, in the West Bank, Israeli security forces shot and injured two Palestinian men. The injured men were then detained and transported on the bonnets of military armoured vehicles, despite continuing gunfire in the area. One detainee was driven past at least three ambulances without being transferred for medical treatment. The Commission also documented information indicating that Israeli security forces had forced detainees to go inside tunnels and buildings in Gaza ahead of soldiers assigned to clear the locations. The Commission observed a pattern of members of the Israeli security forces using Palestinian detainees to shield themselves from attacks.

Mistreatment in military-run detention facilities

51. The Commission verified information of widespread and institutionalized mistreatment of detainees from Gaza, including boys, in the Sde Teiman military detention camp, where all detainees from Gaza have initially been held since 8 October. Detainees were blindfolded and handcuffed by Israeli security forces personnel at all times, confined to large and overcrowded makeshift cells and forced to kneel in stress positions for hours, while also being prohibited from speaking. They were denied adequate access to toilets and showers, and many were forced to wear diapers. They were subjected to beatings, including with batons and wooden sticks, even while immobilized, and intimidation and attacks by dogs. Detainees reported sleeping on thin mattresses on the floor, with only light blankets for cover, even in winter months, and being deprived of sleep. They were allowed to sleep only four to five hours each night, with the lights kept on continuously. No sleep was allowed during daytime. Detainees reported limited access to toilet facilities, sometimes only once a day, and no access to showers for weeks at a time. The food provided was insufficient and lacking variety, leading to significant weight loss and other medical complications.

52. Detainees, including older individuals, taken to Sde Teiman for interrogation were tied in painful positions or bound to a screw placed high on a wall for hours, while blindfolded and suspended with their feet touching or barely touching the ground (“shabah”). In one case, a detainee was left in that position for five to six hours as interrogators repeatedly subjected him to extreme changes in temperatures, using a strong fan and a heated lamp in alternation. The Commission also received reports of electric shock devices being used against detainees.

---

<sup>24</sup> See A/HRC/56/CRP.4, pp. 15–19.

53. Inadequate sanitary conditions restricted detainees' ability to perform religious practices, such as prayer and ablutions, increased health risks and served to further humiliate and dehumanize detainees. One detainee told the Commission that, owing to infrequent access to toilets, detainees were forced to urinate or defecate in their clothes. One detainee said that they "had been stripped of their humanity and treated no better than animals". He added that "all detainees were unwashed and smelled, leaving their trousers yellowed, while soldiers handling them wore gloves that they would throw at the detainees when done."

54. Medical conditions linked to poor hygiene, including skin rashes, boils and abscesses, became worse. Medical attention was in short supply, of low quality and provided in a separate building, while detainees were handcuffed and blindfolded. In some cases, in both military and Israel Prison Service facilities, beatings sustained during interrogations resulted in fractures, yet appropriate medical attention was not provided. Constant handcuffing and inadequate medical care reportedly caused some detainees to have limbs amputated. Statements made by some medical personnel suggest that they were complicit in unlawful practices.

55. On 3 July, the Attorney General of Israel stated in a letter that the Minister of National Security, Itamar Ben-Gvir, was obstructing prisoner transfers to Israel Prison Service facilities. As at August, 28 detainees (all men) remain detained at Sde Teiman.<sup>25</sup>

Mistreatment in Israel Prison Service facilities

56. On 16 October, the Minister of National Security ordered significant additional restrictions in Israel Prison Service facilities. Those restrictions included the imposition of a complete ban on family and ICRC visits, cancelling or restricting lawyer visits and phone calls, and cancelling non-urgent medical appointments. Electricity was cut off in prison cells, detainees' personal property was confiscated and access to showers and toilets was severely restricted. Access to fresh air in the prison yard was restricted or prohibited. Restrictions were imposed on food allowances and applied to thousands of detainees and prisoners, including women and children, who had been detained before 7 October. On several occasions, the Minister of National Security indicated that revenge was the motivation for these policies.

57. The Commission documented multiple instances of physical and verbal abuse, including death threats, in Israel Prison Service facilities. Detainees in Negev, Megiddo, Ofer and Ramon prisons described being beaten by guards using batons and wooden sticks while handcuffed, including upon arrival at those prisons and during cell searches conducted by special Israel Prison Service units using dogs to intimidate and attack prisoners.

58. Female detainees from the West Bank were subjected to the same restrictions as men in Israel Prison Service facilities and were affected in particular ways by insufficient and inadequate food and water and unhygienic conditions. The Commission learned that pregnant women held in an Israel Prison Service facility did not receive either sufficient or adequate food and were denied medical care. Several women reported that they had not been allowed to use toilets despite having requested access, or that they had been handcuffed for prolonged periods of time and therefore required help from other detainees to use the toilets. Female detainees had limited access to or were denied sanitary pads.

---

<sup>25</sup> See https://01368b10-57e4-4138-acc3-01373134d221.usrfiles.com/ugd/01368b\_f32f5ef6555f45d8b5a9659cc44383fc.pdf (in Hebrew), paras. 4, 15 and 27.

Treatment of children

59. The Commission has determined that hundreds of children from Gaza and the West Bank were arrested and then transferred and detained in Israel and the West Bank. Detained children were subjected to extreme violence during arrest, detention, interrogation and release.

60. Children from Gaza were held in both military and Israel Prison Service facilities. In Sde Teiman, children were held with adults and were subjected to similar mistreatment. A 15-year-old boy detained at Sde Teiman facility told the Commission that he had been the only child among 70 adults in a cell. His legs had been shackled with metal chains and his hands cuffed so tightly that they had bled, yet he had not received any medical attention. He had been repeatedly punished by being forced to stand with his hands raised for hours. He described his 23 days of detention as “the worst days of my life”. A 13-year-old boy told the Commission that dogs had been used against him during interrogations and that he had been placed in solitary confinement.

61. Children were imprisoned in overcrowded juvenile sections in Israel Prison Service facilities, primarily Megiddo and Ofer. Although children were separated from adults, the Israeli authorities subjected them all to the same restrictions that they applied to adults.

Rape and other forms of sexual and gender-based violence

62. The Commission documented more than 20 cases of sexual and gender-based violence against male and female detainees in more than 10 military and Israel Prison Service facilities, in particular in Negev prison and Sde Teiman camp for male detainees and in Damon and Hasharon prisons for female detainees. Sexual violence was used as a means of punishment and intimidation from the moment of arrest and throughout detention, including during interrogations and searches. Acts of sexual violence documented by the Commission were motivated by extreme hatred towards and a desire to dehumanize the Palestinian people.

63. The Commission found that forced nudity, with the aim of degrading and humiliating victims in front of both soldiers and other detainees, was frequently used against male victims, including repeated strip searches; interrogation of detainees while they were naked; forcing detainees to perform certain movements while naked or stripped and, in some cases, also filmed; subjecting detainees to sexual slurs as they were transported naked; forcing naked detainees into a crowded cell together; and forcing stripped and blindfolded detainees to crouch on the ground with their hands tied behind their back.

64. Several male detainees reported that Israeli security forces personnel had beaten, kicked, pulled or squeezed their genitals, often while the detainees were naked. In some cases, Israeli security forces personnel used such objects as metal detectors and batons. One detainee who had been held in the Israeli security forces personnel Negev prison stated that, in November 2023, members of the Keter unit of the Israel Prison Service had forced him to strip and then ordered him to kiss the Israeli flag. When he refused, he was beaten and his genitals were kicked so severely that he vomited and lost consciousness.

65. The Commission also received credible information concerning rape and sexual assault, including the use of an electrical probe to cause burns to the anus and the insertion of objects, such as sticks, broomsticks and vegetables, into the anus. Some of those acts were reportedly filmed by soldiers. In July, nine soldiers were questioned and several arrested for allegedly raping a detainee and causing life-threatening injury at Sde Teiman.

66. The Commission has determined that detainees were routinely subjected to sexual abuse and harassment, and that threats of sexual assault and rape were directed at detainees or their female family members. One detainee held in Sde Teiman reported that female soldiers had forced him and others to make sounds like a sheep, curse the Hamas leadership and the prophet Muhammad, and say, “I am a whore”. Detainees were beaten if they did not comply. In another case, a soldier took off his trousers and pressed his crotch to a detainee’s face, saying: “You are my bitch. Suck my dick.”

67. Female detainees were also subjected to sexual assault and harassment in military and Israel Prison Service facilities, as well as threats to their lives and threats of rape. The sexual harassment included attempts to kiss and touch their breasts. They reported repeated, prolonged and invasive strip-searches, both before and after interrogations. Women were forced to remove all clothes, including the veil, in front of male and female soldiers. They were beaten and harassed while being called “ugly” and had sexual insults, such as “bitch” and “whore”, directed at them. In one case, a female detainee in an Israel Prison Service prison was denied access to her lawyer after she had informed him of rape threats.

68. The Commission received reports from the Palestinian Authority about the rape of two female detainees. It is attempting to verify the information.

69. Female detainees were photographed without their consent and in degrading circumstances, including in their underwear in front of male soldiers.<sup>26</sup> In one case, a detainee was subjected to repeated and invasive strip-searches following her arrest at a police station in northern Israel. She was beaten, verbally abused, dragged by her hair and photographed in front of an Israeli flag. The photos were posted online.

Deaths in custody

70. As at 15 July, at least 53 Palestinian detainees had died in Israeli detention facilities since 7 October 2023. Of that number, 44 persons were from Gaza, including 36 who died in Sde Teiman, and 9 were from the West Bank. Deceased detainees’ bodies have largely not been returned to their families for burial.

71. Thaer Abu Assab, from Qalqilya in the West Bank, who had been imprisoned since 2005, died in Negev Prison on 18 November 2023 after he was reportedly subjected to severe beatings by guards from the Keter Unit of the Israel Prison Service and his medical evacuation was delayed. Israeli authorities opened a criminal investigation, but only limited disciplinary action was reportedly taken against the guards involved. Two senior Palestinian doctors from Gaza died in Israeli detention. Dr. Iyad Rantisi, the director of a women’s hospital in Bayt Lahya, was arrested on 11 November at an Israeli security forces checkpoint and died six days later in the Israel Prison Service-operated Shikma Prison, where he was reportedly interrogated by the Israel Security Agency (also known as Shin Bet). Dr. Adnan al-Bursh, the head of the orthopaedic department at Shifa’ Hospital in Gaza City, was arrested in December and died at Ofer Prison in April. A released detainee told the Commission that he had seen Dr. Al-Bursh in Sde Teiman in December 2023 with bruises on his body and complaining of chest pain.

72. Israel provided no evidence that investigations into deaths in custody were being conducted, with a view to ensuring accountability.

<sup>26</sup> See A/HRC/56/CRP.4, para. 381.

C. Treatment of hostages by Palestinian armed groups<sup>27</sup>

73. On 7 October 2023, a total of 251 people (226 civilians and 25 members of the Israeli security forces) were abducted in Israel and taken to Gaza as hostages.<sup>28</sup> That number included 90 women and 36 children, as well as older persons and non-Israeli nationals. The bodies of people killed in the attacks in southern Israel were also taken into Gaza. During a week-long ceasefire in November 2023, 80 Israeli children and women and 24 foreign nationals were released. As at 3 September, 154 living or dead hostages had been released or freed through military operations, while 101 remained in captivity.<sup>29</sup> Eight Israeli hostages were freed alive through four Israeli security forces military operations, some of which also resulted in hundreds of Palestinian casualties.

Enforced disappearances

74. All hostages have been held incommunicado without contact with the outside world, including ICRC. Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups have not provided a list of hostages, living or dead, that they hold, nor have they shared details and updates on their whereabouts or condition. As at the end of August, the fate of the majority of the hostages still held in captivity was unknown.

75. Palestinian armed groups have filmed and released at least 18 videos of 32 Israeli hostages, including three children. While these videos provided “proof of life”, the Commission notes that they were used primarily to exert pressure on Israel, with the hostages forced to urge the Israeli Government to halt its military operations in Gaza and negotiate an exchange deal. Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad published videos that were designed to heighten uncertainty about the fate of the hostages. In later videos, it was confirmed that some of those hostages were dead. A senior Hamas official stated that families of hostages were being pressured through the psychological warfare practised on them by the Qassam Brigades and Quds Brigades, in order to pressure Netanyahu.

Conditions of captivity and treatment of hostages

76. Hostages stated that they were kept in tunnels, apartments or residential buildings, and hospitals.

77. With regard to the presence of hostages in hospitals, the Commission analysed footage released by Israeli security forces showing that two hostages, one with visible injuries, had been brought to Shifa’ Hospital on 7 October. This was later confirmed by the Political Bureau of Hamas, which stated that the hostages had been transported there for medical treatment. Several released hostages said they had been held in hospitals during their captivity, particularly prior to their release, but did not state that they had been suffering from any specific medical condition at the time. The Commission confirmed that two hostages had been held in hospitals and received medical treatment for their wounds. Two photographs show the body of a deceased Israeli man who was killed in a kibbutz on 7 October being brought to Shifa’ Hospital. The Commission also confirmed that Israeli security forces vehicles stolen from

<sup>27</sup> The Commission relied on video and audio testimonies of released hostages accessible through open sources, statements by medical professionals who treated released hostages, medical reports, available digital forensic evidence that was verified and analysed by the Commission and assessments made by a United Nations forensic pathologist.

<sup>28</sup> Government of Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Swords of Iron: War in the South – Hamas’ Attack on Israel”, press release, 27 May 2024, and “Swords of Iron: Hostages and Missing Persons Report”, press release, 1 September 2024.

<sup>29</sup> This number includes Israeli hostages held captive by Hamas since 2014.

Nahal Oz military base, including vehicles identified as having been used to transport hostages from Israel, were brought to the premises of Shifa' Hospital.

78. Of the 36 children abducted and taken to Gaza, 9 were less than 5 years old and 10 had been alone, without other family members, when they were abducted.<sup>30</sup> In some cases, hostages belonging to the same family, including children as young as 3 years old, were separated, either during the abduction process or while in captivity. A total of 34 children were released in November 2023.

79. Some hostages, including two children, were kept in full isolation. At least three older women reported being held in isolation, with one 84-year-old woman stating that she had been held alone for 51 days until her release.

80. Hostages kept in tunnels reported being confined in overcrowded dark spaces with limited access to air. The majority of released hostages reported having had limited access to drinking water and hygiene facilities, including toilets, and limited food, leading to weight loss and deterioration of physical health. An 84-year-old female hostage reported being given only six dates a day and of going through periods of several days without any food at all. A medical study of 7 released women and 19 released children found uniformly poor nutritional status, in particular for children aged 8 to 18 and those who had been held alone without family members.<sup>31</sup> Some released hostages reported being deprived of medication for chronic illnesses, with such deprivation having particularly detrimental effects on older persons.

81. The siege imposed by Israel on the Gaza Strip has reduced the availability of food, water and medicine to the population at large, including the hostages. However, the Commission reiterates that the responsibility of Palestinian armed groups is to ensure adequate access to food, water and medicine for the hostages they hold, in particular vulnerable hostages.

82. The Commission received credible information about some hostages being subjected to sexual and gender-based violence while in captivity, including sexualized torture and abuse against men and women when they were held in tunnels. One released female hostage reported that she had been raped in an apartment.

83. While some released hostages stated they had not been mistreated, the Commission finds that the majority of hostages were subjected to mistreatment, and that some were subjected to physical violence. At least six hostages appear in videos and images taken in captivity displaying bruises and other injuries that they sustained either during their capture and transfer into Gaza or while in captivity. Two released male hostages reported that their hands and feet had been cuffed for the first two months of captivity, including while eating. Three hostages, including a child, reported having been subjected to explicit death threats. Five hostages reported that they had endured verbal abuse and humiliation.

84. The Commission identified, in video footage released by Hamas, signs of physical abuse on the bodies of three male hostages, including 25-year-old Sahar Baruch and 38-year-old Itay Svirsky, who had died in captivity. These included signs of possible strangulation and laceration marks on the face and arms that were corroborated by an independent forensic pathologist. Hamas claimed the three had been killed in an Israeli security forces bombardment.

---

<sup>30</sup> See A/HRC/56/CRP.3, para. 168.

<sup>31</sup> Noa Ziv and others, "Medical perspectives on Israeli children after their release from captivity – A retrospective study", Acta Paediatrica, vol. 113, issue 10 (October 2024).

Deaths in captivity

85. As at early September 2024, at least 70 hostages were no longer alive.<sup>32</sup> Hamas claimed that the majority had been killed by Israeli security forces during military operations.

86. The Commission has confirmed that three hostages were shot and killed by Israeli security forces while attempting to hand themselves over to the security forces.<sup>33</sup> At least five other hostages died in the course of Israeli security forces operations, but the security forces have stated that the exact cause of death is unclear. In August, the bodies of six hostages were recovered from a tunnel in Khan Younis, in an area where Israeli security forces had previously conducted air strikes.<sup>34</sup> Israeli security forces are investigating the circumstances of their deaths amid reports that the initial autopsies indicate a finding of gunshot wounds in the bodies. On 1 September, Israeli sources announced that six bodies had been discovered in a tunnel in Rafah. According to an initial forensic assessment, they had been shot 48 to 72 hours before Israeli security forces arrived at the location.<sup>35</sup> On 2 September, Hamas stated that new instructions had been issued regarding dealing with hostages if Israeli security forces approached their place of detention.

87. The Commission investigated three cases in which the bodies of dead hostages exhibited signs of mistreatment (see para. 84). In a fourth case, Israel acknowledged that a female soldier held by Hamas had been injured during an Israeli security forces air strike. However, the security forces argued that she had not sustained life-threatening injuries, but had instead been killed by Hamas. The Commission could not independently determine the cause of death.

IV. Conclusions

Health care

88. The offensive on Gaza since 7 October has resulted in the destruction of the already weak health-care system in the Gaza Strip, with detrimental long-term effects on the civilian population's rights to health and life. Attacks on health-care facilities are an intrinsic element of the Israeli security forces' broader assault on Palestinians in Gaza and the physical and demographic infrastructure of Gaza, as well as of efforts to expand the occupation. The actions of Israel violate international humanitarian law and the Palestinian people's right to self-determination, and they are in stark contravention of the International Court of Justice advisory opinion of July 2024.

89. The Commission finds that Israel has implemented a concerted policy to destroy the health-care system of Gaza. Israeli security forces have deliberately killed, wounded, arrested, detained, mistreated and tortured medical personnel and targeted medical vehicles, constituting the war crimes of wilful killing and mistreatment and the crime against humanity of extermination. Israeli authorities carried out such acts

<sup>32</sup> Government of Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, "Swords of Iron: Civilian Casualties", press release, 1 September 2024, and "Swords of Iron: IDF Casualties", press release, 18 September 2024.

<sup>33</sup> See A/HRC/56/26, para. 46.

<sup>34</sup> See www.idf.il/%D7%90%D7%AA%D7%A8%D7%99-%D7%99%D7%97%D7%99%D7%93%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%99%D7%95%D7%9E%D7%9F-%D7%94%D7%9E%D7%9C%D7%97%D7%9E%D7%94/%D7%9B%D7%9C-%D7%94%D7%9B%D7%AA%D7%91%D7%95%D7%AA/%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%A0%D7%99-%D7%93%D7%95%D7%91%D7%A8-%D7%A6%D7%94-%D7%9C/%D7%A2%D7%93%D7%9B%D7%95%D7%9F-%D7%93%D7%95%D7%91%D7%A8-%D7%A6%D7%94%D7%9C-20-08/ (in Hebrew).

<sup>35</sup> See <https://www.gov.il/he/pages/01092024-02> (in Hebrew) and <https://www.idf.il/227210> (in Hebrew).

while tightening the siege of the Gaza Strip, resulting in fuel, food, water, medicines and medical supplies not reaching hospitals, while also drastically reducing permits for patients to leave the territory for medical treatment. The Commission finds that these actions were taken as collective punishment against the Palestinians in Gaza and are part of the ongoing Israeli attack against the Palestinian people that began on 7 October.

90. The destruction by Israeli security forces of the health-care infrastructure of Gaza has had a severely detrimental effect on the accessibility, quality and availability of health-care services, drastically increasing mortality and morbidity, in violation of the right to physical and mental health, which is intrinsically linked to the right to life. Attacks targeting health-care facilities have exacerbated an already catastrophic situation, with the rapid increase in the number of emergency patients with serious injuries adding to the caseload of untreated patients suffering from chronic diseases or those in need of specialist care.

91. In relation to the attacks on Nasr, Shifa', Awdah and Turkish hospitals, the Commission finds that, in view of the excessive number of civilian deaths and injuries, as well as the damage caused to and the destruction of the hospitals' facilities, Israeli security forces failed to adhere to the principles of precaution, distinction and proportionality, constituting the war crimes of wilful killing and attacks against protected objects. The Commission finds that, in the attacks on Shifa' and Nasr hospitals, Israeli security forces considered the hospitals' premises and all surrounding areas as targetable without distinction and thus violated the principle of distinction. With regard to Israeli security forces seizing the Turkish Hospital for military purposes and establishing a military post therein, the Commission finds that such actions were not required by the imperative of military necessity and thus amount to the war crime of seizing protected property.

92. The Commission did not find evidence of military activity by Palestinian armed groups at either Awdah or the Turkish Hospital at the time that they were attacked. The Commission documented Israeli security forces statements that Shifa' and Nasr hospitals were being used for military purposes, and the security forces' claims of finding weapon caches. However, it was unable to independently verify those claims. The Commission confirmed the presence of a tunnel and shaft on the grounds of Shifa' Hospital, but it could not verify that they were used for military purposes. The Commission verified information indicating that members of armed groups had entered Shifa' hospital with Israeli security forces vehicles that were stolen on 7 October. However, it did not find any evidence of a military presence in the specific hospital departments that Israeli security forces shelled in November, including the maternity ward and the intensive care unit. The Commission concludes that, at the time of Israeli security forces attacks, the hospitals and medical facilities enjoyed special protection under international humanitarian law and were immune from such attacks.

93. Israeli security forces and Palestinian armed groups engaged in intense exchanges of fire on the premises of Shifa' Hospital in March, despite the presence of thousands of civilians, including medical staff, patients and internally displaced persons. Both parties to the conflict violated international humanitarian law by disregarding the special protection offered to medical facilities and protected persons.

94. Attacks against health-care facilities directly resulted in the killing of civilians, including children and pregnant women, who were receiving treatment or seeking shelter and indirectly led to deaths of civilians owing to the resulting lack of medical care, supplies and equipment, which constitutes a violation of Palestinians' right to life. The Commission also concludes that such acts constitute the crime against humanity of extermination.

95. In relation to the 29 January attack on a family, including five children, that was in a vehicle and on a Palestine Red Crescent Society ambulance (see para. 11), the Commission, based on its investigation, concludes on reasonable grounds that the 162 Division of the Israeli security forces was operating in the area and is responsible for killing the family of seven, as well as for shelling the ambulance, killing the two paramedics who were inside. Those actions constitute the war crimes of wilful killing and an attack against civilian objects.

96. Israeli attacks on medical facilities have led to the injury and death of child patients and have had devastating consequences for paediatric and neonatal care in Gaza hospitals, creating a large, unmet need for complex surgical and medical care for children, including premature babies. Israel has failed to act in the best interests of children and ensure the protection of their rights to life and the highest attainable standard of health care, and it has deliberately created conditions of life that have resulted in the destruction of generations of Palestinian children and the Palestinian people as a group.

97. The Commission finds that the deliberate destruction of sexual and reproductive health-care facilities constitutes reproductive violence and has had a particularly harmful effect on pregnant, post-partum and lactating women, who remain at high risk of injury and death. Targeting such infrastructure is a violation of women and girls' reproductive rights and the rights to life, health, human dignity and non-discrimination. In addition, it has caused immediate physical and mental harm and suffering to women and girls and will have irreversible long-term effects on the mental health and the physical reproductive and fertility prospects of the Palestinian people as a group.

98. Intentionally targeting facilities that are crucial for the health and protection of women, newborns and children violated the norm of customary international humanitarian law that affords special protection to women and children in armed conflicts. Such harmful acts were both foreseeable and unremedied. The prolonged physical and mental suffering of injured children and the reproductive harm caused to pregnant, post-partum and lactating women amount to the crime against humanity of other inhumane acts.

99. The Commission finds that Israeli security forces resorted to perfidy when soldiers entered a hospital in Jenin dressed as medical staff and female civilians on 30 January. That action constitutes a violation of international humanitarian law.

100. Attacks by Palestinian armed groups on medical staff, medical facilities and ambulances in Israel on and after 7 October constitute a war crime.

Detention of Palestinians

101. Mass arbitrary detention of Palestinians has been a long-standing practice over the course of the 75-year-long Israeli occupation of Gaza and the West Bank. Detention in Israel has been characterized by widespread and systematic abuse, physical and psychological violence, sexual and gender-based violence, and death in detention. The frequency and severity of those practices have increased since 7 October.

102. Mistreatment of Palestinian detainees by Israeli authorities is the result of an intentional policy. Acts of physical, psychological, sexual and reproductive violence were perpetrated to humiliate and degrade Palestinians. This was observed across several facilities and temporary holding locations, as well as during interrogation and while in transit to and from facilities. Detainees, including older persons and children, were subjected to consistent mistreatment, including lack of sufficient food and appropriate hygiene facilities, beatings, abusive language and being forced to perform humiliating acts. Israeli security forces committed those acts with the intent to inflict pain and suffering, amounting to torture as a war crime and a crime against humanity and constituting a violation of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. The deaths of detainees as a result of abuse or neglect amount to the war crimes of wilful killing or murder and violations of the right to life.

103. This systematic abuse is directly and causally linked to statements made by Israeli officials, including the Minister of National Security, who is responsible for the Israel Prison Service, and other members of the Israeli coalition Government legitimizing revenge and violence against Palestinians. The lack of accountability for actions of individual members of the Israeli security forces and the increasing acceptance of violence against Palestinians have allowed such conduct to continue uninterrupted and become systematic and institutionalized.

104. Large-scale arrests of Palestinian men and boys have been carried out with little or no justifiable cause, in many cases apparently simply because they were considered to be of “fighting age” or they did not follow evacuation orders. The detention of thousands of Palestinians for prolonged periods, even when they clearly posed no security risk, was arbitrary, unlawful and constitutes collective punishment and gender persecution.

105. The Israeli policy of deliberately withholding information regarding the names, whereabouts and status of detainees amounts to the crime against humanity of enforced disappearance. The mental suffering of the families of detainees amounts to torture.

106. Israeli security forces intentionally, unlawfully and arbitrarily deprived Palestinian children of their liberty and fundamental rights and caused serious physical and mental suffering. Israeli security forces transferred child detainees from Gaza and the West Bank to Israeli military detention centres, where they were detained for prolonged periods in the same quarters as adults and subjected to severe mistreatment, humiliation and torture. Ill-treatment of children was also observed in Israel Prison Service facilities. Released children have shown signs of serious physical injury, extreme psychological distress and trauma.

107. Israeli security forces used detainees as human shields in several instances in the West Bank and Gaza, which constitutes a war crime. Israeli security forces transported detainees from the West Bank on the bonnets of Israeli security forces vehicles in the middle of an exchange of fire. They forced detainees into tunnels and buildings ahead of military personnel in the Gaza Strip.

108. As the intensity of the hostilities increased, so did the prevalence and types of sexual and gender-based violence committed. In its previous report to the Human Rights Council (A/HRC/56/26), the Commission identified persecutory acts committed against Palestinian men and boys, including the filming of forced public stripping and nudity. The Commission finds that such persecutory acts continued in detention in the form of sexualized torture. Male detainees were subjected to attacks on their sexuality and reproductive organs, including violence to their genitals and anus, and were forced to perform humiliating and strenuous acts naked or stripped as a form of punishment or intimidation, with a view to extract information from them. Male detainees were subjected to rape, which is a war crime and a crime against humanity. Such acts of sexual violence, causing severe physical and mental suffering, also amount to torture.

109. Israeli security forces subjected male and female detainees to forced nudity and stripping during transfer, in detention facilities and during interrogations or body searches, in a widespread and systematic manner. Taken together with other acts of sexual violence committed for the purpose of humiliation or degradation, such as being photographed fully or partially naked and subjected to verbal and physical sexual abuse and threats of rape, the aforementioned acts constitute the war crimes of inhuman treatment and outrages upon personal dignity and the crime against humanity of other inhumane acts. In some cases, such acts amount to the war crime and crime against humanity of torture.

110. Israeli security forces have prohibited released detainees from returning to their places of residence in the north of Gaza. That prohibition constitutes forced displacement. Attacks against civilians attempting to return to their families amount to forcible transfer. These are war crimes and crimes against humanity.

Israeli and foreign hostages

111. In its previous report to the Human Rights Council, the Commission found that the taking of hostages, both civilians and soldiers, by Palestinian armed groups constituted a war crime. The Commission finds that hostages were intentionally mistreated in order to inflict physical pain and severe mental suffering. Such mistreatment includes physical violence, abuse, sexual violence, forced isolation, limited access to hygiene facilities, water and food, threats and humiliation. Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups forced hostages to participate in videos, with the intent of inflicting psychological torture on the families of hostages in order to achieve political aims.

112. Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups committed the war crimes of torture, inhuman or cruel treatment, rape and sexual violence and have violated the customary international humanitarian law prohibition on enforced disappearance. Inflicting mental suffering on the families of victims constitutes torture. The Commission emphasizes that Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups, as the detaining parties, are responsible for the safety and well-being of the hostages. Crimes against humanity, including torture, enforced disappearance and other inhumane acts, were committed against hostages by Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups. The de facto authority in Gaza has the responsibility of investigating possible violations of international law and holding the perpetrators accountable.

V. Recommendations

113. The Commission recommends that the Government of Israel:

(a) Immediately end the unlawful occupation of Palestinian territory, cease all new settlement plans and activities, including in relation to the Gaza Strip, and remove all settlements as rapidly as possible, in compliance with the International Court of Justice advisory opinion of July 2024;

(b) Ensure, as the occupying Power, that the rights of the population under its effective control are safeguarded and that medical services are available to all;

(c) Comply with all provisional measures ordered by the International Court of Justice, taking all measures within its power to prevent the commission of all acts within the scope of article II, subparagraphs (a)–(d), of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide;

(d) Immediately cease targeting of medical facilities, staff and vehicles and cease the military use of medical facilities, in compliance with international humanitarian law; and ensure rapid, safe and unhindered access for medical staff and ambulances to wounded persons;

(e) Ensure the reconstruction of the health-care system of Gaza and immediately provide medical treatment to the highest attainable standard;

(f) End the siege of Gaza and ensure the provision of all goods necessary to maintain the health of the population and of patients in need of medical care;

(g) Immediately facilitate the medical evacuation of Palestinians from Gaza, in particular cancer patients and children, along with their guardians;

(h) Immediately cease the targeting of sexual and reproductive health-care facilities; comply with obligations to ensure access and availability of quality reproductive health-care services, goods and facilities;

(i) Commit to a time-bound action plan to stop grave child rights violations, including accountability measures for attacks on medical facilities, in view of the fact that Israeli armed and security forces are listed in the annexes to the report of the Secretary General on children and armed conflict (A/78/842-S/2024/384);

(j) Immediately cease the arbitrary and unlawful detention of Palestinians, including children, and ensure due process and fair trials, in accordance with international standards of justice;

(k) Ensure that all Palestinians who have been arrested or detained are treated humanely; immediately cease torture and other ill-treatment; take all measures to prevent and investigate violations and ensure that perpetrators are held accountable; ensure that detention conditions strictly conform with international standards;

(l) Immediately cease the perpetration of rape and other forms of sexual and gender-based violence in detention; establish appropriate gender-specific protocols and conditions of detention, including in relation to searching prisoners; provide gender-specific health care for women and meet women's hygiene needs;

(m) Provide information on the names, whereabouts and condition of all detainees and withheld bodies; allow ICRC access to detainees and to provide legal assistance and representation;

(n) Grant access to the Commission and allow it to enter Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory to investigate all violations of international law, as ordered by the International Court of Justice;

114. The Commission recommends that the Government of the State of Palestine and the de facto authorities in Gaza:

(a) Immediately and unconditionally ensure the release of all hostages; publish a list of all hostages and of withheld bodies, detailing names, whereabouts, condition; allow ICRC access to hostages;

(b) Ensure the protection, well-being and proper treatment of all remaining hostages, in particular children and older persons, including protection from sexual and gender-based violence, until their release in compliance with international humanitarian law and international human rights law;

(c) Ensure that civilians are not used as human shields, in strict compliance with international humanitarian law;

(d) Thoroughly and impartially investigate and prosecute violations of international law, including the targeting of medical facilities in Israel on or after 7 October 2023; fully cooperate with the investigations of the International Criminal Court;

115. The Commission recommends that all Member States:

(a) Comply with the International Court of Justice advisory opinion and international legal obligations not to recognize the unlawful occupation of Israel; render no aid or assistance in maintaining the occupation; distinguish in their dealings between Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(b) Comply with all international law obligations, including the obligation under common article 1 of the Geneva Conventions to ensure respect for international humanitarian law by all State parties, including Israel and the State of Palestine, as well as obligations under the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Genocide Convention;

(c) Cease aiding or assisting in the commission of violations; explore accountability measures against alleged perpetrators of international crimes, grave human rights violations and abuses in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(d) Cooperate with the investigation of the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
4 October 2001

Original: English

---

Fifty-sixth session

Agenda item 119 (c)

Human rights questions: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Question of the violation of human rights in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine

Note by the Secretary-General***

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the interim report on violations of international humanitarian law and human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, submitted by John Dugard, Special Rapporteur, pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolutions 1993/2, section A, and 2001/7 and Economic and Social Council decision 2001/246.

---

* In accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/222, part III, paragraph 10, the present report is being submitted on 4 October 2001 so as to include as much updated information as possible.

---

Report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction .....	1–3	3
II. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur .....	4–5	3
III. The occupation as the root cause of the conflict .....	6–10	4
IV. Violence and loss of life .....	11–16	6
V. Occupation and the second intifada .....	17–28	7
A. Settlements .....	18–22	8
B. Demolition of houses and destruction of property .....	23–24	9
C. Closure and checkpoints: restrictions on freedom of movement .....	25–27	9
D. Orient House .....	28	10
VI. Concluding remarks .....	29–33	10

I. Introduction

1. The current Special Rapporteur, John Dugard (South Africa), was appointed in July 2001. In August 2001, the Special Rapporteur undertook a mission to the Occupied Palestinian Territories and Israel. Meetings were held with Palestinian and Israeli non-governmental organizations, international agencies in the region and members of the Palestinian Authority. Unfortunately, the Special Rapporteur was not able to meet with Israeli authorities as the Government of Israel made it clear at the outset of his appointment that it would not cooperate because of objections it has to the terms of his mandate. (This matter is discussed below.) On this mission, the Special Rapporteur met with interlocutors in the Gaza Strip, Jerusalem and the West Bank. The Special Rapporteur also visited Rafah, Beit Jala and Shu'afat to see the destruction of houses and property, and Jericho, to examine the manner in which the city had been closed by means of trenches cutting off access roads.

2. In February 2001, the Special Rapporteur visited the area as the chairperson of the Human Rights Inquiry Commission established pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution S-5/1 of 19 October 2000. That Inquiry Commission spent more time in the area, consulted more widely with informed persons and prepared a more comprehensive report (E/CN.4/2001/121) than the present report. The Human Rights Inquiry Commission criticized the excessive use of force employed by the Israeli Defense Force, the assassination of prominent Palestinians, the presence and expansion of settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, the activities of settlers and the closure of Palestinian areas, which has resulted in the widespread violation of economic and social rights. The Commission made a number of recommendations designed to bring an end to the military occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territories and to establish a dispensation that meets the legitimate expectations of the Palestinian people concerning the realization of their right to self-determination and the genuine security concerns of the people of Israel.

3. The present report is based on the two visits made to the area in 2001, consultation and discussion with persons outside the area, the study of materials on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and wide media coverage.

II. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur

4. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur is to be found in two instruments. In resolution 1993/2, section A, the Commission on Human Rights decided to appoint a Special Rapporteur with the following mandate:

“(a) To investigate Israel’s violations of the principles and bases of international law, international humanitarian law and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

(b) To receive communications, to hear witnesses, and to use such modalities of procedure as he may deem necessary for his mandate;

(c) To report, with his conclusions and recommendations, to the Commission on Human Rights at its future sessions, until the end of the Israeli occupation of those territories.”

In resolution 2001/7, the Commission on Human Rights welcomed the recommendations contained in the reports of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (E/CN.4/2001/114) and the Human Rights Inquiry Commission (E/CN.4/2001/121), urged the Government of Israel to implement them and requested “the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, acting as a monitoring mechanism, to follow up on the implementation of those recommendations and to submit reports thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session and the Commission at its fifty-eighth session”.

5. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur has been criticized by a number of States, particularly Israel, on the ground that it singles out Israel for special attention as a violator of human rights despite the fact that, since the implementation of the Oslo Accords (A/51/889-S/1997/357), and related agreements the control of the lives of over 90 per cent Palestinians has passed to the Palestinian Authority, which now has full control over the so-called “A” zones which include most Palestinian cities and towns. There would be substance in this criticism if the mandate of the Special Rapporteur were to investigate and report on Israel’s violations of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territories without regard to the military occupation of those territories. This would be unfair as the Palestinian Authority does, for instance, have full jurisdiction over the administration of justice in the “A” zones and in most societies it is in this field that most violations of human rights occur. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur is not, however, to investigate human rights violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territories outside the context of military occupation. Resolution 1993/2, section A makes it clear that the Special Rapporteur is required to investigate violations of international humanitarian law committed by the occupying authority — Israel — until the end of the Israeli occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territories. There is a close connection between international humanitarian law and human rights — a connection reaffirmed by the General Assembly in its resolution 2675 (XXV). It is therefore impossible to examine violations of international humanitarian law or general international law without reference to human rights norms, particularly in a situation of prolonged occupation of the kind that continues to prevail in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. The mandate therefore includes the investigation of human rights violations committed by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, but only in the context of military occupation. It is the prolonged military occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territories which makes the mandate of the Special Rapporteur unusual and which distinguishes it from other special rapporteurships established by the Commission on Human Rights.

III. The occupation as the root cause of the conflict

6. In 1967, Israel occupied the West Bank and Gaza Strip. This occupation continues some 34 years later. Israel has invoked a number of arguments to support its legal claim that the Fourth Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 1949 is not applicable to the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1987, including East Jerusalem. First, it argues that as the sovereignty of Jordan over the West Bank was questionable and Egypt never asserted sovereignty over Gaza, there was no sovereign Power at whose expense Israel occupied these territories. Consequently, although Israel is a party to the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949, it maintains that it is not bound by law to treat the territories as occupied territories within the meaning of the Fourth Geneva Convention. Secondly, it now argues that, even if the above argument is incorrect, that Israel can no longer be viewed as an occupying Power in respect of the “A” areas, accommodating the majority of the Palestinian population, because effective control in those areas has been handed over to the Palestinian Authority.

7. Neither of those arguments is tenable in law. The first, premised on a strained interpretation of article 2 of the Geneva Convention, fails to take account of the fact that the law of occupation is concerned with the interests of the population of an occupied territory rather than those of a displaced sovereign. The second, that Israel is no longer an occupying Power because it lacks effective control over “A” areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territories, is likewise unacceptable. The test for the application of the legal regime of occupation is not whether the occupying Power fails to exercise effective control over the territory, but whether it has the ability to exercise such power, a principle affirmed by the United States Military Tribunal at Nürnberg In re List and others (The Hostages Case) in 1948. The Oslo Accords leave Israel with ultimate legal control over all of the Occupied Palestinian Territories and the fact that for political reasons it has generally chosen not to exercise this control over the “A” zones, when it undoubtedly has the military capacity to do so (as illustrated by the Israeli military incursion into the “A” zone town of Beit Jala in August 2001), cannot relieve Israel of its responsibilities as an occupying Power.

8. The international community therefore rejects the argument that the Fourth Geneva Convention is inapplicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Repeated resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly call upon Israel to comply with the prescriptions of the Convention and reject the purported annexation of East Jerusalem by Israel. For the international community, the Fourth Geneva Convention is the governing law.

9. Violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and Israel during the past several months has tended to obscure the fact that the root cause of the present conflict in the region is military occupation. Media reports are so concerned with the killing of Palestinian leaders by carefully directed missiles and with suicide bombings within Israel that the fact of occupation is overlooked. At times, the conflict is portrayed as if it were an international conflict between two States, employing different instruments of war, over “disputed territories”. At other times, it is portrayed as an internal conflict with the rebels employing terror as a military strategy. The United States-brokered “Tenet ceasefire plan” (Ha'aretz, June 14, 2001), while a laudable attempt to end the violence in the region, nowhere mentions the military occupation in its concern for security and crisis management. It should not, however, be forgotten that Israel occupied the West Bank (including East Jerusalem) and the Gaza Strip by force in 1967; that this occupation should be brought to an end, as by its very nature military occupation is a temporary phenomenon pending an acceptable peace settlement; and that until the occupation is terminated, Israel, as the occupying Power, is obliged to comply with the Fourth Geneva Convention.

10. The present report focuses on military occupation as the root cause of the present conflict in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and Israel, as the cause of the violation of human rights and humanitarian law in the region. It aims to restore occupation to centre stage. The violence in the region, whether caused by Israeli rocket-ships or Palestinian suicide bombers, is to be deplored and condemned. It is the immediate cause of the loss of life, of the violation of the right to life, that features pre-eminently in all human rights conventions. However, it is not the ultimate explanation for the violation of basic human rights in the region. This must be found in the military occupation of a people by an occupying power.

IV. Violence and loss of life

11. Since the start of the second intifada, in September 2000, over 530 Palestinians have been killed and over 15,000 injured. More than 150 Israelis have been killed. Most of those killed and injured have been civilians.

12. The first few months of the second intifada were characterized by violent clashes between Palestinian protesters, whose weapons were stones and molotov cocktails, and the Israel Defense Force. Most deaths and injuries were the result of gunfire from the Israel Defense Forces. In its report, the Human Rights Inquiry Commission found that the Israel Defense Forces had responded in a disproportionate manner to protesters and was guilty of the excessive use of force (E/CN.4/2001/121, paras. 44-52). Since then, the situation has changed radically as the Palestinians have moved from protest to armed force and the Israelis have responded by using heavier weaponry. Today, most Palestinian deaths have resulted from missile attacks directed at selected individuals suspected of terrorism, but which, inevitably, have also killed innocent bystanders, and from shootings carried out by soldiers and settlers, often after an exchange of gunfire. Israeli deaths have largely been caused by terrorist bombs in Israel itself and by gunfire directed at settlers on bypass roads or in the proximity of settlements.

13. In February 2001, the Human Rights Inquiry Commission had difficulty in categorizing the situation as a non-international armed conflict, defined by the Appeals Chambers of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia in the Tadic case as “protracted armed violence between governmental authorities and organized armed groups”. Today, as a result of the frequent exchanges of gunfire between the Israel Defense Forces and Palestinian gunmen, it is probable that this threshold has been met, albeit on an irregular and sporadic basis. However, while the Israel Defense Forces are now engaged in both law enforcement and action in armed conflict, and may therefore be entitled to greater latitude in the exercise of its powers as an occupying force, it is not freed from all restraints under international humanitarian law and human rights law. It is still obliged to observe the principle of distinction requiring that civilians not be made the object of attack “unless and for such time as they take a direct part in hostilities” (a principle reaffirmed in article 51(3) of Additional Protocol 1 to the Geneva Conventions). In addition, the Israel Defense Forces are obliged to comply with the principle of proportionality, which requires that injury to non-combatants or damage to civilian objects not be disproportionate to the military advantages derived from an operation. Above all, the Israel Defense Forces are subject to article 27 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which stipulates that “protected persons are entitled in all circumstances, to respect for their persons and shall at all times be humanely treated, and shall be protected especially against all acts of violence or threats thereof ...”.

14. Both Israelis and Palestinians have violated important norms of humanitarian law and international law as the confrontation has changed its character. Israel's freely acknowledged practice of selected assassination or targeted killings of Palestinian activists cannot be reconciled with provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention, such as articles 27 and 32, which seek to protect the lives of protected persons not taking a direct part in hostilities. They also violate human rights norms that affirm the right to life and the prohibition on execution of civilians without trial and a fair judicial process. There is no basis for killing protected persons on the basis of suspicion that they have engaged or will engage in terroristic activities. In addition, many civilians not suspected of any unlawful activity have been killed in these targeted killings, in the bombing of villages or in gunfire exchanges, in circumstances indicating an indiscriminate and disproportionate use of force.

15. The force employed by Palestinians is also contrary to the norms of international law. The shooting of settlers cannot be justified. Despite the fact that the settlements violate article 49(6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, and the fact that the settlers' presence in the Occupied Palestinian Territories is illegal, settlers remain civilians and cannot be treated as combatants, unless, of course, they are engaged as soldiers in the Israel Defense Forces. The planting of bombs in public places in Israel, resulting in loss of life of innocent civilians, is contrary to emerging norms of international law, now codified in the 1998 International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings (General Assembly resolution 52/164), article 2 of which criminalizes such conduct. The extent to which these actions are subject to the control of the Palestinian Authority is uncertain. No doubt it could do more to prevent the shooting of settlers and the culture of violence that produces suicide bombers. On the other hand, despite Israeli claims to the contrary, it seems unlikely that Palestinian violence is subject to any centralized control. In this respect, it differs from the Israeli use of force.

16. The failure of attempts to end the violence, either by calls for a ceasefire from the parties to the conflict, or from third States (notably the United States), or by security arrangements brokered from outside (such as the Tenet plan), suggests that the time has come for some international presence in the region to monitor and reduce the use of violence. This obvious conclusion was affirmed by the G8 Foreign Ministers in their meeting in Rome on 18 and 19 July 2001. Despite this, attempts to persuade the Security Council to approve such a plan have failed. The Special Rapporteur finds it difficult to understand why no serious attempt has been made by the international community to persuade Israel to accept such a presence (the Palestinian Authority having already agreed to an international presence). International monitors or peacekeepers have been employed in many less threatening situations in the world and there is no reason why the Occupied Palestinian Territories should be treated differently.

V. Occupation and the second intifada

17. The principal cause of the second intifada and of the escalating violence, in the view of the Special Rapporteur, is the continuing occupation — an occupation which has continued for over 34 years in the face of condemnation by the United Nations; an occupation whose substance (albeit not form) remained unaltered throughout the period of negotiations resulting from the Oslo Accords; an occupation that continues to frustrate and humiliate Palestinians. In the opinion of the Special Rapporteur, peace will not be restored to the region until there is clear evidence of an intention on the part of the occupying Power to put an end to the occupation. At present, however, there is little evidence of such an intention. On the contrary, the signs of occupation have intensified since the start of the second intifada. Expanding settlements, demolition of houses and the destruction of property, restrictions on freedom of movement and the economic blockade are a constant reminder to Palestinians of the occupation.

A. Settlements

18. The international community is united in its categorization of Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza as contrary to article 49(6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits an occupying power from transferring parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies. Numerous resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly have condemned the settlements as illegal.

19. Today, there are some 190 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, inhabited by approximately 380,000 settlers, of whom some 180,000 live in the East Jerusalem area. Settlements are linked to each other and Israel by a vast system of bypass roads (from which Palestinian vehicles are excluded), which have a 50 to 75-metre buffer zone on each side of the road in which no building is permitted. These settlements and roads, which separate Palestinian communities and deprive Palestinians of agricultural land have fragmented both land and people. In effect, they foreclose the possibility of a Palestinian State as they destroy the territorial integrity of the Palestinian territory.

20. The relationship between settlers and Palestinians is an unhappy one and each side views the other with hostility, anger and suspicion. Protected by the Israel military, and exempt from the jurisdiction of the courts of the Palestinian Authority, settlers have committed numerous acts of violence against Palestinians and destroyed Palestinian agricultural land and property. Since the beginning of the second intifada, incidents of settler violence have dramatically increased. Palestinian hostility towards settlers has grown alarmingly since the start of this intifada and most of the Israelis killed in the present conflict have been settlers or soldiers charged with the task of protecting settlements and roads leading to settlements.

21. That peace is impossible without a complete freeze on all settlement activity was emphasized by the "Mitchell report" of 20 May 2001 (report of the Sharm Al Sheikh Fact-finding Committee). The response of the Government of Israel to that recommendation was far from satisfactory. It declared that "it is already part of the policy of the Government of Israel not to establish new settlements. At the same time, the current and everyday needs of the development of such communities must be taken into account". In other words, the "natural growth" of the settlements will continue.

22. The evidence of the continued expansion of settlement activity is all too clear. During his visit, the Special Rapporteur saw evidence of this in the form of construction activity in the settlements of Har Homa and Pisgat Ze'ev and in the extension of the buffer zones adjacent to bypass/settler roads in the Gaza Strip. He also received evidence of the growth in the number of housing units, the expansion of the territorial limits of settlements by means of caravan outposts established adjacent to settlements, and of an increase in the settler population in the West Bank and Gaza from 203,067 in December 2000 to 205,015 in June 2001. Generous tax breaks and cheap housing in the settlements ensure that their growth will continue.

B. Demolition of houses and destruction of property

23. The demolition of houses in Palestinian territory, either for security purposes (as in Rafah) or for administrative reasons (as in the refugee camp of Shu'afat) continue. Since September 2000, over 300 homes have been completely demolished (compared with 93 in 1999). The Special Rapporteur saw evidence of the demolition of houses in Rafah and Shu'afat by bulldozer and of the destruction of houses in Beit Jala by missiles. This action, on the part of the Israeli authorities, is difficult to reconcile with article 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits the destruction of property except where rendered "absolutely necessary by military operations". While Israel sees this action as justified on grounds of military necessity, Palestinians see it as part of a larger design to restrict Palestinian growth, encourage Palestinian emigration and humiliate the people.

24. The creation of buffer zones for bypass roads and settlements has resulted in the "sweeping" of large areas of agricultural land by bulldozers. A total of 385,808 fruit and olive trees have been uprooted, and wells and agricultural constructions destroyed.

C. Closure and checkpoints: restrictions on freedom of movement

25. Since 29 September 2000, Israel has imposed severe restrictions on freedom of movement in the occupied territories. International borders with Egypt and Jordan have been closed, the Gaza Strip has been sealed off from the rest of the Palestinian territory and over a hundred checkpoints have been placed on roads in the West Bank. The Israel Defense Forces have placed checkpoints at the entrances to villages and entry and exit are often possible only via dirt roads, entailing enormous hardships. Trips that once took 15 minutes now take several hours. In some of the villages, mostly in areas near settlements and bypass roads, the dirt roads have also been blocked with large concrete blocks and piles of dirt, and residents are imprisoned in their villages. The Special Rapporteur visited the city of Jericho, which has been encircled by a deep trench to deny vehicles access to the city except through an Israel Defense Forces checkpoint.

26. The cumulative effect of these restrictions on the freedom of movement of people and goods is understandably perceived by the Palestinians affected as a siege. It has resulted in severe socio-economic hardships in the Palestinian territory. The internal closures have effectively sealed Palestinian population centres and restricted movement from one locality to another. The restriction on the entry of Palestinians into Israel has meant denial of access to their places of work in Israel to an estimated 115,000 Palestinians. The economic results have been devastating: the families of these workers are now suffering from a complete lack of income, threatening them with destitution. Over 50 per cent of the Palestinian workforce is now unemployed. Health and education have also suffered. Ambulances are prevented from transporting the sick to hospitals and some schools have been unable to operate owing to curfews and closures.

27. Road checkpoints have become a regular feature of Palestinian life. Palestinians are obliged to wait for lengthy periods while Israeli soldiers check vehicles and inspect identity documents. In order to avoid these delays Palestinians often abandon their cars or leave their taxi and cross the checkpoint on foot to catch a taxi on the other side of the checkpoint. This practice indicates the purpose of the exercise. It is not to prevent would-be suicide bombers from crossing checkpoints that lead to Israel, as any such person may walk around the checkpoint carrying heavy baggage. Rather, it is to humiliate Palestinians and to put pressure on them to cease resistance to Israeli occupation. In this sense, it is a collective punishment of the kind prohibited by article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

D. Orient House

28. On 10 August 2001, Israeli security forces seized and occupied Orient House, the political headquarters of the Palestinian people in East Jerusalem, in retaliation for a suicide bomb attack in West Jerusalem. This action, which may be seen as further evidence of a determination on the part of the Government of Israel to assert its authority as an occupying Power, has exacerbated an already tense situation and placed another obstacle in the path of peace.

VI. Concluding remarks

29. It is clearly necessary to bring the present violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and Israel to an end. Targeted killings of selected Palestinians by guided missiles, terrorist bombings in Israel and the indiscriminate killing of civilians by both sides must cease. That this is difficult to achieve is confirmed by the failures of numerous proclaimed ceasefires in recent months — failures for which both Israelis and Palestinians must accept responsibility. In these circumstances, there is a clear need for some international presence, either in the form of monitors or peacekeepers, to ensure that the ceasefire holds — or at least does better than at present. It is recommended that both Israel and the Palestinian Authority should agree to such an international presence. It is incumbent on the international community to ensure that such an agreement is forthcoming.

30. Israel's continued refusal to accept the Fourth Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War as the governing law makes it imperative that the High Contracting Parties to the Convention convene as soon as possible to consider the applicability of the Convention and the violation of the Convention.

31. International humanitarian law and human rights norms have been seriously violated in the present conflict. Both Israelis and Palestinians should make every endeavour to promote respect for the rule of law. Israel's violation of the freedom of movement in the Occupied Palestinian Territories requires particular attention.

32. Settlements are an ever visible and aggravating sign of occupation and of Israel's illegal conduct as an occupying Power. It is not enough to merely impose a freeze on settlements. Steps must now start to dismantle settlements.

33. There is a need to rebuild confidence on both sides as a prelude to the resumption of negotiations leading to a permanent settlement. The Palestinians could undoubtedly help to restore confidence by taking firmer measures to prevent terrorism in Israel. More is needed from Israel. Until Israel takes some action that indicates a willingness to contemplate the termination of the occupation, it is unlikely that the Palestinians will accept its good faith in negotiations aimed at a permanent settlement. Such action might take the form of a start in the dismantling of settlements: for example, the withdrawal of all settlements from the Gaza Strip. The Special Rapporteur appeals to the Government of Israel to take some action of this kind to restore confidence in the peace process.

---

General AssemblyDistr.: General
29 August 2002

Original: English

---

Fifty-seventh session

Item 111 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Human rights questions: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives*Question of the violation of human rights in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine*Report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967*Note by the Secretary-General****

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the interim report on violations of international humanitarian law and human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, submitted by John Dugard, Special Rapporteur, pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolutions 1993/2, section A, and 2002/8 and Economic and Social Council decision 2002/243.

---

* A/57/150.

** In accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/222, part III, para. 10, the present report is being submitted beyond the 2 July deadline so as to include as much updated information as possible and the decision of the Economic and Social Council.

Executive summary

In the past several months, violence has escalated in both the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel. Israel has effectively reoccupied the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the peace process has completely stalled. Human rights and international humanitarian law have suffered drastically in the process.

Civilians are the main casualties of the conflict. Both Israel and Palestine have ignored the basic principles of distinction and proportionality in their actions against or involving civilians. Palestinian groups have been responsible for an increased number of suicide bombings in Israel and for the killing of settlers. The Israel Defense Forces (IDF) have been responsible for a heavy loss of life in their military incursions, particularly in Nablus and Jenin, and rocket attacks on militants. Many of those killed in both Israel and Palestine have been children.

IDF incursions in the West Bank have resulted in large-scale arrests and detentions. Detainees have been treated in an inhuman and degrading manner, sometimes constituting torture. These incursions have been characterized by a massive destruction of property, estimated by the World Bank at $361 million.

Closures, checkpoints and curfews have destroyed freedom of movement for Palestinians, with disastrous consequences for human freedom, health, welfare and education.

Illegal settlements have continued to grow. Moreover, there is now a plan to build a fence or zone between Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which will result in a further annexation of Palestinian territory.

Fundamental norms of human rights law and international humanitarian law have been violated on a large scale. The destruction and disruption of the civil administration in the West Bank have serious implications for both the Palestinian people and the rule of law. Under the law, Israel, as the occupant, is obliged either to assume responsibility for civil administration itself or to permit the Palestinian Authority to carry out its functions properly. In terms of the Fourth Geneva Convention, all State Parties are required to ensure that this happens.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction .....	1	4
II. Human rights and terrorism .....	2	4
III. Civilians: victims of the conflict .....	3–6	4
IV. Detentions, inhuman treatment and children .....	7–8	5
V. Curfews, checkpoints and reoccupation of Palestine .....	9–12	6
VI. Destruction of property .....	13–14	7
VII. Territorial integrity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory .....	15–20	8
A. Settlements .....	15–19	8
B. Fences and buffer zones .....	20	9
VIII. The occupation from the perspective of international human rights and international humanitarian law .....	21–30	9
A. Violations of human rights .....	23	10
B. Violation of international humanitarian law .....	24	10
C. Civil administration in a state of occupation .....	25–30	11
IX. Concluding remarks .....	31	12

I. Introduction

1. On 26 March 2002, the Special Rapporteur reported to the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-eighth session on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967. That report was based largely on a visit to the region in February 2002. Much has happened since then. Violence has escalated in both the Palestinian Territory and Israel, Israel has effectively reoccupied the Palestinian Territory and the peace process has completely stalled. Both the Security Council and the General Assembly have adopted resolutions, but to little avail.<sup>1</sup> The present report makes no attempt to give a full account of the events of the past few months or of the failed attempts to restore peace in the region, which are matters of public record that have received wide coverage in the media (see also A/ES-10/186). Instead, it focuses on the principal violations of human rights and international humanitarian law. Inevitably, much will happen in the Occupied Palestinian Territory between the writing of the present report and its presentation. An addendum will therefore be submitted later, based on a visit to the region planned for late August.

II. Human rights and terrorism

2. Since 11 September 2001, the response to terrorism has dominated the world's agenda and the protection of human rights has been reduced in importance. This is unfortunate as it is clear that the promotion and protection of human rights is the most effective method of combating terrorism. The relationship between terrorism and human rights is nowhere more evident than in the Middle East, where the violation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has produced acts of terrorism in Israel, violating the most basic right to life, and this in turn has led to acts of military terror in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with the inevitable suppression of basic human rights. In this situation, it serves little purpose to apportion immediate blame. It is far wiser to acknowledge that violations of human rights are a necessary consequence of military occupation and to address ways of ending this situation so that the cycle of violence is replaced by the increasingly difficult, but increasingly necessary, quest for peace and security.

III. Civilians: victims of the conflict

3. Civilians inevitably are the main casualties of armed conflict and civil strife. International humanitarian law seeks to limit harm to civilians by requiring that all parties to a conflict respect the principles of distinction and proportionality. The principle of distinction, codified in article 48 of the First Additional Protocol to the Geneva Conventions of 1977, requires that parties to the conflict shall "at all times distinguish between the civilian population and combatants and between civilian objects and military objectives and accordingly shall direct their operations only against military objectives". Acts or threats of violence, the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among the civilian population, are prohibited (article 51 (2)). The principle of proportionality codified in article 51 (5) (b) prohibits an attack on a military target which may be expected to cause incidental loss of civilian life, injury to civilians and damage to civilian objects which would be excessive in relation to the concrete and direct military advantage anticipated. That these principles apply to both Israelis and Palestinians was confirmed by the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention when, in a statement issued on 5 December 2001, they called on both parties to the conflict to:

“ensure respect for and protection of the civilian population and civilian objects and to distinguish at all times between the civilian population and combatants and between civilian objects and military objectives. They also call upon the parties to abstain from any measures of brutality and violence against the civilian population whether applied by civilian or military agents and to abstain from exposing the civilian population to military operations”.

Sadly, neither party to the conflict in the region has paid proper respect to these principles as the death toll has continued to rise. Since the start of the second intifada in September 2000, a total of 1,700 Palestinians and 600 Israelis have been killed. Most have been civilians.

4. Within Israel, most deaths have been caused by suicide bombers who have carried their lethal weapons of destruction on to buses and into busy shopping centres. Despite condemnation from the Palestinian Authority and prominent Palestinian community leaders — and the international community — this instrument of terror, which shows no regard for either the principle of distinction or that of proportionality, continues to be used by paramilitary Palestinian groups.

5. The Israel Defense Forces (IDF), presumably well educated in the rules of international humanitarian law, have likewise shown little regard for the principles of distinction or proportionality. Recent military incursions into the West Bank and the reoccupation of Palestinian towns and cities have resulted in heavy loss of civilian life. That was nowhere more apparent than in Operation Defensive Shield, in March and April 2002, in which the refugee camp of Jenin and the city of Nablus were subjected to heavy bombardment from air and land before IDF troops entered, employing bulldozers to facilitate their movement and allegedly using Palestinian civilians as human shields against snipers. Of the 80 persons killed in Nablus, 50 were civilians, and of the 52 killed in Jenin, 22 were civilians. Since November 2000, the IDF has targeted and killed a number of selected militants in precision bombings. These assassinations have often been carried out, however, with no regard for civilians in the vicinity. Of the 165 persons killed in such actions, at least one third have been civilians. A recent incident starkly illustrates the manner in which such attacks have sometimes been made. On 22 July, the IDF carried out a late night air strike, aimed at Hamas military leader Salah Shehada while he was in a densely populated residential area of Gaza City, which killed 15 persons (including 9 children) and injured over 150 others.

6. Many of the civilians killed have been children. In 2002, over 100 children have been killed, not in crossfire between Palestinian and Israeli forces, as is usually believed, but mainly when the IDF has randomly opened fire or shelled civilian neighbourhoods. Over 20 children have been killed “collaterally” in the course of the assassination of militants.

IV. Detentions, inhuman treatment and children

7. The assaults on Palestinian towns in March and April in Operation Defensive Shield and subsequent military operations in the West Bank have resulted in massive arrests and detentions. In the period between 29 March and 5 May alone, some 7,000 Palestinians were arrested, of whom 5,400 had been released by that date.<sup>2</sup> In many towns and refugee camps, all males between the ages of 16 and 45 were arrested. Most were held for several days only. Arrests of this kind constitute a form of collective punishment as in most instances there has been no regard for the personal responsibility of those arrested. In many cases, arrested persons have been subjected to humiliating and inhuman treatment. They have been stripped to their underpants, blindfolded, handcuffed, paraded before television cameras, insulted, kicked, beaten and detained in unhygienic conditions. Those not released are held without trial or access to a lawyer. Some are held in administrative detention; others are held in terms of Military Order 1500, issued on 5 April to permit lengthy detention of those arrested since 29 March. Military Order 1500 authorizes incommunicado detention for up to 18 days — which may be renewed for up to 90 days. There are widespread allegations of torture, consisting of sleep deprivation, severe beating, heavy shaking, painful shackling to a small chair, subjection to loud noise and threats of action against family members.

8. In my report of 6 March to the Commission on Human Rights (E/CN.4/2002/32), I drew attention to serious allegations of inhuman treatment and torture, of the kind described in the preceding paragraph, of juveniles detained and imprisoned for political offences, particularly throwing stones at members of the IDF. I stressed that such treatment violated important norms of international law contained in the Convention on the Rights of the Child (art. 37), the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (arts. 1, 6) and the Fourth Geneva Convention (arts. 27, 31, 32, 76). I accordingly called upon the Israeli authorities to conduct a thorough investigation into those allegations (detailed fully in the reports of non-governmental organizations) carried out by an independent body outside the military, police and prison services. Sadly, no such action has been taken. On the contrary, the position of children has deteriorated still further. It is estimated that between 10 and 15 of the thousands recently detained are children.<sup>3</sup> Moreover, there is evidence that many have been subjected to the same humiliating and inhuman treatment (sometimes amounting to torture) as adults, described above.

V. Curfews, checkpoints and the reoccupation of Palestine

9. Since the start of the second intifada, in September 2000, Israel has imposed a stranglehold on the lives of Palestinians by means of restraints on freedom of movement. First came the closure of international borders and the sealing off of Gaza from the rest of the Palestinian Territory. Second came the erection of 120 checkpoints on roads in the West Bank. Third, in 2002, came the curfew, not of a town or neighbourhood, but of a substantial portion of the nation. It is these measures, vigorously enforced by the IDF, which constitute the reoccupation of the Palestinian Territory.

10. The IDF operation “Determined Path”, commenced in mid-June, has resulted in the reoccupation of seven of the eight major West Bank urban centres and adjoining refugee camps and villages. Between 18 and 25 June, curfews were imposed on Jenin, Qalqiliya, Bethlehem, Nablus, Tulkarem, Ramallah and Hebron. That has subjected over 700,000 persons to a regime similar to house arrest which confines them to their homes, except every third or fourth day when the curfew is lifted for several hours to allow residents to obtain essential supplies. The curfew is strictly enforced by the IDF and there have been many incidents of shooting of civilians who had failed to observe the curfew.

11. That reoccupation by closure and curfew has affected every feature of Palestinian life. There have been shortages of basic foodstuffs; interference with medical services by the denial of access to doctors and hospitals; interruption of family contacts; and stoppages of education (at a particularly important time — that of end-of-year examinations). Municipal services, including water, electricity, telephones, and sewage removal have been terminated or interrupted; and the IDF has denied permission to repair damaged municipal service supply units. There has also been a near complete cessation of productive activity in manufacturing, construction and commerce as well as private and public services, which has had serious consequences for the livelihood of most of the population. Inevitably, the incidence of poverty has increased dramatically. In May, the World Food Programme estimated that food aid was a priority need for 620,000 Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza.

12. No one is exempt from the curfew. Chairman Arafat himself has been confined to his compound in Ramallah and his supplies of electricity and water have been intermittently cut off.

VI. Destruction of property

13. The assaults on cities in the West Bank in Operation Defensive Shield, from 29 March to 7 May, left devastation in their wake. In Jenin, 800 dwellings were destroyed and many more damaged, leaving over 4,000 people homeless. Losses were estimated by the World Bank at $83 million. In Nablus, there was extensive damage to the old city, including religious and historic sites. Repair costs have been estimated by the World Bank at $114 million. Refugees were the hardest hit. In the military offensives of 27 February to 17 March and 29 March to 7 May, over 2,800 refugee housing units were damaged and 878 homes destroyed or demolished, leaving 17,000 persons homeless or in need of shelter rehabilitation. The World Bank estimates that Operation Defensive Shield caused physical damage amounting to $361 million in the West Bank as a whole, compared with the $305 million caused by damage in the first 15 months of the intifada.<sup>4</sup> Private businesses suffered the most ($97 million), followed by housing ($66 million), roads ($64 million) and cultural heritage sites ($48 million).

14. In the past, there has often been a disciplined, retributive approach to the destruction of property. For instance, the houses of suspected militants have been demolished in a clinical display of collective punishment — a practice that continues to this day. The destruction of property in Operation Defensive Shield, however, had a wanton character that surprised even the harshest critics of the IDF. In many houses entered by the IDF, soldiers broke holes into the walls in order to reach neighbouring houses. Sometimes, holes were made from one apartment to another where it was possible for soldiers to have entered from a veranda or window. Worse still, there were reports of systematic trashing of homes, of wanton destruction of televisions and computers in homes, schools and office buildings and of looting.<sup>5</sup>

VII. Territorial integrity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory

A. Settlements

15. The international community is united in its categorization of Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza as contrary to article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits an occupying power from transferring parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies. In numerous resolutions, the Security Council and the General Assembly have condemned the settlements as illegal and, in their Declaration of 5 December 2001, the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention reaffirmed that position.

16. Today, there are some 190 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, inhabited by approximately 390,000 settlers, of whom some 180,000 live in the East Jerusalem area. Settlements are linked to each other and to Israel by a vast system of bypass roads that have a 50- to 75-metre buffer zone on each side in which no building is permitted. These settlements and roads, which separate Palestinian communities and deprive Palestinians of agricultural land, have fragmented both land and people. In effect, they foreclose the possibility of a Palestinian State as they destroy the territorial integrity of the Palestinian Territory.

17. The relationship between settlers and Palestinians is an unhappy one and each side views the other with hostility, anger and suspicion. Protected by the Israeli military, and exempt from the jurisdiction of the courts of the Palestinian Authority, settlers have committed numerous acts of violence against Palestinians and destroyed Palestinian agricultural land and property. Since the beginning of the second intifada, incidents of settler violence have dramatically increased. Palestinian hostility towards settlers has grown alarmingly since the start of this intifada and many of the Israelis killed in the current conflict have been settlers or soldiers charged with the task of protecting settlements and roads leading to settlements. In the past few months, acts of terrorism against settlers have escalated as Palestinian militants have attacked settlements or buses en route to settlements.

18. Despite threats to the life and security of settlers, the Government of Israel has made no attempts to reduce the number of settlers. Indeed, it has refused to provide them with assistance in returning to Israel and has encouraged them to stay on settlements by continuing to offer cheap housing, discounted loans and tax incentives.<sup>6</sup>

19. Assurances by the Government of Israel that it will limit the growth of settlements cannot be reconciled with the facts. Settlements have continued to increase, mainly by means of informal "outposts" established in the proximity of existing settlements, officially tolerated if not officially authorized; and by means of the construction of new housing units in existing settlements. Since February 2001, a total of 44 "outposts" have been constructed, according to Peace Now, the Israeli peace and human rights movement. In July 2002, steps were taken to destroy some of the smallest, unpopulated outposts, a step castigated by YESHA, the settlers' association, as an encouragement of terrorism. Politically, settlers wield considerable power within the Israeli body politic and this enables them virtually to dictate policy to the Government.

B. Fences and buffer zones

20. The failure to prevent Palestinian suicide bombers from reaching their targets in Israel has led to a new strategy on the part of the Government of Israel. This is the construction of a 360-kilometre security fence or zone comprising ditches, barricades, walls, monitored electrified fences and patrol roads to separate Israel from Palestine. The exact course and breadth of the fence/zone is uncertain but it is clear that it will not carefully follow the existing Green Line marking the pre-1967 borders between Israel and Jordan. Instead, it will encroach further on Palestinian territory by establishing a buffer zone several kilometres wide within Palestine and by incorporating settlements near to the Green Line. Moreover, it will incorporate East Jerusalem and neighbouring settlements, such as Ma'ale Adumim into Israel. This unilateral redrawing of the border in the name of security is simply a pretext for the illegal annexation of Palestinian territory.

VIII. The occupation from the perspective of international human rights and international humanitarian law

21. Speaking to the Security Council on 12 March 2002, the Secretary-General, Kofi Annan, called upon Israel to end its “illegal occupation” of the Palestinian Territory. Asked to explain why he used the term illegal to describe the occupation of the Palestinian Territory, he replied that “the Security Council and the General Assembly have both at various occasions declared aspects of Israeli occupation as illegal”. He noted, in particular, the building of settlements, the annexation of East Jerusalem and recent events in the region. The comments of the Secretary-General underscore the fact that it is by the law of occupation that Israel’s conduct must be judged and that many of its practices violate basic principles of that governing law.

22. The governing body of law is to be found in the Hague Regulations of 1907, the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949, and international human rights conventions on civil and political rights, social, economic and cultural rights and the treatment of children, as supplemented by customary international law. That international human rights law forms part of the law of occupation is clear from article 27 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which provides that the occupying power is to respect the fundamental rights of protected persons. According to the commentary of the International Committee of the Red Cross on this provision: “The right to respect for the person must be understood in its widest sense: it covers all the rights of the individual, that is, the rights and qualities which are inseparable from the human being by the very fact of his existence and his mental and physical powers; it includes, in particular, the right to physical, moral and intellectual integrity — an essential attribute of the human person” (p. 201). The “rights of the individual” have been proclaimed, described and interpreted in international human rights instruments, particularly the international covenants on civil and political rights, and economic, social and cultural rights of 1966, and in the jurisprudence of their monitoring bodies. These human rights instruments therefore complement the Fourth Geneva Convention by defining and giving content to the rights protected in article 27. This is borne out by the Vienna Declaration adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993, which states that:

“Effective international measures to guarantee and monitor the implementation of human rights standards should be taken in respect of people under foreign occupation, and effective legal protection against the violation of their human rights should be provided, in accordance with human rights norms and international law, particularly the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 14 August 1949, and other applicable norms of humanitarian law.”

A. Violations of human rights

23. The most basic and fundamental rights have been violated in the course of the conflict in both the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel itself. The right to life, upon which all rights depend, has suffered dramatically as a result of terrorist suicide bombings in Israel, attacks on settlers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and violence against Palestinians by the IDF, including acts of terrorism, assassination, military incursion and the shooting of civilians. The right to human dignity, freedom from torture and arbitrary arrest and the right to a fair trial have been violated on a large scale by Israeli military interventions in the West Bank. Freedom of movement has been completely destroyed for Palestinians by closures, checkpoints and curfews; and the right to property has been dramatically undermined by military offensives. Economic, social and cultural rights have likewise suffered. Curfews, checkpoints and the destruction of housing have violated articles 11 to 13 of the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, which together recognize the right of everyone to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food, clothing and housing, to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, and to education. Sadly, many of the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child have been violated. These include the right to life, to health care, to a standard of living adequate for the child’s physical, mental, spiritual, moral and social development, to education, to freedom from torture, inhuman treatment and arbitrary arrest, and to a fair trial as well as the obligation on States to “ensure to the maximum extent possible the survival and development of the child” (article 6 (2)). That Convention, moreover, requires States, in accordance with their obligations under international humanitarian law, “to ensure protection and care of children who are affected by an armed conflict” (article 38 (4)).

B. Violations of international humanitarian law

24. Many of the most basic principles of international humanitarian law have also been violated. As shown in paragraphs 3 to 6 above, neither party to the conflict has shown respect for the principles of distinction and proportionality in their actions against or affecting civilians. The prohibition on collective punishment “and likewise all measures of intimidation or of terrorism” contained in article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention has been violated in many ways by the IDF, including by the destruction of property, curfews, and the arrest of all men between the ages of 16 and 45. The wanton destruction of property carried out as part of Operation Defensive Shield, particularly in Nablus and Jenin, cannot be reconciled with article 53 of the Convention, which prohibits the destruction of property “except where such destruction is rendered absolutely necessary by military operations”.

C. Civil administration in a state of occupation

25. The law governing occupation, reflected in international custom, the Hague Regulations of 1907 and the Fourth Geneva Convention, is designed to ensure that, notwithstanding the security needs of the occupying power, the day-to-day lives of civilians in an occupied territory will continue normally. In today's world, this means that civilians must have adequate food, shelter, electricity and water; that municipal services such as garbage and sewage removal will continue; that the sick will have access to proper medical care; and that education will not be obstructed.

26. There is no single rule of international law that specifically states that a belligerent occupant is responsible for the civil administration of an occupied territory. There are, however, two sources of law that create such a responsibility: first, article 43 of the Hague Regulations and, second, provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention. Article 43 is brief and fails to detail the obligations of the occupying power. It simply provides that:

“The authority of the legitimate power having in fact passed into the hands of the occupant, the latter shall take all the measures in his power to restore, and ensure, as far as possible, public order and safety, while respecting, unless absolutely prevented, the laws in force in the country.”

The reason for the failure to spell out the duties of the occupant is that in 1907 “the establishment of a system of administration by the occupant was widely accepted in practice ... as mandatory”.<sup>7</sup>

27. The Fourth Geneva Convention complements this provision by imposing obligations on the occupant to ensure “the food and medical supplies of the population” and to “bring in the necessary foodstuffs, medical stores and other articles if the resources of the occupied territory are inadequate” (article 55); to ensure and maintain “the medical and hospital establishments and services, public health and hygiene in the occupied territory” (article 56); and to facilitate “the proper working of all institutions devoted to the care and education of children” (article 50). Obligations to provide postal services, telecommunications and transport and to maintain public welfare institutions may also be inferred from the Fourth Geneva Convention and the Hague Regulations.<sup>8</sup> Together, these provisions amount to an obligation on the occupant to establish an adequate civil administration in an occupied territory.

28. In terms of the Oslo Accords, the responsibility for civil administration in the West Bank and Gaza was transferred to the Palestinian Authority. Today, however, the identity of the authority responsible for the civil administration of the West Bank and Gaza is not so clear. The military operations of 2002 have effectively destroyed much of the infrastructure of the Palestinian Authority. Electricity and water supplies have been cut, municipal services terminated, access to food denied, health care obstructed and education seriously interrupted. Does this mean that Israel is now obliged to assume responsibility for the civil administration of the Occupied Palestinian Territory?

29. Although Israel has announced that it anticipates a prolonged occupation of the Palestinian Territory, it clearly does not intend resuming responsibility for the civil administration of the territory.<sup>9</sup> Rather than do this, it is considering handing over some of the $600 million due to the Palestinian Authority for customs' duties and tax it has blocked since September 2000.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, the Palestinian Authority, despite complaints that Israel has de facto scrapped the Oslo Accords, is understandably unwilling to contemplate surrendering the power of civil administration to Israel.

30. The current situation is untenable. Israel cannot, in terms of international humanitarian law, deny the Palestinian Authority the capacity to provide an adequate and functioning civil administration, and at the same time refuse to accept any responsibility for such an administration itself. In law, it is obliged either to assume this responsibility or to permit the Palestinian Authority to provide the services that comprise an adequate civil administration. There is a heavy burden on all parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to take measures to ensure the restoration of a proper civil administration in the Palestinian Territory in accordance with their obligation under article 1 of the Convention “to ensure respect” for the Convention “in all circumstances”.

IX. Concluding remarks

31. The Occupied Palestinian Territory is a testing ground for human rights and humanitarian law. The great advances in these two bodies of law are undermined by a situation in which human rights and humanitarian law are denied and disregarded with no meaningful response from the international community. The rule of law is one casualty of the conflict in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, but the main casualties are the people of Palestine and of Israel.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> See Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002), 1402 (2002) and 1405 (2002) as well as General Assembly resolution ES-10/10.

<sup>2</sup> Statement by the State Attorney’s Office to the Israeli Supreme Court: HCJ 3239/02 Iyyad Ishaq Mahmud Mar’ab et al v. Commander of IDF Forces in the Judea and Samaria Area. Response by the Respondent, 5 May 2002, para. 14.

<sup>3</sup> See the report on Israeli Practice towards Palestinian Children submitted by Defense for Children International, Palestine Section, to the Committee against Torture, May 2002.

<sup>4</sup> International Herald Tribune, 16 May 2002.

<sup>5</sup> Amnesty International, Israel and the Occupied Territories: The Heavy Price of Israeli incursions, 12 April 2002.

<sup>6</sup> See further, B’Tselem, Land Grab: Israeli Settlement Policy in the West Bank, 2002.

<sup>7</sup> E. Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (1993), pp. 4-5.

<sup>8</sup> M. Greenspan, The Modern Law of Land Warfare (1959), pp. 230-235.

<sup>9</sup> See the statements by Mr. Ben-Eliezer, Minister of Defence, and Major General Amos Gilad reported in the International Herald Tribune, 24 June.

<sup>10</sup> International Herald Tribune, 23 July.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
16 September 2002

Original: English

---

Fifty-seventh session

Item 111 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Human rights questions: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Question of the violation of human rights in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine

Report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967

Addendum

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on his visit to the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel, from 25 to 30 August 2002.

Summary

1. As indicated in his main report to the General Assembly (A/57/366), the Special Rapporteur relates herewith his visit to the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the end of August 2002.
2. The Special Rapporteur visited the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel from 25 to 30 August. During that period, he paid field visits to Nablus and Jenin, where he inspected the damage caused by Operation Defensive Shield, and to Qalqiliya, where he saw the start of the great Wall of Separation between Israel and Palestine. He also visited Ramallah, Bethlehem and Jericho. The Special Rapporteur met with a wide range of people: Chairman Yasser Arafat and Mr. Sa'eb Erekat, Minister of Local Government of the Palestinian Authority; the governor of Nablus and the acting Governor of Jenin; the Mayor of Jenin; representatives of Palestinian, Israeli and international non-governmental organizations; and members of international humanitarian agencies. The visit served to confirm the accuracy of the account of the situation described in the main report. However, the Special Rapporteur believes that the seriousness of the situation was understated in that report. The personal encounter with curfews, the devastated Jenin refugee camp, the badly damaged old city of Nablus, checkpoints where Palestinians are daily humiliated, Chairman Arafat's largely destroyed compound and interlocutors who told of their own suffering and those of others, transformed an intellectual appreciation of a humanitarian crisis into an emotional awareness of the human tragedy that is unfolding in Palestine.

---

* A/57/150.

3. The present addendum will not add to all the topics raised in the main report. Instead, it will focus on curfews and closures and their consequences; detentions; collective punishment; children; settlements; and the funding of the humanitarian crisis.

Security and human rights

4. Before turning to these issues it is necessary to say something about Israel's security needs and interests. There can be no doubt that Israel has legitimate security concerns. Waves of Palestinian suicide bombers have inflicted deep wounds on Israeli society. Israel has both a right and an obligation to protect its people from further attacks. At the same time, it is necessary to ask whether the measures resorted to by Israel, particularly curfews and closures, always serve a security need. Often they appear so disproportionate, so remote from the interests of security, that one is led to ask whether they are not in part designed to punish, humiliate and subjugate the Palestinian people. Israel's legitimate security needs must be balanced against the legitimate humanitarian needs of the Palestinian people. To the Special Rapporteur it appears that there is no such balance. Human rights have been sacrificed to security. This in turn produces a greater threat to Israeli security: the hopelessness of despair which leads inexorably to suicide bombings and other acts of violence against Israelis.

Curfews, closures and their consequences

5. It is difficult to describe curfews of the kind experienced in Nablus and Ramallah. Previously crowded, bustling cities, full of noise, movement and colour, transformed into ghost towns, with the silence of the city broken only by the rumbling of tanks and the sporadic gunfire of soldiers. Whole cities imprisoned behind walls. An imprisonment arbitrary in its application as none can predict when it will be lifted or when it might be reimposed; and brutal in its implementation as many have been shot and killed for failing to observe the rules of the curfew. It is less difficult to describe a military checkpoint. A group of young soldiers, with the arrogance of adolescence or its immediate aftermath, in dusty uniforms with ominous rifles over their shoulders, entrusted with arbitrary power over the movement of the people of Palestine. Long lines of vehicles or people presenting papers to soldiers behind concrete blocks, all aware that their movement is completely in the hands of these young foreign soldiers. The arrogance of the occupier and the humiliation of the occupied.

6. It is easier to describe the consequences of curfews and closures as they are backed by hard statistics. The subjection of over 700,000 persons in the main cities to curfews, and the denial of access by the villagers to the cities, has resulted in unemployment, poverty, malnutrition and illness. Over 50 per cent of the population of the Palestinian Territory is unemployed. Poverty, based on two dollars or less consumption per day, is at 70 per cent in Gaza and 55 per cent in the West Bank. A total of 1.8 million Palestinians receive food aid or other forms of emergency humanitarian support from a variety of sources, notably the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the World Food Programme and the International Committee of the Red Cross. Twenty-two per cent of children under the age of five suffer from acute or chronic malnutrition, while 20 per cent suffer from iron-deficiency anaemia. Mental health problems have increased alarmingly among children. Health care has suffered drastically as a result of the unavailability of medication and the inability to reach health centres. As usual, the situation in the refugee camps is particularly bleak, as was evident when the Special Rapporteur visited the Balata refugee camp near Nablus.

Detentions

7. The number of people subjected to administrative detention, that is lengthy detention without trial, has increased from less than 100 to 1,860. Of the 7,000 detainees, some 300 are children and 50 are women (including eight girls).

Collective punishment

8. The demolition of the homes of families as punishment for crimes committed against Israel by a family member has long been an Israeli practice. In August, the Israeli High Court denied judicial review in such cases, as had previously been the position, thereby giving military commanders complete discretion to order the demolition of houses. This clearly violates article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention which prohibits collective punishment.

9. On 3 September, the Israeli High Court issued a ruling allowing the forcible deportation of two Palestinians from their home town of Nablus to the Gaza Strip on the ground that they had allegedly assisted their brother (extrajudicially executed by Israeli forces on 6 August) to commit attacks against Israelis. Although the Court limited such deportations to “extreme cases”, it must be stressed that the decision to deport was not preceded by a trial to determine the deportee’s complicity. The right to a fair trial and the prohibitions on collective punishment (article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention) and forcible transfers (article 49 of the Convention) are violated by these measures.

Children

10. Children have suffered greatly as a result of military incursions into Palestinian territory and curfews and closures. Many have been killed or injured; some 300 have been arrested and detained; over 2,000 have been rendered homeless; two thirds live below the poverty line; 22 per cent of children under the age of five suffer from malnutrition; at least 330,000 have been confined to their homes by curfew; over 600,000 have been prevented from attending schools in the West Bank; and most have been seriously traumatized. During Operation Defensive Shield, 11 schools were destroyed, 9 vandalized, 15 employed as military outposts, 15 used as detention centres and 112 damaged. Teachers, like pupils, have often been unable to gain access to their schools as a result of closures. Palestinian leaders expressed great concern to the Special Rapporteur about the fate of schools, which opened on 31 August, in the face of curfews. Treatment of this kind leaves both physical and mental scars. Worse still, it breeds hatred for the occupier, which augurs ill for the future.

Settlements

11. The main report contains facts about settlements. On this visit, the Special Rapporteur had the opportunity to see the settlements in the Nablus and Jenin districts. Such a visit provides a clear explanation for many of the closures that obstruct Palestinian freedom of movement and strangle Palestinian society. Small mountain-top settlements, with populations of several hundred, are linked to each other and to Israel itself by settlers-only roads. Palestinian roads that cross these roads are sealed off, with the result that villagers are often compelled to make lengthy detours to reach markets, shops, workplaces, schools and hospitals in other villages or towns. Outside Jenin, for instance, the two settlements of Gannim (pop. 158) and Kaddim (pop. 148) are linked by a settlers-only road. The main road from Jenin to eight villages with a combined population of some 20,000 that previously crossed this road has been closed by bulldozers. Villagers who previously were only a 10-minute drive from Jenin must now use circuitous village roads, taking hours to reach Jenin. The basic freedoms of Palestinians to movement and to a decent livelihood are therefore sacrificed in the interest of the security and comfort of the alien settler community. The anger and humiliation this engenders among Palestinians is impossible to assess.

The paradox of humanitarian assistance

12. The gravity of the situation is indisputable. So is the need for humanitarian assistance on a massive scale. If this is not forthcoming, the Palestinian people will suffer irremediable harm. The Special Rapporteur therefore endorses, and adds his own voice to, calls for humanitarian assistance from the international community.

13. At the same time, it must be made clear that, by providing aid of this kind, the international donor community relieves Israel of the burden of providing such assistance itself and in this way might be seen to be contributing to the funding of the occupation. As is shown in paragraphs 26 and 27 of the main report, Israel itself is obliged, in terms of articles 50, 55 and 56 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, to ensure that the Palestinian people have food and medical supplies, to maintain medical services and to facilitate the working of educational institutions.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
12 August 2004

Original: English

---

Fifty-ninth session

Item 107 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Human rights questions: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Question of the violation of human rights in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the interim report on violations of international humanitarian law and human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, submitted by John Dugard, Special Rapporteur, pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolutions 1993/2, section A, and 2004/10.

---

* A/59/150.

Report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967

Summary

The present report focuses upon the consequences of military incursions into the Gaza Strip, the violations of human rights and humanitarian law arising from the construction of the Wall and the pervasiveness of restrictions on freedom of movement.

In the past six months, the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) have carried out intensified military incursions into the Gaza Strip. This has been interpreted as a show of force on the part of Israel so that it cannot later be said that it had withdrawn unilaterally from the territory in weakness. In the course of these incursions, Israel has engaged in a massive and wanton destruction of property. Bulldozers have destroyed homes in a purposeless manner and have savagely dug up roads, including electricity, sewage and water lines. In Operation Rainbow, from 18 to 24 May 2004, 43 persons were killed and a total of 167 buildings were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable. These buildings housed 379 families (2,066 individuals). These demolitions occurred during one of the worst months in Rafah's recent history. During May, 298 buildings, housing 710 families (3,800 individuals), were demolished.

Israel has announced that it will withdraw unilaterally from Gaza. Israel intends to portray this as the end of the military occupation of Gaza, with the result that it will no longer be subject to the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention) in respect of Gaza. In reality, however, Israel does not plan to relinquish its grasp on the Gaza Strip. It plans to retain ultimate control over Gaza by controlling its borders, territorial sea and airspace. Consequently, it will in law remain an Occupying Power still subject to obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention.

The Wall that Israel is presently constructing within the Palestinian territory was held to be contrary to international law by the International Court of Justice on 9 July 2004. The Court held that Israel is under an obligation to discontinue building the Wall and to dismantle it forthwith. In its Advisory Opinion, the Court dismissed a number of legal arguments raised by Israel relating to the applicability of humanitarian law and human rights law. In particular, it held that settlements are unlawful. A week before the International Court of Justice gave its Advisory Opinion, the High Court of Israel gave a ruling on a 40-kilometre strip of the Wall in which it held that, while Israel as the Occupying Power had the right to construct the Wall to ensure security, substantial sections of the Wall imposed undue hardships on Palestinians and had to be re-routed.

Israel has announced that it will not comply with the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice. It has indicated that it will abide by the ruling of its own High Court in respect of sections of the Wall still to be built but not in respect of completed sections of the Wall.

Israel claims that the purpose of the Wall is to secure Israel from terrorist attacks and claims that terrorist attacks inside Israel have dropped by over 80 per cent as a result of the construction of the Wall. Two comments may be made on Israel's claims. First, there is no compelling evidence that suicide bombers could not have been as effectively prevented from entering Israel if the Wall had been built along the Green Line (the accepted border between Israel and Palestine) or within the Israeli side of the Green Line. Second, the evidence suggests that the following are more convincing explanations for the construction of the Wall:

- The incorporation of settlers within Israel;
- The confiscation of Palestinian land;
- The encouragement to Palestinians to leave their lands and homes by making life intolerable for them.

The course of the Wall indicates clearly that its purpose is to incorporate as many settlers as possible into Israel. This is borne out by the fact that some 80 per cent of settlers in the West Bank will be included on the Israeli side of the Wall. Furthermore, Benjamin Netanyahu, Minister of Finance of Israel and a former Prime Minister, openly acknowledged in the International Herald Tribune on 14 July 2004 that the purpose of the Wall was to include "as many Jews as possible".

Despite the fact that the International Court of Justice has unanimously held that settlements are unlawful, settlement expansion has substantially increased in the past year as has settler violence towards Palestinians. To aggravate matters, Israel is now proceeding with plans to incorporate the settlement of Ariel, 22 kilometres inside Palestinian territory. This action is prohibited by the International Court of Justice and cannot be reconciled with the decision of the Israeli High Court itself.

A further purpose of the Wall is to expand Israel's territory. Rich agricultural land and water resources have been seized along the Green Line and incorporated into Israel. This land seizure has been documented in earlier reports and in the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice. In recent months, Israel has manifested its territorial ambitions in the Jerusalem area. The Wall is currently being built around an expanded East Jerusalem to incorporate some 247,000 settlers in 12 settlements and some 249,000 Palestinians within the Wall. It must be recalled that Israel's 1980 annexation of East Jerusalem is unlawful and has been declared "of no legal validity" by a resolution of the Security Council.

The seizure of land in East Jerusalem makes no sense from a security perspective because in many instances it will divide Palestinian communities. Moreover, it will have serious implications for Palestinians living in and near to East Jerusalem. First, it threatens to deprive some 60,000 Palestinians with Jerusalem residence rights of such rights if they happen to find themselves on the West Bank side of the Wall. Secondly, it will make contact between Palestinians and Palestinian institutions situated on different sides of the Wall hazardous and complicated. Thirdly, it will prohibit over 100,000 Palestinians in neighbourhoods in the West Bank who are dependent upon the facilities of East Jerusalem, including hospitals, universities, schools, employment and markets for agricultural goods, from entering East Jerusalem.

A third purpose of the Wall is to compel Palestinian residents living between the Wall and the Green Line and adjacent to the Wall, but separated from their land by the Wall, to leave their homes and start a new life elsewhere in the West Bank by making life intolerable for them. Restrictions on freedom of movement in the “Closed Zone” between the Wall and the Green Line and the separation of farmers from their land will be principally responsible for forcing Palestinians to move. The Israeli High Court declared that certain sections of the Wall might not be built where they caused substantial hardship to Palestinians. Logically, this ruling is applicable to sections of the Wall that have already been built. However, the Government of Israel has indicated that it will not honour its own High Court’s ruling in respect of the 200-kilometre stretch of the Wall that has already been built.

Freedom of movement is severely curtailed in the West Bank and Gaza. The inhabitants of Gaza are effectively imprisoned by a combination of wall, fence and sea. Moreover, within Gaza freedom of movement is severely restricted by roadblocks which effectively divide the small territory. The inhabitants of the West Bank are subjected to a system of curfews and checkpoints that deny freedom of movement. West Bankers need permits to travel from one city to another. Permits are arbitrarily withheld and seldom granted for private vehicles. Several hundred military checkpoints control the lives of Palestinians. The Wall in the Jerusalem area threatens to become a nightmare as tens of thousands of Palestinians will be required to cross at one checkpoint each day — the Kalandiya checkpoint. Finally, as already indicated, a permit system governs the lives of residents between the Wall and the Green Line and those adjacent to the Wall. This permit system is operated in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

The restrictions on freedom of movement imposed by the Israeli authorities on Palestinians resemble the notorious “pass laws” of apartheid South Africa. These pass laws were administered in a humiliating manner, but uniformly. Israel’s laws governing freedom of movement are likewise administered in a humiliating manner, but they are characterized by arbitrariness and caprice. In one respect Israel has gone beyond the scope of apartheid law. It has introduced separate roads for settlers. “Road apartheid” was never a feature of the apartheid State.

The International Court of Justice indicated in its Advisory Opinion, which has been approved by the General Assembly, that there are consequences of the Wall for States other than Israel. States are reminded of their obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the Wall and not to render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation created by the construction of the Wall. Israel’s defiance of international law poses a threat not only to the international legal order but to the international order itself. This is no time for appeasement on the part of the international community.

---

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	1–5	6
II. Focus of the present report . . . . .	6	7
III. Gaza Strip . . . . .	7–14	8
IV. The Wall . . . . .	15–33	10
A. The incorporation of settlements . . . . .	18–22	11
B. Confiscation of Palestinian land . . . . .	23–26	13
C. Forced exodus . . . . .	27–33	14
V. Freedom of movement . . . . .	34–40	16
VI. Conclusion . . . . .	41–42	18

I. Introduction

1. On 9 July 2004 the International Court of Justice held that the Wall presently being built by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (OPT), including in and around East Jerusalem, is contrary to international law. It held that Israel is under an obligation to cease the building of the Wall on Palestinian territory and to dismantle it forthwith. It also held that Israel is under an obligation to make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the Wall in the OPT. Finally, it held that all States are under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the Wall; that all States parties to the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention) are obliged to ensure that Israel complies with the provisions of that Convention; and that the United Nations should consider what further action is required to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the Wall.

2. In its reasoning, the Court dismissed a number of legal arguments raised by Israel which have been fundamental to Israeli foreign policy in respect of the OPT. It found that the Fourth Geneva Convention is applicable to the OPT and that Israel is obliged to comply with its provisions in its conduct in the Territory. In making this finding, it stressed that according to article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, Israeli settlements in the OPT “have been established in breach of international law”. The Court also found that the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child are binding on Israel in respect of its actions in the OPT. It moreover emphasized that the Wall “severely impedes the exercise by the Palestinian people of its right to self-determination”. Finally, the Court was sceptical about Israel’s reliance on a state of necessity to justify the construction of the Wall and held that Israel “cannot rely on a right of self-defence or on a state of necessity in order to preclude the wrongfulness of the construction of the Wall”.

3. Shortly before the International Court of Justice gave its opinion, the High Court of Justice of Israel gave a ruling on a portion of the Wall. Although the Court accepted that Israel as the occupying Power had the right to construct the Wall to ensure security, it held that certain sections of the Wall imposed undue hardships on Palestinians and had to be re-routed. This Court looked at the Wall largely from the perspective of proportionality, and asked the question whether the Wall’s route injured local inhabitants to the extent that there was no proportion between the injury suffered and the security benefit of the Wall. The Court found that some sections of the proposed route caused disproportionate suffering to Palestinian villages as they separated villagers from the agricultural lands upon which their livelihood depended.

4. The unlawfulness of the Wall is now clear under international law as expounded by the International Court of Justice. Moreover, large portions of the Wall would seem to qualify for unlawfulness under Israeli law as pronounced by the Israeli High Court. The Israeli argument that security considerations provide it with an absolute right to build the Wall in Palestinian territory can no longer stand. Terrorism is a serious threat to Israeli society and it may well be that the Wall prevents suicide bombers from reaching Israel. If this is the case, however, there is no reason why the Wall should not be routed along the Green Line or on the Israeli side of the Green Line. On the relationship between terrorism and the law, one can do no better than refer to the statement of the Israeli High Court:

“We are aware of the killing and destruction wrought by terror against the State and its citizens. As any other Israelis, we too recognize the need to defend the country and its citizens against the wounds inflicted by terror. We are aware that in the short term, this judgement will not make the State’s struggle against those rising up against it easier. But we are judges. When we sit in judgement, we are subject to judgement. We act according to our best conscience and understanding. Regarding the State’s struggle against the terror that rises up against it, we are convinced that at the end of the day, a struggle according to the law will strengthen her power and her spirit. There is no security without law.” (See Beit Sourik Village Council vs. the Government of Israel (High Court of Justice 2056/04, para. 86).)

5. In previous reports, the Special Rapporteur has asserted legal positions in the face of Israeli objections. It is no longer necessary to engage in this exercise. The law is clear and it is now possible to focus on the consequences of Israel’s illegal actions and to consider ways and means of enforcing compliance with the law. The latter function falls to the United Nations, acting through both the General Assembly and the Security Council, and to individual States. This report will therefore focus upon Israel’s actions and the consequences of these actions.

II. Focus of the present report

6. The Special Rapporteur visited the OPT from 18 to 25 June 2004. He visited both Gaza (including Rafah) and the West Bank (Jerusalem, Ramallah, Bethlehem, Qalqiliya and surrounding villages, and Hebron and its vicinity). The focus of his attention was upon the consequences of military incursions into the Gaza Strip, the violations of human rights and humanitarian law arising from the construction of the Wall and the pervasiveness of the restrictions on freedom of movement. The present report reflects these concerns. However, the Special Rapporteur wishes to stress that there are many other violations of human rights in the OPT which continue to destroy the fabric of Palestinian society:

- Deaths and injuries. Since September 2000, over 3,000 Palestinians (including over 500 children) and almost 1,000 Israelis have been killed. More than 34,300 Palestinians and 6,000 Israelis have been injured. Most of those killed or injured were civilians;
- Assassinations. Israel continues to assassinate persons suspected of being militants. These assassinations are generally carried out without regard to loss of civilian life. On the contrary, the loss of civilian lives is simply dismissed as collateral damage. Some 340 persons have been killed in targeted assassinations, of which 188 have been targeted persons and 152 innocent civilians;
- Incursions. In the past year the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) have frequently engaged in military incursions into the West Bank and Gaza with a view to killing Palestinian militants. Frequently civilians are caught up in indiscriminate gunfire. On 28 June, for instance, in the course of an incursion into Nablus, Dr. Khaled Salah, a lecturer at Najah University, and his 16-year-old son were killed at home — the victims of wanton gunfire by the IDF;

- Prisoners. There are some 6,000 Palestinian prisoners in Israeli prisons or detention camps, of whom 350 are children and 75 are women. Of these prisoners, only some 1,500 have actually been put on trial. Many of those detained report being subjected to torture or inhuman and degrading treatment;
- Curfews. Although there has been a decline in the use of curfews as a weapon by the Israelis in the past year, curfews are still imposed and have been resorted to with great frequency in Nablus;
- Humanitarian crisis. Poverty and unemployment are rampant in the OPT. International Labour Organization (ILO) figures show that an average of 35 per cent of the Palestinian population is unemployed. Sixty-two per cent of Palestinians are below the poverty line. According to a World Bank report of 23 June 2004, “The Palestinian recession is among the worst in modern history. Average personal incomes have declined by more than a third since September 2000.”

III. Gaza Strip

7. In recent months the IDF has carried out regular military incursions into the Gaza Strip. The worst-affected towns have been Rafah and Beit Hanoun. The reasons advanced by Israel for these incursions are, in the case of Rafah, the destruction of tunnels used for smuggling of arms and in the case of Beit Hanoun, the destruction of the capacity to launch Qassam rockets into Israel. However, these incursions must be seen in a broader political perspective. Israel has announced that it is planning to withdraw its settlements and military presence from Gaza. It clearly does not wish to be seen to be withdrawing in weakness, with the result that it has chosen to demonstrate its power in Gaza before it withdraws. Also, in order to maintain control over the border between Gaza and Egypt, Israel has decided to create a buffer zone along the “Philadelphi” route, which requires the destruction of homes in Rafah presently in the buffer zone. In June 2004 it was announced that Israel planned to build a moat or trench in this buffer zone.

8. In pursuance of the above policies, Israel has engaged in a massive destruction of property in Gaza. Sometimes property, the homes of suspected militants, has been destroyed for punitive reasons. Sometimes homes have been destroyed for strategic purposes, as in the case of homes along the Philadelphi route. Often, however, the destruction is wanton. Homes have been destroyed in a purely purposeless manner. Bulldozers have savagely dug up roads, including electricity, sewage and water lines, in a brutal display of power. Moreover, there has been a total lack of concern for the people affected. On 12 July 2004, in the course of a raid into Khan Younis, the IDF destroyed a house in which 75-year-old Mahmoud Halfalla, confined to a wheelchair, was present. Despite appeals to allow him to leave, the house was destroyed above him and he was killed.

9. The Special Rapporteur visited Block “O”, the Brazil Quarter and the Tel Es Sultan neighbourhood of Rafah in the wake of Operation Rainbow carried out by the IDF in May 2004 and met with families that had been rendered homeless in the exercise. In Operation Rainbow, 43 persons were killed, including 8 who were killed in a peaceful demonstration on 19 May. From 18 to 24 May, a total of 167 buildings were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable. These buildings housed 379 families (2,066 individuals). These demolitions occurred during one of the worst months in Rafah's recent history. During May, 298 buildings, housing 710 families (3,800 individuals), were demolished in Rafah. Since the start of the intifada in September 2000, 1,497 buildings have been demolished in Rafah, affecting over 15,000 people. The Special Rapporteur was appalled at the evidence of wanton destruction inflicted upon Rafah. The Special Rapporteur is mindful of article 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention which provides that any destruction by the occupying Power of personal property is prohibited except when such destruction is rendered absolutely necessary by military operations and that failure to comply with this prohibition constitutes a grave breach in terms of article 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention requiring prosecution of the offenders. The time has come for the international community to identify those responsible for this savage destruction of property and to take the necessary legal action against them.

10. A report published by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) in June 2004 stated that nearly 45 million United States dollars will be needed to re-house Palestinians rendered homeless by the Israeli army. The Special Rapporteur expresses the hope that the international community will respond positively to the appeal by UNRWA. However, he wishes to emphasize that in terms of the Fourth Geneva Convention, it is the responsibility of the occupying Power to ensure that adequate food and medical supplies are provided for the occupied population and to care for the general welfare of the occupied people. It is a gross violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention for the occupying Power to destroy houses, render the population homeless, create a need for food and medical services and then to refuse to carry out its responsibilities to provide for the concerns of the occupied people.

11. In July 2004 the IDF, accompanied by the customary bulldozers, invaded Beit Hanoun. Militants were killed and so were civilians. Homes were destroyed and by way of further punishment olive and orange trees were destroyed. On 13 July an UNRWA convoy carrying food to Beit Hanoun came under fire from the IDF.

12. The IDF frequently "sweeps" land and houses near settlements and settlement bypass roads, allegedly in the interest of the security of the settlements. The destruction of property in exercises of this kind often seems to exceed the limits of military necessity. The Special Rapporteur had occasion to witness such an excess near a settler bypass road outside Netzarim. Here, the IDF, after years of harassing the families occupying two houses near to a bypass road, piled earth with a bulldozer against the outer walls of the houses up to the height of the first floor. Water and electricity to the house were also cut off and families were ordered not to use first floor rooms facing the bypass road. This is but one example of the kind of military harassment to which Gazans are subjected in order to provide for the security of settlers.

13. The international community has responded positively to Israel's announcement of plans to withdraw unilaterally from Gaza. It has also followed with interest the political conflict within the territory between forces of the Palestinian Authority (PA) and militant groups. There is a danger that events of this kind may distract attention from the suffering of the people of Gaza. The people of Gaza are in fact imprisoned within their territory, subjected to serious restrictions of movement within their territory, rendered unemployed and poverty-stricken by Israeli practices and, in many cases, made homeless by the IDF. This reality should not be overlooked.

14. Israel sees the political advantages in withdrawing from Gaza. In particular, it claims that it would no longer be categorized as an occupying Power in the territory subject to the Fourth Geneva Convention. In reality, however, Israel does not plan to relinquish its grasp on the Gaza Strip. It plans to maintain its authority by controlling Gaza's borders, territorial sea and airspace. That Israel intends to retain ultimate control over Gaza is clear from the Israeli disengagement plan of April 2004. This disengagement plan states in respect of Gaza, inter alia, that "The State of Israel will supervise and maintain the external land envelope, have exclusive control of the air space of Gaza and continue to carry out military activity in the Gaza Strip's maritime space. ... The State of Israel will continue to maintain a military presence along the border line between the Gaza Strip and Egypt (the Philadelphi route). This presence is a vital security need. In certain places a physical broadening of the area in which this military activity is carried out may be required." Another means of control that is being contemplated is the installation of high-tech listening devices in major buildings in the Gaza Strip in order to enable the Israeli authorities to monitor communications. This means that Israel will remain an occupying Power under international law. The test for application of the legal regime of occupation is not whether the occupying Power fails to exercise effective control over the territory, but whether it has the ability to exercise such power, a principle confirmed by the United States Military Tribunal in In re List and others (The Hostages Case) of 1948. It is essential that the international community take cognizance of the nature of Israel's proposed withdrawal and of its continuing obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention.

IV. The Wall

15. The Wall is responsible for much of the suffering of the Palestinian people and, if continued, will be responsible for still greater suffering. As shown by the International Court of Justice, it violates both humanitarian law and human rights law and undermines the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. For this reason the Wall has been the focus of special attention in two previous reports and remains a major focus of attention in the present report. In order to further his understanding of the consequences of the Wall from the perspective of human rights, the Special Rapporteur visited the Wall in the Jerusalem area (A-Ram, Abu Dis, Kalandiya, Beit Sourik and Biddu), Qalqiliya (Isla and Jayyous villages) and Bethlehem. Previously, the Special Rapporteur has visited villages in the Qalqiliya and Tulkarem region.

16. Israel claims that the purpose of the Wall is to secure Israel from terrorist attacks. It draws attention to the fact that statistics for the first half of 2004 show that terrorist attacks inside Israel have dropped by no less than 83 per cent compared to a similar period in 2003. Two comments may be made on this claim. First, there is no compelling evidence that this could not have been done with equal effect by building the Wall along the Green Line or within the Israeli side of the Green Line. Secondly, the evidence that the course of the Wall within Palestinian territory is required by security considerations is not conclusive. This is shown by the judgement of the Israeli High Court of Justice in Beit Sourik Village Council vs. the Government of Israel. Here, the Israeli High Court weighed the security justifications for the course of the Wall in Palestinian territory advanced by the Israeli military commander against less intrusive security proposals suggested by the Israeli Council for Peace and Security, an independent body comprising retired Israeli military officers, and in several instances preferred the latter's proposals. The High Court's consideration of competing proposals for the course of the Wall in the context of security and proportionality demonstrates the difficulties inherent in such an exercise and brings into question the military justifications for the course of the Wall.

17. More convincing explanations for the construction of the Wall in the OPT are the following:

- To incorporate settlers within Israel;
- To confiscate Palestinian land;
- To encourage an exodus of Palestinians by denying them access to their land and water resources and by restricting their freedom of movement.

These explanations are considered below.

A. The incorporation of settlements

18. The course of the Wall indicates clearly that its purpose is to incorporate as many settlers as possible into Israel. This is borne out by the statistics which show that some 80 per cent of settlers in the West Bank will be included on the Israeli side of the Wall. If further proof of this obvious fact is required, it is to be found in an article written by Benjamin Netanyahu, Minister of Finance of Israel and a former Prime Minister, in the International Herald Tribune on 14 July 2004, in which he wrote: "A line that is genuinely based on security would include as many Jews as possible and as few Palestinians as possible within the fence. That is precisely what Israel's security fence does. By running into less than 12 per cent of the West Bank, the fence will include about 80 per cent of Jews and only 1 per cent of Palestinians who live within the disputed territories."

19. Settlements are, of course, unlawful under international law. This was the unanimous view of the International Court of Justice in its Advisory Opinion. The Court found that "The Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (including East Jerusalem) have been established in breach of international law", and that "the route chosen for the wall gives expression in loco to the illegal measures taken by Israel with regard to Jerusalem and the settlements" (paras. 120 and 122). Moreover, Judge Buergenthal, the sole dissenting judge in the Opinion, stated that he agreed that article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention applied to the Israeli settlements in the West Bank from which it followed "that the segments of the wall being built by Israel to protect the settlements are ipso facto in violation of international humanitarian law" (para. 9).

20. Despite this, there is overwhelming evidence of settlement expansion in the West Bank. No longer does the Government of Israel even pay lip service to its claim of several years ago that it would "freeze" settlement expansion. New building starts in Israeli settlements increased by 35 per cent in 2003 and in early March 2004 the Israeli Ministry of Housing and Construction was engaged in discussion with construction contractors for plans to market another 2,414 housing units over the coming year in settlements such as Kiryat Arba, Har Homa, Beitar Illit, Sur Hadar, Ma'aleh Adumim, Givat Zeev and Pisgat Zeev. New settlements are to be established in the Bethlehem area, and the settlement of Kidmat Zion is to be built near Abu Dis and that of Nof Zahav near Jabal Mukhaber. Mr. Sharon has furthermore announced that in return for dismantling settlements in the Gaza Strip and four small settlements in the northern West Bank (Ghanim, Khadim, Sa-Nur and Homesh), the remaining settlements in the West Bank will be consolidated and expanded. According to a 2004 report of the Director General of the International Labour Organization, "the settler population has continued to increase rapidly, at an annual rate of 5.3 per cent in the West Bank and 4.4 per cent in Gaza since 2000, reaching close to 400,000 persons in the occupied Palestinian territories. This is equivalent to 6 per cent of the Israeli population and 11.5 per cent of the Palestinian population in 2002. The increase in the settler population has been much faster than population growth in Israel (at 1.4 per cent per year over 2000 to 2002), thereby indicating more than natural demographic growth even allowing for higher fertility among settler families."

21. Settler expansion has unfortunately been accompanied by settler violence. Numerous incidents have been reported of settler attacks on Palestinians and their land and it is reported that there had been a 20 per cent increase in settler violence. There are also allegations of well poisoning by settlers. Settler behaviour is particularly disgusting in Hebron where settlers continuously harass Palestinians and damage their property. The Special Rapporteur had first-hand experience of this when the vehicle in which he was travelling with the Temporary International Presence in Hebron (TIPH) was spat upon by settlers and splattered with paint. Obstacles placed in the road by settlers were not removed despite a request by a TIPH official. On the contrary, members of the IDF laughingly indicated their approval of the action of the settlers and refused to intervene. This despite Israel's legal obligation to cooperate with TIPH.

22. Plans to incorporate more settlements within the Wall are being implemented. Steps are being taken to include the settlement of Ariel on the Israeli side of the Wall. In June 2004, Defence Ministry officials sent Palestinian residents of the town of Salfit, south of Ariel, preliminary appropriation orders for land upon which the Wall is to be built. This action is being taken despite assurances given to the United States that no such construction would be undertaken. Although the High Court of Israel in the Beit Sourik case did not rule on the question whether the Wall might be built to include settlements, it seems implicit in its judgement that the building of the Wall to incorporate settlements would be unlawful. This follows from the following passage in the Court's judgement:

"We accept that the military commander cannot order the construction of the Separation Fence if his reasons are political. The Separation Fence cannot be motivated by a desire to 'annex' territories to the State of Israel. The purpose of the Separation Fence cannot be to draw a political border. In [a previous case] this Court discussed whether it is possible to seize land in order to build a Jewish civilian town, when the purpose of the building of the town is not the security needs and defence of the area ... but rather based upon a Zionist perspective of settling the entire land of Israel. This question was answered by this Court in the negative" (para. 27).

B. Confiscation of Palestinian land

23. Another purpose of the Wall is to expand Israel's territorial possessions. Rich agricultural land and water resources have been seized along the Green Line and incorporated into Israel. On this visit, the Special Rapporteur witnessed the seizure of agricultural land in the region of the villages of Jayyous and Isla. The Wall has been built between Jayyous homes and rich Jayyous farmland, thereby separating Jayyous farmers from their land. The Wall separates Jayyous farmers from 120 greenhouses, 15,000 olive trees and 50,000 citrus trees. All seven of the town's water wells are on the Israeli side of the Wall. The same pattern was apparent near the village of Isla.

24. The route of the Wall in the south Hebron hills is also a source of concern. The Special Rapporteur visited the cave-dwellers in the Jimba region who are destined for removal from land they have occupied for generations. It is not clear whether the military have their eyes on this land for military exercises or whether it is intended for settlement expansion.

25. Nowhere are Israel's territorial ambitions clearer than in the case of Jerusalem. East Jerusalem was occupied by Israel in 1967 and illegally annexed to Israel in 1980. This annexation was internationally condemned and declared to be "of no legal validity" by a resolution of the Security Council. The territory annexed in this way amounts to 1.2 per cent of the occupied West Bank and has a Palestinian population of 249,000. These Palestinians are forced to have residence cards to live in their own territory. Certain benefits, particularly relating to health insurance, pensions and freedom of movement, attach to these residence rights. The land illegally incorporated into the Jerusalem municipality has been used to build illegal Israeli settlements in order to change the demographic make-up of the area. There are now 12 illegal Israeli settlements in this area and the total settler population in eastern Jerusalem amounts to 180,000. As a result of the creation of settlements in East Jerusalem, Palestinians with Jerusalem residence rights have been compelled to build houses outside the municipal limits of East Jerusalem.

26. In the last few months a wall has been built along the illegal border of East Jerusalem at places like Abu Dis, A-Ram and Kalandiya. This wall has a number of serious consequences. First, it gives effect to an illegal annexation and incorporates part of the city of Jerusalem (including the Holy Places) into Israel. Here it must be stressed that the Wall is to expand beyond the limits of the present Jerusalem municipality to incorporate an additional 59 square kilometres of the West Bank in what will be known as "Greater Jerusalem". (The total settler population of "Greater Jerusalem" (247,000) will amount to more than half of the Israeli settlers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.) Second, it separates Palestinians from Palestinians and can in no conceivable way be justified as a security measure. Third, it threatens to deprive some 60,000 Palestinians who were previously resident within the Jerusalem municipal boundary of their residence rights. Fourth, it will divide families, some of whom carry Jerusalem residence documents and some of whom carry West Bank documents. Fifth, it makes contact between Palestinians and Palestinian institutions situated on different sides of the Wall hazardous and complicated. Sixth, it will affect 106,000 Palestinians in neighbourhoods in the West Bank who are dependent upon the facilities of East Jerusalem, including hospitals, universities, schools, employment and markets for agricultural goods. The Special Rapporteur met many Palestinian Jerusalemites who were seriously affected by the construction of the Wall within Jerusalem. Unfortunately, their plight receives little attention as the international community has grown accustomed to the illegal annexation of Jerusalem. The Special Rapporteur stresses that the Wall incorporating Palestinian neighbourhoods in East Jerusalem into Israel is no different from the Wall in other parts of the West Bank which incorporates Palestinian land into Israel.

C. Forced exodus

27. A third purpose of the Wall is to compel Palestinian residents in the so-called "Seam Zone" between the Wall and the Green Line and those resident adjacent to the Wall, but separated from their lands by the Wall, to leave their homes and start a new life elsewhere in the West Bank by making life intolerable for them. This was acknowledged by the International Court in its Advisory Opinion (paras. 122 and 133).

28. Restrictions on freedom of movement in the Seam Zone pose particular hardships for Palestinians. Israel has designated the Seam Zone as a "Closed Zone" in which Israelis may travel freely but not Palestinians. Thus, over 13,500 Palestinians live in the Closed Zone, obliged to have permits to live in their own homes (see Order Regarding Security Regulations (Judea and Samaria) (No. 378) 5730/1970). Palestinians living within the West Bank with farms inside the Closed Zone moreover need permits to cross the Wall into this Zone, as do others who wish to visit the Zone for personal, humanitarian or business reasons. A recent study carried out by B'Tselem (the Israeli Information Centre for Human Rights in the Occupied Territories) demonstrates the arbitrary nature of the implementation of the permit system. Permits are to be granted for varying lengths of time depending on the kind of crop grown by the applicant. For example, olive growers should receive permits for October/November, the picking season, while owners of hothouses which require care throughout the year should be issued permits for a longer period of time. Testimonies given to B'Tselem by farmers in the area indicate that the authorities have constantly ignored the kind of crop being grown on the land. Sometimes olive growers have received permits for a period of three to six months while the owners of hothouses have received permits for shorter periods. In some cases, permits are granted for two weeks only. Moreover, about 25 per cent of the requests for permits to enter the Closed Zone were denied. Permits are rejected for failure to prove ownership and, in most cases, for security reasons. No reasons are given for the denial of a permit. Permits are intended to grant access to the Closed Zone through special gates in the Wall. In practice, these gates are not opened as scheduled. Farmers are compelled to wait at the gates for long periods of time until soldiers find it convenient to open the gates. For instance, the gates at Jayyous were opened for only 90 minutes a day (30 minutes each time). The arbitrary regime relating to the opening of gates has caused special problems during harvest time when intensive labour is required. (See Not All It Seems: Preventing Palestinians' Access to their Lands West of the Separation Barrier in the Tulkarem-Qalqiliya Area.)

29. In some instances, the Wall has been built with due regard to Palestinian homes. However, in some cases houses have been demolished where they are too close to the Wall. This is illustrated by the destruction of 10 homes and shops in the West Bank village of Azzun Atma in August 2004.

30. The main compulsion to leave the Closed Zone and the neighbourhood of the Wall is to be found in the separation of homes from land. All along the Wall, Palestinian homes are separated from their land. This report has above referred to the cases of Jayyous and Isla but they are not isolated examples. Many other villages have been similarly affected.

31. At this stage of the report, it is necessary to refer to the judgement of the High Court of Israel in the Beit Sourik Village Council case. In its judgement, the Court commented as follows upon the location of the Wall in the area north-west of Jerusalem near to Beit Sourik:

“82. ... The length of the part of the Separation Fence to which these orders apply is approximately 40 kms. It causes injury to the lives of 35,000 local inhabitants. 4,000 dunams of land are taken up by the route of the Fence itself, and thousands of olive trees growing along the route itself are uprooted. The Fence separates the eight villages in which the local inhabitants live from more than 30,000 dunams of their land. The great majority of these lands are cultivated, and they include tens of thousands of olive trees, fruit trees and other agricultural crops. The licensing regime which the military commander wishes to establish cannot prevent or substantially decrease the extent of the severe injury to the local farmers. Access to the lands depends upon the possibility of closing the gates, which are very distant from each other and not always open. Security checks, which are likely to prevent the passage of vehicles and which will naturally cause long lines and many hours of waiting, will be performed at the gates. These do not go hand-in-hand with the farmer’s ability to work his land. There will inevitably be areas where the Security Fence will have to separate the local inhabitants from their lands

“ ...

“84. The injury caused by the Separation Fence is not restricted to the lands of the inhabitants or to their access to these lands. The injury is of far wider scope. It is the fabric of life of the entire population. In many locations, the Separation Fence passes right by their homes. ...

“85. ... [W]e are of the opinion that the balance determined by the military commander is not proportionate. There is no escaping, therefore, a renewed examination of the route of the Fence, according to the standards of proportionality that we have set out.”

32. The Government of Israel has indicated that it completely rejects the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice. The Government has, however, made it clear that it will abide by the decision of the Israeli High Court of Justice in respect of sections of the Wall still to be built. Central Command Chief Major-General Moshe Kaplinsky stated on 13 July that the “security establishment has decided that no barrier will be built that separates Palestinian farmers from their fields and, therefore, no gates for agricultural crossings will be built in any of the future sections of the Separation Fence”. Government statements indicate that there is no intention to review the 200 kms of the Wall that has already been built.

33. In the first place, the Special Rapporteur calls upon the Government of Israel to honour the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice, which was approved by the General Assembly by 150 votes in favour on 20 July 2004. This Court, the judicial organ of the United Nations, has pronounced itself almost unanimously against the legality of the Wall. Israel is therefore in law obliged to dismantle the Wall and to compensate Palestinians who have suffered as a result of its construction. If the Government of Israel declines to do this, it should at least honour the judgement of its own Supreme Court sitting as the High Court of Justice in the Beit Sourik Village Council case. From this judgement it is clear that substantial portions of the already constructed Wall fail to comply with the principles of proportionality expounded by the High Court. There is no reason why the Wall should not be dismantled where it fails to meet these requirements.

V. Freedom of movement

34. Freedom of movement is a freedom recognized by all international human rights instruments. Article 12 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights provides that everyone shall “have the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose his residence”. Despite this, serious restrictions are imposed on the freedom of movement of all Palestinians, whether in the Gaza Strip or in the West Bank. They are a source of constant humiliation and cause personal suffering and inconvenience to every Palestinian. In addition, these restrictions are primarily responsible for the decline of the Palestinian economy.

35. The inhabitants of Gaza are effectively imprisoned by a combination of wall, fence and sea. Gaza’s borders are rigorously patrolled by the IDF and passage in and out of Gaza is strictly controlled. While some Gazans are released to work in Israel when the security situation permits and a handful of officials and other privileged persons are permitted to leave and return to Gaza, the overwhelming majority of the people of Gaza are confined within its borders. Indeed, it is almost impossible for males between the age of 16 and 35, including medical patients and students, to leave Gaza through Rafah Terminal, which is the only exit from the Gaza Strip to Egypt. Within Gaza, freedom of movement is restricted by regularly and rigorously imposed roadblocks. The Gaza Strip is effectively divided into two by the checkpoint at Abu Houli on the main north-south road, Salah-Al-Din. There are also additional temporary and permanent road barriers in the north and south of the Gaza Strip and a number of areas, including Al Mawasi and Al Sayafa, are blocked off from the rest of the Gaza Strip by Israeli military patrols.

36. The inhabitants of the West Bank suffer from a variety of forms of restriction of movement. Residents of one city may not travel freely to another city in the West Bank: they require permits from the IDF for this purpose — and permits may be arbitrarily withheld. Permits are seldom granted for private vehicles. Anyone embarking upon a journey from one city to another city within the West Bank is subjected to IDF-controlled checkpoints, some permanent and some temporary. Checkpoints are also erected within cities and districts. There are several hundred checkpoints throughout the West Bank and Gaza, blocking traffic between villages and towns, between cities or into Israel. The checkpoint is not the sole instrument of restriction of freedom of movement. Although less frequently used than in past years, the curfew remains a regular occurrence, as illustrated by the experience of Nablus. This apparatus of control of freedom of movement of people and goods has precipitated the prevailing economic crisis and resulted in widespread unemployment and severe disruption to education, health care services, work, trade, family and political life.

37. Travel within both the Gaza Strip and the West Bank is aggravated by the presence of separate bypass roads linking the settlements to each other and settlements to Israel. Palestinians are prohibited from using these roads.

38. The Wall in the Jerusalem area threatens to become a nightmare. Those on the West Bank side of the Wall with West Bank identity documents will be denied access to work, schools, universities, hospitals and places of worship on the Israeli side of the Wall. Similarly, those on the Israeli side of the Wall will be denied access or find access seriously inconvenient to their places of work, educational institutions and hospitals on the West Bank side of the Wall. Many Palestinians with Jerusalem residence documents are married to West Bank identity document-holders. Whether they will be permitted to live together in Jerusalem remains to be seen. There is also a real fear that Jerusalem identity document-holders forced to live outside the Wall, as a result of the unavailability of property within East Jerusalem, will lose their Jerusalem residence rights. All the region's residents, numbering several hundred thousand, will be forced to pass through one large terminal at Kalandiya. Some of these persons will have West Bank identity documents and some will have Jerusalem residence permits. Although there are no clear estimates of the number of Palestinians who will have to pass through the Kalandiya terminal daily, it is clear that it will reach the tens of thousands. Most of those passing through to work or to school will reach the terminal at peak hours and great commotion can be expected. At this stage, it is simply impossible to predict the magnitude of the hardships to which the Palestinians living in and around Jerusalem will be subjected as a result of the Wall.

39. As indicated above, a special permit system applies for persons living or farming along the Seam Zone between the Wall and the Green Line. They require permits to move between home and agricultural land and often these permits are denied or granted for limited periods only. Moreover, the gates giving access to the Closed Zone are frequently not opened at scheduled times. In general, this system is operated in a totally arbitrary manner. The psychological implications of the Wall have recently been the subject of a study by the Palestinian Counselling Centre dated 29 June 2004. This report shows that persons living close to the Wall, particularly those who are obliged to pass through the gates of the Wall, have manifested severe psychosomatic symptoms from their state of anxiety.

40. The Special Rapporteur is unfortunately compelled to compare the different permit systems that govern the lives of Palestinians with the notorious "pass law" system which determined the right of Africans to move and reside in so-called white areas under the apartheid regime of South Africa. The South African pass laws were administered in a humiliating manner, but uniformly. The Israeli laws are likewise administered in a humiliating manner but they are not administered clearly or uniformly. The arbitrary and capricious nature of their implementation imposes a great burden on the Palestinian people. Restrictions on freedom of movement constitute the institutionalized humiliation of the Palestinian people. "Road apartheid" was unknown in South Africa. By creating separate and unequal roads for settlers and Palestinians, Israel has gone beyond the scope of restraints on freedom of movement imposed by apartheid.

VI. Conclusion

41. This report has focused on three issues: the destruction of property in Gaza, the consequences of the Wall and restrictions on freedom of movement. The Special Rapporteur has drawn attention to the serious violations of human rights and humanitarian law flowing from these actions of the Government of Israel. Israel is both legally and morally obliged to bring its practices and policies into line with the law. The High Court of Justice of Israel has rightly declared, “There is no security without law” (Beit Sourik case, para. 86).

42. As the International Court of Justice indicates in its Advisory Opinion, approved by the General Assembly, there are consequences of the Wall for States other than Israel. The Special Rapporteur reminds States of their obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the Wall and not to render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation created by such construction. In addition, all States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention are obliged to ensure compliance by Israel with the international humanitarian law embodied in this Convention. Israel’s defiance of international law poses a threat not only to the international legal order but to the international order itself. This is no time for appeasement on the part of the international community.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
18 August 2005

Original: English

---

Sixtieth session

Item 73 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Human rights questions: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report submitted by John Dugard, Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967, in accordance with Commission resolutions 1993/2 A and 2005/7.

---

* A/60/150.

Report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967

Summary

During the past year, Israel's decision to withdraw Jewish settlers and troops from Gaza has attracted the attention of the international community. This focus of attention on Gaza has allowed Israel to continue with the construction of the wall in Palestinian territory, the expansion of settlements and the de-Palestinization of Jerusalem with virtually no criticism. This report focuses principally on these matters.

Although uncertainty surrounds the full extent and consequences of Israel's withdrawal from Gaza, it seems clear that Gaza will remain occupied territory subject to the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilians in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention) as a result of Israel's continued control of the borders of Gaza. The withdrawal of Jewish settlers from Gaza will result in the decolonization of Palestinian territory but not result in the end of occupation.

In its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004, the International Court of Justice held that the wall currently being built by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is contrary to international law. It accordingly held that construction of the wall should cease and that those sections of the wall that had been completed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory should be dismantled. The Government of Israel has paid no heed to the advisory opinion and continues with the construction of the wall.

The wall has serious consequences for Palestinians living in the neighbourhood of the wall. Many thousands are separated from their agricultural lands by the wall and are denied permits to access their lands. Even those who are granted permits frequently find that gates within the wall do not open as scheduled. As a result, Palestinians are gradually leaving land and homes that they have occupied for generations.

Most Jewish settlers in the West Bank are now situated between the Green Line (the accepted border between Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory) and the wall. Moreover, existing settlements in this zone — known as the "closed zone" — are expanding and new settlements are being built. Emboldened by the support they receive from the Government and the Israel Defense Forces (IDF), settlers have become more aggressive towards Palestinians and settler violence is on the increase.

The construction of the wall, the de-Palestinization of the "closed zone" and the expansion of settlements make it abundantly clear that the wall is designed to be the border of the State of Israel and that the land of the "closed zone" is to be annexed.

Israel has embarked upon major changes in Jerusalem in order to make the city more Jewish. Jewish settlements within East Jerusalem are being expanded and plans are afoot to link Jerusalem with the settlement of Ma'aleh Adumim with a population of 35,000, which will effectively cut the West Bank in two. Palestinian contiguity in East Jerusalem is being destroyed by the presence of Jewish settlements and by house demolitions. Some 55,000 Palestinians presently resident in the municipal area of East Jerusalem have been transferred to the West Bank by the construction of the wall. The clear purpose of these changes is to remove any suggestion that East Jerusalem is a Palestinian entity capable of becoming the capital of a Palestinian State.

The international community has proclaimed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and the need to create a Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel. This vision is unattainable without a viable Palestinian territory. The construction of the wall, the expansion of settlements and the de-Palestinization of Jerusalem threaten the viability of a Palestinian State.

The occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory continues to result in major violations of human rights. There are some 8,000 Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails, whose treatment is alleged to fall well below internationally accepted standards. Freedom of movement is radically undermined by over 600 military checkpoints. Social and economic rights are violated. A quarter of the Palestinian population is unemployed and half the population lives below the official poverty line. Health and education services suffer and Palestinians have severe difficulties in accessing safe water. Housing remains a serious problem as a result of house demolitions conducted by the IDF in previous years. Women suffer disproportionately from these violations of human rights.

In 2004 the International Court of Justice handed down an advisory opinion in which it condemned as illegal not only the construction of the wall but many features of the Israeli administration of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The advisory opinion was endorsed by the General Assembly on 20 July 2004 in resolution ES-10/15. Since then little effort has been made by the international community to compel Israel to comply with its legal obligations as expounded by the International Court. The Quartet, comprising the United Nations, the European Union, the United States of America and the Russian Federation, appears to prefer to conduct its negotiations with Israel in terms of the so-called road map with no regard to the advisory opinion. The road map seems to contemplate the acceptance of certain sections of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the inclusion of major Jewish settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in Israeli territory. This process places the United Nations in an awkward situation as it clearly cannot be a party to negotiations that ignore the advisory opinion of its own judicial organ.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction .....	1–2	5
II. Visit of the Special Rapporteur .....	3–4	5
III. Gaza .....	5–11	6
IV. The wall .....	12–20	8
A. Settlements and the wall .....	21–26	10
B. Settler violence .....	27	11
V. Jerusalem .....	28–35	12
VI. The wall, settlements and self-determination .....	36–37	13
VII. Other human rights violations .....	38	13
A. Freedom of the person .....	39–40	14
B. Freedom of movement .....	41–42	14
C. Discrimination against women .....	43	15
D. Humanitarian crisis .....	44–48	15
E. Right to a clean environment .....	49	16
VIII. The death penalty and the Palestinian Authority .....	50	17
IX. The Occupied Palestinian Territory and the international community .....	51–57	17

I. Introduction

1. On 8 February 2005 the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, and the Prime Minister of Israel, Ariel Sharon, meeting in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, agreed on a ceasefire in terms of which Palestine agreed to stop all acts of violence against Israelis and Israel agreed to cease all military activity against Palestinians. This raised hopes of a peace that would ultimately result in negotiations leading to the creation of a Palestinian State. The past six months have seen the maintenance of an uneasy peace. Suicide bombings in Israel have not ceased: on 25 February a suicide bombing took place in Tel Aviv, killing four and wounding 50 persons and on 12 July a suicide bombing took place in Netanya, killing five and wounding 90. There have been over 200 attacks by non-State Palestinian actors against Israeli targets but few casualties have resulted from such attacks. Violence against Palestinians has also continued: over 70 Palestinians have been killed by the Israel Defense Forces (IDF); over 500 have been wounded; and targeted assassinations have resumed. There have been over 2,000 IDF incursions into Palestinian population centres. The main focus of attention during this period has been the withdrawal of Jewish settlers from Gaza. This event, which has caused major divisions in Israeli society, has understandably received considerable attention from the international community. This attention has, however, been at the expense of major violations of human rights and humanitarian law in the West Bank. Despite the fact that, according to a report of Switzerland in its capacity as depositary of the Geneva Conventions transmitted to the General Assembly on 30 June 2005, “the vast majority of States reaffirm that the applicable legal framework and the obligations of the parties [to the Geneva Conventions] were determined by the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004 and cannot be called into question” (A/ES-10/304, annex, para. 22). The advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, which was confirmed by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004, has been largely overlooked. This has allowed Israel to continue with the construction of the wall in Palestinian territory, the expansion of settlements and the de-Palestinization of Jerusalem. This report will focus principally on these matters.

2. In this report the term “wall” is used in preference to the more neutral terms “barrier” and “fence”. The term “wall” was carefully and deliberately used by the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (see A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1). The Special Rapporteur sees no reason to depart from this language.

II. Visit of the Special Rapporteur

3. The Special Rapporteur visited the Occupied Palestinian Territory from 26 June to 3 July 2005. He visited Gaza, where he had the opportunity to visit the Karni crossing and to view the destruction caused to Gaza International Airport. The Special Rapporteur visited the Palestinian side of the Rafah terminal crossing between Gaza and Egypt where he met a busload of returning Gaza residents who had waited on the Egyptian side of the border for three to four days in the sun as a result of slow processing by the Israeli immigration officials. (B’Tselem, in a recent publication entitled One Big Prison has described the treatment of Gazan residents by Israeli officials at the Rafah terminal as “arbitrary and disproportionate”.) While in Gaza the Special Rapporteur met with representatives of United Nations agencies, of Palestinian non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and with private individuals.

4. The Special Rapporteur then proceeded to visit the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. He visited Ramallah, Hebron, Jerusalem and Bethlehem. He also visited communities in areas adjacent to the wall in the regions of Qalqiliya (Jayyous), Tulkarem (Ras), Hebron (Imneizel), Jerusalem (Beit Surik, Beit Dukku, Anata, Abu-Dis, A-Ram, Kalandiya) and Bethlehem (An Nu'man). He met with communities affected by settlements in Hebron, At Tuwani, Bethlehem and Jerusalem. In Jerusalem, the Special Rapporteur visited Silwan where 88 houses are subject to demolition orders. During this part of the visit the Special Rapporteur met with representatives of the Palestinian Authority, United Nations agencies, Israeli and Palestinian NGOs and private individuals, many of whom had suffered personally as a result of the construction of the wall and settlements.

III. Gaza

5. At the time of writing, the situation in Gaza is highly volatile. Settler groups opposed to the withdrawal of some 8,000 to 9,000 settlers have confronted the IDF in a violent manner. At the same time, Palestinian militants have fired rockets into neighbouring Israel and Jewish settlements and engaged in violence against the Palestinian Authority. The withdrawal of settlers is planned to take place between mid-August and mid-September and it seems that this withdrawal is destined to be accompanied by further violence.

6. This volatile situation is likely to give rise to an addendum to the present report. At this stage, it is only possible to raise questions about the process of withdrawal and the future status of Gaza.

7. Great uncertainty surrounds the details of the withdrawal. While one can understand the need for some element of surprise on the part of the IDF in order to carry out the withdrawal, the consequences of this uncertainty have serious implications for Palestinians. It seems highly likely that the withdrawal will result in major disruptions to road traffic and freedom of movement which, in turn, will have serious implications for the provision of foodstuffs, access to hospitals, schools and places of employment. In these circumstances, it is difficult to understand why the Government of Israel has not made plans with the Palestinian Authority to avoid a humanitarian disaster in the Palestinian community during the one-month withdrawal period. Fears have also been voiced that insufficient account has been taken of unexploded ordnance and landmines in the vicinity of settlements and the presence of asbestos materials in some of the settlement houses scheduled for destruction.

8. The future status of Gaza is unclear. It seems unlikely that the United Nations will be in a position to issue a statement proclaiming the end of Israeli occupation of Gaza after the withdrawal as a result of the continued control to be exercised by Israel over Gaza. Furthermore, the West Bank and Gaza constitute a "single territorial unit" in terms of the Oslo Agreements and it would be incomprehensible if a statement proclaiming the end of occupation for Gaza were made without addressing the continued occupation of the West Bank. There is no clarity in respect of Israel's plans or intentions for the future of Gaza. At the time of writing, the Palestinian Authority remains in doubt over the precise forms of control to be exercised by Israel and how much freedom will be allowed to Gaza in its relations with the outside world and the West Bank. Israel has stated that it will relinquish control of the Philadelphi route between Gaza and Egypt if Egypt is prepared to patrol its side of the border. Israel has announced that Gaza Airport may not be reopened. While it is prepared to contemplate the construction of a harbour in Gaza, it seems that Israel will claim the right to police the territorial sea of Gaza. There is also a suggestion that Israel will build a concrete barrier in the sea along the border between Gaza and Israel. The future of the movement of persons and goods between Gaza and the West Bank and between Gaza and Egypt is still unknown. Israel has to date refused proposals that persons be allowed to travel freely between Gaza and the West Bank. Indeed, family reunification of the people of Gaza and the West Bank remains unacceptable to Israel. Goods will not be allowed to move freely from Gaza to the West Bank and vice versa. A proposal that a sunken highway in a 5-metre-deep trench surrounded by fences be constructed between Gaza and the West Bank to allow the passage of Palestinian persons and goods is still subject to discussion. It is highly possible that as far as goods are concerned, the cumbersome and strictly controlled back-to-back system of transport of goods at present practised at the Karni crossing will remain in force. Israel is reluctant to allow free passage of persons and goods between Gaza and Egypt. It has suggested that the present Rafah terminal between Gaza and Egypt be moved to a crossing point at Kerem Shalom where the boundaries of Israel, Egypt and Gaza meet as this would allow Israel to retain control over access to Gaza. Customs arrangements are still the subject of negotiation. In all these circumstances, the inevitable conclusion to be drawn is that Israel is not prepared to relinquish control over the borders of Gaza. Moreover, the IDF has announced that it will not hesitate to intervene militarily in Gaza after the withdrawal of settlers if Israel's security so requires.

9. It seems clear therefore that Gaza will remain occupied territory subject to the appropriate provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilians in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention). The jurisprudence of post-war Germany shows that the test for occupation is that of continued control. In the Hostages Trial (United States of America v. Wilhelm List et al., 1949) a military tribunal stated that it was not necessary for the occupying Power to occupy the whole territory so long as it "could at any time (it) desired assume physical control of any part of the country".<sup>1</sup>

10. The withdrawal of Jewish settlers from Gaza should be seen as the decolonization of Palestinian territory. This does not affect Israeli control of the territory, which will remain. Consequently, Israel will remain an occupying Power in respect of Gaza, subject to the rules of international humanitarian law applicable to occupied territory. The humanitarian crisis which Gaza has suffered since 2000 will not disappear after Israel withdraws. Continued control will prevent economic recovery and Gaza will remain an imprisoned territory in which economic and social rights suffer seriously.

11. The uncertainty surrounding Israel's post-withdrawal plans has given rise to suggestions that Israel intends to delay decisions on matters such as customs, air and sea traffic, and the movement of persons and goods for an indefinite period. Slow decisions on such matters will further distract international attention from Israel's territorial expansion in the West Bank. Twelve months of protracted negotiations between the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority on these matters will allow Israel to complete construction of the wall, the consolidation of settlement blocks, and fundamental changes to the character of Jerusalem.

---

<sup>1</sup> United Nations War Crimes Commission, Law Reports of Trials of War Criminals, vol. III, 1949, p.56.

IV. The wall

12. In its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004 the International Court of Justice held that the wall presently being built by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, is contrary to international law; that Israel is under an obligation to cease the building of the wall on Palestinian territory and to dismantle it forthwith; that Israel is under an obligation to make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory; that all States are under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall; that all States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention are obliged to ensure that Israel complies with the provisions of that Convention; and that the United Nations should consider what further action is required to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall. On 20 July 2004 the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/15 in which it demanded that Israel comply with the legal obligations as mentioned in the advisory opinion. The resolution was adopted by 150 votes in favour, 6 against with 10 abstentions.

13. The Government of Israel refuses to accept the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. It does, however, pay some attention to the decision of its own High Court in the Beit Sourik Village Council v. The Government of Israel of 30 June 2004 which held that while the wall might be built to ensure security, it should not impose undue hardships on Palestinians. Unfortunately, this decision has not been applied to most sections of the wall constructed before the decision was handed down in July 2004.

14. On 20 February 2005 the Government of Israel marginally modified the planned route of the wall. In terms of this decision the wall, once completed, will be 670 km long compared with 622 km of the prior route. The new route runs for 135 km on the Green Line compared to 48 km of the prior route. The new route of the wall will follow the Green Line, or be close to the Green Line, in the locality of the Hebron Hills. It will penetrate more deeply into Palestinian territory further north to include settlements in the Gush Etzion block near Bethlehem, housing over 50,000 settlers. It has also been decided to include the settlement of Ma'aleh Adumim and Ariel on the Israeli side of the wall. This will result in some 10 per cent of Palestinian land being included in Israel. (The previous route resulted in the seizure of 12.7 per cent of the West Bank.) The wall will enclose, on the Israeli side, 170,000 settlers (not including those in East Jerusalem) and 49,000 Palestinians, living in 38 villages.

15. To date 213 km of the wall have been built from the northern border of the West Bank near Tubas to roughly Elkana in the centre, plus two segments in Jerusalem. Construction is still under way between Elkana and Jerusalem; around the settlements of Ariel and Immanuel; in and around East Jerusalem; and from Gush Etzion to Metzudat Yehuda on the southern border of the West Bank in Hebron Governorate. Although construction of the wall has progressed rapidly since the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, the Israeli Prime Minister, Ariel Sharon, rebuked the defence establishment on 6 July for “taking too long” in the construction of the wall and instructed it to speed up its construction since there were no financial constraints. Petitions to the High Court against the course of the wall have been largely responsible for delays in the completion of the wall. An injunction restraining the building of the wall around the settlement of Ariel which will extend the wall 22 km into the West Bank was lifted on 17 May 2005 and work on the construction of the wall around the eastern border of this “finger” into Palestinian territory has been started. That Israel intends to enclose Ariel within the wall is clear from a statement by Mr. Sharon on 21 July 2005 that the Ariel block “will be part of the State of Israel forever” and that “it will always be an inseparable part of the State of Israel”.

16. The Special Rapporteur viewed the wall and construction sites of the wall in many areas. He visited the wall near Jayyous and Ras in Qalandiya and Tulkarem districts; around Rachel’s Tomb in Bethlehem; along the road to Kalandiya in A-Ram; over the hills of Abu-Dis and Anata; and Imneizel in the south Hebron Hills. The wall, or barrier as some prefer to call it, has been built without concern for the environment. It is ugly, and has resulted in the destruction of olive groves, citrus orchards and grazing fields and the disfigurement of towns and villages. In previous reports the Special Rapporteur has expressed the view that the wall seems to have been built without regard to security considerations in many areas (for instance, in some areas the wall is built in the valley below Palestinian villages). The most recent visit to the wall has confirmed this view.

17. The zone between the wall and the Green Line, the internationally accepted border between Israel and the West Bank, is known as the “closed zone” or “seam zone”. Within this zone, live some 49,000 Palestinians. A greater number of Palestinians, however, live on the West Bank side of the wall while their lands are in the “closed zone”. Both these Palestinian communities are seriously affected by the wall. Those living within the “closed zone” have difficulty in accessing family, hospitals, schools, markets and employment within the West Bank. Those living on the West Bank side of the wall require permits to access their own agricultural land. Whereas in previous years such persons were mainly refused permits for security reasons, today it appears that permits are mainly denied when the owner or user of land is unable to provide convincing evidence of ownership or title to the land. A landowner applying for a permit to access his own land must submit a land registration certificate. However, proof of ownership is alien to the traditional Palestinian land ownership system and has been resisted by Palestinian landowners over many generations. In part this can be ascribed to the fact that the registration of land under the Ottomans was very slow and little progress was made in respect of land registration during the British Mandate period or during the period of Jordanian rule before 1967. It is therefore not uncommon that people are unaware of the actual status of the land they are cultivating as they have not previously been required to prove ownership of the land. Much of this land has been held in families for generations according to traditional land tenure systems without registration. In these circumstances the demand for proof of land ownership or title to land is often an insurmountable obstacle. Permits are refused on this ground and because the applicant is considered to be too distant a relation of the landowner. In the Governorate of Tulkarem, in the period 1 March to 31 May 2005, 58 per cent of 315 applicants from Attil, Deir al Ghusun and Illar received permits; 22 per cent of 900 applicants from Akkaba received permits; and 19 per cent of 1,222 applicants from Baqa ash Sharqiya, Nazlat Issa and Abu Nar received permits. In Qaffin, with a population of 9,000, 600 families — between 3,000 and 3,600 people — have land and trees on the other side of the fence. In May 2005, 1,050 villagers applied for permits to access their land. Only 70 were granted permits, 600 received a negative reply and the rest, 380 people, received no reply at all. The reason most frequently given for rejection was that the applicant was too distant a relation to the landowner. Several sons and grandsons of landowners were denied permits because they were considered “distant relatives”. Between January and June 2005, some 3,545 applications for permits were submitted in the Tulkarem area. Of these, 2,404 were refused, mostly on the grounds of inadequate proof of relationship to the owner.

18. To aggravate the situation, the 25 gates that are supposed to provide access to the “closed zone” are frequently locked or opened in an arbitrary manner. Permit holders often have to wait for many hours for gates to open and sometimes they do not open at all. In May and June 2005 fires broke out in the “closed zone” but the IDF denied farmers access to their lands to put out the fire.

19. Houses too close to the wall are sometimes destroyed. On 27 July 2005 houses in the area of the town of Al-Khadr were destroyed.

20. Many persons whose land is adjacent to the “closed zone” find refused permits, closed gates and destroyed homes too much to bear. This explains why Palestinians are gradually leaving land and homes that they have occupied for generations. Figures are uncertain but it seems that 11,000 persons have already been displaced as a result of the construction of the wall. This new generation of displaced persons creates a new category of Palestinian refugee. The neglect and abandonment of land will allow the Israeli authorities to seize the land under the terms of an old Ottoman law and to hand it over to the settlers.

A. Settlements and the wall

21. Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza are illegal. They violate article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention and their illegality has been confirmed by the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion on the wall. There can therefore be no justification for the retention of settlements. A fortiori, the expansion of settlements must be completely unacceptable to the international community.

22. Most settlers and settlements in the West Bank are to be found on the Israeli side of the wall. Some 170,000 settlers live in 56 settlements in the “closed zone”, that is 76 per cent of the settler population in the West Bank. New settlements or the expansion of existing settlements are being planned for the “closed zone”. The Special Rapporteur saw evidence of such an expansion near Jayyous where the settlement of Zufin is being expanded to encroach further on the fields of Jayyous farmers in the “closed zone”.

23. The expansion of settlements is clear to anyone who visits settlement sites. Cranes generally mark the skyline of settlements and there is abundant evidence of building activity. The figures confirm settlement growth and expansion. On 8 June 2005 the Israeli Central Bureau of Statistics reported that Israel had built almost twice as many settler homes in the first quarter of 2005 as in the same period of 2004. At the same time, housing starts in Israel itself fell 6 per cent from the first quarter of 2004.

24. Three major settlement blocks, the Gush Etzion block, the Ma'aleh Adumim block and the Ariel block — all of which are to be surrounded by the wall — will effectively divide Palestinian territory into cantons or Bantustans. These cantons will be linked by special roads or tunnels. This results in transportation contiguity as opposed to territorial contiguity. This means that Palestinians will be able access different parts of the West Bank but the territorial unity essential for the creation of a viable State will be absent.

25. The construction of the wall, the de-Palestinization of the “closed zone” and the expansion and construction of settlements in the “closed zone” make it abundantly clear that the wall is designed to be the border of the State of Israel and that the land of the “closed zone” is to be annexed. Already members of the IDF inform international representatives visiting the “closed zone” that it is part of Israeli territory. This is understandable as, after all, Israelis have free access to the “closed zone” whereas Palestinians require special permits to enter this zone. Further evidence of the fact that Israel views the wall as an international boundary is provided by the construction of checkpoint terminals in the wall which resemble international crossing points in size and structure. (Like the Karni crossing in Gaza, these terminals will also practice “back-to-back” crossing.) Writing in Ha'aretz of 12 July 2005, Knesset Member Ran Cohen stressed that Israelis increasingly refuse to accept the Green Line as the border between Israel and the West Bank. Further proof of Israel's intentions was provided by Mr. Sharon during his visit to Paris on 28 July 2005. Addressing a meeting of the Jewish community, Mr. Sharon stated that thanks to the disengagement from Gaza “Israel has gained unprecedented political achievements” including “a guarantee that the major population centres in Judea and Samaria [that is, the West Bank] will remain part of Israel in any final status agreement; and there will be no return to the 1967 borders...”.

26. In August 2005 Israel will withdraw Jewish settlers from four settlements in the northern West Bank: Ganim, Kadim, Homesh and Sa-Nur. Israeli Government spokesmen have vehemently denied that any further withdrawal of settlers from the West Bank is contemplated.

B. Settler violence

27. Statistics show that settler violence is on the increase. Sixty-eight incidents of settler violence were reported in May 2005 and 67 in June. Prosecutions of settlers are rare, and it seems that settlers are able to terrorize Palestinians and destroy their land with impunity. As on previous visits to Hebron, the Special Rapporteur was subjected to abuse from settlers. The Special Rapporteur also had occasion to visit the settlement at Tel Rumeida in Hebron. This settlement in the middle of Hebron has recently been expanded and there is increased pressure on the part of the settlers to drive out their Palestinian neighbours by a process of terrorization. A visit to the community of At-Tuwani provided further evidence of settler violence. Schoolchildren are beaten and terrorized by settlers on the way to school and wells and fields have been poisoned. Crops have been destroyed, sheep and goats stolen and poisoned. The police and IDF do little to protect cave dwellers, peasants and shepherds in this region.

V. Jerusalem

28. East Jerusalem is not part of Israel. On the contrary, it is occupied territory, subject to the Fourth Geneva Convention. Unfortunately, Israel's illegal attempt at annexation of East Jerusalem has obscured this truth. As a consequence world public opinion tends, incorrectly, to treat Israel's occupation of East Jerusalem as different from that of the West Bank and Gaza.

29. Israel has embarked upon major changes to the character of Jerusalem. In essence, these changes are designed to reduce the number of Palestinians in the city and to increase the Jewish population of the city and thereby to undermine Palestinian claims to East Jerusalem as the capital of an independent Palestinian State. That this is the purpose of the wall in Jerusalem was acknowledged by the Israeli Minister for Jerusalem Affairs, Haim Ramon, on 10 July when he stated that the route of the wall would make Jerusalem "more Jewish". He added, "The Government is bringing security to the city and will also make Jerusalem the capital of a Jewish and democratic State of Israel."

30. Jewish settlements within East Jerusalem are to be expanded. Already there are some 184,000 settlers in East Jerusalem who will find themselves between the wall and the Green Line. Now, the settlement of Ma'aleh Adumim, with a population of 35,000, is to be joined to Jerusalem by some 3,600 housing units to be constructed in the so-called "E1" area. These units will accommodate some 20,000 settlers. New settlements are also being built near Walajeh (Nof Yael), Har Homa (Har Homa II), Jabel Mukabbir (Nof Zion), Abu Dis (Kidmat Zion), Binyamin (Geva Binyamin) and Giv'at Ze'ev (Agan ha-Ayalot) to form a Jewish urban belt around Palestinian East Jerusalem.

31. Palestinian contiguity in East Jerusalem is to be disrupted by the demolition of Palestinian houses, the expansion of settlements and the creation of parks. This is evident in the Silwan region where 88 houses have been subjected to demolition orders to make way for a park. This will further the linking up of Jewish settlements in Silwan and adjacent areas, thereby destroying the contiguity of Palestinian neighbourhoods. Even in the Old City, Jewish settlements are expanding.

32. Some 230,000 Palestinians live in East Jerusalem. The wall in the Jerusalem area is being constructed to transfer many Palestinians with Jerusalem identity documents to the West Bank. This is best seen in the transfer of the Palestinian neighbourhood of Shuafat (which includes 11,000 refugees), and of Salaam and Dar Khamis neighbourhoods in Anata, presently within Jerusalem's municipal boundary, to the West Bank. This will result in the transfer of some 55,000 Palestinians from Jerusalem to the West Bank. To this figure we must add about another 50,000 people who have Jerusalem identity cards who live in the satellite communities of East Jerusalem outside the Jerusalem municipal boundary such as Al-Ram, who migrated to such communities because they could not find housing inside the city owing to the expropriation of land and building restrictions. This means that the wall harms over 40 per cent of East Jerusalem's 230,000 Palestinians. The Israeli historian Tom Segev states, "What is happening today in Jerusalem goes beyond security needs and reflects the essence of the original Zionist dream. Maximum territory, minimum Arabs."

33. In a recent report titled The Jerusalem Powder Keg, the International Crisis Group states:

“Stretching municipal boundaries, annexing Palestinian land and building new Jewish neighbourhoods/settlements, Israel has gradually created a municipal area several times Jerusalem’s earlier size. It has also established new urban settlements outside the municipal boundary to surround the city, break contiguity between East Jerusalem and the West Bank, and strengthen links between these settlements, West Jerusalem and the rest of Israel” (p.i.).

34. The changes described above may serve the political interests of Israel, but they do so at the expense of the Palestinian population. Not infrequently, family members have different identity documents. The wife may have Jerusalem identification while her husband may hold West Bank identification. Whether they will be permitted to live together remains to be seen. At present many Jerusalem identity holders are employed in the West Bank. Uncertainty surrounds the question whether they will be permitted to cross freely into the West Bank or whether they will have to choose between the West Bank and Jerusalem. Access to schools and hospitals will also present serious difficulties.

35. Jerusalem is an historical city of great beauty. The wall has done much to disfigure the city. Those responsible for planning and constructing the wall in Jerusalem have done so with complete disregard for the environment. All this has been done in order to transform Jerusalem into a Jewish city.

VI. The wall, settlements and self-determination

36. In its advisory opinion the International Court of Justice stressed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. In recent times politicians of all persuasions have given support to a two-State solution, with the States of Israel and Palestine living side by side in peace and security. This vision is unattainable without a viable Palestinian territory. The construction of the wall, the expansion of settlements and the de-Palestinization of Jerusalem are incompatible with the two-State solution. Interlocutors within both Israel and the West Bank warned the Special Rapporteur that with the two-State solution becoming increasingly difficult, if not impossible, consideration should be given to the establishment of a binational Palestinian State. The demography of the region increasingly points to such an outcome.

37. In its advisory opinion the International Court of Justice stated that it noted “the assurance given by Israel that the construction of the wall does not amount to annexation and that the wall is of a temporary nature”. The Court, however, considered “that the construction of the wall and its associated regime create a ‘fait accompli’ on the ground that could well become permanent, in which case, and notwithstanding the formal characterization of the wall by Israel, it would be tantamount to de facto annexation” (para. 121). It is highly arguable that this stage has now been reached. The prohibition of the annexation of territory by force is, of course, one of the most fundamental principles of international law.

VII. Other human rights violations

38. The Special Rapporteur has focused in this report on what he considers to be the principal violations of human rights. The wall and settlements seriously undermine the fundamental right of self-determination of the Palestinian people upon which all other rights depend. In large measure, the wall and settlements are a consequence of occupation. The regime of occupation by definition results in a violation of human rights. A prolonged occupation of the kind to which the Palestinian people have been subjected for 38 years inevitably poses a threat to most basic human rights. This is confirmed by the Palestinian experience.

A. Freedom of the person

39. In the past year Israel has released some 900 Palestinian prisoners. In the same period over 1,000 new prisoners have been taken. Consequently, there are still over 8,000 prisoners in Israeli jails. Of this number, some 120 are women. Over 300 children under the age of 18 are in Israeli detention centres. Forty per cent of them have been sentenced to imprisonment and 60 per cent are in pre-trial detention. Over 600 of those imprisoned are in administrative detention, that is, they are persons held without trial. Family visits remain a serious problem. As prisons are situated in Israel and many Palestinians are denied admission to Israel, a majority of prisoners receive no family visits. While the future of Palestinian prisoners from the West Bank and Gaza is subject to scrutiny under the Sharm el-Sheikh Agreement, Palestinian prisoners from East Jerusalem are overlooked. Prison conditions are harsh: prisoners live in overcrowded and poorly ventilated cells which they generally leave for only two hours a day. Allegations of torture and inhuman treatment of detainees and prisoners continue. Such treatment includes beatings, shackling in painful positions, kicking, prolonged blindfolding, denial of access to medical care, exposure to extreme temperatures and inadequate provision of food and water.

40. There are very few prosecutions of IDF soldiers for injury to Palestinians, despite the high number of casualties at the hands of the IDF. The impunity of the IDF was taken one step further in 2005 by a law passed by the Knesset in 2005, with retrospective effect to 2000, which seriously restricts the right of Palestinians to sue for damages incurred during the intifada. Palestinians will only be able to sue for traffic-related claims and cases in which a Palestinian suffered physical harm while being held in military detention.

B. Freedom of movement

41. Checkpoints in both the West Bank and Gaza continue to seriously undermine the freedom of movement. As of April 2005, the number of checkpoints has been reduced from around 680 to 605. However, greater recourse is now made to so-called "flying" checkpoints, that is, temporary military road checkpoints established at random. In May 2005, 368 "flying" checkpoints were recorded and in June 2005 there were 374 "flying" checkpoints. The implementation of the checkpoint regime violates human dignity. The extent to which this occurs is clear from a recent report by MachsomWatch, entitled A Counterview: Checkpoints 2004. MachsomWatch is an organization of some 500 Israeli women drawn from different backgrounds who, in the pursuit of peace in the region, voluntarily monitor the behaviour of the IDF at checkpoints. The cited report states:

“The checkpoint regime is arbitrary and random, and the regulations governing them change constantly, often dependent on the whim of a soldier on duty at the checkpoint... At the checkpoints ... we witness the methodical embittering of the Palestinians’ lives. ... Anyone who has seen the anxious smile on a man’s face as he extends his ID to be checked by an indifferent woman-soldier in the checking-position, cannot forget or disregard the injustice. We document the little humiliations and the tensions, day after day, the ignoring of the Palestinian Other’s humanity, as well as the expression of the overflowing rage of an occupied people” (pp. 8-10).

42. Although curfews are less frequently imposed than in previous years, this method of restricting freedom of movement is still resorted to. In May 2005, 23 curfews were imposed and in June there were 16.

C. Discrimination against women

43. Occupation and the wall unevenly violate women’s rights. Palestinian women are routinely harassed, intimidated and abused by Israeli soldiers at checkpoints and gates. They are humiliated in front of their families and subjected to sexual violence by both soldiers and settlers. There are approximately 120 Palestinian women prisoners of whom 11 are in administrative detention — that is, held without charge or trial. Women prisoners are subjected to gender-based violence while subject to investigation and in detention. Moreover, prison conditions raise concerns for their health and well-being. Restriction of movement owing to the occupation severely impedes Palestinian women’s access to education and health. Restrictions on movement limit opportunities for independence and decrease the number of women seeking formal education or employment as the culture of the region requires women to study and work from home. Women’s health has suffered as a result of their inability to reach health centres. Pregnant women are vulnerable to long waits at checkpoints. A number of unsafe deliveries in which both mothers and infants have died have occurred at checkpoints. From the beginning of the second intifada to March 2004, 55 Palestinian women have given birth at checkpoints and 33 newborns were stillborn at checkpoints, owing to delays or denial of permission to reach medical facilities. Unemployment and poverty resulting from the occupation have been shown to produce divorce and domestic violence. The Israeli Nationality and Entry into Israel Law of 2003 aims to stop family unification when one spouse is a resident of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The result of this law is that thousands of affected family members live separately from each other with no legal means available to unify the family. The only way to maintain the unity of the family is to reside illegally in Israel, in permanent fear of investigation and expulsion. This places an immense burden on the psychological state of Palestinian women. The law, which does not apply to Israeli settlers living in the Occupied Palestinian Territory or to Israeli Jews marrying aliens, institutes a discriminatory system based on national origin and is directed exclusively against Palestinians.

D. Humanitarian crisis

44. The Occupied Palestinian Territory has a population of 3.8 million (2.4 million in the West Bank and 1.4 million in the Gaza Strip). Approximately 42 per cent of the population (1.6 million) are registered refugees. There is a natural increase of 3.5 per cent.

45. Previous reports have drawn attention to the humanitarian crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory resulting from the occupation and the construction of the wall. Unemployment reached 25 per cent (34 per cent in Gaza and 23 per cent in the West Bank) in the last quarter of 2004. This is equivalent to 93,000 unemployed in Gaza and 133,000 in the West Bank. Loss of access to jobs in Israel is a major cause of unemployment. Approximately half of the population, or 1.8 million people, live below the official poverty line of US$ 2.10 per day. Subsistence poverty, that is the inability to afford basic survival, is estimated at 16 per cent. Poverty is higher in Gaza (65 per cent) than in the West Bank (38 per cent). Poverty is the result of growing unemployment, closures, the loss of property caused by IDF house demolitions, land requisitions and the levelling of land. Agricultural incomes have dropped considerably as a result of the destruction of agricultural areas and the isolation of land and wells behind the wall.

46. Closure has limited the ability to access health and education services. The provision of health services has dropped remarkably as a result of restrictions in access. The quality of education has deteriorated because schools have been obliged to shorten teaching hours as a result of wall gate-opening times. Furthermore, children are forced to drop out of school either to help supplement diminishing family incomes or because their parents can no longer afford to send them to school.

47. Palestinians have faced severe difficulties in accessing safe water. Repeated IDF incursions have resulted in the destruction of water and sanitation infrastructure. Moreover, restrictions on movement have prevented Palestinians from reaching water supplies.

48. Although the IDF has discontinued punitive house demolitions and the past six months have not witnessed major house demolitions in the interests of so-called military necessity, there is a substantial shortfall of housing caused by IDF house demolitions in previous years. In Gaza many thousand persons still remain homeless. Houses are still demolished for failure to obtain a building permit. This form of house destruction, known as “administrative” demolitions, is still widely practised, particularly in Jerusalem. As it is virtually impossible for Palestinians to obtain building permits, many houses are built without permits. The occupants of such houses run the risk of arbitrary demolition.

E. Right to a clean environment

49. Many features of the occupation are carried out with scant regard for the environment of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The wall has resulted in the disfigurement of the hills and towns of Palestine. The discharge of sewage from Jewish settlements onto Palestinian land is a serious problem. Many settlements in the West Bank have no form of treatment of industrial or domestic wastewater and the effluent flows into nearby Palestinian valleys without consideration of its environmental impact. Moreover, it is now proposed that solid waste from Israel is to be dumped in the Abu Shusha quarry in the district of Nablus. As noted above, lands in the At-Tuwani district have been deliberately poisoned by settlers.

VIII. The death penalty and the Palestinian Authority

50. The Special Rapporteur's mandate does not extend to human rights violations committed by the Palestinian Authority. It would, however, be irresponsible for a human rights special rapporteur to allow the execution of Palestinian prisoners to go unnoticed. Since 2002, the Palestinian Authority has refrained from carrying out the death penalty. In 2005, however, five Palestinian prisoners have been executed. The level of civilization of a society can be measured by its attitude towards the death penalty. The Special Rapporteur expresses the hope that these executions were aberrations and that the Palestinian Authority will in future refrain from this form of punishment.

IX. The Occupied Palestinian Territory and the international community

51. The withdrawal of settlers from Gaza is a momentous event. It will end the colonization of Gaza, free more land for Palestinians and result in the departure of the IDF from Gaza. It is a positive step and one to be welcomed. Gaza will, however, remain controlled, albeit not colonized. The human crisis in Gaza is likely to continue as the economy will further deteriorate because of Israeli control. Withdrawal from Gaza should not be allowed to divert attention from what is happening in the West Bank. The construction of the wall and the expansion of settlements seriously threaten the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people and undermine prospects for Palestinian statehood. The annexation of Palestinian territory is probably already a fait accompli.

52. After finding that the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and its associated regime are contrary to international law, the International Court of Justice held that States are under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and not to render aid or assistance. This requires that States refuse to recognize or support the permit system for accessing the "closed zone" or accepting goods produced in settlements between the wall and the Green Line. This has particular implications for States members of the European Union that import agricultural goods from Israeli territory. They are obliged to carefully scrutinize the origin of such goods and to refuse to accept produce emanating from the "closed zone".

53. The International Court held that Israel is under an obligation to make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem. In pursuance of this finding the General Assembly in resolution ES-10/15 requested the Secretary-General to establish a register of damage caused to all natural or legal persons who have suffered as a result of the construction of the wall. On 11 January 2005 the Secretary-General wrote to the President of the General Assembly (A/ES-10/294) setting out the legal and institutional framework for such a register. This process has made little progress and appears to have been lost in the bureaucracy of the United Nations. This is unfortunate because the International Court of Justice clearly attached great importance to Israel's obligation to pay compensation for the destruction of homes, orchards, olive groves and agricultural land caused by the construction of the wall.

54. The Security Council is clearly disinclined to place pressure on Israel to implement the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. On 21 July, the Security Council decided not to embark on a consideration of the construction of the wall and the advisory opinion, following a briefing on the situation given to the Council by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Alvaro de Soto (see S/PV.5230 and Resumption 1). European States seem to share this approach. This is evidenced by a report in Ha'aretz of 28 July 2005 which says of a meeting between Mr. Sharon and President Chirac: "Israeli-Palestinian relations hardly came up in the meeting, Israeli participants said. Based on a prior understanding, the French avoided controversial issues, such as construction in West Bank settlements, the location of the separation fence and the (day after) the disengagement."

55. In resolution ES/10-15, the General Assembly invited Switzerland, in its capacity as the depositary of the Geneva Conventions, to conduct consultations and report to the Assembly on Israel's non-compliance with the Fourth Geneva Convention and to consider the possibility of resuming the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention. The Government of Switzerland produced the report cited in paragraph 1 in which it found that there was little support for the convening of a conference, although it found that the majority of States believe that the legal framework for confronting the situation in Palestine was provided by the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. The Government proposed the establishment of two separate dialogue groups, one with Israel, the other with the Palestinian Authority, reporting to the Quartet (see A/ES-10/304, annex, para. 59). This demonstrates the confidence placed in the Quartet. The most recent statement of the Quartet, of 23 June 2005, however, raises the question whether this confidence is well placed. While this statement expresses the concern of the Quartet "over settlement activity", it fails to mention the construction of the wall, the expansion of settlements (as opposed to activity), the disfigurement of Jerusalem, the violation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and self-determination of the Palestinian people (although Palestinian statehood is contemplated). This suggests that the Quartet and the road map process to which it is committed are not premised on the rule of law or respect for human rights. If this is so, the road map runs the risk of repeating the failures of the Oslo process which likewise took no account of human rights considerations. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur is to report on violations of human rights law and international humanitarian law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. This mandate must surely extend to the attitude of States and international organizations to the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. This compels the Special Rapporteur to question the approach of the Quartet.

56. The United Nations finds itself in a particularly difficult position. On the one hand it is a party to the Quartet; on the other hand it is obliged to comply with the advisory opinion of its own judicial organ. Although this opinion may be advisory to States, it accurately reflects the law governing the construction of the wall and may be described as the law of the United Nations. In addition, the International Court held that "the United Nations, and especially the General Assembly and the Security Council, should consider what further action is required to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and the associated regime, taking due account of the present advisory opinion" (A/ES-10/273, advisory opinion, para. 160). This makes it clear that the United Nations is under a legal obligation to take action to bring to an end the construction of the wall. This was confirmed by the General Assembly in resolution ES/10-15 of 20 July 2004.

57. The Government of Israel is determined to defer final status negotiations for as long as possible to enable it to establish as many facts on the ground as possible before such negotiations begin. The international community should be aware of this obvious fact and do its best to ensure that such negotiations commence forthwith. Only a resolution to the conflict which ends Israeli occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the construction of the wall, the expansion of settlements and the de-Palestinization of Jerusalem will lead to an environment in which there is hope for respect for human rights.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
27 September 2006

Original: English

---

Sixty-first session

Agenda item 67 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General***

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of John Dugard, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1997, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council decision 1/102 in which the Council decided to extend, exceptionally for one year, the mandates and the mandate holders of the special procedures of the Commission on Human Rights.

Summary

The central feature of this report is the conflict in and the siege of Gaza. On 25 June 2006, following the capture of Corporal Gilad Shalit by Palestinian militants and the continued firing of home-made Qassam rockets into Israel, Israel commenced military incursions into Gaza and regular shelling of Gaza, causing numerous deaths and injuries, destruction of homes, agricultural land and infrastructure and resulting in the large-scale violation of human rights and international humanitarian law. In particular, Israel has violated the prohibition on the indiscriminate use of military power against civilians and civilian objects. The use of force has been disproportionate and excessive. This is a case of collective punishment of an occupied people in violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention. It is difficult to resist the conclusion that those responsible for this action are guilty of serious war crimes.

The situation in the West Bank has also deteriorated substantially.

---

* The submission of the report is delayed in order to reflect the most updated information and owing to consultations.

The Wall under construction in the Palestinian territory is no longer justified solely as a security measure by Israel but is now portrayed by the new Government of Israel as a political measure designed to annex 10 per cent of Palestinian land situated between the Green Line and the Wall, where some 76 per cent of the Israeli settler population lives. When the Wall is completed, an estimated 60,500 West Bank Palestinians living in 42 villages and towns will be enclosed in the closed zone between the Wall and the Green Line. The 500,000 Palestinians living near the Wall require permits to cross it, and it is estimated that 40 per cent of the applications for permits are refused.

Israel continues its policy of the de-Palestinization of Jerusalem. The Wall is constructed in such a way as to place about a quarter of East Jerusalem's Palestinian population of 230,000 in the West Bank. Such persons will in future require permits to access their employment and to visit friends, hospitals and religious sites in Jerusalem.

Settlements continue to expand, in violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention. The settler population in the West Bank and East Jerusalem now numbers over 440,000.

In south Hebron the low wall under construction will make it difficult for Palestinian communities located between the low wall and the Green Line to access their lands, schools and clinics.

Although Israel has abandoned earlier plans to construct the Wall along the spine of the West Bank and to formally incorporate the Jordan Valley into Israel, it has embarked on a plan to extend control over this area by means of the restriction of movement of Palestinians, the destruction of houses and the establishment of Jewish settlements.

The number of checkpoints has increased, from 376 in August 2005 to over 500. Permits for travel between different parts of the West Bank are granted sparingly and require Palestinians to subject themselves to arbitrary bureaucratic procedures. Nablus and Jenin, in particular, have been seriously affected by checkpoints, and are today in effect imprisoned cities. It seems that the main purpose of many checkpoints is to make Palestinians constantly aware of Israeli control of their lives and to humiliate them in the process. Since the war in Lebanon there has been a further tightening of checkpoints.

The demolition of houses remains a regular feature of the occupation. It has now become the practice to destroy houses in the course of effecting arrests in policing operations. The destruction of houses for reasons other than military necessity is prohibited by international humanitarian law.

The family life of Palestinians is undermined by a number of Israeli laws and practices. Recently, the Israeli High Court upheld a law which prohibits Israeli Arabs who marry Palestinians from living together with them in Israel. The Wall in Jerusalem has also resulted in the separation of families.

More than 10,000 Palestinians, including women and children, are imprisoned in Israeli jails.

The occupation of the Palestinian Territory is responsible for most human rights violations. This occupation is implemented in an unnecessarily harsh fashion by the Israeli authorities.

The humanitarian situation in both the West Bank and Gaza is appalling. At least 4 out of 10 Palestinians live under the official poverty line of less than US$ 2.10 a day and unemployment stands at least 40 per cent. To aggravate matters, the public sector workforce, which accounts for 23 per cent of total employment in the Palestinian territory, is employed but unpaid as a result of the withholding of funds owed to the Palestinian Authority by the Government of Israel, amounting to $50-$60 million per month. In addition, the United States and the European Union have cut off funds to the Palestinian Authority on the ground that Hamas, the party elected to Government in January 2006, is listed under their laws as a terrorist organization. Non-governmental organizations working with the Palestinian Authority have likewise been affected by restrictions on funding.

In effect, the Palestinian people have been subjected to economic sanctions — the first time an occupied people have been so treated. This continues, despite the fact that Israel is itself in violation of numerous Security Council and General Assembly resolutions and has failed to implement the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004.

The Quartet itself has no regard for the advisory opinion and fails even to refer to it in its public utterances. This has substantially undermined the reputation of the United Nations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Although Palestinians have a high regard for dedicated and committed United Nations workers on the ground, they have serious misgivings about the role of the United Nations in New York and Geneva.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	1–5	5
II. The question of occupation . . . . .	6	5
III. Gaza . . . . .	7–31	6
A. Bombardment of public utilities . . . . .	11–12	7
B. Bombardment of public buildings and facilities . . . . .	13	7
C. Closure of borders . . . . .	14–18	7
D. Casualties . . . . .	19	8
E. Military incursions causing death and destruction . . . . .	20	8
F. Shelling and sonic booms . . . . .	21–22	8
G. Targeted assassinations . . . . .	23	9
H. Terrorism by telephone . . . . .	24	9
I. Hospitals and health . . . . .	25–26	9
J. Food and poverty . . . . .	27–28	9
K. Legal assessment of Israeli action . . . . .	29–31	10
IV. The West Bank . . . . .	32–37	11
V. Jerusalem and the Wall . . . . .	38–41	12
VI. Bethlehem and the Wall . . . . .	42	13
VII. Settlements . . . . .	43–48	13
VIII. South Hebron and the “mini-wall” . . . . .	49–50	14
IX. The Jordan Valley . . . . .	51–54	15
X. House demolitions . . . . .	55–56	16
XI. Checkpoints . . . . .	57–59	17
XII. Separation of families . . . . .	60	17
XIII. Administration of justice . . . . .	61–63	18
XIV. Israel, security and human rights . . . . .	64–65	18
XV. The humanitarian crisis and funding of the Palestinian Authority . . . . .	66–70	19
XVI. The advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and the United Nations . . . . .	71–73	20
XVII. Conclusion . . . . .	74–76	21

I. Introduction

1. I visited the Occupied Palestinian Territory (OPT) and Israel from 9 to 17 June 2006 in order to compile information for this report. Shortly after I left the Territory a serious crisis erupted in Gaza following the capture by Palestinian militants of an Israeli soldier, Corporal Gilad Shalit. This new development is described and examined in the context of secondary sources — press reports, reports of non-governmental organizations (NGOs), United Nations publications, etc.

2. During my mission I visited Jerusalem, Gaza, villages in the vicinity of Jerusalem which have been seriously affected by the construction of the Wall, Ramallah, Hebron and communities in the South Hebron Hills, Bethlehem and the Wall near Rachel's Tomb, the village of Wallaja, where house demolitions have occurred, the Jordan Valley, including Jericho and communities whose human rights are affected by Israeli policies and practices, Nablus, including the Balata refugee camp, the village of Jayyous on the perimeter of the Wall and farming communities living close to the Wall, and checkpoints around the city of Nablus and roads in its vicinity.

3. During the visit I spoke with a wide range of persons, both Palestinian and Israeli, about violations of human rights and international humanitarian law. I delivered a lecture at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem sponsored by the Minerva Centre for Human Rights and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC). The lecture, which was attended by more than 100 persons, examined controversial questions of humanitarian law relating to the conflict in OPT. Unfortunately, I had no contact with Israeli officials as the Government of Israel does not recognize my mandate. The Government was, however, aware of my visit and placed no obstacles in the way of the visit.

4. The eruption of violence in Gaza following the capture of Corporal Shalit and the arrest of members of the Palestinian Legislative Council and the Palestinian Authority (see para. 11 below) was followed by Israel's invasion of Lebanon and large-scale violence in Lebanon, Israel and Gaza. It is not the purpose of this report to comment on events in Lebanon and along Israel's northern borders, as that falls outside my mandate. It will, however, fully examine the situation in Gaza. It should be mentioned that the events in Lebanon have to a large extent overshadowed violence in Gaza and along its borders.

5. In the present report "the Wall" is used instead of "barrier" or "fence". This term was carefully and deliberately used by the International Court of Justice in its 2004 advisory opinion on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory of 9 July 2006. I see no reason to depart from this language.

II. The question of occupation

6. Before turning to the substance of my report, there is a preliminary matter of concern which I wish to address. This is the question of occupation. The Government of Israel prefers to avoid acknowledging the fact that OPT, that is both the West Bank and Gaza, including East Jerusalem, is occupied territory. Instead, it prefers to speak about the "disputed territories" and to assert that the withdrawal of settlers and the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) from Gaza in August 2005 has terminated the occupation of Gaza. This is a misconception of both law and fact. The International Court of Justice, the Security Council and the High Court of Israel itself have all asserted that OPT is and remains occupied territory and that, as such, it is governed by a special legal regime. According to this regime, Israel is bound to comply with both international humanitarian law and human rights law in its treatment of Palestinians. It is, admittedly, an unusual occupation in that it has continued for almost four decades. The protracted nature of the occupation does not, however, reduce the responsibility of the occupying Power. On the contrary, it increases its responsibility. The length of the occupation has led some to characterize the situation as one of colonialism or apartheid. Although Israel's conduct at times resembles that of a colonial Power or an apartheid regime, it is more correct to classify Israel as an occupying Power in OPT and to judge its actions in accordance with the international law rules applicable to occupation.

III. Gaza

7. In August 2005 Israel withdrew its settlers and armed forces from Gaza. Statements by the Government of Israel that the withdrawal ended the occupation of Gaza are grossly inaccurate. Even before the commencement of "Operation Summer Rains", following the capture of Corporal Shalit, Gaza remained under the effective control of Israel. This control was manifested in a number of ways. Israel retained control of Gaza's air space, sea space and external borders. Although a special arrangement was made for the opening of the Rafah border crossing to Egypt, to be monitored by European Union personnel, all other crossings remained largely closed. The closure of the Karni crossing for goods for substantial periods had particularly serious consequences for Gaza as it resulted in a denial of access to foodstuffs, medicines and fuel. A proposed scheme which would have allowed Gazans to visit family in the West Bank by means of bus convoys was never implemented. In effect, following Israel's withdrawal Gaza became a sealed off, imprisoned society. The effectiveness of Israel's control was further demonstrated by sonic booms caused by its overflying aircraft, designed to terrorize the population of Gaza, regular shelling of homes and fields along the border and targeted assassinations of militants, which, as in the past, were carried out with little regard for innocent civilian bystanders. The actions of IDF in respect of Gaza have clearly demonstrated that modern technology allows an occupying Power to effectively control a territory even without a military presence.

8. The question whether Gaza remains an occupied territory is now of academic interest only. In the course of the cynically named "Operation Summer Rains" that commenced on 25 June, the IDF has not only asserted its control in Gaza by means of heavy shelling, but has also done so by means of a military presence.

9. On 25 June 2006 a group of Palestinian militants attacked a military base near the Israeli Egyptian border. In retreating, they took Corporal Gilad Shalit with them as captive. They demanded the release of the women and children in Israeli jails in return for his release. This act, together with the continued Qassam rocket fire into Israel, unleashed a savage response from the Government of Israel. In the first place, it arrested 8 Hamas Cabinet ministers and 26 members of the Palestinian Legislative Council in Ramallah. At the time of writing this report, most of them remained in detention. While Israel claims that they are being held because of their support for terrorist activities, it is difficult to resist the notion that they are being held as hostages, in violation of article 34 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention).

10. Israel's assault on and siege of Gaza in the course of "Operation Summer Rains" has taken many forms, described in the following paragraphs.

A. Bombardment of public utilities

11. On 28 June 2006 the Israeli Air Force (IAF) destroyed all six transformers of the only domestic power plant in the Gaza Strip. This plant supplied 43 per cent of Gaza's daily electricity. The rest is provided by the Israel Electrical Corporation. Approximately 700,000 Gazans, out of a population of 1.4 million, initially were without electricity. Currently, the Gaza Electrical Distribution Company (GEDCO) is load-sharing the remaining electricity supply from Israel, but the supply of power to households across the Gaza Strip is intermittent. As most of Gaza's water wells are powered through the national electrical grid, which has been destroyed, generators are being used to power wells, and the daily water supply to Gazan households has been reduced. The present situation relating to the reduction of power is likely to continue for at least another year. Israel's military operations have also destroyed the main water pipelines and sewerage networks. In addition, the frequent closure of the Nahal Oz pipeline, the only pipeline bringing fuel into the Gaza Strip, has affected the use of backup generators to power regular water supplies. Other power transformers have also been bombed.

12. The substantial reduction of the electricity and fuel supply, together with the disruption of water supplies, has impacted severely on the daily life of Palestinians who are without light at night and electricity to do their cooking. The sewers threaten to overflow. Hospitals have been radically affected and are forced to use generators to power life-saving equipment because of power outages.

B. Bombardment of public buildings and facilities

13. Israeli war planes have deliberately targeted public buildings in Gaza. The buildings housing the Ministries of the Interior, Foreign Affairs and the National Economy and the Office of the Prime Minister have all been destroyed. Such action serves no security purpose and can only be construed as an attempt to undermine the institutions of Government. Educational institutions have also been destroyed. Six bridges linking Gaza City with the central Gaza Strip have been destroyed, as have a number of roads. On 28 June IDF occupied Gaza International Airport and destroyed large parts of it.

C. Closure of borders

14. Since 25 June a number of schools have been substantially damaged in the military operations and difficulties are being experienced in repairing these schools in time for the start of the new school year.

15. Although the Rafah crossing is not directly controlled by Israel, IDF prevented European observers responsible for staffing the crossing from reaching it. It has, therefore, been closed since 25 June, only opening for brief periods. The closure of the Rafah crossing for three weeks in July 2006 left more than 3,000 Palestinians stranded on the Egyptian side of the border in harsh conditions, including some 578 people deemed to be “urgent humanitarian cases”, who had been referred for medical treatment abroad. Eight Palestinians died as a result of their being denied proper medical treatment, shelter and water at the crossing.

16. The closure of the Rafah crossing has also had serious consequences for Palestinians on the Gaza side, particularly those living abroad who were in Gaza for family visits.

17. The Karni commercial crossing has been intermittently closed. The import of some food and medical supplies to Gaza has been permitted but the export of goods has been severely curtailed.

18. Israeli naval vessels have prevented Palestinian fishing along the coast, with the result that fish is no longer available in local markets.

D. Casualties

19. Since 25 June some 260 Palestinians (at least half of whom were civilians) have been killed, including 58 children. Some 800 people have been seriously wounded, including children and women. One Israeli soldier has been killed and 26 Israelis injured, including 12 injured by home-made rockets fired from Gaza.

E. Military incursions causing death and destruction

20. Since 25 June IDF has made numerous and repeated incursions into the Gaza Strip, killing civilians and destroying houses. The most serious incursions have been into Beit Hanoun, Beit Lahia, Sajiyeh, Deir el-Balah, the el-Maghazi refugee camp, Rafah and Khan Younis. In the course of these raids, carried out by tanks and bulldozers, houses have been seized and transformed into military bases. These houses have been severely damaged and several hundred houses have been destroyed. Schools run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) have been attacked and damaged. Olive and citrus trees have been uprooted and farmland destroyed in land levelling operations. Roads, water pipes and electricity and telephone poles have been damaged. Many families have been compelled to flee their houses, and it is estimated that some 3,400 Palestinians are presently being sheltered by UNRWA as a result of the military action. Military incursions have been accompanied by heavy shelling and the bombing of houses, resulting in the death of many civilians.

F. Shelling and sonic booms

21. Israel has maintained unrelenting shelling of the Gaza Strip since 25 June. Several thousand shells have been fired, an estimated 200-250 each day. IAF had conducted several hundred aerial bombings and fighter jets have fired air-to-surface missiles. This has been accompanied by F-16s flying low and breaking the sound barrier over Gaza, causing sonic booms that are as loud as the actual bombardments. These sonic booms have caused widespread terror among the population, particularly children. If terrorism has any meaning, then it is surely this.

22. Palestinians are not blameless when it comes to shelling. Militants continue to fire Qassam home-made rockets indiscriminately into Israel, injuring Israeli civilians, damaging civilian infrastructure and causing fear among the civilian population living near the Gaza border. It is estimated that eight to nine rockets are fired each day.

G. Targeted assassinations

23. Targeted assassinations have continued, with the inevitable “collateral damage” to civilians.

H. Terrorism by telephone

24. The Israeli military has resorted to a new method of psychological terror. Palestinians in Gaza are telephoned by Israeli military intelligence agents and warned that their houses will be blown up in less than one hour. This threat is sometimes carried out and sometimes not. This tactic has inevitably caused psychological distress and panic amongst Palestinians. Palestinians forced to leave their homes in this way have become internally displaced persons forced to live in UNRWA school premises.

I. Hospitals and health

25. Hospitals continue to function but are seriously impaired. Generators are being used to operate X-ray departments and operation theatres. Referrals abroad of patients from the Gaza Strip have been severely affected by the present crisis. As noted above, checkpoints have been closed to patients and permits denied. Particularly serious problems have arisen in respect of the Rafah border crossing to Egypt. Essential drugs are also in short supply. On 27 July the Palestinian Authority Ministry of Health reported that 67 of the 473 items on the list of essential drugs were out of stock.

26. Public health is endangered by lack of safe drinking water and sewage leakage and reported cases of diarrhoea have increased by 163 per cent compared with the same period last year. It is feared that communicable diseases like cholera and poliomyelitis will reappear.

J. Food and poverty

27. The poverty level in Gaza stands at 75 per cent, which means that three quarters of the population is unable to feed itself without assistance, a 30 per cent increase in just over a year. This is mainly attributable to the siege. Food insecurity results in part from the absence of purchasing power as few people have sufficient money today to cover their family’s basic food needs. Food prices have inflated and supplies have been reduced as a result of the current operation. As noted above, fish is no longer available as a result of the sea blockade. Wheat flour mills, factories producing food and bakeries have been forced to reduce their production owing to power shortages. Furthermore, the loss of capacity to preserve perishable food in the Gaza heat results in high food losses. Supplies of sugar, dairy products and milk are running extremely low as commercial supplies from Israel are limited.

28. As indicated above, water supplies have been seriously affected as a result of the destruction of the Gaza power plant and the bombing of pipelines. Consequently, drinking water is in short supply. UNRWA and ICRC have been compelled to supply water by means of water tankers.

K. Legal assessment of Israeli action

29. Israel's actions must be assessed in terms of both human rights norms and international humanitarian law. According to the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion cited above, both these regimes are applicable to Israel's conduct in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

30. Israel has violated a number of rights proclaimed in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, particularly the right to life (art. 6), freedom from torture, inhuman or degrading treatment (art. 7), freedom from arbitrary arrest and detention (art. 9), freedom of movement (art. 12) and the right of children to protection (art. 24). It has also violated rights contained in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, notably "the right of everyone to an adequate standard of living for himself and for his family, including adequate food, clothing and housing", freedom from hunger, and the right to food (art. 11) and the right to health (art. 12).

31. Israel has, in addition, violated the most fundamental rules of international humanitarian law, which constitute war crimes in terms of article 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and article 85 of the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflict (Protocol I). These include direct attacks against civilians and civilian objects and attacks which fail to distinguish between military targets and civilians or civilian objects (arts. 48, 51 (4) and 52 (1) of Protocol I); the excessive use of force arising from disproportionate attacks on civilians and civilian objects (arts. 51 (4) and 51 (5) of Protocol I); the spreading of terror among the civilian population (art. 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and art. 51 (2) of Protocol I) and the destruction of property not justified by military necessity (art. 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention). Above all, the Government of Israel has violated the prohibition on collective punishment of an occupied people contained in article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. The indiscriminate and excessive use of force against civilians and civilian objects, the destruction of electricity and water supplies, the bombardment of public buildings, the restrictions on freedom of movement and the consequences that these actions have had upon public health, food, family life and the psychological well-being of the Palestinian people constitute a gross form of collective punishment. The capture of Corporal Shalit and the continued firing of Qassam rockets into Israel cannot be condoned. On the other hand, they cannot justify the drastic punishment of a whole people in the way that Israel has done.

IV. The West Bank

32. Many of Israel's policies and practices in the West Bank seriously impinge upon the human rights of Palestinians. The Wall presently under construction in Palestinian territory, checkpoints and roadblocks, settlements, an arbitrary permit system, the pervasive practice of house demolitions, targeted assassinations, and arrests and imprisonment violate a wide range of civil and political rights. Economic and social rights have also suffered from the humanitarian crisis resulting from the occupation.

The Wall

33. The Wall that Israel is presently building largely in Palestinian territory is clearly illegal. The International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004 asserted that it is contrary to international law and that Israel is under obligation to discontinue construction of the Wall and to dismantle those sections that have already been built forthwith. On 20 July 2004 the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/15 by 150 votes in favour, 6 against and 10 abstentions, in which it demanded that Israel comply with its legal obligations identified in the advisory opinion. The Israeli High Court of Justice, in a judgement delivered in September 2005 in Mara'abe v. the Prime Minister of Israel (HCJ 7957/04), dismissed the advisory opinion, arguing that the International Court of Justice had failed to have regard to the security considerations that had prompted the construction of the Wall. The basis of this judgement has now been undermined by the admission of the Government that the Wall is designed to serve a political purpose and not an exclusively security purpose. The admission that the Wall has in part been built to include West Bank settlements within the Wall and under Israel's direct protection has led the High Court to rebuke the Government for misleading it in the Mara'abe hearing and other challenges to the legality of the Wall.<sup>1</sup> That the purpose of the Wall is to acquire land surrounding West Bank settlements and to include settlements within Israel can no longer be seriously challenged. The fact that 76 per cent of the West Bank settler population is enclosed within the Wall bears this out.

34. On 30 April 2006 the Government of Israel revised the route of the Wall. It will now be 703 km long when completed, rather than 670 km. At present over 50 per cent of the Wall has been completed. When it is finished, an estimated 60,500 West Bank Palestinians living in 42 villages and towns will reside in the closed zone between the Wall and the Green Line. More than 500,000 Palestinians living within 1 km of the Wall live on the eastern side but need to cross it to get to their farms and jobs and to maintain family connections. Eighty per cent of the Wall is built within the Palestinian territory itself and in order to incorporate the Ariel settlement block, it extends some 22 km into the West Bank. At present, there are some 73 gates in the Wall, but only 38 of them are accessible to Palestinians, and only to those with the correct permit.

35. The Wall has serious humanitarian consequences for Palestinians living within the closed zone (the area between the Green Line and the Wall). They are cut off from places of employment, schools, universities and specialized medical care, and community life is seriously fragmented. Palestinians who live on the eastern side of the Wall but whose land lies in the closed zone face serious economic hardship as a result of the fact that they are not able to reach their land to harvest crops or to graze their animals without permits. Permits are not easily granted. A host of obstacles are placed in the way of obtaining a permit. Bureaucratic procedures for obtaining permits are humiliating and obstructive. Although precise figures are not available, it seems that the number of permits refused may conservatively be estimated at 40 per cent. Reasons given for refusing permits range from security to failure to establish land ownership. The latter ground is now more frequently used by Israeli authorities as it has become clear that Palestinians, whose land ownership dates from a chaotic Ottoman system of land tenure, are frequently unable to prove ownership to the satisfaction of Israeli authorities determined to deny permits. The difficulties and humiliation occasioned by the process of applying for permits furthermore deters many Palestinians from applying. The fact that the opening and closure of gates leading to the closed zone are regulated in a highly arbitrary manner and frequently do not open as scheduled aggravates the situation.

---

<sup>1</sup> Haaretz, 14 and 16 June 2006.

36. Obstacles placed in the way of access to the closed zone have seriously affected farming in this zone. At a time when many Palestinians are returning to the land as a result of the non-payment of salaries to civil servants and the closure of many private businesses in the cities, the permit system seriously impacts upon Palestinian employment and livelihood.

37. Nearly 50 per cent of the Palestinian population in the Territory are refugees who fled their homes before Israeli armed forces in previous armed conflicts. Now a new category of internally displaced person is being created by the Wall. This arises from the confiscation of land and property to make way for the Wall, the denial of access to jobs, hospitals, schools and families in the West Bank and the refusal of permits to farm land in the closed zone. There are no comprehensive statistics on the subject. The Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics has estimated that nearly 14,500 persons have been displaced by the Wall and B'Tselem, the Israeli human rights organization, has estimated that the Wall will displace some 90,000 Palestinians. In other regions, the forced displacement of persons by means of human rights violations is labelled ethnic cleansing.

V. Jerusalem and the Wall

38. The 75 km Wall around Jerusalem (of which only 5 km are on the Green Line) is the instrument being used to effect major changes in the city by seeking to ensure that Jerusalem assumes a predominantly Jewish character, which will undermine Palestinian claims to Jerusalem as the capital of an independent Palestinian State. This is being done by constructing the Wall through Palestinian neighbourhoods in East Jerusalem and classifying neighbourhoods on the eastern side of the Wall as belonging to the West Bank. This has serious implications for the human rights of some 230,000 Palestinians living in Jerusalem.

39. First, while Palestinians living on the west side of the Wall will be allowed to retain their Jerusalem identity documents, which entitle them to certain benefits, particularly in respect of social security, they will find it increasingly difficult to travel to cities in the West Bank such as Ramallah and Bethlehem, where many of them are employed. Moreover, if they elect to reside in the West Bank in order to be nearer to their places of work, they risk losing their Jerusalem identity documents and the right to live in Jerusalem because under Israel's so-called centre of life policy, Palestinians must prove that they currently live in the city of East Jerusalem to maintain their Jerusalem residency rights. Residency rights may be withdrawn on political grounds. On 2 July 2006 the Government of Israel revoked the Jerusalem residency permits of four senior Hamas officials living in East Jerusalem.

40. Secondly, those relegated to the West Bank as a result of the construction of the Wall, who number about a quarter of the city's Palestinian population will lose their Jerusalem identity documents and the attendant benefits. They will also require a permit to enter Jerusalem, and will be allowed to enter the city by only 4 of the 12 crossings in the Wall, which will considerably increase their commuting time and impede their access to schools, universities, hospitals, religious sites and places of employment. It is difficult to describe the humiliation of the crossings in the Wall to access Jerusalem. At the main crossing at Kalandiya, now designated a "terminal", punitive bureaucratic procedures are applied that make passage through at peak hours take from one to two hours.

41. The construction of the Wall in order to achieve the Judaization of Jerusalem is a cynical exercise in social engineering that imposes severe hardships on all aspects of Palestinian life. In the words of B'Tselem: "The Barrier's route [in Jerusalem], allegedly intended to prevent the deadly terror attacks, is in fact dictated by ... political considerations ... The result undermines the very rationale of the Barrier as a security measure, and severely violates basic rights"<sup>2</sup>.

VI. Bethlehem and the Wall

42. The historic city of Bethlehem has suffered the same fate as Jerusalem. It is surrounded by a mix of concrete slabs, razor wire fences, trenches and sniper towers which completely undermine the historic character of the city. The Wall has ghettoized Bethlehem and decimated the Palestinian neighbourhood around Rachel's Tomb, which is encircled by a wall designed to protect Jewish worshippers. Most businesses in the area have closed or have been compelled to relocate. The Bethlehem "terminal" resembles that of Kalandiya and restricts movement between Bethlehem and Jerusalem.

VII. Settlements

43. Jewish settlements in the West Bank are illegal. They violate article 49, paragraph 6, of the Fourth Geneva Convention and their illegality has been confirmed by the International Court of Justice in the advisory opinion on the Wall. The Israeli High Court has consistently refused to pronounce on the legality of settlements, which indicates that even Israel's own High Court is unwilling to confer legitimacy on settlements.

44. Despite the illegality of settlements and the unanimous condemnation of settlements by the international community, the Government of Israel persists in allowing settlements to grow. Sometimes settlement expansion occurs openly and with the full approval of the Government. In 2006, the Government has so far invited tenders for the construction of 952 housing units in settlements on the West Bank.<sup>3</sup> More frequently, expansion takes place stealthily under the guise of “natural growth”, which has resulted in Israeli settlements growing at an average rate of 5.5 per cent compared with the average growth rate in Israeli cities of 1.7 per cent. Sometimes settlements expand unlawfully in terms of Israeli law, but no attempt is made to enforce the law. Outposts are frequently established and threats to remove them are not carried out. In 2006 settlers had the audacity to move into apartments in the Upper Modi’in settlement built on land belonging to the neighbouring Palestinian village of Bil’in in flagrant disregard of a High Court injunction against such occupation.

<sup>2</sup> B'Tselem, A Wall in Jerusalem: Obstacles to Human Rights in the Holy City, summer 2006.

45. As a result of expansion, the settler population in the West Bank numbers some 260,000 persons and that of East Jerusalem nearly 200,000. As indicated above, the Wall is presently being built in both the West Bank and East Jerusalem to ensure that most settlements will be enclosed within the Wall. Moreover, the three major settlement blocks of Gush Etzion, Ma’aleh Adumim and Ariel will effectively divide Palestinian territory into cantons, thereby destroying the territorial integrity of Palestine.

46. It is clear from statements of the Government of Israel that the major settlement blocks are destined to remain part of Israel. On 3 May 2006 Prime Minister Olmert told the Knesset that “[t]he achievements of the settlement movement in main concentrations will forever be an integral part of the sovereign state of Israel, along with Jerusalem our united capital”.<sup>4</sup>

47. The proposals of the Government of Israel for “unilateral disengagement”, “convergence” or “realignment”, now in abeyance as a result of the Lebanon war, clearly envisage the unlawful annexation of large portions of Palestinian territory. The euphemisms used to describe this policy should not be allowed to obscure the hard truth.

48. Settler violence continues to be a serious problem. In June 2006 the Palestinian Monitoring Group published a monthly account of settler violence which is illustrative of the problem:

“Israeli settlers attempted to abduct a female university student in the district of Salfit; beat civilians in the city of Hebron as well as other civilians near the settlement of Ma’on; closed a road in the district of Qalqiliya; threw stones at civilian houses in Tel Rumeida neighbourhood in the city of Hebron, and stole a water pump from a house in Tel Rumeida. They burned two civilian vehicles and one truck in the town of Huwara; set fire to wheat crops and olive trees in the villages of Salim near Nablus and Al Jab’a near Bethlehem; and grazed sheep on cultivated land in the district of Hebron.”

VIII. South Hebron and the “mini-wall”

49. Plans to build the Wall in south Hebron have been abandoned. Instead, the projected Wall will largely follow the Green Line. In its place Israel is constructing a road barrier, or “mini-wall”, running along the northern side of settler bypass roads in the region. This wall is approximately 1 m high and is designed to prevent Palestinian vehicles from crossing onto the main road and to give settlers unrestricted use of bypass roads. These restrictions will allow Jewish settlers to move safely between settlements and farther on to Israel without crossing Palestinian land. Twenty-two Palestinian communities and over 1,900 Palestinians will be enclosed between the mini-wall and the Wall itself. The mini-wall will hinder the access of Palestinian shepherds and their 24,000 head of livestock to grazing areas on the other side. The mini-wall will add to the hardships already experienced by Palestinian communities living in south Hebron, which has inadequate clinics, schools and waste disposal facilities. Water must be trucked in when summer begins and rain-fed systems start emptying. The Government of Israel has refused to link Palestinian communities to its water system, which provides water to settlers alone. To aggravate the situation, the Government refuses permits to build houses.

---

<sup>3</sup> Haaretz, 21 September 2006.

<sup>4</sup> Haaretz, 4 May 2006.

50. The plight of Palestinian communities in south Hebron is illustrated by the experience of the village of Tuwani, which I have visited on several occasions. This village is denied electricity, water and sanitary units and is prohibited from building new houses. Moreover, the villagers are subjected to settler violence from nearby Ma'on. Schoolchildren have to be escorted by IDF soldiers to school in order to protect them from the settlers. The settlers are also responsible for poisoning the land.

IX. The Jordan Valley

51. Israel has abandoned earlier plans to build the Wall along the spine of OPT and to formally appropriate the Jordan Valley. It has nevertheless asserted its control over this region, which constitutes 25 per cent of the West Bank, in much the same way as it has done over the closed zone between the Wall and the Green Line on Palestine's western border. That Israel intends to remain permanently in the Jordan Valley is clear from government statements and is further manifested, first, by restrictions imposed on Palestinians and, second, by the exercise of Israeli control and the increase in the number of settlements in the Jordan Valley.

52. Palestinians living in the Jordan Valley must possess ID cards with a Jordan Valley address, and only those persons may travel within the Jordan Valley without Israeli permits. Other Palestinians, including non-resident landowners and workers, must obtain permits to enter the Jordan Valley and in practice such permits are not valid for overnight stays, necessitating daily commuting and delays at checkpoints connecting the Jordan Valley with the rest of the West Bank. This has led to the isolation of the Jordan Valley. Travel restrictions make it difficult for farmers in the Jordan Valley to access markets in the West Bank as their produce is frequently held up at checkpoints, notably at Al Hamra, and perishes in the process. Attempts to sell such produce along the roadside have failed as a result of the destruction of agricultural stalls along the road by IDF.

53. Housing in the Jordan Valley is also a serious problem as most of the Valley is designated as Area C, which means that the Israeli authorities must give permission for the construction of houses. I visited a Bedouin family near Jericho who were faced with a demolition order for their "illegal" house. The vindictive enthusiasm with which IDF carries out its duties in this respect is illustrated by the following amusing, but revealing, incident. I visited a house in the village of Zbeidat on the border of Area C. The owner had planted a row of geraniums outside his house, some of which had extended over into Area C territory. The IDF informed him that he had to remove those geraniums as they had been grown without permission.

54. Most of the land in the Jordan Valley is controlled by Jewish settlements or used as military zones. Only 4 per cent of the Valley is accessible to the 47,000 Palestinians for agricultural and residential use. There are some 8,300 settlers living in the Jordan Valley and their number is growing as a result of the resettlement of settlers from Gaza. Whereas most Palestinian villages are without electricity and water settlers are linked to Israel's electricity and water systems. Moreover, the 8,300 settlers living in the Jordan Valley consume more water each year than the 47,000 Palestinians living in the region.

X. House demolitions

55. The demolition of houses is a regular feature of the occupation, and the bulldozer has become a hated symbol of it. Traditionally, the occupying Power has demolished houses for punitive reasons (where a resident of the house has committed a crime against Israel), military necessity, or for failure to obtain a permit to build. In recent times houses have been demolished for additional reasons: first, to make way for the Wall and second, to carry out arrests of wanted persons. It will be recalled that last year the Israeli High Court forbade the use of Palestinian civilians as human shields in arrest operations. Now, if a wanted person is suspected of being in a particular house and refuses to surrender, the house is bulldozed. I myself witnessed the manner in which houses had been destroyed in this way in the Balata refugee camp near Nablus.

56. For many years Israel has destroyed houses built without permission, arguing that in so doing it is simply applying municipal housing laws in the same way as other developed societies do. Such an argument fails to take account of two factors. First, an occupying Power is constrained from destroying the houses of persons protected by international humanitarian law (see art. 23 (g) of the Hague Regulation concerning the Laws and Customs of War on Land annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907 and article 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention). This applies to Palestinian homes in the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem. Second, permits are refused in such an arbitrary manner, and are refused with such great regularity, that it has become virtually impossible for Palestinians to obtain permits to build houses. The permit system for Palestinians in East Jerusalem is administered in a completely different way from the way it is administered in respect of Israelis. The discriminatory way in which the permit system is implemented in East Jerusalem has recently been highlighted by Meir Margalit in Discrimination in the Heart of the Holy City (2006). During my visit I spent time in the village Al Walaja, which was annexed to East Jerusalem following the 1967 war. The residents have not, however, been given Jerusalem ID documents and requests for building permits have consistently been refused. Recently an attempt has been made to construct the Wall through the village, but this seems to have been abandoned. The Israeli authorities, however, seem determined to bring pressure to bear on the residents of the Ein-Jweisa neighbourhood of Al Walaja to move by threatening them with house demolitions. Between 1985 and 2006, 29 houses have been demolished and at present some 24 homes face demolition orders.

XI. Checkpoints

57. The number of checkpoints, including roadblocks, earth mounds and trenches, has increased from 376 in August 2005 to over 500. These checkpoints divide the West Bank into four distinct areas: the north (Nablus, Jenin and Tulkarem), the centre (Ramallah), the south (Hebron) and East Jerusalem. Within these areas further enclaves have been created by a system of checkpoints and roadblocks. Cities are cut off from each other as a permit is required to travel from one area to another and, again, permits are difficult to obtain. The rules relating to the granting of permits constantly change, particularly with respect to the age of the persons to whom permits are denied. Moreover, bureaucratic procedures for obtaining permits are arbitrary and obstructive. This has worsened since Hamas came to power as those applying for permits must now apply directly to the Israeli Civil Administration because the Government of Israel refuses to cooperate with any Palestinian governmental authority. The permit system also explains the economic decline of OPT as goods and labour cannot move freely.

58. In June 2006 I visited the city of Nablus, which is now completely surrounded by checkpoints that make entrance into and exit from the city impossible for most residents. The Hawara checkpoint, in particular, has achieved notoriety for the harsh manner in which it is administered. In effect, Nablus has become an imprisoned city.

59. Israel justifies checkpoints on security grounds. It is difficult to accept this justification for most checkpoints. After all, the Wall provides an effective security barrier between Israel and OPT and there is a line of checkpoints along the finger of land in which the Ariel settlement block has been established, which should adequately ensure the protection of Israelis. Checkpoints in other areas, such as those surrounding Nablus, therefore seem to serve no security purpose. This suggests that the main purpose of many checkpoints is in fact to make Palestinians constantly aware of Israeli control of their lives and to humiliate them in the process.

XII. Separation of families

60. The right to family life is recognized by all human rights conventions. In OPT it is undermined by Israel in a number of ways. First, the Wall running between Jerusalem neighbourhoods separates Palestinians with Jerusalem identity documents from those with West Bank documents. When husband and wife have separate documents they often have no choice but to separate in order to allow the Jerusalem ID holder to retain his or her benefits. Eighteen per cent of Palestinian households in Jerusalem are separated from the father and 12 per cent of households are separated from the mother. Secondly, the authorities have recently embarked upon a policy of denying access to Palestinians with foreign passports. In previous years, Palestinians with foreign passports have been allowed to live in the West Bank provided that they renewed their visas every three months. This affects some 50,000 Palestinians living in the West Bank who now face a denial of visas.<sup>5</sup> Thirdly, an Israeli law on citizenship prohibits Palestinians who marry Israeli Arabs from living with their spouses in Israel. This law was recently the subject of a controversial decision by the Israeli High Court of Justice which held that the law, which does not apply to Jewish Israelis who marry foreigners, was constitutional on the grounds of security. The Court reasoned that the State was entitled to prevent Palestinians from living with their Israeli spouses in Israel because that might allow Palestinians who threaten the security of Israel to enter the country.

---

<sup>5</sup> Haaretz, 10 July 2006.

XIII. Administration of justice

61. Israel clearly does not ascribe to the policy of winning hearts and minds in the process of administering justice; instead, it shows the iron fist, in the process of making arrests, the treatment of arrested persons and the treatment of prisoners. The situation seems to have worsened since Hamas was elected to office.

62. The making of arrests, as has been shown, is frequently accompanied by the destruction and trashing of property, beatings, the unleashing of dogs in civilian homes, humiliating strip searches and early morning raids. The interrogation of arrested persons continues to be accompanied by a mix of psychological pressure and physical violence. The number of prisoners continues to rise. There are now over 10,000 Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails, including women and children. The position of child prisoners is particularly disturbing as they are often compelled to share cells with adult prisoners and denied education and access to family.

63. The arrest of high-profile figures serves to remind Palestinians that no one is beyond the reach of Israel's power. In March 2006 Israel stormed and largely destroyed the Jericho prison to arrest Ahmed Saadat and his accomplices, immediately after their British and American wardens had withdrawn in violation of a 2002 agreement in which they had undertaken to monitor the detention of Mr. Saadat and others. In June 2006 eight Hamas Cabinet ministers and 26 members of the Palestinian Legislative Council were arrested in Ramallah. In August 2006 Aziz Dweik, Speaker of the Palestinian Legislative Council, Nasser Al-Shaer, Deputy Prime Minister, and Mahmoud Al-Ramahi, Secretary-General of the Palestinian Legislative Council, were arrested in separate raids.

XIV. Israel, security and human rights

64. The litany of violations of human rights and international humanitarian law described in this report is difficult to reconcile with Israel's commitment to the rule of law. This is the paradoxical situation in which Israel finds itself. On the one hand, Israel has a Supreme Court and institutions designed to ensure respect for the rule of law. On the other hand, Israel stands accused of serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law. Israel's response is to dispute the factual assessment of many violations and, where the facts are undisputed, to justify its action as necessary security measures.

65. In many parts of the world there is sympathy for Israel's actions. Israel is seen to be engaged in the war against terror, which justifies departure from accepted human rights norms. Moreover, because of its commitment to the rule of law, Israel is seen to be a benign occupier which reluctantly violates norms of human rights and humanitarian law in the interest of security. Unfortunately, this perception is false. Israel is not a benign occupier of the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem. As has been shown, its actions are often grossly disproportionate to the security threat involved. In addition, its forces execute their tasks in a harsh manner characterized by arbitrariness and vindictiveness. The permit system that regulates the movement of Palestinians is implemented in an arbitrary manner which leaves the applicant entirely at the mercy of the whims of the Israeli bureaucrat charged with the task of granting or refusing permits. Checkpoints are administered in a humiliating manner. Here it is important to stress that the nastiness of soldiers seems to have increased since the election of Hamas and the Lebanon war: soldiers now seem to regard every Palestinian as a potential terrorist to be treated without respect. Little compassion is shown for the sick and the elderly and there are numerous incidents of women giving birth at checkpoints while soldiers refuse them permission to travel to hospitals. Arrests are accompanied not only by the destruction of property but by the trashing of property. (The Special Rapporteur visited an UNRWA school in the Balata refugee camp which had been seized as a base for military activities in the camp in February 2006. School property was deliberately trashed and graffiti scrawled on the walls in a manner that could not possibly be justified on grounds of security.) Houses built without permits are unnecessarily destroyed and sometimes destroyed while court actions are pending. Settler violence and vandalism are openly tolerated by IDF. Communities are refused water and electricity when those services could easily be provided by linking up with the supply to neighbouring settlements. No regard is paid to family life. And so on. In short, the occupation is not administered in a humane manner. Israeli dissidents who have served in the system (for instance, soldiers, who formed a dissident group, "Breaking the Silence", in 2004) and those who monitor the occupation (such as Machsom Watch) have borne witness to the callous manner in which the occupation is implemented.

XV. The humanitarian crisis and funding of the Palestinian Authority

66. The humanitarian crisis in Gaza is dealt with separately in the section on Gaza above. The appalling humanitarian situation in that part of OPT should not be allowed to distract attention from the serious humanitarian crisis in OPT as a whole. Four out of 10 Palestinians live under the official poverty line of less than US$ 2.10 a day. The level of unemployment is difficult to determine. The International Labour Organization has estimated the jobless rate to be over 40 per cent of the Palestinian labour force. This, however, does not take account of the fact that the public sector, which represents 23 per cent of total employment in OPT, is employed but unpaid.

67. In large measure the humanitarian crisis is the result of the termination of funding of the Palestinian Authority since Hamas was elected to office. In the first instance the Government of Israel is withholding from the Palestinian Authority VAT monies amounting to $50-60 million per month which it collects on behalf of the Authority on goods imported into OPT. In law Israel has no right to refuse to transfer this money, which belongs to the Palestinian Authority under the 1994 Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (Paris Protocol). Predictably, Israel justifies its action on security grounds. The shortfall in funds for the Palestinian Authority has been accompanied by a drastic reduction in funding on the part of donor countries and agencies. This has had a serious impact on the work of NGOs which have had to suspend or cancel their projects related to the work of the Authority. As a result of the fact that Hamas is classified as a terrorist organization by both the United States of America and the European Union, the United States Treasury has decided to prohibit transactions with the Palestinian Authority. This has had a profound effect on banks, which are not prepared to transfer funds to the Authority, its agencies and its projects and to NGOs engaged in projects with the Authority. Some projects involving the Authority continue to be funded (e.g. World Bank projects) and the European Union has set up a Temporary International Mechanism, endorsed by the Quartet, for the relief of Palestinians employed in the health sector, the uninterrupted supply of utilities, including fuel, and the provision of basic allowances to meet the needs of the poorest segment of the population.

68. Despite limited funding attempts of this kind, it is clear that the Palestinian economy, which has become heavily dependent on donor funding since 1994, has suffered dramatically as a result of the withholding of funds by Israel and the international community since the election of Hamas. This economic strangulation has had a severe impact on the social and economic rights of the Palestinian people. About 1 million of Palestine's 3.5 million people are directly affected by the non-payment of salaries to some 152,000 civil servants (and their families), but the whole population has suffered indirectly. Moreover, as the Palestinian Authority is responsible for over 70 per cent of schools and 60 per cent of health-care services in the Territory, both education and health care have suffered substantially. In August 2006 civil servants embarked on a strike against non-payment of their salaries which has further aggravated the socioeconomic crisis.

69. Health care is examined more fully in the section on Gaza. However, it is important to stress that cuts in funding have impacted seriously on health care throughout OPT. The failure to pay the salaries of health-care workers has led to absenteeism because workers are simply unable to pay for transportation to the workplace. Drugs and vaccines are in short supply. Hospitals are unable to provide adequately for cancer and kidney dialysis patients. The transfer of patients to hospitals in other parts of the West Bank, and particularly to Israel and Egypt, has become particularly difficult as a result of closures and the refusal of permits.

70. In effect, the Palestinian people have been subjected to economic sanctions — the first time an occupied people have been so treated. This is difficult to understand. Israel is in violation of major Security Council and General Assembly resolutions dealing with unlawful territorial change and the violation of human rights and has failed to implement the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, yet it escapes the imposition of sanctions. Instead, the Palestinian people, rather than the Palestinian Authority, have been subjected to possibly the most rigorous form of international sanctions imposed in modern times. It is interesting to recall that the Western States refused to impose meaningful economic sanctions on South Africa to compel it to abandon apartheid on the grounds that that would harm the black people of South Africa. No such sympathy is extended to the Palestinian people or to their human rights.

XVI. The advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and the United Nations

71. In 2004 the International Court of Justice held that the Wall that Israel is presently building in Palestinian territory is illegal and should be dismantled. In its advisory opinion the Court also found a number of other Israeli practices (such as the establishment of settlements) to be contrary to international law. Two years have passed, and nothing has been done to give effect to the findings of the Court. To aggravate matters, the Wall does not feature in any way whatsoever in the regular utterances of the Quartet. It is as if no opinion had been given.

72. In 2004 the General Assembly, in its resolution ES-10/15, instructed the Secretary-General to establish a register of damages arising from the construction of the Wall. Two years later, this register still does not exist, raising serious doubts about whether its structure, goals and methods of operation will comply with the advisory opinion.

73. The advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice is an authoritative pronouncement of the judicial organ of the United Nations, which has been endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution ES-10/15. As an advisory opinion, it is not binding upon States. It is, however, a definitive statement of the law as far as the United Nations is concerned, and it must guide the United Nations in the same way as the advisory opinion of 21 June 1971 on the Legal Consequences for States of the Continuing Presence of South Africa in Namibia guided the political organs of the United Nations in their handling of the Namibian question. As a member of the Quartet, the United Nations is duty bound to persuade that group to at least make reference to the advisory opinion of the Court in its regular statements. If it fails in this endeavour, it must at least express its dissatisfaction with the failure of the Quartet to be guided by the advisory opinion and to make reference to it.

XVII. Conclusion

74. This report does not make pleasant reading. Israel is in violation of important norms of human rights and international humanitarian law. While it is readily conceded that Israel faces a security threat and is entitled to defend itself, it must not be forgotten that the root cause of the security threat is the continued occupation of a people that wishes to exercise its right of self-determination in an independent State. The need to bring this situation to an end is recognized by the international community, which has delegated power to the Quartet, comprising the United Nations, the European Union, the United States of America and the Russian Federation, to facilitate a peaceful settlement in the form of the creation of a Palestinian State. Unfortunately, at present this goal seems to have been lost to view as the Quartet turns to punitive measures designed to compel Hamas to change its ideological stance, or to bring about regime change. This is clear from the Quartet's statement of 9 May 2006. Whether the United Nations is in law authorized to make itself a party to economic coercion through the Quartet without following its own procedures under the Charter is questionable. In any event, diplomacy has given way to coercion.

75. It is pointless for the Special Rapporteur to recommend to the Government of Israel that it show respect for human rights and international humanitarian law. More authoritative bodies, notably the International Court of Justice and the Security Council, have made similar appeals with as little success as have had previous reports of the Special Rapporteur. It also seems pointless for the Special Rapporteur to appeal to the Quartet to strive for the restoration of human rights, as neither respect for human rights nor respect for the rule of law features prominently on the agenda of this group, as reflected in its public utterances. In these circumstances, the Special Rapporteur can only appeal to the wider international community to concern itself more actively with the plight of the Palestinian people.

76. The image and reputation of the United Nations has, sadly, suffered in the occupied Palestinian territories. While there is high regard for dedicated and committed United Nations workers on the ground, the same cannot be said for the United Nations in New York and Geneva. Palestinians are dismayed by the inability of the Security Council to take action to protect human rights, as evidenced by the veto of an even-handed draft Security Council resolution on Gaza on 12 July 2006. The political organs of the United Nations need to show more concern for the human rights of Palestinians. Reports such as the present one record the violations of human rights and humanitarian law, but real action on the part of the Organization is essential at this troubled time.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
17 August 2007

Original: English

---

Sixty-second session

Item 72 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, John Dugard, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/62/150.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, which has been recognized by the political organs of the United Nations, the International Court of Justice and Israel, is to be exercised in the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza, which together form the Palestinian self-determination unit. The exercise of this right is threatened by the separation of the West Bank and Gaza resulting from the seizure of power by Hamas in Gaza in June 2007 and seizure of power by Fatah in the West Bank. Every effort must be made by the international community to ensure that Palestinian unity is restored. Without unity the right to self-determination cannot be fully realized.

This year witnessed the fortieth anniversary of the occupation of the Palestinian territory. Israel's obligations as occupying Power have not diminished as a result of the prolonged nature of the occupation. On the contrary, these obligations have increased as a result of Israel's illegal actions within the occupied territory. It is suggested that the International Court of Justice be asked to render an advisory opinion on the legal consequences of prolonged occupation for the occupied people, the occupying Power and third States.

Israel remains an occupying Power in respect of Gaza. Arguments that Israel ceased its occupation of Gaza in 2005 following the evacuation of its settlements and the withdrawal of its troops take no account of the fact that Israel retains effective control over Gaza by means of its control over Gaza's external borders, airspace, territorial waters, population registry, tax revenues and governmental functions. The effectiveness of this control is emphasized by regular military incursions and rocket attacks. Israel's conduct in respect of Gaza must therefore be measured against the standards of international humanitarian law and human rights law. In the past year Israel has violated important norms of international humanitarian law and human rights law by undertaking military action against civilian targets and by creating a humanitarian crisis by means of the closure of Gaza's external borders. In law Israel is obliged to cease these actions. Other States that are a party to the siege of Gaza are likewise in violation of international humanitarian law.

The human rights situation in the West Bank may improve as a result of the rapprochement between the emergency Government of President Abbas, under the prime ministership of Salam Fayyad, and Israel, the United States and the Quartet, following the takeover of Gaza by Hamas. Already 255 prisoners have been released, US$ 119 million of Palestinian tax funds transferred to the Palestinian Authority and amnesty granted to 178 Fatah militants. Despite these moves, and promises of further measures to improve the lives of Palestinians from Israel, the United States and the Quartet, large-scale violations of human rights and international humanitarian law continue in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. The construction of the wall (or barrier) continues; settlements continue to expand; checkpoints remain in force; the Judaization of Jerusalem continues; and the de facto annexation of the Jordan Valley is unaffected. Military incursions, accompanied by arrests, continue unabated. House demolitions remain a feature of life in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

The Secretary-General of the United Nations has established a Board to register Palestinian claims for damages arising from the construction of the wall. Serious questions are asked about how the Board will operate.

Violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, together with Israel's refusal to transfer tax moneys due to the Palestinian Authority and the imposition of banking restrictions by the United States, have had a serious impact on the humanitarian situation in the West Bank. Poverty and unemployment have reached their highest level; health and education are undermined by military incursions, the wall and checkpoints; and the entire social fabric of society is threatened.

There are some 10,000 Palestinian political prisoners in Israeli jails and prisoners are treated in an inhuman and degrading manner. The extrajudicial killing of suspected militants by means of rocket fire continues unabated.

While United Nations agencies and personnel advance development and protect human rights on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, serious questions are today asked about the role of the Secretary-General in the Quartet. The Quartet, comprising the United Nations, the European Union, the Russian Federation and the United States, is today largely responsible for furthering the peace process in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. This body, which is in practice led by the United States, has shown little regard for promoting human rights or international humanitarian law and is indirectly responsible for imposing economic sanctions on the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In May 2007 the former United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Envoy to the Quartet, Alvaro de Soto, declared that the Quartet, under the influence of the United States, had failed the Palestinian people and called upon the Secretary-General to seriously reconsider membership of the United Nations in the Quartet.

The Special Rapporteur appeals to the Secretary-General to press the Quartet to be guided by human rights law, international humanitarian law, the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and considerations of fairness and even-handedness in its dealings with the Occupied Palestinian Territory. If this cannot be done the United Nations should withdraw from the Quartet.

Finally, the Special Rapporteur calls upon the General Assembly to request the International Court of Justice to give a further advisory opinion on the consequences of prolonged occupation for the occupied people, the occupying Power and third States.

Contents

	Paragraphs	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	1–2	5
II. Self-determination . . . . .	3–5	5
III. Israel’s occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with special reference to Gaza. . . . .	6–24	6
IV. Human rights in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. . . . .	25–42	12
A. The wall . . . . .	27–32	13
B. Settlements and settlers . . . . .	33–34	15
C. The Jordan Valley . . . . .	35–36	16
D. Checkpoints and roadblocks as obstacles to freedom of movement . . . . .	37–38	16
E. Military incursions . . . . .	39	17
F. Humanitarian situation . . . . .	40–42	17
V. Violation of the prohibition on arbitrary detention, inhuman treatment and extrajudicial executions . . . . .	43–45	18
VI. The role of the United Nations in the protection of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory . . . . .	46–50	19
VII. Recommendations . . . . .	51–57	21

I. Introduction

1. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (OPT) is to investigate, study and report on the extent to which human rights are observed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. His mandate does not require him to report on the politics of OPT. Indeed he has been admonished by some States, following previous reports, for exceeding his mandate by trespassing on the political terrain. He is therefore fully aware of this limitation in respect of his mandate. On the other hand, there is a twilight zone between human rights and politics, one within which the two interact, and one which must fall within the concern of the present mandate. Unhappily, this area has grown in size and continues to grow. Today most of the subjects designated as “political” have a human rights dimension. The political rift between the West Bank and Gaza, the economic strangulation of Gaza, the ongoing seizure of Palestinian land by the construction of the wall and the expansion of settlements, incursions by the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) into Gaza and the West Bank, the creeping annexation of the Jordan Valley, the treatment of refugees, the roadblocks and checkpoints of the West Bank and the Judaization of Jerusalem are all political issues which at the same time raise important points of human rights law and international humanitarian law. The political actions of international organizations, such as the United Nations and the European Union, also have implications for human rights. Issues of this kind cannot be ignored if an honest account is to be given of the present human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

2. The present report will focus on four subjects: the right of self-determination of the Palestinian people; the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem; the violation of human rights and international humanitarian law by the occupying Power; and the action of international organizations in the furtherance and denial of human rights. The Special Rapporteur has visited the Occupied Palestinian Territory twice a year since assuming his mandate in 2001. He last visited the region in December 2006, but has unfortunately been unable to visit the Occupied Palestinian Territory since then. He plans, however, to visit the Occupied Palestinian Territory before presenting this report.

II. Self-determination

3. That the Palestinian people have the right of self-determination cannot be disputed. Such a right has been recognized by the Security Council, the General Assembly, the International Court of Justice and Israel itself. In the advisory opinion of 9 July 2004 of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory the International Court of Justice declared that “[A]s regards the principle of the right of peoples to self-determination, the Court observes that the existence of a ‘Palestinian people’ is no longer in issue.”<sup>1</sup> On 1 December 2006 the General Assembly adopted resolution 61/25 in which it stressed the need for “the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to their independent State”. (See also resolution 61/152 of 19 December 2006.)

---

<sup>1</sup> Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 118.

4. The territory of the self-determination unit within which this right is to be exercised clearly includes the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza. This is implicit in much of the language of United Nations resolutions that proclaim the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. It is placed beyond all doubt by the fact that the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people is asserted in the context of a “two State solution” that is, one “where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders”.<sup>2</sup> In asserting such a solution the Security Council and the General Assembly contemplate one Palestinian State for the Palestinian people. This is emphasized by the calls for “the establishment of a permanent physical link between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank”.<sup>3</sup>

5. The right of the Palestinian people to self-determination has been denied and obstructed for nearly 60 years by Israel. Now it is threatened by the political separation of the West Bank and Gaza resulting from the seizure of power in Gaza by Hamas in June 2007 followed by the seizure of power in the West Bank by Fatah. The carefully brokered Government of Palestinian national unity has been destroyed by the internecine conflict in May and June in which some 200 Palestinians, mostly belonging to Fatah, were killed. At the time of writing (August), there is no immediate prospect of reconciliation between Hamas and Fatah. This is a matter of deep concern to the Special Rapporteur as the right to self-determination is a central and core human right. It must also be a matter of concern to the Quartet, the United Nations, the European Union and other international institutions committed to the realization of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. Such a concern should not take the form of support — political, economic or military — for one faction at the expense of the other but rather for reconciliation between the two factions so that the right to self-determination may be realized within the 1967 borders of the Palestinian self-determination unit, that is including the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza. Suggestions that the West Bank be politically tied to Jordan or Gaza linked to Egypt would seriously undermine the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination as it has evolved over the past decades. Unhappily, the Quartet (which embraces the United Nations) is, at the time of writing, making little attempt to promote Palestinian national unity. On the contrary, it pursues a divisive policy of preferring one faction over the other; of speaking to one faction but not the other; of dealing with one faction while isolating the other.

III. Israel’s occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with special reference to Gaza

6. The Palestinian Territory has been occupied for so long — 40 years — that there is a tendency in certain quarters to overlook this reality and to treat the Occupied Palestinian Territory as an “unoccupied” entity. This leads to the perception of Israel and Palestine as two States poised against each other, with Israel as the victim and Palestine as a neighbouring aggressive, terrorist State. This, of course, is very far from the truth. The Palestinian Territory, including the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza, remains occupied territory, occupied by Israel.

---

<sup>2</sup> Security Council resolutions 1397 (2002) and 1515 (2003); General Assembly resolution 61/25.

<sup>3</sup> General Assembly resolution 61/25.

Insofar as there is a “victim” party, it is Palestine as inevitably an occupied party has such a status vis-à-vis the occupier.

7. That Israel is the occupier of the Palestinian Territory, subject to the obligations imposed by international law as an occupying Power, was reaffirmed by the International Court of Justice in the Wall opinion when it held that the Palestinian territories (including East Jerusalem) “remain occupied territories and Israel has continued to have the status of an occupying Power”.<sup>4</sup> The consequence of this, said the International Court, was that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention) applies to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as do the International Covenants on Human Rights of 1966.<sup>5</sup>

8. Israel’s obligations have not diminished as a result of the prolonged nature of the occupation.<sup>6</sup> On the contrary, they have increased as a result of the nature of Israel’s occupation which has given rise to the argument that Israel’s occupation has over the years become tainted with illegality.<sup>7</sup> In these circumstances, the Special Rapporteur proposed in his report to the Human Rights Council in March 2007 (A/HRC/41/17) that the International Court of Justice be asked to give a further advisory opinion, on the legal consequences of prolonged occupation. The Court might be asked to consider the legal consequences of a prolonged occupation that has acquired some of the characteristics of apartheid and colonialism and has violated many of the basic obligations imposed on an occupying Power. Has it ceased to be a lawful regime, particularly in respect of “measures aimed at the ‘occupant’s own interests’”.<sup>8</sup> And, if this is the position, what are the legal consequences for the occupied people, the occupying Power and third States? Such an opinion might not only produce legal clarity on the consequences of Israel’s occupation of the Palestinian Territory but also put further pressure on the international community to compel Israel to comply with its obligations as occupying Power. It is true that the 2004 advisory opinion on the wall has to date had little effect. However, it must be remembered that the United Nations requested four advisory opinions from the International Court of Justice to guide it in its approach to South Africa’s occupation of South West Africa/Namibia.

9. The Wall advisory opinion was concerned with the construction of a wall in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. As the Court was not asked to pronounce on the legal status of Gaza it, possibly, confined its reaffirmation of the occupied status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory to the West Bank and East Jerusalem.<sup>9</sup> This fact, together with the evacuation of Israeli settlements and the withdrawal of the permanent IDF presence from Gaza in 2005, has given rise to the argument that Gaza is no longer occupied territory. On 15 September 2005 Prime Minister Sharon told the General Assembly that Israel’s withdrawal from Gaza meant the end of its

<sup>4</sup> Advisory Opinion, op. cit., para. 78.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., paras. 101, 111 and 112.

<sup>6</sup> See A. Roberts, “Prolonged military occupation: the Israeli occupied territories since 1967” American Journal of International Law, vol. 84 (1990), pp. 55-57 and 95.

<sup>7</sup> O. Ben-Naftali, A. M. Gross and K. Michaeli, “Illegal occupation: framing the Occupied Palestinian Territory”, Berkeley Journal of International Law, vol. 23, No. 3 (2005), pp. 551-614.

<sup>8</sup> E. Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (Princeton, Princeton University Press, 1993), p. 216.

<sup>9</sup> Advisory Opinion, op. cit., para. 101.

responsibility for Gaza. Subsequently, in submissions before the Israeli High Court, the Government of Israel has taken the position that it no longer occupies Gaza and that it is no longer bound by international humanitarian law in its actions vis-à-vis Gaza residents. Recently, on 8 July, Israel's Ministerial Committee for Legislative Affairs approved a draft bill recognizing Gaza as "a foreign entity". Essentially, Israel's position is that responsibility for the civilian population of Gaza, including the functioning of Gaza's economy, is the sole responsibility of the Palestinian Authority.

10. The argument that Israel's occupation of Gaza has come to an end is not supported by law or fact. This is emphasized by a study entitled Disengaged Occupiers: The Legal Status of Gaza, written by Sari Bashi and Kenneth Mann of Gisha, The Legal Center for Freedom of Movement, an Israeli non-governmental organization (NGO), published in January 2007. This study shows, convincingly, that the test under international law for deciding whether a territory is occupied is not the permanent ground presence of the occupying Power's military in the occupied territory, but effective control.<sup>10</sup> Technological developments have made it possible for Israel to assert control over significant aspects of civilian life in Gaza without a permanent troop presence. This is done by:

(a) Substantial control of Gaza's six land crossings. The Erez crossing is effectively closed to Palestinians wishing to cross to Israel or the West Bank. The Rafah crossing between Egypt and Gaza, which is regulated by the Agreement on Movement and Access entered into between Israel and the Palestinian Authority on 15 November 2005 (brokered by the United States), has been closed by Israel for lengthy periods since June 2006. The main crossing for goods at Karni is strictly controlled by Israel and since June 2006 this crossing too has been largely closed, with disastrous consequences for the Palestinian economy;

(b) Control through military incursions, rocket attacks and sonic booms. Sections of Gaza have been declared "no-go" zones in which residents will be shot if they enter;

(c) Complete control of Gaza's airspace and territorial waters;

(d) Control of the Palestinian Population Registry. The definition of who is "Palestinian" and who is a resident of Gaza and the West Bank is controlled by the Israeli military. Even when the Rafah crossing is open, only holders of Palestinian identity cards can enter Gaza through the crossing; therefore control over the Palestinian Population Registry is also control over who may enter and leave Gaza. Since 2000, with few exceptions, Israel has not permitted additions to the Palestinian Population Registry;

(e) Control of the ability of the Palestinian Authority to exercise governmental functions. Israel exercises control over the ability of the Palestinian Authority to provide services to Gaza and West Bank residents and the functioning of its governmental institutions, including control over the transfer of tax revenues which amount to 50 per cent of the Palestinian Authority's operating income. Moreover, Gaza and the West Bank constitute two parts of a single territorial unit, with a unified and undifferentiated system of civilian institutions spread throughout

---

<sup>10</sup> See United States of America v. Wilhelm List et al. (The Hostages Case) United Nations War Crimes Commission, Law Reports of Trials of War Criminals, vol. III, 1949, p. 56; Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda, I.C.J. Reports 2005, paras. 173 and 174.

Gaza and the West Bank, funded from the same central budget and run by the same central authority. Therefore, Israel's continued direct control over the West Bank is a form of indirect control over Gaza.

11. The fact that Gaza remains occupied territory means that Israel's actions towards Gaza must be measured against the standards of international humanitarian law and human rights law.

12. Since June 2006 Israel has engaged in both large-scale military operations and brief military incursions in Gaza.

13. In the course of Operations "Summer Rains" and "Autumn Clouds" between June and November 2006, IDF carried out 364 military incursions into different parts of Gaza, accompanied by persistent artillery shelling and air-to-surface missile attacks. Missiles, shells and bulldozers destroyed, or caused serious damage to, homes, schools, hospitals, mosques, public buildings, bridges, water pipelines and sewage networks. On 27 June the Israeli Air Force destroyed all six transformers of the only domestic power plant in the Gaza Strip, which supplied 43 per cent of Gaza's daily electricity, and this resulted in depriving half of the population of Gaza of electricity for several months. Citrus groves and agricultural lands were levelled by bulldozers. And in the first phase of "Operation Summer Rains" F-16s flew low over Gaza, breaking the sound barrier and causing widespread terror among the population. Thousands of Palestinians were displaced from their homes as a result of Israel's military action.

14. Beit Hanoun in northern Gaza, with a population of 40,000, was subjected to particularly vicious military action in November in the course of "Operation Autumn Clouds". During a six-day incursion 82 Palestinians, at least half of whom were civilians (including 21 children), were killed by IDF. More than 260, including 60 children, were injured and hundreds of males between the ages of 16 and 40 were arrested. Forty thousand residents were confined to their homes as a result of a curfew as Israeli tanks and bulldozers rampaged through the town, destroying 279 homes, an 850-year-old mosque, public buildings, electricity networks, schools and hospitals, levelling orchards and digging up roads, water mains and sewage networks. Israel's assault on Beit Hanoun culminated in the shelling of a home which resulted in the killing of 19 persons and the wounding of 55 persons on 8 November 2006. The house, situated in a densely populated neighbourhood, was the home of the Al-Athamnah family, which lost 16 members on that fateful day. Of the 19 killed, all civilians, seven were women and eight children. Unfortunately, Israel has refused to accept any international investigation into this matter. It refused to allow a Human Rights Council-mandated mission which was to have been led by Archbishop Desmond Tutu to enter Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The failure of Israel to allow an international investigation of the killing of 19 persons in Beit Hanoun, or to undertake an impartial investigation of its own, is regrettable as it seems clear that the indiscriminate firing of shells into a civilian neighbourhood with no apparent military objective constituted a war crime.

15. There have been sporadic military incursions into Gaza for the past months. In the period 20 to 27 June 2007 there were seven IDF incursions into Gaza resulting in at least 17 Palestinian deaths (including six civilians, among them two children) and 39 injuries. In the period 27 June to 3 July, 19 Palestinians were killed: eight by an IDF tank shell (including a 10-year-old boy), seven by Israeli air strikes, three during armed clashes with IDF soldiers and one of wounds sustained earlier. In addition 43 Palestinians were injured during IDF operations. On 5 July 11 Palestinians were killed and 25 wounded as a result of an Israeli attack involving aircraft, tanks and bulldozers.

16. Israel has largely justified its attacks and incursions as defensive operations aimed at preventing the launching of Qassam rockets into Israel, the arrest or killing of suspected militants or the destruction of tunnels. Clearly the firing of rockets into Israel by Palestinian militants without any military target, which has resulted in the killing and injury of Israelis, cannot be condoned and constitutes a war crime.<sup>11</sup> Nevertheless, serious questions arise over the proportionality of Israel's military response and its failure to distinguish between military and civilian targets. It is highly arguable that Israel has violated the most fundamental rules of international humanitarian law, which constitute war crimes in terms of article 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and article 85 of the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflict (Protocol I). These crimes include direct attacks against civilians and civilian objects and attacks which fail to distinguish between military targets and civilians and civilian objects (articles 48, 51 (4) and 52 (1) of Protocol I); the excessive use of force arising from disproportionate attacks on civilians and civilian objects (articles 51 (4) and 51 (5) of Protocol I); the spreading of terror among the civilian population (article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and article 51 (2) of Protocol I); and the destruction of property not justified by military necessity (article 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention).

17. Gaza has become a besieged and imprisoned territory as a result of the economic sanctions imposed by Israel and the West, following the election success of Hamas in the January 2006 elections, the capture of Corporal Gilad Shalit in June 2006 and the seizure of power by Hamas in June 2007. External borders have been mainly closed and only opened to allow a minimum of imports and exports and foreign travel. This has produced a humanitarian crisis, one carefully managed by Israel, which punishes the people of Gaza without ringing alarm bells in the West. It is a controlled strangulation that seriously violates norms of human rights law and humanitarian law but which apparently falls within the generous limits of international toleration.

18. There are six crossings into Gaza, all of which are controlled by Israel. Rafah, the crossing point for Gazans to Egypt, and Karni, the commercial crossing for the import and export of goods, are the principal crossing points. They are the subject of the Agreement on Movement and Access, which provides for Gazans to travel freely to Egypt through Rafah and for a substantial increase in the number of export trucks through Karni. Since 25 June 2006, following the arrest of Corporal Shalit, and more particularly since mid-June 2007, following the Hamas seizure of power in Gaza, the Rafah crossing has been closed for lengthy periods of time as a result of Israel's refusal to allow members of the European Border Assistance Mission, responsible for operating Rafah, to carry out their task. From mid-June to early August some 6,000 Palestinians were stranded on the Egyptian side of the border, without adequate accommodation or facilities and denied the right to return home. Over 30 people died while waiting. No regard is had to the hardships suffered by ordinary Palestinians by Israel in its decision to close the Rafah crossing. The Karni crossing has likewise been closed for long periods of time during the past 18 months, and more particularly since mid-June 2007.

---

<sup>11</sup> See Human Rights Watch, Indiscriminate Fire. Palestinian Rocket Attacks on Israel and Israeli Shelling in the Gaza Strip (July 2007).

19. The siege of Gaza has had a major impact on the economy of Gaza. Employment has suffered dramatically. On 9 July 2007 the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) announced that it had halted all its building projects in Gaza because it had run out of building materials, such as cement. This has affected 121,000 jobs of people building new schools, houses, waterworks, and health centres. Eighty per cent of the 3,900 factories operating in Gaza have likewise been compelled to close because of the failure to obtain building materials through the Karni crossing. This has affected the livelihoods of 30,000 people. The border closures have also prevented agricultural products from being exported, depriving farmers of their income. Fishing has virtually come to an end as a result of the ban on fishing along the Gaza coast, rigorously enforced by Israeli gunboats. The public service, while employed in theory, is largely unpaid as a result of Israel's withholding of funds due to the Palestinian Authority. According to the World Bank 3,200 businesses closed in June leaving 65,000 people unemployed.

20. The cancellation of the Gaza customs code by Israeli authorities has also meant that more than 1,300 containers of commercial materials destined for Gaza remain stranded at Israeli ports, and essential items such as milk powder, baby formula and vegetable oil are now in short supply. Military incursions have forced the closure of schools. Eighty-one items on the essential drugs list were out of stock, according to the Palestinian Ministry of Health, because of the financial crisis. Mental health is a serious problem as a result of the trauma inflicted by military incursions.

21. Poverty is rife. Over 90 per cent of the population live below the official poverty line. UNRWA and the World Food Programme provide food assistance to 1.1 million Gazans of a population of 1.4 million. Recipients of food aid receive flour, rice, sugar, sunflower oil, powdered milk and lentils. Few can afford meat, fish (virtually unobtainable anyway as a result of the ban on fishing), vegetables and fruit. Morale is low. The very fabric of Gazan society is threatened by the siege.

22. In a report of 11 July 2007 the World Bank declared that the prolonged closure of Gaza's border crossings could lead to the "irreversible" economic collapse of Gaza. On 19 July Karen AbuZayd, Commissioner-General of UNRWA, warned that without the Karni crossing the Gaza economy will "collapse".

23. Israel's siege of Gaza violates a whole range of obligations under both human rights law and humanitarian law. The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights provisions that everyone has the right to "an adequate standard of living for himself and his family, including adequate food, clothing and housing", freedom from hunger and the right to food (art. 11) and that everyone has the right to health have been seriously infringed. Above all, the Government of Israel has violated the prohibition on collective punishment of an occupied people contained in article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. The indiscriminate and excessive use of force against civilians and civilian objects, the destruction of electricity and water supplies, the bombardment of public buildings, the restrictions on freedom of movement, the closure of crossings and the consequences that these actions have had upon public health, food, family life and the psychological well-being of the Palestinian people constitute a gross form of collective punishment. The capture of Corporal Shalit and the continuing firing of Qassam rockets into Israel cannot be condoned. On the other hand, they cannot justify the drastic punishment of a whole people in the way that Israel has done.

24. Gaza is no ordinary State upon which other States may freely impose economic sanctions in order to create a humanitarian crisis or take disproportionate military action that endangers the civilian population in the name of self-defence. It is an occupied territory in whose well-being all States have an interest and whose welfare all States are required to promote. According to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the wall, all States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention have the obligation “to ensure compliance by Israel with international humanitarian law as embodied in that Convention”.<sup>12</sup> Israel has violated obligations of an erga omnes character that are the concern of all States and that all States are required to bring to an end. In the first instance, Israel, the occupying Power, is obliged to cease its violations of international humanitarian law. But other States that are a party to the siege of Gaza are likewise in violation of international humanitarian law and obliged to cease their unlawful actions. It is no excuse that Gaza is governed by a “terrorist group”. Terrorism is a relative concept, particularly in the context of occupation, as opposition to the occupying Power will always be seen as terrorism by the occupying Power and its accomplices. French resistance fighters were viewed as terrorists by the German occupation, and members of the South West Africa Peoples’ Organization that opposed South Africa’s occupation of Namibia were seen as terrorists by the South African regime. Today such resistance fighters are seen as heroes and patriots. This is the inevitable consequence of resistance to occupation.

IV. Human rights in the West Bank and East Jerusalem

25. The human rights situation in the West Bank has possibly improved since mid-June. The takeover of Gaza by Hamas has resulted in a new rapprochement between the emergency Government of President Abbas, under the prime ministership of Salam Fayyad, and Israel, the United States and the Quartet. This has taken several forms:

- the release of 255 Palestinian prisoners, mainly belonging to Fatah;
- the release of $119 million of Palestinian tax funds seized by Israel after the election success of Hamas in January 2006;
- the granting of amnesty to 178 Fatah militants wanted by Israel;
- promises, as yet unfulfilled, to cease military incursions into the West Bank, reduce checkpoints and remove settler outposts;
- the offer of $190 million in aid by the United States;
- the blessing of the Quartet which in a statement on 19 July expressed support for the Palestinian Government headed by Mr. Fayyad and encouraging direct and rapid financial assistance to his Government “to help reform, preserve and strengthen vital Palestinian institutions and infrastructure, and to support the rule of law”.

---

<sup>12</sup> Advisory Opinion, op. cit., para. 159.

26. The new support for Mr. Fayyad's Government in the West Bank has not, however, succeeded in removing or even softening Israel's ideological infrastructure that most seriously violates human rights in the West Bank. The construction of the wall (or Barrier) continues; settlements continue to expand; checkpoints remain in force; the Judaization of Jerusalem continues; and the de facto annexation of the Jordan Valley is unaffected. Moreover, at the time of writing military incursions into the West Bank continue unabated, albeit directed principally at Hamas, as do home demolitions.

A. The wall

1. General

27. The wall that Israel is at present building largely in Palestinian territory is clearly illegal. The International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004 found that it is contrary to international law and that Israel is under obligation to discontinue construction of the wall and to dismantle those sections that have already been built forthwith. Israel has abandoned its claim that the wall is a security measure only and now concedes that one of the purposes of the wall is to include settlements within Israel. The fact that 76 per cent of the West Bank settler population is enclosed within the wall bears this out.

28. The wall is planned to extend for 721 km. At present 59 per cent of the wall has been completed. Two hundred kilometres of the wall have been constructed since the International Court of Justice handed down its advisory opinion declaring the wall to be illegal. When the wall is finished, an estimated 60,000 West Bank Palestinians living in 42 villages and towns will reside in the closed zone between the wall and the Green Line. This area will constitute 10.2 per cent of Palestinian land in the West Bank. More than 500,000 Palestinians living within 1 km of the wall live on the eastern side but need to cross it to get to their farms and jobs and to maintain family connections. Eighty per cent of the wall is built within the Palestinian territory itself and in order to incorporate the Ariel settlement bloc, it extends some 22 km into the West Bank. The closed zone includes many of the West Bank's most valuable water resources. Completion of the wall around the Ma'aleh Adumim bloc will separate East Jerusalem from the rest of the West Bank, restricting access to workplaces, health, education, and to places of worship. Further south, the route of the wall around the Gush Etzion settlement bloc will sever the last route between Bethlehem and Jerusalem and isolate the majority of Bethlehem's agricultural hinterland.

29. The wall has serious humanitarian consequences for Palestinians living within the closed zone (the area between the Green Line and the wall). They are cut off from places of employment, schools, universities and specialized medical care and community life is seriously fragmented. Moreover, they do not have 24-hour access to emergency health services. Palestinians who live on the eastern side of the wall but whose land lies in the closed zone face serious economic hardship as a result of the fact that they are not able to reach their land to harvest crops or to graze their animals without permits. Permits are not easily granted. A host of obstacles are placed in the way of obtaining a permit. Bureaucratic procedures for obtaining permits are humiliating and obstructive. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs has estimated that 60 per cent of the farming families with land to the west of the wall could no longer access their land. To aggravate matters the opening and closing of the gates leading to the closed zone are regulated in a highly arbitrary manner: in November 2006 the Office carried out a survey in 57 communities located close to the wall which showed that only 26 of the 61 gates in the wall were open to Palestinians for use all the year round and that these gates were only open for 64 per cent of the officially stated time. Hardships experienced by Palestinians living within the closed zone and in the precincts of the wall have already resulted in the displacement of some 15,000 persons.

2. East Jerusalem

30. The 75-km wall being built in East Jerusalem is now almost complete, except for a 200-m section between Dahiyat and Beit Hanina. This wall, which is built through Palestinian neighbourhoods and separates Palestinians from Palestinians, is an exercise in social engineering, designed to achieve the Judaization of Jerusalem by reducing the number of Palestinians in the city. It cannot conceivably be justified on security grounds.

3. Compensation for damage caused by the construction of the wall

31. In its 2004 advisory opinion the International Court of Justice held that Israel has the obligation to make reparations for the damage caused to Palestinians by the construction of the wall. Where restitution of property is not possible, stated the Court, Israel “has an obligation to compensate, in accordance with the applicable rules of international law, all natural and legal persons having suffered any form of material damage as a result of the wall’s construction”.<sup>13</sup> In 2004 the General Assembly directed the establishment of a United Nations Register of Damages Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the establishment of a board to administer this register. As this decision was not implemented for more than two years, on 15 December 2006 the General Assembly at its tenth emergency special session, in resolution ES-10/17, requested the Secretary-General to report within six months on the progress made in this respect. In compliance with this request the Secretary-General appointed, on 10 May 2007, Harumi Hori of Japan, Matti Paavo Pellonpää of Finland and Michael F. Raboin of the United States to membership of the Board. The Board met from 14 to 16 May 2007 and plans to meet again in August/September.

32. Compensation for violation of the human rights of Palestinians and the violation of rules of international humanitarian law arising from the construction of the wall is a human rights issue which clearly falls within the present Special Rapporteur’s mandate. The Special Rapporteur shares the concerns expressed by stakeholders and civil society about the Board and its functions. First, there is the opaque manner in which the Board was appointed. Many United Nations officers who hold similar positions are elected to office; others are appointed after wide consultation. The failure of the Secretary-General to employ a more transparent method of appointment, coupled with the fact that all the members of the Board, however well qualified they undoubtedly are, are nationals of States from the North with close relations with Israel, inevitably means that members of the Board will have to overcome the misgivings of stakeholders and civil society. Secondly, there are serious doubts about how the Board will perceive its role. What criteria will it adopt for eligibility and verification of claims? Will it consider non-material damages such as the effects on mental health and family life? Or will it confine itself to material damage? Will it insist on gaining access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory to fully assess the damages involved? Or will it defer to Israel when it is refused access? Will it ensure that Palestinians are informed about their right to claim? Will there be consultation with civil society?

---

<sup>13</sup> Advisory Opinion, op. cit., paras. 152-153.

B. Settlements and settlers

33. There are some 140 Israeli settlements and 100 settlement “outposts” (unauthorized but State-sponsored and funded by Government ministries) established in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. These settlements are illegal as they violate article 49, paragraph 6, of the Fourth Geneva Convention. Their illegality has been unanimously confirmed by the International Court of Justice in the advisory opinion on the wall. Despite the illegality of settlements and the unanimous condemnation of settlements by the international community, the Government of Israel persists in allowing settlements to grow. Sometimes settlement expansion occurs openly and with the full approval of the Government. In 2007 the Jerusalem Municipality Planning Committee approved plans to build three new settlements in East Jerusalem, one south of Ramallah and two north-west of Bethlehem. More frequently, expansion takes place stealthily under the guise of “natural growth”, which has resulted in Israeli settlements growing at an average rate of 5.5 per cent compared with the average growth rate in Israeli cities of 1.7 per cent. Sometimes settlements expand unlawfully in terms of Israeli law, but no attempt is made to enforce the law. Outposts, a prelude to the establishment of settlements, are frequently established and threats to remove them are not carried out. Most outposts have been established in the past six years. As a result of expansion, the settler population in the West Bank numbers some 260,000 persons and that of East Jerusalem over 200,000. As indicated above, the wall is presently being built in both the West Bank and East Jerusalem to ensure that most settlements will be enclosed within the wall. Moreover, the three major settlement blocs of Gush Etzion, Ma’aleh Adumim and Ariel will effectively divide Palestinian territory into cantons, thereby destroying the territorial integrity of Palestine.

34. In October 2006, the Israeli NGO Peace Now published a study which showed, on the basis of official maps and figures, that nearly 40 per cent of the land held by Israeli settlements in the West Bank is privately owned by Palestinians. The data show, for example, that 86 per cent of the largest settlement of Ma’aleh Adumim is on Palestinian private property; that 35 per cent of Ariel is on private property; and that more than 3,400 buildings in settlements are constructed on land privately owned by Palestinians. On 6 July 2007 Peace Now published another study, based on official data released by the Government of Israel following a court order, which revealed that settlements use only 12 per cent of the land allocated to them, but one third of the territory they do use lies outside their official jurisdictions. Ninety per cent of the settlements extend beyond their official boundaries despite the amount of unused land already allocated to them. These findings attest to the Government’s ongoing cooperation with the settlements’ expansion. On the one hand, the State earmarks huge tracts for the settlements, out of all proportion to their size, in order to prevent Palestinian construction in those areas. Yet once an area is closed to Palestinians, the settlers begin seizing adjacent Palestinian lands, often privately owned, that lie outside their jurisdiction.

C. The Jordan Valley

35. Israel has abandoned earlier plans to build the wall along the spine of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to formally appropriate the Jordan Valley. It has nevertheless asserted its control over this region, which constitutes 25 per cent of the West Bank, in much the same way as it has done over the closed zone between the wall and the Green Line on Palestine's western border. That Israel intends to remain permanently in the Jordan Valley is clear from Government statements and is further manifested, first, by restrictions imposed on Palestinians and, second, by the exercise of Israeli control and the increase in the number of settlements in the Jordan Valley.

36. Palestinians living in the Jordan Valley must possess identity cards with a Jordan Valley address and only those persons may travel within the Jordan Valley without Israeli permits. Other Palestinians, including non-resident landowners and workers, must obtain permits to enter the Jordan Valley and in practice such permits are not valid for overnight stays, necessitating daily commuting and delays at checkpoints connecting the Jordan Valley with the rest of the West Bank. This has led to the isolation of the Jordan Valley.

D. Checkpoints and roadblocks as obstacles to freedom of movement

37. Checkpoints and roadblocks seriously obstruct the freedom of movement of Palestinians in the West Bank, with disastrous consequences for both personal life and the economy. There are some 550 such obstacles to freedom of movement, comprising over 80 manned checkpoints and some 470 unmanned locked gates, earth mounds, concrete blocks and ditches. In addition, thousands of temporary checkpoints, known as "flying checkpoints", are set up every year by Israeli army patrols on roads throughout the West Bank for limited periods, ranging from half an hour to several hours. In 2006 a total of some 7,000 such flying checkpoints was recorded.<sup>14</sup> In June 2007 there were 488 flying checkpoints and in July 2007 there were 409 such checkpoints. Checkpoints divide the West Bank into four distinct areas: the north (Nablus, Jenin and Tulkarem), the centre (Ramallah), and the south (Hebron) and East Jerusalem. Within these areas further enclaves have been created by a system of checkpoints and roadblocks. Moreover highways for the use of Israelis only further fragment the Occupied Palestinian Territory into 10 small cantons or Bantustans. Cities are cut off from each other as a permit is required to travel from one area to another and permits are difficult to obtain. Checkpoints largely serve the interests of settlers in the sense that they are generally established near to settlements or near to settler bypass roads.

38. Checkpoints and the poor quality of secondary roads Palestinians are obliged to use, in order to leave the main roads free for settler use, result in journeys that previously took 10 to 20 minutes taking two to three hours. Israel justifies these measures, together with the behaviour of its soldiers at checkpoints, on security grounds and claims that they have succeeded in thwarting the passage of numerous would-be suicide bombers. There is, however, another security perspective. Palestinians perceive these measures to be designed, first, to serve the convenience of settlers and to facilitate their travel through the West Bank without having to make contact with Palestinians, and, secondly, to humiliate Palestinians by treating them as inferior human beings. The result is a suppressed anger that in the long term poses a greater threat to the security of Israel.

---

<sup>14</sup> Amnesty International, Enduring Occupation. Palestinians under Siege in the West Bank (June 2007), p. 16.

E. Military incursions

39. Since the election of the Hamas Government in January 2006, IDF has intensified its military incursions in the West Bank. These military raids, numbering several hundred each month (641 in July 2007), have resulted in the killing of some 200 Palestinians and injury to over a thousand, searches resulting in substantial damage to property, and several hundred arrests each month. The Government of Israel has announced, following the takeover of Gaza by Hamas, that as a gesture of goodwill to the Government of Mr. Fayyad, it would discontinue its military incursions into the West Bank. To date there is no evidence of such a discontinuation. IDF military incursions resulting in death, injury, arrests and damage to property remain a regular feature of life in the West Bank.

F. Humanitarian situation

40. The construction of the wall, the expansion of settlements, the restrictions on freedom of movement, house demolitions and military incursions have had a disastrous impact on the economy, health, education, family life and standard of living of Palestinians in the West Bank. Since 2006 the situation has deteriorated further as a result of two factors: first, Israel's withholding of taxes which it collects on behalf of the Palestinian Authority on all goods imported into the Occupied Palestinian Territory, amounting to $50-60 million per month (about half of the budget of the Palestinian Authority); second, the sanctions regime imposed by the United States, the European Union and other Western States (implicitly approved by the Quartet) which has taken the form of the discontinuation of aid and banking restrictions on the transfer of money to the Palestinian Authority and other Palestinian institutions. According to Karen AbuZayd, the Commissioner-General of UNRWA:

There is a staggering irony in the contrast between the universal commitment to poverty eradication (expressed in the UN Millennium Development Declaration) and the decision to impose on Palestinians one of the most severe sanctions regimes in recent history, thereby virtually guaranteeing the widespread incidence of extreme poverty.<sup>15</sup>

41. In the past month Israel has transferred $119 million of the tax money it has unlawfully seized to the Palestinian Authority and Western States and the Quartet have promised to recommence funding to the Palestinian Authority (insofar as it does not further the interests of Hamas in Gaza). At the time of writing no material change is discernible in the humanitarian situation in the West Bank as a result of the continuing occupation, the human rights violations described in this section of the report and Israel's refusal to transfer all the tax moneys in law due to the Palestinian Authority. Poverty and unemployment are at their highest levels yet; health and education are undermined by military incursions, the wall and checkpoints; and the social fabric of society is threatened.

---

<sup>15</sup> Speech delivered at the Woodrow Wilson Institute, Washington, D.C., on 22 May 2007.

Conclusion

42. The situation in the West Bank may not be as serious as that of Gaza. However, it is all a question of degree. Moreover, as in Gaza, the serious humanitarian situation in the West Bank is largely the result of Israel's violations of international law. The wall violates norms of international humanitarian law and human rights law, according to the International Court of Justice; settlements violate the Fourth Geneva Convention; checkpoints violate the freedom of movement proclaimed in human rights conventions; house demolitions violate the Fourth Geneva Convention; the humanitarian crisis in the West Bank, brought about by Israel's withholding of Palestinian tax money and other violations of international law, violates many of the rights contained in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. As in Gaza, Israel's actions constitute an unlawful collective punishment of the Palestinian people.

V. Violation of the prohibition on arbitrary detention, inhuman treatment and extrajudicial executions

Prisoners

43. There are over 10,000 Palestinian political prisoners in Israeli jails, including 116 women and 380 children. In July 2007, 255 prisoners, belonging mainly to Fatah, were released. As IDF continues to arrest substantial numbers of Palestinians in military incursions in the West Bank and Gaza every day, this prisoner release can only be seen as a very small step in the right direction. (In July 2007, 391 Palestinians were arrested: 354 in the West Bank and 37 in Gaza.)

Inhuman treatment

44. Serious complaints about the treatment of pre-trial detainees and imprisoned persons continue to be heard. In April 2007 two Israeli NGOs — Hamoked (Centre for the Defence of the Individual) and B'Tselem (The Israeli Information Centre for Human Rights in the Occupied Territories) — published a report on torture and ill-treatment of Palestinian detainees which showed that arrested persons were subjected to beatings, humiliated and deprived of basic needs and that persons suspected of having information that could prevent attacks (so-called "ticking bomb suspects") were deprived of sleep for more than 24 hours, beaten and subjected to physical ill-treatment.<sup>16</sup> This treatment certainly amounts to inhuman and degrading treatment and possibly to torture.

---

<sup>16</sup> Utterly Forbidden. The Torture and Ill-Treatment of Palestinian Detainees (April 2007).

Extrajudicial executions or targeted assassinations

45. The IDF continue to assassinate suspected militants by targeting them with rockets. Since 2000 some 500 Palestinians, including many innocent bystanders, have been killed in this way. This practice makes a mockery of Israel's claim to have abolished the death penalty.

VI. The role of the United Nations in the protection of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

46. The United Nations is the ultimate protector of human rights in the international community, with its agencies, personnel and political institutions committed to this end. In Occupied Palestinian Territory agencies such as UNRWA, OCHA, the United Nations Development Programme, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, the World Food Programme, the World Bank, the United Nations Children's Fund, the World Health Organization, the International Labour Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations are committed to promoting development and protecting human rights. Dedicated personnel pursue the ideals of the Charter of the United Nations in providing help for a people under occupation. Indeed, it is difficult to imagine how Palestinians could survive without the assistance of bodies such as UNRWA. Unfortunately, the story at the high political level in New York is very different.

47. The Security Council has largely relinquished its powers in respect of the Occupied Palestinian Territory in favour of an amorphous body known as the Quartet, comprising the United Nations, the European Union, the Russian Federation and the United States. The Quartet was informally set up in 2003 without a founding resolution or mandate from either the Security Council or the General Assembly, with the task of promoting peace in accordance with a road map for peace, to which Israel has attached 14 reservations and which is now hopelessly out of date. In his May 2007 end of mission report, Alvaro de Soto, former United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and United Nations Envoy to the Quartet, stated that "as a practical matter, the Quartet is pretty much a group of friends of the US — and the US doesn't feel the need to consult closely with the Quartet except when it suits it." (para. 63). Despite its dubious constitutionality and the questionable legality of its actions, the Quartet remains unchallenged by the Security Council or the General Assembly.

48. The Quartet does not see it as its function to promote respect for human rights, international humanitarian law, the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, international law or countless United Nations resolutions on the subject of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Regular statements by the Quartet make mildly critical reference to the expansion of settlements and the humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory but condemnation of Israel's continuing occupation, and its violations of international humanitarian law (primarily the Fourth Geneva Convention) and human rights is not forthcoming. Moreover, the Quartet has yet to even mention the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice. Since January 2006 the Occupied Palestinian Territory has been subjected to economic sanctions in the form of the termination of donor aid, the imposition of banking restrictions and the seizure of tax moneys. The United States, the European Union and Israel must take direct responsibility for these actions but the Quartet must accept indirect responsibility.<sup>17</sup> Most recently, the Quartet has embarked on a course hostile to Palestinian self-determination by giving support to one Palestinian faction, Fatah, at the expense of the other, Hamas, and by making no attempt to restore the unity of the Palestinian people.<sup>18</sup> In the process Gaza seems to have been simply abandoned by the Quartet.

49. The actions of the United States and the European Union within the Quartet can be explained in terms of their own domestic political constituencies and constraints. The Russian Federation seems to be uneasy about its membership of the Quartet and attempts to pursue, without success, an even-handed approach to the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. What then is the position of the United Nations, the guardian of legitimacy enshrined in the Charter, and representative not only of the opinions of the five permanent members of the Security Council but of all 192 members of the Organization? Sadly, the United Nations, acting through the Secretary-General, has ignored the views of the majority of its members and abandoned its role as guardian of international legitimacy. Instead of promoting Palestinian self-determination, striving to end the occupation and opposing the ongoing violation of human rights, the United Nations has chosen to give legitimacy to the statements and actions of the Quartet. The situation is well described by Alvaro de Soto in his end of mission report:

[The Secretary-General] is being used to provide the appearance of an imprimatur on behalf of the international community for the Quartet's positions. This in itself is awkward since the Secretary-General participates in the Quartet not by delegation or mandate from any UN body, leave alone the Security Council, but in his semi-stand-alone capacity. There are large segments of the international community not represented in the self-appointed Quartet, including the Arab shareholders. Nevertheless, I could live with the arrangements until the point came when the Quartet started taking positions which are not likely to gather a majority in UN bodies, and which in any case are at odds with the UN Security Council resolutions and/or international law or, when they aren't expressly so, fall short of the minimum of even-handedness that must be the lifeblood of the diplomatic action of the Secretary-General. (para. 69)

50. For the past few years the Special Rapporteur has appealed in his reports to the Quartet to show more even-handedness and respect for human rights and the rule of law in both their actions and their utterances. These appeals have been ignored. Now, the former Under-Secretary-General, Special Coordinator for the Middle East

<sup>17</sup> In his end of mission report of May 2007 Alvaro de Soto states:

“Strictly speaking it is not the Quartet as such which has reviewed assistance, circumvented the PA and shifted aid to the preponderantly humanitarian, imposed stifling banking restrictions or deprived the Palestinians of their main source of income. It is, respectively, the US and the EU and Israel who must take responsibility for these actions. Due to the amendments to which our Quartet partners agreed in January 2006, we are able to say that none of these measures emanate directly from Quartet decisions, and to dissociate ourselves from those measures or openly criticize them (Israeli non-transfer of Palestinian money to the PA). And we do so. But in the wide-angle lens of Palestinian and Arab public opinion this is verbal prestidigitation, and it doesn't wash. By our association with all that has been inflicted on the Palestinians since the beginning of 2006 we are guilty as charged in the court of Palestinian and Arab public opinion.” (para. 78).

<sup>18</sup> This is clear from the Quartet's statement of 19 July 2007.

Peace Process and Envoy to the Quartet has spoken in stronger language, accusing the Quartet of being led (and coerced) by the United States into adopting positions at odds with the ideals of the Charter, and calling upon the Secretary-General to seriously reconsider continued United Nations membership in the Quartet. In effect, this message has been ignored and the messenger shot.<sup>19</sup>

VII. Recommendations

51. The recommendations or appeals set out below are made to Israel, Palestinian armed groups, States members of the United Nations and the United Nations itself.

To Israel

52. Israel's occupation of the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza is now in its fortieth year. This occupation, which has resulted in numerous violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law, has seriously undermined the integrity and reputation of the State of Israel. Israel is urged to enter into serious negotiations with the Palestinian Authority to bring about the creation of a Palestinian State within the 1967 borders of the Palestinian entity, to end the occupation of the Palestinian Territory and to respect international humanitarian law and human rights law in its dealings with the Palestinian people.

To Palestinian militant groups

53. Palestinian militant groups are urged to end their attacks on civilian targets and comply with international humanitarian law, both within the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel.

To States Members of the United Nations

54. States Members of the United Nations are urged to bring pressure on the Quartet to act in an even-handed manner with due respect for human rights and international humanitarian law. They are also urged, as parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, to ensure that Israel complies with international humanitarian law as embodied in that Convention. (This obligation is affirmed by the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion on the wall.<sup>20</sup>)

To the United Nations (particularly the Secretary-General)

55. The Secretary-General is urged, as representative of the United Nations in the Quartet, to ensure that the Quartet:

(a) Condemns Israel's violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law (described in the present report) and take measures to ensure that Israel complies with its obligations in this respect;

<sup>19</sup> See the statement by Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon at a press conference on 13 June 2007.

<sup>20</sup> Advisory Opinion, op. cit., para. 159.

(b) Accepts the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory as a juridical basis for its dealings with Israel;

(c) Presses Israel to immediately transfer to the Palestinian Authority all the value added tax and customs duties that it has collected on behalf of the Palestinians in order to ameliorate the humanitarian crisis that prevails in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(d) Adopts a fair and even-handed approach to the respective positions of Israel and the Palestinians;

(e) Adopts a fair and even-handed approach to different factions within the Palestinian community, as the United Nations has done in other comparable conflict situations,<sup>21</sup> so that Palestinian self-determination is achieved.

56. If the Secretary-General is unsuccessful in persuading the Quartet to act as proposed above, the United Nations should cease to give its imprimatur to the actions of the Quartet and should withdraw from the Quartet.

To the United Nations (particularly the General Assembly)

57. The General Assembly is urged to request the International Court of Justice to give a further advisory opinion on the legal consequences for the occupied people, the occupying Power and third States of prolonged occupation (see also paragraph 8 above.)

---

<sup>21</sup> On this subject it is necessary to quote a passage from the speech by Karen AbuZayd, UNRWA Commissioner-General, to the Woodrow Wilson Institute in Washington, D.C., on 22 May 2007):

“A further discrepancy can be identified in the area of the international community’s approach to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The presently moribund state of the peace process is the direct result of a policy to isolate a particular party, regardless of the fact that it happens to command a significant constituency. The policy of isolation is arguably at odds with the UN Charter’s vision of a system of collective security that is founded on the peaceful settlement of disputes, mutual restraint in the use of armed force and joint action to address threats to international peace and security. Our policy to exclude one side is also at variance with the approach that the international community has successfully pursued in resolving other armed conflicts. In some notable and rather well-known recent examples in western Europe and South Asia, neither the terrorist epithet, nor the fact of continuing and even escalating armed conflict deterred mediators from engaging the protagonists and continuing to press for a solution ... Many successful peace negotiations proceeded on the basis of the mediators’ neutrality, inclusiveness and abstention from passing moral or political judgment on either party’s eligibility to be present at the table.”

General Assembly

Distr.: General
25 August 2008

Original: English

---

Sixty-third session

Item 67 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights:
human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General****

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Richard Falk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/63/150 and Corr.1.

** The present report was submitted after the deadline so as to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967

Summary

The present report, the first submitted by Richard Falk, examines the observance of international humanitarian and international human rights standards in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967 during the period from January to mid-2008. It pays particular attention to the consequences of a prolonged occupation that has consistently ignored the directives of the United Nations with respect to upholding the legal rights of an occupied people.

The report also takes note of the undertaking associated with the revival of the peace process at the Annapolis summit of December 2007, in particular the expectation that Israel would freeze settlement expansion and ease restrictions on movement in the West Bank. It is discouraging that the record shows settlement growth and further restrictions on West Bank movement.

In addition, the report notes the abuse of international humanitarian law associated with the separation wall, and Palestinian fatalities, including of children, owing to Israeli use of excessive force to quell non-violent demonstrations. Attention is also drawn to abuses by Israel at border crossings, with special concern expressed with regard to the harassment and assault of Palestinian journalists. The report further focuses on the crisis in health care, especially in Gaza.

The report laments the failure of Israel to implement the recommendations of the International Court of Justice, as endorsed by the General Assembly. It calls for a further clarification of the rights of the Palestinian people by recommending that the General Assembly seek legal guidance as to the extent to which the occupation is endangering the realization of the Palestinian right of self-determination.

---

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction .....	4
II. Political developments: major changes in the setting of the occupation.....	6
III. Significant human rights challenges: some case studies .....	10
A. Freedom of expression and harassment of media personnel: the case of Mohammed Omer .....	10
B. Closures and Israeli Defense Forces military operations in the West Bank: abuses against the civilian population in Nablus .....	12
C. Right to peaceful assembly: demonstrations against the wall in the West Bank .....	13
IV. Settlements in the Palestinian Territories and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights.	14
V. Health crisis in the Palestinian Territories .....	16
A. Further infringements affecting medical patients from Gaza: Shin Bet interrogation of Palestinian medical patients at the Erez crossing.....	19
VI. Recommendations .....	20

I. Introduction

1. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 was appointed in accordance with resolution 1993/2 A of the Commission on Human Rights, on 26 March 2008, and took up his position on 1 May 2008. The Special Rapporteur has not yet been able to visit Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory so as to fulfil his mandate and offer a first-hand account of the degree to which international human rights and international humanitarian law are being observed. It is the hope and intention of the Special Rapporteur to do his best to secure entry in the future. He will seek to enlist the cooperation of the Government of Israel in that effort.

2. The present report is the first to be issued since the Special Rapporteur took up his mandate on 1 May 2008. The report covers developments taking place primarily from 1 January to 31 July 2008. It is based upon reliable information gathered by human rights non-governmental organizations and international institutions, including the United Nations, which have a long record of objectivity and experience in relation to the conditions of the occupation. The Special Rapporteur takes note of positive and negative changes on the ground and in the wider regional and global setting. It is the intention of the Special Rapporteur, without political implications, to treat the Hamas administration of Gaza as “a de facto authority” for the purpose of the present report.

3. The Special Rapporteur takes particular note of the fact that the military occupation of the Palestinian territory has gone on for more than 40 years and that it possesses characteristics of colonialism and apartheid, as has been observed by the previous Special Rapporteur. Especially in the light of that background, the further prolongation of the occupation constitutes a deepening threat to and a cumulative encroachment upon the most fundamental human right of all, the right of self-determination of the Palestinian people. That consideration imparts a tone of urgency to an evaluation of Palestinian claims of a right of resistance in furtherance of self-determination and to recommendations for a greater expression of responsibility by the United Nations to resolve the Israel-Palestine conflict, taking full account of international law, and, in the interim, to take immediate steps to ensure Israeli compliance with its obligations under international humanitarian law pertaining to military occupation. In that regard, note should be taken of the refusal of Israel to comply with the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1), supported by 14 of the 15 judges, and overwhelmingly endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/15. That general observation relating to the continuing occupation has two implications for the United Nations. First, in the context of the Annapolis peace process, the United Nations, as a member of the Quartet, has a special responsibility to ensure that steps are taken to raise confidence among all the parties that international law will be relied upon to assess rival claims of both Israel and Palestine in the course of negotiations on outstanding issues of controversy. Second, that the disregard of such a clear and authoritative message as to international legal obligations pertaining to the duties of an occupying Power, together with other evidence of disregard detailed in this report, should serve to prompt the Secretary-General, the General Assembly and other bodies of the United Nations to recognize the need to implement urgently necessary initiatives to protect the rights, and indeed the survival, of the Palestinian people, and to induce Israel to uphold its obligations under international law. One such initiative, consistent with the recommendation of the previous Special Rapporteur, would be for the Third Committee to propose to the General Assembly a request for a new advisory opinion by the International Court of Justice on the unlawful effects of the continuing denial of the Palestinian rights to self-determination, given the prolongation and character of the occupation, especially its encroachment on Palestinian ownership and occupation of land.

4. The pre-eminent legal instrument relevant to assessing the rights and duties of an occupying Power is the Fourth Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilians in Time of War (1949), but also relevant as expressive of the evolving customary international law, binding upon parties to the treaty, is the Geneva Protocol Additional I of 1977 Relating to the Protection of Victims to International Armed Conflict. The evidence of continuous and deliberate violation of that universally binding international treaty by Israel in its occupation of the Palestinian territory constitutes an ongoing grave situation that calls out for a unified response by the international community. It should be observed that article 1 of the Fourth Geneva Convention reads as follows: “The High Contracting Parties undertake to respect and to ensure respect for the present Convention in all circumstances”. It is high time to heed the call of that provision.

5. The Government of Israel has contended, since its implemented disengagement plan in 2005, that the Gaza Strip is no longer under occupation, and that for that reason, international humanitarian law is not applicable. It is the official position of Israel, often repeated, that the “belligerent occupation of the Gaza Strip” by the Israeli Defense Forces ended as of 12 September 2005 “with all of the political, security and legal ramifications involved”. Israel explicitly draws the main conclusion that since “full governmental powers” were on that date “transferred to the Palestinian Authority”, it no longer has the legal and moral responsibilities of an occupying Power.<sup>1</sup> From that perspective, the Government of Israel relies on the decision of the Israeli Supreme Court in Albassiouni v. the Prime Minister, according to which the Government “does not have a general duty to take care of the welfare of Strip residents”. The Special Rapporteur disputes that assessment of the situation in the Gaza Strip, contending that a territory is occupied if it is under the “effective control” of a State other than that of the territorial sovereign. Israel has, since its disengagement, continued to exert strict and continuous control over the borders, entrance and exit, airspace and territorial waters of Gaza. In addition, it has mounted numerous military incursions and deadly attacks on targeted individuals, and subjected the entire civilian population of the territory to siege conditions ever since Hamas convincingly won the general legislative elections in January 2006, and it tightened the siege after Hamas took over Gaza in mid-June 2007. The establishment of a siege imposing great stress on the inhabitants of Gaza and attempts to gain international participation in that siege have made it impossible for the administering Palestinian authorities to provide for the minimum well-being of the 1.5 million inhabitants. On the basis of those considerations, it is clear beyond a reasonable doubt that from the perspective of international law, the Gaza Strip remains under Israeli occupation, with legal responsibilities attendant on being the occupying Power, and that the Geneva Conventions remain fully operative.

<sup>1</sup> See “Response of coordinator of activities in the territories to report of Physicians for Human Rights’ report on questioning of medical patients at the Erez crossing”, Ministry of Defence, State of Israel, 4 June 2008.

6. There are many aspects of the daily and continuing situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory relevant to a legal assessment of the rights and duties of the parties. A main goal of the present report is to convey a well-evidenced understanding of the extent to which the situation in all parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory has continued to deteriorate, reaching dangerous and non-sustainable levels of mental and physical suffering and trauma for the Palestinian people living under occupation. That counters the view that because of several developments, including the Gaza Ceasefire, the positive relations between Israel, the United States of America and the Palestinian Authority, the revival of the peace process at Annapolis and the overall decline in violent Israeli civilian or military deaths and in the incidence of terrorism, the burdens of the occupation have been eased. It does seem true that the situation for Israel has improved economically and politically during that period, but the situation of the Palestinian people has worsened. More land has been taken for settlements, which have been expanded, the crisis conditions persist in Gaza as a whole, the restrictions on movement throughout the West Bank have been maintained or tightened, and additional legal moves to expel Palestinians living in Jerusalem have been taking place. In response to the very recent approval by the Government of Israel for construction of an additional 447 housing units in the Jerusalem area, the Palestinian peace negotiator, Saeb Erekat, was quoted as saying in a Reuters dispatch, "I don't know how many times the Israelis have to do this for the international community to open its eyes. Can't the world see this is destroying the peace process?" The main theme of the present report is that the Palestinian reality is worse than ever before, with no indication of any substantial improvement.

7. The present report attempts to strike a balance between highlighting incidents that illustrate deeper general problems associated with the occupation and discussing patterns of conduct that appear to violate the human rights of the occupied people, taking due account of the rights of the occupying Power to uphold security under conditions of occupation. In this report, the Special Rapporteur devotes a chapter to the right to health, with special reference to Gaza.

II. Political developments: major changes in the setting of occupation

8. The setting of the occupation is important for a meaningful evaluation of particular events and occupation policies, resistance activities and an assessment of the overall human rights situation, to the extent that the security of the occupier permits. The overall attention to these particular dimensions of the occupation helps keep attention on the centrality of the Palestinian right to and struggle for self-determination under conditions of prolonged occupation. All changes in the wider context of Israeli-Palestinian relations provide insight into the nature of the occupation, both in terms of its oppressive character and the difficulty of improving the conditions of the Palestinian people so long as they live under occupation.

9. Following the breaching of the wall separating Egypt from the Gaza Strip as a result of explosives set by Hamas near the Rafah crossing on 23 January 2008, tens of thousands of Gazans, with some estimates running as high as 500,000, crossed the border into the Egyptian city of Rafah, seeking particularly to buy food, medicines and a variety of consumer goods unavailable in Gaza. When asked by border guards for guidance, the Egyptian President, Hosni Mubarak, was quoted as saying, "I told them, 'Let them come to eat and buy food, then they go back, as long as they are not carrying weapons'".<sup>2</sup> A spokesperson for Hamas is reported to have said, "We are creating facts. We have to try to change the situation, and now we await results. We warned the Egyptian people we are hungry and dying." Many Gazans without political affiliation said in various ways, "This is the best thing Hamas has done." The situation was well summarized by an independent journalist, Allan Nairn, who wrote, "... the Gaza wall-breaking was an easy call: no people were killed, some may have been saved, and the spectacle of exodus into Egypt effectively dramatized a gross injustice".<sup>3</sup> Nairn's language captures the main realities illuminated in relation to the occupation, that is to say, exodus and spectacle. It was not possible to witness the events without appreciating the desperation of people long confined by a stultifying occupation that threatens human well-being, even survival, and should not be allowed to endure. In a few days, the Gazans were required to return to Gaza, the wall was repaired and the conditions of siege and confinement were re-established. It is possible that subtle changes for the better resulted from the exodus and spectacle of the departing mass from Gaza, with the events leading to a wider international understanding of the desperate state of affairs produced by the enforced isolation and confinement of the 1.5 million Gazans.

10. No causal connection has been established or acknowledged between the events associated with breaching the Rafah wall and the initiation of secret negotiations under Egyptian auspices in Cairo between representatives of the Government of Israel and Hamas, with the objective of establishing a ceasefire agreement that would end the firing of rockets into Israel from Gaza and military incursions and targeted assassinations by Israel in the Gaza Strip. At the same time, it seems difficult to resist the view that the coverage, especially the pictures broadcast worldwide, of the wall being breached, encouraged Israel to be more receptive to long-standing Hamas offers to establish a mutual ceasefire. The negotiations were rather prolonged, but in the end they were successful. On 20 June 2008, a ceasefire was declared, and despite some infractions on both sides, it has generally held.<sup>4</sup> The terms of the ceasefire have not been made public, but it has been assumed by informed observers that a demonstration by Hamas of its will and capacity to enforce the ceasefire on its own militant groups would be matched by an easing of the siege by Israel.

11. Hamas' efforts to enforce the ceasefire have been recognized and reciprocated by Israel in the form of easing the hardships experienced by Gazans. Israel contends that it has increased the supply of food and medicine by as much as 50 per cent, and is considering further steps designed to ease tensions and hardships. Nevertheless, because the duration and intensity of the siege, imposed on pre-existing conditions of widespread poverty and hardship, have been so severe, humanitarian conditions inside the Gaza Strip remain dire, and pose great risks of future calamities.

12. An additional aspect of those developments is the implicit recognition by Israel of the de facto governance of Gaza by Hamas. According to Meir Javedanfar, a respected Tel Aviv Middle East specialist, “[ Hamas ] is the power that Israel has to deal with. It’s not full diplomatic recognition, but Israel has recognized Hamas as an important party. On some issues it can’t be avoided. Israel is showing that its past policy of refusing to talk to militant organizations ... is not always functional ... [ and has ] realized that talking to its enemies is the shortest and most cost-effective path militarily, economically and strategically”.<sup>5</sup> Officially, Israel has not altered its formal position to the effect that Hamas is a terrorist organization, and that the ceasefire agreement should be viewed as a compromise proposal put forward by Egypt and accepted by both sides. Israel continues to insist that Hamas must unilaterally meet three conditions before it will change its formal diplomatic stance. Those conditions are recognition of Israel’s right to exist as a Jewish State, affirmation of past agreements between the Palestinian Authority and Israel and renunciation of violence.

<sup>2</sup> See The New York Times, 24 January 2008.

<sup>3</sup> See Allan Nairn, "Justified Violence: Breaking the Gaza Wall", The Nation, 29 January 2008.

<sup>4</sup> For an assessment of the ceasefire, see Uri Avnery, "The Ceasefire", London Review of Books, 31 July 2008.

13. To a certain extent, those recent facts speak for themselves: Hamas has emerged from that process producing a ceasefire and as a partner with Israel in the administration of joint arrangements. From the Israeli side, it is also plausible to view the arrangement as an implicit recognition by Hamas of the State of Israel. It is to be hoped that that development creates some prospect that the siege of Gaza will be lifted, international economic assistance restored and a regime of occupation established that complies with international humanitarian law and upholds human rights to the extent possible, given the security situation. Future assessments of that process will likely focus upon whether Egyptian negotiations with the Palestinian Authority for a reopening of the Rafah crossing are successful and whether a prisoner exchange agreement can be worked out that includes the release of the Israeli soldier Corporal Gilad Shalit, who has been held captive for more than two years. Encouragement of those negotiations is definitely correlated with the practical prospect of improving the protection of the economic and social rights of the 1.5 million Palestinians living in Gaza, although, from a strictly legal point of view, the obligations of Israel as occupying Power are unconditional, and not contingent, especially where the fundamental rights of the general Gazan population is concerned.

14. Although the volatile relations of Hamas and Fatah within the Occupied Palestinian Territory are not part of the current mandate, the recent call by President Mahmoud Abbas for talks leading to the establishment of a unity Government for all of Palestine moves also in the direction of reducing violence and allowing the civilian population living under Israeli occupation to have somewhat improved prospects that their human rights will be protected. A viable peace process depends, among other conditions, on achieving unified representation for all Palestinians living under occupation.

15. There have also been some encouraging developments in the region that might indirectly lead to improvements in the occupation regime, although, to date, the developments on the ground have not borne out those hopes. The negotiation of an agreement between Hizbullah and the Government of Lebanon offers some basis for greater stability. The ongoing negotiations between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic, as mediated by Turkey, also suggest a renewed reliance on a diplomatic approach to unresolved conflicts, and some willingness by the State of Israel to consider withdrawing from territory occupied in the 1967 war. Egyptian initiatives with respect to the situation in Gaza are also part of that more constructive atmosphere in the neighbourhood of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, but so far, the occupied Palestinians have not experienced any benefits, and in many respects, the situation has continued to deteriorate.

---

<sup>5</sup> For an early assessment of the ceasefire, see an article by Joshua Mitnick, “As Gaza ceasefire holds, Israel eases economic blockade”, Christian Science Monitor, 23 June 2008.

16. The end to occupation is the only path to full restoration of the human rights of the Palestinian people. According to doctrine, international law requires an Israeli withdrawal from substantially all occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in accordance with the iconic call of Security Council resolution 242 (1967), which was adopted in the aftermath of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. But withdrawal has been deemed extremely unlikely without bilateral negotiations that address all issues in dispute between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. From that perspective, it had seemed somewhat optimistic to view the Annapolis conference of 27 November 2007 that brought together some 40 concerned Governments as a revival of the peace process along the lines set forth by the Quartet in its road map of 2003. At Annapolis, there was a joint understanding of the participating Governments that Israel and the Palestinian Authority would seek to resolve all outstanding issues, and there was an apparent shift by the Government of the United States towards an encouragement of bilateral negotiations. There have ensued frequent meetings between the Israeli Prime Minister, Ehud Olmert, and the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, but no sign of notable breakthroughs on final status issues and little prospect that that negotiating track will produce meaningful results. That is a reflection of the weakness of Prime Minister Olmert in view of internal Israeli opposition, his embattled position and his announced plans to resign after the Kadima Party meetings in September 2008. More fundamentally, Israel has without doubt failed the litmus tests set up at Annapolis for a peace process that involved a complete freeze on Israeli settlement expansion (along with the dismantling of so-called outposts, that is, settler land occupations throughout the West Bank regarded as unlawful under Israeli law) and a reduction of checkpoint constraints on freedom of movement. The pattern since Annapolis is, instead, one of continuous Israeli settlement expansion at an accelerated pace, with no reports of outposts being dismantled, and an increase in the number of cumbersome restraints associated with Israel's network of military checkpoints.

17. The second litmus test set was the reduction of Palestinian violence. Here, the Gaza ceasefire, if it holds, seems extremely relevant, as does the resolve of the Palestinian Authority to implement to the best of its ability a policy of abandoning armed struggle against the Israeli occupation. But without comparable Israeli moves on settlements, the process is likely to be indefinitely stalled or abandoned. At present, there is no basis for optimism that the Annapolis initiative will lead to a timely end to the occupation, to peace or to respect by Israel for the rights of the Palestinian people according to the requirements of international humanitarian law and the legal standards of international human rights.

III. Significant human rights challenges: some case studies

A. Freedom of expression and harassment of media personnel: the case of Mohammed Omer

18. Mohammed Omer is a journalist who obtained an exit visa from Gaza, where he lives, to receive the Martha Gellhorn Prize for Journalism and to accept invitations to speak in Europe. His visa was issued after a considerable lobbying effort by a Dutch parliamentarian to persuade the Government of Israel to allow Mr. Omer to leave Gaza. The Gellhorn Prize for Journalism is given to a journalist who displays courage and ability in covering war zones, and Mr. Omer is the youngest recipient to be so honoured. On the basis of direct contact with Mr. Omer and a variety of distinguished persons to whom he is known, it is clear that Omer, a young man of 24, is widely admired for his personal qualities and his journalistic abilities, displayed in recent years in his reporting on the situation in Gaza. Mr. Omer's difficulties occurred on his return to Gaza, when he tried to pass through Israel from the Allenby Bridge crossing so as to enter Gaza. He reached the Jordanian border without the benefit of Dutch diplomatic escort, which arrived at the border late. According to Mr. Omer, the lack of a Dutch diplomatic escort left unfulfilled a commitment made to him when he was encouraged to leave Gaza to accept the award. The events in question took place on 26 June 2008, and have been reported in newspapers around the world. By private communication, the Special Rapporteur has been assured by the Dutch ambassador in Geneva that the incident is being taken "extremely seriously" and that an explanation is being sought from the Government of Israel. I have reinforced that request with an urgent appeal to the ambassador of Israel in Geneva. To date, no response has been received to either request for an account and explanation. Mohammed Omer has published his own version of the events, from which the following passage is taken:

"Upon my return from London I was stripped naked at gunpoint, interrogated, kicked and beaten for more than four hours. At one point I fainted and then awakened to fingernails gouging at the flesh beneath my eyes. An officer crushed my neck beneath his boot and pressed my chest into the floor. Others took turns kicking and pinching me, laughing all the while. They dragged me by my feet, sweeping my head through my own vomit. I was told later they transferred me to a hospital ... Today I have difficulty breathing. I have abrasions and scratches on my chest and neck. My doctor informed me that due to nerve damage from one kick, I may be unable to father children and will need to have an operation."<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Omer is convinced that the brutal assault on his person was carried out by Shin Bet personnel who were fully aware that he had received the Gellhorn Prize while abroad, and were attempting to confiscate the award money, but were frustrated because it had been deposited in a bank account and was unavailable. After the experience at Allenby, Mr. Omer reportedly lost consciousness, was transferred to a Palestinian hospital in Jericho on the West Bank, and was then moved to the Erez crossing, from where he was again transferred for treatment to the European Hospital at Khan Younis refugee camp.

---

<sup>6</sup> Mohammed Omer, "Truth and Consequences Under the Israeli Occupation", The Nation, 31 July 2008.

19. The unfortunate incident described above cannot be discounted as an accident or an anomaly involving undisciplined Israeli security personnel. The treatment of Mr. Omer seems to have been motivated by Israeli anger over international recognition of his journalism describing the occupation of Gaza, his willingness to repeat his descriptions abroad and his dedication and intention to continue in the professional role of bearing witness to the excesses of the occupation. It should be noted that all Palestinians are subject to arbitrary harassment and abuse at borders and checkpoints, although the hostility towards journalists seems particularly severe. During his time in Europe, Mr. Omer spoke before European parliamentary audiences, describing the suffering in Gaza caused by the siege, closures and fuel and food shortages. It should be noted that Mr. Omer was not charged with any offence, nor was he carrying any prohibited materials. His treatment as described appears to constitute a flagrant violation of article 3(1)(a)(c) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which reads, in part, "... The following acts are and shall remain prohibited at any time and in any place whatsoever ... (a) violence to life and person ... (c) outrages upon personal dignity, in particular humiliating and degrading treatment". Article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is also relevant, as it proscribes "... cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment or punishment". More directly responsive to Mr. Omer's situation are article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and article 19 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1966). Article 19 (2) of the Covenant has been interpreted to apply in particular to journalists who strive to uphold rights "to receive and impart information of all kinds ... in writing or in print ... or through any media of his choice". Additionally, article 13 (2) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights confirms the right of a person to return unimpeded to his or her country of residence. "Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country." That right was grossly violated in the case of Mr. Omer.

20. Although the incident affected only one individual, it inevitably has a chilling effect, and appears to be part of a broader pattern of Israeli punitive interference with independent journalistic reporting on the occupation. Amnesty International responded to the lethal shooting of a Reuters cameraman in April 2008 by an Israeli tank, saying, "Fadel Shana appears to have been killed deliberately although he was a civilian taking no part in attacks on Israel's forces". In August, the tank crew responsible for Mr. Shana's death was officially cleared of wrongdoing in a letter written by the Israeli Advocate-General, Brigadier General Avihai Mendelblit, prompting the Editor-in-Chief of Reuters, David Schlesinger, to respond, "I'm extremely disappointed that this report [by the Israeli military] condones a disproportionate use of deadly force in a situation that the army itself admitted has not been clearly analysed". There are other criticisms of abusive Israeli behaviour towards Palestinian and foreign journalists in Gaza and the West Bank issued by such respected organizations as Reporters Without Borders and the Committee to Protect Journalists. In sum, the experience of Mohammed Omer appears to be only the most recent example of a pattern of official Israeli conduct interfering with press freedoms under conditions of occupation, thereby depriving the Palestinian population of whatever protection might result from exposing abuses of authority by the occupying Power. The United Nations has a clear responsibility and definite obligation to protect independent journalism, especially in war zones and areas under occupation, as part of its commitment to human rights and international law.

B. Closures and Israeli Defense Forces military operations in the West Bank: abuses against the civilian population in Nablus

21. The continuing encirclement of the main West Bank cities through the extension of the separation wall and the maintenance of checkpoints mean that exit and entrance remain difficult and humiliating. Even the ongoing peace talks between Prime Minister Olmert and President Abbas, the stated commitment by the Government of Israel to reciprocate for the renunciation of armed resistance by the Palestinian Authority by easing restrictions on movement on the West Bank and the marked decline of Palestinian acts of violence in the West Bank and Gaza have not eased the ordeal facing Palestinians under occupation. Cities and towns where Hamas influence is believed to be strong, as evidenced by success at the municipal level in the 2006 elections, have been placed under particular pressure as a result of frequent military incursion. Nablus is a case in point. The Special Rapporteur has received reports under oath from non-Palestinian observers of the situation in Nablus. The reports prove that Israel has used force continuously against the civilian population of Nablus without even claiming justification on the basis of prior resistance activities. From 26 June until late July of 2008, the Israeli Defense Forces carried out a series of nightly military operations in Nablus that led to the killing of at least two young Palestinians, the arrest of dozens of men, women and children and the confiscation and destruction of property, and generated an atmosphere of fear. Those military actions have taken place without any explicit charges brought against the residents of Nablus. The damage included the destruction of property belonging to several charitable organizations, including schools, clinics and an orphanage that had been providing necessary services to the population in Nablus. Those institutions were arbitrarily closed, as was the Nablus Mall, which contained some of the city's oldest, most respected and prosperous commercial establishments. The property of important business entities was requisitioned by Israeli military authorities without due process or any credible security justification. The overall impact of those Israeli activities has been to reduce by some 50 per cent the economic activity of the city, which previously had been regarded as the commercial centre of Palestine. Beyond those material losses inflicted by recent occupation policies and the psychological harm caused by the terrifying experience of daily late-night military incursions by heavily armed Israeli forces, there is the growing sense of physical isolation produced by the numerous checkpoints and roadblocks that surround the city.

22. Closures of charitable and other civil institutions by the Israeli military have taken place in other cities throughout the West Bank in the last several months. They are illustrative of the deterioration of the conditions of occupation in that part of the Palestinian territory and of the occupying Power's two-tier violation of Palestinian human rights and of Israeli obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention. That is, Israel is not only failing to fulfil its legal obligations as the occupying Power under international humanitarian law, but is also obstructing Palestinian efforts to mitigate the impact of those violations on the well-being of Palestinians enduring occupation. Because the situation in Gaza has been so extreme in the last year, with real fears of societal collapse, massive famine and widespread disease, there has been a comparative lack of attention to the hardships and suffering endured in the West Bank.

23. The United Nations has an independent obligation to protect the human rights of an occupied population, including ensuring that the rights of all sectors of the population are upheld, and not focusing only on those who face imminent humanitarian catastrophe. The occupation policies pursued by Israel are in violation of the spirit and the letter of international humanitarian law as set forth in articles 47 to 78 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. Article 53 is particularly relevant, requiring an occupying Power to refrain from destroying property of the occupied population unless “such destruction is rendered absolutely necessary by military operation”. The effect of the military closure operations was to destroy property belonging to the residents of Nablus. Articles 64 to 69 provide a legal framework for holding persons in the occupied territory criminally responsible for their alleged wrongdoing, if any, but the Convention unconditionally prohibits extrajudicial killing, reprisals and all forms of collective and punitive violence. Noted Israeli journalist Gideon Levy, writing in Ha’aretz on 20 July 2008, observed that West Bank Palestinian civilians “cannot be simultaneously imprisoned, prohibited from earning a living and offered no social welfare assistance while we strike at those who are trying to do so, whatever their motives. If Israel wants to fight the charitable associations, it must at least offer alternate services. On whose back are we fighting terror? Widows? Orphans? It’s shameful.” The moving report prepared by Mairead Maguire, Nobel Peace Prize laureate from Northern Ireland, addressing the closing of the Hebron orphanages, expresses similar views.<sup>7</sup>

C. Right to peaceful assembly: demonstrations against the wall in the West Bank

24. Ni’lin is a village situated in the Ramallah district of the West Bank near the wall that Israel has been unlawfully constructing on Occupied Palestinian Territory in defiance of the July 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. It has been the scene of numerous non-violent demonstrations against the construction of the wall that was built in such a way as to confiscate significant portions of the land belonging to the village. That is part of a longer story of land dispossession that has afflicted the Palestinians.

25. It is estimated that as much as 80 per cent of the land belonging to Ni’lin has been incrementally confiscated by Israel, starting in 1948. After the 1967 war, the location of Ni’lin near the Green Line led to further land confiscations on behalf of West Bank settlements (74 dunams for the settlement of Shalit, then 661 dunams for Mattiyahu, 934 dunams for Hashmonaim, 274 dunams for Mod’in Illit, 20 dunams for Menora), which took about 13 per cent of the village land. When a further 20 per cent of Ni’lin land, belonging to its residents, was officially slated for confiscation by Israel for the construction of the wall, strong demonstrations took place. Ni’lin became the inspirational centre of opposition to the wall and, during 2003-2004, it was the scene of numerous anti-wall demonstrations. In recent months, there have been protests by people living in the village and supporters from neighbouring cities such as Ramallah and Tulkarem, and also by Israeli peace activists who have come to Ni’lin to join in the non-violent demonstrations seeking to prevent the resumption of construction of the wall.

<sup>7</sup> Report on destruction of Muslim charitable institutions in Hebron by Israel, 5 June 2008.

26. Israeli military forces, including border police, have used a variety of violent means to disperse the demonstrators, including rubber-coated steel bullets and live ammunition. Two young Palestinians have died from gunshot wounds. Ahmed Mousa, a 10-year-old boy photographed at the demonstration, was killed, according to witnesses, as he was leaving the demonstration. A widely respected Israeli participant in the demonstrations, Uri Avnery, a former member of the Knesset, wrote in an article for the Ma'an News Agency, dated 3 August 2008, "A soldier aimed and shot the child with live ammunition at close range". Those who saw the boy described his face as "shot off". Mustafa Barghouti, a prominent Palestinian parliamentarian, was quoted as saying "Israel is trying to provoke peaceful demonstrators into using violence". A few days later, a second Palestinian, 19-year-old Yousef Akmada Omaira, also died from head wounds received while taking part in the funeral of Ahmed Mousa.

27. From the perspective of international human rights law, the residents of Ni'lin were entitled to demonstrate peacefully against a clearly unlawful extension of the occupation associated with the construction of the wall on occupied Palestinian land that was proceeding in defiance of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and its overwhelming endorsement by the General Assembly.<sup>8</sup> In addition, the Israeli use of excessive force, especially when it appears to deliberately seek to kill or maim demonstrators, including children, nullifies any claim that the police and military actions taken were necessary for purposes of security and public order. It is a basic right of people to defend their land against its unlawful seizure, and that right pertains in circumstances of occupation where there exists a legal regime in the form of the Fourth Geneva Convention deliberately designed to preserve the character of the occupied territory and uphold the interests of its citizens. In response to Palestinian legal initiatives, Israeli authorities have relocated segments of the wall to limit interference with Palestinian agricultural activity in Nil'in and Qalqilia.

IV. Settlements in the Palestinian territories and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights

28. The continued expansion of unlawful Israeli settlements on the West Bank and in Jerusalem constitutes a serious pattern of unlawful conduct on the part of the occupying Power and a disregard of Israel's own international undertakings to freeze settlement growth and remove "outposts" on the West Bank established without proper Israeli authorization. Additionally, the extent and scope of the Israeli settlement programme, including the creation of security arrangements and bypass roads, tunnels and bridges, is a decisive impediment to the establishment of peace between Israel and Palestine, as well as a source of daily friction under conditions of occupation. The unlawfulness of settlements anywhere in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, has long been established by a consensus of international law specialists, and confirmed by resolutions of the

---

<sup>8</sup> Legal Consequences of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, International Court of Justice advisory opinion, 9 July 2004; General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 called upon the parties to comply with the obligations as set forth in the advisory opinion. Israel has rejected the authority of the advisory opinion, and has proceeded with the construction of further segments of the wall.

General Assembly and the Security Council. That conclusion is most clearly supported by article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits the occupying Power from transferring “parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies”.

29. Unfortunately, the diplomatic situation bearing on the settlements was clouded by an exchange of official letters between Ariel Sharon, then Prime Minister of Israel, and George W. Bush, President of the United States of America, on 14 April 2004. The letters were widely interpreted as signalling an American acceptance of the permanent annexation by Israel of the large Israeli settlements near the 1967 borders, 80 per cent of the total settler population, as well as in the occupied portions of Jerusalem. It should be noted that while such letters may have political weight for the two Governments, they carry no legal weight, and can certainly not compromise Palestinian rights under international humanitarian law. In that basic sense, the letters are irrelevant to any legitimate peace process, and United Nations participation should reflect an understanding of the inability of the letters to impinge upon Palestinian rights.

30. It is significant that even discounting the legal importance or moral weight of these letters, an Israeli undertaking on the settlements was set forth in Prime Minister Sharon’s letter, but it had no discernible effects on behaviour. Sharon indicated an awareness of “the responsibilities facing the State of Israel”. Among them are “limitations on the growth of settlements; removal of unauthorized outposts”. Those responsibilities were reaffirmed by the current Israeli Government at Annapolis, but, again, have not been implemented to the slightest degree. To the contrary, settlement growth as measured by population, but even more so, by land acquisition, mainly by expropriation and seizure, and development has continued at an accelerated pace.

31. That pattern, and the resulting cantonization of Palestinian daily life, is increasingly seen as sending a message to the Palestinians that the two-State solution to the conflict is no longer viable, despite the fact that it remains the stated policy of the Quartet, the Annapolis Understanding and most commentary on the goals of the peace process. Among the disquieting aspects of the letter of President Bush is its support for shaping Israel’s eventual withdrawal obligations “In light of new realities on the ground, including major Israeli population centres.” There is no mention of the constant reminders to the Government of Israel that its settlement policy is incompatible with its obligations under international humanitarian law and with specific United Nations resolutions.

32. The extent of the settlement encroachment on West Bank and East Jerusalem territory is difficult to calculate with precision owing to the continuous process of expansion. The prevailing best estimate is that settlement land claims (together with Palestinian land seized for the construction of the separation wall) have led to the confiscation of 14 per cent of the territory of the West Bank, which itself represents only 22 per cent of the original British Mandate of Palestine. According to recent figures, there are currently some 200 settlements, 100 outposts and 29 Israeli military bases. The cost of sustaining the settlement network is about $556 million per year, and the number of settlers is estimated to be between 480,000 and 550,000. The rate of settlement expansion is placed at approximately 4 per cent per year, both with respect to land and population. There are a variety of special problems raised by the settlements that contribute to violence, both the violence of settlers towards Palestinians, and the violence of Palestinian resistance. The city of Hebron has been a persistent flashpoint and the scene of repeated violent incidents and tragic deaths, where 700 settlers are protected by 300 Israeli soldiers in a city of 150,000 Palestinian inhabitants. Perhaps, the most telling statistic (compiled by the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Occupied Palestinian Territory) is that Palestinian land taken by Israel for settlements, for closed military zones (including almost the entire Jordan Valley), and for Israeli-declared nature preserves now renders 40 per cent of the West Bank inaccessible and unusable for residential, agricultural, commercial or municipal development.

33. The expansion of settlements has been particularly notable in East Jerusalem. The Jerusalem District Planning and Construction Committee recently approved 1,800 new housing units (920 in Har Homa/Jabal Abu Ghneim, 880 in Pisgat Ze'ev). The expansion also furthers the Israeli policy of making East Jerusalem into a place of majority Jewish residence, and is accompanied by expulsions of Palestinians. In addition, the presence of 250,000 Jews living "illegally" in East Jerusalem is being overlooked.

V. Health crisis in the Palestinian territories

34. There is a consensus among specialized observers that a persistent health crisis exists in both Gaza and the West Bank. It is multidimensional, and there is a serious risk of a complete collapse of the basic health system, with disastrous consequences for the Palestinian population.

35. The basic economic and social situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is characterized by extremely high unemployment and poverty rates, especially in Gaza. According to both United Nations and World Bank sources, the poverty rate for the West Bank and Gaza combined is currently 59 per cent, and food insecurity affects at least 38 per cent of the overall population of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The unemployment level in Gaza is officially listed at 45 per cent, the highest in the world, but even that figure understates the true level for a variety of reasons. It is reported that 95 per cent of the factories in Gaza are now closed owing to the siege. The World Bank has suggested that that set of conditions could produce an "irreversible" economic collapse.

36. Israel has classified Gaza as an "enemy entity" since Hamas took over in mid-June 2007, and has justified restricting food and fuel provision to levels sufficient to sustain bare survival. According to available statistics, Gaza is receiving only 30 per cent of its fuel needs per week, and, in particular, receives insufficient quantities of cooking oil and diesel fuel. The designation of "enemy state" has also led Israel to block payment of customs revenue that belongs to the Palestinians, and both Europe and the United States of America suspended their economic assistance to Gaza.

37. Medical supplies and essential equipment are often not available owing to an inability to import spare parts or obtain replacements. Ill Gazans in need of specialized medical attention not available in Gaza have great difficulty acquiring exit permits to obtain treatment in Israel, and many have died because they did not receive timely medical attention. The obstacles confronting ill Palestinians in Gaza needing treatment in Israel are discussed in paragraph 46. According to the Gaza Community Mental Health Programme, the cumulative effect of those conditions has had "serious mental consequences [for] the Palestinian people, [with the] majority of civilians ... suffering from feelings of anger, anxiety, panic, depression, frustration and hopelessness as a result of Israeli occupation practices, [the] siege and poverty”.

38. The situation in the West Bank is less dramatically bad as far as conditions of health are concerned, but is still far below minimum international standards. Unemployment is at 25 per cent, even with economic assistance flowing to the Palestinian Authority, but closures and cantonization make it difficult and often impossible to sustain gainful economic activity. A basic difficulty is associated with the combination of checkpoints, roadblocks and permit requirements that impede movement to and from medical facilities even within the West Bank, especially from villages and refugee camps surrounding the larger towns and cities where hospitals and other medical facilities are located. The restrictions also make access to Israel very difficult, and often impossible, for most Palestinians living in the West Bank. It is widely reported that those conditions are causing a variety of ailments, especially in children suffering from malnutrition and trauma.

39. The Government of Israel denies any responsibility as the occupying Power for the severe substandard health conditions. With respect to Gaza, it claims that as of 12 September 2005 it is no longer the occupying Power as discussed in paragraph 5, and thus is no longer legally accountable for any adverse consequences experienced by the inhabitants of Gaza. Israel also argues that since the Hamas takeover, it has pursued a counter-terrorist policy towards Gaza that bears a resemblance to war, as in “the war on terror”. From the perspective of international law, Israel remains the occupying Power, and hence is subject to the Fourth Geneva Convention, which in articles 13 to 25 emphasizes in detail the legal duty of the occupying Power to ensure the health of the population subject to occupation.

40. That set of obligations has particular relevance to the Occupied Palestinian Territory in view of the prolonged nature of the occupation, and, with respect to Gaza, the additional acute impact of Israeli policies that adversely affect the health and well-being of the entire Gazan population. Article 16, for instance, reads as follows: “The wounded and sick, as well as the infirm, and expectant mothers, shall be the object of particular protection and respect”. That obligation is reinforced by article 25 (1) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which declares: “Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and his family, including food, clothing, housing, and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control”.

41. Perhaps the clearest articulation in international law of the right to health is to be found in article 12 (1) of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, which reads, in part, “The States parties to the present Covenant recognize the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health”. Article 12 (2) (b) and (d) are also relevant, reading, in part, “The steps to be taken by the States parties to the present Covenant to achieve full realization of this right shall include those necessary for: (b) The improvement of all aspects of environmental and industrial hygiene; ... (d) The creation of conditions which would assure to all medical service and medical attention in the event of sickness”.

42. Israel is a party to that treaty instrument, and is bound by the basic standards it affirms, which are in any event expressive of legal obligations embodied in customary international law. Overall, the obligations of international humanitarian law and of human rights standards are especially applicable in conditions of a fiduciary role as it is exercised by an occupying Power towards a captive population.

43. The whole approach taken towards Gaza by Israel and by the United States of America and the European Union, since the Hamas electoral victory in January 2006, involves a massive and unlawful systematic violation of article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which unconditionally prohibits collective punishment: “No protected person may be punished for an offence he or she has not personally committed. Collective penalties and likewise all measures of intimidation or of terrorism are prohibited”. More practically, medical specialists continually warn that the health system in Gaza is precarious, often described as being on “the verge of collapse” or “unsustainable”.

44. The experience of the West Bank, despite the absence of a systematic siege or the denial of funds needed to sustain health care, bears many resemblances to the situation in Gaza, although Israel makes no claim that it is not still the occupying Power in the West Bank. In the West Bank, the policies of the Government of Israel which punish the Palestinian population as a whole are routinely justified as necessary for the security of the occupation, including the settlements, and for Israel itself. Those security claims themselves, whatever their validity when independently asserted, have to be weighed in context against the harm caused to the occupied people. That was done by the International Court of Justice in relation to the wall (see para. 3), and the Israeli claim was rejected, especially as Israel had constructed the wall in Occupied Palestinian Territory and used the land confiscated for expansion of settlements, itself an unlawful purpose completely unrelated to legitimate security claims. Mental health treatment and access to medical facilities, especially in the face of health emergencies, have been particularly impeded by the ubiquitous restrictions on movement throughout the West Bank as a result of checkpoints, roadblocks and closures. Such restrictions seem excessive, and have been frequently observed, combined with a variety of intimidating and humiliating practices which discourage Palestinian movement in the West Bank. Over time, the situation is causing serious damage to the health of inhabitants. The regime of confinement amounts to collective punishment, and violates article 13 (1) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which states, “Everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each State”.

45. In sum, the forms that the occupation has taken in Gaza and the West Bank have put severe strains on the maintenance of the physical and mental health of Palestinians living under occupation. The harmful effects have been particularly severe for children. It is notable that, given the length of the occupation, the overwhelming majority of Palestinians in Gaza and the West Bank have spent their entire lives under occupation. At a conference held in East Jerusalem, the Special Rapporteur was particularly struck by the comment of a West Bank professor who teaches at Bir Zeit University who said, “I am 43 years old, and I have not had a happy day in my entire life”. In that respect, beyond statistics, the oppressiveness of a sustained and relentless military occupation is not consistent with maintaining basic mental and physical health.

A. Further infringements affecting medical patients from Gaza:
Shin Bet interrogation of Palestinian medical patients at the Erez crossing

46. Physicians for Human Rights-Israel issued a report on 4 August 2008 that contains the testimony of 32 Gazan medical patients who were interrogated at the Erez crossing. The report is based on information received since July 2007. The individuals were seeking entry to Israel to receive urgent medical treatment unavailable in Gaza for serious, often life-threatening conditions, and claimed to have been subject to harsh and improper questioning in intimidating circumstances by members of the Israeli General Security Service (Shin Bet). The testimonies exhibit a consistent Israeli insistence that the individual seeking an exit permit would have to wait indefinitely unless he or she agreed to supply the General Security Service with requested information and/or collaborate in the future with the Security Service. The report also states that a number of Gazans decided to forego medical treatment rather than endure interrogation, despite the likely disastrous health consequences of such a decision. One person said, “Afterwards, the interrogator told me, ‘you are sick with cancer and soon it will spread to your brain. As long as you do not help us — [you will] wait for [the opening of] Rafah crossing’”. The remark was typical of the testimony gathered for the report.

47. The Government of Israel has responded to the allegations contained in the report of Physicians for Human Rights-Israel, contending that its behaviour is within its sovereign rights, and is reasonable given the dangerous security conditions, such as Hamas attacks directed at the Erez crossing, where the interrogations take place. The main Israeli claims are that it no longer has any responsibility for what takes place in Gaza, as it ceased being the occupying Power on 12 September 2005, that it has complete discretion to deny Gazans access to Israel on any ground whatsoever and that that conclusion has been supported by Israeli judicial authorities.

48. For purposes of international humanitarian law, the Gaza Strip continues to be under Israeli occupation (see para. 5). Accordingly, although not explicitly responsive to the situation under review, articles 55 and 56 of the Fourth Geneva Convention impose on an occupying Power a general legal duty to take all necessary measures to safeguard the health of persons being protected.

49. Depending on how the attempted extortion of information and collaboration in exchange for exit permits to receive medical treatment is viewed, it would appear to be in violation at least of article 3 (1) (c), which prohibits “cruel treatment and torture”, as does article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Perhaps the most relevant legal text is the United Nations Convention against Torture, which lays out a broad set of requirements to avoid an inference of “torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment”. Article 1 connects torture and related treatment to behaviour by a public official that can be either “physical or mental” in the course of interrogation that seeks information by a variety of forms of intimidation; other provisions of the Convention against Torture impose a variety of legal duties on the State, and confer rights on aggrieved individuals.

50. The Special Rapporteur concludes that Israeli interrogation practices as reported by Physicians for Human Rights-Israel on the basis of Gazan testimonies strongly suggest violations of Israel’s legal responsibilities as occupying Power. The Israeli responses are not satisfactory because they rest on the premise that Gaza is no longer occupied. Additional disturbing news indicates that six seriously ill Gazans died in one 24-hour period while they were awaiting permission to travel. According to the Free Gaza Movement, 233 severely ill Gazan patients have died while delayed in their attempts to leave Gaza for necessary medical treatment during the period of the siege.

VI. Recommendations

51. The following recommendations drawn from the body of the report are emphasized as matters of urgency:

(a) The General Assembly should ask the International Court of Justice for a legal assessment of the Israeli occupation of Palestine territory from the perspective of the Palestinian right of self-determination;

(b) The assistance of the Security Council should be sought in the implementation of the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(c) In the light of persisting gross violations of the Geneva Conventions over a long period of time, serious consideration should be given to the legal obligations of the parties to these treaties “to ensure respect” for the substantive undertakings as called for in common article 1. An initial step might be to urge the Government of Switzerland, as repository for the Geneva Conventions, to convene a meeting of States parties with the purpose of exploring how to carry out their legal duties, given the persistent and severe violation of the legal regime of occupation by Israel;

(d) Serious note should be taken by all relevant agencies of the United Nations of the failure of Israel to fulfil its pledges at the Annapolis summit to halt settlement expansion, to ease freedom of movement on the West Bank and to attend to the humanitarian needs of the Palestinians under occupation;

(e) The United Nations should explore its own responsibility with respect to the well-being of the Palestinians living under unlawful conditions of occupation, particularly bearing on abuses of border control, freedom and independence of journalists, and the general crisis in health care, especially in Gaza;

(f) In view of the health crisis in Gaza, members of the international community, including the United Nations, should resume economic assistance as a matter of the highest priority. In the face of an impending humanitarian catastrophe, the responsibility to do what is possible to mitigate human suffering is serious. It is a responsibility towards the civilian population of Gaza, and is not dependent on whether Hamas satisfies the political conditions set by Israel, nor is it dependent on whether the ceasefire holds.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
25 August 2009

Original: English

---

Sixty-fourth session

Item 71 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General****

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Richard Falk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/64/150.

** This report was submitted after the deadline so as to include the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967

Summary

The present report examines the observance of international humanitarian and international human rights standards in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967 during the period from December 2008 to July 2009. The report takes note of the continuing unlawful non-cooperation of the Government of Israel with the mandate holder. It pays particular attention to the Gaza Strip after the Israeli military operation “Operation Cast Lead”, noting the continuation of the blockade that jeopardizes fundamental human rights, hinders reconstruction and repair of vital civilian infrastructure.

The report reviews alleged war crimes committed during Operation Cast Lead and the issue of accountability. It considers available information regarding attacks on United Nations facilities and the civilian population and provides an analysis of their legal merit. The report comments on the testimony of combat soldiers who took part in Operation Cast Lead, which gives evidence of consistent reliance on loose rules of engagement and widespread destruction of targets that could not be justified from a military or security perspective.

The report discusses the issue of Israeli settlements, noting that recent discussions of a freeze on settlements have been made as political steps and not with reference to Palestinian rights under international humanitarian law. Finally, the report discusses the issue of the continued construction of a wall in the occupied Palestinian territories and Israeli non-compliance with the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, which it considers to be damaging to international law, to the International Court of Justice and to the United Nations generally.

The report ends with recommendations that the General Assembly should request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the obligations and duties of Member States to cooperate with the Organization and its representatives; that Members of the United Nations should be encouraged to use national means, including courts, with respect to implementing international criminal law as pertains to the occupied Palestinian Territory; that Israeli respect for international law and Palestinian rights should henceforth be an integral element in future peace negotiations; and that consideration should be given to imposing limits on the supply of arms to the parties to the Israel-Palestine conflict.

---

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	4
II. Gaza after the ceasefire . . . . .	7
A. The blockade . . . . .	7
B. War crimes and accountability . . . . .	9
C. Breaking the silence . . . . .	11
III. Settlements in the Palestinian territories and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights . . . . .	14
IV. The wall and its legal implications . . . . .	17
V. Recommendations . . . . .	19

I. Introduction

1. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 was appointed in accordance with resolution 1993/2 A of the Commission on Human Rights, on 26 March 2008, and took up his position on 1 May 2008. Richard Falk as Special Rapporteur holder of the mandate was expelled from Israel on 14 December 2008, and despite repeated formal efforts to discuss future visits to the occupied Palestinian Territory (oPt), Israel has ignored all such approaches without providing any explanation.

2. His report takes particular note of the continuing unlawful non-cooperation of Israel with the work of the mandate holder. Along similar lines it has denied entry and cooperation with the Human Rights Council fact-finding mission on the Gaza conflict headed by Judge Richard Goldstone. As suggested in earlier reports this non-cooperative behaviour is setting an unfortunate precedent for Human Rights Council/United Nations relations with Member States, as well as interfering with the work of the mandate. As earlier, it is recommended that the General Assembly or the Human Rights Council request clarification of the legal consequences of this non-cooperative behaviour by referring the issue to the International Court of Justice for an advisory opinion. As a result of the inability of the Special Rapporteur to carry out site visits, this report relies heavily on the work of others, especially a variety of independent and reliable human rights non-governmental organizations and the work of various actors within the United Nations System.

3. The report covers developments taking place primarily from December 2008 to July 2009 and several issues will be addressed in detail, mainly the Gaza crisis, the accountability gap, the advisory opinion rendered by the International Court of Justice on 9 July 2004 on construction of a security wall by Israel,<sup>1</sup> settlement expansion, Palestinian self-determination and gaps in international humanitarian law. The following sections provide a brief overview of each of these issues.

4. On the Gaza crisis, although the ceasefire established by the parties on 18 January 2009 has generally held, the overall situation is that Gaza has continued to deteriorate in a manner that discloses patterns of grave breaches of the Fourth Geneva Convention and violations of international human rights law which have implications under international criminal law. Due to the persistence of the blockade of the Gaza Strip, insufficient basic necessities are reaching the population; health conditions have further worsened putting all Gazans at risk; building materials needed for the repair and reconstruction of homes and buildings destroyed by the Israeli Defense Forces during the 22-day Gaza War have been disallowed entry. The United Nations System is challenged on an emergency basis to take some tangible action to render protection to the civilian population of Gaza.

5. On accountability, there have by now been several authoritative reports with convergent and mutually reinforcing confirmation of war crimes allegations.<sup>2</sup> It will be important to add to this available information the report of the fact-finding mission headed by Judge Goldstone, due 12 September 2009, but it is not too early to wonder about the follow-up, which means seeking mechanisms to impose accountability and avoid impunity. A recent decision by the British Government to cancel contracts for the delivery of spare parts to the Israeli navy was based on objections to the manner in which Israel has conducted recent military operations. It is notable that Amnesty International called for a complete arms embargo on both Israel and Hamas in light of its conclusions discussed above about the Israeli military operation in Gaza named Operation Cast Lead.

---

<sup>1</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1; see also Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, ICJ Report 2004, p. 136, and General Assembly resolution ES-10/15.

<sup>2</sup> See para. 24 below.

6. The fifth anniversary of the advisory opinion on the construction of a security wall by Israel<sup>1</sup> calls attention to several factors: (a) despite the near unanimity of the International Court of Justice (14 judges against one) that the wall as located on occupied Palestinian territory was unlawful and should be immediately dismantled, Israel has continued construction of the wall, now about two-thirds complete; (b) the defiance of a definitive ruling of the Court on international law is a serious violation by Israel of its obligations as a Member of the United Nations and as a sovereign State; even though embodied in an “advisory opinion”, the decision of the Court represents an authoritative assessment of international law and was also accepted as authoritative by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/15 adopted on 20 July 2004; (c) the failure of the United Nations System to make more of an effort to implement such a clear and widely supported conclusion of international law is a further indication that Palestinian rights are not respected and that Israel enjoys a situation of de facto impunity; and (d) continued Palestinian non-violent demonstrations at wall construction sites have been met with excessive force by Israeli security forces resulting in several deaths and numerous casualties.<sup>3</sup>

7. On settlement expansion, despite many calls for a settlement freeze, including by United States President Obama, reports indicate that settlement expansion continues in both East Jerusalem and the West Bank. It has been made clear by the Palestinian Authority and the United States Government that any further progress on the “road map” depends on an unconditional Israeli freeze on settlement growth. It should be noted that such a freeze, even if agreed upon, does not deal with the underlying illegality of the settlements as set forth in article 49(6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

8. On Palestinian self-determination, the most fundamental international human right whose realization has been thwarted by Israeli occupation of Palestinian territories is the inalienable right of self-determination as enshrined in article 1 of both international human rights covenants. It has been widely assumed that the exercise of this Palestinian right would be brought about through bilateral negotiations, reinforced by the role of the United States, more recently by the Quartet (that has involved direct United Nations participation) and encouraged by the international community as a whole. Because the exercise of this right has been so long deferred and because the Palestinian situation under occupation endures multiple forms of unlawfulness, it is of utmost urgency to work towards a peaceful solution and an end to Israeli occupation.

9. It is relevant to this report, then, to take note of two sets of contradictory developments, some negative, others seemingly positive, bearing on the right of self-determination. The main negative development is the seeming unwillingness of the recently elected Israeli Government to endorse in clear terms the international consensus on a sovereign Palestinian State comprising the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem as its capital; the inability on the Palestinian side to achieve unified and legitimated representation that would seem to be a precondition for meaningful peace negotiations is another negative development.

---

<sup>3</sup> A number of 1,804 Palestinians were injured in anti-Barrier demonstrations between January 2005 and June 2009, which represents 31 per cent of all direct conflict injuries in the West Bank. See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Five Years after the International Court of Justice Advisory Opinion: A Summary of the Humanitarian Impact of the Barrier”, July 2009. Available from www.ochaopt.org.

10. This set of conditions has led in recent months to the advocacy of an imposed solution by external parties, often known as “the Solana Plan” because of the prominence accorded to proposals made along these lines by Javier Solana. At present, neither public opinion nor leaders in Israel or Palestine are favourable to an imposed solution, and its advocacy must be considered a negative development, inconsistent with the right of self-determination, and an expression of frustration arising from the seeming futility of direct negotiations.

11. The positive developments involve clear formulations of the importance of forward progress with respect to self-determination on the basis of an end to Israeli occupation and the establishment of Palestinian statehood. To this effect, President Obama stated on 4 June 2009 in Cairo: “the situation for the Palestinian people is intolerable, and America will not turn its back on the legitimate Palestinian aspiration for dignity, opportunity and a State of their own”. Such positions were reiterated by the Security Council in its statement of 11 May 2009, and by the Quartet in its statement of 26 June 2009 in Trieste: It agreed “that Arab-Israeli peace and the establishment of a State of Palestine in the West Bank and Gaza in which the Palestinian people can determine their own destiny is in the fundamental interests of the international community”.

12. As far as gaps in international humanitarian law are concerned, the prolonged occupation of Palestinian territories, as well as recent military operations by Israel, have revealed three gaps in the law that deserve to be noticed and closed as soon as possible: (a) the denial of a right by civilians to depart from a combat zone. This right was denied to all civilian inhabitants of Gaza during Operation Cast Lead with the exception of a few hundred Gazan residents with foreign passports and members of a small Christian community in Gaza.<sup>4</sup> There seems to be a variety of issues posed here about the occupiers’ duty to protect the civilian population as most fully described in Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions, which is binding because its norms are incorporated into customary international law despite Israel not being a party to this treaty;<sup>5</sup> (b) the denial of internationally donated reconstruction aid to repair war damage in Gaza due to maintenance of blockade in violation of article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. This blockage of reconstruction aid could be treated as an instance of prohibited collective punishment, but because it raises a distinct set of post-combat issues that are not explicitly addressed by international humanitarian law it might be best handled by the adoption of a further protocol to the Geneva Conventions; and (c) as a specific result of prolonged occupation of the occupied Palestinian Territory, now in its forty-second year, coupled with restrictions on mobility imposed by the occupying power, anguishing family fragmentations have added to Palestinian suffering and seem unacceptable from the perspective of international human rights.

---

<sup>4</sup> See Amnesty International “Israel and Gaza: Operation ‘Cast Lead’: 22 days of death and destruction”, 2 July 2009. Available from www.amnesty.org/en/library/info/MDE15/015/2009/en.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid.; see also articles 51, 52 and 57 of Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions.

13. The Nobel Peace laureate, Mairead Maguire, a frequent visitor to Gaza and the West Bank, has recently written that there is rightly much talk about people and aid getting into Gaza but for her the greatest crime the Israeli Government commits is to cut the people of Gaza off from family and friends in the West Bank, and also from other Palestinians around the world. She noted that denying people the right to meet with their families and friends is surely one of the greatest forms of torture and collective punishment of civilians.<sup>6</sup> Of course, these statements are not declarative of existing legal rights but they call attention to a gap in the international humanitarian law protection of a civilian population subjected to prolonged occupation. In the Palestinian situation, with rights of entry and exit so strictly monitored, these restrictions impose particularly anguishing burdens. An additional dimension of prolonged occupation is the inability of Palestinian refugees living in foreign countries to maintain contact with their families over the course of more than four decades. This tragic gap in civilian protection associated with prolonged occupation seems completely unaddressed in the existing international humanitarian law framework.

II. Gaza after the ceasefire

14. The continuing crisis that confronts the entire civilian population of the Gaza Strip with unalleviated desperate circumstances arising from various unlawful features of the Israeli occupation is a challenge to the United Nations System and to the international community. To ignore this challenge is to send a powerful message that violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights standards do not matter, and that a state backed up by strong geopolitical support enjoys virtually unrestricted impunity.

A. The blockade

15. The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) issued an important report entitled “Gaza: 1.5 Million People Trapped in Despair” on 1 July 2009. Taking note of the massive human and material devastation caused by the 22 days of Operation Cast Lead, the report writes: “Six months later [after the Cast Lead ceasefire], restrictions on imports are making it impossible for Gazans to rebuild their lives. The quantities of goods now entering Gaza fall well short of what is required to meet the population’s need. In May 2009, only 2,662 truckloads of goods entered Gaza from Israel, a decrease of almost 80 per cent compared to the 11,392 truckloads allowed in during April 2007, before Hamas took over the territory”.<sup>7</sup> According to estimates of Amnesty International, this is about one twentieth of the daily average of supplies entering Gaza before the blockade, although some estimates put the disparity at the one-fifth level.

16. ICRC report goes on to note that Gaza neighbourhoods destroyed by the military operation “will continue to look like the epicentre of a massive earthquake” unless “vast quantities”<sup>7</sup> of construction materials are allowed to enter both for rebuilding and to repair damage to the infrastructure. It is also claimed that as many as 340,000 Palestinians were displaced by Operation Cast Lead, and due to the blockade many of these remain homeless. The open letter to Carl Bildt<sup>8</sup> sent by the Palestinian Council of Human Rights Organizations also makes the following allegation: “patients, some of whom were injured as a direct result of ‘Operation Cast Lead’, are regularly denied permission to leave the Gaza Strip in order to seek critical medical treatment abroad, which has ultimately resulted in several deaths”.

---

<sup>6</sup> See letter to Miguel d’Escoto-Brockmann, President of the General Assembly, 17 July 2009.

<sup>7</sup> See International Committee of the Red Cross, “Gaza: 1.5 Million People Trapped in Despair”, July 2009.

17. In the language of the ICRC report, “the only way to address this crisis is to lift restrictions on spare parts, water pipes, and building materials such as cement and steel [and glass] so that homes can be rebuilt and vital infrastructure maintained and upgraded”.<sup>7</sup> As matters now stand, the maintenance of the blockade prevents reconstruction, keeps the vital water and sewage disposal system in unsafe condition, and extends the health crisis described in the prior report of the Special Rapporteur (A/63/326). The nearly $4.5 billion pledged in Egypt in March 2009, at the donor conference for reconstruction of Gaza has had virtually no impact on the life circumstances of Gaza and its population. Israel takes the position that only humanitarian goods will be allowed to enter Gaza, and that is strictly interpreted to mean subsistence needs, disallowing such foods as tomato paste, biscuits, and canned tuna, as well as a blanket prohibition on building materials.

18. The blockade in recent months has also meant a further deepening of Gazan impoverishment, which has increasingly been regarded by specialists, as virtually irreversible without a massive effort. As the ICRC report puts it, “the crisis has become so severe and entrenched that even if all crossings were to open tomorrow it would take years for the economy to recover”.<sup>7</sup> Most recent figures place unemployment at over 44 per cent, dependence on food aid for subsistence at 80 per cent, decline of industrial output at 96 per cent, and poverty at over 70 per cent. Most emphasis in discussions of the blockade have been on import restrictions, but the prohibition placed upon exports also has had an undeniable crippling effect on the economy and well-being of the Gazan population, leading to the complete collapse of industrial and agricultural exports that had provided some material security for significant portions of the population and some hope for the future development of the Gaza Strip. It would be inadequate to return to the status quo prior to Operation Cast Lead. Only a complete termination of the blockade that allows imports and exports at May 2007 levels would be acceptable.

19. One perverse side-effect of the continuing blockade is to encourage Gazan reliance on tunnels into Egypt to obtain essential supplies, giving rise to black market activities and to severe safety hazards. It has been reported that in 2009 alone, 39 persons have died as a result of tunnel accidents, either from tunnel collapse or suffocation due to fuel leakages. As has been noted, “the tight siege imposed by the Israeli Occupation Forces (IOF) on the Gaza Strip [...] has driven the tunnel industry in Gaza, which has prospered in response to the sharp lack of essential goods”.<sup>9</sup> If the crossings were open, the tunnels would likely disappear, or their role limited to efforts to smuggle arms and other illegal commodities. According to weapons specialists, Qassam rockets, predominantly used by Hamas in the attacks on Israel are locally made in Gaza, and thus there are no genuine security reasons for keeping the crossings closed. It would then become more feasible for

---

<sup>8</sup> See letter dated 23 July 2009 from the Palestinian Council of Human Rights, addressed to Mr. Carl Bildt, Foreign Minister of Sweden. Available from www.alhaq.org.

<sup>9</sup> See Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, press release No. 67/2009 of 28 July 2009.

Israel to monitor the tunnel traffic, to the extent it continued, for weapons smuggling.

20. The harmful impact of strict controls of mobility on family and social relations has been noted as part of the overall Gazan reality that ICRC graphically summarizes by the phrase applicable to the entire population of the Strip as “trapped in despair”. A further dimension of this entrapment is the disallowance of hundreds of young people to seek education abroad,<sup>10</sup> including some cruel and dispiriting incidents involving Palestinians who have gained fellowship assistance from leading universities only to be refused exit permits by Israel in its role as occupying power.<sup>11</sup>

21. It needs to be noted once again, and repeated frequently, that the blockade as such is flagrantly and vindictively unlawful given the clear obligation of article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention to avoid collective punishment without exception. As such it constitutes a war crime of great magnitude. This denial of access to reconstruction materials appears to be an aggravated violation of article 33, especially severe given the physical and psychological vulnerability of the population in the aftermath of Operation Cast Lead.

22. Once again, the Free Gaza Movement sought to send a ship, Spirit of Humanity, containing humanitarian supplies to Gaza as a symbolic expression of the unwillingness on the part of peace activists to respect the unlawful blockade. Six prior ships had succeeded in landing in Gaza, although a prior boat, Dignity, had been rammed by an Israeli naval vessel in December 2008, and prevented from reaching Gaza. The announced purpose of this mission was to deliver needed supplies to Gaza, but also to expose the failures of the United Nations and of the intergovernmental community of States to implement international humanitarian law as obligated by articles 1 and 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, as well as article 86(1) of Protocol I.

23. As before, the ship was stopped and boarded in international waters, which constitutes an unlawful operation; the passengers were arrested for various periods up to several days, including former American congresswoman and Green Party presidential candidate, Cynthia McKinney. Despite the international site of the incident, 20 passengers were initially charged with “illegally entering Israeli waters” but were eventually released. The Free Gaza Movement vividly reinforces the impression that civil society takes international humanitarian law and international criminal law more seriously in this setting than do governments.

B. War crimes and accountability

24. There have been several important studies under respected auspices that confirm the earlier suspicions based on journalistic presentations and eye witness accounts of war crimes associated with Operation Cast Lead. These include (a) a comprehensive study prepared by a team of specialists in international humanitarian law led by John Dugard, the former Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, as an undertaking of the Arab League, under the title Report of the Independent Fact-Finding Committee on Gaza: No Safe Place, presented to the League on 30 April 2009; (b) the major report on war crimes by Amnesty International, published in July 2009, entitled Israel/Gaza: Operation "Cast Lead": 22 Days of Death and Destruction, several reports by Human Rights Watch;<sup>12</sup> and (c) the ICRC report entitled Gaza: 1.5 Million People Trapped in Despair, which is mainly confirmatory of the scale of devastation, and the aggravating impact of the Israeli refusal to lift the blockade. There is also a major report conducted by the United Nations Board of Inquiry relating to damage done to United Nations facilities and personnel as a result of Operation Cast Lead. A series of conclusions relating to Israeli responsibility and obligations were revealed in the executive summary of the full report; regrettably by order of the Secretary-General the full report has not been released, but its main conclusion is that Israel without sufficient military justification and with deliberate intention did serious harm to several United Nations facilities and caused major casualties on the part of those taking shelter in United Nations buildings and schools.

<sup>10</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, The Humanitarian Monitor, June and July 2009.

<sup>11</sup> For confirmation of this role from the perspective of international law, see report of Amnesty International (note 3 above), rejecting Israel’s claim that implementation of its 2005 “disengagement” plan ended its legal responsibilities as occupying power in Gaza.

25. The reports of John Dugard, Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch achieve a high degree of reliability because their work product is convergent in two important respects: first, they adopt a balanced look at allegations of war crimes associated with the tactics relied on by Hamas, especially the firing of rockets into southern Israel and the accusations involving use of "human shields" by Hamas fighters, as well as a detailed consideration of allegations concerning Israeli tactics during Operation Cast Lead; and, secondly, they show an essential agreement on assessments of fact and law, leading to the overarching indictment of Israeli combat tactics as violative of international humanitarian law and thus engaging international criminal law. Such conclusions were further bolstered by the extraordinary testimony of 30 Israeli Defense Forces soldiers who took part in Operation Cast Lead, and received only perfunctory denials by the Government of Israel.<sup>13</sup> In addition, the reports also reached a subsidiary conclusion that Hamas tactics, although on a far more restricted basis, also constituted violations of the laws of war.

26. As indicated above, despite the overwhelming consensus associated with available materials relating to war crimes allegations directed at Israel and Hamas (as de facto governing authority in Gaza), the report of the fact-finding mission led by Judge Goldstone is awaited with great anticipation, and will likely address the same range of issues, but will include the evaluation of testimony received at a series of hearings with victims and other participants; members of this Human Rights Council mandated investigation were also denied entry to Gaza by way of Israel, and were forced to depend on the cooperation of the Egyptian Government to obtain access to Gaza; they received no requested cooperation from Israel. Its report is due in September 2009.

<sup>12</sup> "Rain of Fire: Israel's Unlawful Use of White Phosphorus in Gaza", 25 March 2009; "Precisely Wrong: Gaza Civilians Killed by Israeli Drone-Launched Missiles", 30 June 2009; "Rockets from Gaza: Harm to Civilians from Palestinian Armed Groups' Rocket Attacks", 6 August 2009; "White Flag Deaths: Killings of Palestinian Civilians during Operation Cast Lead", 13 August 2009 (available at www.hrw.org/en/publications/reports).

<sup>13</sup> See para. 29 below and note 14.

27. Whether in response to the incriminating testimony of Israeli soldiers or in anticipation of the report of Judge Goldstone, the Israeli Foreign Ministry announced on 30 July 2009 that it was going to investigate 100 complaints about Operation Cast Lead, including allegations concerning the use of phosphorus artillery shells. This is a welcome recognition by the Israeli Government that war crimes allegations are better acknowledged and investigated by Israel than dismissed out of hand. Although one continues to hope for an objective inquiry, Israel's formal announcement of the investigation was coupled with a detailed reassertion and comprehensive explanation of why Operation Cast Lead was a necessary and proportionate response to rocket attacks and suicide bombings over an eight year period, and that it was carried out with scrupulous regard for international humanitarian law.<sup>14</sup>

28. All of the above developments suggest that once the facts are established and recommendations received, attention will shift to the more difficult question of devising an appropriate mechanism for assessing accountability for war crimes. For political reasons, it is unlikely that such a mechanism will be established under United Nations auspices although the legal capacity to do so is definitely present, as it was illustrated by the establishment of ad hoc criminal tribunals for former Yugoslavia and Rwanda in the 1990s. The General Assembly also possesses the constitutional authority under Article 22 of the Charter of the United Nations to establish subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions, and although it has never established a criminal tribunal, there is every reason to suppose that it possesses the authority to do so. Further, for jurisdictional, as well as political reasons, it is almost certain that the International Criminal Court is not available: Israel is not a party and would undoubtedly refuse all forms of cooperation. Palestine did not attempt to become party until after Operation Cast Lead and is not widely thought to have at present the legal credentials to qualify and be accepted as a "State". It is likely that the only available form of accountability will result from civil society initiatives associated with the imposition of sporting and cultural boycotts and divestment moves involving trade and investment. Once again it is anticipated that governments and the United Nations will not follow through at the implementation stage with respect to international legal obligations.

C. Breaking the silence

29. Breaking the Silence: Operation Cast Lead<sup>15</sup> is a publication containing the responses of combat soldiers who took part in the military operation. It has received considerable media attention because it confirms from within the Israeli Defense Forces several disturbing allegations: consistent Forces reliance on unacceptably loose rules of engagement that meant that international humanitarian law guidelines as to limits on military force in relation to civilians and civilian targets became virtually inoperative and were not part of briefings given prior to or during combat; widespread destruction of target that could not be justified from a military or security perspective; use of phosphorus in densely populated zones; interference with Gazan civilian movement to places of relative safety in Gaza by the fragmentation of the Strip trapping many within the worst combat sectors; racist pressures brought to bear on soldiers by what was described as the “military rabbinate”, dehumanizing Arabs and Palestinians, and treating the conflict as a holy war against a demonic enemy.

<sup>14</sup> See Reuters, "Israel says investigating 100 Gaza war complaints", 30 July 2009; for the full text of the report, see The Operation in Gaza: Factual and Legal Aspects, Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs, 29 July 2009.

<sup>15</sup> Breaking the Silence is an organization of veteran Israeli soldiers that collects testimonies of soldiers who served in the occupied territories during the Second Intifadah. Breaking the Silence: Operation Cast Lead is available from www.breakingthesilence.org.il.

30. It should be noted that the testimonies of these Israeli Defense Forces soldiers assumed greater credibility because they were not at all anti-Israeli or anti-Zionist in tone, and many of the soldiers accepted the underlying rationale of Operation Cast Lead as a necessary defensive reaction to Hamas rockets. Also there were some qualifications placed on the condemnation of disregard of the Forces for civilians: there was acknowledgement that Forces warnings were issued, that warning shots were sometimes fired to identify whether individuals were suspicious or to deter Gazans from coming closer to where soldiers were deployed, and that sporadic efforts were made by some Forces commanders to avoid doing as much civilian damage as could have been inflicted. Overall, an impression emerges from the testimonies that many of the tactics relied upon were less designed to kill and injure Palestinian civilians than to protect Israeli soldiers from injury, death, or capture. However, much of this increased the risks of harm inflicted to innocent Palestinians. A typical sentiment in the testimony was the following order given by a field commander to Defense Forces troops: “Not a hair will fall off a soldier of mine, and I am not willing to allow a soldier of mine to risk himself by hesitating. If you are not sure — shoot”.<sup>15</sup> Or more generally: “There was a clear feeling, and this was repeated whenever others spoke to us, that no humanitarian consideration played any role in the army at present. The goal was to carry out an operation with the least possible casualties for the army, without its even asking itself what the price would be for the other side”.<sup>15</sup>

31. The testimonies were anonymous, and it has been impossible up to this point to contact any of the soldiers for further clarification. At the same time, there is no indication that such testimonies lacked authenticity. Most commentary on Breaking the Silence stressed the Forces breakdown of respect for the Geneva Conventions and limits on war fighting embedded in the laws of war. Some observers also placed value on the report as a more trustworthy narrative than the official Israeli Defense Forces and Israeli response to war crimes allegations, which have consisted of blanket denials coupled with some acknowledgement that a few individual soldiers may have strayed from professional military standards of conduct under battlefield stress. The main Israeli response claimed that the Israeli Defense Forces as a whole took exceptional risks to accord moral and legal protection to the civilian population of Gaza over the course of Operation Cast Lead and acted in a proper professional manner under difficult combat conditions.

32. Even more important than this alternative picture of Israeli Defense Forces behaviour in relation to Operation Cast Lead and international humanitarian law was the whole question as to whether the use of modern military technology in the densely populated setting of the Gaza Strip could ever have conformed to the requirements of that law. One of the soldiers expresses this concern in the following language: “In urban warfare, anyone is your enemy. No innocents. It was simply urban warfare in every way”.<sup>15</sup> Or “No accountability in such a zone whatever we do is fine ... ‘sons of light’ against ‘sons of darkness’” and “... the assumption is that everyone is a terrorist, and then it’s legitimate to do anything we please”.<sup>15</sup> In this spirit, for instance, it was practice to treat any Gazan seen at a great distance with a cell phone as a terrorist. What comes across is that the context of combat in Operation Cast Lead on the ground was such that war crimes were indistinguishable from the logic of the military operation.

33. It is true that Hamas militants were capable of disguising themselves as civilians, that anyone could be a threat, and that it is normal for a military undertaking to minimize casualties to itself. The soldiers' testimonies indicate that the process of doing this produces grossly disproportionate harm by way of casualties to innocent civilians and devastation of the urban environment. In other words, the argument is less about the departure from international humanitarian law guidelines in the military operation than questions about the inherent disconnect between that law and urban warfare on such a scale, especially under conditions where the civilian population is denied the option of exit or shelter. Although, to be sure, there were specific departures, as in the case of using white phosphorus shells and bombs and tank flachette shells in areas with dense civilian populations. Such practices amount to indiscriminate attacks and would seem flagrant violations of article 35(2) of Protocol I additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 relating to the protection of victims of international conflicts: "It is prohibited to employ weapons, projectiles and materials and methods of warfare of a nature to cause superfluous injury or unnecessary suffering."<sup>16</sup>

34. At the very least, there is a burden of persuasion on those who have recourse to such a use of military power. According to Israel, such an operation was necessary to remove a major security threat. Here, one is struck by the relative absence on the part of Israeli commanders of any effort directed at removing the threat of future rocket attacks. As has been argued in a previous report, and mentioned above, diplomacy offered Israel a promising path to address the important security interest associated with diminishing or even eliminating rocket fired into southern Israel from across the Gaza border. The most that was told to the soldiers by their commanders was that Operation Cast Lead was somehow a response to the rockets or, more specifically, that "we're going in to create appropriate conditions for the negotiation to bring Gilad Shalit home".<sup>15</sup>

35. It is the judgment of the Special Rapporteur that Operation Cast Lead discloses that urban warfare, fought on the ground, from air or sea, cannot maintain the legal standards of constraints associated with international humanitarian law, more specifically with the special requirements of the Fourth Geneva Convention and Protocol I associated with the protection of civilian, particularly in circumstances of prolonged occupation. In this respect, the Israeli claim of adherence to the restraints of international law is unconvincing, as demonstrated by the evidence of combat practices and de facto rules of engagement; equally unconvincing are contentions that Israeli soldiers in the field should be the main concern of investigation and potential accountability. Instead, the focus should be upon high military commanders and political leaders who devised such an operation, as well as on the limits on military power in the first place.

36. One of the most celebrated legal guidelines on war fighting is contained in article 22 of the annex to the 1899 Hague Convention II on the Laws and Customs of War on Land: "The right of belligerents to adopt means of injuring the enemy is not unlimited.” Article 35(1) of Protocol I expresses the same general sentiment: “In any armed conflict, the right of the Parties to the conflict to choose methods or means of warfare is not unlimited”.<sup>16</sup> Urban warfare of the sort carried out in Gaza during Operation Cast Lead seems to exceed those limits; however vague they may seem to be as formulated in 1899, the time may have come in 2009 to give them concrete application to the circumstances of modern urban warfare. In other words, it is of great importance to focus on the war itself rather than to limit inquiry to the alleged unlawful practices and tactics.

---

<sup>16</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 1125, No. 17512.

III. Settlements in the Palestinian territories and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights

37. The Israeli settlements in occupied Palestine have recently received great attention as a result of President Barack Obama’s widely publicized call for a “freeze” on settlement expansion as an essential step to revive negotiations looking towards a solution of the underlying conflict. President Obama has also asked Arab governments to reward Israel if it agrees to impose a freeze, implying that Israel would be taking a constructive political step for which it deserves to receive encouragement by way of reciprocity. So far the Israeli leader, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has agreed only to disallow the establishment of new settlements or an expansion of the land area under the control of existing settlements. However, he has insisted that the “natural growth” of West Bank settlements must be allowed, and further, that settlements in East Jerusalem will not be treated as part of any partial freeze. It should be observed that this controversy has been carried on without reference to Palestinian rights under international humanitarian law as if law is irrelevant, and the matter of the settlements is a purely political issue between the parties.

38. For this reason, it is important to recall what has been argued in several previous reports of the Special Rapporteur, that the settlements as such are unlawful under article 49(6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention that clearly states that “The Occupying Power shall not deport or transfer parts of its own civilian population into the territory its occupies”.<sup>17</sup> This widely shared legal assessment was authoritatively confirmed by the International Court of Justice in the course of its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004 on the construction of a security wall: “Israeli settlements in Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, are illegal and an obstacle to peace and to economic and social development ... [and] have been established in breach of international law.”<sup>1</sup> At present, there are reported to be 121 settlements on the West Bank, 12 situated on land annexed after 1967 by the city of Jerusalem, and about 100 “outposts”, which are physical presences established by the settler movement without receiving legal authorization from the Israeli Government.

39. From a legal perspective, acknowledging the relevance of Palestinian rights under law, any bilateral understandings between the United States and Israel, such as the Bush/Sharon exchange of official letters on 14 April 2004, assuring Israel that the large settlement blocs will be incorporated into the future borders of the Israeli State, are completely without legal value. The most important language in the letter of President Bush is the following: “In light of the new realities on the ground, including the existing major Israeli population centres, it is unrealistic to expect that the outcome of final status negotiations will be a full and complete return to the armistice lines of 1949 ...”. This is even more the case with respect to the effect of supposed informal understandings between the United States and Israel on natural growth of settlements despite the freeze commitments made formally in the Annapolis Declaration of December 2007. According to monitoring groups in actual fact, “tenders for new settlement building increased by 550 per cent from 2007. Actual settlement construction has increased by 30 per cent since the launching of the new round of peace talks. Settlement building around Jerusalem has increased by a factor of 38”.<sup>18</sup>

---

<sup>17</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, No. 973.

40. It is an elementary principle of law and equity that any understanding between two parties cannot alter the legal rights of a third party. At most, such an understanding, even in the form of a contract, has only a bearing on the political expectations that exist between the two parties, in this case Israel and the United States. It is also true that within Israel itself the American call for a settlement freeze has aroused passionate forms of opposition, including the renewed efforts by the settler movement to establish in the West Bank settler “outposts” that are illegal even under Israeli law.<sup>19</sup> Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the ultra-orthodox Shas Party in Israel, a partner in the ruling coalition, has angrily repudiated the idea of a settlement freeze: “American insidiousness tells us to build here and not to build there as though we were slaves working for them.”

41. In point of fact, Israel has throughout the entire period of the occupation expanded the population and territorial domain of the settlements: “In the two decades from 1972 to 1993, Israel increased the number of settlers in the West Bank, not including Jerusalem, from 800 to 110,600. In the following ten years — which roughly coincided with the Oslo peace process — the number increased at twice the rate, exceeding 234,000 in 2004. In East Jerusalem, the settler population jumped from 124,400 in 1992 to almost 176,000 in 2002.”<sup>20</sup> The most recent estimates of settler population put the number in the West Bank at about 300,000, with an additional 200,000 in East Jerusalem.

42. Further settlement growth, quite apart from the freeze issue as it relates to a resumption of “peace” negotiations, is a continual encroachment on Palestinian rights of self-determination, as well as an overall violation of the basic obligation of the occupier under the Fourth Geneva Convention to protect the property and societal prospects of an occupied population. Therefore, during a period when the road map was supposed to curtail settlement growth, actual Israeli behaviour went in a quite opposite direction.

43. As summarized in the letter of Palestinian human rights organizations to the Swedish Foreign Minister, Carl Bildt: “The population growth rate of Israeli settlers in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, is 4.7 per cent, compared to an annual growth of the Jewish population in the State of Israel, which is 1.7 per cent.

<sup>18</sup> Palestine Monitor, “Israeli Settlements”, updated 17 December 2008. Available from <http://www.palestinemonitor.org/spip/spip.php?article 7>.

<sup>19</sup> See Ethan Bronner, “West Bank Settlers Send Defiant Message to Obama” (The New York Times, 30 July 2009).

<sup>20</sup> See Ali Abunimah, One Country: A Bold Proposal to End the Israeli-Palestinian Impasse (Metropolitan Books, November 2006).

Thus, the smokescreen of ‘natural growth’ is used to mask continuing emigration of Jewish-Israeli settlers to the West Bank, as well as the creation of essentially new settlements appended to existing ones.”<sup>8</sup> Some observers argue that these figures exaggerate the threat posed by this settlement growth, insisting that most of the growth is in haredin non-Zionist settlements, such as Modi’in Illit and Beitar Illit, currently with 45,000 residents who seem ready to move if given alternative housing within pre-1967 Israel as part of a solution to the underlying conflict.

44. Others question this flexibility, and the militant wing of the settler movement is adamantly opposed to any retreat from the present contours of the settlement phenomenon, and regard openly and deliberately the expansion of the settlements as the best insurance against the Palestinians ever establishing a sovereign State of their own, or at least a viable sovereign and independent State.

45. House demolitions unrelated to any security pretensions have been a major device in extending Israeli control over the West Bank in a manner that impairs Palestinian rights. As many as 277 homes were demolished in 2008 within the occupied Palestinian Territory, with East Jerusalem being most affected. Between January and July 2009, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) recorded the demolition of 221 Palestinian-owned houses, which displaced over 500 people.<sup>21</sup> These demolitions, besides being extraordinarily inhumane, impair Palestinian prospects for self-determination. A complementary technique relied upon in Jerusalem is the denial of building permits even to long-term Palestinian residents as part of a continuing effort to change the demographics of the city in Israel’s favour.

46. The settlements also pose an additional problem for the maintenance of human rights and compliance with the Fourth Geneva Convention. The location of Israel’s unlawful security wall has the effect of placing an estimated 385,000 settlers between the wall and the Green Line, while entrapping approximately 93,000 Palestinians on the Israeli side of the wall, sometimes cut off from their agricultural lands and parts of their villages, as well as from the West Bank generally.

47. There are several intertwined issues relevant to the mandate: (a) the settlements, and any further expansion, are a major unlawful impediment to the realization of the Palestinian right of self-determination; (b) if Israel accepts a freeze on unlawful settlement expansion it seems unreasonable for it to receive some kind of reciprocal gesture from the Arab governments, that is, should Israel be rewarded for doing what it was legally required to do in the first place; (c) agreements between Israel and the United States are legally irrelevant with respect to the settlements as only the Governments of Israel and the Palestinian Authority have the authority to determine their status in the context of peace negotiations; (d) Israel as occupying power has an underlying legal obligation to dismantle existing settlements, including those in East Jerusalem, and not interfere with Palestinian growth and development. This conclusion has also been reached by B’Tselem, the respected Israeli human rights organization, recommending a “humane” dismantling that respects settlers’ human rights, including compensation for any loss.<sup>22</sup>

---

<sup>21</sup> See OCHA, “The Humanitarian Monitor”, July 2009. Available from www.ochaopt.org.

<sup>22</sup> See “Land Expropriation and Settlements”. Available from www.btselem.org/English/settlements.

IV. The wall and its legal implications

48. The date of 9 July 2009 marked the fifth anniversary of the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice on the security wall, still being constructed mainly on the territory of the occupied West Bank, so designed as to be 86 per cent on West Bank territory. The wall was supposed to extend for 723 kilometres when finished, which is twice the length of building the wall along the Green Line and which would have saved Israel an estimated $1.7 billion of United States dollars. At present it is reported to be only about 60 per cent complete after a construction effort that has gone on for seven years, with latest reports indicating that construction has been suspended for budgetary reasons despite the claimed necessities of security. The Ministry of Defense and public opinion of Israel credit the wall with improved security within Israel; the significant reduction in terrorist incidents in recent years is invoked to confirm this claim. Critics, including the leadership of the Palestinian Authority, call for the dismantling of the wall, contending that it is a land grab unrelated to security that has caused great hardship to the Palestinians living near to or on the Western side of the wall, as well as being unlawful as located.

Israel's unlawful occupation: crisis of authority in international law

49. Despite the diversity among the 15 judges of the International Court of Justice, they voted 14 against 1 on the main issues of international law concluding: "... the construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory ... [is] contrary to international law ... Israel is under an obligation to cease forthwith the works of construction ... to dismantle forthwith the structure therein situated ... to make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall".<sup>1</sup> On 20 July 2004, the General Assembly at its tenth emergency special session voted overwhelmingly<sup>23</sup> to insist that Israel comply with the rulings of the International Court of Justice, and also called upon the General Assembly and the Security Council to consider what further action was required to end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall. The Assembly in its resolution ES-10/15 also called upon all States Member of the United Nations to comply with their obligations as mentioned in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, the United Nations highest legal body. Attention was particularly called to the obligation of States not to render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation created by such construction. Many subsequent resolutions adopted overwhelmingly by the General Assembly as well as the Human Rights Council have renewed the call on Israel to comply with its legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion.<sup>24</sup>

50. As is undisputed, Israel has rejected the findings of the International Court of Justice, indicating that it will only adhere to the rulings of its own national judicial system. It has done so, upholding a series of decisions by the Israeli Supreme Court that order the relocation of the wall so as to lessen the harmful impact on Palestinian communities. It is true that an advisory opinion of the Court is “non-binding” as a direct decision, but it represents an authoritative assessment of the relevant international law. Even though the findings are not directly binding, they present a definitive set of conclusions as to the requirements of international law under the circumstances. When the conclusions reached are so overwhelmingly supported, then there is no basis for “the law” to be inconclusive or contested. Such an assessment is strengthened here because the lone dissenting judge, from the United States, indicated in his Declaration that he accepted most of the legal analysis made by the majority. However, he felt that no firm conclusions could be reached without a better appreciation of the Israeli security arguments for locating the wall on the occupied territory.

<sup>23</sup> A number of 150 Member States voted in favour, and six against (Australia, Micronesia, Israel, Marshall Islands, Palau, United States).

<sup>24</sup> See General Assembly resolution 63/97 (adopted on 5 December 2008 by a vote of 171 to 6, with 2 abstentions), para. 6; see also Human Rights Council resolution 10/18 (adopted on 26 March 2009 by 46 to 1, with no abstentions), para. 8.

51. As with the confirmed reports of war crimes, the non-implementation of the legal conclusions of the Court is extremely damaging to the authority of international law, of the Court, and of the United Nations generally. An unfortunate message has been delivered: the authority of the international community has been defied by a Member State of the United Nations, harm has been inflicted on a civilian population that is supposed to be under the protection of international law, and neither States nor the organs of the United Nations do anything about it. As with other aspects of the conflict, the failure to uphold Palestinian legal rights and the treatment of the Court both constitute a crisis of authority and reinforce for the Palestinians the idea that it is no help to have international law on its side.

52. Israel can defy with impunity its international legal obligations. The combination of an insistence that Palestinians renounce all forms of armed resistance and the failure to respect legal rights coupled with United Nations inaction in relation to this failure constitutes the current Palestinian dilemma. What is to be done by the Palestinians under such circumstances? Israeli columnist Gideon Levy explains the currently cynical Israeli approach to peace negotiations as an outgrowth of this situation: Israelis are not paying any price for the injustice of occupation. Life in Israel is just peachy. Cafes are bustling. Restaurants are packed. People are vacationing. Who wants to think about peace, negotiations, withdrawals — the “price” that might have to be paid. The summer of 2009 is wonderful. Why change anything?<sup>25</sup>

53. It should be noted that the issue of unlawfulness arises almost exclusively as a result of building the wall on the occupied Palestinian Territory. If the wall had been built along the Green Line or inside pre-1967 Israel, it might have generated moral and political criticisms associated with such a coercive and hostile form of separation, but not legal objections. The Berlin Wall was not challenged legally, but it was symbolic of what was wrong about East Germany and the Soviet approach to world order. If the Soviet Union had dared to build the wall even a few feet on the West Berlin side of the dividing boundary it could have well provided the trigger of World War III. It is notable that current American fence-building along the Mexican border, while controversial, is scrupulously respectful of Mexican territorial sovereignty. If a State or political community is not as powerless as Palestine, law and respect for territorial rights are generally respected.

---

<sup>25</sup> See Jerrold Kessel and Pierre Klochendler, “Mideast: Building Peace on an Incomplete Wall” (Inter Press Service, 27 July 2009).

54. Palestinian protests against the wall continue in several sites in the West Bank, most notably weekly demonstrations near the towns of Bil'in and Nii'iln. Israel has responded with rubber bullets, tear gas, and arrests, with several deaths and many injuries resulting. It would appear that Israeli security forces have been using excessive force in violation of their basic duties under international humanitarian law as the occupying Power.

V. Recommendations

55. The following recommendations drawn from the body of the report are emphasized as matters of urgency:

(a) The General Assembly should request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the obligations and duties of Members States of the United Nations to cooperate with the Organization and its representatives;

(b) Members States should be encouraged to use national means, including courts, to fulfil their obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention, articles 146 to 149, with respect to implementing international criminal law as pertains to the occupied Palestinian Territory;

(c) Israeli respect for international law and Palestinian rights should henceforth be an integral element in future peace negotiations;

(d) Consideration should be given to imposing limits on the supply of arms to the parties to the Israel/Palestine conflict;

(e) The unlawfulness of Israeli settlements should be confirmed, and steps taken to move beyond the freeze, and in the direction of dismantling, with due respect for the human rights of all affected;

(f) Consideration should be given to requesting the International Committee of the Red Cross or some other designated body to study and make recommendations as to the special problems arising from prolonged occupation.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
30 August 2010

Original: English

---

Sixty-fifth session

Item 69 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General****

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Richard Falk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/65/150.

** The present report was submitted late in order to include the most up-to-date information.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The present report considers developments relevant to the obligations of Israel under international law, as well as the situation of people living in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Emphasis is given to the cumulative impact of Israeli policies in the West Bank and East Jerusalem arising from prolonged occupation, which exhibits features of colonialism and apartheid, as well as transforming a de jure condition of occupation into a circumstance of de facto annexation.

These developments encroach on the inalienable Palestinian right of self-determination in fundamentally detrimental ways. Attention is also devoted to habitual concerns involving settlement growth in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, the problems posed by the continued construction of the separation wall, issues of collective punishment, and a variety of other human rights concerns, including concern over the health-related and other adverse impacts of the continuing blockade of the 1.5 million residents of Gaza, consideration of the “Freedom Flotilla” incident of 31 May 2010 and the continuing effort to assess whether Israel and the responsible Palestinian authorities have carried out adequate investigations of war crimes allegations arising from the Gaza conflict of 2008-2009.

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction and overview .....	3
II. Occupation policies in the West Bank and East Jerusalem .....	8
A. General observations .....	8
B. Poverty and children in the West Bank .....	10
C. Settlements .....	11
D. Settlement freeze .....	13
E. Settler violence .....	14
F. Ethnic cleansing in occupied East Jerusalem .....	15
G. The wall .....	17
III. Gaza .....	18
A. General comment .....	18
B. Freedom flotilla incident .....	20
C. Report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict (“Goldstone report”) .....	21
IV. Recommendations .....	22

I. Introduction and overview

1. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 has again prepared the present report without the benefit of cooperation from the Government of Israel. This has meant an inability to gain access to the Occupied Palestinian Territories or to have contact with Palestinians living under occupation. Future reports will compensate for this deficiency by seeking access to the Gaza Strip on the basis of cooperation by the Government of Egypt and meetings with relevant personalities in countries bordering the Occupied Palestinian Territories. It should be noted once again that Israel, as a Member of the United Nations, is in violation of its legal obligation to cooperate with the Organization in carrying out its official duties. This failure is especially serious as the International Court of Justice noted in its advisory opinion,<sup>1</sup> rendered on 9 July 2004 that the United Nations has “a special responsibility” for the peaceful resolution of the Israel-Palestine conflict. The Special Rapporteur will continue to seek cooperation from the Government of Israel, but it would be helpful as well if the Human Rights Council, the General Assembly and the Secretariat of the United Nations implemented their obligation to take action to seek Israeli cooperation to the extent mandated by international law.

2. There have been many adverse developments in recent months that have intensified the ordeal of the Palestinians living under occupation in the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza. Several of those developments will be discussed in greater detail below in the substantive sections of the present report. It continues to be important to call attention to the cumulative process of Israeli encroachment on fundamental and inalienable international human rights standards — that dimension of the Palestinian right of self-determination relating to territorial integrity. The right of self-determination is the underpinning of all other human rights, as is recognized by its inclusion in article 1 common to both international covenants on human rights, and also by its status as a peremptory norm of customary international law. This inalienable right belongs to all peoples, including non-self-governing peoples, and is being denied whenever a people is living under the harsh, oppressive and alien conditions of externally imposed rule that have characterized the belligerent occupation of the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza since 1967. The oppressiveness of Israel’s occupation over more than 43 years is evident in the range of Israeli violations of the Fourth Geneva Convention and of applicable international human rights law, as well as of defiance of the International Court of Justice and of numerous resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council.

3. Beyond these general characteristics of unlawfulness pertaining to the occupation lie the additional severe conditions depicted by my predecessor, John Dugard, in his January 2007 report to the Human Rights Council.<sup>2</sup> Professor Dugard pointed to “features of colonialism and apartheid” that characterize Israel’s occupation, aggravating the charges of unlawfulness, and creating additional obligations and responsibilities for Israel as the occupying Power, for third States, and for the United Nations.<sup>3</sup> Colonialism constitutes a repudiation of the essential legal rights of territorial integrity and self-determination, and apartheid has come to be formally treated as a crime against humanity.<sup>4</sup> The gravity of these contentions underscores the claim that the occupation constitutes a severe and unprecedented denial of the right of self-determination that has long been in urgent need of rectification and reparations.<sup>5</sup> The unlawfulness of colonial governance and the criminality of apartheid also have the special status in international law of being “peremptory norms”.<sup>6</sup> It is the opinion of the current Special Rapporteur that the nature of the occupation as of 2010 substantiates earlier allegations of colonialism and apartheid in evidence and law to a greater extent than was the case even three years ago. The entrenching of colonialist and apartheid features of the Israeli occupation has been a cumulative process. The longer it continues, the more difficult it is to overcome and the more serious is the abridgement of fundamental Palestinian rights.

---

<sup>1</sup> See A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1; see also Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, and General Assembly resolution ES-10/15.

<sup>2</sup> See A/HRC/4/17.

4. The allegation of colonialism as a feature of Israel’s occupation is best understood in relation to the extensive and continuing settlement process, which encompasses the official 121 settlements (and 102 “outposts” illegal under Israeli law) and the extensive network of Jewish-only roads connecting the settlements to one another and to Israel behind the green line.<sup>7</sup> The totality of this encroachment on the territory of the West Bank has been estimated to be 38 per cent if all restrictions on Palestinian control and development are taken into account. This de facto annexation of Palestinian territory is reinforced by the construction of 85 per cent of the separation wall on occupied Palestinian territory in a manner declared unlawful in the almost unanimous (14-1) 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. It is widely believed that the settlement blocs and the land to the West of the wall (comprising 9.4 per cent of the West Bank) have been permanently integrated into Israel in a manner that international negotiations are incapable of reversing. The Government of the United States of America, the main sponsor of negotiations between the parties, reportedly holds the position that Israel can retain some of the settlements in the West Bank as part of any resolution of the conflict.<sup>8</sup> This position discloses a continuing insistence that negotiations must incorporate “facts on the ground” although many of those facts manifestly violate international humanitarian law. In effect, “peace” would be based not on an unconditional withdrawal from territory occupied in 1967, as mandated by Security Council

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., para. 62.

<sup>4</sup> See article 7, Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 2187, No. 38544; and General Assembly resolution 1514 (XV), “Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples”, 14 December 1960.

<sup>5</sup> These legal conclusions follow from the following authoritative texts of international law doctrine: the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (1960) and the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid (1973). Apartheid is listed as one type of crime against humanity in article 7 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.

<sup>6</sup> Article 53 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties (1969) defines a peremptory norm as “a norm accepted and recognized by the international community of States as a whole as a norm from which no derogation is permitted and which can be modified only by a subsequent norm of general international law having the same character”.

<sup>7</sup> See Canadians for Justice and Peace in the Middle East, “Factsheet: Illegal Israeli Colonies in the Occupied Palestinian Territories”, April 2010, available at <http://www.cjpmc.org/DisplayDocument.aspx?DocumentID=760&SaveMode=0>.

<sup>8</sup> See Matthew Lee, “US Readies New Mideast Peace Push”, Associated Press, 7 January 2010.

resolution 242 (1967), but on a set of subsequently created unlawful conditions that encroach on Palestinian rights under international law and curtail territorial prospects for an eventual Palestinian State. Israel's colonialist ambitions and policies are also expressed through appropriation of the resources of occupied Palestinian territory, especially water, and disproportionately and in a discriminatory manner making a far greater amount of water resources available to the unlawful settlements compared with lawful Palestinian inhabitants and refugees (4 to 5 times the per capita amount supplied to settlers, at an estimated one fifth of the price charged to Palestinians).<sup>9</sup> This means that the occupation has become a form of colonialist annexation that severely compromises the territorial integrity of any future independent Palestinian entity. Israel has declared and acted upon its annexationist intentions in East Jerusalem ever since the conclusion of the war of June 1967 and has taken steps to consolidate its administrative control over a unified and enlarged Jerusalem. These steps have included efforts to reduce the number of Palestinians living in East Jerusalem, as well as to encourage and subsidize the establishment and expansion of large, unlawful settlements within the parts of the city occupied in 1967, which were historically overwhelmingly Palestinian and have been internationally regarded as the capital of a future Palestinian state.<sup>10</sup> This settlement process violates article 49 (6) of Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits the transfer of the population of an occupying power to the territory temporarily occupied, and involves a determined political effort by Israel to transform a set of conditions that are legally and politically temporary into a permanent reality. After more than four decades, it is appropriate to conclude that Israel's occupation of Palestinian territories has ceased to be temporary, and acknowledge that it has become tantamount to permanent.

5. Apartheid, although associated with the specific circumstances of racism that prevailed in South Africa until 1994, by virtue of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid and of being defined in the Rome Statute as a crime against humanity, is applicable to other situations in which discriminatory racial practices entailing a dual structure of rights and duties are imposed by prevailing law on a subordinated people. The Convention relating to apartheid criminalizes "inhuman acts committed for the purpose of establishing and maintaining domination by one racial group of persons over any other racial group of persons and systematically oppressing them".<sup>11</sup> The Rome Statute criminalizes "inhumane acts" committed in the context of, and aimed at maintaining, "an institutionalized regime of systematic oppression and domination by one racial group over any other racial group".<sup>12</sup> It is this general structure of apartheid that exists in the Occupied Palestinian Territories that makes the allegation increasingly credible despite the differences between the specific characteristics of South African apartheid and that of the Occupied Palestinian Territories regime. There is a question of definition as to whether Jews and Palestinians are "racial groups" within

<sup>9</sup> See Badil Resource Center for Palestinian Residency and Refugee Rights, Al Madal, No. 39/40 (autumn 2008/winter 2009), and Amnesty International, Troubled Waters — Palestinians Denied Fair Access to Water, 2009.

<sup>10</sup> See Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002), 1515 (2003) and 1850 (2008): East Jerusalem is considered by the international community to be an occupied Palestinian territory.

<sup>11</sup> See the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid, article II (resolution 3068 (XXVIII), 30 November 1973).

<sup>12</sup> The Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, article 7.2 (h).

the meaning of these legal instruments. Some salient apartheid characteristics will be listed, although owing to limitations of space it is not possible to provide detailed accounts of these features of the occupation. For details on the apartheid character of the Israeli occupation, there exists an expert study that is both reliable and convincing.<sup>13</sup> Among the salient apartheid features of the Israeli occupation are the following: preferential citizenship, visitation and residence laws and practices that prevent Palestinians who reside in the West Bank or Gaza from reclaiming their property or from acquiring Israeli citizenship, as contrasted to a Jewish right of return that entitles Jews anywhere in the world with no prior tie to Israel to visit, reside and become Israeli citizens; differential laws in the West Bank and East Jerusalem favouring Jewish settlers who are subject to Israeli civilian law and constitutional protection, as opposed to Palestinian residents, who are governed by military administration; dual and discriminatory arrangements for movement in the West Bank and to and from Jerusalem; discriminatory policies on land ownership, tenure and use; extensive burdening of Palestinian movement, including checkpoints applying differential limitations on Palestinians and on Israeli settlers, and onerous permit and identification requirements imposed only on Palestinians; punitive house demolitions, expulsions and restrictions on entry and exit from all three parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territories.

6. It should also be noted that the conditions of the continuing Israeli occupation of Gaza rest on the operational reality of effective control, despite the Israeli “disengagement” in 2005, which involved the withdrawal of ground forces and the dismantling of settlements. In this regard, the situation in Gaza, although legally and morally deplorable, is not characterized by either colonial ambitions as to territory and permanence or an apartheid structure. Such an assertion is not meant to minimize the unlawfulness, and seeming criminality, of the blockade of Gaza that has been maintained since mid-2007, in violation of the prohibition against collective punishment contained in article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, but only to distinguish it. Gaza has been recently described by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, David Cameron as “a prison camp”.<sup>14</sup> Such a persistent situation of pervasive abuse seems to raise the level of responsibility for the United Nations and Member States, as underscored by the former Secretary-General, Kofi Annan. He observed that the primary raison d’être of every State is to protect its population, but that “if national authorities are unable or unwilling to protect their citizens, then the responsibility shifts to the international community” to use all necessary means, “including enforcement action” if lesser methods prove insufficient.<sup>15</sup> It would seem that the Gazans, although not citizens of the occupying State, enjoy the status of “protected persons” under international humanitarian law. They have been left unprotected with respect to their basic rights for many years, in violation of the spirit and the letter of what then Secretary-General Annan agreed was an emerging norm imparting “a collective responsibility to protect”, a responsibility that he declared “we must embrace ... and, when necessary, ... act on it”.<sup>16</sup> Gaza has long presented such a challenge in a

---

<sup>13</sup> Human Sciences Research Council of South Africa, “Occupation, Colonialism, Apartheid? A reassessment of Israel’s practices in the occupied Palestinian territories under international law”, Cape Town, 2009.

<sup>14</sup> BBC News, “David Cameron describes blockaded Gaza as a ‘prison’”, 27 July 2010; available at www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-10778110.

<sup>15</sup> See A/59/2005, para. 135.

<sup>16</sup> Ibid.

situation of acute and massive humanitarian suffering resulting from the policies of the occupying Power.

7. It is important to take note of the relevance of the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice on the accordance with international law of the unilateral declaration of independence in respect of Kosovo.<sup>17</sup> The legal conclusion reached by a 10-4 majority was that Kosovo's unilateral declaration of independence on 17 February 2008 did not violate international law. Although such a legal proceeding is formally classified as an advisory opinion, it is considered by most jurists to represent the most authoritative assessment of contested international legal issues available within the international community. Such an authoritative finding by the highest judicial body in the United Nations is potentially relevant to the implementation of the right of self-determination for Palestinians. The International Court of Justice observed that there had been a prolonged failure by governmental representatives in Pristina and Belgrade to resolve by negotiation the issue of the legal status of Kosovo, making the issuance of a unilateral declaration by Kosovo a reasonable course of action.<sup>18</sup> This issue has a bearing on the situation pertaining to the human rights of Palestinians, who have lived so long under occupation. As is generally accepted, the right of self-determination is the most fundamental right of a people, and it applies especially to those subject to any form of external domination interfering with self-governance, economic development, human rights and control over collective destiny. The existence of a Palestinian right of self-determination, by way of establishing an independent State, has been accepted by a consensus of Governments and by the United Nations, and it is an operating premise of "the road map" guiding the Quartet.<sup>19</sup> The failure of bilateral international negotiations over the course of decades to establish a final status for Palestine or to insist upon Israeli withdrawal from Palestinian territories occupied in 1967 (as unconditionally and unanimously prescribed in 1967 by the Security Council in its resolution 242 (1967)) creates a background that resembles, and in some dimensions exceeds, in important respects the situation confronting the Government of Kosovo. There has existed overwhelming evidence for many years that Israeli control over the Occupied Palestinian Territories has been oppressive from the perspective of international law, as referenced by unlawful occupation policies given the requirements of international humanitarian law and international human rights law. Lengthy negotiations have not resolved the issue of the status of Palestine, nor do they offer any reasonable prospect that any resolution by negotiation or unilateral withdrawal will soon occur. Under these circumstances, it would seem that one option available to the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) acting on its own or by way of the Palestinian Authority under international law would be to issue a unilateral declaration of status, seeking independence, diplomatic recognition and membership in the United Nations. The Kosovo advisory opinion provides a well-reasoned legal precedent for such an initiative, although the Statute of the International Court of Justice, states clearly, in article 59, that even in its more obligatory "decisions" the outcome has "no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case". At the same time, the similarities between the

---

<sup>17</sup> See A/64/881.

<sup>18</sup> Ibid., para. 105.

<sup>19</sup> See S/2003/529, containing the full text of the road map to realize the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security, as affirmed in Security Council resolution 1397 (2002).

situation confronting the Palestinian Authority/PLO and that confronting the Government of Kosovo suggest the likelihood of a similar outcome in the event that the International Court of Justice were to be consulted. Also, the reasonableness of claiming the legality of a Palestinian unilateral declaration is fortified by this Kosovo precedent, if such a course of action is adopted. This possible development is relevant to appraising Israeli violations of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territories because of its bearing on the deferred exercise of the Palestinian right of self-determination under extremely strained circumstances. The Palestinian Authority Prime Minister, Salam Fayyad, stated that as Palestinians “see things happening on the ground, the state of Palestine moves from being just a concept that people talk about into the realm of the possible — and then into reality”.<sup>20</sup> The Kosovo advisory opinion gives this Palestinian aspiration a push towards political reality, as well as legal reality.

II. Occupation policies in the West Bank and East Jerusalem

A. General observations

8. The United Nations has in recent years been understandably preoccupied with the humanitarian crisis caused by the Israeli attacks on Gaza at the end of 2008 (Operation Cast Lead) and by the blockade, as well as by civil society initiatives aimed at challenging the blockade on the basis of international law and morality. These issues, and their aftermath, rightly remain high on the United Nations agenda, but it is important to realize that the developments in the West Bank and East Jerusalem may have longer-lasting impacts on the future of the Palestinian people as a whole than the situation, however extreme and dire, that confronts the 1.5 million Palestinians in Gaza. The concerns about annexation, colonialism and apartheid referred to above are absent from Gaza, where Israeli responsibility for violations of human rights seems to have different objectives. For instance, as stated by the former Commissioner of the European Union, Lord Chris Patten: “The aim [of Israel] is to choke the economy and push the Gazans into the unwilling embrace of Egypt”.<sup>21</sup> From the perspective of self-determination, this involves an alternative encroachment on the integrity and unity of Palestinians as an occupied people, separating Gaza from the West Bank in defiance of Palestinian wishes either in the West Bank/East Jerusalem or Gaza, and in violation of numerous United Nations resolutions affirming the integrity of the Occupied Palestinian Territories as a single entity.<sup>22</sup> From the perspective of the Palestinian Authority, this may eventually result in the exclusion of a major segment of the Occupied Palestinian Territories from any future integrated Palestinian polity, the presupposition of the two-State consensus and Security Council resolution 242 (1967). A parallel set of Israeli policies has made it progressively more difficult for Palestinians to move between Jerusalem and the West Bank and almost impossible for them to go either to or from Gaza.<sup>23</sup> This fragments the Palestinian people in such a way as to make it almost impossible to envision the emergence of a viable Palestinian State. These

<sup>20</sup> Financial Times, interview with Salam Fayyad, 30 July 2010.

<sup>21</sup> Financial Times, “To avert disaster, stop isolating Hamas”, 28 July 2010.

<sup>22</sup> See Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973), 1397 (2002) and 1402 (2002).

<sup>23</sup> See A/HRC/13/54, report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the implementation of Human Rights Council resolutions S-9/1 and S-12/1.

developments give an aura of implausibility to the invocation of a two-State solution as the path to Palestinian self-determination, leading informed commentators to believe that the future of Palestine will be one State together with Israel, leaving open the question as to whether it would be a democratic and secular State (an alternate formula for Palestinian self-determination), or whether Israeli “occupation” would continue to be a distinctive mixture of colonialist and apartheid elements (thereby indefinitely obstructing the exercise of the Palestinian right of self-determination).

9. This push can take contradictory turns in the face of a newly shared Israeli realization that a new legal regime must be established to govern Israeli/Palestinian relations. An implied recognition of the untenability of the facade of occupation and the pretension to a two-State consensus has recently surfaced in Israel in the form of calls for the unilateral establishment of a single, unified State that incorporates the West Bank and East Jerusalem, while renouncing all claims with regard to Gaza. Prominent Israeli political figures, including Moshe Arens, the former Defence Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs; member and current Speaker of the Knesset, Reuven Rivlin; Knesset member Tzipi Hotovely; and Uri Elitzur, former chair of the Yesha Council of Settlements, have each separately called for such a solution. In most respects, the Israeli one-State solution involves a legalization of de facto annexation without altering the nature of the claim to be a Jewish State, and with deferred and distinctly second-class Israeli citizenship made available to Palestinians now living under occupation. This type of “solution” tries to sweeten the appearance of the present apartheid and colonialist realities of the occupation without altering the substance of these oppressive conditions. Its implementation would be a total repudiation of Palestinian rights under international law, especially the right of self-determination. Fully consistent with such Israeli discussions is the proposal floated in July 2010 by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Israel, Avigdor Lieberman, advocating an end of the Gaza blockade, coupled with Israeli encouragement of the immediate establishment of a Gazan state. Lieberman offers several justifications for such a proposal, including the benefits of alleviating outside pressure on Israeli settlement expansion in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. Apparently, part of his idea is to keep the Quartet and George Mitchell busy working out a regime for an independent Gaza that operates in a way that does not threaten Israeli security concerns.<sup>24</sup> On the Palestinian side, an analogous shift in favour of a one-State solution is also evident, especially among leading exile voices, but their proposals envision the establishment of a single secular and democratic State of Palestine/Israel, with equal rights for both peoples and no Jewish identity for the State. There are some other signs of dissatisfaction with reliance on a revived “peace process” to achieve conflict resolution and end the occupation, including some calls for the United States to impose a solution on the parties. Although the impulse is understandable as a result of the failure of negotiations, an imposed solution remains unacceptable to both parties and is unlikely to take adequate account of infringed Palestinian rights. There is also an issue of credibility, given that the United States is the proclaimed unconditional ally of Israel, the party generally viewed as having unlawfully abused its role as occupying Power.

---

<sup>24</sup> For useful commentary see Henry Siegman, “An immodest — and dangerous — proposal”, The Middle East Channel, Foreign Policy, 9 August 2010.

B. Poverty and children in the West Bank

10. There is an impression that the Palestinians living in the West Bank have been flourishing in terms of material well-being in recent years. It is true that employment and investment in certain geographic and economic sectors of the West Bank have recently flourished, as evidenced by the fact that overall economic growth was reported to have been 8.5 per cent in 2009.<sup>25</sup> The State-building efforts of Prime Minister Fayyad have also been viewed favourably as a practical means of moving towards the realization of self-determination. Mr. Fayyad stated that “[T]he essence of what we are doing is getting ready for statehood, in every possible way possible — in terms of having the capacity to govern ourselves, improving institutions and having adequate infrastructure”.<sup>26</sup> At the same time all is not well with respect to the material conditions of the people, especially those living in “Area C”, the 60 per cent of the West Bank that exists under complete Israeli military administration, in which approximately 40,000 Palestinians live and which is also the scene of a greatly increased number of demolitions and even the destruction of Palestinian villages.<sup>26</sup> A recently updated 2009 report, “Life on the Edge”, published by Save the Children UK, paints a grim picture of life in Area C.<sup>27</sup> The main conclusion reached in the report is that Israeli policies of land confiscation, expanding settlements, lack of such basic services as food, water, shelter, and medical clinics is at “a crisis point”, with food security problems even worse than in Gaza.<sup>28</sup> According to the report, 79 per cent of the communities surveyed recently do not have enough nutritious food; this is a rate higher than in blockaded Gaza, where it is 61 per cent.<sup>29</sup> Israel is accused in the report of creating a situation in which Palestinian children growing up in Area C experience malnutrition and stunted growth at double the level of children in Gaza. Forty-four per cent of those children were found to suffer from diarrhoea, which often proved lethal. Save the Children UK writes that Israel’s restrictions on Palestinian access to and the development of agricultural land — in an area where almost all families are herders — mean that thousands of children are going hungry and are vulnerable to deadly illnesses such as diarrhoea and pneumonia. Jihad al-Shommali of Defense for Children International was recently quoted as saying, with reference to the problems facing children in Area C, “Children are being forced to cross settlement areas and risk beatings and harassment by settlers, or walk for hours, just to get to school ... many children are losing hope in the future”.<sup>30</sup> This overall pattern suggests systematic violations by Israel of article 55 of Fourth Geneva Convention and article 69 of the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflicts (Protocol I) of 1977, which delimits Israel’s obligations to ensure adequate provision of the basic <sup>25</sup> International Monetary Fund, “Macroeconomic and Fiscal Framework for the West Bank and Gaza: Fifth Review of Progress”, staff report for the meeting of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, 13 April 2010; available at www.imf.org/wbg.

<sup>26</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Special Focus: “Lack of Permit” Demolitions and Resultant Displacement in Area C, May 2008.

<sup>27</sup> Save the Children UK, “Life on the Edge: The Struggle to Survive and the Impact of Forced Displacement in High-Risk Areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory”, October 2009.

<sup>28</sup> Ibid., p. 65.

<sup>29</sup> Ibid., p. 24.

<sup>30</sup> Jihad al-Shommali of Defense for Children International-Palestine Section, The Electronic Intifada, “Israeli colonization means life of poverty for West Bank children”, 12 July 2010; available at <http://electronicintifada.net/v2/article11386.shtml>.

needs of people living under its occupation, especially in Area C, where it exercises undivided control. Article 55 states: “To the fullest extent of the means available to it, the Occupying Power has the duty of ensuring the food and medical supplies of the population; it should, in particular, bring in the necessary foodstuffs, articles or medical stores and other articles if the resources of the occupied territory are inadequate.” This duty is more fully specified in article 69 of Protocol I under the title “Basic needs in occupied territories”.<sup>31</sup> Particular concern for the protection of children living under occupation is expressed in article 50 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and articles 77 and 78 of Protocol I. In conclusion, Israel is not meeting its obligations as occupying Power to Palestinian children living in Area C.

C. Settlements

11. According to the most recent figures available, there are 121 Israeli settlements, sometimes called “colonies”, plus approximately 102 “outposts” that have been established in violation of Israeli law.<sup>32</sup> The current settler population is more than 462,000, with 271,400 people living in the West Bank and 191,000 living in East Jerusalem.<sup>33</sup> Revealingly, the settler population has grown at the rate of 4.9 per cent per year since 1990, while Israeli society as a whole has grown at the lower rate of 1.5 per cent.<sup>34</sup> Some of the larger settlements have grown even faster.<sup>35</sup> According to an updated study by B’Tselem, the three largest West Bank settlements had rapid growth between 2001 and 2009: Modi’in Illit increased by 78 per cent, Betar Illit by 55 per cent, Ma’ale Adummim by 34 per cent.<sup>36</sup> As stated in previous reports, all Israeli settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem are violations of international humanitarian law. This has been repeatedly recognized by the United Nations and by expert legal opinion. It was well expressed in the International Court of Justice advisory opinion of 2004 on the separation wall: “Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, are illegal and an obstacle to peace and to economic and social development [and] have been established in breach of international law”.<sup>37</sup> This legal consensus was recently reiterated by Secretary-General Ban Ki-Moon: “Let us be clear, all settlement activity is illegal anywhere in occupied territory, and this must stop.”<sup>38</sup> The illegality is usually anchored in an interpretation of article 49(6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits an occupying Power from transferring its population to the territory under temporary occupation. Israel contests the status of <sup>31</sup> Article 69 (1), Protocol I reads: “In addition to the duties specified in Article 55 of the Fourth Convention concerning food and medical supplies, the Occupying Power shall, to the fullest extent of the means available to it and without any adverse distinction, also ensure the provision of clothing, bedding, means of shelter, other supplies essential to the survival of the civilian population of the occupied territory and objects necessary for religious worship”.

<sup>32</sup> See B’Tselem, “By Hook and by Crook: Israeli Settlement Policy in the West Bank”, July 2010, p. 9.

<sup>33</sup> See Palestine Monitor factsheet on Israeli settlements, last updated 15 March 2010; available at www.palestinemonitor.org/spip/spip.php?article7.

<sup>34</sup> Jerusalem Post, “Settler population rose 4.9% in 2009”, 10 March 2010.

<sup>35</sup> Ibid.

<sup>36</sup> See B’Tselem, “By Hook and by Crook: Israeli Settlement Policy in the West Bank”, p. 11.

<sup>37</sup> International Court of Justice, The Wall (see footnote 1).

<sup>38</sup> The Times, “Israel to ask US for bombs in the fight against Iran’s nuclear sites”, 21 March 2010; available at www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/world/middle\_east/article7069724.ece.

the West Bank as occupied territory, declaring it to be subject to competing claims of sovereignty and thus outside the obligatory scope of the law governing belligerent occupation.<sup>39</sup> To the detriment of the authority of international law, there exists some ambiguity about the position of these settlements in an Israel/Palestine peace process that casts doubt on whether, despite their unlawfulness, most settlements are likely to be incorporated into Israel if the parties agree to resolve their conflict. This prospect was affirmed in a 2004 letter written by then President George W. Bush to then Prime Minister Ariel Sharon containing the following operative language: “In light of the new realities on the ground, including already existing major Israeli population centers, it is unrealistic to expect that the outcome of final status negotiations will be a full and complete return to the armistice lines of 1949, and all previous efforts to negotiate a two-state solution have reached the same conclusion. It is realistic to expect that any final status agreement will only be achieved on the basis of mutually agreed changes that reflect these realities”.<sup>40</sup> It should be understood that this letter possesses considerable political weight in shaping the expectations of the parties, but has no legal weight, as the Government of the United States is not in a position to diminish Palestinian legal rights. The formulation in the letter has been widely interpreted to mean that Israel would keep the settlement blocs where most West Bank settlers live, and in exchange would give an emergent Palestinian entity an equivalent amount of land as a way of compensating for the loss of territory. In fact, it has been an implicit article of faith in the road map and on the Palestinian side as well, although the latter formally still demands withdrawal from all territory occupied in 1967, that Israel would retain the settlement blocs in any peace plan, which would incorporate and legitimize approximately 385,000 illegal settlers in 80 settlements. These are the settlements located in the territory between the separation wall and the Green Line, indicating to many observers that the wall was located with territorial incorporation into Israel proper as an explicit objective. This ambiguity associated with the settlements as being unlawful and yet at the same time creating “legitimate” expectations, i.e., as being proper to weigh in an eventual negotiating balance, is reinforced by reports of extensive American tax-free donations in support of illegal settlement building over the past decade amounting to $200 million.<sup>41</sup> This infusion of funds has been especially relevant to efforts in East Jerusalem to increase the Jewish presence by way of financing the displacement of Palestinians, often in cruel ways. For instance, the Jewish Reclamation Project of Ateret Cohanim works to transfer ownership of Arab homes to Jewish families in occupied East Jerusalem and receives about 60 per cent of its funding from a tax-exempt organization situated in the United States.<sup>42</sup> The underlying question remains, especially for the United Nations: how should unlawful facts on the ground be addressed diplomatically? If given defining political weight, as has been the expectation so far, then a perverse incentive is created to continue to violate international humanitarian law, which directly challenges the whole undertaking of regulating the actions of an occupying Power so as to protect <sup>39</sup> Israel’s position is summarized in a text released by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Israeli Settlements and International Law”, 20 May 2001; available at www.mfa.gov.il/MFA/Peace+Process/Guide+to+the+Peace+Process/Israeli+Settlements+and+International+Law.htm.

<sup>40</sup> Letter from President Bush to Prime Minister Sharon, dated 14 April 2004; available at <http://georgewbush-whitehouse.archives.gov/news/releases/2004/04/20040414-3.html>.

<sup>41</sup> The New York Times, “Tax-exempt Funds Aid Settlements in West Bank”, 5 July 2010.

<sup>42</sup> See Haaretz, “US group invests tax-free millions in East-Jerusalem land”, 17 August 2009, and IPS News, “Anger Rises Over U.S. Tax Dollars for Settlements”, 24 July 2010.

the present and future of an occupied people. Israel has acted to reconstitute expectations in its favour throughout decades of occupation, leading to a continuous diminution of reasonable expectations on the Palestinian side as to the scale and scope of any peace arrangement, as well as to a steady weakening of the authority of international law. Whenever unlawful “facts” can be converted into lawful outcomes, law is weakened and rights are denied, and a process occurs that is the opposite of “enforcement”, or even implementation.

D. Settlement freeze

12. The idea of a freeze on settlement expansion highlights the ambiguous nature of the settlement process. Treating a freeze as a contribution to a peace process suspends concern about the underlying unlawfulness of the settlements, and is treated by sponsors of the peace process, particularly the Government of the United States, as a helpful concession made by Israel for which a matching Palestinian concession should be forthcoming. Israel had agreed in Annapolis at the end of 2007 to a “settlement freeze”, but it was never implemented. Settlement construction, especially in East Jerusalem, accelerated, and Israel did not even fulfil its pledge to dismantle outposts. President Obama pushed in his early months as President for a total freeze on settlement expansion and construction. It was hoped that such a freeze would last at least for the duration of a peace process. Again, this posture avoided challenging the illegality of the Israeli settler movement, seeking only a pause to encourage negotiations. It should not be forgotten that Israel has never been held accountable for the consistent violation of international humanitarian law inherent in the building and expansion of each and every settlement. When Israel refused to accept a comprehensive freeze, the Obama administration settled for a 10-month freeze that excluded East Jerusalem and allowed for the construction of housing units and other buildings that had started before the freeze went into effect.<sup>43</sup> Several initiatives subsequent to the freeze authorized the building of specified units: 3,000 were grandfathered in on the basis of prior authorization, and some were hastily authorized to beat the deadline, as was the case for settlements in the northern West Bank, where the Shomron Regional Council authorized 1,600 units, or more than 10 times the number approved in 2008. Reports from reliable sources indicate that construction continued in many West Bank settlements during the 10-month period. Ethan Bronner reports that “[i]n many West Bank settlements, building is proceeding apace. Dozens of construction sites with scores of Palestinian workers are active”.<sup>44</sup> The freeze is scheduled to end on 26 September 2010, and there are indications that Israel will not extend it.<sup>45</sup> Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu has always conveyed his support as agreed to with the greatest reluctance, declaring that the freeze was “exceptional” and “extraordinary” and should be understood as only a temporary suspension (which, as shown above, it never was) of normal settlement activity.<sup>44</sup> There have been numerous calls for a surge of construction to start immediately after the sun sets on 26 September.<sup>46</sup> A member of the Netanyahu cabinet and a settler, Yuli Edelstein, Minister of Public Affairs and the Diaspora, stated publicly, “[I]et’s get rid of the freeze and get back to building...It’s our land anyway”.<sup>47</sup> As suggested earlier, settlement expansion makes realization of the two-State consensus solution to the conflict virtually impossible by expropriating the land needed for a viable Palestinian State. This withdrawal of land via confiscations from Palestinians is aggravated by the fact that settlements are often built on the best agricultural land and so as to take advantage of access to water (using 85 per cent of West Bank water either for the settlements or to pump it into Israel, violating the Fourth Geneva Convention prohibition on appropriating the resources of an occupied territory). It needs to be understood that the settlements take up an estimated 3 to 4 per cent of the West Bank, but if the roads (794 kilometres), wall, security buffer zones, and Israeli security zones are included, the impact on the territorial expanse increases to 38 to 40 per cent, and it should be recalled that total Israeli withdrawal from the entire West Bank would still allot the Palestinians only 22 per cent of historical Palestine as it existed during the British Mandate.<sup>48</sup>

<sup>43</sup> See “Remarks with Israeli Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu”, Hillary Rodham Clinton, 31 October 2009; available at <http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2009a/10/131145.htm>.

<sup>44</sup> The New York Times, “Despite Settlement Freeze, Buildings Rise”, 14 July 2010.

<sup>45</sup> During a meeting of the Council of Foreign Relations, Netanyahu stated, “I think we’ve done enough. Let’s get on with the talks.”; see www.reuters.com/article/idUSTRE66709920100708; the full text of his address is available at www.pmo.gov.il/PMOEng/Communication/PMSpeaks/speechCFR080710.htm.

E. Settler violence

13. There have been numerous reported incidents of settler violence directed at Palestinians in the last several months, some associated with the anger generated by the implementation of the temporary and partial freeze by the Israeli Government. Some of the worst incidents, called “price tag”, have involved vigilante collective punishment of Palestinians and their property by settlers as a reprisal for occasional acts of Government interference with the establishment of an outpost, although by and large settler outposts are tolerated and often provided with infrastructure services such as electricity, water and sanitation. In late July 2010, in a price tag retaliation for the removal of mobile homes at a new outpost in Yithar village in the south Hebron hills, settlers destroyed the agricultural fields of the nearby Bedouin village of Um Al-Kher.<sup>49</sup> The effect was devastating for the 85 persons living in the community, who were dependent for their food on produce from those fields. In other settings, Palestinians are attacked while farming their lands or when passing by a settlement on their way to school or work. Near Ramallah, in Saffa village, there were reports in July 2010 that settlers burned olive trees on privately owned Palestinian land while under the visible protection of Israeli soldiers, who blocked residents and firefighters from reaching the scene to put out the fires. Reports from independent organizations routinely confirm that Israeli soldiers offer the Palestinians no protection against settler violence even when present during such

<sup>46</sup> For example, member of the Knesset Danny Danon, as quoted by The Jerusalem Post, “Danon: Settlers will start building the moment freeze ends”, 21 July 2010; available at www.jpost.com/Israel/Article.aspx?id=182062.

<sup>47</sup> Yuli Edelstein on Israel National Radio, 6 May 2010, as quoted at Max Blumenthal, “The Settlement Freeze that never was and never will be”, at <http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/07/the-settlement-freeze-that-never-was-and-never-will-be/>.

<sup>48</sup> The Israeli Committee against House Demolitions, “The Key to Peace: Dismantling the Matrix of Control”; available at www.icahd.org/?page\_id=79, and B’Tselem annual report, “Human Rights in the Occupied Territories”, 1 January 2009 to 30 April 2010, pp. 22-25.

<sup>49</sup> Ma’an News Agency, “Report: Settler violence continues in south Hebron hills”, 30 July 2010; available at www.maannews.net/eng/ViewDetails.aspx?ID=303761.

incidents, and fail to protect Palestinians even when informed in advance of an impending attack.<sup>50</sup> Israeli military authorities are also faulted for their unwillingness to investigate Palestinian claims of damage to persons or property.<sup>51</sup> Such passive complicity with settler violence violates the obligation of the Occupying Power to protect the person and property of a civilian population living under belligerent occupation. Article 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention specifically prohibits the destruction of real or personal property belonging to civilians and their institutional arrangements. This acquiescence to settler violence is particularly objectionable from the perspective of international humanitarian law because the settlers are already unlawfully present in occupied territory, making it perverse to victimize those who should be protected (the Palestinians) while offering protection to those who are law-breakers (the settlers).

F. Ethnic cleansing in occupied East Jerusalem

14. Uri Avnery, Israeli peace activist and former member of the Knesset, made this observation: “Ethnic cleansing can be carried out dramatically (as in this country in 1948 and in Kosovo in 1998) or in a quiet and systematic way, by dozens of sophisticated methods, as is happening now in East Jerusalem.”<sup>52</sup> Prominent among these methods, aside from expanding settlements, are a variety of ways of terminating Palestinian residence, expulsions based on alleged political affiliations, manipulations of property title, and most dramatically, demolitions (there are 15,000 demolition orders outstanding in East Jerusalem, and another 3,000 in the West Bank, all unrelated to security).<sup>53</sup> Ever since 1967, Israel has rejected the United Nations insistence that East Jerusalem is part of occupied Palestine and claimed that the entire city belongs to Israel. This claim is further magnified by Israeli projects to add significant acreage to Jerusalem by incorporating land into the city, including the settlements established on neighbouring hills. The perception of ethnic cleansing arises from the deliberate steps taken to increase the Jewish presence in East Jerusalem while diminishing the Palestinian presence, thereby altering the demographic balance in such a way as to support the contention that Jerusalem as a whole is a Jewish city. The linchpin of this policy by the occupying Power is the unlawful establishment and growth of settlements. Its importance was underscored by the refusal of Israel, despite explicit pressure from the United States, to extend the freeze to East Jerusalem, even on a temporary basis.<sup>54</sup> This refusal was highlighted by the provocative approval by the Jerusalem municipal authority of an additional 1,600 housing units in the Ramat Shlomo settlement (to make room for 20,000 more Jews).<sup>55</sup> The story of The Ramat Shlomo settlement is emblematic

<sup>50</sup> See B’Tselem, “Settler violence”; available at www.btselem.org/english/Settler\_violence/Index.asp.

<sup>51</sup> B’Tselem, “Human Rights in the Occupied Territories”, 1 January 2009 to 30 April 2010, pp. 26-29.

<sup>52</sup> Uri Avnery, “Rosemary’s Baby”, 24 July 2010.

<sup>53</sup> “Israel must avoid further violations of international law in East Jerusalem”, media statement, 29 June 2010, available at www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=10189&LangID=E.

<sup>54</sup> See the reaction of United States special envoy George Mitchell to the Israeli freeze announcement, “Israeli Settlement Moratorium Helps Move Talks Forward, U.S. Says”, 25 November 2009; available at www.america.gov/st/peacesec-english/2009/November/20091125151758esnampfuak0.7892725.html.

<sup>55</sup> See Jerusalem Post, “We’ll prevent future embarrassments”, 14 March 2010.

of the broader pattern. As has been noted with reference to Ramat Shlomo, “We are talking about an area that at the outset of the peace process [in 1993] was empty land (an uninhabited hill belonging to the Palestinian village of Shuafat) — devoid of Israelis, belonging mainly to Palestinians, and contiguous entirely with Palestinian areas — that anybody drawing a logical border would have placed on the Palestinian side”.<sup>56</sup> The Ramat Shlomo area became Jewish and Israeli only as a result of expropriation in 1973, with the land being zoned for construction and a new settlement only in 1993, ironically coinciding with the start of the Oslo peace process. Settlement supporters argue that “everybody knows” that Ramat Shlomo will become part of Israel in a peace agreement, so why make a fuss about growth at this time?<sup>57</sup> Such is the logic of “facts on the ground” eating away at Palestinian rights under international law. These authors show the fallacy underlying this one-sided approach by pointing out that the implication of the “everybody knows” approach is that there must be other parts of the city that everybody knows will be Palestinian, but, in fact, no such areas exist. Instead, Israel is increasingly targeting predominantly Palestinian neighbourhoods, especially surrounding the Old City, such as Ras al Amud and Jebel Mukabber, for Jewish construction and Palestinian demolitions and evictions.<sup>58</sup> The approval of permits to construct 20 units of housing for Jews in the ancient Palestinian Sheikh Jarrah neighbourhood, at the site of the formerly Palestinian-owned Shepherd Hotel, was particularly provocative. The situation was rendered worse from the perspective of human rights as two large Palestinian families totalling 54 persons were evicted by Israeli court order despite having resided there since the 1950s. Their eviction was judicially upheld on the ground that the property had been legally purchased from its former owners to enable the establishment of Jewish housing. Several Palestinian families were forced to live on the street for extended periods of time, having neither alternate living arrangements nor the resources to obtain them. There are reports of Palestinian families targeted for eviction by Ateret Cohanim, an ultra-orthodox Jewish private organization that collects funds from abroad to purchase Palestinian properties and pursue legal strategies to evict families that have long resided in East Jerusalem, as an aspect of their efforts to increase the Jewish character of the areas near the Old City.<sup>59</sup> Israel’s judicial system and police facilitate such activities. The experiences of the large Palestinian Karresh and Al-Kurd families are illustrative of this process of pushing Palestinians living in a Muslim neighbourhood into the street, with the support of Israeli police, to make way for settler families.<sup>58</sup> The United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, Robert Serry, declared as “unacceptable” and “provocative acts” the latest displacement of long-term Palestinian residents by armed Israeli settlers, acts encouraged by Ateret Cohanim. Mr. Serry called upon Israel “to remove the settlers from the property”, nine buildings near the Old City, and “restore the status quo ante”.<sup>60</sup> In related developments, the Israeli Committee against House Demolitions (ICAH) called attention to a wave of demolitions, dispossessions and revocation

<sup>56</sup> Lara Friedman and David Seidemann, “Jerusalem, settlements, and the ‘everybody knows’ fallacy”, The Middle East Channel, Foreign Policy, 19 March 2010.

<sup>57</sup> Ibid.

<sup>58</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, “Human Rights in East Jerusalem: Facts and Figures”, May 2010; available at www.acri.org.il/pdf/eastjer2010.pdf.

<sup>59</sup> See Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, Weekly Report on Israeli Human Rights Violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (29 July-4 August 2010).

<sup>60</sup> Ma’an News Agency, news release, 30 July 2010.

of residency rights in the Jordan Valley. In late July 2010, ICADH objected to the massive demolition activity in the village of Al Farisye, displacing 107 persons, including 53 children.<sup>61</sup> Twenty-six residential tents, 22 animal shelters, seven clay ovens, eight kitchens, 10 bathrooms, four water tanks, an agricultural shed, homes, belongings and large amounts of food, and a total of 74 structures were destroyed by Israeli bulldozers.<sup>62</sup>

G. The wall

15. As previous reports emphasized, the separation wall, of which 85 per cent is being constructed on Palestinian territory, is both a violation of the basic Israeli duty to respect the territorial integrity of the land occupied since 1967 and a serious infringement on the Palestinian right of self-determination.<sup>63</sup> This assessment was affirmed by the International Court of Justice in its 2004 advisory opinion, later accepted in a resolution adopted by a strong majority in the General Assembly and is supported by the independent judgment of most international law specialists.<sup>64</sup> The route of the wall is obviously aimed at setting the stage for a future annexation of occupied territory between the wall and the Green Line, and at the same time incorporate into Israel the most important settlements, containing as much as 98 per cent of the West Bank settler population along with key water aquifers. In 2010, on the sixth anniversary of the International Court of Justice ruling, Saeb Erakat, chief negotiator for the Palestinian Authority, stated, “Simply put, the wall is an integral part of a regime intent on heading in the direction of apartheid”.<sup>65</sup> Israel’s defiance of international law with respect to the wall is flagrant and continuing, with the failure by the United Nations to take appropriate steps to secure implementation of the main International Court of Justice finding undermining the authority of the Court, of the United Nations and of international law generally. In many places, the wall cuts Palestinians off from their own land, which they can access only by passing through Israeli-controlled gates, which requires permits issued by the military administration in the West Bank that have proved exceedingly difficult to obtain. The construction of the wall remains incomplete; 434 kilometres of a planned 707 kilometres has been completed (61.4 per cent).<sup>66</sup> Construction has slowed in recent years, apparently because of its expense. Weekly non-violent demonstrations at various points of the construction, especially in the villages of Bil’in, Nil’in and Nabi Saleh, have been dispersed through the use of excessive force by the Israel military and police forces using tear gas, sound and gas bombs

<sup>61</sup> ICAHD, “Mass demolitions in the Jordan Valley”, 22 July 2010; available at www.icahd.org/?p=5179.

<sup>62</sup> Stephen Lendman, “In Palestine, Demolitions and Dispossessions”, Palestine Chronicle, 31 July 2010.

<sup>63</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, West Bank Movement and Access, June 2010, p. 2 and rubber bullets, which have caused many injuries as well as several deaths.<sup>67</sup> Also, in recent months, leaders of the demonstrations, journalists and international observers have been arrested and detained, often in ways designed to terrify not only the person apprehended but his or her family members as well, involving night-time entry into homes and the humiliation of individuals. Widely respected leaders of the Campaign against the Wall, including Jamal Juma', Mohammed Othman and Abdallah Abu Rahmah, have been arrested in this manner, either uncharged or charged with contrived offences.<sup>68</sup> Rahmah, for instance, was indicted for "arms possession", with the arms turning out to be a collection of used tear-gas canisters shot at the protesters. Juma' was charged with incitement. These infractions of the civil rights of Palestinians under occupation violate the basic Israeli obligation to uphold the rights of an occupied people. Security cannot be reasonably claimed in this context of non-violent Palestinian demonstrations against the manifestly unlawful and intrusive wall.

<sup>64</sup> See General Assembly resolution ES-10/14 and “UN assembly votes overwhelmingly to demand Israel comply with ICJ ruling”, 20 July 2004; available at www.un.org/apps/news/story.asp?NewsID=11418&Cr=middle&Cr1=east.

<sup>65</sup> See PLO, Negotiations Department, press release, 8 July 2010, at www.nad-plo.org/view\_area\_page.php?view=news-updates\_080710&css=1.

<sup>66</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “West Bank Barrier Route Projections”, July 2010; available at www.ochaopt.org/documents/ocha\_opt\_route\_projection\_july\_2010.pdf.

III. Gaza

A. General comment

16. Although the blockade has eased somewhat, the civilian population of Gaza continues to be victimized in numerous unlawful ways by an occupation regime that systematically imposes collective punishment, in violation of article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. Tzipi Livni, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Israel at the time of the 2008-2009 Gaza war, recently denied that the blockade was designed to punish the Palestinian people. In her words, "[t]he reason for the blockade on Gaza was not to punish the Palestinian people but to delegitimize Hamas".<sup>69</sup> Regardless of intentions, using a blockade to delegitimize a political opponent inevitably punishes the people, and such a delegitimizing project provides no legal excuse for denying food, medical supplies, fuel, building materials, and normal peacetime activities to an impoverished population living under belligerent occupation. Additionally, in the name of security Israel relies on excessive force to quell signs of unrest and resistance, and subjects the whole population of the Gaza Strip to conditions that cause acute fear and foreboding. The confinement of 1.5 million Gazans without granting exit permits except in rare instances denies the people of Gaza basic rights of health and education, and interferes with normal social patterns based on family and friendship. The blockade has caused the collapse of the Gaza economy, increasing levels of dependence on United Nations humanitarian relief, intensifying poverty and unemployment. An appeal in the form of a letter signed by 10 winners of the Israel Prize and other Israeli university faculty members was sent to the Minister of Defence of Israel asking for the lifting of the travel ban, in effect since 2000, on Palestinian students from Gaza studying in the West Bank.<sup>70</sup> The appeal letter, prepared under the auspices of the Gisha Legal Centre for Freedom of Movement, called attention to the failure by the occupation authorities to adhere to the 2007 ruling of the Israeli High Court that students from

---

<sup>67</sup> Violent incidents following demonstrations against the wall are reported weekly by local non-governmental organizations such as the Palestinian Centre for Human Rights.

<sup>68</sup> See Jonathan Cook, "Israel's war on protest", Ma'an News Agency, 13 February 2010.

<sup>69</sup> Deborah Solomon, "Questions for Tzipi Livni", The New York Times, 24 June 2010; available at www.nytimes.com/2010/06/27/magazine/27FOB-Q4-t.html.

<sup>70</sup> Jerusalem Post, "Israel Prize winners to Barak: Let Gazans study in West Bank", 29 April 2010.

Gaza who wished to study in the West Bank should be allowed to do so, subject only to legitimate Israeli security concerns.<sup>71</sup> The signed letter pointed out that “academic and professional training is critical to the well-being and growth of Palestinian society and the individual development of each one of its young men and women who wish to better himself or herself”.<sup>72</sup> In a prominent case, the High Court decided in June 2010 that a 29-year-old Gazan lawyer, Fatma Sharif, could be denied the right to attend Bir Zeit University for the purpose of obtaining a master’s degree in human rights.<sup>73</sup> She was denied a travel permit because under the strict regulations delimiting the blockade, only special humanitarian or urgent medical needs are accepted as valid reasons for authorizing departure from Gaza. The unanimous judicial decision of the High Court expressed its legal assessment as follows: “We are not convinced that under the present political and security situation, the personal circumstances [of the petitioner] justify intervention in the decision of the respondent [Minister of Defence].” Thus, even in the aftermath of a supposed post-flotilla rollback of the blockade of Gaza, this request for educational travel was administratively denied and judicially confirmed. The refusal to allow travel to and from Gaza to sustain social relations is a cruel obstacle to healthy personal development and a normal life, even taking account of the rigours of occupation. There are no security justifications for such denials of basic human rights associated with travel and education. In fact, Israel seems uninterested in improving the security situation. It has displayed no willingness during the past several years to explore opportunities to negotiate a long-term ceasefire with the de facto authorities in Gaza. This is disappointing, considering that a prior temporary ceasefire during the last half of 2008 reduced transborder violence almost to zero and was terminated only after a lethal attack on Gaza launched by Israel on 4 November 2008 that resulted in the death of six Palestinians.<sup>74</sup> Repeated proposals from the Palestinian side to link long-term extensions of the ceasefire with a lifting of the blockade and opening of the crossings have been ignored by Israel. The terminology of blockade should also be questioned. Israel has always monitored the inflow of weaponry to Gaza since the original occupation in 1967, and in this respect what was imposed in mid-2007 was a comprehensive effort to keep goods, services, and persons from entering or leaving Gaza. As such, it was more in the nature of a prison lockdown than a traditional blockade, what in medieval times was described as a state of siege.

<sup>71</sup> Gisha Centre, “Held Back: Students Trapped in Gaza”, June 2008; available at <http://www.gisha.org/UserFiles/File/Students%20report%20Eng%20-%20Online%20Version.pdf>.

<sup>72</sup> Gisha Centre, “10 Israel Prize laureates and dozens of academics urge the Defense Minister”, 28 April 2010; available at www.gisha.org/index.php?intLanguage=2&intItemId=1745&intSiteSN=113.

<sup>73</sup> Gisha Centre, “Israel refuses to allow a lawyer to leave Gaza to reach her studies in democracy and human rights in the West Bank”, 1 July 2010; available at www.gisha.org/index.php?intLanguage=2&intItemId=1832&intSiteSN=113.

<sup>74</sup> The Guardian, “Gaza truce broken as Israeli raid kills six Hamas gunmen”, 5 November 2008; available at www.guardian.co.uk/world/2008/nov/05/israelandthepalestinians.

B. Freedom flotilla incident

17. On 31 May 2010, the Israeli Defense Forces attacked six ships comprising the Gaza Freedom Flotilla.<sup>75</sup> The undertaking constituted an initiative of global civil society. The ships proceeding under the auspices of the Free Gaza Movement and the Turkish Foundation for Human Rights and Freedom and Humanitarian Relief (IHH) were carrying 10,000 tons of humanitarian supplies to the people of Gaza. On board were 718 persons from 37 countries.<sup>76</sup> The ships were violently intercepted in international waters in the middle of the night, including by 13 commandos belonging to the special force units of the Israeli Defense Forces, who landed from helicopters on the lead Turkish ship. Fighting ensued, leading to the death of nine peace activists; dozens of others were injured and hundreds detained.<sup>77</sup> International maritime law clearly disallows a military disruption of a humanitarian undertaking in international waters, especially in such a violent manner, but more authoritative assessments will have to await the results of several investigations currently under way. The facts are contested as to how the violence started and are being investigated by various panels, including one appointed by the President of the Human Rights Council<sup>78</sup> and another by the Secretary-General.<sup>79</sup> Israel is participating in the latter and has appointed an Israeli to participate. As those who organized this humanitarian relief effort to bring help to the blockaded people of Gaza have repeatedly stressed, their purpose was symbolically to provide needed items of food, medical supplies, construction materials and educational supplies. Their major substantive goal was to bring the blockade itself to an end through an appeal to world public opinion. In this regard, although the ships were not allowed to reach their destinations and the citizen activists on board the vessels paid a heavy price, the venture was spectacularly successful from a political perspective. For the first time since its establishment three years ago, the blockade came under sustained global scrutiny for having inflicted severe and unlawful humanitarian harm on the civilian population of Gaza. The leadership of Israel in response agreed to limit the blockade.<sup>80</sup> It is too early to tell whether this adjustment of the blockade will alleviate the humanitarian crisis in Gaza. To date, there are no indications that Israel will allow humane conditions to emerge in Gaza, which would require allowing unimpeded entry and exit both for Gazans wishing to study or travel outside Gaza and for journalists, family members and friends to visit Gaza without acquiring permits and enduring long waits and cumbersome security procedures. There are

<sup>75</sup> “Gaza aid convoy killings: ‘Those responsible must be held accountable’”, press release, 31 May 2010; available at www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=10080&LangID=E.

<sup>76</sup> See www.freegaza.org/ and www.ihh.org.tr/ for an account from the participants.

<sup>77</sup> For an Israeli perspective, see Prime Minister Netanyahu’s statement of 1 June 2010; available at www.pmo.gov.il/PMOEng/Communication/Spokesman/2010/06/spokehatshara010610.htm; for a sample of international reporting, see The New York Times, “Israel intercepts Gaza Flotilla; Violence reported”, 30 May 2010.

<sup>78</sup> See Human Rights Council resolution 14/1, 2 June 2010.

<sup>79</sup> UN News Centre, “Ban announces Israeli, Turkish members of inquiry panel into flotilla incident”, 7 August 2010; available at www.un.org/apps/news/story.asp?NewsID=35561&Cr=gaza&Cr1=.

<sup>80</sup> See Israeli Security Cabinet decision, 17 June 2010; available from www.mfa.gov.il.

reports that a second flotilla of humanitarian aid is planned.<sup>81</sup> It would consist of ships on a humanitarian mission organized and funded by citizens in various countries, and seek to make delivery directly in Gaza. Israel has warned that it will prevent any vessels from breaking its blockade, and the United Nations Secretariat has also issued an official statement discouraging civil society efforts to circumvent Israeli regulations pertaining to the occupation of Gaza. At the same time, there are many indications of a worldwide surge of support for Palestinian solidarity efforts, including a rapidly expanding boycott, divestment, and sanctions campaign.<sup>82</sup> Comparisons have been made with increasing frequency to the anti-apartheid campaign of the 1980s and early 1990s, which seemed to influence decisively the balance of thinking within South Africa as to how to resolve the conflict over constitutionalism and racism in the country.

C. Report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict (“Goldstone report”)

18. As my previous report emphasized, the Goldstone report has provided strong reinforcement for allegations of war crimes arising from the Gaza war of 2008-2009, and its findings deserve the greatest respect. The report recommended that, as a first step on the road to accountability, Israel and the responsible Palestinian authorities be given the opportunity to investigate these allegations for themselves, and take appropriate action in a manner that accords with international standards.<sup>83</sup> There are many reasons to question the capacity of any State to investigate the alleged wrongdoing of its own military. To reinforce the seriousness with which the accountability issue is taken by the Human Rights Council, a Committee of Experts was established, its members appointed by the High Commissioner for Human Rights, pursuant to Council resolution 13/9.<sup>84</sup> High Commissioner Navi Pillay indicated that the Committee “will focus on the need to ensure accountability for all violations of international humanitarian and international human rights laws during the Gaza conflict, in order to prevent impunity, assure justice, deter further violations and promote peace”.<sup>85</sup> It is important that the findings of the Committee, expected to be presented at the fifteenth session of the Council, be taken seriously as part of the effort to ensure accountability. If the Committee concludes that the investigations by both parties were satisfactory, that would provide grounds to move on and encourage Israel and the responsible Palestinian authorities to follow the recommendations of their own

<sup>81</sup> See Press TV, “Activists planning new Gaza flotilla”, 4 August 2010, available at www.presstv.com/detail.aspx?id=137483&sectionid=351020202; and The New York Times, “American activists plan Gaza Flotilla ship named for Obama book”, 20 July 2010, available at <http://thelede.blogs.nytimes.com/2010/07/20/american-activists-plan-gaza-flotilla-ship-named-for-obama-book/>.

<sup>82</sup> See U.S. Campaign for the Academic and Cultural Boycott of Israel, “Global boycotts of Israel intensify after bloody Flotilla attack”, 5 June 2010, at <http://usacbi.wordpress.com/2010/06/05/global-boycotts-of-israel-intensify-after-bloody-flotilla-attack/>.

<sup>83</sup> See A/HRC/12/48.

<sup>84</sup> See “Progress report of the High Commissioner on the follow-up to the report of the United Nations Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict” (A/HRC/14/CRP.4).

<sup>85</sup> UN News Centre, “UN rights chief unveils members of independent probe into Gaza conflict”, 14 June 2010.

national inquiries. However, if the Committee concludes that one or another party has not carried out satisfactory investigations, then the responsibility shifts back to the international community to implement steps in accordance with the recommendations of the Goldstone report. It is notable that a second report by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel acknowledges several of the most serious findings of the Goldstone report, including the use of phosphorus in areas where it was known that civilians were present, the use of Palestinian civilians as human shields and the targeting of civilians and prohibited targets.<sup>86</sup> There have been announcements that the Israeli Defense Forces plan to initiate disciplinary action in relation to four incidents given prominence.<sup>87</sup> These developments do suggest some follow-up on the part of Israel to the allegations of the Goldstone report, but there is no indication that the most serious crimes alleged, involving reliance on an overall battle plan of excessive and indiscriminate force, have been examined by Israel, and failing this, imposing accountability only on soldiers in the field carrying out broad war plans confers impunity on the most serious perpetrators of war crimes and of breaches of international humanitarian law.

IV. Recommendations

19. A study of the legal, political, social, cultural and psychological impact of prolonged occupation should be undertaken by the Human Rights Council, perhaps in conjunction with the Government of Switzerland, which is reportedly considering a similar inquiry.

20. Palestinian legal rights, including the right of self-determination, must be fully respected and implemented in all attempts at a peaceful resolution of the conflict between the two peoples.

21. The recommendations of the Goldstone report should be implemented without further delay, in accordance with the conclusions reached by the Committee of Experts established by Human Rights Council resolution 13/9.

22. The United Nations should lend its support to the worldwide boycott, divestment and sanctions campaign, so long as Israel unlawfully occupies Palestinian territories, and the United Nations should endorse a non-violent “legitimacy war” as an alternative to both failed peace negotiations and armed struggle, as the best available means of promoting the rights of the civilian population of the occupied Palestinian territory, as specified by international humanitarian law.

---

<sup>86</sup> Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel, “Gaza Operation Investigations: Second Update”, July 2010.

<sup>87</sup> See Yaniv Reich, “New Israeli report on Operation Cast Lead confirms Goldstone report’s main findings”, 22 July 2010; available at www.hybridstates.com/2010/07/new-israeli-report-on-operation-cast-lead-confirm-goldstone-reports-main-findings/.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
13 September 2011

Original: English

---

Sixty-sixth session

Item 69 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights:
human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Richard Falk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/66/150.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The present report, submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, gives particular attention to the right of Palestinians to self-determination, the situation of Palestinian prisoners detained by Israel, Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories, violence by Israeli settlers against Palestinians and their properties, the especially vulnerable situation of children in the occupied Palestinian territories, and the impact of the blockade by Israel on Gaza.

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	3
II. Issues of non-implementation. . . . .	3
III. Palestinian self-determination . . . . .	5
IV. Protection of the civilian population living under occupation . . . . .	7
V. Detention and imprisonment. . . . .	9
VI. Israeli settlements . . . . .	10
VII. Palestinian children, human rights and international humanitarian law . . . . .	13
VIII. Recommendations . . . . .	19

I. Introduction

1. The Special Rapporteur has continued to be unable to obtain cooperation from Israel in the discharge of his obligations under the mandate. He continues to believe that Israel is not fulfilling its duties as a United Nations Member State in this regard. The Special Rapporteur recalls that when he made an attempt to enter Israel on 14 December 2008, in pursuance of his mandate, he was detained in a prison facility near the airport, denied entry and expelled. Because there is no regularized access to the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, except by way of Ben Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv and Israeli-controlled crossings from Jordan, there exist no means to visit these areas of the occupied Palestinian territories in the manner that was possible for his predecessors.

2. The changed circumstances in Egypt have created a prospect of access to Gaza by way of the Rafah Crossing, which Egyptian officials have indicated will be kept open for both the entry and exit of persons. In an encouraging related development, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of Occupied Territories was able to gain entry to Gaza for the first time in its 43 years of existence.

3. On this basis, a mission under the mandate of the Special Rapporteur was planned to take place between 25 April and 3 May 2011. Unfortunately, the Special Rapporteur was forced to cancel the visit to Gaza owing to a determination by the United Nations on the prevailing security situation during the period. He plans to make another attempt to visit Gaza. Despite this inability to visit the occupied Palestinian territories during the trip, the Special Rapporteur proceeded with the mission to Egypt and Jordan, where he met with Government officials, academics, representatives of civil society organizations and United Nations agencies, human rights defenders and journalists familiar with conditions in the occupied Palestinian territories. Although the visit covered the full range of human rights issues raised by the continuing occupation by Israel, the Special Rapporteur's particular focus was on how prolonged occupation, the blockade of Gaza and long-term refugee status encroach upon the human rights of children. Those concerns will be given special emphasis in the present report. The mission did provide valuable information that informs all sections of the report, although it remains an inadequate substitute for first-hand visits to the occupied Palestinian territories.

II. Issues of non-implementation

4. As usual, there are many more serious human rights concerns associated with the occupation by Israel than can be addressed in this report, which is subject to United Nations guidelines as to a maximum number of words. In order to avoid the impression that earlier concerns no longer persist, the Special Rapporteur stresses that there are continuing violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law arising, inter alia, from the issues discussed below.

5. The recommendations of the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict<sup>1</sup> (the "Goldstone Report") have not been implemented, despite follow-up reports by the Committee of Independent Experts.<sup>2</sup> The reports of the Committee of Independent Experts took particular note of the failure by Israel to conduct investigations of alleged war crimes in a manner that accords with international standards.

---

<sup>1</sup> A/HRC/12/48.

6. The findings and recommendations of the Human Rights Council-mandated fact-finding mission on the incident of the humanitarian flotilla of 31 May 2010,<sup>3</sup> involving naval attacks by Israel in international waters, which resulted in the death of nine peace activists on the Turkish vessel Mavi Marmara, have not yet led to appropriate action.<sup>4</sup> It is observed that the failure to follow through on initiatives recommended by competent international experts under the auspices of the United Nations contributes to a lack of accountability for serious allegations of war crimes and human rights violations. The failure is particularly unfortunate given its impact on those living for many years under a regime of belligerent occupation, which has systematically deprived them of the normal rights and remedies associated with a law-abiding society. Without committed and capable international protection, those living under prolonged occupation are exposed to excesses and abuses perpetrated by the occupier, as the realities of the occupied Palestinian territories confirm in numerous ways.

7. Concern about non-implementation was underscored by the repudiation by Israel of the near-unanimous advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice in 2004 relating to the construction of the separation Wall in the occupied Palestinian territories.<sup>5</sup> This authoritative judicial interpretation of the international obligations of Israel, which was endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/15, has been repudiated by Israel without generating any result-oriented international reaction. Although advisory opinions are non-binding in a formal sense, they have important legal effects because they provide an authoritative interpretation of the issues at stake, which is based on legal reasoning by the world's highest judicial body concerned with international law.<sup>6</sup> The advisory opinion is particularly notable in the present instance, since the vote in the Court was 14 to 1— a rare display of consensus among judges drawn from the world's major legal systems and cultural backgrounds. It is worth noting that even the dissenting judge was in substantial agreement with much of the legal reasoning in the advisory opinion, making the conclusions virtually unanimous. While rejecting the authority of international assessments of illegality, the Government of Israel has agreed to comply with Israeli law to the extent applicable to the construction of the Wall. Yet in practice Israel has been slow to comply with relevant Israeli judicial decisions ordering the removal and relocation of segments of the Wall. In some instances these judicial directives have been ignored for several years, imposing acute suffering on Palestinian communities that are isolated or cut off

---

<sup>2</sup> A/HRC/15/50 and A/HRC/16/24.

<sup>3</sup> See A/HRC/15/21; see also A/HRC/16/73 and A/HRC/17/47.

<sup>4</sup> It is noted that the panel appointed by the Secretary-General to investigate these same events postponed the release of its report until late-August 2011.

<sup>5</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004 (see also A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1). The International Court of Justice concluded in its advisory opinion that the Fourth Geneva Convention was applicable in the Palestinian territories, which before the 1967 conflict lay to the east of the Green Line and which, during that conflict, were occupied by Israel.

<sup>6</sup> See Bekkar, "The United Nations General Assembly Requests a World Court Advisory Opinion on Israel's Separation Barrier", Insights, December 2003.

from agricultural land.<sup>7</sup> Weekly demonstrations against the Wall have continued, especially in Palestinian villages near Nablus, most prominently in the villages of Ni'lin and Bil'in. As with other issues of violations of international law by Israel, there continues to be a lack of will within the United Nations, and especially among its Member States, to challenge the existence and continuing construction of the Wall, which intrudes so negatively on the lives of many Palestinians living under occupation in the West Bank, especially East Jerusalem.

8. There are two conjoined issues present: the refusal of Israel to adhere to its obligations under international law in administering the occupied Palestinian territories, and the failure of the United Nations to take effective steps in response to such persistent, flagrant and systematic violations of the basic human rights of the Palestinians living under occupation. Yet such steps would seem to be given increased prominence in the light of the adoption of the responsibility to protect doctrine by the Security Council (resolution 1674 (2006)), and its recent application by way of Security Council resolution 1973 (2011) mandating the protection of civilians in Libya.

9. It is worth recalling the language of mutuality and rights emphasized in the Balfour Declaration of 2 November 1917, which underpins the founding of Israel, even now, almost a century after it was issued: "... it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine". This explicit acknowledgement of support in the contested declaration for the establishment of what was then called "a national home for the Jewish people" is the foundation of the claim of right relied upon in the establishment of the State of Israel, and its recognition and admission to membership by the United Nations in 1948. Although the Balfour Declaration was a colonialist overriding of the right of self-determination that was later recognized in international law, its insistence on showing respect for the reciprocal rights of the non-Jewish communities affected, particularly the Palestinians, should continue to provide political and moral guidance in the search for a peaceful and just solution to the conflict.

III. Palestinian self-determination

10. As has been stressed in prior reports, of all the human rights at stake due to the prolonged occupation by Israel of Palestinian territory, the most fundamental is the right of self-determination. This right inheres in the Palestinian people, as much as any other people in the world. However, the fulfilment of this right has been denied by Israel in the occupied Palestinian territories since 1967. Further, various developments in the course of the occupation have entailed encroachments that diminish the scope of self-determination even further than what was envisioned by the historic Palestinian acceptance of the territorial dimension of a two-State solution to the conflict, by way of the 1988 decision of the Palestine National Council, which accepted the parameters of Security Council resolutions 267 (1969) and 338 (1973). It should be appreciated that such a territorial compromise represented a major concession by the Palestinian leadership, as it reduced to 22 per cent the approximately 45 per cent of historic Palestine apportioned by the United Nations as belonging to the Palestinians in General Assembly resolution 181 (II). This partition arrangement was rejected in 1947 by leaders of both the resident Palestinian population and the neighbouring Arab Governments at the time, because they deemed it unfair and unacceptable. Palestinian self-determination continues to be widely understood in the international community to be based on the establishment of a viable and contiguous State within the totality of the 1967 borders, subject to agreed small-scale adjustments and equivalent land swaps. This position was reaffirmed by President Obama of the United States of America in May 2011.<sup>8</sup> Innumerable efforts, by way of direct negotiations between the parties, to transform this consensus into a solution have failed, contributing to intense disillusionment among the Palestinians and their leadership. It should be further observed that delay in finding a solution has continuously diminished Palestinian prospects for a viable State, especially because of Israeli settlement expansion, the construction of the Wall and the relating network of Israeli settler-only roads.

---

<sup>7</sup> In June 2011 Israel began dismantling a section of the barrier near the West Bank village of Bil'in, in compliance with a decision of the High Court of Justice of Israel four years earlier. See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Protection of Civilians Weekly Report, 8-21 June 2011", 24 June 2011. Available from <http://unispal.un.org>.

11. It is against this backdrop that several recent developments bearing on the intergovernmental pursuit of a peaceful and negotiated solution need to be considered, as they relate to the struggle for the protection and attainment of Palestinian rights under international law. A reconciliation or unity agreement between the Palestinian Authority and the de facto authorities in Gaza, signed at the end of April 2011, pledged the establishment of an interim Government tasked with arranging general elections at some future time throughout the Palestinian territory. This intra-Palestinian agreement has been criticized by the Governments of Israel and the United States as undermining prospects for direct negotiations because of objections to including representation of those belonging to a designated “terrorist organization”. At a meeting of the Middle East Quartet held in Washington, D.C. on 11 July 2011, there was a general call for resumed direct negotiations between Israel and the Palestinian side, but no agreement could be reached on preconditions for such negotiations.<sup>9</sup> On several occasions, President Mahmoud Abbas has restated his position that negotiations would not be resumed without a complete stoppage of Israeli settlement expansion, including within East Jerusalem. It appears that there is no likelihood of this condition being met by the Government of Israel. On the contrary, accelerated expansions of settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, have been regularly announced during the past several months;<sup>10</sup> and the announcement by President Abbas that the Palestinian Authority intends to approach the General Assembly with the purpose of achieving recognition of Palestinian statehood, based on the 1967 borders, and possibly also seek membership in the United Nations by way of the Security Council. Such a proposed diplomatic initiative is being presented as an alternative to direct negotiations and, for this reason, among

---

<sup>8</sup> Barack Obama, President of the United States, “Remarks by the President on the Middle East and North Africa”, White House press conference, Washington, D.C., 19 May 2011. Available from www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2011/05/19/remarks-president-middle-east-and-north-africa.

<sup>9</sup> See Office of the Quartet Representative, “Quartet principals meet with Tony Blair in Washington, D.C., to promote direct negotiations”, 11 July 2011. Available from www.tonyblairoffice.org/quartet/news-entry/quartet-meet-in-washington-dc-to-promote-direct-negotiations/.

<sup>10</sup> See A/66/364.

others, it is being condemned as “unilateral” and vigorously opposed by the Governments of Israel and the United States.

IV. Protection of the civilian population living under occupation

12. It is unfortunately necessary to restate the basic obligations of Israel under international humanitarian law as the occupying Power of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip. These obligations are mainly set forth in the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), to which Israel is party. Most pertinent is section III (arts. 47-78), which addresses issues associated with occupied territories. Of greater detail and more recent origin is the protocol additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the protection of victims of international armed conflicts (Protocol I), which entered into force in 1978, particularly part IV, which establishes the legal framework applicable to the civilian population. There are 171 States parties to Protocol I. While Israel is not a party to Protocol I, it is bound by the provisions of the Protocol because they have become embedded in international customary law, which does not require the explicit consent of a State to be binding. Other highly relevant international legal instruments pertaining to circumstances in the occupied Palestinian territories are the Convention on the Rights of the Child, with 197 States parties (including Israel) and the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid, with 107 States parties. It is not possible to consider in detail the applicability of these various legal instruments, so only a few salient features will be described.

13. One of the overarching objectives of international humanitarian law, whether in treaty or customary form, is to ensure that the civilian population is not made to suffer unduly from a belligerent occupation — which is assumed to be a temporary condition — and that the occupying Power does not take advantage of the occupation to secure benefits for its Government and society. The legal framework has been negotiated by States, in particular experienced diplomats and military advisers, and balances security considerations against those humanitarian objectives. With those considerations in mind, it can be observed that systematic abuse of civilians as individuals or in their community identity are particularly grave assaults on the international legal regime of occupation, which makes the Israeli settlement project in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, of continuing concern, especially when coupled with ongoing efforts by Israel and the United States to alter the 1967 borders to incorporate Israeli settlement blocs, notwithstanding their almost universally acknowledged illegality.

14. There are many other issues that illustrate the violation of the legal framework by the occupation policy of Israel. Examples include the annexation — and what even Israeli sources refer to as the “Judaization” — of East Jerusalem;<sup>11</sup> the purported geographic expansion of the boundaries of the city of Jerusalem;<sup>12</sup> the inability of more than 10,000 Palestinian children to be legally registered in East Jerusalem, thereby forcing Palestinian families to choose between staying together, at the risk of losing their Jerusalem residency permits, or accepting an enforced separation from their family members;<sup>13</sup> the appropriation of increasingly scarce water resources from aquifers in Gaza for use in Israel and by Israeli settlers; the imposition and enforcement of a blockade on the entire population of Gaza for a period of more than four years, which dramatically curtails basic rights to education, housing and health; the maintenance of a dual system of law and administration in the West Bank, which privileges Israeli settlers and openly discriminates against Palestinians; and the systematic abuse of Palestinians arrested and detained by Israeli security forces, including children of a young age.<sup>14</sup>

---

<sup>11</sup> See, for example, Nir Hasson, “The Orthodox Jews fighting the Judaization of East Jerusalem”, Haaretz (Tel Aviv), 24 June 2010. Available from www.haaretz.com/weekend/magazine/the-orthodox-jews-fighting-the-judaization-of-east-jerusalem-1.298113.

<sup>12</sup> See Security Council resolutions 252 (1968), 446 (1979) and 478 (1980).

15. As well as the patterns of violations of international humanitarian law highlighted in the preceding paragraph, it is important from a moral perspective to take into account the dimension of time on the underlying psychological and physical health of the occupied people. As noted, belligerent occupation is assumed to be short-lived and conducted so as to leave a light footprint, modelled in modern times by the occupations of Germany and Japan after the Second World War, with the restoration of sovereign rights at the earliest practicable time and, above all, the diligent protection of civilians for as long as the occupation lasts. Here, without providing an explanation for the prolonged nature of the occupation, which has increasingly taken on annexationist dimensions, the duration of more than 44 years is a cause for independent and urgent concern and action. This concern is aggravated by the absence of any near-term foreseeable end to the occupation.

16. Israel has contended that its “disengagement” from Gaza in 2005 ended occupation of the Gaza Strip, and thus Israeli responsibilities there as the occupying Power. Such a contention is generally rejected in international law circles, given continuing Israeli control over Gaza’s border, airspace and territorial waters which, along with the blockade (severely curtailing the Gaza fishing industry), has generated a persistent human rights crisis. Even without threats of cross-border violence from Israel, the ordeal of living under confined, crowded, impoverished and utterly disempowered conditions for a period of many years is incompatible with the fundamental purpose of international law to protect the dignity and well-being of an occupied civilian population. Living under siege has a proven deleterious effect on children and young people.<sup>15</sup> Among other privations, students are prevented from exercising their right to education outside the confines and limited opportunities available in the Gaza Strip. As stressed in previous reports, international humanitarian law needs to be re-examined to take into account the particular hardships for the civilian population arising from prolonged occupations, which call for special arrangements to allow civilians to have a decent life based on education, travel, employment and social normalcy. For three generations, to varying degrees the Palestinian people have been denied these components of human dignity. It is time for <sup>13</sup> Information received from the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees in the Near East and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs during mission. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Special Focus: East Jerusalem: Key Humanitarian Concerns, March 2011.

---

<sup>14</sup> See, for example, Defence for Children International — Palestine Section, “In their own words: a report on the situation facing Palestinian children detained in the Israeli military court system”, February 2011. Available from www.dci-pal.org/English/Doc/Press/EASTJerusalem\_JANUARY2011.pdf.

<sup>15</sup> See, for example, United Nations Children’s Fund, “UNICEF oPt monthly update, July-August 2011”. Available from www.unicef.org/oPt/UNICEF\_MonthlyUpdate\_July\_and\_August2011.pdf.

the United Nations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and key Member States to meet this challenge.

V. Detention and imprisonment

17. An issue of grave consequence from the perspective of human rights is the failure by Israel to uphold the basic rights — enumerated under international law — of persons it detains in the occupied Palestinian territories, many of whom are subsequently imprisoned in Israel. According to reports dated March 2009, there were 8,171 Palestinians being held in detention. Of these, 1,052 were held at the Ofer military base in the West Bank, south of Ramallah. The remaining 7,119 Palestinian prisoners and detainees are being held in confinement within the territory of Israel at the present time. The numbers of prisoners vary, but although the current total is slightly reduced, there are still thousands of Palestinians being held by Israel under conditions that violate international law. According to the non-governmental organization Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, as at June 2011 Israel was holding 5,554 Palestinian political prisoners, of whom 229 were being held in administrative detention without having been convicted of any crime. Of the prisoners, 211 were children, of whom 39 were not even 16 years old.

18. The Israeli policy of transferring Palestinian prisoners to Israeli territory violates the obligations of Israel as the occupying Power. Article 76 of the Fourth Geneva Convention is unequivocal: “Protected persons accused of offenses shall be detained in the occupied country, and if convicted they shall serve their sentences therein.” That is not only a technical requirement; it also relates to the hardship experienced by someone imprisoned for a long time. Family members have almost no visitation rights, and those who are formally available are made essentially irrelevant due to the onerous permit and permission system imposed by Israel. Young Palestinian males are almost always denied access to Israel, and thus have almost no opportunity to visit their imprisoned relatives. A Palestinian prisoner often loses all contact with family members for years as a consequence.<sup>16</sup>

19. Article 74 of Protocol I, which is devoted to the special circumstances of “dispersed families”, imposes an obligation on Israel to “facilitate in every possible way the reunion of families dispersed as a result of armed conflicts”, and urges cooperation with humanitarian organizations seeking to arrange for more family connections under the difficult conditions of the occupation. Israel continues to violate this obligation.

20. There also exists the important unexplored issue of whether Palestinians who are members of armed resistance organizations should be entitled to prisoner of war status. The Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War seems applicable only if the occupied Palestinian territories can be considered to be a State, which could be one result of the conferral of statehood upon Palestine by the General Assembly, although given the extensive diplomatic recognition accorded to the <sup>16</sup> For useful exposition of the separation of prisoners from their families for long periods of time, producing great suffering, see discussion by Israeli lawyer Michael Sfard, “Devil’s Island: the transfer of Palestinian detainees into prisons within Israel”, in Threat: Palestinian Political Prisoners in Israel, Abeer Barker and Anat Matar, eds. (London: Pluto Press, 2011). This book contains a valuable overview of these problems, and results from a conference held in Israel, a tribute to Israeli democratic freedoms for its own citizens.

Palestine Liberation Organization it can be argued that Palestine already enjoys the status of statehood.<sup>17</sup>

21. Additionally, it has been contended that, under Protocol I, members of Palestinian armed resistance groups could, in principle, be entitled to POW status without having to prove that they belong to a State, so long as the struggle is being carried on by an organized group fighting alien occupation in the exercise of their right of self-determination.<sup>18</sup> If prisoner of war status should be accorded to those detained for security reasons, and found to belong to armed resistance militias, a whole range of protections that Israel has denied would come into play for Palestinians engaged in resistance since the start of the occupation.

VI. Israeli settlements

22. As has been stated many times in prior reports, but must not be forgotten, all Israeli settlement activity is unlawful. This assessment is based on the accepted interpretation of article 49(6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention: “The Occupying Power shall not deport or transfer parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies.” This obligation applies whether or not Palestine enjoys the status of a State. The language of the text here is far from perfect, as it lends itself to a claim by Israel that it is not deporting or transferring Israelis to the settlements, but at most facilitating voluntary decisions based on a range of religious and economic motivations. But the long-standing reality of subsidies from the Government of Israel that encourage settlers and settlements (for construction, water, electricity, schools and other purposes) makes clear the significance of State involvement. Israel continues to insist that the West Bank is “disputed” rather than “occupied” territory, and thus international humanitarian law is not de jure applicable, while Israel purported to annex East Jerusalem in 1967, and has since that time refused to treat it as “occupied”. The Government of Israel has recently sought a reaffirmation from President Obama of the United States of the April 2004 letter from then President George W. Bush to then Prime Minister Ariel Sharon conveying the expectation of the Government of the United States that the Israeli settlement blocs (“major Israeli populations centers” to the east of 1967 borders) would be incorporated into Israel, in whatever agreement resolving the conflict was negotiated in the future.<sup>19</sup> Without exploring these issues in detail, there exists a strong international consensus, reinforced by innumerable Security Council and General Assembly resolutions as well as the 2004 International Court of Justice advisory opinion regarding the Wall, that the West Bank and East Jerusalem are “occupied”, and that international humanitarian law applies. Further, it seems clear that the letter on settlements by President Bush may have political weight, but from the perspective of Palestinian rights under international law the letter is irrelevant. The letter also violates basic principles of equity in international customary law, which do not allow third parties to diminish the claims in law of parties without their participation and consent.<sup>20</sup>

<sup>17</sup> John Quigley, The Statehood of Palestine: International Law in the Middle East Conflict (Cambridge University Press, 2010).

<sup>18</sup> The legal questions are usefully explored in Smadar Ben-Natan, “Are there prisoners in this war?” in Barker and Matar, Threat.

<sup>19</sup> Letter from President Bush to Prime Minister Sharon, dated 14 April 2004. Available from <http://georgewbush-whitehousearchives.gov/news/releases/2004/04/20040414-3.html>. See also Ethan Bronner, “Netanyahu responds icily to Obama remarks”, New York Times, 19 May 2011. Available from www.nytimes.com/2011/05/20/world/middleeast/20mideast.html?\_r=1.

23. In the context of the overall objectives of international humanitarian law to protect the rights of an occupied population, it is painfully evident that the establishment of more than 100 Israeli settlements with over 500,000 Israeli settlers, expropriating some of the best land and water resources, and moreover on the site of their proposed capital, flagrantly violates Palestinian rights and has a negative impact on Palestinian prospects for a viable, sovereign State. Yet political leaders from Europe and the United States consistently view settlement expansions by Israel as setbacks from the perspective of achieving a peaceful resolution to the underlying conflict. Foreign Secretary William Hague, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, issued a press release on 5 April 2011 in response to an announcement by Israel of its intention to expand a major settlement in East Jerusalem, stating: "I condemn Israel's decision to approve more than 900 settlement units in the East Jerusalem suburb of Gilo and the retrospective approval which has been given for construction in five West Bank settlements."<sup>21</sup> The leadership of the Palestinian Authority has repeatedly warned that without a total settlement freeze, it will not return to direct negotiations, and has explicitly linked its decision to seek recognition of Palestinian statehood at the United Nations to the Israeli policy on settlements.

24. It is also relevant to observe that strong demonstrations by Israeli civil society to protest skyrocketing housing costs inside Israel have produced new pressures on the Government of Israel to add to the supply of affordable housing, and one way to do this, it has been widely suggested in the Israeli media, is by expanding settlements.<sup>22</sup> Whether this path will be taken by Israel is not yet evident, but the issue suggests that Israeli public opinion and some leaders view the settlements as a vital safety valve for explosive social and political pressures building up within Israel.

25. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) has noted that zoning restrictions in occupied East Jerusalem seriously undermine Palestinian development. Thirty-five per cent of the occupied Arab part of the city has been approved by Israeli authorities for Jewish Israeli settlements, while only 13 per cent of the Arab area is even potentially available for Palestinian construction.<sup>23</sup>

26. All in all, it is widely agreed that the prospects for ending the occupation of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, are blocked by the continuing expansion of Israeli settlements. The longer this dynamic persists, the more tenuous becomes the possibility of actualizing the two-State option.

<sup>20</sup> It is noted that even treaties, which are a stronger form of agreement than this exchange of letters by the respective leaders of Israel and the United States, cannot affect Palestinian rights under international law. Article 34 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties clearly affirms this principle: "A treaty does not create either obligations or rights for a third State without its consent." Even should Palestine not be a State, it is certainly a party, and has been so regarded by all concerned Governments.

<sup>21</sup> Statement available from www.fco.gov.uk/en/news/latest-news/?view=News&id=579904682.

<sup>22</sup> See, for example, Martin Sherman, "Into the fray: come to the carnival, comrade!", Jerusalem Post, 8 May 2011. Available from www.jpost.com/Opinion/Columnists/Article.aspx?id=232543.

<sup>23</sup> Information received from UNRWA and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs during mission. See also Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Special Focus: East Jerusalem.

A. Settler violence

27. There has been a serious increase in settler violence in 2011. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reports a more than 50 per cent increase in incidents in the West Bank involving violence against Palestinians, documenting injuries to 178 Palestinians during the first half of 2011 as compared to 176 for the entire year of 2010.<sup>24</sup> According to UNRWA, those injured in settler violence in just the first half of 2011 included 12 children. These specific injuries resulted from stone-throwing, assaults and shootings by Israeli settlers. Yet these incidents only tell part of the story. There are almost daily accounts of settler vandalism against Palestinian agricultural land and villages, with several incidents videotaped by individuals working with B'Tselem, the highly regarded Israeli human rights organization.<sup>25</sup> There have been numerous reports of agricultural land and olive groves being burned, especially in the villages around Nablus.<sup>26</sup> Also part of this disturbing set of developments is a pattern of passive support for settler activities exhibited by Israeli security forces and border police. It often takes the form of shooting tear gas and stun grenades at Palestinians while doing nothing to stop settler violence and vandalism, and has also been documented by B'Tselem video cameras.<sup>27</sup> A further dimension to these activities is the frequent settler harassment of Palestinian children on their way to school — also not prevented by Israeli forces — which has reportedly discouraged many children and their families from attending school, thereby violating their right to education. In some areas, most consistently in Hebron where settler violence is frequent and severe, international civil society organizations such as Christian Peacemaker Teams and the Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel have attempted to step into the breach, providing direct protection of young schoolchildren when Israeli forces do not meet their obligation to prevent settler violence.<sup>28</sup> Overall, the failure by Israel to prevent and punish settler violence remains a serious and ongoing violation of its most fundamental obligation under international humanitarian law to protect a civilian population living under occupation, and to accord particular protection to children as specified in Protocol I, article 77.

B. The future of Israeli settlements

28. There have been several explanations given for this intensifying violence and harassment of Palestinian civilians: a reaction to a bloody incident in Itamar settlement in which five Israeli settlers were killed, including three children, while asleep at night;<sup>29</sup> an effort by the religiously motivated settlers to encourage support

<sup>24</sup> Information received from the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs during mission.

<sup>25</sup> Available from www.btselem.org/video/search/22. See also Muadi Nadder, ed., An Unjust Settlement: A Tale of Illegal Settlements in the West Bank (Geneva, Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel, 2010).

<sup>26</sup> Information received from UNRWA and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs during mission.

<sup>27</sup> See, for example, www.btselem.org/video-channel/east-jerusalem-six-voices.

<sup>28</sup> See Muadi Nadder, ed., An Unjust Settlement: A Tale of Illegal Settlements in the West Bank (Geneva, Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel, 2010).

<sup>29</sup> See "Terror attack in Itamar: 5 family members murdered", Jerusalem Post, 12 March 2011. Available from www.jpost.com/NationalNews/Article.aspx?id=211780.

by the Government of Israel for a policy of ethnic cleansing, especially in East Jerusalem, and their claim of biblical birthright to the entire West Bank;<sup>30</sup> and a signal to the Government that any future anti-settler moves by Tel Aviv, such as closing settler outposts established without official permission, would be met with what settlers themselves call “price tag” reprisals against Palestinians and their properties.<sup>31</sup> Maher Ghoneim, the Palestinian Authority Minister charged with monitoring settlement activity, declared: “This is a government of settlers and its program is one of settlement. This naturally encourages this arrogance and these attacks.”<sup>32</sup> Israeli political leaders refer to the West Bank as “Judea and Samaria”, indirectly reinforcing the insistence by religious Israeli settlers that this territory should as a whole be incorporated into or annexed by Israel, and that it is the Palestinians who are the usurpers of the historic and religious entitlements of Jewish settlers.

29. It may be that the increased violence by Israeli settlers reflects the fact that the clash between settler and Palestinian visions of the future is reaching a climax. Nabil Abu Rudaineh, a spokesperson for the Palestinian Authority, was quoted as saying on 8 July 2011 “that all the settlements are illegitimate and must be removed”.<sup>33</sup> Yet in this same period, settler leaders insist that not one settler will leave the West Bank regardless of what the Government of Israel agrees to do.

30. In recent months such polarizing views of future relationships have been articulated, ranging from the extremes of unconditional settlement expulsion as a component of withdrawal by Israel and the end of occupation to the complete incorporation of the West Bank into Israel proper, as a “Greater Israel” one-State alternative to the two-State proposal. Obviously, the outcome of such a debate has a direct bearing on whether the Palestinian right of self-determination will be recognized as integral to the dynamics of conflict resolution.

VII. Palestinian children, human rights and international humanitarian law

31. During the planned mission of the Special Rapporteur to Gaza that was redirected to Cairo and Amman, in a series of meetings with representatives of the Palestinian Authority, United Nations agencies with responsibilities in the occupied Palestinian territory and a range of human rights non-governmental organizations, particular attention was paid to the impact of prolonged occupation on the rights and well-being of Palestinian children. The results of these inquiries, reinforced by a variety of secondary sources, were disturbing for three principal reasons:

(a) The very fact of prolonged occupation exerts a constraining burden on civilians. Yet this impact is heavier on children, whose development is deformed by

<sup>30</sup> See, generally, B’Tselem, “By hook and by crook: Israeli settlement policy in the West Bank”, July 2010; and B’Tselem, “Dispossession and exploitation: Israel’s policy in the Jordan Valley and northern Dead Sea”, May 2011. Available from www.btselem.org/publications.

<sup>31</sup> See, for example, YNet, “Settlers: We’re launching ‘price tag’ policy across the West Bank”, 4 December 2008. Available from www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-3633599,00.html.

<sup>32</sup> Tom Perry, “In West Bank, settler violence seen on the rise”, Reuters, 14 July 2011. Available from <http://uk.mobile.reuters.com/article/worldNews/idUKTRE76D30220110714>.

<sup>33</sup> “EU: New settlement building units are obstacle to peace”, Jerusalem Post, 19 July 2011. Available from www.jpost.com/DiplomacyAndPolitics/Article.aspx?id=230096.

pervasive deprivations affecting health, education and overall security. The insecurity of Palestinian children is aggravated in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, by settler violence and night-time raids by Israeli occupation forces, house demolitions, threatened expulsions and a host of other practices, and in Gaza by the blockade and by traumatizing periodic violent incursions and sonic booms resulting from airplane overflights, as well as the still unrepaired destruction of refugee camps, residential communities and public buildings by Israeli forces during Operation “Cast Lead”;

(b) The available evidence suggests a pattern of increasing abuse, not just by the continued hardships of occupation, but by specific policies that entail more serious and systematic violations of the rights of children guaranteed by the norms of international humanitarian law;

(c) The testimony of experts on child development agrees that children suffer more from violations than adults, and the protection of their rights should be of particular concern to the international community. Writing on the impact of home demolitions, an UNRWA report of 12 June 2011 notes: “The impact of home demolitions on children can be particularly devastating. Many children affected by demolitions show signs of post-traumatic stress disorder, depression and anxiety.”<sup>34</sup>

32. The treatment of Palestinian children is ultimately related to the quest for a solution to the conflict that brings peace to both peoples and recognizes fundamental rights. As Gandhi famously said: “If we are to teach real peace in this world ... we shall have to begin with the children.” From the evidence available and what was learned on the mission, an intention to achieve a sustainable peace in the conflict would give immediate priority to respect for the rights of Palestinian children, including enabling their normal and positive development despite the constraints of occupation.

33. To illustrate patterns of deprivation, this report discusses arrest and detention procedures relating to children in the West Bank and East Jerusalem and the damaging impact on children’s health arising from unsafe water in Gaza.

A. Arrest and detention procedures for Palestinian children

34. In the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the most widely ratified of all international legal treaties, a detailed framework is set forth of the special protection that parties are legally obligated to provide for children. This encompasses children living under belligerent occupation. Article 3 (1) of the Convention expresses the general approach taken in the Convention, and hence is now embodied in international human rights law: “In all actions concerning children, whether undertaken by public or private social welfare institutions, courts of law, administrative authorities or legislative bodies, the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration.” Article 38 (1) declares: “States Parties undertake to respect and to ensure respect for rules of international humanitarian law applicable to them in armed conflicts which are relevant to the child.” Article 40 specifies the obligatory steps regarding criminal charges brought against children in keeping with the mandate of article 40 (1) that the child be “treated in a manner consistent with the promotion of the child’s sense of dignity and worth, which reinforces the child’s respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of others and which takes into account the child's age and the desirability of promoting a child's reintegration and the child's assuming a constructive role in society". This approach reflects the general directive of article 77 (1) of Protocol I: "Children shall be the object of special respect." It is against this background that the pattern of deleterious treatment of Palestinian children living under occupation, as confirmed by many testimonies received during the Special Rapporteur's mission and published reports of respected NGOs, confirms continuing violations by Israel of international law, in particular international humanitarian law.

<sup>34</sup> UNRWA, “Demolition watch”, 12 June 2011. Available from http://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Full\_Report\_1154.pdf.

35. Many of the arrests of Palestinian children arise out of allegations of stone-throwing aimed at settlers or Israeli security personnel in the West Bank.<sup>35</sup> Those accused, unlike Israeli children in the West Bank, are subject to Israeli military law, which offers far fewer protections for minors than are present in Israeli criminal law. Most relevantly, in military law there is an absence of protective provisions regarding the presence of a parent during interrogation, the hours that the interrogation must be conducted or respect for the dignity of the child during the arrest process. The arrest procedures documented by United Nations agencies and reliable human rights organizations include arrests in the middle of the night without prior notification, removal of the child from parents for questioning, abusive treatment in detention and conviction procedures that appear to preclude findings of not guilty. During our mission we were frequently told that these arrest procedures seemed systematically intended to frighten and humiliate those arrested, and to turn them towards collaborating by identifying protest leaders in demonstrations and refraining from anti-occupation activities in the future.

36. In the period between 2005 and 2010, 835 children were prosecuted for stone-throwing, of which 34 were 12 or 13 years old, 255 were 14 or 15, and 546 were 16 or 17.<sup>36</sup> Since 2007 the number prosecuted has risen each year. The length of the sentences did take into account the age of the accused, varying from more than a year for older children to a few weeks for younger ones. Israel did establish a youth military court in 2010, and so far its sentences for children in the 12 or 13 year-old category have been lighter, with the longest sentence imposed being nine days, which is far less than in earlier years. The very existence of a military court for children is inconsistent with international humanitarian law's fundamental commitment to uphold, pursuant to article 40 (1) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, "a child's sense of dignity and worth". B'Tselem has expressed its main finding on this topic as follows: "The present report indicates that the rights of minors are severely violated, that the military law almost completely fails to protect their rights, and that the few rights granted by law are not implemented."<sup>36</sup> Among the serious results of this way of handling Palestinian youth accused of transgressions is the denial of their educational possibilities while in custody or prison, and the disallowance of their ties with families, which go against international legal standards. This abuse also inflicts fear and suffering on parents and other family members who witness the arrest procedures and are not even informed about where their child is being held in custody.

---

<sup>35</sup> See, generally, B'Tselem, "No minor matter: violation of the rights of Palestinian minors arrested by Israel on suspicion of stone-throwing", July 2011; and B'Tselem, "Caution: children ahead: the illegal behavior of the police towards minors in Silwan suspected of stone-throwing", December 2010. Available from www.btselem.org/publications.

<sup>36</sup> B'Tselem, "No minor matter: violation of the rights of Palestinian minors arrested by Israel on suspicion of stone-throwing", July 2011.

37. There is abundant anecdotal evidence of child abuse associated with interrogations and arrests of children.<sup>37</sup> The United Nations Children's Fund occupied Palestinian territory child protection programme contains a summary that overlaps and confirms other reputable descriptions, saying that reports of interrogations are widespread and include fingerprinting, blood tests, humiliation, using dogs to frighten the children, forcing parents into the streets on their knees, arresting boys and girls and bringing elderly women and invalids for interrogation. The same source tells of extreme instances in the village of Awarta. One three-year-old girl was reportedly taken outside her home at 3 a.m. and threatened at gunpoint. She was told she would be shot and her family home destroyed unless she reported on the whereabouts of her brother. Now, her mother explained, she can't sleep through the night and is bedwetting. One nine-year-old girl reportedly tried to follow her father when he was arrested and she was grabbed by the neck and is still having pain and is afraid to go outside.<sup>38</sup>

38. A report of the Association for Civil Rights in Israel details how the Israeli Youth Law is often violated in the arrest and interrogation of Palestinian children in East Jerusalem. The report is specific in its allegations:

Children have been detained for hours on end, handcuffed, they have been threatened during interrogations, screamed at, and coerced by any means into revealing information about the incidents taking place in their neighbourhood. In this context it is important to emphasize that the younger the child is, the greater the chance that he will experience trauma and psychological damage from such treatment.<sup>39</sup>

Expansion of Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem is coordinated with private security guards, who operate with even less constraint towards Palestinian children than Israeli police. This reliance on security guards is especially prevalent in the Silwan neighbourhood, where settler ambitions have collided sharply with the security of long-term Palestinian residents. According to Sahar Francis, General-Director of Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, the arrests of children are intended to intimidate and scare youth so as to discourage "political activism more generally",<sup>40</sup> raising questions as to a specific denial by Israel of the affirmation by the General Assembly of a right of resistance to unlawful occupation policies.

39. It is little wonder in view of such incidents that both Médecins Sans Frontières and UNICEF have recently said that the number of children suffering from stress disorder has greatly increased.<sup>41</sup> Colonel Desmond Travers, a member of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict (whose report is generally known as the "Goldstone Report") said in a recent interview: "If the British had behaved toward children who threw stones at them in the manner that is the norm on the West Bank for Israeli security forces — whereby children are rounded up in the evening

<sup>37</sup> See, for example, Defence for Children International — Palestine Section, "In their own words".

<sup>38</sup> Ibid., "Awarta update", 18 April 2011.

<sup>39</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, "Violations of the 'Youth Law (Adjudication, Punishment Methods of Treatment) — 1971' by the Israeli police in East Jerusalem", March 2011. Available from www.acri.org.il/en/?p=2428.

<sup>40</sup> J. Kestler-D'Amours, "The tactic of arresting Palestinian children", Al Jazeera, 8 July 2011.

<sup>41</sup> See "Trauma of Palestinian children increasing, say health groups", Electronic Intifada, 27 July 2011. Available from <http://electronicintifada.net/content/trauma-palestinian-children-increasing-say-health-groups/10212>.

and taken to places of detention, hooded, beaten, and in some cases tortured — the Northern Ireland problem would not be resolved today. It would be still a place of conflagration.”<sup>42</sup>

40. In response to this pattern of abuse the above-referenced B’Tselem report recommends the following guidelines:

1. Set the age of minority in the military legislation to conform with the age of minority in Israel and the rest of the world immediately;
2. Prohibit night arrests of minors;
3. Restrict interrogations to daytime hours, with parents present, and give minors the opportunity to consult with an attorney in an orderly manner that respects the minors’ rights;
4. Prohibit the imprisonment of minors under the age of 14;
5. Promote alternatives to detention and find solutions offering alternatives to imprisonment;
6. Establish educational programmes in all prisons and offer study opportunities in all subjects to minimize the harm to the minors’ studies while they are detained and imprisoned;
7. Facilitate the issuing of permits to visit minors who are detained and imprisoned.<sup>36</sup>

B. Gaza blockade, collective punishment and Palestinian children

41. As emphasized throughout the report, children are the most vulnerable and most acute victims of Israeli violations of the provisions of international humanitarian law that are designed to protect an occupied civilian population. With the blockade of Gaza now extended beyond 4 years, and the overall occupation more than 44 years, the impact of those violations is exponentially increased. UNRWA, which normally avoids drawing conclusions as to the character of the occupation, issued a press release on 14 July 2011 expressing its heightened concern and calling attention to the plight of Gaza’s children, stating: “Today, there is a crisis in every aspect of life in Gaza. In education we need to build 100 new schools in three years for these children.”<sup>43</sup> UNRWA spokesman Chris Gunness has noted that “the abject poor living on just over 1 dollar a day has tripled to 300,000 since the blockade was imposed and with many reconstruction projects still awaiting approval, the future looks bleak”.<sup>44</sup> With more than half the population of Gaza under the age of 18, those facing that bleak future are overwhelmingly children. UNRWA recalls the condemnation by the International Committee of the Red Cross of the blockade as “collective punishment in clear violation of international humanitarian law” and calls on the international community “to ensure that repeated appeals by States and international organizations to lift the closure are finally heeded”. It ends with this appeal: “We endorse these calls for accountability, because we need to lift the blockade and give the kids of Gaza a chance to fulfil their true potential.”<sup>43</sup> As an aspect of the multidimensional crisis facing Gaza, UNRWA itself is experiencing a funding crisis that already is impinging on its capacity to continue even at present levels to provide for the 80 per cent of the Gazan population that is currently dependent on international assistance for subsistence, and lacks the resources to meet the additional needs of Gaza’s families, which of course encompasses the children.

<sup>42</sup> Philip Weiss, “Col. Travers: Israel’s treatment of Palestinian children shows that it does not seek peace”, 11 July 2011. Available from <http://mondoweiss.net/2011/07/col-travers-israels-treatment-of-palestinian-children-shows-that-it-does-not-see-peace.html>.

<sup>43</sup> UNRWA, “A goal for Gaza: at 2011 Summer Games, 2,011 children set football world record”, 14 July 2011. Available from <http://unispal.un.org/UNISPAL.NSF/0/E014A7DE55B9E6B0852578CD0065C530>.

<sup>44</sup> UNRWA, “Gaza blockade anniversary report”, 13 June 2011. Available from www.unrwa.org/etemplate.php?id=1007.

42. What is said about Gaza is only a shade less true for the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, where the ordeal of prolonged occupation weighs heavily on the future prospects of children living in an atmosphere of fear and intimidation from birth onwards. Recent developments in Area C, which is 60 per cent of the West Bank, are in their own way as severe in their deprivation of rights as the situation in Gaza, especially in relation to the displacement and dispossession of Bedouin villages that have created a general atmosphere of fear and foreboding, especially among Bedouin children.<sup>45</sup> According to UNRWA field staff with whom the Special Rapporteur met during the mission, the 155 herding communities left in Area C, which is fully controlled by Israel, include many Bedouin refugees now facing forcible displacement. Those communities, including many children now largely without regular access to schools, have dramatically deteriorated since 2000, with half the population having been forced out of the West Bank grazing areas, losing their herds and involuntarily ending up in small towns and villages. Part of this forced displacement and forced urbanization has been the result of an Israeli policy of systematic demolition of the traditional cistern-based water infrastructure essential for maintaining the Bedouin people’s nomadic and agricultural way of life, which the occupying Power contends is unlicensed, and thus subject to removal. Bedouin children, most of whose families have already been made refugees in the past, face the particularly difficult challenge of losing their homes and entire way of life as a result of this forced abandonment of their herding traditions, as well as being denied the protection of citizenship associated with upholding the dignity and rights of individuals.

C. Palestinian children’s health and polluted water in Gaza

43. Children are particularly vulnerable to the unsafe water conditions that exist in Gaza. It is estimated that 54 per cent of Gaza’s 1.6 million civilians are children under the age of 18, with 20 per cent of the total under 5 years of age. Within this youngest age group, nearly 300,000 children are at acute risk; this age group is most vulnerable to the effects of water-associated disease, accounting for 90 per cent of annual deaths due to diarrhoeal diseases, including cholera.<sup>46</sup> Studies demonstrate that it is Gaza’s unsafe waters that account mainly for the differences in health and survival (child mortality) between children in Gaza and those in the West Bank. The study mentioned above clarifies this conclusion: Gaza’s sole water source is an aquifer that is chemically contaminated with dangerous levels of chlorides, nitrates and other pollutants, some in excess of World Health Organization guidelines. Water scarcity aggravates the problem. Almost two thirds of Gazans surveyed indicated that their water is of bad quality due to its high salinity and water pollution, which is especially caused by wastewater contamination. The World Bank and Coastal Municipal Water Utility in Gaza stated that “only 5 to 10% of the aquifer is suitable for human consumption and ... this supply could run out over the next five to 10 years without improved controls”.<sup>46</sup>

<sup>45</sup> See Harriet Sherwood, “Bedouin children hope their West Bank school will be spared Israel’s bulldozers”, Guardian, 12 June 2011.

<sup>46</sup> See UNICEF, “Protecting children from unsafe water in Gaza: strategy, action plan and project resources”, March 2011. Available from www.unicef.org/oPt/FINAL\_Summary\_Protecting\_Children\_from\_unsafe\_Water\_in\_Gaza\_4\_March\_2011.pdf.

44. What is at stake with respect to water quality in Gaza is the right of the child to life and health. Exacerbating the crisis is the continuing impact of the unlawful blockade by Israel, which prevents the importation of tools and materials necessary to repair and restore the water purification system partially destroyed during Operation “Cast Lead”.

VIII. Recommendations

45. In the light of the above, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel take the following measures:

(a) Immediately adopt in policy and practice the guidelines of B’Tselem for the protection of Palestinian children living under occupation who are arrested or detained as a minimum basis for compliance with international humanitarian law and human rights standards under international law;

(b) Allow on an urgent basis entry to Gaza of materials needed for repair of water and electricity infrastructure so as to avoid further deterioration in the health of the civilian population, especially children, which is currently in critical condition;

(c) Develop and implement appropriate detention and imprisonment policies and practices for Palestinians, including fully observing the prohibition on transferring prisoners from occupied Palestinian territory to Israeli territory;

(d) Immediately lift the unlawful blockade of Gaza in view of its violative impact on all aspects of civilian life, its undermining of the basic rights of an occupied population and its grave impact on children.

46. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the General Assembly request that the International Court of Justice issue an advisory opinion on the legal status of prolonged occupation, as aggravated by prohibited transfers of large numbers of persons from the occupying Power and the imposition of a dual and discriminatory administrative and legal system in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
19 September 2012

Original: English

---

Sixty-seventh session

Item 70 (c) of the provisional agenda*,**

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Richard Falk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/67/150.

** This report is being submitted late in order to take account of significant information received from interlocutors in Israel and the occupied Palestinian territory. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur notes the Government of Israel's continuing practice of non-cooperation with his mandate, which impedes him from engaging directly with such interlocutors in the occupied Palestinian territory.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The present report addresses Israel's compliance with its obligations under international law in relation to its occupation of Palestinian territory. The Special Rapporteur focuses particular attention on the legal responsibility of business enterprises, corporations and non-State actors involved in activities relating to Israel's settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory.

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	3
II. Working methodology for the present report . . . . .	4
III. General situation of settlements . . . . .	4
IV. Legal framework . . . . .	6
A. General: human rights law and international humanitarian law . . . . .	6
B. Human rights and international humanitarian law obligations and principles relevant to private corporations in the occupied Palestinian territory . . . . .	7
V. Case studies . . . . .	12
VI. Conclusion . . . . .	23
VII. Recommendations . . . . .	24
 Annexes
I. Land allocated to Israeli settlements, January 2012 . . . . .	26
II. The humanitarian impact of Israeli settlement policies, January 2012 . . . . .	27

I. Introduction

1. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 reiterates his request to the Government of Israel to cooperate with his efforts to implement his mandate from the United Nations. Such cooperation is a fundamental legal obligation incident to membership in the Organization and ensures that the Special Rapporteur can constructively engage with the Government of Israel, victims, witnesses and civil society actors relevant to his mandate.

2. Article 104 of the Charter of the United Nations states that the Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes. Article 105, paragraph 2, specifies that those who represent the United Nations shall enjoy in the territory of States Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization. These provisions were elaborated in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, adopted by the General Assembly on 13 February 1946. Article VI, section 22, thereof, entitled “Experts on missions for the United Nations”, is particularly relevant, setting forth the duties of Members to cooperate with such representatives as Special Rapporteurs and to avoid interfering with their independence.

3. It should be noted that the Government of Israel has not cooperated with many other important initiatives of the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council relating to the occupied Palestinian territory. This includes the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, the Committee of Independent Experts to follow up on the fact-finding mission on the Gaza conflict, the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Incident of the Humanitarian Flotilla, the Beit Hanoun fact-finding mission, the Commission of Inquiry on Lebanon, and the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories. This pattern of non-cooperation with official undertakings of the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council should produce a concerted effort by Member States, the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Secretary-General to obtain the cooperation of the Government of Israel.

4. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 conducted research for this report on the basis of the foundational principle that business enterprises must respect international humanitarian law and should respect human rights. They should avoid infringing on the human rights of those living under occupation and address adverse human rights impacts with which they are involved.<sup>1</sup> The Special Rapporteur would welcome engagement with the Government of Israel, and companies and corporations operating within or in relation to Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, regarding the issues raised in this report.

5. The Special Rapporteur calls attention to the grave circumstances of the Palestinian people, living under prolonged occupation and with no realistic prospect of its termination in the near future, and under these conditions the United Nations has a great responsibility to do all that can be done to avoid the economic, political and cultural exploitation of the Palestinian people, as well as their endowment of natural resources.

---

<sup>1</sup> Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (A/HRC/17/31, annex).

II. Working methodology for the present report

6. Taking account of the Special Rapporteur's repeated unsuccessful requests to the Government of Israel to be allowed access to the occupied Palestinian territory, the present report is based on information requested and received from civil society actors, United Nations agencies, companies and corporations, non-State entities, and other stakeholders, in particular those with expertise concerning the involvement of business enterprises in the construction and maintenance of Israeli settlements. The Special Rapporteur highlights selected individual companies that operate, conduct business or otherwise profit from Israeli settlements located in the occupied Palestinian territory. The Special Rapporteur makes recommendations to seek to ensure that businesses operating in relation to Israeli settlements take prompt action to bring their activities into line with relevant international law and related rules and standards, including international human rights law. The Special Rapporteur notes that, since the preparation of the present report, he has brought its content to the attention of the businesses discussed herein. The Special Rapporteur is requesting clarification and further information regarding the allegations contained in this report, especially with a view to pursuing the prompt implementation of his recommendations.

III. General situation of settlements

7. From 1967 to 2010 Israel established an estimated 150 settlements in the West Bank. In addition, there are an estimated 100 "outposts", settlements built without official Israeli authorization but with the protection, infrastructural support and financial help of the Government of Israel. Such "outposts" are recently the subject of Government of Israel processes and discussions regarding their potential legalization under Israeli law. This is a serious escalation of the settlement agenda that is inconsistent with Israeli political rhetoric supporting negotiations to establish a viable, independent, contiguous and sovereign Palestinian State.

8. There are also 12 settlements in Jerusalem that were established, with Government funding and assistance, on land unlawfully annexed by Israel and made part of the city. Settlements control over 40 per cent of the West Bank, including critical agricultural and water resources. Many settlements are extensively developed, comprising large gated communities or small cities. Israel does not allow Palestinians to enter or use these lands, except those with permits to work.

9. The population of Israeli settlers in the occupied Palestinian territory is between 500,000 and 650,000. Approximately 200,000 of these settlers live in East Jerusalem. Statistics indicate that the settler population (excluding that of East Jerusalem) has, over the past decade, grown at an average yearly rate of 5.3 per cent, compared to 1.8 per cent in the Israeli population as whole. In the past 12 months this population increased by 15,579 persons. The Israeli Government offers settlers benefits and incentives relating to construction, housing, education, industry, agriculture and tourism, exclusive roads, and privileged access to Israel.

The effort Israel has expended in the settlement enterprise — financially, legally and bureaucratically — has turned many settlements into affluent enclaves for Israeli citizens within an area where Palestinians live under military rule and in conditions of widespread poverty.

10. This financial, legal and bureaucratic help in settlement areas is providing settlers with privileges they would not be afforded as Israeli citizens living in Israeli territory. Such privileges provide a telling juxtaposition to the large protests that occurred in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa in 2011, involving hundreds of thousands of Israelis who freely assembled to demand social justice, lower living costs and a Government response to the economic distress that Israeli middle classes are experiencing.

11. The establishment of the settlements is a flagrant violation of international humanitarian law as set forth in the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention) and the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907. Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention prohibits an Occupying Power from transferring citizens from its own territory to the occupied territory. The Hague Regulations prohibit an Occupying Power from undertaking permanent changes in the occupied area unless justified by military needs in the narrow sense of the term, or unless they are undertaken for the benefit of the local population.

12. In building settlements and associated infrastructure, Israel further violates international law through the appropriation of Palestinian property not justified by military necessity, and by imposing severe movement restrictions on Palestinians. Such restrictions violate those human rights dependent on freedom of movement, including rights to health, education, family life, work and worship. In addition, the scale of Israel's settlement project and the massive financial investment in it appear to confirm Israel's intention to retain control over these areas, thus violating a core principle of the Charter of the United Nations, namely Article 2 (4), which prohibits the acquisition of territory by the use or threat of force. Moreover, the settlements fragment the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, into isolated geographical units, severely limiting the possibility of a contiguous territory and the ability to dispose freely of natural resources, both of which are required for the meaningful exercise of the fundamental and inalienable right of the Palestinian people to self-determination.

13. Israel has created a regime of separation and discrimination, with two separate systems of law in Palestinian territory: one system applies to the settlers, and treats the settlements as de facto extensions of Israel and grants settlers the rights of citizens with the protections of a quasi-democratic State. In contrast, the Palestinians are subject to a system of military administration that deprives them of legal protection and the right to participate in shaping policies regarding the land in which they live. These separate systems reinforce a regime in which rights depend on national identity and citizenship. A dual system of roads, one for settlers and one for Palestinians, further entrenches the discriminatory separation between the two communities.

14. The wall in the West Bank is one of the most prominent aspects of the settlement enterprise. Much of the route of the wall is placed inside the West Bank, and takes into account the further expansionist designs of settler communities. Access restrictions to Palestinian farmland in the vicinity of Israeli settlements located on the eastern side of the wall are widespread. While in some cases the restricted areas are unilaterally established and enforced by the settlers, in other cases the Israeli military erects fences around settlements and declares the area a “Special Security Area”. In its near unanimous (14 to 1) advisory opinion of 2004, the International Court of Justice unequivocally declared that the separation wall violated international law, should be dismantled and Palestinians compensated for harm experienced.

15. In Area C, comprising 60 per cent of the West Bank, the zoning regime applied by Israel further benefits the establishment and growth of settlements, while denying the development of Palestinian communities. The zoning regime effectively prohibits Palestinian construction in some 70 per cent of Area C, or approximately 44 per cent of the West Bank. In the remaining 30 per cent a range of restrictions makes it virtually impossible for Palestinians to obtain a building permit. In practice, Israeli authorities allow Palestinian construction only within the boundaries of an Israeli-approved plan, which covers less than 1 per cent of Area C. As a result, Palestinians are left with no choice but to build “illegally”, which leads to inhumane Israeli responses involving demolition and displacement.

16. Since East Jerusalem was purportedly annexed by Israel, the Government of Israel has created demographic and geographic conditions designed to thwart peace proposals designating Jerusalem as the capital of Palestine. Israel has sought to increase the Israeli population and reduce the number of Palestinians in the city. Israel has employed the following methods: physically isolating East Jerusalem from the rest of the West Bank in part by building the wall; discriminating in land expropriation, planning and building, and demolition of houses; revoking residency and social benefits of Palestinians; and inequitably disbursing the municipal budget between the two parts of the city. The forced eviction of Palestinians from their homes by settlers backed by the Government has contributed to changing the demography of the city. Palestinians have lost their homes and many more remain at constant risk of forced eviction, dispossession and displacement. The Government supports the settlers’ actions by, inter alia, allocating private security guards; sending security forces to accompany the takeover of Palestinian homes; and funding Israeli development projects in the Jerusalem settlements.

IV. Legal framework

A. General: human rights law and international humanitarian law

17. Israel is a State party to most core international human rights conventions, and reports regularly to the relevant human rights treaty bodies.<sup>2</sup> A situation of armed conflict or occupation does not release a State from its human rights obligations. The International Court of Justice, human rights treaty bodies, successive United Nations High Commissioners for Human Rights and special procedures of the Commission on Human Rights and its successor, the Human Rights Council, have consistently confirmed that international human rights law and international humanitarian law apply concurrently throughout the occupied Palestinian territory.

---

<sup>2</sup> <http://tb.ohchr.org/default.aspx?country=il>.

18. Israel is bound by international humanitarian law found in the treaties it has ratified, as well as in customary international law. Notably, in the occupied Palestinian territory Israel is bound by the provisions of international law specific to occupied territories. The rules of international humanitarian law regarding military occupation, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention)<sup>3</sup> and the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907,<sup>4</sup> must be applied by Israel, as the Occupying Power, in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip. Although Israel has argued against the formal application of the Geneva Convention, and agreed only to apply the “humanitarian” provisions as determined by itself, the situation remains one of belligerent military occupation, as recognized by the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council and most conclusively by the International Court of Justice in its 2004 advisory opinion on the wall. In addition to the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention, the Hague Regulations, which are accepted as customary international law, apply.<sup>5</sup>

19. The Government of Israel, as the Occupying Power, is duty-bound to respect and implement human rights and international humanitarian law obligations in the occupied Palestinian territory. Israel also has an obligation to ensure that private businesses operating in the occupied Palestinian territory are held accountable for any activities that have an adverse impact on the human rights of the Palestinian people.

B. Human rights and international humanitarian law obligations and principles relevant to private corporations in the occupied Palestinian territory

1. Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights

20. On 16 June 2011 the Human Rights Council in its resolution 17/4 unanimously endorsed the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights<sup>6</sup> for implementing the United Nations “Protect, Respect and Remedy” Framework, providing — for the first time — a global standard for upholding human rights in relation to business activity. The Guiding Principles were prepared by the former Special Representative of the Secretary-General on human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises, Professor John Ruggie. They provide authoritative normative guidance, clarifying the roles and responsibilities of business enterprises with regard to human rights, and the necessary legal and policy measures to be taken by States arising from their existing human rights obligations to ensure respect for human rights. It is the first normative document on business and human rights to be endorsed by an intergovernmental human rights body.

---

<sup>3</sup> United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75· No. 973.

<sup>4</sup> Regulations concerning the Laws and Customs of War on Land, adopted on 18 October 1907; entered into force on 26 January 1910. See Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, The Hague Conventions and Declarations of 1899 and 1907 (New York, Oxford University Press, 1915).

<sup>5</sup> See A/HRC/12/37.

<sup>6</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex.

21. The Guiding Principles highlight the steps States should take to foster respect for human rights by businesses. They provide a framework in which companies should demonstrate that they respect human rights and reduce the risk of abuses. They also constitute a set of benchmarks by which to assess business respect for human rights. The Guiding Principles are organized under the Framework's three pillars:

(a) The State duty to protect against human rights abuses by third parties, including business enterprises, through policies, regulation and adjudication;

(b) The corporate responsibility to respect human rights, which means that business enterprises should act with due diligence to avoid infringing on the rights of others and to address the adverse impacts with which they are involved;

(c) The need for greater access to remedy for victims of business-related abuse, both judicial and non-judicial.

22. The Guiding Principles provide concrete and practical recommendations to implement the Framework. The Guiding Principles do not create new international law obligations, but constitute a clarification and elaboration of the implications of existing standards, including under international human rights law, and practices, for both States and business enterprises, integrating them within a coherent framework.<sup>7</sup> In addition to forming part of States' existing international human rights obligations, important elements of the Guiding Principles are also increasingly reflected in national laws, and in global, regional and industry-specific soft law standards and initiatives as well as contractual obligations.

23. Companies can have an impact on all human rights depending on the situation and context of their activities; therefore it is essential that they put in place an effective ongoing human rights due diligence process to assess risks and the potential and actual impact of their activities on human rights, integrate and act on the findings of such assessments, track the effectiveness of their response and communicate on both the assessments and the response. This is in addition to business enterprises expressing a clear public commitment to meeting their responsibility to respect human rights, and to providing for or cooperating with the remediation of any adverse effects that they have caused or contributed to.

24. Human rights may be at heightened risk and should therefore receive greater attention in particular industries and contexts, including humanitarian situations, but businesses should in all cases be encouraged to have a periodic review to assess all human rights affected by their activity. International human rights standards, including the International Bill of Human Rights<sup>8</sup> and the eight core conventions of the International Labour Organization (ILO), as set out in the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work all act as an authoritative list against which to assess the human rights impacts of business enterprises. Impact assessments should also consider, depending on circumstances, additional standards, for instance, relating to the rights of indigenous peoples; women; national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities; children; persons with disabilities; and migrant workers and their families, wherever appropriate. Business enterprises should respect the standards of international humanitarian law whenever they operate in a situation of armed conflict. States should exercise even greater oversight with regard to businesses enterprises that they own or control.

---

<sup>7</sup> A/HRC/17/31, para. 14.

<sup>8</sup> The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

25. The Guiding Principles are leading to a convergence of global standards and initiatives on business and human rights, as evidenced in reports of the Working Group on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises and the former Special Representative of the Secretary-General.<sup>9</sup> Examples of regional initiatives include: (a) the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) has included a chapter on human rights in its guidance on corporate responsibility, which is aligned with the United Nations “Protect, Respect and Remedy” Framework on which the Guiding Principles are based; (b) the European Commission has issued a communication on corporate social responsibility expressing its expectation that all enterprises should meet human rights responsibility as defined in the Guiding Principles.<sup>10</sup> It has also stated its intention to publish periodic progress reports on the implementation of the Guiding Principles within the European Union and invited European Union member States to develop national plans for the implementation of the Guiding Principles by the end of 2012;<sup>11</sup> (c) the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) has announced that the first thematic study by the new Intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights would focus on business and human rights in a manner that is fully compliant with the Guiding Principles;<sup>12</sup> and (d) the Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises of the Organization for Economic Development and Cooperation (OECD), as updated in 2011, are now fully aligned with the corporate responsibility to respect human rights as set out in the Guiding Principles.

2. The Global Compact

26. The Global Compact<sup>13</sup> is the leading global voluntary initiative for corporate social responsibility that also addresses the issue of business and human rights. It was launched at the initiative of the Secretary-General in 2000, aimed at persuading business leaders to voluntarily promote and apply within their corporate domains 10 principles relating to human rights, labour standards, the environment and anti-corruption. Seven United Nations bodies work in a continuing partnership with the Secretary-General’s Global Compact Office, namely, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Environment Programme, UN-Women, the International Labour Organization and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization. The Global Compact has stated that the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights provide the content of the first principle of the Global Compact and thus form part of the

<sup>9</sup> Uptake of the United Nations framework and the Guiding Principles has been documented by the Working Group in its first reports to the Human Rights Council (A/HRC/20/29) and the General Assembly (A/67/285), by the Secretary-General in his report to the Human Rights Council (A/HRC/21/21 and Corr.1) and by the former Special Representative of the Secretary-General; see www.business-humanrights.org/media/documents/applications-of-framework-jun-2011.pdf.

<sup>10</sup> Available from http://ec.europa.eu/enterprise/policies/sustainable-business/corporate-social-responsibility/index\_en.htm.

<sup>11</sup> http://ec.europa.eu/enterprise/newsroom/cf/\_getdocument.cfm?doc\_id=7010.

<sup>12</sup> Remarks by Rafendi Djamin, representative of Indonesia to the Intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, at the Asia Pacific Forum of National Human Rights Institutions Regional Conference on Business and Human Rights, Seoul, 11 to 13 October 2011.

<sup>13</sup> See www.unglobalcompact.org/.

commitment undertaken by some 8,700 corporate participants in the Global Compact<sup>14</sup> from over 130 countries.

27. Overall, the Global Compact pursues two complementary objectives:

(a) To mainstream the 10 principles in business activities around the world;

(b) To catalyse actions in support of broader United Nations goals, including the Millennium Development Goals. The 10 universally accepted principles address issues related to human rights, labour, the environment and anti-corruption. Two of the principles concerning the observance of human rights are particularly relevant:

Principle 1: Businesses should support and respect the protection of internationally proclaimed human rights; and

Principle 2: make sure that they are not complicit in human rights abuses.

28. The Global Compact incorporates a transparency and accountability policy known as the Communication on Progress. The annual posting of a communication on progress is an important disclosure of a participant's commitment to the Global Compact and its principles. Participating companies are required to follow this policy, as a commitment to transparency and disclosure is critical to the success of the initiative. Failure to follow this guideline can result in a downgrade of participant status and even to possible expulsion.

29. Following the endorsement of the Guiding Principles by the Human Rights Council the Global Compact has communicated to its members that the commitment participating companies undertake with regard to Principle 1 corresponds to the requirements contained under the corporate responsibility to respect in the Guiding Principles. The Global Compact is committed to ensuring that all tools and guidance materials for participating companies on human rights are aligned with the Guiding Principles.

3. Businesses operating in situations of armed conflict and occupation

30. In armed conflict, the standards of international humanitarian law apply to business enterprises as well as to others.<sup>15</sup> International humanitarian law grants protection to business personnel — provided they do not take part directly in armed hostilities — as well as to the assets and capital investments of enterprises. It also imposes obligations on staff not to breach international humanitarian law and exposes them — and the enterprises themselves — to criminal or civil liability in the event that they do so. The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) has developed guidance on the rights and obligations of business enterprises under international humanitarian law.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Global Compact and Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, "The UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Relationship to UN Global Compact Commitments", July 2011; available from www.unglobalcompact.org/docs/issues\_doc/human\_rights/Resources/GPs\_GC%20note.pdf.

<sup>15</sup> See www.ohchr.org/Documents/Issues/Business/RtRInterpretativeGuide.pdf, p. 12.

<sup>16</sup> Business and International Humanitarian Law: An Introduction to the Rights and Obligations of Business Enterprises under International Humanitarian Law (International Committee of the Red Cross, 2006). See also Eric Mongelard, "Corporate civil liability for violations of international humanitarian law", International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 88. No. 863, September 2006.

31. Gross human rights abuses involving businesses often occur amid conflict over the control of territory, resources or a Government, where the mechanisms for human rights fulfilment and enforcement are not functioning as intended. Businesses that seek to avoid being complicit in human rights violations are increasingly seeking guidance from the States in which they operate.

32. The risks of operating a business in a conflict-affected area can be high and therefore States should warn organizations of the potential for violating human rights as a result of business activities. States should review whether their policies, legislation, regulations and enforcement measures effectively address these heightened risks, including encouraging businesses to use due diligence to assess their own situation. Appropriate steps should furthermore be taken to address gaps identified. This may include exploring civil, administrative or criminal liability for enterprises domiciled or operating in their territory and/or jurisdiction that commit or contribute to abuses or violations of international law.

33. The costs to companies and businesses of failing to respect international humanitarian law are considerable, including damage to a company's public image and impact on shareholder decisions and share price, and could result in employees being criminally responsible for rights abuses. According to ICRC, "International humanitarian law states that not only perpetrators, but also their superiors and accomplices may be held criminally responsible for the commission of war crimes. Of these forms of commission, complicity is likely to be the most relevant to business enterprises."<sup>17</sup>

34. Immunity from international crimes cannot be sought by employees of businesses simply because they are operating in the name of a business. Employees of companies can face investigation and prosecution for human rights violations committed irrespective of where the violation was committed and thus States have an obligation to take the appropriate action. ICRC warns that: "Business enterprises should therefore not discount the possibility of legal proceedings simply because the country where they are operating is unlikely to conduct criminal investigations or incapable of doing so. The risk of corporate and individual responsibility for crimes perpetrated in the context of an armed conflict is thus an element of growing importance in a business enterprise's assessment of the range of risks associated with its activities during an armed conflict."<sup>18</sup>

35. Civil liability is also increasingly being used as a means to bring human rights and international humanitarian law abuses committed by corporations to light, and as a way to provide an effective remedy for victims. At times, companies work with State actors, including military forces, to secure and/or extract natural resources, resulting in what has been termed "joint action".

36. Doe v. Unocal Corporation is one example where civil action was taken in relation to serious human rights abuses, such as torture, rape, forced labour and displacement.<sup>19</sup> In the United States, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit<sup>20</sup> applied a complicity theory from criminal law, namely that of aiding and abetting, <sup>17</sup> www.icrc.org/eng/assets/files/other/icrc\_002\_0882.pdf, p. 26.

<sup>18</sup> Ibid.

<sup>19</sup> www.icrc.org/eng/assets/files/other/irrc\_863\_mongelard.pdf, p. 15.

<sup>20</sup> United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, Doe v. Unocal Corp., judgement of 18 September 2002.

and thus ruled that, when combined with the fact that Unocal Corporation had knowledge of the human rights violations before becoming party to the relevant venture, there was sufficient evidence to hold Unocal liable. The case of Bil'in Village Council<sup>21</sup> against the Canadian company Green Park International is a civil liability case brought to the Canadian court system. The plaintiffs argued that Green Park International was involved in building and promoting a settlement built on the land of the people of Bil'in. The Canadian courts accepted the fact that corporations have obligations to avoid participating, even indirectly, in a breach by Israel of its obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention, and that the obligations contained in the Convention do not bind only States parties. However, the superior court declined to consider the case further, on the basis that Israeli courts provided a more appropriate forum (forum non conveniens doctrine).<sup>22</sup> In regard to this particular case, the Special Rapporteur would note the long track record of the Israeli court system deciding against Palestinian plaintiffs, which results in near total impunity for the actions of Israel and Israeli settlers in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. In this context the Special Rapporteur would question the validity of this particular decision.

V. Case studies

37. The Special Rapporteur notes that the businesses highlighted in this report constitute a small portion of a wide range of companies that have linked their business operations to Israel's settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory. The Special Rapporteur received a large amount of information from stakeholders concerning business practices of companies in relation to Israel's settlements; further investigations will be made to determine whether those allegations are well founded and may lead to additional attention in future reports. The businesses include, inter alia, retailers and supermarket chains, fast food suppliers, wine producers and products that are often labelled "products of Israel", but are in reality produced or extracted from the occupied Palestinian territory. They include small, medium and large Israeli-owned companies and multinational corporations. The Special Rapporteur limits coverage to selected illustrative cases; it proved necessary to exclude a significant amount of reliable information at this stage, owing in particular to the word limit imposed by the United Nations on this report.

1. Caterpillar Incorporated

38. Caterpillar<sup>23</sup> is one of the leading global manufacturers of construction and mining equipment. It is the world's largest maker of construction and mining equipment, diesel and natural gas engines, and industrial gas turbines, and has stated that it "drives positive and sustainable change on every continent".<sup>24</sup> Caterpillar's worldwide employment was 132,825 at the end of the second quarter of 2012. On 25 July 2012 Caterpillar announced an all-time quarterly record profit per share of $2.54. Sales and revenues were $17.37 billion, also an all-time record. Profit was $1.699 billion in the quarter.<sup>25</sup> The Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of

---

<sup>21</sup> Bil'in Village Council is the municipal authority over the Palestinian village of Bil'in.

<sup>22</sup> www.eilfe.com/online-courses/doc.../282-yassin-v-greenpark.html.

<sup>23</sup> www.caterpillar.com/home.

<sup>24</sup> www.caterpillar.com/cda/layout?x=7&m=390122.

<sup>25</sup> www.caterpillar.com/cda/files/3801914/7/Final%20%20Q2%202012%20Cat%20Inc%

Caterpillar, Doug Oberhelman, noted: “I am very pleased with Caterpillar’s record-breaking performance in the second quarter. Our employees, dealers and suppliers across the globe are doing a superb job of executing our strategy.”

39. Caterpillar has been publically criticized by various actors, including religious organizations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and United Nations mechanisms, for supplying to the Government of Israel equipment, such as bulldozers and construction apparatus, which is used in the demolition of Palestinian homes, schools, orchards, olive groves and crops. Amnesty International reported in 2004 on these violations<sup>26</sup> and noted that Caterpillar products are used in the construction of the wall, which was ruled contrary to international law by the International Court of Justice.<sup>27</sup> Human Rights Watch has reported periodically on Caterpillar products being used in human rights abuses, while the NGO War on Want produced a report that focused solely on Caterpillar’s dealings with the Government of Israel.<sup>28</sup> Morgan Stanley Capital International’s (MSCI) World Socially Responsible Index recently removed Caterpillar from its indexes,<sup>29</sup> stating, “Caterpillar was removed from several MSCI ESG Indices due to an Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) rating downgrade. The company was removed from the MSCI World ESG Index, the MSCI USA ESG Index and the MSCI USA IMI ESG Index on March 1, 2012, following the February Index Review”.<sup>30</sup> MSCI noted: “Caterpillar is involved in a long running controversy regarding the use of its bulldozers by the Israeli Defense Forces in the occupied Palestinian territories” and “MSCI ESG Research has assessed this human rights controversy since 2004. This controversy has been incorporated in the rating since then and, as such, did not trigger the ratings downgrade in February 2012.” MSCI further stated that the controversy is accounted for in the community and society rating, which includes an assessment of company performance on human rights issues and accounts for 10 per cent of a company’s ESG rating.

40. On 28 May 2004 the then Special Rapporteur on the right to food wrote to Caterpillar, highlighting his observations from a recent mission he had undertaken to the occupied Palestinian territory.<sup>31</sup> The Special Rapporteur on the right to food noted his concern in regard to the use of armoured bulldozers supplied by Caterpillar to destroy agricultural farms, greenhouses, ancient olive groves and agricultural fields planted with crops, as well as numerous Palestinian homes and sometimes human lives. The Special Rapporteur further noted that the increase in homelessness and loss of livelihood among the Palestinian people would limit their access to food, which was enshrined under article 11 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. The widely publicized death of Rachel Corrie, a 23-year-old peace activist from the United States of America, on 16 March 2003, highlighted the use of Caterpillar products and brought world attention to the

20Release%20V2.pdf, p. 1.

<sup>26</sup> www.amnesty.org/en/library/asset/MDE15/033/2004/en/24cc1bb1-d5f6-11dd-bb24-1fb85fe8fa05/mde150332004en.html.

<sup>27</sup> www.icj-cij.org/docket/index.php?pr=71&code=mwp&p1=3&p2=4&p3=6&ca.

<sup>28</sup> www.waronwant.org/campaigns/justice-for-palestine/hidden/inform/17109-caterpillar-the-alternative-report.

<sup>29</sup> www.aljazeera.com/news/middleeast/2012/06/201262711732387905.html.

<sup>30</sup> www.msci.com/resources/pdfs/ESG\_Indices\_General\_QA\_July\_2012.pdf.

<sup>31</sup> <http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/e4f689b77065914485256c530073aa6b/bcfff2cc84ae9bc85256e2b00685371?OpenDocument>.

demolition of Palestinian property. Ms. Corrie was protesting to prevent the demolition of a Palestinian home in Gaza and, despite being dressed in highly visible bright orange clothing, was killed when the Caterpillar bulldozer ran over her, fracturing her arms, legs and skull.<sup>32</sup>

41. Despite numerous reports, statements and advocacy regarding Caterpillar, the company continues to ignore the human rights implications of its activities in the occupied Palestinian territory. In recent years the Mission Responsibility through Investment Committee of the Presbyterian Church attempted to engage with Caterpillar<sup>33</sup> and noted: “Company officials made it clear that the company took no responsibility for the use of its products even by its dealers (the only party considered to be a customer), had no procedure in place for monitoring or ensuring compliance with Caterpillar’s stated expectations even in a situation with a documented historic pattern of the equipment being used in human rights violations, and no desire to develop such a procedure. Further, they indicated that Caterpillar, although a global company doing business in virtually every country except where prohibited by U.S. law, had no capacity to evaluate whether particular actions are in accord with human rights conventions or international humanitarian law.”<sup>34</sup>

42. Caterpillar has an extensive code of conduct.<sup>35</sup> The company states that: “The world is continually changing, and so is our business. But one thing that will never change is our commitment to maintaining the highest ethical standards. Our reputation is one of our greatest assets. Each of us has a responsibility to protect it — everyday.”<sup>36</sup> Caterpillar’s mission statement further claims that: “When faced with challenges, how we respond defines us. Our decisions, and ultimately our actions, tell the world who we are at Caterpillar.”

2. Veolia Environnement

43. Veolia Environnement is a French multinational company operating in the water, waste management, and energy and transport sectors. The company was founded as Compagnie Générale des Eaux on 14 December 1853.<sup>37</sup> In its 2011 Annual and Sustainability Report Veolia reported a 3.1 per cent growth in revenue, raising its revenue to €29.6 billion. The company employs 331,266 employees worldwide and operates in 77 countries.<sup>38</sup>

44. Veolia has a 5 per cent share in the CityPass consortium, through its subsidiary Connex Israel, which was contracted by Israel to operate the light rail project in Jerusalem. The light rail is designed to connect the city of Jerusalem with Israel’s illegal settlements. Veolia owns approximately 80 per cent of Connex Jerusalem, the company which operates the trains.<sup>39</sup> Furthermore, through its subsidiary company the Israeli Veolia group,<sup>40</sup> Veolia owns and operates the Tovlan landfill in the

<sup>32</sup> www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=12470&LangID=E.

<sup>33</sup> www.pcusa.org/media/uploads/mrti/pdfs/2012-mrti-report-9-9-11.pdf.

<sup>34</sup> www.pcusa.org/media/uploads/mrti/pdfs/2012-mrti-report-9-9-11.pdf, pp. 5-6.

<sup>35</sup> www.caterpillar.com/company/strategy/code-of-conduct

<sup>36</sup> www.uk.cat.com/cda/files/89709/7/English\_OVIA\_v05.pdf, p. 2.

<sup>37</sup> www.veolia.com/en/group/history/.

<sup>38</sup> www.veolia.com/veolia/ressources/documents/2/11886,RA\_VEOLIA\_2011\_UK\_72dpi.pdf, p. 5.

<sup>39</sup> Who Profits: Exposing the Israeli Occupation Industry (www.whoprofits.org/company/veolia-environnement).

<sup>40</sup> www.veolia-es.co.il/he/.

Jordan Valley of the occupied Palestinian territory. The Tovlan landfill is used to dump Israeli waste from both within Israel and Israeli settlements. Veolia furthermore operates buses linking Modi'in and Jerusalem via road 443 and thereby servicing the Israeli settlements of Giva'at Ze'ev and Mevo Horon.

45. In 2011 Veolia released its CSR (Corporate Social Responsibility) Performance Digest, a document in which the company makes clear that: "Whatever the geographical context, Veolia Environnement's activities must be carried out in compliance with both national standards and the recommendations of international organizations like the ILO and OECD, in particular as concerns respect for basic rights, accounting for cultural diversity and protecting the environment."<sup>41</sup>

46. Veolia is a member of the Global Compact and highlights the above-mentioned 10 principles in its CSR Performance Digest, including the two human rights related principles.

3. Group4Security

47. Group4Security (G4S) is a British multinational corporation that provides security services. G4S specializes in business processes and facilitation where security and safety risks are considered high. G4S boasts expertise in the assessment and management of security and safety risks for buildings, infrastructure, materials, valuables and people. G4S is the largest employer on the London Stock Exchange, with operations in more than 125 countries and over 657,000 employees. In 2011 the company reported turnover of £7.5 billion, of which 30 per cent came from developing markets.

48. G4S Israel (Hashmira) is the Israel subsidiary of G4S. The company provides resources and equipment for Israeli checkpoints. The company also provides security services to businesses in settlements, including security equipment and personnel to shops and supermarkets in the West Bank settlements of Modi'in Illit, Ma'ale Adumim and Har Adar and settlement neighbourhoods of East Jerusalem. In addition, after the company purchased Aminut Moked Artzi, an Israeli private security company, it took over its entire business operations, which include security services to businesses in the Barkan industrial zone located near the settlement of Ariel.<sup>42</sup>

49. In 2002, Lars Nørby Johansen, the then Chief Executive Officer,<sup>43</sup> stated that the company would withdraw from the West Bank: "In some situations there are other criteria that we must consider. And to avoid any doubt that Group 4 Falck [G4S]<sup>44</sup> respects international conventions and human rights, we have decided to leave the West Bank." However, security activities have still continued through Hashmira's creation of another company, Shalhevet. "The partnership between Hashmira and Group 4 Falck will not accept new security contracts in the West Bank. As equal partners in Hashmira however, we must recognize that the Israeli

<sup>41</sup> www.veolia.com/veolia/ressources/documents/2/11983,2011-CSR-Performance-Digest.pdf, p. 7.

<sup>42</sup> www.whoprofits.org/company/g4s-israel-hashmira.

<sup>43</sup> 2005 Lars Nørby Johansen was succeeded as Chief Executive by Nick Buckles.

<sup>44</sup> In 2004 Securicor merged with Group 4 Falck's security businesses to form Group 4 Securicor and began trading on the London and Copenhagen Stock Exchanges.

shareholders strongly feel that they have a responsibility to the Israeli citizens, which the company has a contract to protect.”<sup>45</sup>

50. In March 2011 G4S issued a public statement, regarding its operations in Israeli settlements.<sup>46</sup> The statement included the following: “we have also concluded that to ensure that our business practices remain in line with our own Business Ethics Policy, we will aim to exit a number of contracts which involve the servicing of security equipment at the barrier checkpoints, prisons and police stations in the West Bank.”<sup>47</sup> The company further concluded: “a number of our contracts with private enterprises in the area for traditional security and alarm monitoring services are not discriminatory or controversial and in fact help to provide safety and security for the general public no matter what their background”<sup>48</sup> and thus it would not end all operations in Israeli settlements.

51. G4S has joined the Global Compact Group and when doing so its Chief Executive Officer, Nick Buckles, stated: “The principles set out in the Compact are already pretty well embedded in our existing policies, so we thought the time was right to make a public commitment to this excellent initiative.” He further stated: “Doing so will give us extra impetus to ensure respect for human rights, the environment and ethical behaviour are part of everything we do worldwide.”<sup>49</sup>

4. Dexia Group

52. The Dexia Group is a European banking group which, in 2011, carried out activities in the fields of retail and commercial banking, public and wholesale banking, asset management and investor services. Its parent company, Dexia SA, is a limited company under Belgian law with its shares listed on Euronext Brussels and Paris as well as the Luxembourg Stock Exchange.<sup>50</sup>

53. Dexia Israel Bank Limited is a public company and is traded on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. The Dexia Group is the majority shareholder, with 65 per cent of its shares. Dexia Israel Bank Limited is based in Tel Aviv and has consistently provided loans to Israelis living in illegal settlements.<sup>51</sup> Dexia Israel Bank Limited’s Chief Executive Officer, David Kapah, highlighted which settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory have received loans: Alfei Menasheh, Elkana, Beit-El, Beit Aryeh, Giva’at Ze’ev and Kedumim, located in the region of the Jordan Valley, the Hebron region and Samaria.<sup>52</sup> The company has supplied mortgages to a number of settlements. Through its dealings with the Israeli National Lottery, Dexia Israel has provided funds for the construction and development of settlements.<sup>53</sup>

54. The Dexia Group has been a member of the Global Compact Group since February 2003. According to the Global Compact Group website the Dexia Group was required to communicate, early in 2012, on progress made by the company in <sup>45</sup> <http://politiken.dk/erhverv/ECE54474/falck-forlader-vestbredden/> (in Danish).

<sup>46</sup> <http://corporateoccupation.files.wordpress.com/2011/03/g4s-israel-statement-march-11-1-1.pdf>.

<sup>47</sup> Ibid.

<sup>48</sup> Ibid.

<sup>49</sup> www.g4s.com/en/Media%20Centre/News/2011/02/23/G4S%20joins%20the%20UN%20Global%20Compact%20for%20responsible%20business/.

<sup>50</sup> www.dexia.com/EN/the\_group/profile/Pages/default.aspx.

<sup>51</sup> www.knesset.gov.il/mmm/data/pdf/m01630.pdf (in Hebrew).

<sup>52</sup> /www.knesset.gov.il/protocols/data/rtf/ksafim/2007-06-19-02.rtf (in Hebrew).

<sup>53</sup> www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/WhoProfits-IsraeliBanks2010.pdf.

implementing the standards set by the Group; that communication on progress is now several months overdue.<sup>54</sup>

5. Ahava

55. Ahava<sup>55</sup> is an Israeli cosmetics company that manufactures high-end skin care products from natural resources extracted from the Dead Sea. The company was created in 1988 and is said to have annual revenue of $142 million. The company is 37 per cent owned by the settlement of Kibbutz Mitzpe Shalem, 37 per cent owned by Hamashbir Holdings,<sup>56</sup> 18.5 per cent by Shamrock Holdings<sup>57</sup> and 7.5 per cent by the settlement of Kibbutz Kalia. Ahava's manufacturing factory and visitor centre is located at Kibbutz Mitzpe Shalem, a settlement in the Jordan Valley. Ahava exports products to 32 countries and one special administrative region.<sup>58</sup>

56. Criticism of Ahava has come from Governments and non-governmental and civil society organizations alleging that by having ownership of the company the settler communities are exploiting Palestinian natural resources and that the profits from these business activities fund and sustain the settlements. Ahava has also been accused of false advertising and misleading its customers, as it labels its products "products of Israel". They are in fact products of the occupied Palestinian territory. Several European countries have started to take action against Ahava. The Governments of the Netherlands<sup>59</sup> and the United Kingdom<sup>60</sup> have investigated Ahava's misleading labelling of its products. Human rights activists have taken legal action against the French company Sephora<sup>61</sup> for distributing Ahava products.

57. The report of April 2012 by the Coalition of Women for Peace, entitled "Ahava, tracking the trade trail of settlement products",<sup>62</sup> highlights the supply chain of Ahava's products and analyses how Palestinian natural resources are being exploited to the profit of Israeli settlers.

6. Volvo Group

58. The Volvo Group<sup>63</sup> is one of the world's leading manufacturers of trucks, buses, construction equipment, drive systems for marine and industrial applications and aerospace components. Volvo also provides financing and other services. Volvo has about 100,000 employees, production facilities in 20 countries and sales in more than 190 markets. In 2011, Volvo's sales increased by 17 per cent, to SKr 310,367 million, compared with SKr 264,749 million in 2010.

<sup>54</sup> www.unglobalcompact.org/participant/2887-Dexia-Group.

<sup>55</sup> www.ahava.co.il/ and <http://www.ahava.com/>.

<sup>56</sup> www.whoprofits.org/company/hamashbir-holdings.

<sup>57</sup> A multi-million dollar United States-based investment company; www.shamrock.com/.

<sup>58</sup> Albania, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Georgia, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Kyrgyzstan, Lithuania, Mauritius, Netherlands, Norway, Philippines, Russian Federation, Singapore, Slovenia, South Africa, Switzerland, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States and Hong Kong, China.

<sup>59</sup> www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-3806790,00.html.

<sup>60</sup> www.westendextra.com/news/2010/aug/pro-palestinian-protesters-claim-covent-garden-storeahava-are-mislabelling-products.

<sup>61</sup> www.sephora.com/.

<sup>62</sup> www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/ahava\_report\_final.pdf.

<sup>63</sup> www.volvogroup.com/group/global/en-gb/Pages/group\_home.aspx.

59. Volvo equipment and products are used in the demolition of Palestinian homes, the construction of the wall and the construction of Israeli settlements. Further, Volvo holds a 27 per cent share in the Israeli company Merkavim,<sup>64</sup> which is a business that manufactures buses that are used to transport Palestinian political prisoners from the occupied Palestinian territory to prisons in Israel. The other 73 per cent of Merkavim shares are owned by Mayer's Cars and Trucks, an Israeli company that exclusively represents Volvo in Israel.

60. In July 2007, the Volvo Vice President for Media Relations and Corporate News, Mårten Wikforss, responded<sup>65</sup> to criticism relating to the demolition of a Palestinian home in Beit Hanina, East Jerusalem.<sup>66</sup> Mr. Wikforss stated: "It is, of course, regrettable and sad if our products are used for destructive purposes. We do not condone such actions, but we do not have any control over the use of our products, other than to affirm in our business activities a Code of Conduct that decries unethical behaviour. However, just as a wheel loader can be used to clear the ground for a new house, it can be used to tear it down."<sup>67</sup> He further stated: "There is no way Volvo ultimately can control the use of its products ... The only restrictions that apply are when the buyer is a country affected by applicable trade sanctions decided on by international governmental organizations and implemented under mandatory law ... Like other multinational enterprises, we rely on governments and certain international governmental organizations to make such determinations."

61. Volvo produces responsibility reports that assess the economic, environmental and social responsibility of its business activities. Volvo also has a code of conduct that identifies three areas where Volvo is committed, including respect for human rights and social issues, environmental care and business ethics. Volvo has been a member of the Global Compact Group since 2001 and has noted: "Volvo pledges to realize and integrate 10 principles regarding human rights, work conditions and environment into its operations. Volvo will also be involved in disseminating the principles in a bid to encourage other companies to support the Global Compact."<sup>68</sup>

7. Riwal Holding Group

62. The Riwal Holding Group, established in 1968 and headquartered in the Netherlands, is an international aerial work platform rental specialist. Riwal employs 800 people and has operations in 16 countries. It is one of Europe's leading companies specialized in the rental and sales of telescopic booms, scissor lifts, telehandlers, aerial work platforms and other access equipment. Riwal has operations and joint ventures in Europe, South America, the Middle East and central Asia.

63. In March 2010 the Palestinian human rights NGO Al-Haq<sup>69</sup> submitted a criminal complaint to the Netherlands authorities that alleges that Riwal was complicit in war crimes and crimes against humanity, because of the use of its

<sup>64</sup> www.whoprofits.org/company/merkavim-transportation-technologies.

<sup>65</sup> www.business-humanrights.org/Links/Repository/553890.

<sup>66</sup> <http://electronicintifada.net/content/volvo-symbol-safety-or-human-rights-abuses/7040>.

<sup>67</sup> www.reports-and-materials.org/Volvo-response-to-Israel-OT-article-6-Jul-2007.doc (full statement).

<sup>68</sup> www.volvogroup.com/group/global/en-gb/responsibility/Pages/responsibility.aspx.

<sup>69</sup> www.alhaq.org/.

construction equipment and operations in the building of the wall and Israeli settlements.<sup>70</sup> The NGO United Civilians for Peace<sup>71</sup> also investigated the activities of Riwal and urged the company to stop its activities in the occupied Palestinian territory. In October 2010 Riwal's offices were raided by the Netherlands National Crime Squad following such criminal complaints.<sup>72</sup> Riwal has been criticized by members of the Netherlands Parliament, most notably by the then Minister for Foreign Affairs, who noted the undesirability of a Netherlands company being involved in the construction of the wall.<sup>73</sup>

8. Elbit Systems

64. Elbit Systems<sup>74</sup> is an Israeli defence electronics company. It works on aerospace, land and naval systems, command, control, communications, computers, intelligence surveillance and reconnaissance, unmanned aircraft systems, advanced electro-optics, electro-optic space systems, airborne warning systems, electronic signals intelligence, data links and military communications systems and radios. In 2010, the total number of employees worldwide was 12,317 and the annual revenue was $2,670 million.<sup>75</sup>

65. In addition to supplying drones and other arms to the Government of Israel,<sup>76</sup> Elbit has been criticized for its electronic surveillance developed for use on the wall<sup>77</sup> and its surveillance equipment used in Israeli settlements.<sup>78</sup> In 2009 the Norwegian Ministry of Defence<sup>79</sup> excluded the company from Norway's Pension Fund on the recommendation of the Norwegian Government's Council of Ethics.<sup>80</sup> That recommendation was based on the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice regarding the wall. The Norwegian Minister of Finance, Kristin Halvorsen, stated: "We do not wish to fund companies that so directly contribute to violations of international humanitarian law." In 2010 the Deutsche Bank and the Swedish AP funds<sup>81</sup> also sold all their shares in Elbit Systems<sup>82</sup> following the example of the Norwegian Ministry of Defence.<sup>83</sup>

66. Elbit's Social Responsibility Full Report states that Elbit Systems is "committed to being a good corporate citizen and an advocate for social and environmental responsibility".<sup>84</sup>

<sup>70</sup> www.alhaq.org/images/stories/PDF/accoutability-files/Complaint%20-%20English.pdf.

<sup>71</sup> www.unitedcivilians.nl/.

<sup>72</sup> <http://electronicintifada.net/content/dutch-company-raided-over-involvement-occupation/9076>.

<sup>73</sup> www.haaretz.com/news/dutch-gov-t-warns-company-to-stop-work-on-w-bank-fence-1.225134.

<sup>74</sup> www.elbitsystems.com/elbitmain/default.asp.

<sup>75</sup> http://media.corporate-ir.net/media\_files/IROL/61/61849/20\_F.pdf, p. 11.

<sup>76</sup> www.grassrootsonline.org/; www.bdsmovement.net/; www.amnesty.org.uk/news\_details.asp?NewsID=18004.

<sup>77</sup> www.bdsmovement.net/files/2011/08/STW-research-green-paper-consultation.pdf.

<sup>78</sup> www.globalexchange.org/economicactivism/elbit/why; <http://wedivest.org/learn-more/elbit/>; www.bdsmovement.net/files/2011/08/STW-research-green-paper-consultation.pdf; <http://stopthewall.org/divest-elbit>.

<sup>79</sup> www.regjeringen.no/en/dep/fin/press-center/Press-releases/2009/supplier-of-surveillance-equipment-for-t.html?id=575444.

<sup>80</sup> www.regjeringen.no/pages/2236685/Elbit\_engelsk.pdf.

<sup>81</sup> <http://stopthewall.org/divest-elbit>.

<sup>82</sup> www.reuters.com/article/2010/05/30/us-deutsche-elbit-idUSTRE64T10W20100530.

<sup>83</sup> www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/137762#.UC0BVlaTspo.

<sup>84</sup> www.elbitsystems.com/elbitmain/pages/FullReport.asp.

9. Hewlett Packard

67. Hewlett Packard (HP)<sup>85</sup> is the world's largest provider of information technology infrastructure, software and related services.<sup>86</sup> HP is a United States information technology corporation headquartered in California.<sup>87</sup> In 2011, the company's total net revenue was $127,245 million and it employed approximately 349,600 persons worldwide.<sup>88</sup> HP has more than 1 billion customers in 170 different countries and in 2012 its Fortune 500 ranking was 10.<sup>89</sup>

68. HP has contracts with the Israeli Ministry of Defence and the Ministry of the Interior to provide a system of surveillance and identification,<sup>90</sup> the "Basel biometric system", the Israeli identity card system (biometric identity cards, implemented by the biometric database law) in settlements and checkpoints,<sup>91</sup> and to provide services and technologies to the Israeli army. The Basel system is an automated biometric access control system.<sup>92</sup>

69. It has been alleged that the technological systems provided by HP have resulted in human rights violations, such as restricting freedom of movement of Palestinians. The products provided by HP to the Israeli Government and their use in violations have been well documented by NGOs such as Who Profits,<sup>93</sup> as has the humanitarian impact of the wall by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.<sup>94</sup> HP has also been criticized for providing security and technological services to the settlements of Modi'in Illit and Ariel.

70. Nonetheless, in 2010, HP was named one of the world's most ethical companies in computer hardware by the Ethisphere Institute.<sup>95</sup> That same year, HP was number 2 on Newsweek's 2010 "green rankings" on both the United States 500 and the global 100 greenest companies lists.<sup>96</sup> Since 2002, HP is an active participant in the Global Compact.<sup>97</sup>

71. HP states in its corporate responsibility policy "Global Citizenship"<sup>98</sup> that "everyone is entitled to certain fundamental rights, freedoms, and standards of treatment. Respecting these human rights is core to HP's shared values and is part of the way we do business."<sup>99</sup> Through the "Global Human Rights Policy"<sup>100</sup> the company is committed to integrating respect for human rights in its business as well as "complying with laws and regulations or international standards".

<sup>85</sup> www8.hp.com/us/en/home.html.

<sup>86</sup> Annual report 2011, p. 2: <http://h30261.www3.hp.com/phoenix.zhtml?c=71087&p=irol-reportsAnnual>.

<sup>87</sup> www8.hp.com/us/en/hp-information/about-hp/headquarters.html.

<sup>88</sup> Annual report 2011, p. 23.

<sup>89</sup> www8.hp.com/us/en/hp-information/facts.html.

<sup>90</sup> www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/hp\_report-\_final\_for\_web.pdf.

<sup>91</sup> <http://abna.ir/data.asp?lang=3&Id=331748>.

<sup>92</sup> www.whoprofits.org/company/hewlett-packard-hp.

<sup>93</sup> www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/hp\_report-\_final\_for\_web.pdf.

<sup>94</sup> www.ochaopt.org/documents/Pages1-23\_Jerusalem\_30July2007.pdf.

<sup>95</sup> <http://ethisphere.com/past-wme-honorees/wme2010/>.

<sup>96</sup> www.hp.com/hpinfo/newsroom/hp360\_ww.pdf.

<sup>97</sup> www.unglobalcompact.org/participant/4833-Hewlett-Packard-Company.

<sup>98</sup> www.hp.com/hpinfo/globalcitizenship/.

<sup>99</sup> www.hp.com/hpinfo/globalcitizenship/society/ethics.html.

<sup>100</sup> www.hp.com/hpinfo/globalcitizenship/humanrights.html.

10. Mehadrin

72. Mehadrin is one of Israel's largest agricultural companies. It grows and exports citrus, fruits and vegetables worldwide. Mehadrin holds 10,341 acres of orchards and uses 29,452 hectares of orchards owned by external customers.<sup>101</sup> Mehadrin owns 50 per cent of STM Agricultural Export Limited, which exports vegetables, and 50 per cent of Mirian Shoham, which exports mangoes. Agrexco, one of the main agricultural exporters to Europe, was also bought by Mehadrin. The Mehadrin group also holds subsidiaries in France, the Netherlands, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

73. The majority of Mehadrin's products originate from settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory but they are labelled as products from Israel. Furthermore, Mehadrin participates in implementing Israel's discriminatory water policies, supplying Israeli farmers with millions of cubic metres of water while Palestinians are denied sufficient water.<sup>102</sup>

74. Mehadrin states that its concept of quality comprises "environmentally friendly practices, stringent quality assurance measures, social awareness and continuous improvement through research and innovation"<sup>103</sup> and that "transparency is a basic value in Mehadrin and our knowledge and data is openly shared with our clients".<sup>104</sup>

11. Motorola Solutions Inc.

75. Motorola Solutions Inc. is a United States multinational information technology corporation. It has over 23,000 employees in 65 countries, sales in 100 countries and a total income of $2.1 billion in the second quarter of 2012.<sup>105</sup>

76. Motorola Solutions Israel was the first branch of Motorola outside the United States and had, in 2010, total revenue of $505 million. The company specializes in "marketing and selling communication solutions and systems for military and security forces, emergency and public safety forces, government and public institutions, and commercial and private entities".<sup>106</sup>

77. Motorola Israel provides surveillance systems to Israeli settlements and checkpoints on the wall. In 2005,<sup>107</sup> it was reported that Motorola Solutions Inc. provided radar detectors to Israeli settlements in Hebron, Karmeit Zzur and Bracha. The company has allegedly provided a radar detector system named "MotoEagle Surveillance" and a mobile communication system, the "Mountain Rose", to Israeli settlements. Beyond sustaining the settlements, these security systems further limit the Palestinians' freedom of movement within their territory.

78. Motorola Solutions Inc. has an extensive corporate responsibility policy<sup>108</sup> and has a section of its 2011 annual corporate responsibility report dedicated to human rights, noting: "Motorola Solutions' human rights policy is based on our

<sup>101</sup> www.whoprofits.org/content/mehadrin-group-update.

<sup>102</sup> www.blueplanetproject.net/documents/RTW/RTW-Palestine-1.pdf.

<sup>103</sup> www.mehadrin.co.il/docs/P124/.

<sup>104</sup> www.mehadrin.co.il/docs/P200/.

<sup>105</sup> <http://investing.businessweek.com/research/stocks/earnings/earnings.asp?ticker=99186>.

<sup>106</sup> http://duns100.dunb.co.il/ts.cgi?tsscript=comp\_eng&duns=600020978.

<sup>107</sup> www.whoprofits.org/company/motorola-solutions-israel, long-standing key beliefs of uncompromising integrity and constant respect for people, and is consistent with the core tenets of the International Labour Organization's fundamental conventions and the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights".<sup>109</sup> The company furthermore highlights its willingness to work with the NGO community as a "key stakeholder" and has a policy for the implementation of due diligence.

<sup>108</sup> <http://responsibility.motorolasolutions.com/>.

12. Mul-T-Lock/Assa Abloy

79. Founded in 1973,<sup>110</sup> Mul-T-Lock is an Israeli company. In 2000, Mul-T-Lock was bought by Assa Abloy, a Swedish company and member of the Global Compact. Mul-T-Lock describes itself as a "worldwide leader in developing, manufacturing, marketing and distributing High Security solutions for institutional, commercial, industrial, residential and automotive applications".

80. Mul-T-Lock manufactures locks and security products. It has a manufacturing plant located in the Barkan industrial zone, which is in the Israeli settlement of Ariel.<sup>111</sup>

81. In a joint report the Church of Sweden and the NGOs Diakonia and SwedWatch highlighted some of Assa Abloy activities and alleged that the company was complicit in impeding the peace process, since it has invested heavily in its manufacturing plant, which is built on confiscated Palestinian land.

82. Assa Abloy reviewed its code of conduct policy in January 2007 to cover issues such as freedom of association, discrimination, environmental practices and health and safety aspects. It is based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and relevant United Nations conventions, the ILO Tripartite Declaration of Principles concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy, the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises, the Global Compact and ISO 14001. Assa Abloy has had a code of conduct policy in place since 2004 and became a member of the Global Compact in May 2008.

83. Assa Abloy notes that circumstances may arise that require human rights perspectives other than those mentioned in the code: "Even if such circumstances are not common, Assa Abloy is aware of the potential impact on human rights and acts according to relevant international or local law. If no official guidelines are available, Assa Abloy will seek other sources so as to choose the best approach under the specific circumstances."<sup>112</sup>

13. Cemex

84. Cemex<sup>113</sup> is a Mexican company and world leader in the building materials industry. It produces, distributes and sells cement, ready-mix concrete, aggregates

---

<sup>109</sup> Ibid., p. 11.

<sup>110</sup> www.mul-t-lock.com/87.html.

<sup>111</sup> www.diakonia.se/documents/public/IN\_FOCUS/Israel\_Palestine/Report\_Illegal\_Ground/Report\_Mul-T-lock\_081021.pdf.

<sup>112</sup> Assa Abloy Code of Conduct, section 3.9; www.diakonia.se/documents/public/IN\_FOCUS/Israel\_Palestine/Report\_Illegal\_Ground/Report\_Mul-T-lock\_081021.pdf.

<sup>113</sup> Ibid.

and related building materials. The total amount of annual sales is US$15.1 billion. The company employs 44,104 worldwide.<sup>114</sup>

85. Cemex owns Readymix Industries, an Israeli company that owns plants in the West Bank (Mevo Horon and the Atarot and Mishor Edomim industrial zones)<sup>115</sup> and has provided elements for the construction of settlements.<sup>116</sup> This company also provides concrete for the construction of Israel's wall and military checkpoints in the West Bank.

86. Through ReadyMix Industries, Cemex also owns 50 per cent of Yatir quarry, an Israeli settlement where Palestinian natural resources are mined to be exploited by the Israeli construction industry. In 2009, the NGO Yesh-din filed a petition with the Israeli High Court describing these activities as "colonial exploitation of land" and "pillage" and asking Israel's High Court of Justice to intervene. The High Court decided in December 2011 not to halt these activities, since they employ Palestinians. However, the court recommended that Israel not open any new quarries in the West Bank.<sup>117</sup>

87. Cemex states in its code of ethics<sup>118</sup> that it "must endeavour to enhance our reputation as a responsible and sustainable company, which helps to attract and retain employees, customers, suppliers and investors, as well as maintain good relationships in the communities we operate".

VI. Conclusion

88. The failure to bring the occupation to an end after 45 years creates an augmented international responsibility to uphold the human rights of the Palestinian people, who in practice live without the protection of the rule of law. In this context, the Special Rapporteur recalls that the General Assembly, as early as 1982,<sup>119</sup> called on Member States to apply economic sanctions against the State of Israel for its unlawful settlement activities.

89. The Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights require all business enterprises to respect human rights, which means, in the first instance, avoiding infringing on the human rights of others and addressing adverse impacts on human rights. The Special Rapporteur calls on both States and business enterprises to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Guiding Principles in the context of business operations relating to Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory.

90. The Special Rapporteur reiterates that the businesses highlighted in this report constitute a small portion of the many companies that engage in profit-making operations in relation to Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory. The Special Rapporteur is committed to seeking clarification from and otherwise following up with the corporations highlighted in this report. At the same time, the

<sup>114</sup> www.cemex.com/AboutUs/CompanyProfile.aspx.

<sup>115</sup> www.whoprofits.org/sites/default/files/cemex\_corporate\_watch\_may\_2011.pdf.

<sup>116</sup> www.whoprofits.org/company/cemex.

<sup>117</sup> www.whoprofits.org/content/israeli-high-court-justice-legalizes-exploitation-natural-resources-opt.

<sup>118</sup> www.cemex.com/AboutUs/files/HighlightsCoE.pdf.

<sup>119</sup> Resolution ES-9/1 (5 February 1982); see also resolution 38/180 A (19 December 1983).

Special Rapporteur may continue to gather information and report on the involvement of corporations in Israel's settlement activities.

91. The Special Rapporteur further concludes that all companies that operate in or otherwise have dealings with Israeli settlements should be boycotted, until such time as they bring their operations fully into line with international human rights standards and practice. In this regard, civil society efforts to pursue the implementation of the Guiding Principles establish a distinctive space between voluntary and obligatory action in the struggle to protect persons vulnerable to human rights abuse.

VII. Recommendations

92. The Special Rapporteur calls on the Government of Israel to desist from settling its population in the occupied Palestinian territory and begin the process of dismantling its settlements and returning its citizens to its own territory, namely on the Israeli side of the Green Line, in accordance with international law, numerous Security Council and General Assembly resolutions and the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the wall.

93. The Special Rapporteur calls on the Government of Israel to publicly inform all businesses with operations in or related to its settlements of the international legal ramifications of such operations, including in relation to civil liability in third countries.

94. The Special Rapporteur calls on the Government of Israel to immediately move forward with reparations to the Palestinian people — whether through land and monetary compensation or otherwise — in full and transparent consultation with affected Palestinians, for all activities related to its settlement enterprise since 1967, also ensuring that land used by businesses is restored to its condition status quo ante unless improved.

95. The Special Rapporteur calls on the businesses highlighted in this report, as a matter of urgency, to take transparent action to comply with the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, the Global Compact and relevant international laws and standards, with respect to their activities connected with the Government of Israel and its settlements and wall in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem. This should include, as a first step, immediately suspending all operations, including the supply of products and services, which aid in the establishment or maintenance of Israeli settlements.

96. The Special Rapporteur calls on the businesses highlighted in this report, with respect to companies that are already signed up to the Global Compact, to be fully aware of the relevant integrity measures, particularly in the case of allegations of systematic or egregious abuses.<sup>120</sup> Company plans to exit the occupied Palestinian territory should identify and address any adverse human rights consequences arising from their exit and from past business activities.

---

<sup>120</sup> www.unglobalcompact.org/AboutTheGC/IntegrityMeasures/index.html.

97. The Special Rapporteur calls on the businesses highlighted in this report, with respect to any company maintaining its operations in the occupied Palestinian territory, to conduct heightened due diligence in accordance with the Guiding Principles and international humanitarian law. Such companies should be able to demonstrate their own efforts to mitigate any adverse impact and be prepared to accept any consequences — reputation, financial or legal — of continuing their operations.

98. The Special Rapporteur calls on civil society to actively pursue legal and political redress against non-complying businesses, where necessary in their own national legal and political frameworks, especially where allegations of war crimes and crimes against humanity can be substantiated in relation to settlement activities.

99. The Special Rapporteur calls on civil society to vigorously pursue initiatives to boycott, divest and sanction the businesses highlighted in this report, within their own national contexts, until such time as they bring their policies and practices into line with international laws and standards, as well as the Global Compact.

100. The Special Rapporteur calls on civil society to share resources and information, including through establishing transnational collaborative networks and other initiatives, as a way of promoting transparency and accountability in relation to businesses involved in the Israeli settlement agenda.

101. The Special Rapporteur calls on the international community to transparently investigate the business activities of companies registered in their own respective countries, especially those highlighted in this report, that profit from Israel's settlements, and take appropriate action to end such practices and ensure appropriate reparation for affected Palestinians.

102. The Special Rapporteur calls on the international community to consider requesting an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice regarding the responsibility of businesses in relation to economic activities of settlements that are established in violation of article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

103. The Special Rapporteur calls on the international community to urge the General Assembly to prepare a document linking compliance with Global Compact guidelines with international human rights law in situations of belligerent occupation, with attention to moral, political and legal obligations associated with business operations in the occupied Palestinian territory.

Annex I

Land allocated to Israeli settlements, January 2012

Source: Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

Annex II

The humanitarian impact of Israeli settlement policies, January 2012

FAST FACTS

- Since 1967, Israel has established about 150 settlements (residential and others) in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, in addition to some 100 "outposts" erected by settlers without official authorization.
- The settler population is estimated at approximately 500,000; its rate of growth during the past decade stood at a yearly average of 5.3% (excluding East Jerusalem), compared to 1.8% by the Israeli population as-a-whole (ICBS).
- While fenced or patrolled areas of settlements cover three percent of the West Bank, 43% of the West Bank is off-limits for Palestinian use because of its allocation to the settlement's local and regional councils.
- Virtually all of the land viewed by Israel as public or "state land" (27% of the West Bank) has been allocated to settlements, rather than for the benefit of the local population (B'Tselem).
- About one third of the land within the settlements' outer limits is privately owned by Palestinians, according to official Israeli land records (Peace Now).
- Over 60 percent of the Palestinian-owned structures demolished in 2011, due to the lack of permit, were located in areas allocated to settlements.
- In 2011, five Palestinians (inc. two children) were killed and over 1,000 injured (of whom nearly a fifth were children) by Israeli settlers or security forces in incidents directly or indirectly related to settlements, including demonstrations.
- Over 90% of Israeli police investigations into incidents of settler violence during the past six years (2005-2010) were closed without indictment (Yesh Din).
- More than 500 internal checkpoints, roadblocks and other physical obstacles impede Palestinian movement inside the West Bank, including access of children to schools; they exist primarily to protect settlers and facilitate their movement, including to and from Israel.
- The location of settlements was the major consideration behind the deviation of the Barrier's route away from the Green Line; once complete, about 80% of the settler population will live in settlements located on the western ("Israeli") side of the Barrier.

Source: Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
10 September 2013

Original: English

---

Sixty-eighth session

Item 69 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs
and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the members of the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Richard Falk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/68/150.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The present report develops arguments presented in the previous report of the Special Rapporteur to the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly, which focused on businesses profiting from Israeli settlements and described the involvement of 13 businesses in the activities of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory with reference to the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. The present report delineates a model for legal analysis by focusing on two illustrative companies chosen for the specific ways in which their activities potentially implicate them in international crimes. The report also takes note of other issues, including the urgent matter of water and sanitation rights.

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	3
II. Methodology . . . . .	5
III. Normative frameworks . . . . .	6
A. International humanitarian law . . . . .	7
B. International human rights law . . . . .	8
C. International criminal law . . . . .	9
D. Conclusions on a normative framework . . . . .	12
IV. Case studies . . . . .	13
A. Dexia Group . . . . .	13
B. Re/Max International . . . . .	18
C. Conclusions on case studies . . . . .	20
V. Water and sanitation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip . . . . .	21
VI. Recommendations . . . . .	23

I. Introduction

1. As in all earlier reports during his period as Special Rapporteur, the Special Rapporteur has been denied the benefits of cooperation with the Government of Israel, including permission to enter the territory of the State of Palestine. The Special Rapporteur did benefit from a mission to Gaza in December 2012, facilitated by the then-Government of Egypt via entry at the Rafah crossing. The visit was extremely valuable in providing direct access to those living under occupation. There is no substitute for this kind of direct experience on the ground in assessing allegations of violations of human rights by Israel as the Occupying Power. As the present report to the General Assembly is the final one of his tenure, the Special Rapporteur would like to stress the importance of not allowing this pattern of non-cooperation to become a precedent that will hamper the efforts of future Special Rapporteurs to be as effective as possible in investigating contentions relating to the human rights situation that prevails. It has been disappointing that more has not been done by the United Nations to induce compliance by Member States with their obligation under international law to cooperate with the Organization.

2. This mandate was established in 1993 when it was still appropriate to refer to the West Bank, East Jerusalem, and Gaza as “occupied territories”. To continue such usage at this time seems misleading. On 29 November 2012 the Palestinian presence within the United Nations system was upgraded by General Assembly resolution 67/19, conferring the status of non-member observer State. It thus seems more appropriate to refer to the territories administered by Israel as “Palestine” — but at the same time confirm the continuing responsibilities of Israel under international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), as the Occupying Power. Beyond the matter of status are issues of substance. The cumulative process of unlawful settlement building and expansion has reached a point where a partially irreversible process of creeping annexation has taken place, which needs to be recognized as such, that undermines the core assumption of “belligerent occupation” as a temporary reality. This alteration of the occupied territories over time has been perversely acknowledged, even provisionally validated, by the widely held assumption that Israeli “settlement blocs” will not be dismantled even in the event that a peace agreement is reached between the Palestinian Authority and Israel.

3. It is more crucial than ever to insist upon the responsibilities of Israel as the Occupying Power under international law. The Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocols I and II, as well as a large number of obligatory international human rights agreements, are indispensable in identifying and evaluating various allegations of practices relating to the administration by Israel of daily life in the West Bank, East Jerusalem and Gaza. This legal framework is important in evaluating such policies and practices as are associated with the construction of the wall on Palestinian land, the wrongful appropriation of Palestinian water resources, the confiscation of land, arrest and detention procedures, the violations of children’s rights, settler violence with the complicity of Israeli security forces, house demolitions and collective punishment via blockades, curfews and restricted movements. While all those policies and practices deserve international attention, the Special Rapporteur focuses some attention in the present report on the wrongful appropriation of water resources, which has been a somewhat neglected aspect of the Israeli occupation.

4. The resumption of direct negotiations designed to resolve the conflict between Israel and Palestine calls particular attention at this time to an emphasis on protecting the rights of the Palestinian people during the course of a diplomatic process that, in the past 20 years, has excluded the relevance of international law. This is true, in particular, of the inalienable Palestinian right of self-determination that is not even mentioned in the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993. This mandate will have failed if the solution reached through diplomatic channels does not uphold the collective right of self-determination and the individual rights of those who have lived without rights under Israel military administration since 1967. There are also additional concerns associated with the population of Gaza, whose de facto governing authority since 2007 is not participating in the revived negotiations, raising questions as to whether the rights and interests of Palestinians in Gaza are being adequately represented.

5. The situation of the Gaza Strip is particularly troublesome, as its 1.7 million people have been compelled to live under a blockade since 2007. Gaza seems to be threatened with even greater hardships for its population as a result of recent developments in Egypt. While Israel is the Occupying Power and thus maintains legal obligations to Palestinians in Gaza, the population — for the time being — needs consistent access to and from Egypt by way of the Rafah crossing and also, in order to ensure its survival, needs access to the tunnel network that has been supplying Gaza with basic necessities. It should be recalled that a United Nations report issued a year ago, before the recent complicating developments, concluded that the habitability of the Gaza Strip was in doubt after 2020.<sup>1</sup> During the mission of the Special Rapporteur, several experts on the threatened infrastructure of Gaza observed that even such a dire prediction was too optimistic, and that 2016 was a more realistic date. What is at stake in such a situation of extreme deprivation is a comprehensive assault on the social and economic rights of the people of Gaza, as embedded in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, to which Israel is a party. The maintenance of the blockade is a continuing violation of article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which unconditionally prohibits collective punishment.

6. The emphasis in the present report, as well as in the report submitted to the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly, in 2012 (A/67/379), on issues of corporate responsibility and potential accountability in relation to Israeli settlements follows the recommendation of the fact-finding inquiry into settlements under the auspices of the Human Rights Council.<sup>2</sup> It is also a reaction to the refusal of Israel to respect the obligation set forth in article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which prohibits an Occupying Power from transferring citizens from its own territory to the occupied territory. This provision has been widely interpreted as extending explicitly to Israeli settlements that have been continuously established and expanded since 1967 in defiance of this consensus as to the bearing of international law. When compliance with international law cannot be achieved by either self-regulation or persuasion, then it is appropriate to rely on non-violent, coercive means to achieve compliance and thereby contribute to the protection of the rights of those being victimized, that is, Palestinians.

---

<sup>1</sup> United Nations country team, “Gaza in 2020: a liveable place?” (Jerusalem, Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, August 2012).

<sup>2</sup> See A/HRC/22/63.

7. Ever since the adoption of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973), there has been a widely shared agreement in the international community that the Israel/Palestine conflict can only be solved by the creation of a viable and independent Palestinian State that corresponds to the 1967 de facto borders, altered to a small degree by mutual agreement. There is no doubt that the territorial scope of self-determination for the Palestinian people according to this “two-State” scenario has been continually diminished owing to unlawful settlement activity. It has long been the responsibility of the international community, and especially the United Nations, to take steps to safeguard Palestinian territorial rights. The extent of the Israeli settlement archipelago is putting the very idea of creating a Palestinian sovereign State that is independent and viable in increasing jeopardy.

8. There are many forms of abuse that deserve urgent attention and censure. The Special Rapporteur would like to highlight three for priority attention: abuses by security personnel in the form of arrest and detention procedures involving excessive force and humiliation, including of children; settler violence directed at Palestinians, and extending to their property and communities; and complicity by Israel Defense Forces in relation to settler violence, taking the form of protecting settlers engaged in violent activities rather than apprehending them, while taking punitive measures against Palestinians being victimized by such activities and failing thereby to discharge their primary responsibility under the Fourth Geneva Convention. The Special Rapporteur, in collaboration with five other Special Rapporteurs, issued a press release in connection with the mistreatment and harassment of Issa Amro, a human rights defender in Hebron who participated in the Human Rights Council interactive session devoted to occupied Palestine in June 2013 and was then detained and beaten upon his return, apparently in retaliation.<sup>3</sup>

II. Methodology

9. It is almost universally accepted that the establishment and expansion of settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem violate international humanitarian law and international human rights law. In addition, the ongoing expansion of settlements has proven to be a key obstacle to peace talks and a negotiated settlement between the Israelis and the Palestinians.

10. To date, Israel has refused to comply with international law in relation to its settlement project, and United Nations efforts to induce compliance by censuring such activities have had no discernible effect. In the meantime, the settlements by their nature and expansion act as a quasi-permanent encroachment on fundamental Palestinian rights. It is against this background that the international legal responsibilities and potential implications for non-Israeli companies that profit from the settlement enterprise is approached.

11. The report of the Special Rapporteur to the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly raised human rights issues arising from undertakings profiting from doing business with the settlements. It took note of the relevance of the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights<sup>4</sup> and, for the sake of concreteness and illustration, described the involvement of 13 businesses in the activities of Israel in Palestine. The present report develops arguments presented in the previous report and sets forth a possible model for legal analysis by focusing on selected companies chosen for the specific ways in which their activities potentially implicate them in international law violations that appear to be in some instances international crimes. The report is presented with the hope that its legal analysis will encourage companies that currently profit from the settlements to change their policies. The Special Rapporteur has consistently conveyed readiness to work with officials of companies to ensure their compliance with principles of corporate responsibility. The primary wish of the Special Rapporteur is to induce voluntary action, and it is only in the event of the failure of this approach that recourse to more coercive initiatives such as boycotts, divestments and sanctions is recommended.

---

<sup>3</sup> “Israel must stop harassment, intimidation and abusive treatment of rights defender Issa Amro”, 13 August 2013. Available from ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=13626&LangID=E.

12. The present report is based on information requested and received from civil society actors, United Nations agencies, companies and corporations, non-State entities and other stakeholders. The Special Rapporteur offers a series of recommendations to encourage businesses profiting from the settlements of Israel to take prompt action to bring their activities into line with relevant international law and related rules and standards. The Special Rapporteur notes that, since finalizing the present report, he has brought its content to the attention of the businesses mentioned. The Special Rapporteur will request clarification and further information regarding the relevant contentions in the present report with the goal of achieving prompt and effective responses to his recommendations.

III. Normative frameworks

13. The present report seeks to bring the issue of corporate responsibility to the attention of that portion of the business community that has or might in the future have commercial relationships with the settlements. It has been firmly established that international law recognizes the legal personality of corporations.<sup>5</sup> The analysis of corporate accountability will focus on relevant normative frameworks, including international humanitarian law, international human rights law and international criminal law. The establishment of settlements violates the duties of an Occupying Power according to international humanitarian law and infringes on the basic human rights of Palestinians. International criminal law creates individual criminal responsibility for the principal perpetrator as well as those who are accomplices in the commission of international crimes. The Special Rapporteur hopes that consideration of international criminal law can advance the debate on businesses and human rights, in particular because of the tangible judicial mechanisms that exist, for example the International Criminal Court and universal jurisdiction exercised by domestic courts, and in this way help guide business leaders in their decision-making. By explicating a model of legal analysis, the Special Rapporteur hopes that it will be used by and useful to other companies faced with these issues.

---

<sup>4</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex.

<sup>5</sup> See, for example, Barcelona Traction, Light and Power Company, Limited (Belgium v. Spain), Judgement of 5 February 1970, I.C.J. Reports, 1970, p. 246, and Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Republic of Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo), Preliminary Objections, I.C.J. Reports, 2007, para. 40.

A. International humanitarian law

14. International humanitarian law applies to situations of armed conflict and occupation, as set out in common article 2 of the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949. The rules that govern belligerent occupation, in particular the Regulations concerning the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907 (Hague Regulations) and the Fourth Geneva Convention, are universally accepted as reflecting customary international law and therefore apply to Israel as an Occupying Power. This has been recognized and confirmed by the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council, as well as by the International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion of 2004 on the wall.<sup>6</sup>

15. The Fourth Geneva Convention prohibits an Occupying Power from transferring citizens from its own territory to the occupied territory. The prohibition has been widely accepted to include the voluntary settlement of citizens of the Occupying Power in occupied territory.<sup>7</sup> The Hague Regulations prohibit an Occupying Power from undertaking permanent changes in the occupied area unless necessitated by military needs, or unless undertaken for the benefit of the local population. The prolonged nature of the 46-year occupation by Israel appears to be inconsistent with the accepted legal understanding that an occupation is temporary in nature. The Special Rapporteur has previously emphasized the limits of international humanitarian law in a context of prolonged occupation, especially for failing to capture the extent to which the permanent interests and well-being of the civilian population are infringed.<sup>8</sup> The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) Expert Meeting on occupation and other forms of administration of foreign territory discussed the absence in both the Hague Regulations and the Fourth Geneva Convention of limits on the duration of effective control over foreign territory and noted that many have argued that “prolonged occupation necessitates specific regulations for guiding responses to practical problems arising from long-term occupation”.<sup>9</sup> The Special Rapporteur is of the view that such regulations are required, including steps to establish regimes of law and rights when an occupation lasts for more than five years.

16. Notwithstanding shortcomings in existing law to address prolonged occupation, the temporal focus and underlying conservationist aim of the law on occupation clearly establishes that the applicable legal framework renders the establishment and expansion of Israeli settlements as unconditionally illegal. The permanent changes deliberately made in the West Bank and East Jerusalem contradict the basic aim of international humanitarian law to preserve the rights of an occupied people.

<sup>6</sup> See Commission on Human Rights resolutions 6 (XXIV), 6 (XXV) and 2001/7; Human Rights Council resolutions 7/18, 10/18 and 19/17; Security Council resolutions 271 (1969), 446 (1979), 641 (1989), 681 (1990) and 799 (1992); and General Assembly resolutions 2546 (XXIV), ES-10/2, 36/147 C, 54/78, 58/97, ES-10/18 and 66/225; advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory of 9 July 2004 (see A/ES-10/273 and Corr.1), paras. 109-113.

<sup>7</sup> See Security Council resolution 446 (1979) and the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004, para. 120.

<sup>8</sup> See A/HRC/23/21.

<sup>9</sup> See ICRC, “Occupation and other forms of administration of foreign territory: expert meeting” (Geneva, 2012). Available from icrc.org/eng/assets/files/publications/icrc-002-4094.pdf.

17. The obligations that derive from international humanitarian law bind not only States, but also non-State entities, as set out in the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and in Protocol II (relating to the protection of victims of non-international conflicts) and reaffirmed at the international military tribunals held at Nuremberg, Germany, and at Tokyo. Therefore, business corporations directly or indirectly involved in armed conflicts can be held responsible for violating international humanitarian law. According to the ICRC:

International humanitarian law does not just bind States, organized armed groups and soldiers — it binds all actors whose activities are closely linked to an armed conflict. Consequently, although States and organized armed groups bear the greatest responsibility for implementing international humanitarian law, a business enterprise carrying out activities that are closely linked to an armed conflict must also respect applicable rules of international humanitarian law.<sup>10</sup>

Accountability for international humanitarian law violations is illuminated by reference to international criminal law, a body of law that includes serious violations of international humanitarian law.

B. International human rights law

18. International human rights law imposes obligations on States to protect the rights of individuals and groups. The extraterritorial application of human rights has been endorsed by various forums.<sup>11</sup> The establishment of Israeli settlements in occupied Palestine results in manifold violations of international human rights law. Among other violations, the settlements infringe upon the right of property, the right to equality, the right to a suitable standard of living and the right to freedom of movement.<sup>12</sup> The settlements directly impede the responsibility of Israel to protect the human rights of the civilian Palestinian population.

19. The obligations imposed on States include a duty to protect against human rights abuses by third parties. States must take appropriate steps to prevent, investigate, punish and redress abuse by private actors. Moreover, standards have developed that extend the applicability of human rights law to non-State entities, including corporations.<sup>13</sup> Consequently, the obligation of States and companies, and those who act on behalf of such entities, to respect international criminal law norms constitutes a core corporate social responsibility within the evolving legal framework for respecting human rights.

---

<sup>10</sup> ICRC, “Business and international humanitarian law” (2006). Available from icrc.org/eng/assets/files/other/icrc\_002\_0882.pdf.

<sup>11</sup> See, for example, the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004, paras. 109-113; The Nature of the General Legal Obligation Imposed on States Parties to the Covenant, general comment No. 31 (CCPR/C/21/Rev.1/Add.13), paras. 15, 18; and the Public Commission to Examine the Maritime Incident of 31 May 2010 (the Turkel Commission), “Israel’s mechanisms for examining and investigating complaints and claims of violations of the laws of armed conflict according to international law” (February 2013), p. 64. Available from turkel-committee.gov.il/files/newDoc3/The%20Turkel%20Report%20for%20website.pdf.

<sup>12</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

<sup>13</sup> See, for example, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; the International Covenant on Social, Economic and Cultural Rights; and General Assembly resolution 60/147.

20. Self-regulating mechanisms have been incorporated by many businesses to ensure compliance with ethical standards and international law.<sup>14</sup> The United Nations is acting to bring human rights directly to bear on corporations through initiatives such as the Global Compact, which was launched by the Secretary-General in 2000. The Global Compact Initiative encourages businesses globally to promote voluntarily and show respect for 10 principles relating to human rights, labour standards, the environment and anti-corruption measures. Furthermore, in 2011 the Human Rights Council unanimously endorsed the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, which provide guidance on the responsibilities of business enterprises, as well as the necessary measures to be taken by States arising from their existing human rights obligations.

21. The Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights are pertinent as a framework for analysis because they “outline steps for States to foster business respect for human rights; provide a blueprint for companies to manage the risk of having an adverse impact on human rights; and offer a set of benchmarks for stakeholders to assess business respect for human rights”.<sup>15</sup> A key concept in the Guiding Principles is due diligence, which outlines an ongoing process that a reasonable business needs to undertake to meet its responsibility to respect human rights. The Guiding Principles also outline the related obligations of States, which include respecting human rights (refrain from interfering with or curtailing the enjoyment of human rights), protecting human rights (protect individuals or groups against human rights abuses, including by business enterprises) and fulfilling human rights (positive action to facilitate the enjoyment of basic human rights).<sup>16</sup> The Guiding Principles have been and will continue to be an authoritative point of reference for Governments and businesses concerned with human rights. In this connection, the Working Group on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises has been established by the Human Rights Council.<sup>17</sup> It has a central role in developing operational advice regarding the Guiding Principles, promoting and providing support for efforts to implement the Guiding Principles and making recommendations, conducting country visits and working in close cooperation with relevant United Nations bodies.

C. International criminal law

22. International criminal law establishes individual criminal responsibility over war crimes, crimes against humanity and acts of genocide. International crimes take into account the collective dimension of the offence, and that can aid in attributing aspects of a collective offence to individuals involved. Attribution of responsibility has extended to multinational corporations on account of their ability to perpetrate such violations. Corporations investing, doing business with or otherwise involved in Governments or groups active in conflict zones can find themselves in a situation

<sup>14</sup> See, for example, Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises, 2011 edition (Washington, D.C., 2011). Available from oecd.org/daf/inv/mne/oecdguidelinesformultinationaleenterprises.htm.

<sup>15</sup> See Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “The corporate responsibility to respect human rights: an interpretive guide” (2012). Available from ohchr.org/Documents/Publications/HR.PUB.12.2\_En.pdf.

<sup>16</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex, paras. 1-10.

<sup>17</sup> See A/HRC/17/4.

of committing or furthering the commission of an international crime. To date, international criminal complicity has only been imputed to natural persons.<sup>18</sup> There is a need for caution when considering the extension of individual criminal responsibility to business managers or employees. Applying international criminal law to corporations is a developing area of international law.<sup>19</sup>

1. Ad hoc tribunals

23. The jurisprudence of the international ad hoc tribunals is pertinent to understanding the concept of complicity. The Furundzija case, heard before the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, provides the standard for establishing complicity in the form of aiding and abetting. The assistance given must have a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crime, and the person aiding or abetting must have knowledge that the assistance provided is contributing to the perpetration of a crime, even if he or she did not have a common design with the perpetrators.<sup>20</sup> The Tribunal recently changed its approach to complicity in Prosecutor v. Momčilo Perišić, when it held that “specific direction” is now an element of aiding and abetting, although the degree to which this decision generates a precedent for similar litigation before other tribunals is unclear.<sup>21</sup>

2. International Criminal Court

24. Under article 25 (1) of the Rome Statute, the International Criminal Court has jurisdiction over natural persons. It does not have jurisdiction over legal entities. The Court could, however, adjudicate corporate involvement in international crimes by focusing on the individuals acting on behalf of a corporation. When a State becomes a party to the Rome Statute, it comes within the jurisdiction of the Statute with respect to the crimes set out in the Statute. The Court may exercise its jurisdiction in situations where the alleged perpetrator is a national of a State party or where the crime was committed in the territory of a State party. Also, a State not party to the Statute may decide to accept the jurisdiction of the Court, as set out in article 12 (3) of the Rome Statute. Palestine did so in January 2009, but the Prosecutor at the time stated that the Court only had jurisdiction over States and pointed to determinations of the General Assembly as a guide for determination of entities that qualify as States. It is unclear whether the subsequent granting of non-member observer State status to Palestine by the Assembly will change the status of Palestine before the Court.<sup>22</sup> Israel is not a party to the Rome Statute.

25. The Rome Statute is the best source of authority with respect to the elements of complicity in international crimes. Article 25 (3) (c) and (d) outlines aiding and abetting liability, according to which any natural person who aids, abets or otherwise <sup>18</sup> See, for example, United States of America v. Carl Krauch et al. (the I. G. Farben case), Judgement, 29, 30 July 1948, Trials of War Criminals before the Nuernberg Military Tribunals, United States Government Printing Office, 1952, vol. VIII.

<sup>19</sup> See Antje K. D. Heyer, “Corporate complicity under international criminal law: a case for applying the Rome Statute to business behaviour”, Human Rights and International Legal Discourse, vol. 6 (2012).

<sup>20</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Furundzija, case No. IT-95-17/1-T, Trial Chamber II, 10 December 1998, para. 249.

<sup>21</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Momčilo Perišić, case No. IT-04-81-A, Appeals Chamber, 28 February 2013.

<sup>22</sup> General Assembly resolution 67/19.

assists in the commission or attempted commission of crimes articulated in the statute is individually responsible for such crimes. It consists of a two-pronged test: (1) substantial contribution to the crime; and (2) knowledge and purpose in facilitating or assisting a crime.

26. Therefore, the ability to attribute international criminal responsibility to corporations is not wide in scope. According to the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Court, it must be attributed to an individual as opposed to a company, and that individual must have knowledge that their acts have causally contributed to the commission of an international crime. “Knowing assistance” (i.e., an awareness that one’s actions are assisting in the commission of a relevant crime) is required.

27. The Rome Statute prohibits “the transfer, directly or indirectly, by the Occupying Power of parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies”.<sup>23</sup> That information has long been available in the public domain, for example in official United Nations reports and resolutions, and would provide a compelling argument that corporations engaged in business activities with the settlements should by now be fully aware that Israeli settlements violate international law. The argument that requires development is the extent to which the corporation’s activities are causally connected to the international crimes being perpetrated. The International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia has introduced “specific direction”, indicating its belief that the activities in question should be specifically directed to assisting the commission of any crime. If one chooses to follow the Tribunal’s jurisprudence on complicity in relation to Israeli settlements, then questions relevant to some of the corporations discussed in the present and the previous report of the Special Rapporteur to the General Assembly would include the following: Does the provision of equipment or raw materials specifically directed towards the building of settlements and/or related infrastructure constitute a sufficient causal connection to the transfer of the Israeli civilian population to occupied Palestine? Does the provision of loans or similar financial transactions that are specifically directed towards the construction, renovation or purchase of settlements constitute such a connection? Does advertising, promoting the sale of and/or identifying buyers for a settlement constitute such a connection? Whether the Tribunal’s approach to complicity in the Perišić case will prove to be authoritative in other future cases is at this point an unknown.

28. What is clear is that prosecuting corporations for complicity at an international level offers a potential avenue for redress. Of course, jurisdictional requirements must be met. For example, the State from which the corporation and its employees are acting must be a party to the Rome Statute for the court to hear the case. The concept of complicity is not limited to international criminal law, however; other judicial mechanisms, such as national courts, could possibly prosecute corporations or their employees for involvement in international crimes.

3. Civil liability

29. Domestic law potentially provides an avenue for enforcing corporate liability for violations of international law. Civil liability is consistent with the principle of complementarity, which emphasizes the role of domestic legal regimes in the enforcement of international law. Corporate civil liability has the advantage of offering redress and compensation to the victims of the violation.<sup>24</sup> Notwithstanding the recent lack of progress in domestic litigation on corporate complicity generally, including in relation to the settlements, it is established that corporations can be subject to civil liability for the wrongful conduct of corporate agents.<sup>25</sup> Future cases will no doubt be heard on this issue before domestic courts.<sup>26</sup> The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has articulated several reasons why civil liability is an important mode of accountability for corporate complicity:

---

<sup>23</sup> Article 8 (2) (b) (viii) of the Rome Statute prohibits a broader range of actions than article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

First, international law obligates States to provide an effective remedy for victims of human rights violations. Second, civil liability for corporations helps promote the international legal principle of ensuring accountability for human rights violators. Third, in accordance with the principle of complementarity, international law necessarily relies on domestic legal mechanisms to ensure the effective protection of human rights. Finally, civil liability for corporations that are complicit in gross human rights violations serves as an avenue for orderly redress of grievances. Absent effective legal mechanisms to provide remedies for victims of gross human rights violations, those victims are likely to resort to extralegal measures to obtain redress for perceived wrongs, thereby threatening the established legal and social order.<sup>27</sup>

4. Civil society tribunals

30. For educational purposes of dissemination about failures of compliance by Israel, there are also important contributions to public awareness made by civil society initiatives such as was achieved by the Russell Tribunal on Palestine at its session in London in 2010 devoted to corporate responsibility. Such initiatives could mount constructive forms of pressure to secure compliance with standards of corporate responsibility, if preferred modes of voluntary adherence fail to uphold legal and moral standards.<sup>28</sup>

D. Conclusions on a normative framework

31. It should be noted that neither criminal law nor the law of civil remedies requires that the principal actor be held liable before a secondary actor is prosecuted. The difficulty of holding Governments or armed groups accountable for serious violations of international law means that in most cases of alleged business

---

<sup>24</sup> International Commission of Jurists, Corporate Complicity and Legal Accountability, vol. 3 (Geneva, 2008), p. 4.

<sup>25</sup> For recent litigation, see United States Supreme Court, Kiobel v. Royal Dutch Petroleum, 569 U.S. ____ (2013) for limitations of the Alien Tort Statute; the Dutch National Public Prosecutor's Office dismissal of the case against Riwal; and the Court of Appeal of Versailles decision that ruled against civil liability for private French companies in the construction of a Jerusalem light rail tramway system, available from www.volokh.com/wp-content/uploads/2013/04/French-Ct-decision.pdf.

<sup>26</sup> Corporations and other private legal persons can be prosecuted for genocide and crimes against humanity under article 213-3 of the French Penal Code and under the Canadian Crimes Against Humanity and War Crimes Act.

<sup>27</sup> Brief of Amicus Curiae Navi Pillay, p. 3, in Kiobel v. Royal Dutch Petroleum.

<sup>28</sup> See russelltribunalonpalestine.com/en/sessions/london-session.

involvement in those violations the company will be prosecuted independently of the principal actor.<sup>29</sup>

32. Much of the legal analysis has culminated in a discussion of international criminal law and its concept of corporate complicity.<sup>30</sup> The importance of complicity, however, transcends international criminal justice. It has been extended to respect for corporate social responsibility and human rights standards. The Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights refer to international criminal law in its articulation of corporate complicity for human rights violations. Such initiatives contribute to translating international criminal responsibility standards into guidelines for companies on how to conduct their business in order to avoid responsibility for violations and abuses, for example through due diligence.

IV. Case studies

33. As noted in the previous report of the Special Rapporteur on this issue, there is a wide range of businesses operating in the settlements. The Special Rapporteur surveyed 13 businesses, including several that were Israeli and others that were international. Some businesses were connected with the occupation generally and others with the settlements in particular. In the present report the Special Rapporteur focuses on two discrete areas that relate to settlements. The first area is banking institutions involved in financial transactions, such as loans to construct or purchase Israeli settlements. The company that the Special Rapporteur discusses is the Dexia Group, a European banking group. This builds upon the analysis by the Special Rapporteur of the Dexia Group in the previous report. The second area that the Special Rapporteur draws attention to is real estate companies that advertise and sell properties in settlements. The activities of Re/Max International, a company based in the United States of America, are the focus of analysis in the present report. The case studies aim to determine whether the Dexia Group and Re/Max International, through providing loans and mortgages and through advertising and selling properties in settlements, provide knowing assistance that amounts to aiding in the commission of international crimes associated with transferring the citizens of the Occupying Power to the occupied territory. The Special Rapporteur reiterates that the businesses highlighted are illustrative examples. There are other companies that profit from Israeli settlement activities, both in the economic service areas in which the Dexia Group and Re/Max International are working and in other areas involving goods and services.

A. Dexia Group

34. The Dexia Group carries out activities in the fields of retail and commercial banking, public and wholesale banking, asset management and investor services. The Special Rapporteur previously reported on the activities of Dexia Israel Bank

---

<sup>29</sup> International Commission of Jurists, Corporate Complicity and Legal Accountability, vol. 1 (Geneva, 2008), p. 18.

<sup>30</sup> Word constraints limited the present analysis on corporate responsibility to business activities connected to the settlements; however, the analysis could potentially be extended to all aspects of the occupation.

Limited (Dexia Israel), of which the Dexia Group is the majority shareholder, such as providing loans to Israelis living in settlements on the West Bank.

35. Since the previous report of the Special Rapporteur, the Dexia Group has continued to implement its revised orderly resolution plan, which was established as a result of the European sovereign debt crisis. In January 2013, Belgium, France and Luxembourg signed a tripartite liquidity guarantee agreement in favour of Dexia Crédit Local. The Dexia Group is now 94 per cent owned by Belgium and France (50.02 per cent Belgium and 44.38 per cent France).<sup>31</sup> In 2012, the Dexia Group stated that it planned to sell Dexia Israel and that the sale should be completed within 12 months, following a definitive decision on the various legal actions taken against Dexia Israel and Dexia Crédit Local as a shareholder.<sup>32</sup> A press release in May 2013 stated that there have been no new material developments in relation to this matter, and a mid-year report stated that legal proceedings between minority shareholders and Dexia Israel continue, but no mention was made of its banking activities.<sup>33</sup>

36. The Special Rapporteur previously noted that the Dexia Group was a member of the Global Compact Initiative and that it failed to communicate, in early 2012, on progress made in implementing the standards set by the Compact. The Special Rapporteur has learned that, in April 2013, the Dexia Group withdrew from the Compact, which seems to be a disturbing development from the perspective of securing compliance with the Compact guidelines.<sup>34</sup>

37. For several years the former and current presidents of the Dexia Group (Jean-Luc Dehaene and Karel De Boeck) have stated that no new contracts have been granted in relation to the settlements. The Belgian movement for international solidarity (Intal) questions the accuracy of this position. Intal's research indicates that new loans to construct and expand settlements continue to be granted, bringing the total amount of loans to €35 million.<sup>35</sup> According to Intal, in November 2012 Dexia Israel made a positive financial audit for the Elkanah and Karnai Shomron settlements and Dexia Israel continues to provide services for settlement development. For example, Ariel and Kedumim settlements can open accounts with Dexia Israel to receive Israel National Lottery (Mifal HaPais) grants.<sup>36</sup> Mifal HaPais uses its lottery revenue to support various public projects in the field of health, education and the arts. The settlements are considered one such public project and they receive lottery grants which are transferred through Dexia Israel. Who Profits, an Israeli non-governmental organization, has also conducted research on Dexia Israel. According to their research, Mifal HaPais provided grants in 2012 to Israeli local municipalities and regional councils that were specifically intended

<sup>31</sup> Dexia Group press release, 3 July 2013. Available from dexia.com/EN/journalist/press\_releases/Documents/20130703\_CP\_Dexia\_emission\_dette\_garantie\_EN.pdf.

<sup>32</sup> Dexia Group, "Annual report 2012" (Brussels, 2012), p. 76. Available from dexia.com/EN/shareholder\_investor/individual\_shareholders/publications/Documents/RA\_2012\_EN.pdf.

<sup>33</sup> Dexia Group press release, 8 May 2013. Available from dexia.com/EN/journalist/press\_releases/Documents/20130508\_CP\_resultats\_1T\_EN.pdf; Dexia Group press release, 7 August 2013. Available from <http://hugin.info/152020/R/1721538/574033.pdf>.

<sup>34</sup> See unglobalcompact.org/participant/2887-Dexia-Group.

<sup>35</sup> See intal.be/files/20101121\_written\_statement\_RToP\_Dexia\_-\_mario\_franssen.pdf and intal.be/fr/article/dexia-et-son-principal-actionnaire-la-belgique-se-portent-garant-pour-couvrir-un-projet-de-l.

<sup>36</sup> See intal.be/files/20101121\_written\_statement\_RToP\_Dexia\_-\_mario\_franssen.pdf.

to support the construction of settlement facilities, such as schools and community centres, all of which were transferred through Dexia Israel.<sup>37</sup> It should be noted that Dexia Israel's activities have also included managing personal bank accounts and mortgage loans for home buyers.<sup>38</sup>

38. Can the Dexia Group be held accountable for mortgages and loans granted by Dexia Israel to Israeli settlements? As a subsidiary of the Dexia Group (the Dexia Group owns 100 per cent of Dexia Crédit Local, which in turn owns 65 per cent of Dexia Israel), there is a strong basis for imputing the activities of Dexia Israel to the Dexia Group. The methodology of the legal analysis set out above will be applied to this case study in order to assess the grounds for making such an argument. Although that analysis focused on corporations generally, it appears to be accepted that providers of financial services can also be held criminally liable for aiding and abetting crimes. The International Commission of Jurists stated that:

The criminal liability of a financier will depend on what he or she knows about how his or her services and loans will be utilised and the degree to which these services actually affect the commission of a crime. Criminal liability may be less likely for a lender or financier who supports a general project or organisation as opposed to the financier who knowingly facilitates specific criminal activities through funding them or dealing with proceeds of the crimes.<sup>39</sup>

1. International humanitarian law

39. Dexia Israel's transactions with Israeli settlements render the Dexia Group a business corporation involved in the occupation of Palestine, and it can therefore be held responsible for violating international humanitarian law. Settlements are illegal because of the fact that they are built on occupied land. They are closely linked to the ongoing conflict and the belligerent occupation. Dexia Israel's activities facilitate the growth of settlements, which demonstrates that the majority shareholder Dexia Group is complicit in violating international humanitarian law because, by transferring members of the Israeli population into occupied Palestine, Israel is violating article 49 (6) of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which, owing to its scale and intentionality, is a prima facie war crime.

40. Moreover, as States parties to the Geneva Conventions, Belgium and France are obligated to respect and ensure respect for the Conventions. At present, they are majority shareholders in a company that provides loans and mortgages to settlements in occupied Palestine and, in this connection, are violating their obligation to ensure respect for the Conventions.

2. International human rights Law

41. Dexia Israel, through its transactions with settlements, is aiding and abetting human rights infringements on the right of property, the right to equality, the right to a suitable standard of living and the right to freedom of movement, among other human rights. The Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights consider the relevance of complicity to its concept of due diligence: “questions of complicity may arise when a business enterprise contributes to, or is seen as contributing to, adverse human rights impacts caused by other parties”.<sup>40</sup> As a majority shareholder, liability extends to the Dexia Group. Belgium and France are also under a responsibility to take steps to prevent and punish the activities of private actors within the Dexia Group that have violated the law.<sup>16</sup> Moreover, as owners of the Dexia Group, Belgium and France have an explicit duty to take appropriate action in the face of human rights abuses, including activities of its subsidiary, Dexia Israel, that support the growth of settlements. By failing to do so, these States are not fulfilling their duties under human rights treaties, such as the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. This duty is recognized by the Guiding Principles, which highlight that, when a State controls a company, its violations may also constitute a violation of the State’s own international law obligations.<sup>41</sup> If a State owns or controls a business, it has the direct means of ensuring that policies, legislation and regulations that respect human rights are implemented.<sup>42</sup>

<sup>37</sup> Who Profits research paper submitted to the Special Rapporteur, July 2013.

<sup>38</sup> Who Profits, "Financing the Israeli occupation" (2010). Available from whoprofits.org/content/financing-israeli-occupation.

<sup>39</sup> International Commission of Jurists, Corporate Complicity and Legal Accountability, vol. 2 (Geneva, 2008), pp. 39-40.

42. Self-regulating mechanisms within corporations are relevant to assessing responsibility for potential human rights violations.<sup>43</sup> It is regrettable that the Dexia Group has withdrawn from the Global Compact. The observation of the Special Rapporteur in his previous report that the Dexia Group was not up to date on its reporting requirements was intended to encourage compliance, but indications suggest that the Dexia Group has unfortunately chosen to follow an opposite course of action.

3. International criminal law

43. Individual criminal responsibility for the activities of Dexia Israel potentially extends to individual employees of the Dexia Group. Both Belgium and France are States parties to the Rome Statute, rendering their nationals within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court. Therefore, charges could be presented against Dexia Group employees for complicity in the war crime of establishing settlements in the occupied territory of Palestine. Take for example Dexia Israel’s proposal to grant a loan of 2.5 million new Israeli shekels to Ariel settlement. Ariel is one of the oldest and most prominent settlements in the West Bank. If Dexia Israel is providing mortgage loans for homebuyers in Ariel or to the regional council, or facilitating grants allocated by Mifal HaPais, these types of assistance directly contribute to the settlement’s growth, and therefore materially facilitate the transfer of Israeli citizens to occupied territory. Based on information available to the Special Rapporteur, there is a reasonable basis for concluding that Dexia Israel’s activities provide the financial assistance for the construction, sustainability and maintenance of settlements such as Ariel and Kedumim. It can be reliably presupposed that Dexia Israel is fully aware of the activities for which it provides financial support, and therefore knowingly assists in the establishment and maintenance of settlements. In turn, it can be assumed that, by owning 65 per cent of the bank, the Dexia Group has

<sup>40</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex, para. 17.

<sup>41</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex, para. 4.

<sup>42</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “The corporate responsibility to respect human rights: an interpretive guide”, p. 22; see also A/HRC/17/31, annex, para. 14.

<sup>43</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex, paras. 15 and 16.

knowledge of the loans its subsidiary grants, and therefore individual criminal responsibility can be attributed to employees in the Dexia Group who have knowledge of the activities of their subsidiary in Israel.

4. State responsibility

44. In addition to individual criminal responsibility, the question of State responsibility is relevant to this analysis. When a State commits an internationally wrongful act (complicity in a war crime), it is obligated to cease the act and make appropriate assurances not to repeat it. In this case, it would appear that Belgium and France must ensure that Dexia Israel stops providing loans and ceases the transfer of Government grants to settlements and settlement-related activities. Further, the State must make full reparation for the injury caused by its past wrongful acts. In this case, Belgium and France could be responsible for reparations to Palestinians adversely affected by settlements that received loans and mortgages from Dexia Israel. Reparation can take the forms of restitution, compensation and satisfaction. The fact that the Dexia Group is now State-owned means that State responsibility and individual criminal responsibility are potential modes of liability. Considering the concern and objections that have been voiced by the European Union about Israeli settlement activity, political and civil society pressure on the Governments of Belgium and France to sell its shares in Dexia Israel may be the most appropriate step to take if compliance is to be belatedly achieved.<sup>44</sup>

5. Civil liability

45. Domestic courts have been faced with litigation against financial institutions, albeit resulting in different verdicts.<sup>45</sup> In most jurisdictions it must be proven that the banks knew about the criminal activity of the borrower they were financing and could foresee the effects of the loan and the harmful consequences resulting from the transaction.<sup>46</sup> Civil liability could therefore be potentially imposed on the Dexia Group as an institution, on individuals within the corporation, and/or on Belgium and/or France as owners. The recent Court of Versailles decision on the Jerusalem light rail indicates that, in France at least, civil liability may be difficult to establish in a judicial setting. However, the judicial record of past receptivity by Belgium to universal jurisdiction suggests it may be more ready to respond sympathetically to such an initiative.<sup>47</sup>

46. In relation to civil liability, certain financial entities have demonstrated an increasing awareness of corporate social responsibility and the potential legal

<sup>44</sup> See European Union, "Statement by the Spokesperson of the High Representative Catherine Ashton on renewed plans for Israeli settlements in and around East Jerusalem", 31 May 2013. Available from consilium.europa.eu/uedocs/cms\_Data/docs/pressdata/EN/foraff/137350.pdf.

<sup>45</sup> See, for example, South African Apartheid Litigation, 617 F. Supp. 2d 228, 260-262 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) and Almog v. Arab Bank, 471 F. Supp. 2d at 257 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

<sup>46</sup> See Juan Pablo Bohoslavsky and Veerle Openhaffen, "The past and present of corporate complicity: financing the Argentinean dictatorship", Harvard Human Rights Journal, vol. 23 (2010).

<sup>47</sup> It should be noted that, as a result of issues raised by the Sharon case (La Cour de Cassation, 24 September 2003), which was before the Cour de Cassation at the time, legislators in Belgium made changes to the Amendment to the Law of June 16, 1993, Concerning the Punishment of Grave Breaches of Humanitarian Law (5 August 2003), requiring a direct Belgian link for a case to be heard before the courts.

ramifications relating to Israeli settlements. The Norwegian Government Pension Fund Global excluded the construction company Shikun & Binui because of its involvement in the construction of settlements. The Ethical Council of four of the largest pension funds in Sweden excluded Elbit Systems because of its involvement in the construction and maintenance of the wall. The New Zealand Government Superannuation Fund divested from Elbit Systems, Africa-Israel Investments Limited and its subsidiary Danya Cebus, and Shikun & Binui because of their participation in either the construction of settlements or the wall.<sup>48</sup>

47. Investment committees have recommended that large European banks refuse to extend financial assistance to Israeli companies that manufacture, build or sell products in Palestine and to banks that grant mortgages to builders or buyers of housing therein. The Dexia Group would fall within the latter category. According to Haaretz, the recommendations have been put on hold following pressure from Israel exerted in the context of a diplomatic initiative led by the United States.<sup>49</sup> Nonetheless, the recommendations, the response by the Government of Israel and related reporting in the Israeli press indicate that financial institutions are increasingly concerned about their legal and moral responsibilities associated with any dealings involving the settlements.

B. Re/Max International

48. Re/Max International is a privately held real estate company in the United States that has an international network of franchisee-owned and operated offices. Re/Max International receives 1 per cent of the revenue of sales and a flat fee per associate.<sup>50</sup> Re/Max International franchises its international brand name affiliation and recognition, start-up training, ongoing training, technological resources, and advertising and marketing support.<sup>51</sup> Re/Max Israel is itself a franchise of Re/Max International. It opened in 1995 and has more than 100 branches, including in settlements on the West Bank. Israeli branches advertise properties and execute sales of settlement homes in the West Bank.<sup>52</sup> The Re/Max Israel franchise office in Jerusalem, called Re/Max Vision, targets international clients who may be interested in purchasing a home in or around Jerusalem.<sup>53</sup> Re/Max International promotes the same properties on its website. A search of its website in June 2013 indicated that there were 51 residential properties advertised in 9 settlements.<sup>54</sup>

49. Can Re/Max International be held accountable for settlement properties sold by Re/Max Israel? By providing international brand name affiliation and recognition, start-up training, ongoing training, technological resources, and advertising and

<sup>48</sup> Jan Willem van Gelder, Barbara Kuepper and Ewoud Nijhof, "Dutch economic links with the occupation", research paper prepared for Cordaid (Amsterdam, Profundo, 2013), p. 17. Available from cordaid.org/media/publications/Report\_Dutch\_economic\_links\_with\_the\_occupation\_1.pdf; see also Norwegian People's Aid, "Dangerous liaisons: Norwegian ties to the Israeli occupation" (2012). Available from npaid.org/Media/20\_Files/Om-oss/Annual-reports/Dangerous-liaisons.

<sup>49</sup> "Danger ahead: an Israel boycott", editorial, Haaretz, 14 July 2013.

<sup>50</sup> See remax-franchise.com/fs/home/general\_content/faqs.

<sup>51</sup> See remax-franchise.com/fs/helping-you-succeed/training-and-support.

<sup>52</sup> See remax-israel.com/OfficeProfile.aspx?OfficeID=5012.

<sup>53</sup> See remax-capital.com/new/html/project\_2\_about.php.

<sup>54</sup> Http://global.remax.com.

marketing, as well as by profiting from such sales, Re/Max International has constant interaction and influence over its franchises. Similar to the Dexia Group case study, the methodology used in the legal analysis set out below will be applied in order to assess the legal plausibility of such a case.

1. International humanitarian law

50. Promoting the sale of (for example by advertising) or selling property on or as part of a settlement contributes to the commission of the international crime of transferring citizens of the Occupying Power onto occupied territory. In fact, advertising and selling such properties to citizens of the Occupying Power constitute instances par excellence of participating in such transfers.

2. International human rights law

51. The responsibility to respect human rights requires businesses to avoid contributing to adverse human rights impacts and to mitigate such impacts when linked to their operations.<sup>55</sup> Re/Max International, through selling properties on Palestinian land, is directly contributing to adverse human rights impacts, such as the restrictions on freedom of movement that obstruct Palestinians' access to land, which is often used for agricultural purposes, and arbitrary and unlawful interference with Palestinians' privacy, family and home.<sup>56</sup> States parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights are obliged to regulate the conduct of private groups and ensure that such conduct will not result in violating human rights and, where it does, ensure that effective remedies are available.

52. Re/Max International's code of ethics states that "its affiliates shall undertake to eliminate any practice by real estate professionals in their community which could be damaging to the public".<sup>57</sup> The statement reveals two things. First, if the Palestinian population is considered to be part of the public in Israel (given that Israel effectively controls the population) then the establishment of settlements is clearly damaging to that sector of the public. Second, the code of ethics extends to the "affiliates" of Re/Max International, which form part of its "community", therefore reconfirming the connection between the global company and its local franchises.

3. International criminal law

53. Neither the United States nor Israel are States parties to the Rome Statute. That makes it difficult to bring a case of complicity against a Re/Max International employee, except if the employee is a national of a party to the Rome Statute. In terms of the causal connection between Re/Max International and its franchises, the fact that it advertises on its website the sale of the properties in settlements demonstrates that it knows about such sales and draws a 1 per cent profit from each sale. Again, by providing international brand name affiliation and recognition, start-up training, ongoing training, technological resources, and advertising and marketing, Re/Max International has an ongoing interaction and influence over its franchises. The Special Rapporteur believes that a strong case could be made that this amounts to knowing assistance in the commission of a crime. Further, the explicit connection of individual salespersons to the promotion and sale of homes in Israeli settlements greatly increases prospects for holding individuals accountable for such crimes.

<sup>55</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex, para. 13.

<sup>56</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex, articles 12 and 17 and the individual complaint by the Norwegian Refugee Council to the Human Rights Committee, 28 February 2013.

<sup>57</sup> See, for example, remax-fun.at/?id=qualitaeten&lang=en.

4. Civil liability

54. Civil liability for corporate complicity may prove a difficult avenue for redress in this case. The United States Supreme Court decision on Kiobel v. Royal Dutch Petroleum Co. presents a challenge to litigation against corporations through the Alien Tort Statute, which had been a valuable mechanism to hold corporations accountable for violating international law.<sup>58</sup> This would make it difficult to bring a case of corporate complicity against Re/Max International in the United States. Nonetheless, civil liability could be prosecuted against individuals within Re/Max International for their role in knowingly assisting in the commission of a crime by providing advertising and other administrative support to Re/Max Israel's property sales in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Furthermore, the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights emphasize that States must take appropriate steps to ensure that effective remedy is available through judicial, administrative and legislative means.<sup>59</sup>

55. Real estate agents who promote and/or sell properties in settlements in Palestine to citizens of the Occupying Power may be held liable for complicity in the crime of promoting settlement activity in occupied territory. While the present case study examined Re/Max International, the same analysis would apply to other real estate agencies. The unavailability of civil relief in United States court at the present time does not establish that such a remedy might not be available in other national legal systems.

C. Conclusions on case studies

56. The present report proposed a model for legal analysis by focusing on two companies chosen for the particular ways in which their activities potentially implicate them in international crimes. The legal model can be applied to other situations and other companies. The Special Rapporteur stresses again that the companies discussed herein are illustrative examples; however, some conclusions can be drawn about the case studies.

57. Financial institutions and real estate agents may be held accountable for their involvement with settlements in occupied Palestine. Pressure by the international community to uphold international law is no longer limited to States as the primary duty-bearers. Companies, individuals and groups can be implicated for behaviour that contributes to wrongful acts. The Dexia Group and Re/Max International, in different ways, assist in the growth of settlements: the Dexia Group by providing financial services connected to the settlements, and Re/Max International by selling settlement properties. In terms of assessing the causal connection to the policy and practice by Israel of transferring its citizens to Palestine, this must largely be based on the connection between the global companies and the settlement activity. Do the activities of the global companies directly contribute to the violations of international law that the settlements constitute? Voluntarily playing a causal role in the commission of a crime can in certain instances be enough to make them accomplices to that crime.

---

<sup>58</sup> The Alien Tort Statute is a legal instrument that enables plaintiffs to sue persons, including foreigners, who acted outside United States territory for breaches of international law before United States district courts.

<sup>59</sup> A/HRC/17/31, annex, paras. 25 and 26.

V. Water and sanitation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip

58. During the mission of the Special Rapporteur to the Gaza Strip in December 2012, a number of interlocutors raised serious concerns about the lack of clean water and adequate sanitation facilities in the Gaza Strip. Some of those issues were briefly touched upon in the previous report of the Special Rapporteur to the Human Rights Council.<sup>8</sup> In the context of the near exclusive control by Israel over all underground and surface water resources in Palestine, the Special Rapporteur reiterates his concerns regarding the occupation-induced water and sanitation crisis.

The situation in the Gaza Strip

59. In the Gaza Strip, 90 per cent of water in the underlying coastal aquifer beneath the Gaza Strip is unfit for human consumption as a result of pollution caused by raw sewage and rising seawater infiltration. In 2012, the United Nations reported that the coastal aquifer on which the Gaza Strip is almost completely reliant could become unusable as early as 2016, with the deterioration becoming irreversible by 2020. Polluted tap water has forced many families to buy expensive water from external vendors or to rely on desalinated water supplied by the Coastal Municipalities Water Utility, putting an unreasonable burden on average household incomes, which are already struggling at or below subsistence levels. Under these circumstances, most Gazans consume an average of 70 to 90 litres per person per day, which is well below the global standard set by the World Health Organization.<sup>1</sup>

60. The Israeli blockade of Gaza has exacerbated water scarcity and lack of adequate sanitation facilities. Delays and restrictions on the entry of materials through the Israeli-controlled Kerem Shalom crossing have stalled a number of water and sanitation infrastructure projects. Furthermore, Israel not only extracts a disproportionate share of the water from the coastal aquifer for its own benefit but also blocks the Gazan population from accessing water from the Wadi Gaza, a natural stream that originates in the Hebron Mountains and flows to the Mediterranean Sea.

61. Water scarcity in Gaza has been worsened by the repeated destruction of water and sanitation infrastructure in the course of Israeli military operations.<sup>60</sup> Israel has destroyed at least 306 wells in the Access Restricted Areas of Gaza since 2005.<sup>61</sup> In this context, the Special Rapporteur strongly condemns the targeting of water and sanitation facilities during Israeli military operations, which cannot be justified as a military necessity, and cannot be explained as a consequence of accidents.

<sup>60</sup> See A/HRC/22/35/Add.1.

<sup>61</sup> Emergency Water and Sanitation-Hygiene Group, "Fact sheet 13: Water and sanitation in the Access Restricted Areas of the Gaza Strip" (December 2012). Available from [ewash.org/files/library/factsheet%20jan%202012\[1\].pdf](http://ewash.org/files/library/factsheet%20jan%202012[1].pdf).

The situation in the West Bank

62. Palestinians in the West Bank are denied their rightful share of water from the underground mountain aquifer and prevented from accessing water from the Jordan River, which are both classified as shared water resources and thus must be shared equitably under customary international law.<sup>62</sup> An estimated 500,000 Israeli settlers in the West Bank and East Jerusalem enjoy approximately six times the amount of water used by the Palestinian population of 2.6 million.<sup>63</sup> Israeli settlers enjoy ample amounts of water channelled directly to the settlements, which allows settlers to irrigate agricultural land and grow water-intensive crops. In contrast, Palestinian farmers depend largely on water supplies transported in tankers or collected by water cisterns, raising agricultural costs and restricting most Palestinian agriculture to unprofitable small-scale operations growing rain-fed crops, which on average is 15 times less profitable than irrigated crops. In this context, only 6.8 per cent of land cultivated by Palestinians in the West Bank is irrigated.<sup>64</sup>

63. The unequal distribution of water resources has been sustained by the Joint Water Committee, which was established as part of the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Mandated to grant permits for the drilling and rehabilitation of wells and sewage systems, the Committee is also responsible for setting water extraction quotas. The veto power of Israel on decision-making by the Committee has enabled it to constrain the development of water infrastructure for Palestinian communities, particularly in Area C of the West Bank. In addition, all Palestinian water projects located in Area C need to obtain approval from the Israeli Civil Administration. The Special Rapporteur finds it alarming that from 1995 to 2008, the Committee approved Israeli proposals for 3 wells and 108 supply networks and rejected only 1 of 24 proposed wastewater projects, while during the same period it approved only half of all Palestinian proposals for wells.<sup>65</sup>

64. The loss of scarce Palestinian water resources occurs not only through demolitions undertaken by Israeli authorities of “illegal” water collection facilities, including wells and water collection tanks, but also as a result of deep-water drilling activities by Israeli water companies. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned by acts of violence by settlers in the vicinity of Palestinian communities; there are several reports of Palestinian springs being taken over by settlers and fenced off.<sup>65</sup>

65. Israel systematically blocks the development of the Palestinian wastewater and sanitation sector through bureaucratic constraints imposed by the Joint Water Committee and the Israeli Civil Administration. Between 1995 and 2011, only 4 out of 30 Palestinian wastewater treatment plant proposals were approved by the Committee and their construction has been repeatedly delayed. It is of serious

<sup>62</sup> Palestinian Water Authority, “Palestinian water sector: status summary report”, report prepared for the meeting of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee (September 2012). Available from <http://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Water%20summary%20for%20AHLC%20report%20FINAL.pdf>.

<sup>63</sup> Elizabeth Koek, Water for One People Only: Discriminatory Access and “Water-Apartheid” in the OPT (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2013).

<sup>64</sup> Emergency Water and Sanitation-Hygiene Group, “Fact sheet 14: Water for agriculture in the West Bank” (March 2013). Available from ewash.org/files/library/WB%20factsheet%20final%20march%202013.pdf.

<sup>65</sup> See A/HRC/22/63 and Oxfam, On the Brink: Israeli Settlements and Their Impact on Palestinians in the Jordan Valley (Oxford, 2012).

concern to the Special Rapporteur that there is only one functioning Palestinian wastewater treatment plant in the West Bank, which has the capacity to treat less than 3 per cent of sewage.<sup>62</sup>

66. Meanwhile, Israeli authorities profit from the occupation-induced crisis by treating up to 21 per cent of Palestinian sewage in facilities established inside Israel and paid for by Palestinian tax revenues withheld by Israel. The treated wastewater is then reused for the exclusive benefit of the Israeli agricultural sector.<sup>62</sup> The difficulties experienced by Palestinian communities in securing sewage treatment facilities contrasts with the wastewater treatment plants servicing the settlements, which makes a mockery of the relevance of international humanitarian law in the protection of an occupied people.

The Palestinian right to water and development

67. Considering the unlawful policies and practices of Israel that induce a water and sanitation crisis in occupied Palestine, the Special Rapporteur stresses that the Palestinian Authority has neither been able to uphold Palestinian water rights nor embrace the right to development of water and sanitation facilities.<sup>66</sup> Support from the international donor community for ad hoc solutions, such as financing desalination plants and sanitation facilities to meet the immediate needs of the Palestinian population, must go hand in hand with pressure exerted on Israeli authorities to put an end to its discriminatory policies. In sum, the discriminatory pattern disclosed is aggravated by the fact that while the Palestinians are being denied their rights to resources situated within Palestine, settlements have been the beneficiaries of these Israeli policies. In effect, illegality is compounded by illegality, with the result being impending threats of de-development hanging over the Palestinian future in the Gaza Strip, and to a lesser degree in the West Bank.

VI. Recommendations

68. If current diplomacy fails to produce a solution to the underlying conflict, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the General Assembly request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice as to the legal consequences of the prolonged occupation of Palestine.

69. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel cease expanding and creating settlements in occupied Palestine, start dismantling existing settlements and returning its citizens to the Israeli side of the Green Line and provide appropriate reparations for the damage due to settlement and related activity since 1967.

70. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel inform Israeli businesses that are franchises and subsidiaries of global companies that profit from activity with the settlements of their corporate

---

<sup>66</sup> The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; the Convention on the Rights of the Child; and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities entail obligations for States parties in relation to access to safe drinking water and sanitation. Israel has ratified the aforementioned Conventions except for the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, to which Israel is a signatory.

responsibilities and the international legal ramifications of such business activities, in particular concerning potential liability for corporate complicity in overseas domestic courts.

71. The Special Rapporteur recommends that Belgium and France compensate Palestinians who have been directly affected by the settlements to which Dexia Israel has provided mortgages or administered grants.

72. The Special Rapporteur recommends that copies of the present report be forwarded to Robert de Metz (Chair of the Board of the Dexia Group) and David Liniger (Chair and founder of Re/Max International). It is strongly recommended that each of these two companies undertake a prompt review so as to bring it, its affiliates and its employees' policies and practices into full compliance with the laws and standards mentioned in the present report.

73. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Dexia Group and Re/Max International should agree to comply with and adopt clear guidelines for future corporate social responsibility based on the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

74. The Special Rapporteur recommends that civil society in Belgium and France be urged to pressure their Governments to sell their shares in the Dexia Group and encourages civil society to demand that all businesses cease their activities that relate to the settlements and henceforth insist that companies act in accordance with the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

75. The Special Rapporteur recommends that all companies with relations to the settlements comparable to those of the Dexia Group and Re/Max International review their arrangements with an eye towards respect for international law and the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

76. The Special Rapporteur recommends that Israel immediately end its discriminatory policies and practices that serve to deny Palestinians their rightful share of water resources in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. In particular, Israel must cease the demolition of water collection facilities, including wells and water tanks, on the pretext that they operate without valid permits.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
5 November 2013

Original: English

---

Sixty-eighth session

Agenda item 69 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights
situations and reports of special rapporteurs
and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

Corrigendum

Paragraph 33

The ninth sentence should read

These case studies aim to determine whether the Dexia Group and Re/Max International, through providing loans and through advertising and selling properties in settlements, provide knowing assistance that amounts to aiding in the commission of international crime associated with transferring the citizens of the Occupying Power to the occupied territory.

Paragraph 34

The last sentence should read

The Special Rapporteur previously reported on the activities of Dexia Israel Bank Limited (Dexia Israel), of which the Dexia Group is the majority shareholder, such as providing loans to settlements on the West Bank.

Paragraph 37

The last sentence should be deleted.

Paragraph 38

The first sentence should read

Can the Dexia Group be held accountable for loans granted by Dexia Israel to Israeli settlements?

Paragraph 40

The paragraph should read

Moreover, in keeping with common article 1 of the Geneva Conventions, Belgium and France, as States parties to the Convention, are obligated to respect and ensure respect for the Conventions. At present, they are majority shareholders in a company that provides loans to settlements in occupied Palestine and, in this connection, are violating their obligation to ensure respect for the Conventions.

Paragraph 43

The sixth sentence should read

If Dexia Israel is providing loans to the regional council, or facilitating grants allocated by Mifal HaPais, these types of assistance directly contribute to the settlement's growth, and therefore materially facilitate the transfer of Israeli citizens to occupied territory.

Paragraph 44

The fifth sentence should read

In this case, Belgium and France could be responsible for reparations to Palestinians adversely affected by settlements that received loans from Dexia Israel.

Paragraph 47

The second sentence should be deleted.

Paragraph 71

The paragraph should read

The Special Rapporteur recommends that Belgium and France compensate Palestinians who have been directly affected by the settlements to which Dexia Israel has provided loans or administered grants.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
11 August 2014

Original: English

---

Sixty-ninth session

Item 69 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights
situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Makarim Wibisono, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/69/150.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Makarim Wibisono, submits his first report to the General Assembly. This short technical report is based on consultations held with the relevant States and other stakeholders in Geneva in June 2014 and outlines next steps towards the fulfilment of the mandates contained in Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2 and Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

I. Introduction

1. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Makarim Wibisono, was appointed on 8 May 2014, in accordance with Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2 and Human Rights Council resolution 5/1. He assumed his functions on 2 June 2014. He is the sixth Special Rapporteur to assume this mandate.

2. This short technical report is based on consultations held with the relevant States and other stakeholders in Geneva in June 2014. The Special Rapporteur intends to conduct a mission to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the earliest possible opportunity with a view to preparing his first substantive report, to be submitted to the Human Rights Council at its twenty-eighth session, in March 2015.

II. Mandate

3. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur is outlined in Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2 and was renewed by Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

4. Specifically, the Special Rapporteur is mandated to carry out the following activities:

(a) To investigate Israel's violations of the principles and bases of international law, international humanitarian law and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

(b) To receive communications, to hear witnesses and to use such modalities of procedure as he may deem necessary for his mandate;

(c) To report, with his conclusions and recommendations, to the Commission on Human Rights at its future sessions, until the end of the Israeli occupation of those territories.

5. The mandate of the Human Rights Council<sup>1</sup> is therefore clearly to investigate and report on violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law allegedly committed by Israel, the occupying Power, in the context of its prolonged occupation of the Palestinian territories since 1967.

III. Cooperation

6. Israel has in the past extended full cooperation with the mandate holder. In 1993, the Special Rapporteur received an invitation from the then Minister for Foreign Affairs, Shimon Peres, to visit Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 1994, as a result of which he carried out two visits during his term. On both occasions, he held meetings with Israeli and Palestinian officials, representatives of non-governmental organizations and of United Nations entities in the Occupied

---

<sup>1</sup> Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 60/251, the Human Rights Council has assumed the role and responsibilities of the Commission on Human Rights relating to the work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

Palestinian Territory, as well as with victims and witnesses of alleged violations of human rights. He was granted complete freedom of movement during his missions, including access to an Israeli detention facility for the purpose of conducting unsupervised interviews with Palestinian detainees (see E/CN.4/1994/14 and E/CN.4/1995/19).

7. Cooperation between Israel and subsequent mandate holders then ceased owing to the country's reservations concerning the mandate, although it continued to permit the Special Rapporteurs (with the exception of the fifth Special Rapporteur) to gain access to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>2</sup> This lack of cooperation has been regrettable, given that the full cooperation and engagement of the Government of Israel would positively contribute to the effective, even-handed and impartial implementation of the mandate. The Palestinian authorities have consistently extended their full cooperation to the current mandate holder.

8. As a former journalist and diplomat, the Special Rapporteur recognizes that any narrative is composed of two elements: fact and interpretation. Information contained in second-hand or third-hand reports will necessarily be subject to interpretation and be influenced by the standpoint of the individual or organization, and it can never replace the testimonies and the information gathered from face-to-face meetings with individuals, civil society representatives and government representatives in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israel.

9. The credibility of the Special Rapporteur's reports to the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly would also be enhanced by the ability of the mandate holder to duly and objectively reflect the official viewpoints and perspectives on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967. The Special Rapporteur therefore considers meetings with official Israeli and Palestinian interlocutors to be an important element of any country visit.

10. The Special Rapporteur will formally request the Governments of Israel and of the State of Palestine to facilitate a visit to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory before the end of 2014 with a view to preparing his first substantive report, to be submitted to the Human Rights Council at its twenty-eighth session, in March 2015.

11. It is hoped that Israel will, in good faith, extend the same level of cooperation to the current Special Rapporteur as it did to the first and, more recently, to the Special Rapporteur on adequate housing in 2012 and to the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression in 2011, in the context of their respective visits to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory (see A/HRC/22/46/Add.1, A/HRC/20/17/Add.2, E/CN.4/1994/14 and E/CN.4/1995/19). The Special Rapporteur counts on the facilitation of the Governments of Israel and the State of Palestine in this regard.

12. The Special Rapporteur also looks forward to receiving constructive responses from the Government of Israel to the conclusions and recommendations of his substantive reports to be submitted to the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly during the course of his term as mandate holder.

---

<sup>2</sup> Israel deported the Special Rapporteur serving from 2008 to 2014 upon his arrival at Ben Gurion airport in December 2008, as he attempted to enter Israel on mission, and refused to engage in any contact with him thereafter (see A/HRC/25/67).

IV. Consultations in Geneva

13. From 23 to 27 June 2014, the Special Rapporteur undertook a mission to Geneva for consultations with the States concerned. The primary purpose of the visit was to establish contacts and to discuss the implementation of the mandate with the Permanent Representative of Israel and the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations Office at Geneva.

14. The Special Rapporteur met the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine and the Permanent Representative of Israel on 24 and 26 June respectively, and held open and frank discussions with both of them in a spirit of transparency and mutual trust. The meeting with the Permanent Representative of Israel was particularly noteworthy because the Government of Israel had previously ceased all contact with the Special Rapporteur's predecessor for six years. The Permanent Representative of Israel informed the Special Rapporteur of his country's reservations regarding both the one-sided wording and open-ended nature of the mandate, which according to Israel prescribed the violations to be investigated by the Special Rapporteur. The Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine expressed his full support for the Special Rapporteur in the fulfilment of his mandate.

15. The Special Rapporteur also met other relevant interlocutors, including the President of the Human Rights Council, the Deputy United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, other staff members of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and representatives of non-governmental organizations, in order to apprise himself of the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to seek advice in relation to the effective fulfilment of the mandate. He also attended a discussion held under item 7 of the agenda of the twenty-sixth session of the Human Rights Council, entitled "Human rights situation in Palestine and other occupied Arab territories", to observe the proceedings.

16. During the aforementioned meetings, the Special Rapporteur expressed a desire to engage in constructive dialogue and the intention to begin working through the established human rights mechanisms available to special procedures mandate holders, including by way of confidential communications, in order to raise awareness of issues of concern pertaining to the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Special Rapporteur reiterated that his only interest was to offer an objective assessment of the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to make recommendations with a view to improving the situation of human rights for Palestinians presently living under continued Israeli military occupation. The Special Rapporteur noted that access to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory was an important starting point and expressed a strong interest in undertaking a country visit at the earliest opportunity.

17. A number of interlocutors informed the Special Rapporteur, during his consultations in Geneva, that Israel had conveyed assurances of its cooperation and engagement, including in terms of granting access to the mandate holder for a country visit.

V. Implementation and next steps

18. The intention of the Special Rapporteur in the present report is to provide an overview of the mandate, to address the issue of cooperation and to report briefly on the consultations with relevant stakeholders held in Geneva in June 2014. More time is needed to reflect upon the issues at hand and to gather adequate and credible first-hand information by way of a country visit before embarking on a substantive report.

19. Nevertheless, the Special Rapporteur is gravely concerned at the unfolding tragedy in the Gaza Strip. Since Israel launched military operation “Protective edge” during the night of 7 July 2014, the reported number of Palestinian civilians, including children, killed in the Gaza Strip as a result of Israeli airstrikes, tank and naval shelling on homes, hospitals and schools, including those run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and other civilian infrastructure has climbed rapidly with each passing day.<sup>3</sup> The death toll has risen further since the ground offensive, which began on 17 July.

20. The destruction of several thousands of homes has affected families throughout Gaza.<sup>3</sup> Hundreds of thousands of people have had to leave their homes to seek refuge in schools, government buildings, hospitals and the homes of relatives. The number of internally displaced persons hosted by UNRWA is reported to have already exceeded the equivalent figure during Israeli military operation “Cast lead” (27 December 2008-18 January 2009), which represented the deadliest escalation of violence recorded in Gaza since 1967. The gravity of the situation in the Gaza Strip is compounded by a shortage of fuel, electricity, water, medical supplies and other basic necessities for the civilian population.

21. The Special Rapporteur has received dozens of reports of alleged violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law by Israel, based on the monitoring and documentation work of courageous human rights defenders in Gaza, who are working tirelessly and at great risk to their own safety to bring these terrible cases to the attention of the world.

22. In the light of the gravity of the situation, the Special Rapporteur undertook an exceptional mission to Geneva on 23 July to attend the twenty-first special session of the Human Rights Council on the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. At the session he delivered a statement on behalf of the Coordination Committee of Special Procedures during which he urged that prompt, thorough, independent and effective investigations be conducted into all civilian deaths and injuries, as well as into the destruction of all civilian homes and vital infrastructure, caused by the Israeli military operation in Gaza, as well as by the rockets fired by Palestinian armed groups into Israel.

23. The Special Rapporteur has no illusions about the challenges ahead in the implementation of his mandate. Nevertheless, he will do his utmost to investigate and report on alleged Israeli violations impartially and objectively, with no preconceptions, on the basis of facts set against established international human rights law and international humanitarian law.

---

<sup>3</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Assistance, situation report on the Occupied Palestinian Territory of 7 August 2014. Available from www.ochaopt.org/documents/ocha\_opt\_sitrep\_07\_08\_2014\_.pdf.

24. In future reports, the Special Rapporteur will present conclusions and recommendations that may shed light on alleged human rights violations suffered by victims in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. He hopes that his future reports will contribute to bringing some form of accountability for such violations and, ultimately, to preventing their reoccurrence. He is firmly of the view that lasting peace can be built only on the foundations of human rights and human dignity.

25. The Special Rapporteur takes note of Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1, adopted on 23 July 2014, and looks forward to unhindered access to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to full cooperation with the respective authorities in the context of the implementation of his mandate.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
28 October 2014

Original: English

---

Sixty-ninth session

Agenda item 68 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights
situations and reports of special rapporteurs
and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

Corrigendum

Paragraph 5

For the existing text substitute

5. The mandate<sup>1</sup> is therefore clearly to investigate and report on violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law allegedly committed by Israel, the occupying Power, in the context of its prolonged occupation of the Palestinian territories since 1967.

---

<sup>1</sup> Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 60/251, the Human Rights Council has assumed the role and responsibilities of the Commission on Human Rights relating to the work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
25 September 2015

Original: English

---

Seventieth session

Agenda item 72 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights
situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Makarim Wibisono, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Makarim Wibisono, submits his second report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives, United Nations representatives and Palestinian officials in Amman, in connection with the mission of the Special Rapporteur to the region in June 2015. The report addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza.

Contents

	Page
I. Introduction . . . . .	3
II. Situation of human rights in Gaza . . . . .	5
A. Overview . . . . .	5
B. The blockade . . . . .	6
C. Right to health . . . . .	7
III. Situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem . . . . .	10
A. Settlements . . . . .	10
B. Excessive use of force . . . . .	13
C. Right to health . . . . .	15
D. East Jerusalem . . . . .	16
IV. Prisoners and detainees . . . . .	18
V. Accountability . . . . .	20
VI. Conclusions and recommendations . . . . .	23

I. Introduction

1. The present report is the third submitted by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Makarim Wibisono, and the second presented to the General Assembly.

2. As a result of continued lack of access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the Special Rapporteur conducted his second mission to the region in Amman where, from 9 to 12 June 2015, he met with victims, witnesses, non-governmental organizations, United Nations representatives, Palestinian officials and other interested parties to gather information on the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Special Rapporteur extends his gratitude to the Government of Jordan for its support to his mission.

3. Written submissions were received in addition to the oral submissions and information gathered since his previous reports (A/HRC/28/78, A/69/301 and Corr.1). The Special Rapporteur is extremely appreciative of the briefings, testimonies and documentation that were provided and which, to a large extent, have informed the present report. The issue of the human rights impact of business operating in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in settlements, remains of concern and may be taken up outside the scope of the present report, which is subject to limitations of space.

4. In the context of the mission, travel restrictions imposed by the Government of Israel affected the ability of some members of Palestinian non-governmental organizations to meet with the Special Rapporteur. Videoconferencing was used several times, including for meetings with Palestinian non-governmental representatives from Gaza. Challenges such as these typify the obstacles faced by Palestinians who wish to travel abroad, or even between Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation for the full cooperation with his mandate extended by the Government of the State of Palestine, including the agreement to facilitate access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

6. Despite a measure of positive interaction through the Permanent Mission of Israel to the United Nations Office in Geneva, including responses to a number of communications sent by the Special Rapporteur to the Government in which he raised human rights concerns, cooperation and access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory were not forthcoming. The Special Rapporteur encourages the Government of Israel to reinforce its engagement in bilateral dialogue, including through communications.

7. The Special Rapporteur stands ready to visit the Occupied Palestinian Territory and reiterates his request to the Government of Israel to grant him unencumbered access, including meetings with relevant Israeli officials. He continues to believe that cooperation with the mandate is in Israel's interest and would contribute to the effective and even-handed implementation of the mandate. The Special Rapporteur recalls the assurances of access made upon his appointment. It is deeply regrettable that, more than a year after his appointment, those assurances, have not been honoured. It is incumbent on Israel, as on any Member State, to extend cooperation to the holder of a mandate appointed by the United Nations. Should the prospects of gaining access remain unlikely, the Special Rapporteur will have to reconsider how the mandate can best be served.

8. As reflected in the present report, the Special Rapporteur considers that accurate reporting on allegations of Israeli violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in line with his mandate, sometimes requires that contextual factors, including the impacts of actors other than Israel, be reflected. The Special Rapporteur reiterates his unequivocal intention to report independently and objectively as long as he continues to hold the mandate.

9. At the outset, the Special Rapporteur wishes to make two overarching observations regarding the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The first concerns the extremely precarious circumstances in Gaza following the escalation of hostilities that took place between 7 July and 26 August 2014. During this period, Israel's military operation in Gaza included thousands of air strikes against Gaza and a ground operation by the Israel Defense Forces from 17 July to 5 August.<sup>1</sup> The Special Rapporteur is aware that Hamas and other Palestinian armed groups fired thousands of rockets and mortars towards Israel during the escalation of hostilities.<sup>2</sup> The Israeli military operation caused immense destruction, death and injury in Gaza and exacerbated an already fragile humanitarian situation, affecting a host of human rights. The current situation results from the cumulative effects of the slow strangulation of the Palestinian economy and livelihoods by the Israeli blockade maintained for over eight years; the deterioration of the physical and psychological well-being of the surviving population of Gaza following three successive escalations of hostilities in six years; and the devastated state of infrastructure, including essential utilities such as water and electricity, as well as housing.<sup>3</sup>

10. Several human rights organizations in Gaza have warned that the desperate situation in Gaza is creating fertile ground for the growth of extremism and violence. A further erosion of living conditions and human rights standards in Gaza will only continue to destabilize the situation. Rapid improvements in respect for international law, and for human rights in particular, are needed to avert this threat to the security of Palestinians and Israelis alike.<sup>4</sup>

11. The second broad concern is the continuing severe consequences for the human rights of Palestinians resulting from the existence and expansion of Israeli settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Settlement-related impacts include forced eviction and forcible transfer of Palestinians in connection with land

<sup>1</sup> See the report of the independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1 (A/HRC/29/52 and A/HRC/29/CRP.4).

<sup>2</sup> Impacts reported by Israel include six civilian fatalities in Israel. Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs, The 2014 Gaza Conflict (7 July-26 August 2014): Factual and Legal Aspects, executive summary, May 2015, paras. 31-36.

<sup>3</sup> Engaging provisions of international human rights law including articles 6, 11, 12 and 13 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and articles 6, 9 and 12 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

<sup>4</sup> "We must not fail in Gaza", joint statement by 30 international aid agencies issued on 26 February 2015.

confiscations; infringements on the rights to housing, water, health and freedom of movement; settler violence; and excessive use of force by Israeli security forces.<sup>5</sup>

12. Several Palestinian government officials and civil society representatives characterized 2014 as a devastating year. Many highlighted the increased number of fatalities and injuries among Palestinians. The tragic escalation of hostilities in Gaza raised numbers exponentially, while deaths and injuries also rose sharply in the West Bank, including as a result of encounters with Israeli security forces.

13. With respect to the right to self-determination under common article 1 of the International Covenants on Human Rights, information provided left the Special Rapporteur gravely concerned that the impacts of settlements, including on the territorial continuity of occupied Palestinian land and on the environment and natural resources, had reached a point where much of the damage might be irreversible.

14. In the context of the long-standing Israeli-Palestinian conflict, there is a distinct risk that relative inaction by the international community will facilitate a continuation of the destructive cycle of human rights violations and violence. On the basis of information received, the Special Rapporteur is convinced that the situation across the Occupied Palestinian Territory is indeed worsening and that violations of the human rights of Palestinians living under Israeli occupation are being further entrenched.

15. The general failure of accountability for past violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is a troubling indication that inaction will only lead to more injustices. Countless United Nations resolutions and reports attest to a situation that involves a persistent disregard for international law, including human rights law. The continuation of this reality, and the implications for future generations, cannot be tacitly accepted.

II. Situation of human rights in Gaza

A. Overview

16. It is an indication of the slow progress in the reconstruction of Gaza that as of June 2015, not a single house that was totally destroyed in the previous year's hostilities had been rebuilt, despite the Gaza Reconstruction Mechanism brokered by the United Nations. A year on from the complete destruction of, or severe damage to, approximately 19,000 housing units, some 100,000 people remained displaced.<sup>6</sup> In July 2015, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process reported on further Israeli-Palestinian coordination to allow Palestinians in Gaza to purchase construction material for the reconstruction of totally destroyed homes and for new construction.<sup>7</sup>

17. Many pledges made at the International Conference on Palestine: Reconstructing Gaza, held in Cairo in October 2014, remain unfulfilled. However, it is critical that $3.5 billion of the pledged amount be received to alleviate the situation in Gaza and improve access to basic utilities such as water, sanitation and electricity, through reconstruction of homes and civil infrastructure.

<sup>5</sup> See note 3 above.

<sup>6</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, "Internal displacement in the context of the 2014 hostilities", Gaza One Year On: Humanitarian Concerns in the Aftermath of the 2014 Hostilities, July 2015. Available from: gaza.ochaopt.org.

<sup>7</sup> Security Council briefing on the situation in the Middle East, 23 July 2015.

18. In the context of the effects of the blockade, the 2014 hostilities compounded the already dire situation of water and sanitation infrastructure and further destabilized the supply of electricity.<sup>8</sup> As described by one Gaza-based organization, “Gazans wake up every day to wash with salt water and sleep at the end of the day without electricity”. Several interlocutors referred to Gaza being in a state of “de-development”. An already high unemployment rate soared following the end of hostilities and had reached 43 per cent at the end of the year.<sup>9</sup> Everyone has a right to an adequate standard of living, but people in Gaza are left struggling for basic necessities, without hope and without prospects.

19. The access restricted areas imposed by Israel affect livelihoods and frequent reports indicate excessive use of force by Israeli forces in their enforcement. The exact limits of these no-go zones, adjoining the border with Israel and at sea off the Gaza coast, are uncertain.<sup>10</sup> Agricultural land, schools and homes several hundred metres from the fence with Israel are affected. At sea, fishermen are prohibited from accessing waters beyond 6 nautical miles, although a number of incidents have occurred within that limit.<sup>11</sup> According to the Protection Cluster, the number of incidents in which fishermen were shot at and arbitrarily detained increased during 2014 as compared with the previous year.<sup>12</sup>

20. The impact of the 2014 hostilities on the right to education continues to be felt by children in Gaza.<sup>13</sup> The Palestinian Ministry of Education noted that several hundred schools, including public schools and schools run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), as well as higher education facilities and kindergartens, were affected. Further repairs and reconstruction continue to be needed. The Special Rapporteur was relieved to hear that a severe funding crisis was alleviated sufficiently to enable UNRWA schools in Gaza to open the school year on 24 August 2015.<sup>14</sup>

B. The blockade

21. The blockade imposed by Israel in 2007 has had a negative impact on a host of human rights of Palestinians in Gaza, including the rights to education, health, work, housing and freedom of movement. Statements made by the Government of <sup>8</sup> The Gaza power plant provided about one third of Gaza’s electricity before it was hit by several Israeli attacks in July 2014 (A/HRC/29/52/CRP.4, paras. 450-455 and 580-584).

<sup>9</sup> International Monetary Fund, “West Bank and Gaza: report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee”, 18 May 2015, p. 5.

<sup>10</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, Humanitarian Bulletin: Monthly Report, May 2015, p. 10.

<sup>11</sup> The Oslo Accords provide for Palestinian use of 20 nautical miles.

<sup>12</sup> “Update on access restricted areas, in the Gaza Strip, January-December 2014”, issued by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) on behalf of the Protection Cluster.

<sup>13</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, “Repair and reconstruction of schools in Gaza”, Gaza One Year On, April 2015.

<sup>14</sup> Statement by UNRWA, 19 August 2015. Available from: www.unrwa.org/newsroom/official-statements/unrwa-declares-school-year-open.

Israel upon imposing the blockade referred to control by Hamas over Gaza following the elections and rockets fired from Gaza towards Israel.<sup>15</sup> In maintaining the blockade, Israel continues to raise security concerns. The blockade severely restricts imports and exports abroad and transfers of goods between the West Bank and Gaza and was also explicitly intended to “reduce the supply of fuel and electricity”.<sup>16</sup> In addition, Israel further tightened restrictions on the movement of Palestinians in and out of Gaza.

22. The blockade constitutes collective punishment of the people of Gaza, contrary to article 33 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention) (see A/69/327 and A/HRC/28/78). In addition, in terms of Israeli and Palestinian security, while the blockade has been in force, three escalations of hostilities have taken place. It is clear that the main result of the blockade has been to undermine the human rights of the people in Gaza and to intensify their suffering. The Special Rapporteur remains unconvinced by any security-based argument against lifting the blockade in the light of the unconscionable harm, in contravention of international law, its continuation is causing in Gaza. Other measures that are in accordance with its obligations under international law, such as screening goods, should be employed by Israel to address security concerns without severely eroding the human rights of Palestinians and, as noted by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, threatening the economic viability of Gaza (TD/B/62/3, para. 60).

23. In imposing the blockade, the Government of Israel stated that it sought to take into account “humanitarian aspects relevant to the Gaza Strip” and “to avoid a humanitarian crisis”.<sup>17</sup> It is now clear that the blockade is a primary factor holding Gaza fast in its current humanitarian crisis, with many people displaced in 2014 still without homes to return to, electrical power cuts of 12-16 hours daily,<sup>18</sup> more than 90 per cent of the water unfit for human consumption, an estimated 80 per cent of its people receiving aid and a 39 per cent poverty rate. Efforts undertaken by Israelis and Palestinians to coordinate efforts towards reconstruction have been insufficient to address the issues; Israel holds the master key to relieving the situation by lifting the blockade and the Special Rapporteur urges Israel to do so.

C. Right to health

24. Some 2,250 Palestinians were killed in Gaza during the 2014 hostilities, almost two thirds of whom were civilians (A/HRC/29/52, para. 20), and it is estimated that 10 per cent of the more than 11,200 Palestinians injured will be permanently disabled, including up to a thousand children (A/69/926-S/2015/409, para. 88). A member of an international medical organization observed to the Special Rapporteur that, in the aftermath of the hostilities, “Many severely injured civilians were desperately trying to rebuild their lives but were faced with the stark

<sup>15</sup> Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Security Cabinet declares Gaza hostile territory”, 19 September 2007.

<sup>16</sup> Ibid.

<sup>17</sup> See note 15 above.

<sup>18</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, “The humanitarian impact of Gaza’s electricity and fuel crisis”, Gaza One Year On, July 2015.

reality of total immobility, at least temporarily until their treatment and physiotherapy were completed, little shelter and no source of financial income.”

25. The 2014 escalation of hostilities was unprecedented in duration, fatalities and injuries, and scale of destruction in Gaza. However, its impacts on the health of the population cannot be viewed in isolation from the impacts of previous escalations and with previous Israeli military operations in 2008/09 and 2012 that resulted in thousands of casualties as well as destruction of, and damage to, homes and civil infrastructure. The health situation is also deeply strongly influenced by the crippling effects of the blockade on the economy and on the state of essential infrastructure in Gaza. A Palestinian doctor at a major hospital in Gaza assessed health care in Gaza as “getting worse day after day”, citing factors including the blockade, poverty and unemployment, and noting that “most if not all health indicators are deteriorating”.<sup>19</sup>

26. A representative of the Palestinian Ministry of Health spoke of the “unseen effects” on the population, especially children, of repeated hostilities. According to one international medical organization, even prior to the events of 2014, “many children in Gaza suffered from post-traumatic stress syndrome as a result of previous attacks and political violence”. Following the hostilities, almost 425,000 children were estimated to be in need of immediate psychosocial support after having experienced war, including having fled or lived through attacks on their homes and suffering injuries themselves and the death or injury of family and friends.<sup>20</sup> The communities in Gaza that need to nurture these children back to health following physical and psychological trauma are themselves devastated.

27. Significant public health risks result from the living conditions of the substantial number of displaced persons, including contaminated water and sewage and wastewater flowing into the environment because of poor and damaged sanitation infrastructure, increasing the risk of disease.<sup>21</sup> Moreover, thousands of explosive remnants of war in the rubble of destroyed homes and other infrastructure remain latent threats (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, para. 575).

28. The Health Cluster in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has noted that “from day one of the [2014] conflict, health facilities have not been spared from destruction”.<sup>22</sup> Thirteen public and private health facilities were destroyed and 104 facilities, including hospitals, clinics and pharmacies, were damaged during the escalation of conflict.<sup>23</sup> The Special Rapporteur received detailed information on several cases alleging violations by Israel of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in attacks on hospitals and ambulances and obstruction of medical evacuations. Rehabilitation of medical facilities has been slowed by lack of construction material and shortage of funding. Damages for loss

<sup>19</sup> Interview conducted by an international medical organization approximately one year after the 2014 hostilities.

<sup>20</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Bulletin: Monthly Report, October 2014.

<sup>21</sup> Health Cluster, Gaza Strip: Joint Health Sector Assessment Report, September 2014, section 5.8.

<sup>22</sup> Ibid., section 4.1; on coordination in the health sector, see section 6.4.

<sup>23</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, “Reconstruction of health sector facilities impaired by shortages of materials and funding”, Gaza One Year On, April 2015.

of infrastructure and equipment for the health sector alone have been estimated at $23,983,168.<sup>24</sup>

29. The lack of clean water makes it difficult to sterilize medical equipment and the unreliable electricity supply negatively affects sensitive medical equipment. About 50 per cent of the medical equipment is not functioning for various reasons, including the inability to obtain spare parts for or adequately maintain the equipment. The Palestinian Ministry of Health pointed out to the Special Rapporteur its efforts to supply thousands of litres of fuel every month to power life-saving equipment such as dialysis machines. Chronic shortages of medical supplies, reported in mid-2015, included shortages of about 30 per cent of essential medicines and almost 40 per cent of medical disposables such as gloves and needles. According to article 55 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, as the occupying Power, Israel “has the duty of ensuring the ... medical supplies of the population ... if the resources of the occupied territory are inadequate”.

30. It is in the context of damaged and destroyed facilities and severe shortages of equipment and medicines that the health sector in Gaza must cope with the increased caseload of physical and psychological traumas resulting from the hostilities. International aid<sup>25</sup> and the tenacity of Palestinian health workers are critical factors keeping the health sector in Gaza afloat. Lack of medical supplies and unpaid salaries of more than 4,500 health workers in Gaza, who have generally continued to work, are linked to the financial and political situation of Palestinian authorities in the West Bank and Gaza, which in turn is negatively affected by the blockade and other occupation-related policies, including the withholding of tax funds by Israel.<sup>26</sup> While coordination, including of foreign aid, salaries and supplies, are also challenges facing Palestinian authorities, the Health Cluster in the Occupied Palestinian Territory observes that “it will not be possible to effectively rebuild the Gaza health sector while the Israeli blockade remains in place”.<sup>27</sup>

31. The state of the health sector in Gaza drives referrals by the Palestinian Ministry of Health and hospitals in Gaza for specialized care in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Israel, as well as abroad. The positive efforts by Israeli coordinators (Coordinator of Government Activities in the Territories Unit) to facilitate individual medical transfers at the Erez crossing with Israel have been noted.<sup>28</sup> Figures provided by WHO show an increase of 33 per cent in applications for permits for medical treatment between 2013 and 2014.<sup>29</sup> However, the percentage of permits to cross through Erez for medical treatment that have been approved by the Israeli authorities decreased from 88.7 per cent in 2013 to 82.4 per cent in 2014 and further to 81.6 per cent in 2015. The Special Rapporteur is concerned about the relatively high percentage of persons who are denied access to appropriate health care outside Gaza by Israeli-imposed movement restrictions, <sup>24</sup> World Health Organization (WHO) briefing, June 2015, referencing the Detailed Needs Assessment and Recovery Strategy for the Health Subsector, April 2015.

<sup>25</sup> WHO, “Report of a field assessment of health conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory”, document WHO-EM/OPT/006/E, pp. 15-16.

<sup>26</sup> Susan Power and Nada Kiswanson van Hooydonk, Divide and Conquer: A Legal Analysis of Israel's 2014 Military Offensive Against the Gaza Strip (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2015).

<sup>27</sup> Gaza Strip: Joint Health Sector Assessment Report, p. 4.

<sup>28</sup> WHO, document WHO-EM/OPT/006/E, p. 9.

<sup>29</sup> A contributing factor is the decline in referrals to Egypt since the restricted access/closure of the Rafah crossing in 2013. Ibid.

especially as the dire situation of the health sector in Gaza is to a large extent due to Israeli measures.

32. While both Palestinians and Israelis suffered tragic losses during the escalations of conflict in recent years, the people who undeniably bore the brunt of the hostilities in terms of the volume of fatalities, injuries and sheer destruction still cannot heal. It is a fact that the blockade keeps the Gaza health sector in a state of dependency, on crutches donated by the international community.

III. Situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem

A. Settlements

33. Israeli policies and practices related to settlements continue to be central to most violations of the human rights of Palestinians in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and put immense pressure on Palestinians to leave their homes and lands, especially in Area C and East Jerusalem, where most settlements are concentrated. Reportedly, in 2014, construction was started on some 1,300 housing units. Although this was less than in the previous year, the number of tenders issued in 2014 for new settlement construction (almost 4,500 units) was greater than in previous years, indicating further expansion in the future.<sup>30</sup>

34. Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention prohibits the transfer by the occupying Power of its civilians into occupied territory. By the same article, individual or mass forcible transfers of protected persons are prohibited, except if their security or imperative military reasons requires evacuation within the occupied territory. Thus, the illegality under international humanitarian law of Israeli settlements and forcible transfers of Palestinians is well established.

35. Dividing the West Bank into Areas A, B, and C under the Oslo Accords entailed a graduating level of Israeli/Palestinian control, from mainly Palestinian control in Area A to full Israeli control in Area C, which covers more than 60 per cent of the West Bank. The Palestinian Ministry of the Interior informed the Special Rapporteur of cases of emergencies, such as fires or traffic accidents, especially in Area C, where Israeli authorities did not act and prevented the Palestinian civil defence from providing assistance.

36. While the exact number of settlers living in the West Bank is unknown, estimates tend to range from 500,000 to 600,000 people, about one third of them in East Jerusalem. When compared with the Palestinian population of some 320,000 in East Jerusalem and some 300,000 in Area C, and the almost exclusive control exercised by Israel over matters including law enforcement, planning, water allocation and construction, the vulnerability of Palestinians in these areas is apparent.

37. The destruction of homes and livelihood structures is one factor leading Palestinians to leave their land and move to areas where Israel exerts less control in

---

<sup>30</sup> Information provided by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, referencing figures from the Israeli Central Bureau of Statistics for building starts and Peace Now for tenders.

Areas A and B. The Israeli planning and zoning regime has been widely criticized as discriminatory against Palestinians. The majority of land in Area C has been designated either specifically for settlements or as State land, closed military zones, nature reserves or for other purposes. While 30 per cent of the remaining land is ostensibly available for construction by Palestinians, it is reported that as building depends on prior approval of plans by Israel, in effect, less than 1 per cent of the land is available for that purpose. Consequently, many Palestinians are left with no option but to build without the required permit.

38. The existence or lack of a building permit does not alter the fact that Israel is prohibited from destroying private Palestinian property.<sup>31</sup> According to information received, between June 2014 and June 2015, 524 Palestinian structures, including homes, schools, water cisterns and animal pens, were demolished by Israeli authorities in Area C and East Jerusalem. Reportedly, in the first half of 2015, there was a 37 per cent increase in the destruction of donor-funded structures provided to Palestinians as humanitarian assistance. Demolitions give rise to a host of human rights concerns, including violations of the right to an adequate standard of living, including food and housing, and the rights to work and education.

39. Regrettably, there appears to be little legal protection for Palestinians facing demolition orders. The village of Susiya, in Hebron Governorate, is a case in point. All of its 170 structures located in Area C,<sup>32</sup> from homes to animal shelters, schools and latrines, have received demolition orders. While the plan to further develop the nearby settlement of Susya has been accepted, attempts by the Palestinian villagers to gain approval from the Israeli authorities for planning schemes, a prerequisite for applying for building permits, have failed. Even while a petition against the rejection of the village's planning scheme was pending before the Israeli High Court of Justice, the Court refused to order an interim injunction freezing demolitions.

40. The disparity between the amounts of water allocated to Palestinians and to settlers continues to be a central factor in settlement expansion and displacement of Palestinians. On average, Israeli settlers consume 369 litres per capita per day for domestic use, while Palestinians consume 70 litres (A/68/513, para. 38). Interlocutors highlighted the fact that settlements tend to be located close to water sources. A youth group from the Jordan Valley explained that Israel controls most water resources, including West Bank aquifers and wells, and noted that Israelis drilled deep wells with powerful pumps, depleting local Palestinian wells and springs. According to the non-governmental organization NGO Monitor, the allocation of water is in line with the Oslo Accords and water projects are subject to approval by the Israeli/Palestinian Joint Water Committee. However, as reported by the Secretary-General, despite the existence of this committee, "in practice ... the Israeli water management system and policies in place discriminate against Palestinians" (A/68/513, para. 38). This corresponds with information received that settlements, especially in the fertile Jordan Valley, enjoy an ample water supply and can grow water-intensive crops, while yields from Palestinian agriculture in the area are negatively affected by limited access to water. In addition, the Palestinian Ministry of Agriculture informed the Special Rapporteur of destruction and demolitions of agricultural assets, including wells and irrigation lines, by settlers and by Israeli authorities.

---

<sup>31</sup> This prohibition (article 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention) applies unless an absolute necessity for military operations exists.

<sup>32</sup> Part of the village is in Area B.

41. A particularly vulnerable group, highlighted by the Special Rapporteur in a previous report (A/HRC/28/78) and a press release,<sup>33</sup> is the Bedouin communities in Area C. Plans by the Israeli Civil Administration provide for the eviction and transfer of individuals and families from some 46 communities resident in the central West Bank, including the East Jerusalem periphery, to three Government-designated sites in the Jerusalem and Jericho Governorates of the West Bank. The three sites are Fasayil, Nuweima and Al-Jabal, the last associated with health concerns owing to its location next to a refuse dump. Reportedly, on 5 May 2015, representatives of the Israeli Civil Administration entered Abu Nwar village and sought to persuade residents to sign a transfer agreement for their “relocation” to Al-Jabal, at the same time allegedly informing residents that they would be moved whether they signed or not.

42. On 19 August 2015, United Nations officials called for an immediate freeze on demolitions in the West Bank after 22 structures were demolished in 4 of the 46 communities affected by the plan. The strategic implications and the link with the E1 settlement project were highlighted: “These demolitions are occurring in parallel with settlement expansion. The relocation plan for these communities would effectively remove Palestinian presence in and around the planned E1 settlement project”.<sup>34</sup>

43. A representative from Khan Al Ahmar, a village affected by the August 2015 demolitions, briefed the Special Rapporteur, explaining that during April 2015, an unmanned aerial drone was observed several times a week carrying out surveillance of the community. Residents also felt that they were being watched by settlers who entered the community, sometimes shining their vehicle headlights at homes during the night. The combined effect of the transfer plan, a lack of genuine consultations, threats and implementation of demolition orders, restrictions on movement, surveillance and settler violence creates a coercive environment that puts pressure on Palestinians to move. While forced eviction and forcible transfer are contrary to international law, communities face the stark reality that resisting Israeli demands means enduring infringements of their rights to security of the person, health, freedom from arbitrary interference with privacy, family and home, freedom of movement and residence and the right to an adequate standard of living for themselves and their families, including housing, water and sanitation.

44. The Special Rapporteur is deeply dismayed that despite clear, repeated and unequivocal calls on Israel by the international community, including the Secretary-General (see A/69/348), not to contravene international humanitarian law and international human rights law by implementing these plans, they are being advanced, with devastating consequences for the affected communities.

45. The Special Rapporteur was also briefed on settlement expansion in the Gush Etzion bloc, which affects several villages in the Bethlehem area. The planned route of the wall, which has been declared illegal by the International Court of Justice,<sup>35</sup> runs approximately 56 km into Bethlehem Governorate. During his visit, the Special Rapporteur was stunned to see that in 2015 the wall threatens to cut straight through the length of Wadi Fukin village, located in Areas B and C and home to a majority refugee population. In 2014, Israeli authorities confiscated 1,500 dunums — half of its remaining land — from this farming village, famous for its irrigation infrastructure.

---

<sup>33</sup> “UN human rights expert urges Israel to abandon plans to transfer Bedouins in the occupied West Bank”, 5 June 2015.

<sup>34</sup> UNRWA, “UN officials call for an immediate demolitions freeze in the West Bank”, 19 August 2015.

46. Wadi Fukin is one of four villages with a total population of about 22,000 Palestinians affected by three nearby settlements of approximately 50,000 Israelis. According to UNRWA, groundwork for the construction of 218 housing units for the settlements on land seized from Wadi Fukin is under way. The Special Rapporteur saw photographs showing the Betar Illit settlement towering over Wadi Fukin in the valley below, whereas before the year 2000 the hill was bare. He also saw photographic and video documentation of sewage from the settlement flowing into the village and was briefed by the village mayor on how land and water sources had been contaminated, affecting produce which farmers could no longer sell. Reportedly, the contamination also led to diseases among the villagers. UNRWA reported numerous incidents of harassment of Wadi Fukin residents, including armed settlers visiting irrigation pools and intimidating villagers, noting that “the Israeli authorities persistently failed to prevent or reduce” such incidents.

47. The phenomenon of settler violence is another factor contributing to displacement of Palestinians. The Special Rapporteur is aware of high tensions between settlers and Palestinians and abhors any violent attack. The arson attack on the Dawabsha family home in the West Bank village of Duma on 31 July 2015, which led to the death of a toddler and his parents, leaving his four-year-old brother an orphan, appears to be a tragic consequence of settlement advancement and lack of accountability for settler violence, as well as the illegal actions of the perpetrator.

48. During the first six months of 2015, a monthly average of 7 incidents of Palestinian casualties and 11 incidents of damage to property as a result of settler violence was recorded. In 2014, there were 331 recorded incidents of settler violence against persons or property.<sup>36</sup>

B. Excessive use of force

49. Heightened tensions and clashes in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, in mid-2014 exacerbated existing concerns over excessive use of force against Palestinians by Israeli security forces (A/HRC/28/78, paras. 41-47). Tensions spiked following the murders of Israeli and Palestinian youths in June and July 2014 and in the context of the escalation of hostilities in Gaza. Fifty-six Palestinians were reported killed in the context of confrontations with Israeli forces in the West Bank in 2014, which were especially violent in the months of June, July and August, and close to 6,000 were injured.<sup>37</sup> The total number of fatalities in 2014 was double the figure of 2013 and more than six times as high as in 2012. Fatality figures from the first quarter of 2015 indicate a return to levels comparable with those of previous years, although serious concerns remain over fatalities and serious injuries resulting from actions by Israeli security forces, including increased use of live ammunition during protests in circumstances that appear to pose no imminent threat.<sup>38</sup>

<sup>35</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I. C. J. Reports 2004, p. 136.

<sup>36</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs office in the occupied Palestinian territory, Humanitarian Bulletin: Monthly Report, July 2015, annex.

<sup>37</sup> Ibid., December 2014, p. 9.

50. In one incident reported to the Special Rapporteur, on 27 February 2015, during the annual “Open Shuhada Street” non-violent protest in Hebron, Israeli security forces allegedly used live ammunition as well as tear gas, stun grenades and rubber bullets. Among those injured were six Palestinians, who sustained injuries from live ammunition. UNRWA reported that it “continues to regularly document cases of Palestinian demonstrators being injured by live ammunition employed by Israel security forces”. Refugee camps located close to settlements and the wall, areas with a heavy Israeli security presence, are particularly exposed. UNRWA highlighted concern over incidents involving Israeli security forces in the Jalazone refugee camp, including cases of teenagers severely injured by live bullets. In one reported case, on 18 March 2015, during a demonstration in Jalazone refugee camp, 21-year-old Ali Safi was shot with live ammunition allegedly fired by an Israeli soldier from a distance of approximately 70 metres; he later succumbed to his injuries.

51. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned about the use of so-called “less-lethal weapons”, which can be, and have been, used with fatal consequences. Several interlocutors mentioned the case of the Palestinian physician in Abu Dis who died in May 2014 after inhaling tear gas reportedly fired by Israeli security forces.

52. According to the Association for Civil Rights in Israel, in mid-2014, Israeli officers began using a new, harder kind of “sponge” bullet during riots and demonstrations in East Jerusalem. Testimonies collected in 10 such cases between July 2014 and May 2015 documented serious injuries. Although regulations stipulate that sponge bullets may not be used against minors, among the victims in these cases were six children, including one child as young as six. Their injuries reportedly included facial fractures and loss of an eye.

53. One of these incidents occurred in March 2015 in East Jerusalem, when a boy of about 12 years of age was allegedly shot by Israeli security forces with a sponge bullet while on his way home from school. In the affidavit provided by Al-Haq, the boy relates that he hid between parked cars as at least 25 shots were fired by Israeli officers to prevent the schoolchildren from approaching parts of the wall that were under construction. After he emerged from his hiding place the boy was hit by a shot in the left eye, which had to be surgically removed.

54. The Special Rapporteur strongly reiterates his recommendation that Israel ensure compliance with the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials of 1990. There must be no impunity for excessive use of force.

55. The use of so-called “skunk water” in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem, has a worrying impact on rights, including health and work, and the freedoms of expression and peaceful assembly.<sup>39</sup> This foul-smelling liquid, composed of water, yeast and sodium bicarbonate, can cause skin and eye irritation, nausea and abdominal pain.<sup>40</sup> The lingering sewer-like odour is also a source of embarrassment to those whose person or property is sprayed. While it was designed to disperse crowds by spraying from a distance, sources describe skunk being sprayed by Israeli forces directly at homes and businesses, that is, not to disperse crowds, but in an apparently punitive manner. During tense periods between July and December 2014, the Association for Civil Rights in Israel described how “streets in almost every neighbourhood of East Jerusalem had been covered in tremendous amounts of skunk liquid. Most of the liquid was aimed towards residential properties, cars and shops”.

<sup>38</sup> On the increased use of live ammunition, including in “crowd-control” situations, see also A/HRC/29/52, para. 70.

<sup>39</sup> Who Profits Research Center, Proven Effective: Crowd Control Weapons in the Occupied

C. Right to health

56. Restrictions on movement imposed by Israel are a central obstacle to access by Palestinians to health-care services in urban centres, especially in East Jerusalem, where several hospitals are located. Area C land, where movement is especially restricted by checkpoints, road gates and roadblocks, often surrounds “islands” of Areas A and B land.

57. Palestinians living in Area C are especially vulnerable to negative impacts on their right to health. This includes many rural Bedouin communities who typically also have high poverty rates and lack local health facilities. Access is also especially difficult in the old city of Hebron, where Palestinians live in close proximity to a large settler population. A survey undertaken by WHO in 2011 of 102 households in the old city of Hebron showed that 63 per cent of them had to cross Israeli checkpoints to access health services. One Hebron resident described to the Special Rapporteur his personal experiences of Palestinian ambulances either being prevented from entering the area to attend to emergencies or experiencing long delays owing to the need to coordinate Israeli agreement for access.

58. Physical barriers to access to health are accompanied by procedural barriers. Following referral, under the permit regime Palestinians who need to access health services, which are often located in East Jerusalem, must seek Israeli approval through Palestinian Coordination offices. According to WHO, about 20 per cent of patients who apply are denied access, either because of refusal of their requests or lack of response. A 2014 study revealed that 4 in 10 patients and those accompanying them who were denied permits by Israeli authorities were rejected for “security reasons” or with no reason given. Also affected by the permit regime are more than 1,000 Palestinian health workers who live elsewhere in the West Bank but work in East Jerusalem and are regularly required to apply for permits to access their workplace.

59. Other impacts of occupation policies and practices on the right to health include injuries and fatalities related to settler violence and encounters with Israel security forces. Concerns were also raised about the health implications of pollution of Palestinian crops by untreated waste from settlements and from Israeli factories. The Palestinian Ministry of Environment, among others, expressed serious concern about hazardous waste, including chemical materials and electronic rubble, from Israel and settlements being “dumped” in the West Bank.

---

Palestinian Territories (Tel Aviv, April 2014).

<sup>40</sup> See www.skunk-skunk.com/image/users/121755/ftp/my\_files/MSDS\_Skunk.pdf?id=3225191.

60. Nearly half a century of occupation and practices related thereto entailing humiliation and loss of control over activities of daily life have also had a detrimental impact on the mental health and well-being of the Palestinian population. People live in the climate of insecurity fostered by encroaching settlements, threats and execution of home demolitions, settler violence, excessive use of force by Israeli forces, the wall, restrictions on movement and on access to education, work, land and water, along with the power exerted by the Israeli military justice system over children and adults in the community.

D. East Jerusalem

61. East Jerusalem represents Palestinian aspirations for a future capital of the State of Palestine and fulfilment of the right to self-determination. Although Israel annexed East Jerusalem, in contravention of international law (Security Council resolutions 476 (1980) and 478 (1980)), representatives of the Negotiations Affairs Department of the Palestine Liberation Organization, described East Jerusalem, in the context of a two-State solution, as the political, socioeconomic, cultural and spiritual heart of Palestine, geographically linking the northern and southern parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

62. The ability of Palestinians to maintain their “permanent residency” status in East Jerusalem is continually challenged. According to Palestinian representatives, the Palestinian population in East Jerusalem was 36 per cent of the total population of Jerusalem at the end of 2014. Several interlocutors described the Israeli policy of maintaining a demographic ratio in Jerusalem of about 70 per cent Jewish and 30 per cent Palestinian; the Local Outline Plan — Jerusalem 2000 indicates a ratio of 60:40. This plan, originally proposed in 2004, notably sets out policies for the whole of Jerusalem. It is a troubling indication of the mindset of the Israeli administration that there is no reference to Palestinians and East Jerusalem in the plan, which refers to “Arab residents in the eastern part of the city”.<sup>41</sup>

63. Since 1967, the residency status of more than 14,000 Palestinians was reportedly revoked by Israel, with about half of that number revoked between 2007 and 2013. Under the “centre of life” policy Palestinians must continually prove their residency, by providing documentation such as property tax receipts or water and telephone bills to the Israeli Ministry of the Interior to preserve their status. According to the Palestinian Ministry on Jerusalem Affairs, the financial situation of many in East Jerusalem is strained, with 72 Israeli taxes levied on Palestinian residents. In addition, residency status is not automatically conferred through marriage or to children of permanent residents. As a result, a number of Palestinians live in East Jerusalem without formal status and, consequently, the accompanying entitlements. According to Al-Haq, between 2002 and mid-2015, the Israeli Ministry of the Interior rejected more than 3,300 of some 11,000 applications for family reunification in East Jerusalem. In addition, about a quarter of child registration applications were denied by Israeli authorities between 2002 and March 2015, and several thousand Palestinian children are without residency status.

---

<sup>41</sup> See http://pcc-jer.org/arabic/Publication/jerusalem\_master\_plan/engchapt/Intro.pdf.

64. Because of Israeli settlements, the wall and the permit regime, East Jerusalem is increasingly being isolated from the rest of the West Bank. Some 140 km of the wall are reportedly within the municipality of Jerusalem. This has the effect of cutting segments of East Jerusalem communities off from the rest of the city, leaving them on the West Bank side of the wall and dependent on access, through Israeli checkpoints, to essential services such as health and education. Several West Bank communities and East Jerusalem suburbs that were previously closely connected to the city now find themselves “walled out”.

65. Israeli planning and zoning policies restrict the ability of Palestinians in East Jerusalem to build. Within the municipal borders of Jerusalem as defined by Israel, only 13 per cent of the land area of East Jerusalem is available for Palestinian use following the allocation of 35 per cent for settlements, 30 per cent left “unplanned” and 22 per cent reserved as “green areas”. Even if land were available, purchasing a permit to build or expand housing is beyond the means of most people, forcing many Palestinians to build without a permit and risk demolition by Israeli authorities. According to Palestinian representatives, an estimated 220,000 Israeli settlers live in some 55,000 housing units in East Jerusalem while about 321,000 Palestinians live in some 50,000 housing units. The presence of Israeli settlements within East Jerusalem creates a tense environment and increases the risk of settler violence.

66. In addition to the threat of demolition, Palestinian homes are also at risk of being taken over by settlers. With respect to one such case (see A/HRC/30/27, case No. ISR 1/2015), the Special Rapporteur, in a joint communication of 30 April 2015, raised concerns with the Government of Israel over an order to evict a Palestinian family from their home in the old city of East Jerusalem. The order had been issued following a legal challenge by settlers claiming that the family had abandoned the property. It appeared that the family was not afforded due process to refute the claim and that attempts were made to forcibly evict the family, contrary to international humanitarian law and international human rights law. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no response has been received, and he urges the Government of Israel to refrain from such forced evictions.

67. Linked to the discriminatory planning and zoning is the shortage of some 1,500 classrooms for Palestinian pupils, which forces Palestinian schools to rent apartments to serve as classrooms.<sup>42</sup> Children who are residents of East Jerusalem are entitled to free education under Israeli law, but several thousand children are not enrolled in school. Some parents pay for private education owing to overcrowded and substandard facilities in Palestinian schools; others enrol their children in Israeli-run schools where they must follow the Israeli curriculum. Despite Israel’s obligation, under article 50 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and article 13 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, to provide access to education, several Palestinian-run schools and facilities such as playgrounds are threatened with demolition orders or cannot be built because they have not been granted a building permit.

68. The Special Rapporteur is gravely concerned about policies linked to Israeli settlements and aims to achieve a particular demographic balance in Jerusalem. These work to stifle the natural growth of the Palestinian population in East

---

<sup>42</sup> Figure provided by the Palestinian Ministry of Education. See also <http://www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/Jerusalem-Infographic-Acri-English-3.png>.

Jerusalem, eliminate the possibility for most Palestinians of moving there and put pressure on Palestinians to leave. They affect all aspects of Palestinian life, including the rights to freedom of movement, adequate housing, access to education and health services, respect for family life and freedom from discrimination.

IV. Prisoners and detainees

69. According to Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, as of April 2015, 414 Palestinians were being held under administrative detention, without charge or trial, under six-monthly orders which can be renewed indefinitely. Among them were seven members of the Palestinian Legislative Council. This group initially included Khalida Jarrar, who, several non-governmental organizations asserted, was being held because of her political activities and her role as a prominent advocate for Palestinian human rights. While Mrs. Jarrar continued to be held at the time of drafting, on 15 April 2015, charges were brought, although concerns over whether she would receive a fair trial remain.<sup>43</sup>

70. Two Israeli legislative initiatives affecting the situation of Palestinian prisoners and detainees are notable. On 30 July 2015, in the face of warnings, including by several independent experts,<sup>44</sup> that it was incompatible with human rights standards, the Knesset passed a law allowing for the force-feeding of prisoners and detainees on hunger strike.<sup>45</sup> The measure is expected to affect Palestinian prisoners, especially those under administrative detention, and uses cruel and inhuman treatment, removing the personal autonomy of those who would put their lives on the line in peaceful protest.

71. In an amendment to the Penal Code adopted on 20 July 2015, those convicted of throwing stones or any other objects at moving vehicles could face up to 20 years' imprisonment.<sup>46</sup> While not condoning stone-throwing, whether by settlers or Palestinians, the Special Rapporteur is concerned at these severe sentences, especially in the light of serious questions of adherence to fair trial principles and due process guarantees for Palestinians accused under the Israeli military justice system. Even without proof of harmful intent by stone-throwing, the revised law provides for sentences of up to 10 years' imprisonment. The Special Rapporteur is concerned about the potential effect of such provisions on minors, as most of those charged with stone-throwing are Palestinian children. In both these laws, it seems that security considerations have been invoked as a blanket justification for entrenching in law provisions that lead to violations of the human rights of Palestinians.

72. The Special Rapporteur met a 19-year-old from Hebron who claimed to have been wrongfully accused of stone-throwing and that Israeli forces had refused to

<sup>43</sup> Amnesty International, press release, 28 August 2015. Available from: www.amnesty.org/download/Documents/MDE1523502015ENGLISH.pdf.

<sup>44</sup> OHCHR, "UN experts urge Israel to halt legalization of force-feeding of hunger-strikers in detention", press release, 28 July 2015 and "Force-feeding is cruel and inhuman — UN experts urge Israel not to make it legal", press release, 25 June 2014.

<sup>45</sup> The Knesset, "Knesset passes law to prevent damages caused by hunger strikes", press release, 30 July 2015.

<sup>46</sup> The Knesset, "Knesset approves harsher punishments for stone throwers", press release, 21 July 2015.

check closed-circuit television footage that would have corroborated his account. The Special Rapporteur was moved by the seeming hopelessness of the situation of this young man, who had no real prospects for challenging the charge, and the implications for his future. The young man belonged to Youth Against Settlements, an organization which insists on non-violence in protesting the occupation and settlements. In their briefing to the Special Rapporteur, other members of the organization emphasized that they believed in the right to life of Israelis and Palestinians and that they rejected violent attacks, irrespective of who carried them out.

73. In June 2015, more than 5,400 Palestinians were being held by Israel.<sup>47</sup> The majority are held in prisons within Israel rather than in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, contrary to article 76 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. In addition to other restrictions on family visits, this makes it difficult for family members to visit prisoners and detainees. While most prisoners and detainees are adult men, women and children are also affected, either as detainees themselves or members of the families of detainees. It has been noted that infrequent or lack of contact with parents, relatives and friends has a significant negative effect on the mental health of prisoners.<sup>48</sup> According to Addameer, since 1967, up to 20 per cent of the population has at some point been detained by Israeli authorities.

74. Reports regarding the treatment of Palestinian prisoners and detainees held by Israel noted the prohibition under international law of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and referred to the use of “stress positions”, beatings, solitary confinement and sleep deprivation. Cases submitted regarding female Palestinian prisoners and detainees detail instances of physical and verbal assault. Allegations were also made that Israeli authorities have used full or partial strip-searches as a punitive measure against female prisoners and detainees.

75. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned at the treatment of hundreds of Palestinian children arrested, detained and imprisoned each year by Israel (A/HRC/28/78) and recalls that article 37 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child provides that a child may only be deprived of his or her liberty as a measure of last resort. The Special Rapporteur acknowledges the engagement of Israel with the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) regarding recommendations contained in its report of February 2013 in which the organization concluded that “ill-treatment of children who come in contact with the military detention system appears to be widespread, systematic and institutionalized”.<sup>49</sup> However, he is dismayed by the limited progress as “reports of alleged ill-treatment of children during arrest, transfer, interrogation and detention have not significantly decreased in 2013 and 2014”.<sup>50</sup> It is regrettable that the pilot scheme introduced in February 2014 to issue written summonses to children as an alternative to terrifying night-time arrests was discontinued in early 2015. No evaluation of the scheme reportedly

---

<sup>47</sup> This was the number classified by Israel as “security” prisoners and detainees. In addition, nearly 1,000 Palestinians were held for being in Israel illegally. B’tselem statistics accessed August 2015. Available from: www.btselem.org/statistics/detainees\_and\_prisoners.

<sup>48</sup> WHO, document WHO-EM/OPT/006/E, p. 11.

<sup>49</sup> Children in Israeli Military Detention: Observations and Recommendations (Jerusalem, February 2013), executive summary.

<sup>50</sup> Ibid., Bulletin No. 2, February 2015, p. 2.

took place to assess the feasibility of ending this harmful practice by way of summonses, which should be delivered during the daytime.<sup>51</sup>

V. Accountability

76. Scores of reports each year document concerns regarding Israeli violations of international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. These reports chart the expansion of illegal settlements; document cases of home demolitions, settler violence and excessive use of force by Israeli security forces; and describe the effects of the blockade, the wall and violations committed during escalations of hostilities. The Special Rapporteur, while focusing on his own mandate, is cognizant of reports of civil society<sup>52</sup> and the United Nations, including the report of the 2014 independent commission of inquiry established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-21/1 (A/HRC/29/52 and A/HRC/29/CRP.4), the summary by the Secretary-General of the report of the United Nations Headquarters Board of Inquiry into certain incidents that occurred in the Gaza Strip between 8 July 2014 and 26 August 2014 (S/2015/286, annex) and the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the implementation of Human Rights Council resolutions S-9/1 and S-12/1 (A/HRC/28/80 and Add.1), documenting allegations of violations of international law by both Israeli and Palestinian actors.

77. A general failure of accountability followed previous escalations of hostilities in 2008/09 and 2012. The Special Rapporteur notes Israel's statement following the 2014 Israeli military operation in Gaza that it was "committed to investigating alleged misconduct and holding wrongdoers accountable, through criminal prosecutions or disciplinary action".<sup>53</sup> The Special Rapporteur is aware that some civil society organizations have submitted cases of alleged violations and in some instances have received updates on decisions regarding investigations; however, he notes that, in general, there is little confidence in the process.

78. According to published information regarding examinations and investigations of cases by Israel, as of June 2015, more than half of the approximately 190 cases of allegations of violations had been examined and referred to the Military Advocate General for decision. Of these, 19 cases were closed without further investigation as not having established "reasonable grounds for suspicion of criminal behaviour". Investigations have been opened in 22 cases, 7 on referral following preliminary examinations carried out by the Fact-Finding Assessment Mechanism and 15 on the basis of prima facie evidence.

79. Two of the 22 investigations opened were closed without any further legal proceedings. One of these concerned the attack on 16 July 2014 in which four boys between the ages of 9 and 11 who had been playing on the beach were killed.

<sup>51</sup> Military Court Watch, "Pilot study to end night arrests suspended", 29 January 2015.

<sup>52</sup> For example: B'tselem, Black Flag: The Legal and Moral Implications of the Policy of Attacking Residential Buildings in the Gaza Strip, Summer 2014 (Jerusalem, 2015); Breaking the Silence, This Is How We Fought in Gaza: Soldiers' Testimonies and Photographs from Operation "Protective Edge" (2014) <http://www.breakingthesilence.org.il/pdf/ProtectiveEdge.pdf>; Amnesty International, Unlawful and Deadly: Rocket and Mortar Attacks by Palestinian Armed Groups During the 2014 Gaza/Israel Conflict (London, 2015).

<sup>53</sup> State of Israel, The 2014 Gaza Conflict, 7 July-26 August 2014: Factual and Legal Aspects, May 2015, executive summary, para. 59.

Information published by Israel noted that the attack took place in a Hamas naval compound “which was utilized exclusively by militants”. Israel asserted that it was not possible for the Israel Defense Forces entities “to have identified these figures, via aerial surveillance, as children” and that they had been targeted on the presumption that they were militants owing to their presence in the area.<sup>54</sup> This particular case was witnessed by a number of international journalists who were staying in hotels overlooking the beach. The case itself is evidence that the area was in fact not used exclusively by “militants”. In addition, the Special Rapporteur notes that reporting on the incident does not give the impression of a closed military compound. A journalist who witnessed the attack wrote: “A small metal shack with no electricity or running water on a jetty in the blazing seaside sun does not seem like the kind of place frequented by Hamas militants.... Children, maybe four feet tall, dressed in summer clothes, running from an explosion, don’t fit the description of Hamas fighters, either.”<sup>55</sup>

80. The fact that the Military Advocate General accepted the contention that the aerial surveillance was of insufficient quality to allow operatives to distinguish between young children playing and adult members of armed groups carrying out military activity is disturbing. The 2014 independent commission of inquiry found that given that the compound was located in a city centre between a public beach and an area used by local fishermen, “it could not be ruled out that civilians, including children, might be present” (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, paras. 630-633). The Special Rapporteur joins the independent commission of inquiry in its concern that it appears that the Israel Defense Forces “reversed the presumption of civilian status” on the sole basis of the location of figures in the area and, further, that the Military Advocate General, in deciding to close the case without further legal proceedings, “appears to have validated this incorrect application of international humanitarian law” (ibid.).

81. The Special Rapporteur is troubled by the implications of this case for the overall prospects of accountability through Israeli domestic-level investigations. Investigations into other less well-known cases alleging violations by the Israel Defense Forces are unlikely to be scrutinized to the same degree. As of June 2015, one indictment against three soldiers had been issued in a case involving looting in the Shuja'iyya area on 20 July 2014.

82. The Fact-Finding Mechanism is limited in its scope to examinations of “exceptional incidents”, which might be read as a predetermination that the Israeli operation was generally compliant with international law. A key criticism made by the independent commission of inquiry was that “The fact that Israel did not revise its practice of air strikes, even after their dire effects on civilians became apparent, raises the question of whether this was part of a broader policy which was at least tacitly approved at the highest level of government”.<sup>56</sup>

83. In a response to the report of the independent commission of inquiry, the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs stated that “Israel’s military acted according to the highest international standards. This was confirmed by a comprehensive examination by Israeli military and legal experts, as well as reports produced by internationally renowned military professionals”.<sup>57</sup> The Special Rapporteur found this broad claim to be generally unsupported by submissions received and public United Nations and civil society reports. However, he encourages Israel to demonstrate its commitment to accountability by acceding to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. In addition to a number of other considerations, the Court will only become involved where domestic mechanisms have shown themselves unable or unwilling to investigate and prosecute the gravest crimes.<sup>58</sup>

<sup>54</sup> Israel Defense Forces Military Advocate General, “Decisions regarding exceptional incidents that allegedly occurred during Operation ‘Protective Edge’”, Update No. 4, 11 June 2015, para. 7.

<sup>55</sup> Tyler Hicks, “Through lens, 4 boys dead by Gaza shore”, New York Times, 16 July 2014.

<sup>56</sup> OHCHR, “UN Gaza inquiry finds credible allegations of war crimes committed in 2014 by both Israel and Palestinian armed groups”, press release, 22 June 2015. See also A/HRC/29/52, para. 44.

84. Regarding civil claims for violations of international law, as noted by the independent commission of inquiry, “Palestinian victims face significant obstacles that impede their right to benefit from effective remedies, including reparations” (A/HRC/29/52 para. 72). One such obstacle is the sweeping exemption of State liability, under the Law on Liability of the State, for any actions taken in the context of combating “terror, hostile acts or insurrections” (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, paras. 646-649). Further, high fees, restrictions on movement and statutes of limitations make it nearly, if not completely, impossible for victims to seek reparations. In December 2014, the Supreme Court of Israel rejected a petition challenging the Israeli policy of denying claimants and witnesses in Gaza seeking compensation for deaths, injuries and property damage resulting from Israeli military actions access to Israeli courts.<sup>59</sup> According to information received — and raising obvious questions of conflict of interest — the decision accepts that the State has discretion to deny entry, on the grounds of “security considerations”, in compensation cases against the State. On the implications of the decision for access to the courts by claimants in Gaza in compensation cases, Adalah, the Legal Center for Arab Minority Rights in Israel, concluded that “essentially no such opportunity exists”.

85. In the West Bank too, and generally outside the context of acts committed during active hostilities, access to justice for Palestinians via the military justice system and Israeli courts is lacking. Impunity for acts of settler violence has been widely reported. Similarly, accountability is generally lacking in cases of excessive use of force by Israeli security forces and several interlocutors reported that victims either had no faith that they would receive justice or were afraid to come forward. As reported by UNRWA, “victims/survivor families commonly refrain from raising formal complaints with the Israeli authorities for fear of reprisal. Israeli security forces’ internal investigations into Palestinian fatalities ... are closed in the vast majority of cases”. Whether a case concerns settler violence, excessive use of force by Israeli security forces, protesting one’s innocence against allegations of, for example, stone-throwing, or contesting the legality of threatened forced evictions, demolition orders, land confiscations or the construction of the wall,<sup>60</sup> there is a pervasive sense of injustice in a system which appears inevitably pitted against the protected population.

<sup>57</sup> Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Israeli response to the UNHRC Commission of Inquiry”, press release, 22 June 2015, para. 5.

<sup>58</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, articles 1 and 17.

<sup>59</sup> Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, Palestinian Centre for Human Rights and Adalah, “Israeli Supreme Court approves regulations that ban Palestinians from Gaza from entering Israel for their compensation cases against the Israeli military”, press release, 18 December 2014.

<sup>60</sup> Engaging articles 2 and 14 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

VI. Conclusions and recommendations

86. The cumulative effects of Israeli occupation policies and practices, most prominently settlement expansion and related impacts, the blockade, movement restrictions and the military justice system, are having a debilitating effect on Palestinian society. Avoiding further destabilization requires that the routine violations of the human rights of the Palestinian people living under occupation be addressed. Critically, without accountability, 48 years of occupation have shown that Israeli policies and practices, which run counter to international human rights law and international humanitarian law, will continue.

87. Accordingly, the Special Rapporteur reiterates recommendations previously made (A/HRC/28/78) and presents and re-emphasizes the following recommendations to the Government of Israel:

(a) Lift the blockade on Gaza, which is a primary obstacle to reconstruction, undermines human rights and constitutes collective punishment;

(b) Ensure that domestic-level investigations provide accountability, including by widening the scope of investigations to include the legality under international law of policy decisions guiding the Israel Defense Forces during the 2014 military operation in Gaza;

(c) Halt settlement expansion and refrain from demolitions in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. In particular, halt and abandon the plan entailing the forced eviction and forcible transfer of Bedouin communities in Area C;

(d) Ensure compliance with the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials of 1990 and conduct full investigations into cases of excessive use of force by Israeli security forces and into allegations of settler violence;

(e) Remove procedural and physical barriers, including the wall, that obstruct access to health care for Palestinians in Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem;

(f) Ensure that all Palestinian schoolchildren in East Jerusalem have access to education, in particular by addressing the shortage of classrooms, and enable them to follow the curriculum set by the Palestinian Ministry of Education;

(g) End the practice of administrative detention and respect the right of Palestinian prisoners and detainees to peaceful protest, including by refraining from force-feeding those who engage in hunger strikes;

(h) Urgently redouble efforts to implement recommendations by UNICEF with respect to the detention of children, in particular, ensuring that children are detained only as a last resort;

(i) Cooperate with the Special Rapporteur and any United Nations-mandated body, as required of a State Member of the United Nations, and facilitate access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
19 October 2016

Original: English

---

Seventy-first session

Agenda item 68 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights
situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, hereby submits his first report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives, United Nations representatives and Palestinian officials in Amman, in connection with the mission of the Special Rapporteur to the region in July 2016. The report addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, was appointed on 24 March 2016, in accordance with Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2 and Human Rights Council resolution 5/1. He assumed his functions on 1 May 2016. He is the seventh person to assume the mandate.

2. The present report is the first submitted by the Special Rapporteur. He would like to draw attention to the fact that, while he stands ready to conduct a mission to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, permission to do so has not been granted by the Israeli authorities. After assuming his position as mandate holder, the Special Rapporteur made a formal request, on 3 June 2016, to both the Israeli and Palestinian authorities for permission to visit the Occupied Palestinian Territory. As of the time of writing of the present report, no reply had been received from the Israeli authorities. The Special Rapporteur notes that the two preceding mandate holders were similarly not granted access. The Special Rapporteur met the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations on 7 June 2016, during his first visit to Geneva. He also requested a meeting with the Permanent Representative of Israel, but did not receive a response. This pattern of non-cooperation with the mandate is a serious concern. A full and comprehensive understanding of the situation based on first-hand observation would be extremely beneficial to the work of a Special Rapporteur.<sup>1</sup>

3. The report is based primarily on written submissions as well as consultations with civil society representatives, victims, witnesses, Palestinian government officials, and United Nations representatives held in Amman, Jordan during the Special Rapporteur's first mission to the region in July 2016.

4. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur, as set out by the Commission on Human Rights, is to investigate Israel's violations of the principles and bases of international law, international humanitarian law and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967.<sup>2</sup> With this in mind, the present report focuses on the violations committed by Israel in the context of nearly 50 years of occupation. Israel, as the Occupying Power, has a responsibility to ensure the respect for and protection of the rights of Palestinians within its control.<sup>3</sup> The mandate of the Special Rapporteur thus focuses on the responsibilities of the Occupying Power, although he notes that human rights violations by any State party or non-state organization are deplorable and will only hinder the prospects for peace.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation for the full cooperation with his mandate extended by the Government of the State of Palestine. The Special Rapporteur also wishes to extend his thanks to all those who travelled to Amman to meet him, and to those who were unable to travel but made written or oral submissions. The Special Rapporteur acknowledges the essential work being carried by those groups in their attempts to create an environment in which human rights are respected and to ensure that violations of human rights and humanitarian law are not committed with impunity and without witnesses. The Special Rapporteur will support such work as much as possible.

<sup>1</sup> A/HRC/23/21, para. 1.

<sup>2</sup> See Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2.

<sup>3</sup> Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention), art. 47.

6. The Special Rapporteur would like to note that several groups were unable to travel to Amman to meet him, owing to travel restrictions imposed by the Israeli authorities. This was particularly the case with individuals coming from Gaza, and all groups based in Gaza were consulted by videoconference as a result.

7. The report is structured in two parts. It first provides an overview of the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The discussion highlights current human rights concerns while also aiming to frame the current situation in the broader context of nearly 50 years of occupation. Thus, the discussion is not limited to events within a specific time period, but an emphasis will be placed on issues that were highlighted as particularly critical at the time of writing, on the basis of conversations with and input from individuals and organizations during the Special Rapporteur's mission in July 2016.

8. The second part of the report examines the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory through the lens of the right to development, with a focus on development as a human right, and the impact of human rights violations on development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

II. The current human rights situation

9. A series of worrying events and trends have emerged since the upsurge in violence that began in October 2015 in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. During the escalation of violence, more than 230 Palestinians and at least 32 Israelis were killed over the course of 2015 and 2016 in the context of demonstrations by Palestinians, as well as Palestinian attacks or alleged attacks, and the often lethal response of the Israeli security forces.<sup>4</sup> While the number of violent incidents has declined in recent months,<sup>5</sup> the continued use of administrative detention, punitive demolitions, movement restrictions and other measures continue to negatively affect the human rights of the Palestinian people on a continuous basis.

10. Violent attacks of any kind by anyone are unacceptable. The fact that the attacks and alleged attacks by Palestinians against Israelis are, not infrequently, responded to with disproportionate and deadly force only compounds the violence. Many of the attacks and alleged attacks have been committed by minors, which is particularly worrying because of the hopelessness it seems to represent. In a striking number of meetings over the course of the Special Rapporteur's mission, those working in the Occupied Palestinian Territory consistently noted a sense of desolation and desperation among children manifesting itself not only in violent

---

<sup>4</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Protection of civilians weekly report, 16 to 22 August 2016. Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/protection-civilians-weekly-report-16-22-august-2016.

<sup>5</sup> Gili Cohen, "After six months of terror wave, attacks decreasing, says Israeli army", Haaretz, 1 April 2016. Available from www.haaretz.com/israel-news/premium-1.712123.

outbursts but also in psychological and physical ailments such as bed-wetting, anxiety and depression. The plight of children is often a barometer for the gravity of a situation. Sadly, in the present circumstances, children born today in the Occupied Palestinian Territory do not enjoy hope for a peaceful future.

A. Violence and lack of accountability

11. The number of casualties of the escalation in violence witnessed in 2015 was the highest in the West Bank since 2005 among both Israelis and Palestinians.<sup>6</sup> The large majority of those killed have been Palestinians — often as a result of disproportionate use of deadly force by Israeli security forces. According to civil society representatives, of those killed in the West Bank between October 2015 and January 2016, 88 were Palestinians whom the Israeli authorities suspected were responsible for attacks or attempted attacks. Two concerns arise with respect to these cases. First, that they occurred at all — that lethal force is used so often, and frequently without justification.<sup>7</sup> Second, the fact that, in a majority of cases in which a member of the Israeli security forces used lethal force, no investigation was conducted or if an investigation was conducted, it was closed without any action being taken against the perpetrator.

12. In several documented cases, it is clear those killed had not posed the level of threat that, according to international standards, would merit the use of deadly force. According to the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials,<sup>8</sup> weapons and lethal force should be used only as a last resort.<sup>9</sup> Human rights organizations have documented a number of cases in which it is clear that this threshold was not met.<sup>10</sup>

13. One of the most emblematic examples, widely reported in the media, is the killing of Abd al-Fatah al-Sharif in Hebron on 24 March 2016. Al-Sharif allegedly stabbed and wounded an Israeli soldier, and was later shot and killed by an Israeli soldier while lying immobile and wounded on the ground.<sup>11</sup> The incident was caught on video, and the footage, which was shared on YouTube by the Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem, made international headlines. The Special Rapporteur on

<sup>6</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israel opened 24 criminal investigations into the killing and injury of Palestinians since October 2015, leading to one indictment”, Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (July 2016). Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/israel-opened-24-criminal-investigations-killing-and-injury-palestinians-october-2015.

<sup>7</sup> See Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), “Basic principles on the use of force and firearms by law enforcement officials”. Available from www.ohchr.org/EN/ProfessionalInterest/Pages/UseOfForceAndFirearms.aspx.

<sup>8</sup> See Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, Havana, 27 August-7 September 1990: report prepared by the Secretariat (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.91.IV.2), chap. I, sect. B.

<sup>9</sup> See OHCHR, “Basic principles on the use of force and firearms by law enforcement officials”.

<sup>10</sup> B'Tselem, “Unjustified use of lethal force and execution of Palestinians who stabbed or were suspected of attempted stabbings”, 16 December 2015. Available from www.btselem.org/gunfire/20151216\_cases\_of\_unjustified\_gunfire\_and\_executions.

<sup>11</sup> See www.youtube.com/watch?v=S8WK2TgruMo.

extrajudicial, arbitrary or summary executions noted that, “the images shown carry all the signs of a clear case of an extrajudicial execution”.<sup>12</sup>

14. This is only one example of what appears to be an alarming trend. As noted in a statement by the spokesperson for the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “this is not the first incident to be captured on video that raises concerns of excessive use of force”.<sup>13</sup> These few visually documented cases do not represent the true scale of the problem. Further, the recently publicized Israeli open-fire regulations, updated in December 2015, lower the threshold for use of deadly force to a level that is in contravention of international standards.<sup>14</sup> The Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms specify that firearms should be used only in cases of “imminent threat of death or serious injury”, while the new open-fire regulations allow the use of live ammunition against an individual who “appears to be throwing or is about to throw” firebombs, fireworks or stones. This change suggests that the government seeks to create an environment in which use of deadly force is questioned less and accepted more. Under such conditions, the use of excessive force is likely to occur with greater frequency.

15. Further compounding the problem is the fact that in a majority of the cases, there has been little attempt to establish accountability. Between October 2015 and June 2016, the Israeli authorities opened 24 criminal investigations into incidents in which Israeli security forces’ actions led to the injury or death of Palestinians.<sup>15</sup> So far, only the killing of Abd al-Fatah al-Sharif in Hebron has resulted in the indictment and prosecution of a soldier. The trial is ongoing and Israel’s Defense Minister, Avigdor Lieberman, reportedly said, in relation to the case, that Israel “... cannot reach a situation where a soldier must ask for a lawyer before going on a mission” and emphasized that individuals are innocent until proven guilty.<sup>16</sup> Such statements implicitly encourage leniency for soldiers who use deadly force against individuals, which undermines efforts to ensure accountability.

16. The problem of the lack of accountability is far from new. One striking recent illustration of this fact is the announcement by the human rights organization B’Tselem in May 2016 that it will no longer engage with Israel’s military law enforcement mechanism.<sup>17</sup> The organization came to the conclusion, after 25 years

<sup>12</sup> OHCHR, “Hebron killing: ‘all the signs of an extrajudicial execution’ — United Nations expert expresses outrage”, 30 March, 2016. Available from www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=18544&LangID=E.

<sup>13</sup> OHCHR, “Comment by the spokesperson for the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Rupert Colville, on the killing of a Palestinian man in Hebron”, 30 March 2016. Available from www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=18540&LangID=E.

<sup>14</sup> “Israeli police reveal new open-fire regulations in response to Adalah’s court petition”, Adalah, 5 July 2016. Available from www.adalah.org/en/content/view/8845.

<sup>15</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israel opened 24 criminal investigations into the killing and injury of Palestinians since October 2015, leading to one indictment”.

<sup>16</sup> Isabel Kershner, “Israeli military investigating soldier’s killing of unarmed Palestinian”, New York Times, 29 August 2016. Available from www.nytimes.com/2016/08/30/world/middleeast/israeli-military-investigating-soldiers-killing-of-unarmed-palestinian.html.

<sup>17</sup> B’Tselem, The Occupation’s Fig Leaf: Israel’s Military Law Enforcement System as a Whitewash Mechanism (May 2016). Available from www.btselem.org/publications/summaries/201605\_occupations\_fig\_leaf.

of work, that “there is no longer any point in pursuing justice and defending human rights by working with a system whose real function is measured by its ability to continue to successfully cover up unlawful acts and protect perpetrators”.<sup>18</sup> B’Tselem noted that, of 739 cases the organization filed with the Military Advocate General since 1989, no investigation had been launched in 182 cases, while in nearly half the cases (343), the investigation was closed with no further action. In the course of 25 years, only 25 cases led to charges being brought against implicated soldiers. In early 2015, the human rights organization Yesh Din published statistics related to indictments in 2014, noting that only 8 out of 229 investigations opened in 2014 resulted in indictments, and that in 2013 there were 199 investigations, which led to 9 indictments. Yesh Din, in interpreting the data, noted that it “reveals the deep, ongoing failure to conduct exhaustive investigations that lead to indictments. The result is near impunity from prosecution for IDF soldiers ...”.<sup>19</sup>

17. The lack of accountability is a systemic and deeply ingrained issue. It helps to perpetuate a cycle of continued violence, as soldiers appear to act with impunity, with the message being sent that Palestinian lives do not matter, while the Palestinian population becomes both more fearful and more desperate.

B. Detention

18. Coinciding with the rise in violence is a rise in arrests and in the number of Palestinians in Israeli detention, including those in administrative detention. October 2015 saw a sharp increase in the number of Palestinians in detention, which continues to hold steady at levels not seen in nearly 10 years. As of the time of writing of the present report, according to data collected by B’Tselem and the human rights organization Addameer, there are more than 6,000 detainees currently held on alleged security grounds, as well as approximately 700 administrative detainees. The numbers are staggering and are suggestive of an overarching policy that aims to intimidate and significantly restrict the freedoms of Palestinians.<sup>20</sup>

Administrative detention

19. The rise in the number of administrative detainees is particularly concerning. Currently, approximately 700 Palestinians are being held on administrative detention orders.<sup>21</sup> This is the highest number of administrative detainees reported since 2008.<sup>22</sup> Detainees are often deprived of basic legal safeguards, as noted in 2016 by the Committee Against Torture in its review of the fifth periodic report of

<sup>18</sup> Ibid.

<sup>19</sup> Yesh Din, “December 2015 data sheet: law enforcement on IDF soldiers suspected of harming Palestinians — summary of 2014 data”, 12 February 2015. Available from www.yesh-din.org/en/december-2015-data-sheet-law-enforcement-on-idf-soldiers-suspected-of-harming-palestinians-summary-of-2014-data/.

<sup>20</sup> A wide-ranging set of military regulations govern the arrest and detention of Palestinians living in the occupied Palestinian territory. See Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, “Palestinian political prisoners in Israeli prisons”, June 2016. Available from www.addameer.org/sites/default/files/briefings/general\_briefing\_paper\_-\_june\_2016\_1.pdf.

<sup>21</sup> Addameer, Statistics, August 2016. Available from www.addameer.org/statistics.

<sup>22</sup> B’Tselem, Statistics on administrative detention, updated 12 September 2016. Available from www.btselem.org/administrative\_detention/statistics.

Israel, as they are held on secret evidence to which neither they nor their lawyers are granted access, and are neither charged nor tried.<sup>23</sup> Since administrative detention orders are indefinitely renewable, some human rights activists argue that the psychological anguish associated with this uncertainty could amount to torture.<sup>24</sup>

20. Israel's justification for its widespread use of administrative detention is that it is necessary for security reasons. The Israeli government has relied on article 78 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, which states that an Occupying Power "for imperative reasons of security, to take safety measures concerning protected persons, it may, at the most, subject them to assigned residence or to internment". Internment in international law is defined as "the non-criminal detention of a person based on the serious threat that his or her activity poses to the security of the detaining authority in relation to an armed conflict".<sup>25</sup> This means that internment can only be used in non-criminal cases, and not as a substitute for a criminal conviction nor as a form of punishment.<sup>26</sup> The fact that administrative detention orders are often issued against individuals whom the Israeli government initially tried to charge with a crime but failed to do so, indicates that many of these arrests are in contravention of this provision.<sup>27</sup> According to the commentary to the Fourth Geneva Convention, this article should be read to apply only in very limited circumstances.<sup>28</sup> This is among the most serious measures that an Occupying Power can use with respect to the civilian population of an occupied territory.

21. Israel's practice of holding individuals on secret evidence is in clear violation of both international humanitarian law and international human rights law and far oversteps the use of "internment" as envisioned by the Fourth Geneva Convention. The Committee Against Torture, in its review of Israel, called on the State to end the practice of administrative detention, saying concerns exist because "detainees may be deprived of basic legal safeguards as, inter alia, they can be held in detention without charge indefinitely on the basis of secret evidence that is not made available to the detainee or to his/her lawyer".<sup>23,29</sup>

22. The case of Hasan Safadi, a journalist and the media coordinator for Addameer, an organization that works to protect and promote the rights of detainees, is a clear example of those failings of the Israeli system. Safadi was

<sup>23</sup> CAT/C/ISR/CO/5, para. 22.

<sup>24</sup> Addameer, "Induced Desperation: The Psychological Torture of Administrative Detention", 26 June 2016. Available from www.addameer.org/publications/induced-desperation-psychological-torture-administrative-detention.

<sup>25</sup> International Committee of the Red Cross, "Internment in armed conflict: basic rules and challenges", opinion paper, November 2014.

<sup>26</sup> See Commentary (1958) to article 78 of the Fourth Geneva Convention: "The persons subjected to these measures are not, in theory, involved in the struggle. The precautions taken with regard to them cannot, therefore, be in the nature of a punishment."

<sup>27</sup> See, for example, Amnesty International, "Israel/OPT: human rights defender administratively detained: Hasan Ghassan Ghaleb Safadi", 4 July 2016. Available from www.amnesty.org/en/documents/mde15/4376/2016/en/.

<sup>28</sup> See <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=D794403E436F0823C12563CD0042CF9A>.

<sup>29</sup> In article 43 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, it is noted that anyone placed in internment "shall be entitled to have such action reconsidered as soon as possible" and article 78 specifies a right of appeal. See also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (art. 9 (2)), in General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

arrested on 1 May 2016 and as of time of writing of the report, has been held on an administrative detention order for a period of five months. According to information provided by Addameer, Safadi was arrested and subsequently interrogated over a period of 40 days. After no evidence was found on which to hold Safadi, he was set to be released on 10 June, pursuant to the decision of the Magistrate Court. On the day of his scheduled release, the Defense Minister signed an administrative detention order, for Safadi to be detained for a period of 6 months. Addameer notes that this “exemplifies the practice of issuing an administrative detention order in the absence of adequate evidence and charges against a detainee to keep him or her in detention”.<sup>30</sup>

Children in detention

23. Of significant concern is the number of children currently held in detention by Israeli authorities. As of the time of writing, Addameer had documented at least 350 Palestinian minors under the age of 18 currently held in detention by the Israeli authorities.<sup>31</sup> At the end of 2015, the number was at 422, with at least 116 of those between the ages of 12 and 15.<sup>32</sup> The majority of the arrests were related to charges of stone-throwing.<sup>33</sup> As part of the dual legal system in existence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Palestinian children arrested in the West Bank are subject to Israeli military law (as are Palestinian adults), while Israeli settlers in the same geographic area are subject to the Israeli civil and criminal legal system. Despite numerous calls for greater attention to the protections that should be afforded children, the practice surrounding the arrest and detention of minors remains extremely problematic. Reports and documentation indicate that parents are often not informed of a child’s arrest until several days after the fact. In many cases, confessions are obtained in coercive conditions and are often written in Hebrew, which most Palestinian children cannot read. Children are also often denied access to an attorney during the initial phase of arrest, and many report ill-treatment.<sup>34</sup> Children reported being handcuffed, hand-tied, blindfolded, beaten and subject to solitary confinement.<sup>35</sup>

24. These practices are not only in contravention of basic legal standards, but they fail to take into account the extremely vulnerable position of a young child. The vulnerability of children is well recognized by the international community and the special protections to which children are entitled are enshrined in a number of legal instruments, including the Convention on the Rights of the Child. A 2012 report

<sup>30</sup> Information published by Addameer, available from www.addameer.org/prisoner/hasan-safadi.

<sup>31</sup> Addameer, Statistics, August 2016. Available from www.addameer.org/statistics.

<sup>32</sup> Defense for Children International — Palestine, “No way to treat a child: Palestinian children in the Israeli military detention system”, April 2016. Available from www.dci-palestine.org/palestinian\_children\_in\_the\_israeli\_military\_detention\_system.

<sup>33</sup> United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), “Children in distress: raising the alarm for 2016 and beyond”, briefing note, April 2016. Available from www.unrwa.org/sites/default/files/content/resources/children\_in\_distress\_briefing\_note.pdf.

<sup>34</sup> Defense for Children International — Palestine, “No way to treat a child: Palestinian children in the Israeli military detention system”.

<sup>35</sup> Department of State of the United States of America, 2015 report on human rights practices in Israel and the occupied territories, available from www.state.gov/j/drl/rls/hrrpt/humanrightsreport/index.htm?dynamic\_load\_id=252929&year=2015#wrapper.

prepared by a team of independent lawyers found Israeli claims that the Convention did not apply beyond the borders of Israel to be “factually and legally unreal”.<sup>36</sup> The International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, found that the Convention, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights do in fact apply.<sup>37</sup> Of the recommendations set out in the “Children in military custody” report, only 2.5 per cent had been implemented as of July 2016.<sup>38</sup>

C. Collective punishment

25. Israeli authorities have resorted to a number of measures, which they employ on a case-by-case basis, that often amount to collective punishment. The measures, enacted in the name of security and often in response to actions carried out by one person or a small group of people, have a significant impact on the daily lives of almost every Palestinian at some point. Road closures, checkpoints and roadblocks restrict the movement of Palestinians to and from work and school, as well for visiting family members and travelling for medical treatment. Home demolitions deprive entire families of a place to live, based on the alleged actions of one individual.

26. Collective punishment refers to the practice of punishing an entire group for the actions of a particular individual. Collective punishment is prohibited under article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention and the Human Rights Committee has further noted that the prohibition on collective punishment is non-derogable.<sup>39</sup>

Punitive demolitions

27. In 2014, the Israeli Government reinstated the use of punitive home demolitions.<sup>40</sup> Since that time, the number of demolitions has been on the rise, with 11 demolitions displacing 85 people reported in 2015, while already, as of July 2016, there had been 16 demolitions, displacing 92 people.<sup>41</sup> Punitive demolitions, the purpose of which is to harm the family members of someone suspected of a crime, are in clear violation of the basic tenets of international law.<sup>42</sup>

<sup>36</sup> “Children in military custody”, June 2012, para. 30. Available from www.childreninmilitarycustody.org.uk/.

<sup>37</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion of 9 July 2004, I.C.J. Reports 2004, paras. 102-113.

<sup>38</sup> Military Court Watch, Monitoring the treatment of children in Israeli military detention, briefing note, July 2016. Available from www.militarycourtwatch.org/files/server/MCW%20BRIEFING%20PAPER%20-%20JUL%202016.pdf.

<sup>39</sup> See General Comment No. 29 (CCPR/C/21/Rev.1/Add.11).

<sup>40</sup> OHCHR, “Punitive demolitions destroy more than homes in occupied Palestinian territory”, 28 December 2015. Available from www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/PunitedemolitionsinOPT.aspx.

<sup>41</sup> B’Tselem, Statistics on punitive house demolitions, updated 31 August 2016. Available from www.btselem.org/punitive\_demolitions/statistics.

<sup>42</sup> Al-Haq, “Punitive house demolitions”, 31 October 2015. Available from www.alhaq.org/advocacy/topics/population-transfer-and-residency-right/983-punitive-house-demolitions.

28. The Human Rights Committee, in its review of the fourth periodic report of Israel, in 2014, also called on the Government to halt its policy of punitive demolitions, noting that it is incompatible with its obligations under the Covenant.<sup>43</sup> In addition to amounting to a prohibited form of collective punishment, punitive demolitions are a violation of the prohibition on destruction of civilian property.<sup>44</sup>

Closures, checkpoints and permits

29. The right to freedom of movement is adversely affected on a regular basis by road closures, checkpoints and burdensome permit regimes that affect entire towns and villages. The practices are increasingly being used in villages and areas that those suspected of attacks call home.<sup>45</sup> As of the end of 2015, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs documented a total of 543 closures in the West Bank. Hebron in particular was subject to such measures, with significantly increased restrictions imposed after a series of demonstrations and related clashes, as well as alleged attacks in the area in November 2015, which resulted in a total of 53 new obstacles deployed, in addition to the 109 already existing obstacles.<sup>46</sup> Israel asserts that these are security measures. However, their sweeping nature and significant impact on the entire Palestinian population of various towns and cities make them not only a violation of the right to freedom of movement,<sup>47</sup> but in many cases also a form of collective punishment.

30. One recent incident is particularly illustrative. On 8 June 2016, in a deplorable act, four Israelis were killed in an attack at a popular shopping area in Tel Aviv. Two Palestinian gunmen were involved and, after the attack, police noted the suspects were from Hebron.<sup>48</sup> In response to the attack, the Israeli Government revoked all 83,000 permits it had granted to residents of the West Bank and Gaza to travel during Ramadan, suspended 204 work permits of individuals in the alleged attackers' extended families and sealed off the suspected attackers' entire hometown.<sup>49</sup>

31. The blockade of Gaza is currently the longest standing measure of collective punishment of the Palestinian people.<sup>50</sup> The blockade, imposed in 2007, has left the vast majority of 1.8 million inhabitants of Gaza unable to leave. The blockade has

<sup>43</sup> See CCPR/C/ISR/CO/4.

<sup>44</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, article 53.

<sup>45</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2015", June 2016.

<sup>46</sup> Ibid.

<sup>47</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, article 12, Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 13, Fourth Geneva Convention, article 27 and commentary to article 27, and Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, paras. 135-137.

<sup>48</sup> Peter Beaumont, "Four dead in Tel Aviv market shooting", The Guardian, 8 June 2016. Available from www.theguardian.com/world/2016/jun/08/tel-aviv-market-shooting-sarona-complex.

<sup>49</sup> OHCHR, Press briefing note on Yemen and Israel/Occupied Palestinian Territory, 10 June 2016. Available from www.ohchr.org/FR/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=20082&LangID=E.

<sup>50</sup> A/HRC/24/30, paras. 21-23.

been decried as a measure of collective punishment by both the Secretary-General and the International Committee of the Red Cross.<sup>51</sup>

32. A recent announcement by the Defense Minister provides concerning evidence that these types of measures are likely to continue. In what has been called a “carrot and stick” approach, the Minister proposes to continue using harsh measures such as closures, the increased presence of security forces and demolitions in areas that are home to suspected attackers and, meanwhile, to build infrastructure in areas that are seen by the Israeli authorities as “seeking coexistence”. Notably, this primarily implies coexistence with illegal settlements. The Minister reportedly said of the policy that “[i]ts purpose is to continue to give benefits to those who desire coexistence with us and make life difficult for those who seek to harm Jews”.<sup>52</sup>

D. Coercive environment and forcible transfer

33. Recent months have seen a significant increase in settlement-related activity, including more government authorization of new buildings, retroactive authorization of construction considered illegal even under Israeli domestic law, demolition of the homes of Palestinians and the continuation of discriminatory planning practices and policies that make it extremely difficult for Palestinians to build. Such policies and practices are particularly prevalent in Area C and East Jerusalem, to such an extent that the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs has referred to the situation as a “coercive environment that undermines a Palestinian physical presence and exacerbates the risk of individual and mass forcible transfers”.<sup>53</sup>

34. Forcible transfer is clearly prohibited by article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. The same article also prohibits the transfer of the population of an Occupying Power into the occupied territory. Forcible transfer is also defined as a war crime and a crime against humanity in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.<sup>54</sup> “Forcible” in the context of the Rome Statute has been interpreted to mean not only physical force, but may also include “threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression or abuse of power, against such person or persons or another person, or by taking advantage of a coercive environment”.<sup>55</sup>

<sup>51</sup> United Nations News Centre, “In Jerusalem and Gaza, Ban urges ‘courageous steps’ for lasting two-State solution”, 28 June 2016, available from www.un.org/apps/news/story.asp?NewsID=54341#.V81iTJN95E4 and International Committee of the Red Cross, “Gaza closure: not another year!”, news release No. 10/103, 14 June 2010, available from www.icrc.org/eng/resources/documents/update/palestine-update-140610.htm.

<sup>52</sup> Yossi Melman, “Lieberman unveils new ‘carrot and stick’ policy for West Bank Palestinians”, Jerusalem Post, 17 August 2016. Available from www.jpost.com/Arab-Israeli-Conflict/Lieberman-unveils-new-carrot-and-stick-policy-for-West-Bank-Palestinians-464360.

<sup>53</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2015”.

<sup>54</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, articles 8.2(a)(vii) and 7.1(d), United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 2187, No. 38544.

<sup>55</sup> International Criminal Court, Elements of Crimes (The Hague, 2011). Available from www.icc-cpi.int/NR/rdonlyres/336923D8-A6AD-40EC-AD7B-45BF9DE73D56/0/ElementsOfCrimesEng.pdf.

35. Bedouin communities in the West Bank are particularly vulnerable, as they are often subject to relocation plans developed by the Israeli Government. Those efforts are based on assertions, for example, that the existing structures and locations are somehow “unsustainable”.<sup>56</sup> In order to implement relocation plans, the authorities have demolished Palestinian homes and other structures, often relying on the fact that the structures are built without Israel-issued permits. However, permits are notoriously difficult to obtain, with high application fees, frequent rejections and lengthy processes, all of which combine to form a discriminatory permit regime that makes it nearly impossible for Palestinians to “legally” build. On 8 January 2016, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) noted, in reference to the demolition of Bedouin homes in the West Bank carried out by the Israeli authorities on 6 January, that “[d]emolishing residential structures exacerbates an already coercive environment, driving Bedouin communities off the land they have inhabited for decades”.<sup>57</sup>

36. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs has further described the situation in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, as putting many Palestinian families and communities “at risk of forcible transfer because Israeli practices have created a coercive environment that puts pressure on them to move, mainly through the unavailability of building permits, which are almost impossible to acquire”.<sup>58</sup> In a letter signed by the ambassadors to Israel of Belgium, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Norway, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland, the ambassadors criticized Israeli forces for confiscating shelters belonging to a Bedouin community in the West Bank, saying “These confiscations as well as previous demolitions, compounded by the inability of humanitarian agencies to deliver relief items to the affected households, create a coercive environment that potentially pressures them to leave their current sites against their will”.<sup>59</sup>

37. The destruction of homes and property is not limited to structures built by Palestinians, but now also includes, with increasing frequency, structures built and funded by international humanitarian assistance. On 16 May 2016, for example, the Israeli authorities demolished seven homes and confiscated materials for three others that had been provided by humanitarian agencies, leaving 49 Palestinian refugees without shelter, 22 of them children.<sup>60</sup> Since the beginning of 2016, according to civil society data, 187 of the structures destroyed or seized by the

<sup>56</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “At risk of forcible transfer”, Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (May 2016). Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/risk-forcible-transfer.

<sup>57</sup> UNRWA, “UNRWA condemns demolition of the homes of Palestine refugee Bedouin families at risk of forcible transfer; decries desperate humanitarian consequences”, 8 January 2016. Available from www.unrwa.org/newsroom/official-statements/unrwa-condemns-demolition-homes-palestine-refugee-bedouins-families.

<sup>58</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “At risk of forcible transfer”, Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (May 2016).

<sup>59</sup> Peter Beaumont, “Ambassadors protest at Israel’s confiscation of West Bank shelters”, The Guardian, 18 July 2016. Available from www.theguardian.com/world/2016/jul/18/ambassadors-protest-israel-confiscation-west-bank-bedouin-shelters.

<sup>60</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Humanitarian Coordinator calls on Israeli authorities to stop destruction of humanitarian aid and respect international law”, 18 May 2016. Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-coordinator-calls-israeli-authorities-stop-destruction-humanitarian-aid-and.

Israeli authorities had been provided through donor-funded humanitarian assistance, compared to 108 donor-funded structures destroyed in all of 2015. Destruction of much-needed infrastructure provided through humanitarian aid is in direct violation of Israel's obligations under international law. Article 59 of the Fourth Geneva Convention requires an Occupying Power to facilitate relief for a population in need "by all means at its disposal". Article 55(1) further requires the Occupying Power to ensure the provision of food and medical supplies to the civilian population.<sup>61</sup> If the Occupying Power is not in a position to fulfil that obligation, it has an unconditional obligation to agree to relief schemes.<sup>62</sup>

III. The right to development and the Occupied Palestinian Territory

38. Thirty years ago, the General Assembly adopted the Declaration on the Right to Development.<sup>63</sup> The Declaration, and its subsequent elaborations, state that every human being and all peoples have an inalienable right to economic and social development that is equitable and just, sustainable, participatory and inclusive, non-discriminatory, grounded in the rule of law and fully observant of all human rights and freedoms. The right to development has been recognized as a human right itself, which raises its status to one with universal applicability and inviolability.<sup>64</sup> While the Declaration is not legally binding per se, it encompasses many of the legal rights and obligations — civil, political, economic, social and cultural — that are recognized as binding on all States parties through the various human rights treaties enacted by the international community over the past 70 years.<sup>65</sup> In turn, the Declaration has been expressly incorporated within the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.<sup>66</sup>

39. The Declaration on the Right to Development is particularly relevant to understanding the human rights predicament in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Among other rights, the Declaration expressly includes the following human rights that are binding in international law:

<sup>61</sup> Felix Schwendimann, "The legal framework of humanitarian access in armed conflict", in International Review of the Red Cross: The Future of Humanitarian Action, vol. 93, No. 884 (Cambridge and New York, Cambridge University Press, December 2011), p. 1001.

<sup>62</sup> Ibid., p. 1002.

<sup>63</sup> Resolution 41/128, annex. The right was reaffirmed in subsequent international human rights instruments, including the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993).

<sup>64</sup> Declaration on the Right to Development, article 1, para. 1; Arjun Sengupta, "On the theory and practice of the right to development", Human Rights Quarterly, vol. 24, No. 4, p. 837 (Baltimore, Johns Hopkins University Press, 2002).

<sup>65</sup> The Declaration on the Right to Development is anchored in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 993, No. 14531) and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 999, No. 4668). For a table linking the rights set out in the Declaration to legally binding instruments under international law, see OHCHR, Frequently Asked Questions on the Right to Development fact sheet No. 37 (Geneva, 2016).

<sup>66</sup> Resolution 70/1, para. 10.

- (a) The self-determination of peoples (art. 1);
- (b) The elimination of foreign domination and occupation (art. 5);
- (c) The prohibition against discrimination and the flagrant abuse of human rights (art. 6);
- (d) The full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including socioeconomic rights (arts. 6 and 8);
- (e) Full sovereignty over one's natural resources (art. 1);
- (f) Participatory decision-making in public affairs (arts. 2 and 8).

These rights lie at the core of the binding human rights and humanitarian obligations under international law, which apply in full to the Occupied Palestinian Territory<sup>67</sup>. They establish not only rights for the Palestinian people, but also create obligations for Israel, the Occupying Power, to respect and protect those rights. The Palestinian people's right to self-determination is widely accepted by the international community,<sup>68</sup> and the International Court of Justice has stated that "Israel is bound to comply with its obligations to respect the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and its obligations under international humanitarian law and international human rights law".<sup>69</sup> While the question of development is necessarily complex in the context of occupation, it is essential that human rights and humanitarian law be interpreted in a way that is consistent with the right to development, regardless of the length of occupation.

40. The Declaration on the Right to Development establishes a rights-based approach to economic growth and social progress. Human rights are to be embedded in all aspects of economic and social development as a necessary precondition to the achievement of real and sustainable progress, expanded capacities and enlarged freedoms for the entire population. Both individuals and peoples are entitled to these rights, and States parties have a responsibility to create the conditions and remove the obstacles to achieve the enjoyment of these rights. Among its core features, the right to development requires both the application of transparent and participatory procedures as well as the substantive realization of equality of opportunity for everyone in their access to basic resources and their socioeconomic rights.<sup>70</sup>

<sup>67</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, paras. 86-114 and para. 149. These rights are also enumerated in binding human rights treaties, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

<sup>68</sup> See resolution 70/141.

<sup>69</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, para. 149.

<sup>70</sup> Resolution 41/128, annex, article 8, para. 1; Paul Gready et al., "What do human rights mean in development?", in The Palgrave Handbook of International Development, Jean Grugel and Daniel Hammett, eds. (Palgrave Macmillan UK, 2016), p. 453.

A. Economic and social development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

41. The Palestinian economy is without parallel in the modern world. Its territorial components — the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza — are separated physically from one other. Its largest geographic entity, the West Bank, has been divided by Israel into an archipelago of small islands of densely-populated areas disconnected from one another by the wall or by settlements, bypass roads connecting the settlements to each other and to the Israeli transportation system, roadblocks, exclusive zoning laws, restricted areas and military no-go zones. Within these areas occupied by Israel, the local political authority is likewise splintered: the Palestinian Authority has limited rule over a part of the fragmented West Bank, Gaza is governed by a separate political authority not accountable to the Palestinian Authority, and Israel has illegally annexed East Jerusalem.<sup>71</sup> Furthermore, Israel has imposed a comprehensive land, sea and air blockade on Gaza since 2007. Within the West Bank, Israel exercises full civil and security authority over “Area C”, which makes up over 60 per cent of this part of the territory and completely surrounds and divides the archipelago of Palestinian cities and towns, a hybrid situation that one human rights group has called “occunexation”.<sup>72</sup> The Occupied Palestinian Territory lacks any secure transit access, whether by land, sea or air, to the outside world. All of its borders, with one exception, are controlled by Israel.<sup>73</sup> No other society in the world faces such an array of cumulative challenges that includes belligerent occupation, territorial discontinuity, political and administrative divergence, geographic confinement and economic disconnectedness.

42. The Oslo Accords, of 1993, and the Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations, 1994) were meant to be interim arrangements and were considered by Palestine as a diplomatic and economic pathway for Palestinian independence by 1999. During that transitional period, the Oslo Accords left intact the extensive Israeli settlement project and permitted Israel broad authority to act on security concerns throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Paris Protocol created an economic framework with a significant reliance on Israel for currency, customs-union style trade provisions, foreign exchange arrangements and tax collection capacity that effectively maintained Palestinian dependence on Israel. A final peace settlement between Israel and Palestine has not materialized, and those interim arrangements have now become entrenched. The consequence has been that, while the Palestinian Authority has built much of the administrative and institutional capacity for national governance, it

---

<sup>71</sup> The Security Council has stated that Israel’s annexation of East Jerusalem is contrary to international law, and that East Jerusalem is deemed to be part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. See Security Council resolution 476 (1980) and resolution 478 (1980).

<sup>72</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, “49 years of control without rights: human rights of the Palestinians in the West Bank and East Jerusalem — what has changed?”, 1 June 2016. Available from www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2016/06/49years2016-en.pdf.

<sup>73</sup> The only external border point not directly controlled by Israel is the Rafah crossing between Gaza and Egypt. Rafah is used almost exclusively as a civilian crossing, and not as an economic trading junction. Egypt has kept this crossing closed for much of the past three years.

lacks the necessary economic foundation for sovereign development.<sup>74</sup> Since 2000, the Palestinian economy has experienced a volatile economic growth trajectory. When growth has occurred, it has been judged to be unsustainable because (a) it has been highly dependent upon foreign aid and private consumption of imports,<sup>75</sup> and (b) the Israeli occupation has increasingly separated and shrunk the different regions of the Palestinian territory, creating a dysfunctional economic base deprived of the capacity for autonomous development.<sup>76</sup>

43. The contradictions of attempting to build a sovereign economy under a prolonged occupation, without the realization of genuine self-determination on the foreseeable horizon, have become quite apparent. A stifled and distorted Palestinian economy provides a non-viable foundation for the sustainable and equitable social development of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Certainly, Palestine has made steady progress in several important social areas, including maternal mortality, levels of literacy and education and vaccination rates. Yet, other key indicators point to a serious situation, with social conditions and living standards stagnating or getting worse:

(a) The Palestinian economy has not advanced. In 2014, Palestinian real gross domestic product (GDP) per capita was at virtually the same level as it was in 1999, with Gaza's real GDP per capita standing at only 71 per cent of its 1999 level;<sup>77</sup>

(b) Unemployment is growing as a social scourge. In 2016, it stood at 27 per cent in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, compared to 12 per cent in 1999; in Gaza, the unemployment crisis is particularly acute, where it has reached 42 per cent, with 58 per cent of its youth (aged between 15 and 29) without work, among the highest rates in the world;<sup>78</sup>

(c) Poverty has been increasing among Palestinians since 2012, with 26 per cent of the population now deemed to be poor, and 13 per cent estimated to suffer from extreme poverty.<sup>79</sup> Food insecurity is endemic: an estimated 2.4 million people

<sup>74</sup> International Bank for Reconstruction and Development/World Bank, "West Bank and Gaza: towards economic sustainability of a future Palestinian State — promoting private sector-led growth" (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, 2012).

<sup>75</sup> The World Bank estimated that external donor aid to the Occupied Palestinian Territory declined from 32 per cent of gross domestic product (GDP) in 2008 to 6 per cent in 2015, and noted that such a donor-led growth model is unsustainable. See World Bank, "Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee" (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, April 2016).

<sup>76</sup> See International Bank for Reconstruction and Development/World Bank, "West Bank and Gaza: towards economic sustainability of a future Palestinian State — promoting private sector-led growth" and UNCTAD/APP/2016/1.

<sup>77</sup> In 2014, real GDP per capita income in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (West Bank and Gaza, not including East Jerusalem) stood at $1,737. In 1999, it stood at $1,723. In 2014, Gaza's real GDP per capita income was $971, compared to $1,372 in 1999. All figures are in constant 2004 United States dollars; current (nominal) GDP per capita figures are higher. See data published by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, available from www.pcbs.gov.ps/Portals/\_Rainbow/Documents/e-napcapitacon-1994-2014.htm.

<sup>78</sup> World Bank, "Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee" (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, September 2016).

<sup>79</sup> United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), country programming document for Palestine, 2014-2017.

in the West Bank and Gaza (57 per cent of the population) are projected to require some form of humanitarian assistance in 2016;<sup>80</sup>

(d) The industrial, agricultural and natural resource sectors are steadily shrinking in economic significance and employment size, owing to, inter alia: Israeli restrictions on market access; low confidence among potential investors because of political uncertainty; the significant loss of arable land to the Occupying Power; lack of effective economic planning powers; limited Palestinian control over important natural resources (water, land, stone quarrying, and oil and gas reserves); and the limited access to fishing resources.<sup>81</sup> The economy has become deindustrialized and its ability to export has been undercut by the decline of the agriculture and manufacturing sectors;<sup>82</sup>

(e) The Occupied Palestinian Territory continues to be a captive trading market for Israel, as it has been throughout the occupation: in recent years, about 85 per cent of Palestinian exports have gone to Israel, and it received 70 per cent of its imports from Israel. The restrictions and imbalance in the trading relationship contributed to maintaining a chronic trade deficit in the Palestinian economy of $5.2 billion in 2015, some 41 per cent of GDP;<sup>83</sup>

(f) Symptomatic of the Palestinian Government's precarious economic management powers are the substantial fiscal leakages that the Palestinian Government and the Palestinian economy suffer under the current revenue-sharing and collection agreements with Israel. These arrangements are estimated by the World Bank and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to cost the Palestinian economy at least $640 million annually (amounting to 5 per cent of GDP);<sup>84</sup>

(g) UNCTAD has estimated that, without the occupation, the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory could double its GDP, with significant reductions not only in the unemployment and poverty levels, but also in the chronic trade and budget deficits.<sup>85</sup>

44. Israel, the Occupying Power, effectively controls the economic and social development of the Palestinian territory, but it does so in quite different ways within each region. Measures that amount to violations of the right to development include the blockade of Gaza and the ensuing collapse of its economy, the fragmentation

<sup>80</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Humanitarian dashboard: 2nd quarter 2016", 18 August 2016. Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-dashboard-2nd-quarter-2016. UNRWA reported in March 2016 that 70 per cent of the total refugee population in Gaza, over 930,000 people, were dependent on food assistance, dramatically up from 10 per cent in 2000. See www.unrwa.org/newsroom/emergency-reports/gaza-situation-report-137.

<sup>81</sup> See UNCTAD/APP/2016/1. The World Bank acknowledged in 2015 that "the competitiveness of the Palestinian economy has been progressively eroding since the signing of the Oslo accords, in particular its industry and agriculture". See World Bank, "Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee" (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, September 2015).

<sup>82</sup> World Bank, "Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee" (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, September 2016).

<sup>83</sup> See UNCTAD/APP/2016/1. All amounts are in United States dollars.

<sup>84</sup> See World Bank, "Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee" (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, April 2016) and UNCTAD/APP/2016/1.

<sup>85</sup> See UNCTAD/APP/2016/1.

and cantonization of the West Bank, including separation and neglect of East Jerusalem, exploitation and appropriation of Palestinian natural resources, the regime of formal economic dependency, unilateral control over Palestine's external borders, the encumbering of personal and business mobility, restrictions on the use of agricultural lands, limitations on Palestinian fishery, the inequitable revenue sharing and tax collection agreements, and lopsided trade arrangements. The following sections examine the particular nature of Israeli domination of these areas.

Gaza

45. Israel's continued occupation of Gaza is maintained through an extensive military, economic and social blockade of the territory, which reinforces its separation from the world and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. As a form of collective punishment imposed upon an entire population, the blockade is contrary to international law.<sup>86</sup> In 2007, when Israel imposed the comprehensive blockade, the economy in Gaza had already been teetering owing to Israeli closures that had begun in the early 1990s, but it has since collapsed, along with the territory's living standards. The misery of the blockade for the population of Gaza has been compounded by the three escalations of violence between Israel and Gaza, in 2008-2009, 2012 and 2014, which killed approximately 2,500 Palestinian civilians, caused tens of thousands of injuries, displaced hundreds of thousands and inflicted extensive damage to Gaza's infrastructure. All reconstruction materials that enter Gaza must be approved by Israel, which has either limited or banned the importation of such necessary items as concrete, wood and other building materials, making the efforts to rebuild slow, difficult and costly.<sup>87</sup> In 2016, two years after the most recent hostilities ended, only 45 per cent of Gaza's energy needs are being met, causing between 16 and 18 hours of daily power cuts; 70 per cent of Gaza's population only have piped water supplies for between 6 and 8 hours, every 2 to 4 days; and 65,000 displaced Gazans from the 2014 escalation of hostilities still do not have reconstructed homes. An estimated 80 per cent of the population depends upon humanitarian aid to some degree for survival. On a more positive note, many of the damaged or destroyed hospitals and schools from the most recent conflict have been repaired or rebuilt, with funding from the international community.<sup>88</sup>

46. Over the past decade, Gaza has undergone a process of "de-development", with Israel enforcing a policy of maintaining Gaza at a level of essential humanitarian requirements and little more.<sup>89</sup> A major study by the United Nations in

<sup>86</sup> A/69/347, paras. 30-34 and A/HRC/25/40, paras. 24-30. The Special Rapporteur notes the conclusion of the Secretary-General's Panel of Inquiry on the 31 May 2010 Flotilla Incident ("Palmer Report") (September 2011) which held that the blockade is lawful, but finds that the observations of the group of United Nations independent human rights experts which criticized the conclusion of the Palmer Report to be a more persuasive reading of international law. Report available from: www.un.org/News/dh/infocus/middle\_east/Gaza\_Flotilla\_Panel\_Report.pdf.

<sup>87</sup> Gisha — Legal Center for Freedom of Movement, "Two years later: the long road to reconstruction and recovery" (2016). Available from www.gisha.org/UserFiles/File/publications/2\_years\_later/Reconstruction\_EN.pdf.

<sup>88</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Gaza: two years after", 26 August 2016. Available from www.ochaopt.org/sites/default/files/gaza\_war\_2\_years\_after\_english.pdf.

<sup>89</sup> Sara Roy, The Gaza Strip: The Political Economy of De-development, 3rd ed. (Washington, D.C.,

2012 questioned whether, under then-current conditions, Gaza would even be a sustainable place to live by 2020.<sup>90</sup> In 2015, the World Bank reviewed what it called “the staggering cost of violence and blockade on Gaza’s economy and living standards”. The World Bank, after noting the grim levels of unemployment and poverty, stated that the approximately 70 per cent of Palestinians who work in the shrunken private sector in Gaza earn an average monthly salary of $174, less than the legal minimum wage of around $400. While Israel has recently allowed a limited amount of goods produced in Gaza to be traded to the West Bank and Israel, exports from Gaza are at only 11 per cent of their level before the 2007 blockade was imposed. The World Bank found that Gaza’s GDP between 2007 and 2012 would have been 51 per cent higher had it not been for the combined effects of the blockade and armed conflict. The economy is now dependent for about 90 per cent of its GDP on expenditures by the Palestinian Government, the United Nations and other external remittances and donor projects.<sup>91</sup>

47. With respect to agriculture, Israel has unilaterally decreed a strip of land 300 m within Gaza along the border fence as a prohibited or restricted buffer zone, thus inhibiting the use of approximately 35 per cent of Gaza’s farming land. Israel has also imposed tight restrictions on the maritime zone that Gazan fishermen can utilize, with as little as 3 nautical miles available for fishing. Even within stated limits, fishermen often face arbitrary arrest, confiscation of equipment and have even been shot at.<sup>92</sup> The restrictions have stunted the capacity of those two sectors to generate economic growth and employment.<sup>93</sup>

48. The depleted economy has resulted in widespread social anguish for the Palestinians in Gaza. The World Bank reported in May 2015 that “the quality of life for the large majority of Gaza’s citizens is hardly bearable”.<sup>94</sup> Very few Gazans are able to obtain permission from Israel or Egypt to travel outside of the Strip, whether for business, family, health or educational reasons. As a consequence of the confinement and the armed conflicts, the World Bank stated in the same report that even the sky-high poverty and unemployment rates “fail to portray the degree of suffering of Gaza’s citizens due to poor electricity and water/sewage availability, war-related psychological trauma, limited movement, and other adverse effects of wars and the blockade”. The water aquifer, which supplies Gaza’s drinking source, is vastly overdrawn and only 5 to 10 per cent of the aquifer water is still drinkable. The lack of reliable electricity not only harms the economy but also seriously degrades the quality of everyday life. Most of Gaza’s sewage is dumped into the Mediterranean sea untreated, an estimated 100 million litres daily, because of Institute for Palestine Studies, 2016).

---

<sup>90</sup> UNRWA, “Gaza in 2020: a liveable place?” (Jerusalem, Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, 2012).

<sup>91</sup> World Bank, economic monitoring reports to the ad hoc liaison committee (May 2015, September 2015 and April 2016).

<sup>92</sup> Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, “Israeli violations against Palestinian fishermen in the naval part of the access restricted area”, first quarterly report, 2016, pg. 11.

<sup>93</sup> See Gisha, “Ten years later”. Available from features.gisha.org/ten-years-later/; see also Diakonia, “Within range: an analysis of the legality of the land ‘buffer zone’ in the Gaza Strip” (Jerusalem, Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Programme, 2011).

<sup>94</sup> World Bank, “Economic monitoring report to the ad hoc liaison committee” (Washington, D.C., World Bank Group, May 2015).

unrepaired damages to the treatment plants, lack of electricity to run them to capacity and failing infrastructure, which raises the risk of infectious diseases.<sup>95</sup> The quality of health services continues to deteriorate, with significant shortages of essential drugs and disposables, the non-payment or underpayment of medical staff salaries and compromised health-care service delivery owing to prolonged fuel cuts. This is alarming in the face of the thousands of Gazans with major physical disabilities and the estimated 20 per cent of the population who may have acquired mental health problems in the aftermath of the recent conflicts.<sup>96</sup> Observing the downward slide of living conditions, one leading human rights organization has stated that “life in Gaza is like life in a collapsing third-world country, a reality that is not the result of a natural calamity, but purely man-made”.<sup>97</sup>

The West Bank

49. The economy of the West Bank is not at the dire level of Gaza’s, but nor is it flourishing. Between 1999 and 2014, the economy only grew by 14 per cent in real terms, in large part because of the fragmentation of the territory under the occupation and the pervasive political and economic uncertainty regarding the Occupied Palestinian Territory’s future.<sup>98</sup> The current stage of the fragmentation can be traced to 1995, when the Oslo II Accords divided the West Bank into three areas (and illegally annexed East Jerusalem):

(a) Area A, which consists of the principal Palestinian cities and towns (except for parts of Hebron), and amounts to 18 per cent of the West Bank; it is under the civil and security governance of the Palestinian Authority, although Israel does conduct regular security intrusions with or without coordination with the Palestinian Authority;

(b) Area B, which comprises about 400 Palestinian villages and adjacent farmland, and amounts to 22 per cent of the West Bank; it is under Palestinian civil authority, but exclusive Israeli security control. The vast majority of the 2.4 million West Bank Palestinians live in Areas A and B;

(c) Area C, encompassing 60 per cent of the West Bank, is under full Israeli civil and security control. Area C contains about 225 Israeli settlements and between 370,000 and 400,000 settlers, along with about 180,000 Palestinians. Area C completely surrounds the Palestinian communities in Areas A and B.

50. In the subsequent two decades since Oslo II, the division has become ever deeper. All Palestinian travel and economic trade that requires crossing between the three Areas, to Israel or to the outside world, is subject to Israeli security arrangements. Although the Palestinian Authority has some civil jurisdiction in

<sup>95</sup> Ibid.

<sup>96</sup> See Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Humanitarian dashboard: 2nd quarter 2016”, 18 August 2016, available from <http://www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-dashboard-2nd-quarter-2016>, and “Gaza two years on: the impact of the 2014 hostilities on the health sector”, Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (June 2016), available from www.ochaopt.org/content/gaza-two-years-impact-2014-hostilities-health-sector.

<sup>97</sup> B’Tselem, “Reality check: almost fifty years of occupation”, 5 June 2016. Available from www.btselem.org/publications/201606\_reality\_check.

<sup>98</sup> In 2014, real GDP per capita income of the West Bank stood at $2,269. In 1999, it was at $1,948. Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, Statistical abstract of Palestine.

Areas A and B, all major military, security and economic decisions for the occupied territory rest with Israel. Meanwhile, Israel has financially and administratively devolved virtually all of the West Bank economic and social governance functions to the Palestinian Authority, funded partly by the donor community.

51. Area C is vital to the well-being of the Palestinian economy, as it is endowed with minerals and stone quarrying, productive farmland, the potential for tourism, telecommunications and new housing, and the contiguous territory required for freedom of mobility within the West Bank. The World Bank has estimated that Palestinian GDP could have grown by 35 per cent over existing levels — $3.4 billion (in 2011 United States dollars) — and Palestinian employment would similarly have increased by 35 per cent were it not for Israel's restrictions on Palestinian access to Area C.<sup>99</sup> Yet, rather than integrating Area C with the rest of the West Bank to prepare Palestine for sustainable independence, Israel has instead treated Area C as its own economic and political hinterland, and as the main geographic space for its illegal settlements. Despite clear prohibitions in international humanitarian law against pillage by the Occupying Power, Israel has been exploiting the natural resources in Area C for its own benefit, including quarries, Dead Sea minerals and water.<sup>100</sup>

52. Israel has unilaterally assigned 70 per cent of Area C for its settlements, their adjacent lands and their extensive road, military and security network; all of this is off-limits to Palestinian development. It has also created a comprehensive planning regime to facilitate the confiscation of West Bank land and the expansion of the Israeli settlements. The planning regime excludes any Palestinian participation or substantive regard for their interests. The consequences are that, in Area C, Palestinians have less than 1 per cent of the land for construction, the vast majority of building permit requests by Palestinians for housing and infrastructure are denied, Israeli military demolitions of Palestinian homes are frequent and growing, and thousands of Palestinians — many of them Bedouins — are being forcibly transferred from their homes and traditional lands.<sup>101</sup> As one human rights organization has observed, “tens of thousands of hectares, including pastureland and farmland, have been seized from Palestinians over the years and generously allocated to settlements ... All lands allocated to settlements have been designated closed military zones which Palestinians may not enter without a permit”.<sup>102</sup> This separate and unequal development in the West Bank, and particularly in Area C, has led to the creation of two starkly different legal, economic and political universes within one territory, with Israeli settlers enjoying a vastly superior system of laws, <sup>99</sup> Orhan Nksic, Nur Nasser Eddin and Massimiliano Cali, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Washington, D.C., International Bank for Reconstruction and Development/World Bank, 2014).

<sup>100</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, articles 33 (2), 47 and 53; B'Tselem, Acting the Landlord: Israel's Policy in Area C, the West Bank (Jerusalem, 2013).

<sup>101</sup> See Orhan Nksic and others, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy; Diakonia, “Planning to fail: the planning regime in Area C of the West Bank — an international law perspective” (Jerusalem, Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Resource Centre, 2013); and Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Increase in West Bank demolitions during July-August”, Monthly Humanitarian Bulletin (August 2016). Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/increase-west-bank-demolitions-during-july-august.

<sup>102</sup> B'Tselem, “Reality check: almost fifty years of occupation”.

roads, judicial systems, personal mobility, security, economic opportunities, civil and political rights and living standards than the West Bank Palestinians among whom they live. Some informed observers have recently speculated as to whether Israel is preparing to formally annex Area C,<sup>103</sup> with the Government of Israel having already prepared the ostensible legal basis for such a claim.<sup>104</sup>

East Jerusalem

53. In recent years, East Jerusalem has become increasingly detached from its natural economic and social connections to the rest of the West Bank through Israel's construction of a ring of settlement blocs and the wall. It has also suffered as a result of long-term neglect by the Israeli Municipality of Jerusalem. After Israel's annexation of East Jerusalem and adjacent parts of the West Bank in 1967, it built 12 settlements on confiscated land in order to create a physical barrier between the city and the rest of the West Bank and to manufacture a sovereign claim over East Jerusalem. In 2014, East Jerusalem's population consisted of 315,000 Palestinians and 210,000 Israeli settlers. Human rights organizations have pointed out that Israel has sought to discourage Palestinian population growth in Jerusalem through a variety of discriminatory planning, social services and residency rights policies.<sup>105</sup>

54. The physical isolation of East Jerusalem has meant that its traditional role as the mercantile and trading centre for the West Bank has been significantly reduced. In 2013, a study by UNCTAD noted that the wall had created an estimated direct economic loss of over a billion dollars to Palestinian Jerusalemites since its construction, with a further estimated adverse impact of $200 million annually in lost economic opportunities. As reported by UNCTAD, "occupation has affected the economy of East Jerusalem at multiple levels, including the labour market, product market, trade and investment", resulting in the city's declining contribution to Palestinian GDP. Only 13 per cent of East Jerusalem is designated for Palestinian housing, compared to triple that area assigned for Israeli settlers.<sup>106</sup>

55. Socially, Palestinian East Jerusalem has been largely ignored by the Municipality and living standards are far below those in West Jerusalem and in the Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem. East Jerusalem's infrastructure has been neglected over the years and is in poor shape, with a failing road system, a lack of public parks and serious deficiencies in the public transportation system, emergency services, water, garbage collection, policing and street lighting, with some

<sup>103</sup> Al-Monitor, "Is Israel annexing West Bank Area C?", 14 August 2016. Available from www.al-monitor.com/pulse/originals/2016/08/oslo-accords-area-c-annexation-economic-development-settlers.html.

<sup>104</sup> See "Report on the Legal Status of Building in Judea and Samaria" (Jerusalem, June 2012). Available from <http://israelipalestinian.procon.org/sourcefiles/The-Levy-Commission-Report-on-the-Legal-Status-of-Building-in-Judea-and-Samaria.pdf>; Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Israeli Settlements and International Law. Available from www.mfa.gov.il/mfa/foreignpolicy/peace/guide/pages/israeli%20settlements%20and%20international%20law.aspx.

<sup>105</sup> See B'Tselem, "Reality check: almost fifty years of occupation"; see also Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies, Statistical Yearbook (2016), table III/4, available from www.jiis.org.il/upload/yearbook/2016/shnaton\_C0416.pdf.

<sup>106</sup> UNCTAD, "The Palestinian economy in East Jerusalem: enduring annexation, isolation and disintegration" (Geneva, 2013).

Palestinian neighbourhoods still not connected to the municipal sewage system.<sup>107</sup> Alarming, 82 per cent of Palestinian Jerusalemites in 2014 were living below the poverty line, which is three times the level of Israeli Jerusalemites, and 6 per cent higher than in 2013.<sup>108</sup> The construction of the wall left approximately 80,000 Palestinian Jerusalemites on its easterly side and they must now travel through checkpoints to access work and social services in the city; while they still pay municipal taxes, many of them receive very little, if any, basic services.<sup>109</sup>

B. Assessing Israel's respect for the right to development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

56. An Occupying Power that is administrating an occupied territory in a manner consistent with the right to development would ensure that the occupation complied fully with the range of international legal principles and obligations set out in the right to development. In particular, the Occupying Power would respect and encourage the right to self-determination. It would treat the territory as an integral whole. It would be dedicated to returning the entire territory to the sovereign power, that is to say, the people of the occupied territory, as soon as security and order permitted. It would actively assist in the creation of an effective sovereign administration to assume authority. It would make no sovereign claim on any part of the territory, nor would it transfer any of its civilian population into the occupied territory. During the occupation, it would administer the territory in good faith and in the interests of the protected population as a trustee and usufructuary, and it would respect their laws, public buildings and infrastructure, political order, economy, property regime, cultural customs and social structure. It would encourage the development of the territory's sovereign economy by allowing it to fully flourish within its potential, and it would refrain from imposing any discriminatory economic practices or unnecessary barriers. It would not plunder, enrich itself or create an economic dependency. It would recognize that the natural resources of the occupied territory belong to the sovereign power, it would act to preserve them and it would only utilize those resources that are truly necessary to effectively administer the occupation while it lasts. It would secure and promote the full enjoyment of human rights, subject only to those restrictions absolutely necessary to protect security and public life. It would not tolerate, let alone inflict, humanitarian suffering. It would prohibit discriminatory laws, practices and treatment. In addition, as much as possible, the Occupying Power would encourage participatory decision-making by the protected population, as a vital step to restoring political power to the sovereign power.

57. Israel's occupation over the past 49 years has been seriously deficient in its respect for the legal principles and obligations embedded in the right to development. Fundamentally, Israel has obstructed the Palestinian people's right to self-determination by a range of measures. It has illegally annexed East Jerusalem. It has transferred approximately 570,000 Israeli civilians to live in State-sponsored settlements in occupied territory. It has separated Gaza's economy and people from the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It has treated much of the West Bank as its own sovereign land for economic and demographic purposes. The duration of the occupation has lasted well beyond any reasonable length for any Occupying Power acting in good faith. The diminished geographic territory available to Palestinians is directly linked to Israel's extensive and expanding settlement project, including its network of highways, adjacent lands and extensive military-security apparatus; indeed, without Israel's settlement project, there would be no rationale for the continuing occupation.

<sup>107</sup> See Association for Civil Rights in Israel, "East Jerusalem 2015: facts and figures", available from www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/EJ-Facts-and-Figures-2015.pdf; see also Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies, "Explosive reality and proposals for de-escalation", available from www.jiis.org/upload/East Jerusalem summary\_Sept24\_2015\_Final.pdf.

<sup>108</sup> Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies, Statistical Yearbook (2016), table 6.1.

<sup>109</sup> See UNCTAD, "The Palestinian economy in East Jerusalem: enduring annexation, isolation and disintegration"; see also Association for Civil Rights in Israel, "Ten years of unfulfilled promises in East Jerusalem", available from www.acri.org.il/en/2015/08/09/ej-10years/.

58. In turn, the entrenched occupation and its denial of self-determination has bred conditions that lead to a host of other human rights violations, such as widespread food insecurity, the denial of building permits and the destruction of housing, the confiscation of property, the ongoing imposition of collective punishment, arbitrary military raids, a punitive court and detention system and a humanitarian crisis in Gaza. One of the most serious human rights violations has been Israel's entrenchment of a colonial-like regime in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with two separate and unequal systems as regards laws, roads, justice regimes, access to water, social services, freedom of mobility, political and civil rights, security and living standards. Taken together, Israel has reneged on its obligations to uphold, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the right to development and the right to the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights by the Palestinian people.

59. While the Palestinian Government has some limited planning and investment jurisdiction, its powers are subordinate to Israel's overriding ability to control or veto all major economic decisions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Israel's discriminatory planning regime, particularly in East Jerusalem and Area C, minimizes or excludes Palestinian participation. The economy has been functioning well below its capacity and potential and remains deeply dependent upon international donor funding. Many international agencies ascribe the Palestinian economy's weak performance primarily to the occupation and its many barriers. The social consequences of the besieged Palestinian economy are dire: very high unemployment rates, widespread poverty, crumbling infrastructure, significant housing shortages, low standards of living and, in Gaza, widespread misery. Rather than the development of a viable economic base as a necessary path to realizing self-determination and satisfying the right to development, the occupation is instead deepening and the horizon for creating a sovereign economy is vanishing.

IV. Recommendations

60. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel bring a complete end to the almost 50 years of occupation of the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967. The Special Rapporteur also recommends that the Government of Israel take the following immediate measures:

(a) Ensure that domestic legislation is in line with international standards as described in the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms

by Law Enforcement Officials, and is rigorously applied accordingly to those standards;

(b) Conduct thorough, effective, independent and impartial investigations in all instances where the use of lethal or excessive force or the commission of unlawful acts are alleged against Israeli security forces, so as to ensure genuine accountability;

(c) Immediately end the practice of administrative detention and the use of secret evidence, and release or charge all detainees;

(d) Introduce effective measures to reduce the number of children in detention and ensure that any detentions are fully compliant with the protections contained in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other applicable legal instruments;

(e) Immediately end the practice of collective punishment in all its forms, including punitive demolitions and unjustified restrictions on freedom of movement;

(f) Immediately end the practice of forcible transfer and the destruction of homes and property, including those of Palestinian Bedouin communities.

61. With respect to the international legal obligations contained within the Declaration on the Right to Development, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel:

(a) Allow for freedom of movement of people and goods throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(b) End the blockade of Gaza and lift all restrictions on imports and exports, with due consideration to justifiable security concerns;

(c) Allow the Palestinian Authority to assume security control in Area B and civil and security control in Area C so as to end the geographic fragmentation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(d) Take meaningful steps to encourage a balanced trading relationship with the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including measures that will enhance the productive capacity of Palestinian manufacturing and resource development;

(e) Immediately end the practice of utilizing the natural resources of the Occupied Palestinian Territory for its own benefit;

(f) Remove the wall and fully compensate for the economic damages that it has caused;

(g) End the punitive practice of withholding the indirect taxes collected for the benefit of the Palestinian Government;

(h) Fully implement the international legal obligations contained in the Declaration on the Right to Development.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
23 October 2017

Original: English

---

Seventy-second session

Agenda item 72 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, hereby submits his second report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives, United Nations representatives and Palestinian officials in Amman, in connection with the mission of the Special Rapporteur to the region in May 2017. The report addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. The present report provides a brief overview of the most pressing human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the time of its submission, as identified by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 in conversations and meetings with civil society. The report then presents a detailed analysis of the international legal framework of the occupation as it continues past its fiftieth year.

2. The Special Rapporteur would like to draw attention to the fact that, while he stands ready to conduct a mission to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, permission to do so has not been granted by the Israeli authorities. The Special Rapporteur has regularly requested access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory from Israel, most recently on 24 March 2017. As at the writing of the present report, no reply had been received. The Special Rapporteur notes that his two immediate predecessors in this position were similarly not given access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The Special Rapporteur further notes that an open dialogue among all parties is essential for the protection and promotion of human rights and emphasizes that he is ready and willing to engage with all parties. In addition, he emphasizes that access to the territory is an important component in the development of a comprehensive understanding of the situation. This pattern of non-cooperation with the mandate is a serious concern. A full and comprehensive understanding of the situation based on first-hand observation is extremely beneficial to the work of Special Rapporteurs.

3. The report is based primarily on written submissions as well as consultations with civil society representatives, victims, witnesses, Palestinian government officials and United Nations representatives held in Amman during the Special Rapporteur's annual mission to the region in May 2017.

4. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur focuses on the human rights and humanitarian law violations committed by Israel, as set out in the mandate of the Rapporteur.<sup>1</sup> The Rapporteur notes that human rights violations by any State party or non-State actor are deplorable and will only hinder the prospects for peace.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation for the full cooperation with his mandate extended by the Government of the State of Palestine. The Special Rapporteur also wishes to extend his thanks to all those who travelled to Amman to meet with him and to those who were unable to travel but made written or oral submissions. The Special Rapporteur acknowledges the essential work done by human rights defenders and civil society and expresses his commitment to supporting this work as much as possible.

6. The Special Rapporteur would like to note that several groups were unable to travel to Amman to meet with him owing to travel restrictions imposed by the Israeli authorities. This was particularly the case with individuals coming from Gaza; as a result, all individuals and organizations based in Gaza were consulted by videoconference.

II. Current human rights situation

7. In the fiftieth year of the occupation, the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is in a state of severe deterioration. The human rights and humanitarian law violations associated with the occupation have an impact on every aspect of life for Palestinians living in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza. The present report does not provide a comprehensive overview of all issues of concern, but instead seeks only to highlight some of the most urgent concerns at this moment.

---

<sup>1</sup> As specified in the mandate of the Special Rapporteur set out in Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2.

A. Gaza

8. Since April 2017, Gaza has been facing a severe electricity crisis, which deteriorated even further over the course of June. As at the time of writing of the present report, no durable solution has been found and the people of Gaza are living with often as little as four hours of electricity per day.<sup>2</sup> Gaza continued to experience electricity outages of 18–20 hours per day, undermining the provision of basic services.<sup>3</sup> The right to health for Palestinians is of particular concern as a result of this crisis, as hospitals and medical facilities are severely affected by the lack of electricity. Hospitals are postponing elective surgeries and are forced to discharge patients prematurely. In addition, water supplies are at risk, with most homes receiving water through the piped network for only a few hours every three to five days, while the desalination plants are functioning at only 15 per cent of their capacity. More than 108 million litres of untreated sewage were reportedly being discharged into the Mediterranean Sea every day.<sup>4</sup> The World Health Organization (WHO) noted that targeted humanitarian interventions were preventing “the complete collapse of the health sector” during the crisis.<sup>5</sup>

9. It must be noted that the humanitarian crisis in Gaza, both the recent sharp decline in the situation as well as the long-term challenges faced in Gaza over the past 10 years, is entirely human made. The current electricity crisis (the result of Israel’s reduction in its supply of electricity to Gaza stemming from a decision of the Palestinian Authority prompted by the internal political divide between Hamas and Fatah) was entirely preventable. In addition, Israel, as the occupying power (A/HRC/34/38, paras. 10–12), is obligated to ensure that adequate hygiene and public health standards are maintained in the occupied territory, as well as to ensure the provision of food and medical care to the population under occupation.<sup>6</sup> The Special Rapporteur calls upon all parties to respect their obligations to the people of Gaza under international human rights and international humanitarian law.

10. Compounding the health concerns raised by the electricity crisis are the increasing difficulties faced by patients seeking to travel through the Erez crossing point out of Gaza for medical treatment. The rate of Israel’s denial or delay of permit requests rose in the second half of 2016 (A/HRC/34/70, para. 21). In July 2017, the situation remained concerning. Of permit applications in the month of July, 42.6 per cent were denied or delayed (787 applications).<sup>7</sup> Delayed response

<sup>2</sup> See www.haaretz.com/middle-east-news/palestinians/1.800735.

<sup>3</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Humanitarian bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory” (August 2017). Available from www.ochaopt.org/sites/default/files/hummonitor\_august\_2017\_2.pdf.

<sup>4</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Gaza crisis: urgent funding appeal” (July 2017). Available from www.ochaopt.org/sites/default/files/gaza\_urgent\_humanitarian\_funding\_v5\_3july2017\_10am\_1.pdf.

<sup>5</sup> World Health Organization (WHO), “WHO situation report: Gaza, Occupied Palestinian Territory — July to August 2017”. Available from www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/WHO-Special-Situation-Report-on-Gaza\_July\_-\_August\_.pdf?ua=1.

<sup>6</sup> Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention), arts. 55 and 56.

<sup>7</sup> WHO, “Health access for referral patients from the Gaza Strip”, monthly report (July 2017). Available from http://www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/documents/WHO\_monthly\_Gaza\_access\_report\_July\_2017.pdf?ua=1.

times can lead to patients missing appointments and delaying critical care. In August 2017, five cancer patients died while awaiting permits to travel for needed care.<sup>8</sup>

B. West Bank

11. The previous report of the Special Rapporteur highlighted the sharp rise in announcements of new settlement construction seen at the start of 2016 (A/HRC/34/70, paras. 9–12). According to Peace Now, there have been tenders for construction of 2,858 housing units since the start of 2017, a significant increase over 2016 (42 housing units) and more than have been recorded in the past 10 years at least.<sup>9</sup> In addition, for the first time in 25 years, the Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu, announced a new settlement, on which ground was broken for construction in June.<sup>10</sup>

12. Accompanying the announcements above, there have been a number of statements from political leaders calling for continued settlement expansion and in many cases annexation.<sup>11</sup> At the beginning of the year, Mr. Netanyahu reportedly said, in a meeting with members of the inner security cabinet, that he had lifted all restrictions on construction in East Jerusalem and that he would also advance construction in West Bank settlements.<sup>12</sup>

13. These statements, combined with the reality of the expansion of settlements and extensive announcements of new construction, put the two-state solution on life support, with a fading pulse, and ensure the continuation of human rights violations associated with settlements, including limitations on freedom of movement affecting the rights to education and health, heightened risk of arrest and arbitrary detention, use of land and natural resources thus hindering Palestinians' right to development, and many others. In addition, as emphasized in the Special Rapporteur's report to the Human Rights Council in 2017, Palestinians and Israelis seeking to draw attention to these human rights violations are increasingly targeted — in the West Bank with arrest and arbitrary detention and in Israel with campaigns and legislation seeking to delegitimize the work of human rights organizations (see A/HRC/34/70).

C. East Jerusalem

14. In East Jerusalem, as in the rest of the West Bank, settlements, as well as the demolition of homes and the displacement of Palestinians, are of deep concern. On 2 October 2017, Mr. Netanyahu announced his support for the Greater Jerusalem Bill — legislation that would reportedly extend the municipal boundaries of

<sup>8</sup> Ibid., (August 2017). Available from www.emro.who.int/images/stories/palestine/documents/WHO\_monthly\_Gaza\_access\_report\_Aug\_2017\_Final.pdf?ua=1.

<sup>9</sup> See <http://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/construction>.

<sup>10</sup> Peter Beaumont, "Israel begins work in first settlement in 25 years as Jared Kushner flies in", The Guardian, 20 June 2017. Available from www.theguardian.com/world/2017/jun/20/israel-new-settlement-benjamin-netanyahu-jared-kushner-amichai-amona; and Maayan Lubell, "Israel cabinet approves first West Bank settlement in 20 years", Reuters, 30 March 2017. Available from www.reuters.com/article/us-israel-palestinians-settlement/israeli-cabinet-approves-first-west-bank-settlement-in-20-years-idUSKBN1711K6.

<sup>11</sup> Amnesty International, "Israel/Occupied Palestinian Territory: a call to States to stop sustaining illegal settlements", public statement, 7 June 2017. Available from www.amnesty.nl/content/uploads/2017/06/Public-Rationale-English.pdf?x41591, p.2.

<sup>12</sup> Barak Ravid, "Netanyahu pledges unrestricted construction in East Jerusalem, settlement blocs", Haaretz, 22 January 2017. Available from www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-1.766796.

Jerusalem to include a number of settlements.<sup>13</sup> Accompanying moves such as this, demolitions and evictions of Palestinian residents of East Jerusalem continue at a high rate, with 116 total demolitions recorded from the start of the year through mid-September 2017, displacing 202 people.<sup>14</sup> Demolitions in East Jerusalem are justified by the occupying power on either an administrative basis (when buildings are built without proper permits, although permits are nearly impossible for Palestinians to obtain) (A/HRC/34/38, para. 26), or as a punitive measure against families of attackers or alleged attackers (A/HRC/34/36, para. 31, and A/HRC/34/38, paras. 30–33).

III. Legal framework of occupation

15. In June 2017, Israel's occupation of the Palestinian territory (the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza) marked its fiftieth anniversary. This is the longest-running military occupation in the modern world.<sup>15</sup> Notwithstanding insistent calls by the international community, most recently in 2016, that the Israeli occupation must come to a complete end,<sup>16</sup> that many of its features are in profound breach of international law,<sup>17</sup> and that its perpetuation both violates the fundamental right of the Palestinian people to self-determination<sup>18</sup> and undermines the possibility of a two-state solution,<sup>19</sup> it has become more entrenched and harsher than ever. Indeed, the Israeli occupation has become a legal and humanitarian oxymoron: an occupation without end.<sup>20</sup>

16. These resolutions adopted by the Security Council and the General Assembly in 2016 are far from the first time that the international community has spoken with urgency about ending Israel's occupation. Thirty-seven years ago, in June 1980, the Council, sufficiently alarmed by the duration and severity of the occupation and Israel's defiance of prior resolutions, adopted resolution 476 (1980). At the time, the Israeli occupation was already 13 years old. In resolution 476 (1980), the Council reaffirmed the overriding necessity to end the prolonged occupation of Arab territories occupied by Israel" and strongly deplored the continuing refusal of Israel to comply with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly.

17. The inability to end the Israeli occupation has been an abject failure of international diplomacy, a darkening stain on the efficacy of international law and the source of multiple broken promises to the Palestinian people. Nor does the prolongation of this occupation serve the people of Israel, for it corrodes their society and their public institutions by entangling them in their Government's drive

<sup>13</sup> Peter Beaumont, "Netanyahu backs annexation of 19 West Bank settlements", The Guardian, 3 October 2017. Available from www.theguardian.com/world/2017/oct/03/netanyahu-backs-annexation-of-west-bank-settlements.

<sup>14</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Occupied Palestinian Territory, "Protection of civilians, reporting period: 12–25 September 2017". Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/protection-civilians-report-12-25-september-2017.

<sup>15</sup> International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), "Fifty years of occupation: where do we go from here?", 2 June 2017. Available from www.icrc.org/en/document/fifty-years-occupation-where-do-we-go-here.

<sup>16</sup> See General Assembly resolution 71/23.

<sup>17</sup> Ibid. See also resolution 71/97.

<sup>18</sup> See General Assembly resolution 71/184.

<sup>19</sup> See Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>20</sup> John Kerry, Secretary of State of the United States of America, in his "Remarks on Middle East peace" on 28 December 2016, warned against Israel's "permanent occupation", "perpetual occupation" and "seemingly endless occupation" of the Palestinian territory; see <https://2009-2017.state.gov/secretary/remarks/2016/12/266119.htm>.

to foreclose a viable and just solution to the half-century of occupation and the century-long conflict, and makes them the beneficiaries — unwittingly or not — of a profoundly unequal and unjust relationship.

18. If Israel's occupation of the Palestinian territory by 1980 was already prolonged and if it was already a matter of overwhelming necessity to end it, and Israel had already demonstrated by 1980 its unwillingness to comply with the explicit directions of the international community, how are we, in 2017, to characterize the occupation? The prevailing approach of the international community has been to treat Israel as the lawful occupant of the Palestinian territory, albeit an occupant that has committed a number of grave breaches of international law in its conduct of the occupation, including the settlement enterprise,<sup>21</sup> the construction of the wall,<sup>22</sup> the annexation of East Jerusalem<sup>23</sup> and the systemic violations of Palestinian human rights.<sup>24</sup> In the view of the Special Rapporteur, while the lawful occupant approach may have been the appropriate diplomatic and legal portrayal of the occupation in its early years, it has since become wholly inadequate both as an accurate legal characterization of what the occupation has become and as a viable political, diplomatic and legal catalyst to compel Israel to completely and finally terminate the occupation in accordance with its international legal obligations.

19. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur considers whether Israel's role as an entrenched and defiant occupant of the Palestinian territory has now reached the point of illegality under international law. To make this determination, the core principles that govern the lawful conduct of an occupation under the relevant principles of international law are identified and employed to examine Israel's administration of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and assess whether Israel's role as the occupying power remains lawful or not.

A. General principles of international law and occupation

20. Two decades into the twenty-first century, the norm that guides our global community is that people are citizens, not subjects, of the State that rules them. Accordingly, they are entitled to express their legal identity and their inalienable rights through their sovereign State. Colonialism, occupation and other forms of alien rule are very much the exception to this norm, and they can only be justified in law and international practice as a short-term and abnormal condition that is leading unhesitatingly towards self-determination and/or sovereignty. Most other forms of alien rule would be, ipso facto, unlawful.

21. In our modern world, fundamental rights and protections (including protections under international humanitarian law, civil and political rights such as the right to self-determination, and economic, social and cultural rights) are to be given a purposive and broad interpretation and a liberal application. This is because they embody the rights and freedoms that go to the core of our humanity and are meant to be universally available to, and actionable by, all of us.<sup>25</sup> Conversely, exceptions to these fundamental rights (such as military necessity, significant threats to national security or public emergencies) are to be interpreted and applied in a

<sup>21</sup> See Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>22</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 142.

<sup>23</sup> See Security Council resolution 478 (1980). See also General Assembly resolution 71/25.

<sup>24</sup> See General Assembly resolution 71/98.

<sup>25</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

measured and narrow fashion, so as not to unduly impair the breadth, accessibility and enjoyment of these fundamental rights by all peoples.<sup>26</sup>

22. Created in the aftermath of the bitter experiences of total war and extreme civilian suffering in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, international humanitarian law is embodied in the Regulations annexed to the Convention respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907 (the Hague Regulations), the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilians in Time of War of 12 August 1949 (the Fourth Geneva Convention) and the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of international armed conflicts of 1977 (Protocol I), among other instruments, as well as in the practices of the modern world. Three of the core purposes of modern international humanitarian law as related to foreign military occupation are: (a) to closely regulate an occupation to ensure that the territory achieves, or is restored to, a state of sovereignty; (b) to prevent the territory from becoming a fruit of conquest; and (c) to safeguard the protected people under occupation. As with other areas of international law, international humanitarian law is constantly evolving — within the natural scope of its foundational instruments, principles and purposes — to address new challenges in humanitarian protection in situations where the answers are not always expressly laid out in these primary documents.<sup>27</sup>

23. Two of the most significant developments in international law in recent years have been the acceptance that international human rights law, including the overarching right to self-determination, is integral to the application of the laws of occupation. The International Court of Justice has affirmed that international human rights law continues to apply in times of conflict and throughout an occupation.<sup>28</sup> In practice, this means that humanitarian law and human rights law are intended to be complementary, not mutually exclusive, in their application to an occupation,<sup>29</sup> and the protected people under occupation are to enjoy the full panoply of human rights, subject only to any legitimate derogations that are scrupulously justified either by emergencies or the requirements of military rule under occupation.<sup>30</sup>

24. As well, the right of peoples to self-determination, recognized as a right erga omnes in international law,<sup>31</sup> applies to all peoples under occupation and other forms of alien rule.<sup>32</sup> The Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations provides that: “Every State has the duty to refrain from any forcible action which deprives peoples ... of their right to self-determination and

<sup>26</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, art. 4 (“... may take measures derogating from their obligations under the present Covenant to the extent strictly required by the exigencies of the situation ...”); and International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, art. 4.

<sup>27</sup> Eyal Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (Princeton, New Jersey, Princeton University Press, 2004) (“... it [is] not simply a task of looking up the relevant articles in The Hague Regulations or the Fourth Geneva Convention. International law has evolved significantly since the time these two instruments were drafted.”).

<sup>28</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, paras. 106–113; and Armed Activities in the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2005, p. 168, paras. 178 and 179.

<sup>29</sup> Vaios Koutroulis, “The application of international humanitarian law and international human rights law in situations of prolonged occupation: only a matter of time?”, International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 94, No. 885 (Spring 2012).

<sup>30</sup> Noam Lubell, “Human rights obligations in military occupation”, International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 94, No. 885 (Spring 2012).

<sup>31</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, para. 88. This means that all States are required to do all that they can to secure self-determination for the people under alien rule.

<sup>32</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, para. 88.

freedom and independence”.<sup>33</sup> In its advisory opinion on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the International Court of Justice expressly affirmed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, that Israel has a duty to respect this right, and that a number of the features of the Israeli occupation had “severely impede[d]” the exercise of this right.<sup>34</sup> Furthermore, the evolution of the laws of occupation, and the application of the right to self-determination to these laws, has meant that sovereignty now lies with the people that live in the occupied territory and not in its government, and the occupying power is required to respect the political interests of this popular sovereignty, the people.<sup>35</sup>

25. Israel has occupied the Palestinian territory (the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza) since June 1967. As such, the Fourth Geneva Convention applies in full. This legal determination has been affirmed by the Security Council on a consistent and regular basis, starting at the very beginning of the occupation in June 1967<sup>36</sup> and restated most recently in December 2016.<sup>37</sup> This is also the position stated at a 2014 Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention (A/69/711-S/2015/1, annex, para. 4). As such, the Palestinians in the occupied territory are “protected persons” under international humanitarian law, and are entitled to all of the protections of the Fourth Geneva Convention.<sup>38</sup> Israel has denied the application of the Fourth Geneva Convention and does not recognize the Palestinian territory as being occupied,<sup>39</sup> a position that the international community has widely rejected.<sup>40</sup>

26. With these principles and observations in mind, a four-part test is proposed to determine whether an occupier is administering the occupation in a manner consistent with international law and the laws of occupation, or whether it has exceeded its legal capacity and its rule is illegal.

B. Test as to whether a belligerent occupier remains a lawful occupant

27. As the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory has lengthened in time, and with many of its features found to be in flagrant violation of international law, some international legal scholars have raised the issue of whether an occupation that was once regarded as lawful can cross a tipping point and become illegal. Professor Eyal Benvenisti has written that: “... it would seem that an occupant that in bad faith stalls efforts for a peaceful ending to its rule would be considered an aggressor and its rule would be tainted with illegality.” Professors Ben-Naftali, Gross and Michaeli take a broader view, arguing that violation of any of the fundamental legal

<sup>33</sup> General Assembly resolution 2625 (XXV).

<sup>34</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, para. 122.

<sup>35</sup> Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation.

<sup>36</sup> See Security Council resolution 237 (1967).

<sup>37</sup> See Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>38</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 4.

<sup>39</sup> Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Israel settlements and international law”, 30 November 2015 (“In legal terms, the West Bank is best regarded as territory over which there are competing claims which should be resolved in peace process negotiations”). Available from <http://www.mfa.gov.il/mfa/foreignpolicy/peace/guide/pages/israeli%20settlements%20and%20international%20law.aspx>. See also Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, paras. 90 and 93.

<sup>40</sup> See resolution 71/96, affirming the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, adopted by a vote of 168 to 6 with 6 abstentions. See also Eyal Gross, The Writing on the Wall: Rethinking the International Law of Occupation (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2017).

principles of occupation (listed below) “renders an occupation illegal per se”.<sup>41</sup> Professor Gross has extended this argument more recently to emphasize the importance of analysing whether an indefinite or permanent occupation has become illegal, so as to counter “... the risk of occupation becoming conquest or a new form of colonialism while hiding behind an imagined temporality”.<sup>42</sup> They have provided the intellectual foundation for the following test.

28. The four elements of the lawful occupant test are as set out below.

(a) The belligerent occupier cannot annex any of the occupied territory

29. A belligerent occupier cannot, under any circumstances, acquire the right to conquer, annex or gain any legal or sovereign title over any part of the territory under its occupation. This is one of the most well-established principles of modern international law and it enjoys universal endorsement. This is the corollary of Article 2, paragraph 4, of the Charter of the United Nations, which forbids its members from: “... the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state ...”. Leading public international law scholars have endorsed the “no annexation” principle as a binding legal doctrine.<sup>43</sup> The General Assembly unanimously codified the prohibition against acquiring title by conquest in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States.

30. The occupying power cannot impose conditions or create facts on the ground that are designed to establish a claim for title. This principle is anchored in the well-established prohibition in international humanitarian law against the transfer of civilians from the occupying power into the occupied territory, embedded in the Fourth Geneva Convention (art. 49) and its Protocol I (art. 85). Furthermore, the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court of 1998 (A/CONF.183/9) defined such an act as a war crime (art. 8, para. 2 (b) (viii)). This strict prohibition is intended to forestall an occupier from demographically transforming the territory in order to advance its claim for sovereignty and, simultaneously, undermine the right of the protected population to self-determination.<sup>44</sup>

31. With specific reference to Israel’s occupation of the Arab, including Palestinian, territories captured in June 1967, the Security Council endorsed the principle of “the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war” in resolution 242 (1967) in November 1967. The Council has since reaffirmed this principle on at least seven subsequent occasions dealing with Israel’s annexations of Arab territory.<sup>45</sup> This principle has also been the longstanding position of the General

<sup>41</sup> Orna Ben-Naftali, Aeyal Gross and Keren Michaeli, “Illegal occupation: framing the Occupied Palestinian Territory”, Berkeley Journal of International Law, vol. 23, No. 3 (2005).

<sup>42</sup> Gross, The Writing on the Wall. See also Ardi Imseis, “Prolonged occupation of Palestine: the case for a second advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice”, lecture, 7 October 2015. Available from www.youtube.com/watch?v=X2ijqmlm2Ak.

<sup>43</sup> Malcolm N. Shaw, International Law, 8th ed. (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2017) (“It is, however, clear today that the acquisition of territory by force alone is illegal under international law”); and Antonio Cassese, International Law, 2nd ed. (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2005) (“... conquest does not transfer a legal title of sovereignty, even if it is followed by de facto occupation, and assertion of authority over the territory.”).

<sup>44</sup> Report to the Commission on Human Rights Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities (E/CN.4/Sub.2/1993/17), para. 17 (“Population transfer has been conducted with the effect or purpose of altering the demographic composition of a territory in accordance with policy objectives or prevailing ideology, particularly when that ideology or policy asserts the dominance of a certain group over another.”).

<sup>45</sup> See Security Council resolutions 2334 (2016), 497 (1981), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 298 (1971), 267 (1969) and 252 (1968).

Assembly.<sup>46</sup> The International Court of Justice held that the “... illegality of territorial acquisition resulting from the threat or use of force” has acquired the status of customary international law.<sup>47</sup> This absolute rule against the acquisition of territory by force makes no distinction as to whether the territory was occupied through a war of self-defence or a war of aggression; annexation is prohibited in both circumstances.<sup>48</sup>

(b) The belligerent occupation must be temporary and cannot be either permanent or indefinite; and the occupant must seek to end the occupation and return the territory to the sovereign as soon as reasonably possible

32. Belligerent occupation is inherently a temporary and exceptional situation where the occupying power assumes the role of a de facto administrator of the territory until conditions allow for the return of the territory to the sovereign,<sup>49</sup> which is the people of the territory. Because of the absolute prohibition against the acquisition of territory by force, the occupying power is prohibited from ruling, or attempting to rule, the territory on a permanent or even an indefinite basis.<sup>50</sup> As Professor Aeyal Gross has stated: “Temporality, together with the principles of self-determination and non-acquisition of territory by force, is what distinguishes occupation from conquest, and this distinction would be thwarted were occupation construed as indefinite.”<sup>51</sup>

33. The laws of occupation do not set a specific length of time for the lawful duration of an occupation. However, the guiding principle that occupation is a form of alien rule which is a temporary exception to the norms of self-determination and sovereignty means that the occupying power is required to return the territory to the sovereign power in as reasonable and expeditious a time period as possible,<sup>52</sup> subject only to ensuring: (a) public safety and the security of the territory; (b) the resumption, or creation, of governing institutions and a functioning economy; and (c) the security of the occupying military. The occupying power, being obliged to work in good faith to achieve these goals consistent with the principles of the laws of occupation, would have no legitimate purpose to remain in the occupied territory beyond the time when conditions have allowed for the territory to be returned in toto to the sovereign power.<sup>53</sup> Indeed, the longer the occupation, the greater the justification that the occupying power must satisfy to defend its continuing presence in the occupied territory.

<sup>46</sup> See, generally, General Assembly resolution 71/23.

<sup>47</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion.

<sup>48</sup> Sharon Korman, The Right of Conquest: The Acquisition of Territory by Force in International Law and Practice (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1996) (“... there has been widespread support for the view that Israel’s incorporation of East Jerusalem is illegal on the grounds that ... the acquisition of territory by war, whether defensive or aggressive, is inadmissible ...”).

<sup>49</sup> Jean S. Pictet, ed., Commentary IV: Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Geneva, ICRC, 1958) (“The occupation of territory in wartime is essentially a temporary, de facto situation, which deprives the occupied power of neither its statehood nor its sovereignty; it merely interferes with its power to exercise its rights.”).

<sup>50</sup> Ben-Naftali, Gross and Michaeli, “Illegal occupation” (“Occupation is temporary. It may be neither permanent nor indefinite.”).

<sup>51</sup> Gross, The Writing on the Wall.

<sup>52</sup> In resolution 1483 (2003), dealing with the occupation of Iraq in 2003, the Security Council noted the commitment of the occupying powers to return the governance of Iraq to its people “as soon as possible”.

<sup>53</sup> Ben-Naftali, Gross and Michaeli, “Illegal occupation” (“The temporary, as distinct from the indefinite, nature of occupation is thus the most necessary element of the normative regime of occupation, as it gives meaning and effect — both factual and legal — to the concepts of liberty, freedom, and the right to self-determination.”).

(c) During the occupation, the belligerent occupier is to act in the best interests of the people under occupation

34. The occupying power, throughout the duration of the occupation, is to govern in the best interests of the people under occupation, subject only to the legitimate security requirements of the occupying military authority. This principle has been likened to a trust or fiduciary relationship in domestic or international law, where the dominant authority is required to act in the interests of the protected person or entity above all else.<sup>54</sup> Accordingly, the authority in power is prohibited from administering the trust in a self-serving or avaricious manner. It is also consistent with the strict requirement on the occupying power to observe, to the fullest extent possible, the human rights of the people under occupation.

35. This best interests principle is anchored in the underlying norms of the laws of occupation, specifically those provisions of the Hague Regulations and the Fourth Geneva Convention that preserve the rights of the protected people and strictly regulate the actions of the occupying power. This is consistent with the shifting of the law on occupation from its early focus on rights of States and political elites to its more contemporary focus on the protections provided for the people under occupation.<sup>55</sup> Article 43 of the Hague Regulations requires the occupying power to “restore, and ensure, as far as possible, public order and safety, while respecting, unless absolutely prevented, the laws in force in the country”. The Fourth Geneva Convention expanded these obligations by requiring the occupying power to ensure a wide spectrum of protections, including the positive duties to protect children, maintain hospitals, preserve natural resources and provide for medical supplies and food. As well, it prohibits the occupant from inflicting collective punishment, pillage, corporal punishment and engaging in individual or mass forcible transfers or deportations.<sup>56</sup> These protections and prohibitions, together with the application of international human rights law, underscore the centrality of the best interests principle and the trustee character of the occupying power’s responsibility.

(d) The belligerent occupier must administer the occupied territory in good faith, including acting in full compliance with its duties and obligations under international law and as a member of the United Nations

36. The principle of good faith is a cornerstone principle of the international legal system and has become an integral part of virtually all legal relationships in modern international law.<sup>57</sup> It has been described as the “cardinal rule of treaty interpretation”, which dominates and underlies the entire interpretive process.<sup>58</sup> The principle requires a State to carry out its duties and obligations in an honest, loyal, reasonable, diligent and fair manner and with the aim of fulfilling the purposes of the legal responsibility, including an agreement or treaty.<sup>59</sup> Conversely, the good

<sup>54</sup> Gross, The Writing on the Wall.

<sup>55</sup> Benvenisti, The International Law of Occupation (“When the Security Council announced the applicability of the law of occupation to 2003 Iraq, it had to adapt a law that initially reflected the premise that kings were sovereigns and that international law should protect their possessions during wartime, to a new philosophy — the philosophy of international humanitarian law — which posited that peoples were the true sovereigns and that human rights had to be respected”).

<sup>56</sup> These rights and prohibitions under the Fourth Geneva Convention are summarized in Gross, The Writing on the Wall.

<sup>57</sup> Andreas R. Ziegler and Jorun Baumgartner, “Good faith as a general principle of (international) law”, in Andrew D. Mitchell, M. Sornarajah and Tania Voon, eds., Good Faith and International Economic Law (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2015).

<sup>58</sup> Eirik Bjorge, The Evolutionary Interpretation of Treaties (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2014).

<sup>59</sup> Markus Kotzur, “Good faith (bona fide)”, in Rüdiger Wolfrum, ed., Max Planck Encyclopedia of Public International Law (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2009).

faith principle prohibits States from participating in acts that would defeat the object and purpose of the obligation, or engaging in any abuse of rights that would mask an illegal act or the evasion of an obligation.<sup>60</sup>

37. The duty to act in good faith is found in many of the foundational instruments of international law, including the Charter (art. 2, para. 2), the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties (art. 26) and the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States. The International Court of Justice, in the 1974 nuclear tests case, recognized the primacy of good faith in international law, stating that: “One of the basic principles governing the creation and performance of legal obligations, whatever their source, is the principle of good faith.”<sup>61</sup>

38. Thus, under international law, a belligerent occupier is required to govern an occupied territory in good faith. This can be measured by whether the occupying power fulfils each of the three core principles governing an occupation stated above: (a) it does not annex any of the occupied territory; (b) it rules on a temporary basis only; and (c) it governs in the best interests of the protected people. As well, a belligerent occupier governing in good faith would also be required to: (d) comply with any specific directions issued by the United Nations or other authoritative bodies pertaining to the occupation,<sup>62</sup> and (e) comply with the specific precepts of international humanitarian law and international human rights law applicable to an occupation.

C. Applicability of the 1971 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on Namibia (South West Africa)<sup>63</sup>

39. In June 1971, the International Court of Justice issued an advisory opinion on Namibia, at the request of the Security Council, on the legal consequences of the continued presence of South Africa in Namibia. The Court determined that South Africa’s administration of the mandate for Namibia had breached several fundamental obligations under international law, that it had been validly terminated by the United Nations and that South Africa’s continued presence in the territory was thenceforth illegal. The Court’s advisory opinion on the Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia contains a number of applicable precedents that support both the proposed four-part legality test and the analysis as to whether Israel’s continuing role as occupant remains lawful.

<sup>60</sup> Steven Reinhold, “Good faith in international law”, UCL Journal of Law and Jurisprudence, vol. 2 (2013).

<sup>61</sup> Nuclear Tests (Australia v. France), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1974, p. 253, para. 46.

<sup>62</sup> Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations stipulates that: “The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.”

<sup>63</sup> Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council resolution 276 (1970), Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1971, p. 16. The Special Rapporteur owes an intellectual debt for his reading of the Namibia decision to: John Dugard, “A tale of two sacred trusts: Namibia and Palestine”, in Tiyanjana Maluwa, ed., Law, Politics and Rights: Essays in Memory of Kader Asmal (Leiden, The Netherlands, Martinus Nijhoff Publishers, 2014); Norman Finkelstein, Gaza: An Inquest into its Martyrdom (Oakland, University of California Press, 2018) (forthcoming); and Stephanie Koury, “Legal strategies at the United Nations: a comparative look at Namibia, Western Sahara and Palestine”, in Susan Akram and others, eds., International Law and the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict: A Rights-Based Approach to Middle East Peace (Abingdon, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Routledge, 2011).

40. After the First World War, the League of Nations, through article 22 of the Covenant of the League, directed that South Africa was to serve as the mandatory over South West Africa. Pursuant to paragraph 1 of article 22, South Africa's mandate was to administer South West Africa as a "sacred trust of civilization" until the territory was ready for independence. As the mandatory, South Africa was obliged to administer South West Africa as a trustee acting in the best interests of the territory and its peoples. The mandatory was accountable to the League of Nations for its administration.

41. After the Second World War, the United Nations assumed responsibility for the mandate system, now known as the international trusteeship system. South Africa refused to place South West Africa under the trusteeship supervision of the United Nations and it proceeded to introduce forms of apartheid into the territory, as well as engage in the de facto annexation of the territory. In 1966, the General Assembly revoked South Africa's mandate over South West Africa and declared that South Africa had no other right to administer the territory.<sup>64</sup> In January 1970, the Security Council declared that South Africa's continued presence in Namibia was "illegal", and stated that South Africa's "defiant attitude" towards the decisions of the Security Council "undermine[d] the authority of the United Nations".<sup>65</sup> Subsequently, in July 1970, the Council requested an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice.<sup>66</sup>

42. The 1971 advisory opinion on Namibia by the International Court of Justice is a sturdy and germane precedent for the assessment of Israel's continuing occupation of the Palestinian territory. Although Namibia was a mandate territory under the trusteeship system, governed by the terms of article 22 of the Covenant, and the Palestinian territory is required to be governed by the laws of occupation, they are different branches of the same tree. Both South Africa (as the mandatory power) and Israel (as the occupying power) are prime examples of alien rule, the governing power in both cases is responsible for respecting the right to self-determination of the protected people, annexation in both cases was/is strictly prohibited, both powers were/are required to govern in the best interests of the protected people and to abstain from any self-serving practices, and the international community was/is responsible in both cases for the close supervision of the alien rule and for bringing this rule to a successful conclusion.

43. In its advisory opinion, the International Court of Justice articulated the following seven legal findings and principles with respect to the mandate territory of Namibia. The Special Rapporteur submits that these legal findings and principles are directly applicable to the question of the continued legality of Israel's occupation:

(a) Annexation is forbidden, the mandatory must act as a trustee for the benefit of the peoples of the territory, and the end result of the mandate must be the exercise of self-determination and independence;<sup>67</sup>

(b) All mandatory powers must fulfil their obligations in good faith. Acting contrary to any of the fundamental obligations of a mandate would all be evidence of a failure to satisfy the good faith obligation;<sup>68</sup>

<sup>64</sup> See General Assembly resolution 2145 (XXI).

<sup>65</sup> See Security Council resolution 276 (1970).

<sup>66</sup> See Security Council resolution 284 (1970).

<sup>67</sup> Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia, Advisory Opinion, paras. 45–47, 50, 53 and 83.

<sup>68</sup> Ibid., paras. 53, 84, 90, 115, 116 and 128.

(c) The strict safeguards imposed by the international community on the mandatory are to ensure that mandate territories cannot become “the objects of disguised cessions”. The mandatory cannot invoke any of its assigned rights as grounds for delaying or postponing the conclusion of the trusteeship relationship. Nor does a long occupation improve the claim of the mandatory power to annexing any of the territory of the mandate;<sup>69</sup>

(d) International law is not static but evolutionary, and its interpretation is influenced by subsequent developments in the law through the Charter of the United Nations and customary international law. Where the right exists as the general principle of law, it can be implied to be an integral part of the treaty or agreement;<sup>70</sup>

(e) The deliberate and persistent violation of a party’s obligations destroys the very object and purpose of the relationship or vested power, and the party cannot thereby claim any of the rights which derive from that relationship;<sup>71</sup>

(f) The breach of the mandatory’s fundamental obligations under international law can render its continuing presence in the mandate territory illegal. An illegal situation must be brought to an end, and Member States must recognize the illegality and invalidity of the situation, including the duty of non-recognition;<sup>72</sup>

(g) The determination that a mandatory power is in fundamental breach of its international obligations, that the mandate is revoked and that its continued presence in the mandate territory is illegal does not affect the ongoing application of the governing legal framework protecting the peoples of the mandate. As such, the mandatory continues to remain accountable for any violations of its international obligations and it must honour its duty to protect the rights of the peoples of the mandate.<sup>73</sup>

44. The 1971 advisory opinion on Namibia retains its relevance and its force of reasoning today. In 2004, the International Court of Justice, in the advisory opinion on the Construction of a Wall, relied upon the advisory opinion on Namibia with respect to its findings on the applicability of the right to self-determination to non-self-governing territories, including the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>74</sup> The overriding similarities between the two situations (an alien power using the mask of an international supervisory regime to assert permanent control in a trust relationship) means that the legal principles pertaining to the illegal continuation by a mandatory of a mandate apply, mutatis mutandis, to the determination of whether an occupying power’s ongoing occupation has become illegal.

D. Application of the legality test to Israel’s occupation

Prohibition against annexation

45. Israel’s formal annexation of East Jerusalem in 1967 and 1980, and its de facto annexation of significant parts of the West Bank, are intended to solidify its claim for sovereignty. This constitutes a flagrant breach of the absolute prohibition against annexation and violates Israel’s obligations under international law.

<sup>69</sup> Ibid., paras. 54, 55, 66, 82 and 83.

<sup>70</sup> Ibid., paras. 52, 53, 96–98, 100 and 133.

<sup>71</sup> Ibid., paras. 84, 91, 95, 96, 98, 100 and 102.

<sup>72</sup> Ibid., paras. 108, 109, 111, 115, 117, 122 and 123.

<sup>73</sup> Ibid., paras. 118 and 125.

<sup>74</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, para. 88.

46. After capturing the Palestinian territory (the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza) in the June 1967 war, Israel annexed East Jerusalem and parts of the West Bank in late June 1967 by a Cabinet decision. In July 1967, the General Assembly unanimously denounced the annexation and called upon Israel to rescind the measures that would alter the status of Jerusalem.<sup>75</sup> Subsequently, in July 1980, the Israeli Knesset adopted the Basic Law on Jerusalem, declaring Jerusalem to be the “complete and united” capital of Israel. The Security Council in August 1980 censured Israel “in the strongest terms” for its enactment of the Basic Law, affirmed that the Law was in breach of international law, and determined that Israel’s annexation was “null and void” and “must be rescinded forthwith.”<sup>76</sup> Israel remains non-compliant with all United Nations resolutions on Jerusalem, there are presently about 210,000 Israeli settlers living in occupied East Jerusalem, and Israel has stated that it will not leave East Jerusalem.<sup>77</sup>

47. Beyond Jerusalem, Israel is actively establishing the de facto annexation of parts of the occupied West Bank. The International Court of Justice, in the advisory opinion on the Construction of a Wall, warned that the reality of the wall and the settlements regime was constituting a fait accompli and de facto annexation.<sup>78</sup> The Association for Civil Rights in Israel has characterized Israel’s regime in the West Bank as an “occunexation.”<sup>79</sup> Professor Omar Dajani has observed that, given the absolute prohibition today in international law against conquest, acquisitive States have an incentive to obfuscate the reality of annexation.<sup>80</sup> In the West Bank, Israel exercises complete control over Area C (making up 60 per cent of the West Bank), where its 400,000 settlers live in approximately 225 settlements. The settlers live under Israeli law in Israeli-only settlements, drive on an Israeli-only road system, and benefit greatly from the enormous sums of public money spent by Israel on entrenching, defending and expanding the settlements. Few of these benefits, except incidentally, flow to the Palestinians in Area C. Only 1 per cent of Area C is designated for Palestinian use, notwithstanding the approximately 300,000 Palestinians who live there.<sup>81</sup> What country would invest so heavily over so many years to establish so many immutable facts on the ground in an occupied territory if it did not intend to remain permanently?<sup>82</sup>

<sup>75</sup> See General Assembly resolutions 2253 (ES-V) and 2254 (ES-V).

<sup>76</sup> See Security Council resolution 478 (1980). See also Council resolution 476 (1980).

<sup>77</sup> Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu, in 2015: “Forty-eight years ago, the division of Jerusalem was ended and we returned to be united ... We will keep Jerusalem united under Israeli authority.” Available from www.cnn.com/2015/05/17/middleeast/israel-netanyahu-united-jerusalem/.

<sup>78</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, para. 121.

<sup>79</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, “49 years of control without rights: human rights of the Palestinians in the West Bank and East Jerusalem — what has changed?”, available from www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2016/06/49years2016-en.pdf.

<sup>80</sup> Omar M. Dajani, “Israel’s creeping annexation”, American Journal of International Law Unbound, vol. 111 (2017).

<sup>81</sup> Orhan Niksic, Nur Nasser Eddin and Massimiliano Cali, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Washington, D.C., World Bank, 2014); and Diakonia International Humanitarian Law Resource Centre, “Planning to fail: the planning regime in Area C of the West Bank — an international law perspective” (2013).

<sup>82</sup> Benjamin Netanyahu, Prime Minister, Israel, in August 2017: (“We are here to stay forever. There will be no further uprooting of settlements in the Land of Israel ... This is our land.”) Available from www.latimes.com/world/middleeast/la-fg-israel-netanyahu-settlements-20170828-story.html.

Occupations must be temporary, and not indefinite or permanent

48. Israel's occupation is 50 years old, and counting. The duration of this occupation is without precedent or parallel in today's world.<sup>83</sup> Professor Adam Roberts has stated that an occupation becomes prolonged if it lasts longer than five years into a period, closely resembling peacetime, when hostility is reduced.<sup>84</sup> Modern occupations that have broadly adhered to the strict principles concerning temporariness, non-annexation, trusteeship and good faith have not exceeded 10 years, including the American occupation of Japan, the Allied occupation of western Germany and the American-led coalition's occupation of Iraq.<sup>85</sup>

49. Employing the precept that the longer the occupation, the greater the onus on the occupying power to justify its continuation, Israel lacks any persuasive reason to remain as the occupant after 50 years. Israel has signed peace treaties with Egypt (1981) and Jordan (1994) that have stood the test of time, and the absence of peace agreements with its other two neighbours (the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon) cannot be invoked to justify its continuing occupation of the Palestinian territory. Contrary to the repeated declarations by many Israeli leaders, the Palestinian Authority is accepted by the international community as a legitimate negotiating partner for peace. The primary engine of Israel's ongoing occupation — the settlement enterprise — detracts from, rather than enhances, Israel's security.<sup>86</sup> Professor Gershon Shafir has written that: "A circular logic is in play here: Israel is able to use the stipulation of the temporary character of occupation to make long-term changes in the name of extended security risks, many of which are the result of the violations of the law of occupation."<sup>87</sup>

50. The only credible explanation for Israel's continuation of the occupation and its thickening of the settlement regime is to enshrine its sovereign claim over part or all of the Palestinian territory, a colonial ambition par excellence. Every Israeli Government since 1967 has pursued the continuous growth of the settlements, and the significant financial, military and political resources committed to the enterprise belie any intention on its part to make the occupation temporary.<sup>88</sup> Every Israeli Government since 1967 has left office with more settlers living in the occupied territory than when it assumed office. (Certainly, in various peace negotiation rounds in the 1990s and the 2000s, Israeli leaders had proposed to withdraw from some of the West Bank, but even in the most advanced of these negotiations — under Prime Minister Ehud Olmert between 2006 and 2008 — Israel insisted on keeping many of its settlements in East Jerusalem and the West Bank in any final agreement.)<sup>89</sup> The current Israeli Government is strongly committed to deepening

<sup>83</sup> Yoram Dinstein, The International Law of Belligerent Occupation (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2009).

<sup>84</sup> Adam Roberts, "Prolonged military occupation: the Israeli Occupied Territories since 1967", American Journal of International Law, vol. 84, No. 1 (January 1990).

<sup>85</sup> These three occupations are sometimes cited as examples of "transformative" occupations, which raise separate legal questions that are not addressed in the present report. See, generally, Gregory H. Fox, "Transformative occupation and the unilateralist impulse", International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 94, No. 885 (Spring 2012).

<sup>86</sup> Israeli Council for Peace and Security (June 2012), quoted in Gershon Shafir, A Half Century of Occupation: Israel, Palestine, and the World's Most Intractable Conflict (Oakland, University of California Press, 2017), para. 98.

<sup>87</sup> Shafir, A Half Century of Occupation.

<sup>88</sup> Idith Zertal and Akiva Eldar, Lords of the Land: the War Over Israel's Settlements in the Occupied Territories, 1967–2007 (New York, Nation Books, 2007).

<sup>89</sup> Dajani, "Israel's creeping annexation".

the settlement enterprise.<sup>90</sup> Professor Shafir observes that “temporariness remains an Israeli subterfuge for creating permanent facts on the ground”, with Israel able to employ the seemingly indeterminate nature of the occupation’s end-point to create a “permanent temporariness” that intentionally forestalls any meaningful exercise of self-determination and independence by the Palestinians.<sup>91</sup>

51. The Israeli occupation has long exceeded the temporariness principle under international law. It has not acted in a manner consistent with the requirement that it take all necessary steps to bring the occupation to a successful close in as reasonable and expeditious a time period as possible. Indeed, far from it. Whether the occupation is said to be indefinite or permanent, the lack of a persuasive justification for its extraordinary duration places Israel, as the occupying power, in violation of international law.

Best interests/trust principle

52. Under international law, Israel is required to administer the Occupied Palestinian Territory in the best interests of the Palestinian people, the protected people under occupation, subject only to justified security concerns. It is prohibited from governing the occupied territory in an acquisitive or self-interested manner. Contrary to these requirements, Israel has acted in its own expansionary interests unaccompanied by most of the responsibilities attached to a belligerent occupier.

53. The social and economic impact of the occupation on the Palestinians in the occupied territory, which had always been disadvantageous, has become increasingly dire in recent years. According to recent reports by the World Bank<sup>92</sup> and the United Nations,<sup>93</sup> the expanding Israeli settlement enterprise and the supporting apparatus of occupation has deepened the already separate and distinctly inferior civil and economic conditions imposed upon Palestinians in the West Bank. There, the Palestinians are subject to a harsh and arbitrary legal system quite unequal to that enjoyed by the Israeli settlers.<sup>94</sup> Much of the West Bank is off-limits to Palestinians, and they regularly endure significant restrictions on their freedom of movement through closures, roadblocks, and the need for hard-to-obtain travel permits.<sup>95</sup>

54. Access to the natural resources of the occupied territory, especially to water, is disproportionately allocated to Israel and the settlers.<sup>96</sup> Similarly, the planning system administered by the occupying power for housing and commercial development throughout the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, is deeply discriminatory in favour of settlement construction, while imposing significant barriers on Palestinians,<sup>97</sup> including ongoing land confiscation,<sup>98</sup> home demolitions

<sup>90</sup> Samantha Power, Permanent Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations, “Speech after abstention on anti-settlement vote”, New York, 23 December 2016. (“The Israeli Prime Minister recently described his government as ‘more committed to settlements than any in Israel’s history’ ...”). Available from www.timesofisrael.com/full-text-of-us-envoy-samantha-powers-speech-after-abstention-on-anti-settlement-vote/.

<sup>91</sup> Shafir, A Half Century of Occupation.

<sup>92</sup> World Bank, “West Bank and Gaza: Area C and the future of the Palestinian economy”, report No. AUS2922 (2013).

<sup>93</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Occupied Palestinian Territory, “Fragmented lives: humanitarian overview 2016” (2017).

<sup>94</sup> Limor Yehuda and others, “One rule, two legal systems: Israel’s regime of laws in the West Bank” (Association for Civil Rights in Israel, 2014).

<sup>95</sup> See Human Rights Watch, World Report 2017: Events of 2016. Available from www.hrw.org/world-report/2017/country-chapters/israel/palestine.

<sup>96</sup> Amnesty International, “Troubled waters: Palestinians denied fair access to water” (London, 2009).

<sup>97</sup> Human Rights Watch, “Separate and unequal: Israel’s discriminatory treatment of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territories”, 19 December 2010. Available from www.hrw.org/report/2010/12/19/separate-and-unequal/israels-discriminatory-treatment-palestinians-occupied.

and the denial of building permits.<sup>99</sup> Israel employs practices that in some cases may amount to the forcible transfer of Palestinians, primarily those living in rural areas, as a means of confiscating land for settlements, military weapons training areas and other uses exclusive to the occupying power that have little or nothing to do with its legitimate security requirements.<sup>100</sup>

55. As for East Jerusalem, the occupation has increasingly detached it from its traditional national, economic, cultural and family connections with the West Bank because of the wall, the growing ring of settlements and related checkpoints, and the discriminatory permit regime. It is neglected by the municipality in terms of services and infrastructure,<sup>101</sup> the occupation has depleted its economy and the Palestinians have only a small land area on which to build housing.<sup>102</sup>

56. In Gaza, Israel vacated its formal presence in 2005, but its effective control over the Strip — through its dominance over Gaza’s land and sea frontiers and its air space — means that it retains its responsibilities as an occupier. As Tamir Pardo, former head of Israel’s Mossad, stated recently: “Israel is responsible for the humanitarian situation [in Gaza], and this is the place with the biggest problem in the world today.”<sup>103</sup> Since 2007, Israel has maintained a suffocating economic and travel blockade that has driven Gaza back to the dark ages. More than 60 per cent of the population of Gaza is reliant upon humanitarian aid, it is unable to secure more than one third of the electrical power that it requires, it will soon exhaust its sources of safe drinking water and, virtually unique in the world, its gross domestic product is actually lower than it was in 2006.<sup>104</sup>

57. All these restrictions in the civil and commercial life of the Palestinians have created a shattered economic space which has resulted in a highly dependent and strangled economy, mounting impoverishment, daily impositions and indignities, and receding hope for a reversal of fortune in the foreseeable future.<sup>105</sup>

58. On the probative evidence, Israel, the occupying power, has ruled the Palestinian Territory as an internal colony, deeply committed to exploiting its land and resources for Israel’s own benefit, and profoundly indifferent, at very best, to the rights and best interests of the protected people.<sup>106</sup> As such, Israel is in breach of

<sup>98</sup> Adam Aloni, Expel and Exploit: The Israeli Practice of Taking Over Rural Palestinian Land (B’Tselem, 2016).

<sup>99</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Fragmented lives”.

<sup>100</sup> Simon Reynolds, Coercive Environments: Israel’s Forcible Transfer of Palestinians in the Occupied Territory (Badil Resource Centre for Palestinian Residency and Refugee Rights, 2017).

<sup>101</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, “East Jerusalem: facts and figures 2017”, 21 May 2017.

Available from <http://www.acri.org.il/en/wp-content/uploads/2017/05/Facts-and-Figures-2017-1.pdf>.

<sup>102</sup> United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), “The Palestinian economy in East Jerusalem: enduring annexation, isolation and disintegration”, document UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2012/1.

<sup>103</sup> Gili Cohen, “Ex-Mossad chief says occupation is Israel’s only existential threat”, Haaretz, 22 March 2017. Available from www.haaretz.com/israel-news/1.778650.

<sup>104</sup> United Nations country team in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, “Gaza ten years later”, July 2017. Available from https://unsco.unmissions.org/sites/default/files/gaza\_10\_years\_later\_-\_11\_july\_2017.pdf.

<sup>105</sup> UNCTAD, “Report on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people: developments in the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory”, document UNCTAD/APP/2016/1. In this report, UNCTAD estimated that the Palestinian economy would be twice its present size in the absence of the Israeli occupation.

<sup>106</sup> David Kretzmer, The Occupation of Justice: The Supreme Court of Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories (Albany, State University of New York Press, 2002) (“On the political level, the government relates to the Occupied Territories as colonies, with all that this entails: exploitation of their resources and markets for the benefit of the home country and its citizens and a clear distinction between the status of the “natives” and those of the settlers.”).

its obligations to administer the occupation as a trustee for the well-being of the protected people under occupation.

Good faith

59. For an occupying power to govern an occupied territory in good faith, it must not only comply with the three principles stated above, but it must also be fully compliant with any specific directions issued by the United Nations or other authoritative bodies pertaining to the occupation. Further, it must comply with the specific precepts of international law, including humanitarian law and human rights law, applicable to an occupation.

60. Since 1967, the Security Council has adopted, in clear and direct language, more than 40 resolutions pertaining to Israel's occupation of the Palestinian Territory. On the settlements, the Council has variously stated that they "have no legal validity", they must be "dismantled" and they constitute a "flagrant violation under international law", and that settlement activities must "immediately and completely cease" and they "are dangerously imperilling the viability of a two-state solution".<sup>107</sup> Similarly, the Council has affirmed, with specific reference to the Israeli occupation, that the acquisition of territory by war or by force is inadmissible.<sup>108</sup> The Council has censured "in the strongest terms" Israel's annexation of East Jerusalem, it has "deplored" Israel's "persistence in changing the physical character, demographic composition ... and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem", it has called these changes a "flagrant violation" of the Fourth Geneva Convention, and it has stated that these changes "must be rescinded."<sup>109</sup> Repeatedly, the Security Council has affirmed that the Fourth Geneva Convention applies to the Occupied Palestinian Territory and has called upon Israel to "scrupulously" abide by it.<sup>110</sup>

61. In the face of the persistent Israeli refusal to accept and apply any of these resolutions, the Security Council has "strongly deplored the continued refusal of Israel, the occupying power, to comply with the relevant resolutions of the Council and the General Assembly."<sup>111</sup> Immediately following the adoption of resolution 2334 (2016) by the Council in December 2016 condemning the settlement enterprise and Israel's failure to apply the Fourth Geneva Convention, Mr. Netanyahu sharply criticized the resolution and announced that Israel would not submit to it.<sup>112</sup> In October 2017, the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process reported to the Council that Israel was not complying with the resolution and that indeed its settlement activity was continuing at a high rate.<sup>113</sup>

62. Israel has been deemed to be in breach of many of the leading precepts of international humanitarian and human rights law. Its settlement enterprise has been characterized as illegal by the Security Council.<sup>114</sup> The prohibited use of collective

<sup>107</sup> See Security Council resolutions 2334 (2016), 465 (1980), 452 (1979) and 446 (1979).

<sup>108</sup> See Security Council resolutions 2334 (2016), 497 (1981), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 298 (1971), 267 (1969), 252 (1968) and 242 (1967).

<sup>109</sup> See Security Council resolutions 2334 (2016), 478 (1980) and 476 (1980).

<sup>110</sup> See Security Council resolutions 2334 (2016), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 471 (1980), 465 (1980), 452 (1979) and 446 (1979).

<sup>111</sup> See Security Council resolutions 478 (1980), 476 (1980) and 446 (1979).

<sup>112</sup> Isabel Kershner, "Netanyahu promises retribution for 'biased' U.N. resolution", New York Times, 24 December 2016. Available from www.nytimes.com/2016/12/24/world/middleeast/israel-benjamin-netanyahu-united-nations.html.

<sup>113</sup> Nickolay Mladenov, Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, "Briefing to the Security Council on the situation in the Middle East: report on Council resolution 2334 (2016)", 25 September 2017. Available from <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/nickolay-mladenov-special-coordinator-middle-east-peace-3>.

<sup>114</sup> See Security Council resolutions 2334 (2016), 478 (1980), 476 (1980), 471 (1980), 465 (1980), 452 (1979) and 446 (1979).

punishment has been regularly employed by Israel through the demolition of Palestinian homes of families that are related to those suspected of terrorism or security breaches and by extended closures of Palestinian communities (which resumed in 2014, after a moratorium lasting since 2006).<sup>115</sup> Bedouin communities in the West Bank and East Jerusalem are the latest Palestinian communities to be at risk of forcible transfer instigated by the occupying power.<sup>116</sup> The right to liberty, with its accompanying right not to be subjected to arbitrary arrest, are violated by the high rates of arbitrary detention, including administrative detention, and the revocation of the residency rights of many thousands of Palestinians.<sup>117</sup> Freedom of movement is impaired through a complex system of administrative, bureaucratic and physical constraints that affects virtually every aspect of daily life for the Palestinians.<sup>118</sup> And above all, the entrenched and unaccountable occupation — through its denial of territorial integrity, genuine self-governance, a sustainable economy and a viable path to independence — substantively violates, and undermines, the right of the Palestinians to self-determination, the platform right that enables the realization of many other rights.

63. Whether measured by the criteria of substantive compliance with United Nations resolutions or by the satisfaction of its obligations as occupier under the framework of international law, Israel has not governed the Occupied Palestinian Territory in good faith. As a United Nations Member State with obligations, it has repeatedly defied the international community's supervisory authority over the occupation. As the occupant, it has consciously breached many of the leading precepts of international humanitarian law and international human rights law that govern an occupation.

IV. Conclusion

64. International law is the promise that States make to one another, and to their people, that rights will be respected, protections will be honoured, agreements and obligations will be satisfied, and peace with justice will be pursued. It is a tribute to the international community that it has sustained this vision of international law throughout its supervision of Israel's occupation of the Palestinian territory. But it is no tribute that — as the occupation deepened, as the occupier's intentions became crystal clear, and as its defiance grew — the international community recoiled from answering Israel's splintering of the Palestinian territory and disfiguring of the laws of occupation with the robust tools that international law and diplomacy provide. International law, along with the peoples of Palestine and Israel, have all suffered in the process.

65. States who administer another territory under international supervision — whether as an occupier or a mandatory power — will cross the red line into illegality if they breach their fundamental obligations as alien rulers. The International Court of Justice in its advisory opinion on Namibia supports this conclusion. The Special Rapporteur submits that Israel's role as occupant has crossed this red line. The challenge now facing the international community is to

<sup>115</sup> See www.btselem.org/topic/punitive\_demolitions.

<sup>116</sup> Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Demolition and seizure of service infrastructure in Palestinian communities in Area C exacerbates risk of forcible transfer", 11 October 2017. Available from www.ochaopt.org/content/demolition-and-seizure-service-infrastructure-palestinian-communities-area-c-exacerbates.

<sup>117</sup> Human Rights Watch, "Israel: 50 years of occupation abuses", 4 June 2017. Available from www.hrw.org/news/2017/06/04/israel-50-years-occupation-abuses.

<sup>118</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, "Freedom of movement: human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem" (February 2016). Available from www.ohchr.org/Documents/Countries/PS/SG\_Report\_FoM\_Feb2016.pdf.

assess this analysis and, if accepted, to devise and employ the appropriate diplomatic and legal steps that, measure by measure, would completely and finally end the occupation. As Amos Schocken, the publisher of Haaretz, has written about his own country's leadership: "... international pressure is precisely the force that will drive them to do the right thing."<sup>119</sup>

66. A determination that Israel's role as occupant is now illegal would serve several significant purposes. First, it would encourage Member States to take all reasonable steps to prevent or discourage national institutions, organizations and corporations within their jurisdiction from engaging in activities that would invest in, or sustain, the occupation. Second, it would encourage national and international courts to apply the appropriate laws within their jurisdiction that would prevent or discourage cooperation with entities that invest in, or sustain, the occupation. Third, it would invite the international community to review its various forms of cooperation with the occupying power as long as it continues to administer the occupation unlawfully. Fourth, it would provide a solid precedent for the international community when judging other occupations of long duration. Most of all, such a determination would confirm the moral importance of upholding the international rule of law when aiding the besieged and the vulnerable.

V. Recommendations

67. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel bring a complete end to the 50 years of occupation of the Palestinian territories in as expeditious a time period as possible, under international supervision.

68. The Special Rapporteur also recommends that the General Assembly:

(a) Commission a United Nations study on the legality of Israel's continued occupation of the Palestinian territory;

(b) Consider the advantages of seeking an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the question of the legality of the occupation;

(c) Consider commissioning a legal study on the ways and means that Member States can and must fulfil their obligations and duties to ensure respect for international law, including the duty of non-recognition, the duty to cooperate to bring to an end a wrongful situation and the duty to investigate and prosecute grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions;

(d) Consider the adoption, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 377 (V), entitled "Uniting for peace", of a resolution with respect to the question of Palestine, in the event that there is a determination that Israel's role as occupier is no longer lawful.

---

<sup>119</sup> Amos Schocken, "Only international pressure will end Israeli apartheid", Haaretz, 22 January 2016. Available from www.haaretz.com/opinion/.premium-1.698874.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
22 October 2018
Original: English

---

Seventy-third session

Agenda item 74 (b)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, hereby submits his third report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives, United Nations representatives and Palestinian officials in Amman, in connection with the mission of the Special Rapporteur to the region in June 2018. The report addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. The present report provides a brief overview of the most pressing human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the time of submission, as identified by the Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 in conversations and meetings with civil society. The report then presents a detailed analysis of the question of annexation, examining the relevant legal frameworks as well as the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.

2. The Special Rapporteur would like once again to highlight that, despite his requests, he has not yet been granted access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory by Israel. He most recently requested access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory on 24 April 2018. At the writing of the present report, no reply had been received from the Government of Israel. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes once again his view that an open dialogue among all parties is essential for the protection and promotion of human rights and reminds Israel that he is ready and willing to engage. In addition, he continues to highlight that access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory would play a key role in understanding the fundamental realities of the human rights situation in the territory. The pattern by Israel of non-cooperation with the mandate is a serious concern and contrary to its obligations as a State Member of the United Nations.

3. The present report is based primarily on written submissions as well as consultations with civil society representatives, victims, witnesses, Palestinian government officials and United Nations representatives held in Amman during the Special Rapporteur's annual mission to the region, in June 2018. The Special Rapporteur would like to note that several groups were unable to travel to Amman to meet with him owing to travel restrictions imposed by the Israeli authorities. This was particularly the case with individuals coming from Gaza, and all individuals and organizations based in Gaza were consulted by videoconference as a result.

4. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur focuses on the obligations of Israel under international human rights law and international humanitarian law, as set out in the mandate.<sup>1</sup> The Rapporteur emphasizes that those obligations are by no means limited to Israel and calls upon all actors to ensure respect for international human rights law and international humanitarian law, in accordance with their obligations, noting that violations of those bodies of law by any actor are deplorable and will only hinder the prospects for peace.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation to the Government of the State of Palestine for its full cooperation with the mandate. He also wishes to extend his thanks to all those who travelled to Amman to meet with him and to those who were unable to travel but made written or oral submissions. He further extends his thanks once again to Jordan for its support and for the opportunity to hold meetings in Amman.

6. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes once again his admiration and support for the vital work being done by Palestinian, Israeli and international human rights organizations. That work is indispensable not only to the Rapporteur as he seeks to fulfil his mandate, but also to the broader international community. The efforts of human rights organizations to ensure that accurate and complete information about the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is readily available should not go unacknowledged. As highlighted in the report of the Special Rapporteur to the Human Rights Council in March 2017 (A/HRC/34/70), those organizations often face significant obstacles in carrying out their work, and the Rapporteur notes that those obstacles have only increased and intensified in the intervening years. The Rapporteur calls upon the international community to ensure that the rights of those undertaking this difficult and, in some cases, perilous work are respected and protected and that any attempts to delegitimize or otherwise discredit the work of those organizations is to be condemned.

---

<sup>1</sup> As specified in the mandate of the Special Rapporteur set out in Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2.

II. Current human rights situation

7. Since the previous report of the Special Rapporteur to the General Assembly (A/72/556), the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, particularly in Gaza, has only deteriorated. In his statement following his mission to the region in June 2018, the Rapporteur noted that, in his third visit to the region since assuming his role as mandate holder, he was presented with the bleakest picture yet of the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.<sup>2</sup> The key issues raised during the mission included the continued expansion and development of settlements; the proposal of legislation that could formally annex parts of the West Bank; the possible forcible transfer of vulnerable Bedouin communities; the continued existence of a coercive environment in many parts of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, seen in measures such as checkpoints, closures, residency revocations and movement restrictions; a continued deterioration in nearly all aspects of life in Gaza; and the apparent excessive use of force against protestors in Gaza, resulting in high numbers of deaths and injuries.

8. The present report cannot present a comprehensive overview of all issues of concern owing to space limitations. Instead, the Rapporteur seeks to highlight here several of the most urgent concerns at the time of writing. That discussion will be followed by an in-depth analysis of the question of annexation, examining both the applicable legal framework as well as the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Gaza

9. The humanitarian and human rights situation in Gaza continues to unravel steadily. The electricity crisis that deepened last year has continued with little change, severely restricting Palestinians' access to medical care, education, and livelihoods. Since the start of 2018, residents of Gaza have not had access to more than six hours of electricity per day; most days they have had only four or five hours.<sup>3</sup> In recent months, the United Nations has called repeatedly for emergency fuel to be provided to Gaza in order to prevent a complete and catastrophic breakdown in essential services, particularly after Israel introduced restrictions on the entry of fuel to Gaza.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), "Occupied Palestinian Territory: bleakest picture yet, says UN expert after regional visit", 29 June 2018. Available at www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=23298&LangID=E.

<sup>3</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Gaza Strip electric supply database, available at www.ochaopt.org/page/gaza-strip-electricity-supply.

<sup>4</sup> See for example, United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Funding for emergency fuel needed immediately to avoid catastrophic breakdown in essential services", 5 September 2018. Available at www.ochaopt.org/content/funding-emergency-fuel-needed-immediately-avoid-catastrophic-breakdown-essential-services; and "Entry of emergency fuel urgently needed to avoid closure of hospitals and overflow of sewage in Gaza streets", 8 August 2018. Available at <https://www.ochaopt.org/content/entry-emergency-fuel-urgently-needed-avoid-closure-hospitals-and-overflow-sewage-gaza>.

The World Bank has reported that the Gaza economy is current in “free fall”, with minus 6 per cent growth in the first quarter of 2018; it cited the blockade as the core issue but noted also other contributing factors, including the significant cuts to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and the decision by the Palestinian Authority to cut salaries in Gaza.<sup>5</sup>

Demonstrations and the use of force

10. The demonstrations along the Gaza fence began on 31 March 2018 under the banner of the “Great March of Return”, with Palestinians in Gaza calling for their right to return to their homes and for an end to the blockade. Most of the Gaza population comprises Palestinians who have been forcibly expelled from their homes and lands during and after 1948. Gaza has been under a comprehensive land, sea and air blockade for 11 years, with many residents never having had the chance to ever leave Gaza. Access to essential health-care services, education and livelihoods is severely restricted. The unprecedented cuts to the funding of UNRWA, which provides a range of services from medical care to education to protection, will have a devastating impact on the residents of Gaza.<sup>6</sup> In the face of those challenges, residents of Gaza have gathered at the fence between Gaza and Israel each Friday since 30 March, in varying numbers, to protest those conditions.

11. At the time of writing, more than 200 Palestinians had been killed by Israeli security forces in Gaza, 150 of those in the context of demonstrations. Among those killed, 38 were children. On 14 May alone, at least 42 Palestinians were killed in the context of demonstrations, including 6 children.<sup>7</sup> Alongside the high number of fatalities has been an extremely high number of injuries, with more than 21,000 Palestinians wounded, including over 5,300 wounded by live ammunition. Other injuries have been caused by tear gas inhalation, rubber-coated metal bullets, among other things. Also during the reporting period, 1 Israeli was killed and 37 injured.<sup>8</sup> Demonstrations are ongoing and deaths and injuries continue to mount; for example, seven Palestinians, including two children, were killed by Israeli security forces on 28 September 2018.<sup>9</sup> The negative impact of that situation on children cannot be overstated, and despite calls from the international community to ensure respect for the rights of children, they continue to be killed and injured.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>5</sup> World Bank, “Cash-strapped Gaza and an economy in collapse put Palestinian basic needs at risk”, press release, 25 September 2018. Available at www.worldbank.org/en/news/press-release/2018/09/25/cash-strapped-gaza-and-an-economy-in-collapse-put-palestinian-basic-needs-at-risk.

<sup>6</sup> Stephane Dujarric, Spokesman for the Secretary-General, statement for the Secretary-General on United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, 31 August 2018. Available at www.un.org/sg/en/content/sg/statement/2018-08-31/statement-attributable-spokesman-secretary-general-unrwa.

<sup>7</sup> Jamie McGoldrick, Humanitarian Coordinator for the Occupied Palestinian Territory, statement on Palestinian casualties in the Gaza Strip, 29 September 2018. Available at www.ochaopt.org/content/statement-humanitarian-coordinator-occupied-palestinian-territory-mr-jamie-mcgoldrick and <https://www.ochaopt.org/content/fifty-five-palestinians-killed-and-thousands-injured-gaza>.

<sup>8</sup> For all figures in this paragraph, see United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Humanitarian snapshot: casualties in the context of demonstrations and hostilities in Gaza”, 30 March–4 October 2018. Available at www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-snapshot-casualties-context-demonstrations-and-hostilities-gaza-30-march-4.

<sup>9</sup> McGoldrick, statement on Palestinian casualties in the Gaza Strip.

<sup>10</sup> Jamie McGoldrick, Humanitarian Coordinator in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, James Heenan, Head of OHCHR in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and Genevieve Boutin, United Nations Children’s Fund Special Representative in the State of Palestine, “Children’s rights must be put first”, joint press statement, 1 August 2018. Available at www.ochaopt.org/content/children-s-rights-must-be-put-first.

12. While the demonstrations have been largely peaceful, incidents have occurred in which Palestinians have thrown Molotov cocktails towards the border or flown burning kites that drop their material on Israeli land, igniting crops. Demonstrators have reportedly attempted to break through the fence between Gaza and Israel. All acts of violence are deplorable and must be condemned. However, serious concerns about the response of Israel to the demonstrations are not alleviated by the fact that some of the demonstrators may have used violent means themselves.<sup>11</sup> The applicable legal framework holds that the test is not the use of violence, but rather whether the law enforcement official faces an imminent threat to life. As the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights noted, it is difficult to see how tyre-burning or stone-throwing, or even Molotov cocktails thrown from a significant distance at heavily protected security forces in defensive positions, can be seen to constitute such threat.<sup>12</sup>

13. The Government of Israel has described the demonstrations as a “confrontation campaign” launched by Hamas and has placed the responsibility for the killing of Palestinians by Israeli forces with Hamas.<sup>13</sup> It has also connected the current events in Gaza to the previous escalation of violence in the West Bank, which began in October 2015 and lasted several months, calling the period since 2015 a “wave of terror”.<sup>14</sup> The Special Rapporteur notes that, indeed, many of the concerns raised in his 2016 report to the General Assembly (A/71/554), which also addressed the uptick in violence in the West Bank, have only heightened today, in particular the apparent excessive use of force by Israeli security forces. As noted in that report, more than 230 Palestinians were killed in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, in a roughly one-year period in the context of demonstrations and of attacks or alleged attacks by Palestinians against Israelis (see A/71/554 paras. 9–14). The recent months in Gaza, there have been similarly high numbers of deaths and extremely high numbers of injuries of Palestinians by Israeli forces. The practice of responding with deadly force to demonstrations is greatly at odds with human rights law and with the protected international values of the right to freedom of expression, assembly and association.

14. According to the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials, weapons and lethal force should be used only as a last resort and only in cases of imminent threat of death or serious injury. The Principles are informative here, given that Israeli forces along the fence between Israel and Gaza are acting in a law enforcement capacity. Palestinian demonstrators face heavily armed and well-equipped Israeli security forces in defensive positions, often hundreds of metres away. Even in cases in which Palestinians have thrown stones, Molotov cocktails or otherwise approached Israeli soldiers, according to the extensive evidence gathered by a number of human rights organizations and reviewed by the Special Rapporteur, the majority of those incidents did not appear to pose a credible threat to life or risk of serious injury to the heavily armed Israeli forces that would

<sup>11</sup> Sari Bashi, “Don’t blame Hamas for the Gaza bloodshed”, Human Rights Watch, 22 May 2018. Available at www.hrw.org/news/2018/05/22/dont-blame-hamas-gaza-bloodshed.

<sup>12</sup> OHCHR, “Gaza deaths: Israel must address excessive use of force, Zeid says”, 27 April 2018. Available at <https://ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22995&LangID=E>.

<sup>13</sup> Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Hamas launches confrontation campaign on Israel’s border”, 6 April 2018. Available at <http://mfa.gov.il/MFA/ForeignPolicy/Issues/Pages/Hamas-launches-confrontation-campaign-on-Israelis-border.aspx>; and Noa Landau, “Netanyahu on Gaza protesters: Israel tried non-lethal methods, but Hamas wants them to die”, Haaretz, 7 June 2018. Available at www.haaretz.com/israel-news/netanyahu-on-gaza-protesters-hamas-wants-them-to-die-1.6156392.

<sup>14</sup> Israel, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, “Wave of terror 2015–2018”, 17 October 2018. Available at <http://mfa.gov.il/MFA/ForeignPolicy/Terrorism/Palestinian/Pages/Wave-of-terror-October-2015.aspx>.

justify the use of deadly force under the relevant human rights law provisions.<sup>15</sup> Indeed, most of those killed were reportedly unarmed and were shot with live ammunition in the back, head or chest.

15. In that context, and more worrying, a message — that was later deleted — on the social media website Twitter from the official account of the spokesperson of the Israel Defense Forces at the start of the demonstrations on 31 March read: “Nothing was carried out uncontrolled; everything was accurate and measured, and we know where every bullet landed.”<sup>16</sup> It should be noted that, in the context of an occupation such as that in Gaza, killings resulting from the unlawful use of force may constitute wilful killings, a grave breach of article 147 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (the Fourth Geneva Convention). Grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions are categorized as war crimes under article 8 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.<sup>17</sup>

Access and movement restrictions in the context of demonstrations

16. In addition to the use of force, Israel has responded to the demonstrations by imposing restrictions on movement and access that have had a significant negative impact on the residents of Gaza. As highlighted in my report to the Human Rights Council in March 2018 (see A/HRC/37/75, paras. 36–60), residents of Gaza face serious challenges with respect to the right to health owing to the crumbling infrastructure in Gaza resulting from 11 years of blockade by Israel and its closure of Gaza, as well as delays or denials in the issuance of permits that would allow them to travel outside of Gaza for medical treatment. Those concerns continue at present, and the situation has only been exacerbated by the spike in needs associated with the large numbers of injuries sustained during the demonstrations. In June 2018, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the World Health Organization warned of the desperate situation of the Gaza health sector, citing the electricity shortage, cuts in salaries for government employees and shortages of essential medicines as key problems that have weakened the sector in recent years and months.<sup>18</sup> In addition to the high number of injuries, the complexity of treating bullet wounds has been raised as a key issue that will impact longer-term recovery of many patients.<sup>19</sup>

<sup>15</sup> See for example, Human Rights Watch, “Israel: Gaza killings unlawful, calculated”, 3 April 2018. Available at www.hrw.org/news/2018/04/03/israel-gaza-killings-unlawful-calculated; B’Tselem, “If the heart be not callous, on the unlawful shooting of unarmed demonstrators in Gaza”, position paper, April 2018. Available at www.btselem.org/publications/summaries/201804\_if\_the\_heart\_be\_not\_callous; Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, “Child killed and 112 protestors injured on the 16th Friday of demonstrations”, press release, 15 July 2018. Available at www.mezan.org/en/post/23073/Child+Killed+and+112+Protesters+Injured+on+the+16th+Friday+of+Demonstrations.

<sup>16</sup> Hazem Balousha and Oliver Holmes, “The Gaza Strip mourns its dead after protest is met with bullets”, The Guardian, 31 March 2018. Available at www.theguardian.com/world/2018/mar/31/weary-angry-gazans-bury-dead-after-deadly-border-conflict.

<sup>17</sup> See also, Fatour Bensouda, Prosecutor, International Criminal Court, statement regarding the worsening situation in Gaza, 8 April 2018. Available at www.icc-cpi.int/Pages/item.aspx?name=180408-otp-stat, noting that “violence against civilians — in a situation such as the one prevailing in Gaza — could constitute crimes under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court ... as could the use of civilian presence for the purpose of shielding military activities.”

<sup>18</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Gaza’s health sector struggles to cope with massive influx of casualties amid pervasive shortages”, Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, May 2018. Available at www.ochaopt.org/content/gaza-s-health-sector-struggles-cope-massive-influx-casualties-amid-pervasive-shortages.

<sup>19</sup> Médecins sans frontières, “Gaza: a long ordeal awaits hundreds of wounded from the march of return”, 8 August 2018. Available at www.msf.org/gaza-long-ordeal-awaits-hundreds-wounded-march-return.

17. Given the volume of patients and their complex needs, many have required medical care not available in Gaza. However, difficulties in obtaining permits in a timely manner, or at all, have been a serious concern. In the case of gunshot wounds, quick treatment is often essential to avoid amputation. In one case, two injured young men aged 17 and 20 were denied exit permits, which resulted in each having to undergo a leg amputation. The Israeli authorities cited their participation in the demonstrations as the reason for denying the exit permits.<sup>20</sup> On 8 April, the human rights organizations Adalah and Al Mezan filed a petition on behalf of the patients with the Israeli High Court. While awaiting the decision of the Court, both patients underwent amputations. On 16 April, the Court ruled that one of the men, Yousef Al-Kronz, should be permitted to leave Gaza for additional surgery as he was at risk of having his second leg amputated.<sup>21</sup> Denial of access to medical treatment is not justifiable and is in violation of the obligations of Israel under human rights law as well as its obligations as an occupying power under international humanitarian law.

18. In addition to restrictions on the travel of individuals, Israel has in recent months imposed restrictions on the entry of essential goods to Gaza. Israeli authorities have clearly stated that those measures are undertaken in response to the flying of burning kites into Israeli territory that has resulted in significant damage to Israeli crops.<sup>22</sup> That has resulted in severe shortages of, among other things, emergency fuel. As noted above, the United Nations has on several occasions warned of the possibility of total collapse of essential services if fuel is not allowed to enter Gaza. The fact that the entire Gaza population could be subject to an even more serious degradation of conditions owing to the actions of a few points to the imposition of collective punishment, which is prohibited under article 33 of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

Accountability

19. At the onset of the demonstrations, the Secretary-General called for independent and transparent investigations into the incidents.<sup>23</sup> That call has been echoed on numerous occasions by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and a number of mandate holders of the special procedures of the Human Rights Council, including the Special Rapporteur.<sup>24</sup> Given the centrality of accountability to any efforts to achieve peace and prevent future violations of international law, the Special Rapporteur commends the decision by the Human Rights Council in its resolution S-28/1 to create an independent commission of <sup>20</sup> Jack Khoury, “Israel denied passage for medical treatment to two Palestinians who protested in Gaza — and their legs were amputated”, Haaretz, 12 April 2018. Available at www.haaretz.com/israel-news/two-gazan-protesters-legs-amputated-after-israel-denies-entry-1.5993161.

<sup>21</sup> Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, “Israel Supreme Court rules on Adalah-Al Mezan petition: Israel must let Palestinian youth wounded by Israeli gunfire at protests leave Gaza for urgent care”, press release, 16 April 2018. Available at www.mezan.org/en/post/22707.

<sup>22</sup> BBC, “Israel closes main Gaza goods crossing in response to arson attacks”, 10 July 2018. Available at www.bbc.com/news/world-middle-east-44777297.

<sup>23</sup> Farhan Haq, Deputy Spokesman for the Secretary-General, statement for the Secretary-General on the situation in Gaza, 30 March 2018. Available at www.un.org/sg/en/content/sg/statement/2018-03-30/statement-attributable-spokesman-secretary-general-situation-gaza.

<sup>24</sup> OHCHR, “UN human rights experts condemn killings of Palestinians near Gaza fence by Israeli security forces”, 17 April 2018; “UN rights experts condemn Israel’s response to Palestinian protests in Gaza”, 6 April 2018; “Press briefing note on Gaza and Guatemala”, 17 April 2018; “Gaza deaths: Israel must address excessive use of force, Zeid says”, 27 April 2018. Available from www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22950, www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22924, www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22925&LangID=E, and www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22995&LangID=E, respectively.

inquiry as an important means of seeking to end impunity and achieving more effective redress for victims than has been realized to date.

20. In that resolution, the Council decided to dispatch the commission, noting a “systematic failure by Israel to carry out genuine investigations in an impartial, independent, prompt and effective way, as required by international law, into the violence and offences against Palestinians by the occupying forces, and to establish judicial accountability for its actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.”

21. In April 2018, Israeli Defense Minister Avigdor Lieberman said that no investigations would be launched into the killings along the Gaza border.<sup>25</sup> Subsequently, in August, Brigadier General Sharon Afek decided to open an investigation into the deaths of two young Palestinians: a 15-year-old who, according to video footage, was shot in the back near the fence in March; and an 18-year-old who was shot during demonstrations near the fence in July.

22. In April, Israeli and Palestinian human rights organizations filed two petitions with the Israeli High Court demanding that it assess the legality of the Israel Defense Forces open-fire regulations.<sup>26</sup> In May, the Court issued its decision, relying heavily on the State’s assessment of the facts, and — without examining the rules of engagement of the Israel Defense Forces — deferred legal questions to the Forces’ internal investigation mechanism.<sup>27</sup> The High Court’s decision has raised serious concerns, including among legal scholars, about the permissiveness of the judicial scrutiny of the Israeli military’s conduct, as it seems to accept arguments by the State that justify the potential use of lethal force against demonstrators that do not pose any threat to life or serious injury.<sup>28</sup> That raises additional concerns about the possibility of achieving accountability within the military justice system.

23. The existence of a system in which cases can be brought to the Military Advocate General is necessary but not sufficient for achieving accountability. There must also be evidence that the system itself works in an independent, impartial and transparent manner, in line with international standards. The Rapporteur echoes the High Commissioner’s sentiment that failures by the Military Advocate General undermine current and future efforts to achieve accountability for those incidents by “creating the misconception that cases were effectively addressed through the military justice system” (see A/HRC/37/41, para. 14).

<sup>25</sup> Loveday Morris and Hazem Balousha, “No inquiry into Gaza border deaths, says Israeli defense minister”, Washington Post, 1 April 2018. Available at www.washingtonpost.com/world/middle-east/no-inquiry-into-gaza-border-deaths-says-israeli-defense-minister/2018/04/01/f2562ca2-352d-11e8-b6bd-0084a1666987\_story.html?utm\_term=.cdab7561d170.

<sup>26</sup> Adalah, “Adalah and Al Mezan petition supreme court: order Israeli army to stop using snipers, live ammunition against Gaza protests” 24 April 2018. Available at www.adalah.org/en/content/view/9488; Gisha, “HCJ petition: revoke open-fire regulation permitting live fire on demonstrators not endangering human life”, 15 April 2018. Available from <http://gisha.org/updates/8804>; and Yesh Din, “HCJ petition: revoke rules of engagement permitting live fire at non-dangerous demonstrators near Gaza fence”, 15 April 2018. Available at www.yesh-din.org/en/hcj-petition-revoke-rules-engagement-permitting-live-fire-non-dangerous-demonstrators-near-gaza-fence/.

<sup>27</sup> Yesh Din, “HCJ petition: revoke rules of engagement permitting live fire at non-dangerous demonstrators near Gaza fence”.

<sup>28</sup> See for example, Eliav Liebllich, “Collectivizing threat: an analysis of Israel’s legal claim for resort to force on the Gaza border”, Just Security, 16 May 2018. Available at www.justsecurity.org/56346/collectivizing-threat-analysis-israels-legal-claims-resort-force-gaza-border/; and Elena Chachko and Yuval Shany, “The Supreme Court of Israel dismisses a petition against Gaza rules of engagement”, Law Fare, 26 May 2018. Available at www.lawfareblog.com/supreme-court-israel-dismisses-petition-against-gaza-rules-engagement.

III. Annexation

24. The annexation of territory is strictly prohibited in modern international law. Indeed, that prohibition has acquired the status of a jus cogens norm in international law, meaning that it is accepted as a fundamental principle of law by the international community, for which no exception or derogation is permitted.<sup>29</sup> Territorial conquest and annexation are now regarded as intolerable scourges from darker times, because they invariably incite devastating wars, political instability, economic ruin, systematic discrimination and widespread human suffering.<sup>30</sup> Although annexation has yet to be completely eradicated in the modern world, its occurrence has become much more infrequent since the creation of the United Nations, with the international community refusing to recognize annexation claims in many cases.

25. Nevertheless, annexation remains a burning issue in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Israel, the occupying power, has twice formally annexed occupied territory under its control: East Jerusalem (in 1967 and 1980) and the Syrian Golan Heights (in 1981).<sup>31</sup> Its refusal to relinquish the two territories in the face of widespread condemnation by the international community has contributed to regional instability and severely limited the efficacy of international law. Furthermore, throughout the years of occupation since the June 1967 war, Israel has continuously entrenched its de facto annexation of the West Bank by imposing intentionally irreversible changes to occupied territory that are proscribed by international humanitarian law: the establishment of 230 settlements, populated by more than 400,000 Israeli settlers; the physical and political enclosure of the 2.6 million West Bank Palestinians; the extension of Israeli laws to the West Bank and the creation of a discriminatory legal regime; the unequal access to natural resources, social services, property and land for Palestinians in the occupied West Bank; and the explicit statements by a wide circle of senior Israeli political leaders calling for the formal annexation of parts or all of the West Bank. Those annexation trends have only intensified over the past two years. As one Israeli human rights lawyer recently stated, “[the Government of Israel] is peeling away the last remnants of loyalty to the notion of the occupation as temporary and to any obligation to negotiate with the Palestinians. The goal is clear: a single State containing two people, only one of which has citizenship and civil rights.”<sup>32</sup>

26. Accordingly, the focus of the second half of the present report is devoted to exploring the trends of the de jure annexation of East Jerusalem by Israel and its de facto annexation of the West Bank, their incompatibility with international legal norms and their foreclosing of the right to self-determination by the Palestinian people.

A. Annexation in modern international law

27. After 1945 and the bitter experience of decades of global wars fuelled by ambitions of territorial expansionism, the international community resolved to forbid war, conquest and annexation as instruments of national policy. The Charter of the United Nations, in its Article 2 (3) and (4), requires States Members of the United Nations to settle their differences by peaceful means, with the corollary that

<sup>29</sup> Rainer Hofmann, “Annexation”, in Max Planck Encyclopedia of Public International Law (Oxford University Press, 2013), paras. 21 and 38.

<sup>30</sup> Robert Yewdall Jennings, The Acquisition of Territory in International Law (Manchester, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Manchester University Press, 1963, 2017).

<sup>31</sup> These de jure annexations have been condemned by the Security Council in its resolutions 478 (1980) and 497 (1981).

<sup>32</sup> Michael Sfar, “Israel and annexation by lawfare”, The New York Review of Books, 10 April 2018. Available at www.nybooks.com/daily/2018/04/10/israel-and-annexation-by-lawfare/.

annexation had now become illegal.<sup>33</sup> The Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations (the Declaration on Friendly Relations), adopted unanimously in 1970 by the General Assembly, declares that no territorial acquisition or special advantage resulting from the threat or use of force shall be recognized as legal. From 1967, the Security Council has expressly affirmed the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war or force on at least eight occasions.<sup>34</sup> The inadmissibility principle has also been endorsed repeatedly by the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council.<sup>35</sup> The International Court of Justice stated in 2004 that this principle has achieved the status of customary international law.<sup>36</sup> Leading international legal scholars are widely in agreement that the prohibitions against conquest and annexation are cornerstones of modern international law.<sup>37</sup> Annexation is incompatible with the foundational principles of the laws of occupation, which stipulate that the occupying power's tenure is inherently temporary, not permanent or even indefinite, and that it must rule the territory as a trustee for the benefit of the protected population under occupation and not for its own aggrandizement.<sup>38</sup> Annexation is also profoundly in breach of the fundamental right to self-determination, an erga omnes obligation under international law.<sup>39</sup>

B. Effectiveness of the prohibition

28. Recently, scholars have affirmed that the legal and diplomatic prohibition of conquest and annexation has had a significant dampening effect on its occurrence in the post-1945 period. In the period 1816–1928, until the signing of the General Treaty for Renunciation of War as an Instrument of National Policy (the Briand-Kellogg Pact), there had been an average of 1.21 conquests per year, with the acquisition of an average of 295,486 square kilometres annually. Between 1928 and 1948, during the initial period following the Pact, only a slight decline in the patterns of conquest and annexation were evident: there was an average of 1.15 conquests per year, involving an average of 240,739 square kilometres. However, since 1948, with the emergence of the United Nations and the consolidation of the prohibitions within international law, there has been a dramatic decline: only 0.26 conquests per year, amounting to an annual average of 14,950 square kilometres. Most importantly, many of the modern conquests and annexations have not been recognized by States. Thus, while war may still sometimes produce a military victory, it does not often yield lasting legal victories.<sup>40</sup>

<sup>33</sup> Hofmann, “Annexation”, para. 14.

<sup>34</sup> The latest is Security Council resolution 2334 \(2016\).

<sup>35</sup> Most recently in General Assembly resolution 72/14 and Human Rights Council resolution 37/36.

<sup>36</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, para. 87.

<sup>37</sup> For example: Malcolm N. Shaw, International Law, 8th ed. (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, 2017), p. 372. “No territorial acquisition resulting from the threat or use of force shall be recognized as legal”; Jennings, The Acquisition of Territory in International Law, p. 56: “Conquest as a title to territorial sovereignty has ceased to be a part of the law.”

<sup>38</sup> Orna Ben-Naftali, Michael Sfard and Hedi Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT: A Legal Lexicon of the Israeli Control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2018), p. 399: “The normative framework limits the occupant’s powers in terms of both material scope and time, forbidding it to act in a manner intended to generate permanent results ... the occupation does not confer title to the territory; ... it is to be managed as a trust; and ... it is temporary.”

<sup>39</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall, I.C.J. Reports 2004, paras. 88 and 155.

<sup>40</sup> Oona Hathaway and Scott J. Shapiro, The Internationalists: How a Radical Plan to Outlaw War Remade the World (New York: Simon and Schuster, 2017), chap. 13.

C. Definition of de facto annexation

29. “De jure annexation” is widely recognized in international law as the formal declaration by a State that it is claiming permanent sovereignty over territory that it had forcibly acquired from another State.<sup>41</sup> In contrast, “de facto annexation” has been generally employed as a descriptive term to illustrate the actions of a State in the process of consolidating — often through oblique and incremental measures — the legislative, political, institutional and demographic facts to establish a future claim of sovereignty over territory acquired through force or war, but without the formal declaration of annexation.

30. Given the broad international consensus respecting the illegality of annexation, acquisitive States in modern times that wish to annex territory have a strong incentive to obfuscate the reality of their plans.<sup>42</sup> Typically, they will work assiduously to create a series of “facts on the ground” in order to buttress a sovereign claim, while postponing a formal declaration because of the fear of a diplomatic and political reaction by the international community. With that in mind, the Special Rapporteur submits that, if the prohibition against annexation is to be coherent and effective, particularly in the context of the occupied Palestinian territory, then the liberal purposes of international law should ensure that the absolute prohibition against annexation extends to those incremental, yet substantive, measures being taken by a State in violation of international humanitarian law to lay the ground for a future claim of sovereignty over conquered and/or occupied territory.<sup>43</sup>

31. Relying upon legal reasoning developed by Omar Dajani, the Rapporteur proposes that the following factors should be employed to assess whether a State engaging in de facto annexation has crossed the tipping point in illegal annexation:

(a) Effective control. The State is in effective control of territory that it forcibly acquired from another State;<sup>44</sup>

(b) Exercises of sovereignty. The State has taken active measures that are consistent with permanency and a sovereign claim over parts or all of the territory or through prohibited changes to local legislation, including the application of its domestic laws to the territory, demographic transformation and/or population transfer, the prolonged duration of the occupation and/or the granting of citizenship;<sup>45</sup>

(c) Expressions of intent. This would include statements by leading political leaders and/or State institutions indicating, or advocating for, the permanent annexation of parts or all of the occupied territory;<sup>46</sup>

(d) International law and direction. The State has refused to accept the application of international law, including the laws of occupation, to the territory

<sup>41</sup> Hofmann, “Annexation”, para. 1.

<sup>42</sup> Omar M. Dajani, “Israel’s creeping annexation” (2017), American Journal of International Law, vol. 111, p. 52.

<sup>43</sup> Ibid. p. 53, “... while a formal act of annexation is powerful evidence of intent, the lack of one is by no means dispositive.”

<sup>44</sup> Ibid. p. 52, citing an element of the older test in international law as to when an annexation had been accomplished.

<sup>45</sup> Ibid. p. 53, “... it is difficult to conceive of a measure more indicative of a state’s intent to annex territory — short of a declaration to that effect — than its establishment of civilian settlements upon that territory”. In addition, the application by the occupying power of its domestic laws to the occupied territory is incompatible with the laws of occupation and is prohibited precisely to discourage annexation, see Ben-Naftali Sfar and Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT.

<sup>46</sup> Dajani, “Israel’s creeping annexation”, p. 52, citing an element of the older test in international law as to when an annexation had been accomplished. Also see Shaw, International Law, p. 371, “intention to annex was a crucial aspect of the equation.”

and/or is failing to comply with the direction of the international community with respect to the present and future status of the territory.<sup>47</sup>

32. The essence of the above test is to determine whether, on the facts of each particular conquest and/or occupation, the State has displayed a pattern of behaviour sufficiently consistent with annexation and inconsistent with the right to self-determination and the fundamental principles of occupation, including temporality, trusteeship and good faith (see A/72/556). If so, then the State would be in violation of the international prohibition against annexation, even in the absence of a formal declaration.

33. With that legal foundation in mind, we can proceed to examine the conduct of Israel, the occupying power, with respect to East Jerusalem and the West Bank.

D. Annexation and East Jerusalem

34. Several weeks after the military occupation of East Jerusalem and the West Bank — among other territories — by Israel in the June 1967 war, Israel formally extended its law and administration to East Jerusalem and 28 surrounding Palestinian villages in the West Bank, creating a much-enlarged Jerusalem municipality. The 1967 annexation absorbed not only the 6,400 dunams of East Jerusalem — previously ruled by Jordan — but also 65,000 dunams in the West Bank, attaching them to the 38,000 dunams belonging to West Jerusalem. In General Assembly resolutions 2253 (ES-V) and 2254 (ES-V), the international community immediately and overwhelmingly rejected that de jure annexation. Israel refused to comply with those resolutions and began to establish permanent demographic, structural and institutional facts on the ground to consolidate its sovereignty claim.

35. Subsequently, in July 1980, the Israeli Knesset enacted the quasi-constitutional Basic Law: Jerusalem, Capital of Israel, which proclaimed that Jerusalem, “complete and unified”, was the capital of Israel. Again, the international community, this time through the Security Council, condemned the annexation in the strongest terms and declared that the Basic Law was a violation of international law and a threat to peace and security. Furthermore, in its resolution 478 (1980), the Council determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, that had altered or purport to alter the character and status of Jerusalem were null and void and must be rescinded.

36. The United Nations, by Council resolution 2334 \(2016\) and Assembly resolution ES-10/19, has recently reaffirmed those declarations, establishing the illegality of the formal Israeli annexation of East Jerusalem.

37. As part of its continuing efforts to ensure that its de jure annexation of East Jerusalem is irreversible, Israel has over the past five decades extended its national laws and civil authority to the occupied section of the city; issued numerous declarations of permanent sovereignty; transformed the physical features and historic character of East Jerusalem; moved some of its national institutions, including the Ministry of Justice; and embarked upon an intensive programme of creating and expanding Israeli settlements.<sup>48</sup> Two trends in particular are evident, the objective of both being the perpetuation by Israel of its annexation of East Jerusalem.

<sup>47</sup> Dajani, “Israel’s creeping annexation”, p. 53, “an occupant’s refusal to accept the law of occupation’s applicability would seem probative for drawing this conclusion [acting as a sovereign] — as would a refusal to comply with duties under that law that relate specifically to distinguishing the rights of an occupant from those of a sovereign.”

38. First, the consistent policy of Israel since 1967 has been to secure an overwhelming Israeli Jewish majority in Jerusalem, achieved through settler implantation and demographic gerrymandering. Early in the occupation, Israeli national and municipal leaders adopted two official policy objectives aimed at sustaining permanent Israeli annexation of East Jerusalem: to expand the size of the city, and thereby increase its absorptive capacity for Israeli Jewish settlement;<sup>49</sup> and to establish a targeted “demographic balance” of 70 per cent Jewish Israelis and 30 per cent Palestinians in the city.<sup>50</sup> Later, in the 2000s, those leaders added a third policy objective: to prevent the development of any national Palestinian institutions in Jerusalem and thereby dampen Palestinian nationalist sentiment. Notwithstanding the best efforts of Israel since, none of those objectives have been fully successful. No State has formally recognized the claim by Israel to its sovereignty over East Jerusalem. Demographically, Palestinian Jerusalemites in 2016 constituted 38 per cent of the city’s population, up from 28 per cent in 1980.<sup>51</sup> Furthermore, a 2018 poll indicated that 97 per cent of Palestinian East Jerusalem residents strongly objected to the idea that Israel should maintain its annexation of East Jerusalem.<sup>52</sup> Nonetheless, since 1967, Israel has taken a number of substantial steps to entrench its sovereign claim over East Jerusalem, as described below.

39. A total of 15 official Israeli Jewish settlements have been built within the expanded boundaries of East Jerusalem since 1967, with a total population of 210,000 Israeli settlers. Those settlements constitute a grave breach under international humanitarian law.<sup>53</sup> The purpose of the settlements is to create such a large critical mass of settlers that no future Government of Israel would be politically able either to oppose them or uproot them. One disfiguring effect of the settlements, together with the separation wall and the surrounding Israeli settlements just outside of the current municipal boundaries, has been to sever East Jerusalem — the centre of Palestinian life — from the West Bank, thus significantly eroding their economic, social, familial and political interdependency.<sup>54</sup> Most recently, the Jerusalem municipality has permitted Israeli settlers to dispossess Palestinian Jerusalemites in the Sheikh Jarrah and Silwan neighbourhoods, resulting in frequent friction and violence.<sup>55</sup>

40. In addition, the laws and national authority of Israel apply throughout East Jerusalem, although in a manner that systemically discriminates against the <sup>48</sup> Prime Minister Ehud Barak stated in November 2000, “maintaining our sovereignty over Jerusalem and boosting its Jewish majority have been our chief aims, and toward this end Israel constructed large Jewish neighbourhoods in the eastern part of the city, which house 180,000 residents, and large settlements on the periphery of Jerusalem, like the city of Ma’aleh Adumim and Givat Ze’ev.” See <http://mfa.gov.il/MFA/PressRoom/2000/Pages/Address%20by%20PM%20Barak%20on%20the%20Fifth%20Anniversary%20of%20th.aspx>.

<sup>49</sup> Bimkom — Planners for Planning Rights, Trapped by Planning: Israeli Policy, Planning and Development in the Palestinian Neighbourhoods of East Jerusalem (2014).

<sup>50</sup> B’Tselem, A Policy of Discrimination: Land Expropriation, Planning and Building in East Jerusalem (1995).

<sup>51</sup> Jerusalem Institute for Policy Research, Statistical Yearbook of Jerusalem, No. 32 (2018), table III/4.

<sup>52</sup> Udi Shaham, “Poll: 97% of east J’lem residents oppose Israeli control over entire city”, Jerusalem Post, 11 May 2018. Available at www.jpost.com/Arab-Israeli-Conflict/Poll-97-percent-of-east-Jlem-residents-oppose-Israeli-control-over-entire-city-556147.

<sup>53</sup> Security Council resolution 478 (1980).

<sup>54</sup> See www.btselem.org/jerusalem.

<sup>55</sup> Civic Coalition for Palestinian Rights in Jerusalem, Forced Eviction in Occupied East Jerusalem (forthcoming).

Palestinian community in the city.<sup>56</sup> One prime example is the planning laws.<sup>57</sup> Since 1967, Israel has expropriated over 38 per cent of the land base of East Jerusalem exclusively for Israeli settlements and has zoned only 15 per cent (amounting to 8.5 per cent of Jerusalem as a whole) for the residential needs of Palestinian Jerusalemites. That has created a housing and planning crisis: only 8 per cent of all building permits issued by the Jerusalem municipality are granted for Palestinian neighbourhoods in East Jerusalem, despite the fact that the population density in Palestinian neighbourhoods is twice that of Israeli neighbourhoods.<sup>58</sup> According to the Association for Civil Rights in Israel, the local and district planning authorities in Israel have not advanced a single outline plan for the Palestinian neighbourhoods for the past decade, resulting in a planning freeze.<sup>59</sup> A disquieting consequence of that planning discrimination has been the demolition of hundreds of Palestinian homes ordered by Israeli authorities over the past decade that had been constructed without the nearly impossible to obtain building permits. In total, 123 housing units were destroyed in 2016 alone, and more than 15,000 Palestinian homes (in which 100,000 Palestinians reside, representing one third of the Palestinians in East Jerusalem) remain under the threat of demolition.<sup>60</sup> Many Palestinians in East Jerusalem are also unable to register their land ownership with State authorities, resulting in insecure tenure and the diminished value of their properties.<sup>61</sup> The planning crisis is part of a broader long-term neglect by the Jerusalem municipality of Palestinian East Jerusalem, which — in comparison to West Jerusalem — endures much higher poverty rates, a much smaller allocation of the municipal budget spending, poor social and health services and crumbling public infrastructure.<sup>62</sup> Although East Jerusalem was forcibly annexed by Israel, its Palestinian residents remain excluded from the relative prosperity of the rest of the city.

41. Furthermore, the legal status of almost all Palestinian Jerusalemites under Israeli law is as a “permanent resident”, which is the same legal status given to foreign nationals in Israel. Palestinian permanent residents pay taxes and are entitled to receive public benefits and services but, unlike citizens, they possess no secure right to remain in Jerusalem. While under the laws of occupation the Palestinian Jerusalemites are “protected persons”, Israel does not recognize that status. Since 1967, Israel has revoked the residency status of more than 14,500 East Jerusalemite Palestinians; since 1995, Palestinian residents of East Jerusalem have to prove that their “centre of life” is in the city in order to retain their permanent resident status or risk losing their status and thus their ability to return to their homes in East Jerusalem. Not having permanent resident status prevents Palestinians from other parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory from legally residing or even visiting Jerusalem. In addition, Israeli laws severely restrict the right to family reunification by denying

<sup>56</sup> See generally, Society of St. Yves, Everyone Pays the Price: Case Study of Jerusalem (2017).

<sup>57</sup> Bimkom, Trapped by Planning.

<sup>58</sup> See www.btselem.org/jerusalem. This was measured by population per room.

<sup>59</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, “East Jerusalem: facts and figures 2017”, 21 May 2017. Available at <https://law.acri.org.il/en/2017/05/24/east-jerusalem-facts-and-figures-2017/>.

<sup>60</sup> Ir Amim and Bimkom — Planners for Planning Rights, Deliberately Planned: A Policy to Thwart Planning in the Palestinian Neighbourhoods of Jerusalem (2017).

<sup>61</sup> “East Jerusalem is the double-edged sword of Israel’s capital”, Haaretz, 10 April 2018. Available at www.haaretz.com/opinion/editorial/east-jerusalem-is-the-double-edged-sword-of-israel-s-capital-1.5988771.

<sup>62</sup> United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), The Palestinian Economy in East Jerusalem: Enduring Annexation, Isolation and Disintegration, UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2012/2 (New York and Geneva, 2013).

many Palestinian Jerusalemites the ability to extend permanent resident status to their spouses and children who do not have recognized residency in Jerusalem.<sup>63</sup>

42. The other prominent trend is the more aggressive approach taken by the Israeli political leadership in recent years to counter the growing Palestinian demographic presence in East Jerusalem and to bolster the claim by Israel to sovereignty over East Jerusalem. That trend has taken two forms. First, the route of the wall in the 2000s around Jerusalem has deliberately placed a number of Palestinian neighbourhoods on the West Bank side of the wall. And second, the Israeli Knesset has adopted several pieces of legislation, and is considering several other proposed statutes, which seek to ensure that its annexation of East Jerusalem becomes irreversible.

43. The construction of the wall by Israel — which Israel states was built as a security barrier but which also stretches deep inside the occupied territory in many areas — has not followed the boundaries of the expanded Jerusalem municipality. Around Jerusalem, it absorbed some West Bank territory within the wall while unilaterally placing several large Palestinian Jerusalem neighbourhoods, including Kufr Aqab and Shu'fat, outside of the wall. Those Palestinian Jerusalemites living beyond the wall — estimated to comprise 120,000–140,000 persons — officially still live within Jerusalem, still have their “permanent resident” status, still pay taxes to the Municipality and some of whom work in Jerusalem by crossing Israeli checkpoints to enter the city.<sup>64</sup> However, the Israeli authorities have largely abandoned those neighbourhoods. Even in comparison to the negligible municipal services provided to the Palestinian neighbourhoods within the wall, the excluded neighbourhoods are almost entirely forgotten: they live without basic social services and infrastructure, such as water, garbage collection, road building and sewage; there is a serious shortage of educational and welfare institutions; high crime rates persist; they suffer from housing shortages and overcrowding; and, without an effective system for granting permits, virtually all buildings are constructed without official permission.<sup>65</sup> The Minister for Jerusalem Affairs in the Israeli cabinet, Ze'ev Elkin, proposed in October 2017 that the detached Palestinian neighbourhoods be removed from the Jerusalem municipality and placed under a new council administration.<sup>66</sup> It is an inescapable conclusion that the route of the separation wall around Jerusalem — which includes all the Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem as well several nearby West Bank Israeli settlements, while excluding approximately one third of the Palestinian Jerusalemites — has been designed for demographic reasons to maximize the Israeli population in Jerusalem while seeking to substantially reduce the city's Palestinian presence.<sup>67</sup>

44. Recent legislative initiatives at the Israeli Knesset have also aimed at consolidating Israeli sovereignty over East Jerusalem and resetting the “demographic balance” in the city.<sup>68</sup> Two significant initiatives in particular stand out, as described below.

<sup>63</sup> Civic Coalition for Palestinian Rights in Jerusalem, Israel's Occupation: 50 Years and Counting (2018).

<sup>64</sup> Association for Civil Rights in Israel, “East Jerusalem: facts and figures 2017”.

<sup>65</sup> Rachel Kushner, “‘We are orphans here’: life and death in East Jerusalem’s Palestinian refugee camp”, New York Times, 1 December 2016. Available at www.nytimes.com/2016/12/01/magazine/we-are-orphans-here.html.

<sup>66</sup> Nir Hasson and Jonathan Lis, “Israeli Minister to push plan aimed at reducing number of Arabs in Jerusalem”, Haaretz, 29 October 2017. Available at www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-israeli-minister-proposes-plan-to-reduce-number-of-arabs-in-jerusalem-1.5461071.

<sup>67</sup> Al-Haq, “A legal analysis of bills and legislation to revoke the permanent residencies of Palestinians and alter the status of Jerusalem”, legal brief, 7 March 2018. Available at www.alhaq.org/en/wp-content/uploads/2018/03/LegalBriefJerusalem.pdf.

<sup>68</sup> Ir Amim, “Destructive unilateral measures to redraw the borders of Jerusalem” (January 2018).

45. The Basic Law: Jerusalem, Capital of Israel. In January 2018, the Knesset amended the Basic Law to stipulate that any proposal to transfer “the authority related to the area of Jerusalem” in final status negotiations “to a foreign body” could only be authorized if a super-majority of 80 (out of the 120) members of the Knesset approved. The Basic Law had previously provided that such a transfer could occur with a simple majority vote of the Knesset. The amendment would make it more difficult to obtain Knesset support for any peace agreement that would recognize Palestinian sovereignty over East Jerusalem. The amendment also creates the legislative authority to redraw the municipal boundaries of Jerusalem to exclude the detached Palestinian neighbourhoods that are on the West Bank side of the wall.

46. The “Greater Jerusalem” bill. Throughout 2017, the Knesset considered a legislative proposal that would have incorporated five West Bank Israeli settlements — Beitar Illit, Ma’aleh Adumin, Giv’at Ze’ev, Gush Etzion and Efrat — as autonomous submunicipalities of the city, while maintaining local autonomy for the settlements. That “soft annexation” bill would have added 120,000 Israeli settlers to Jerusalem, thus enhancing the city’s Jewish majority. The bill was sponsored by MK Yoav Kish (Likud), who stated that it would “weaken the Arab hold on the capital” and “enshrine the Jewish majority.”<sup>69</sup> The bill was subsequently tabled by the Israeli Prime Minister, citing the need to “coordinate” its legislative agenda on that legislation with the United States of America.<sup>70</sup>

47. At the time of writing, the Palestinian Bedouin village of Khan al-Ahmar in the West Bank, just east of Jerusalem, is being threatened by Israeli authorities with demolition. In the opinion of the Special Rapporteur, and others, the resulting forced eviction of the residents of Khan al-Ahmar would undoubtedly lead to forcible transfer, a war crime under international law.<sup>71</sup> A motivating reason for the removal of the village would be to clear Palestinian communities from the 12-square-kilometre area known as the “E1 corridor”, thereby securing territorial continuity between Jerusalem and the large West Bank settlement of Ma’ale Adumim. The realization of longstanding plans by Israel to develop that area through the construction of more Israeli settlements would serve several annexation purposes: (a) to consolidate Israeli territorial sovereignty and demographic domination in the greater Jerusalem area; (b) effectively to sever the remaining territorial contiguity between the northern and southern West Bank, thus extinguishing any faint remaining hope of a viable two-State solution; and (c) to isolate further Palestinian East Jerusalem from the West Bank.<sup>72</sup>

<sup>69</sup> Yossi Verter, “Israeli ministers set to vote annexing West Bank settlements to Jerusalem”, Haaretz, 26 October 2017. Available at www.haaretz.com/israel-news/ministers-to-vote-on-annexing-west-bank-settlements-to-jerusalem-1.5460310.

<sup>70</sup> Jonathan Lis and Amir Tibon, “Netanyahu: Israel must coordinate Jerusalem annexation bill with U.S.”, Haaretz, 29 October 2017.

<sup>71</sup> Amnesty International, “Israel/OPT: demolition of Palestinian village of Khan al-Ahmar is cruel blow and war crime”, 30 September 2018. Available at www.amnesty.ca/news/israelopt-demolition-palestinian-village-khan-al-ahmar-cruel-blow-and-war-crime; Noa Landau, “European Parliament warns: eviction, demolition of Khan al-Ahmar would be war crime”, Haaretz, 13 September 2018. Available at <https://www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-european-parliament-warns- eviction-demolition-of-khan-al-ahmar-would-be-war-crime-1.6469916>.

<sup>72</sup> Zena Agha, “Israel’s annexation crusade in Jerusalem: the role of Ma’ale Adumim and the E1 corridor”, Al-Shabaka, 26 March 2018. Available at <https://al-shabaka.org/briefs/israels-annexation-crusade-in-jerusalem-the-role-of-maale-adumim-and-the-e1-corridor/>.

E. Annexation and the West Bank

48. Israel has yet to declare its formal annexation of any part of the occupied West Bank, as it presently lacks international political support from any quarter for such a move.<sup>73</sup> Its official position to the rest of the world is that, while it denies that the West Bank (which it refers to as “Judea and Samaria”) is occupied and it has rejected the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention, it remains willing to negotiate its future status with the Palestinians.<sup>74</sup> However, in practice, Israel has taken multiple steps consistent with establishing a sovereign claim over the West Bank since shortly after the occupation began in June 1967, and those steps have escalated significantly in recent years.

49. The first Israeli civilian settlements in the West Bank, initially camouflaged as military camps, were established in the summer of 1967.<sup>75</sup> Since then, Israel has built and incentivized approximately 230 settlements throughout the West Bank, inhabited by more than 400,000 settlers. No country creates civilian settlements in occupied territory unless it has annexationist designs in mind, which is why the international community has designated the practice of settler-implantation as a war crime.<sup>76</sup> The political purpose of the Israeli settlement enterprise has always been to establish sovereign facts on the ground and to obstruct Palestinian self-determination. The Drobles plan of 1978, which formulated the motivation for the then-fledgling settlement enterprise, declared: “State land and uncultivated land must be seized immediately in order to settle the areas between the concentration of minority population [i.e., the Palestinians in the West Bank] and around them, with the object of reducing to the minimum the possibility for the development of another Arab state in these regions.”<sup>77</sup>

50. During five decades of occupation, Israel has steadily entrenched its sovereign footprint throughout the West Bank.<sup>78</sup> The infrastructure of the territory — the sewage connections, the communication systems and the electrical network — has been completely integrated into the domestic system of Israel. The West Bank water system, with its plentiful mountain aquifers, have been owned since 1982 by Mekorot, the national water company, with the benefits flowing primarily to Israel.<sup>79</sup> The highway network, which before 1967 had been primarily a north-south system, has been reconfigured as an east-west system to connect the settlements with each other and with Israeli cities, thereby disrupting Palestinian transportation.<sup>80</sup> The West Bank economy is subject to a single customs union agreement with Israel, enabling the more powerful economy to dominate and flourish, while the weaker economy withers through de-development and dependence.<sup>81</sup> The natural resources of the West Bank

<sup>73</sup> Noa Landau and others, “White House strongly denies as ‘false’ Netanyahu’s claims of talks with U.S. on annexing West Bank settlements”, Haaretz, 12 February 2018. Available at www.haaretz.com/israel-news/.premium-netanyahu-settlement-annexation-being-discussed-with-u-s-1.5810741.

<sup>74</sup> See www.mfa.gov.il/mfa/foreignpolicy/peace/guide/pages/israeli%20settlements%20and%20international%20law.aspx.

<sup>75</sup> Idith Zertak and Akiva Eldar, Lords of the Land: The War over Israel’s Settlements in the Occupied Territories, 1967–2007 (New York, Nation Books, 2007).

<sup>76</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (2) (b) (viii).

<sup>77</sup> David Kretzmer, “Settlements in the Supreme Court of Israel” (2017), 111 American Journal of International Law, vol. 111 (2017), p. 42.

<sup>78</sup> “Regularization law”, in Ben-Naftali, Sfard and Viterbo, The ABC of OPT.

<sup>79</sup> See www.btselem.org/water.

<sup>80</sup> Dajani, “Israel’s creeping annexation”, p. 54.

<sup>81</sup> UNCTAD, “Report on the UNCTAD Assistance to the Palestinian People: developments in the Economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory”, TD/B/64/4, September 2017.

are largely controlled by Israel and primarily exploited for its benefit.<sup>82</sup> Israeli legislation and laws have been extended by the Israeli military commander to West Bank settlers on a personal/territorial basis, while a disfigured version of occupation law, without many of its protections and guarantees, applies to the Palestinians.<sup>83</sup> The allocation of “State land” in the West Bank that is assigned for any use has been given almost exclusively to Israeli settlements (99.76 per cent), despite the fact that settlers make up only 12 per cent of the population in the West Bank.<sup>84</sup>

51. Most significantly, Israel exercises full civil and security control over Area C of the West Bank, which comprises more than 60 per cent of the territory. A remnant of the lifeless Oslo Process, Area C has been administered by Israel as an exclusive land base for its West Bank settlements. The World Bank has noted that 68 per cent of Area C is designated for Israeli settlements, 21 per cent for closed military zones and 9 per cent for nature reserves.<sup>85</sup> In the 1 per cent of Area C that remains for the approximately 180,000–300,000 Palestinian habitants, the Israeli Civil Administration has imposed a highly restrictive planning regime that makes permit application approval for Palestinian residential and commercial construction virtually impossible.<sup>86</sup> While Israeli settlers enjoy the same full range of legal rights and economic freedoms as Israelis living in Israel, Palestinians in Area C lack essential community infrastructure and are faced with a strangled economy, ubiquitous military checkpoints, limited access to their natural resources and a steady rejection of almost all of their submitted master plans,<sup>87</sup> all of which amounts, according to the United Nations, to a coercive environment that is forcing Palestinians to leave.<sup>88</sup> A 2015 amendment to a 2003 military order regarding unauthorized buildings allows the Commander of the Central Command to evict entire Palestinian communities in Area C without the previous need to acquire demolition orders for each structure.<sup>89</sup>

52. What civil society organizations once called the “creeping Israeli annexation” of the West Bank has now been relabelled “leaping annexation”<sup>90</sup> and “occup’annexation”.<sup>91</sup> The Israeli political leadership has perceived that the current international environment — particularly its relationship with the present United States administration — is conducive to its aspirations to solidify its permanent domination over the West Bank, notwithstanding the lack of support for formal annexation. As a result, there has been a flurry of soft-annexation legislation since early 2017, which appears to be laying the foundation for hard-annexation legislation in the future. In a recent editorial, Ha’aretz, the leading liberal daily in Israel, stated that the Government has been practising legal annexation through its recent

<sup>82</sup> Shawan Jabarin, “Business and human rights in Palestine: a case study on the illegal exploitation of Palestinian natural resources”, Al-Haq, 30 January 2014.

<sup>83</sup> Yehuda and others, One Rule, Two Legal Systems: Israel’s Regime of Laws in the West Bank (Association for Civil Rights in Israel, 2014).

<sup>84</sup> Americans for Peace Now, “Land allocation in the West Bank — for Israelis only”, July 2018.

<sup>85</sup> World Bank, West Bank and Gaza: Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (Washington, D.C., 2013).

<sup>86</sup> See www.btselem.org/topic/planning\_and\_building.

<sup>87</sup> Ahmad El-Atrash, “Israel’s stranglehold on Area C: development as resistance”, Al-Shabaka, 27 September 2018. Available at <https://al-shabaka.org/commentaries/israels-stranglehold-on-area-c-development-as-resistance/>.

<sup>88</sup> Tovah Lazaroff, “UN: Israel policies forcing Palestinians to leave Area C of the West Bank”, Jerusalem Post, 27 July 2016. Available at www.jpost.com/Arab-Israeli-Conflict/UN-Israeli-policies-forcing-Palestinians-to-leave-Area-C-of-the-West-Bank-462569.

<sup>89</sup> Peace Now (Settlement Watch), “Mentality of annexation: changes in the interpretation of the laws regarding occupation”, January 2018.

<sup>90</sup> Americans for Peace Now, “From creeping to leaping: annexation in the Trump-Netanyahu era”, April 2018.

<sup>91</sup> 11.11.11, “Occup’annexation: the shift from occupation to annexation in Palestine”, Brussels, 2017.

application of “more and more Knesset laws to the West Bank while erasing the Green Line,” resulting in two different and unequal legal systems for the two peoples residing in the territory. “This phenomenon has a name,” it stated, “and Israel will no longer be able to renounce reality and deny to the international community that it is an apartheid State, with all that this implies.”<sup>92</sup>

53. Over the past two years, the Israeli Knesset has either enacted or considered a number of statutes that extend Israeli law to the West Bank or lay the foundation for some form of future annexation.<sup>93</sup> Among the most significant statutes, bills and other initiatives comprising that recent legislative trend are described below.

54. The Settlement Regularization in “Judea and Samaria” Law allows for the retroactive legalization of outposts built on private Palestinian land. While it offers compensation to Palestinian landowners, it denies them any right to property restoration. It was passed by the Knesset in February 2017 but remains unimplemented pending the resolution of a petition to the Israeli High Court by a number of human rights organizations challenging its legality. At the High Court, the Government of Israel argued that the Knesset is not subject to international law and is the source of legal authority in the occupied Palestinian territory. The Israeli Attorney General, while opposing the law, has stated that existing laws already provide for the legalization of Israeli constructions on private Palestinian land in the West Bank (see A/HRC/37/43 paras. 16–17).

55. The Higher Education Law applies the jurisdiction of the Israeli Council for Higher Education, which governs post-secondary institutions in Israel, to academic institutions in the West Bank settlements. It thereby grants the same academic status to those institutions (notably, Ariel University based in the settlement of Ariel) as for all other Israeli universities. The Law, which was enacted in February 2018, is an illustration of the direct application of domestic Israeli law to the occupied territory, which is both forbidden under international law and a clear step towards annexation.

56. The Jewish Nation-State Law is a quasi-constitutional Basic Law, which means that it takes precedence over ordinary Knesset legislation. Adopted in July 2018, it proclaims that the Jewish people alone have the right to self-determination in Israel. One prominent concern about the new Basic Law — based on the use of the term “Land of Israel” — is that it may be applied to East Jerusalem and the West Bank to justify the protection of Israeli settlements and other annexational trends. Article 7 of the Basic Law states: “the State views the development of Jewish settlements as a national value and will act to encourage and promote its establishment and consolidation.”

57. The Administrative Affairs Court Law (amendment), adopted in July 2018, enlarges the jurisdiction of the Israeli Administrative Affairs Court to assume a very broad authority to adjudicate petitions by West Bank Palestinians on a range of issues, including planning and construction issues in Area C, barring individuals from certain areas of the West Bank and the issuance of travel permits. It removes the authority over those subject areas from the Israeli High Court. The primary criticism of the amendment is that it expands the jurisdiction of a domestic Israeli court to include Area C, which becomes another piece in the step-by-step extension of Israeli law to the occupied West Bank.

58. The Israeli political leadership has become much more uninhibited over the past two years in expressing out loud what the actions of the Government of Israel have been proclaiming for years. Annexation is in the air, and intention is now being openly expressed in words as well as in deeds. One significant illustration of the changing environment was the unanimous vote on 31 December 2017 by the 1,000-member central committee of the ruling Likud party to support a non-binding resolution to formally annex the West Bank. The resolution called upon Likud's elected officials "... to allow free construction and to apply the laws of Israel and its sovereignty to all liberated areas of Jewish settlement in Judea and Samaria."<sup>94</sup> In addition, in recent months, a number of Israeli cabinet ministers have openly embraced the formal annexation of parts or all of the West Bank:

<sup>92</sup> “The Knesset wants apartheid”, Haaretz, 1 June 2018. Available from www.haaretz.com/opinion/editorial/the-knesset-wants-apartheid-1.6137367.

<sup>93</sup> Foundation for Middle East Peace, “Israel’s ‘creeping annexation’ policies — tables”, September 2018, provides an invaluable overview of recent annexation steps taken by the Knesset. See also <https://goo.gl/c9DK3L>.

- Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu: "This is the land of our fathers, this is our land. We are here to stay, forever ... There will be no uprooting of communities in the Land of Israel."<sup>95</sup>
- Minister for Technology Ofir Akunis: "All land of Israel is ours, and this cannot be disputed or be divided. The concept of settlements blocs is no longer relevant because there are no Arabs to negotiate with anymore."<sup>96</sup>
- Minister for Education Naftali Bennett: "Today, the Israeli Knesset moved from heading toward establishing a Palestinian State to heading toward sovereignty in Judea and Samaria ... The outpost regulation bill is the tip of the iceberg in applying sovereignty."<sup>97</sup>
- Minister for Transportation Yisrael Katz: "Today I will propose at the security cabinet that we pass the 'Greater Jerusalem Law' that includes extending Israeli sovereignty to the surrounding communities of greater Jerusalem: Ma'ale Adumim, Givat Ze'ev, Beitar Illit and the Etzion Bloc, while joining them to the city of Jerusalem and strengthening it by adding territory and Jewish population."<sup>98</sup>
- Minister for Justice Ayelet Shaked: "I think we should apply the Israeli law to the Israeli towns and villages [settlements], and to normalize the life there, and in the far future, to apply the Israeli law in Area C [the occupied West Bank]. In Area C, there are a half-million Israelis [settlers] and 100,000 Palestinians; they will have citizenship with full rights, of course, like myself. And that Area A and B will be part of a confederation with Gaza, with Jordan."<sup>99</sup>

<sup>94</sup> Chaim Levinson, "Netanyahu's party votes to annex West Bank, increase settlements", Haaretz, 1 January 2018. Available at www.haaretz.com/israel-news/premium-netanyahu-s-party-votes-to-annex-west-bank-increase-settlements-1.5630099.

<sup>95</sup> Breaking Israel News, "Netanyahu: Israel will stay in Judea and Samaria forever", 29 August 2017. Available at www.breakingisraelnews.com/93927/netanyahu-israel-will-stay-judea-samaria-forever/.

<sup>96</sup> Peter Beaumont, "On a rocky ridge over Ramallah, settlers put their faith in Trump", The Guardian, 11 February 2017. Available at www.theguardian.com/world/2017/feb/12/israel-settlers-put-their-faith-in-trump-netanyahu-visit-white-house.

<sup>97</sup> Jewish Link of New Jersey, "Jewish Home's Bennett Says Outpost Bill Paves Way for Annexation of Judea and Samaria", 8 December 2016. Available at www.jewishlinknj.com/world-us/16063-jewish-home-s-bennett-says-outpost-bill-paves-way-for-annexation-of-judea-and-samaria.

<sup>98</sup> Times of Israel, "Challenging Netanyahu, senior minister floats annexation of Jerusalem-area settlements", 22 January 2017. Available at www.timesofisrael.com/challenging-netanyahu-senior-minister-floats-annexation-of-jerusalem-area-settlements/.

<sup>99</sup> Interview with Ayelet Shaked, Justice Minister of Israel, AIPAC Policy Conference, Washington, D.C., 7 March 2018. Available from <http://hamodia.com/2018/03/07/exclusive-interview-justice-minister-ayelet-shaked/>.

- Minister for Public Security Gilad Erdan: “Now is the time to extend sovereignty to areas on which there is no controversy [that they will remain part of Israel in a final status agreement]”.<sup>100</sup>
- Minister for Jerusalem Affairs Ze’ev Elkin: “Halas [‘enough’ in Arabic] with the story of two States. There is no other option but the State of Israel, certainly between the Jordan [River] to the [Mediterranean] sea there will be one State.”<sup>101</sup>
- Deputy Defence Minister Eli Ben-Dahan: “We have to focus on the main issue. We are in Judea and Samaria because this is our land, and we are here so that we will never leave it. Sovereignty must be applied in Judea and Samaria as soon as possible.”<sup>102</sup>
- Minister for Housing Yoav Galant: “Strategically speaking, the Jordan Valley is the eastern security zone of the State of Israel, the mountainous area is the holding area, and the Jerusalem-Ashdod-Hadera and Dan is the vital living space in which more than 5 million Israelis live ... We must continue to keep Yehuda, Shomron, and the Jordan Valley under full control and to strengthen settlement in these areas.”<sup>103</sup>

59. Those statements of political intent, together with the colonizing facts on the ground of Israel, its legislative activity and its refusal to adhere to its solemn obligations under international law or to follow the direction of the international community with respect to its 51-year-old occupation, have established the probative evidence that Israel has effectively annexed a significant part of the West Bank and is treating that territory as its own. While Israel has not yet declared formal sovereignty over any parts of the West Bank, the Special Rapporteur submits that the strict prohibition against annexation under international law applies not only to a formal declaration, but also to those acts of territorial appropriation by Israel that have been a cumulative part of its efforts to stake a future claim of formal sovereignty over the occupied Palestinian territory.

IV. Conclusion

60. A fundamental tenet of modern international law is the legal maxim ex turpi causa non oritur actio: a lawbreaker cannot benefit from his or her illegal act.<sup>104</sup> In 1967 and again in 1980, the international community clearly stated that the annexation by Israel of East Jerusalem breached international law and was null and

<sup>100</sup> Marissa Newman, “Build in settlements to punish Palestinians, top minister urges”, Times of Israel, 13 February 2017. Available at www.timesofisrael.com/build-in-settlements-to-punish-palestinians-top-minister-urges/?link\_id=12&can\_id=beb87055f757f06618a29df863283e75&source=email-what-were-reading-what-to-expect-from-the-netanyahu-trump-meeting&email\_referrer=what-were-reading-what-to-expect-from-the-netanyahu-trump-meeting&email\_subject=what-were-reading-what-to-expect-from-the-netanyahu-trump-meeting.

<sup>101</sup> Tovah Lazaroff, “Elkin: start preparing for one million settlers in the West Bank”, Jerusalem Post, 14 November 2017. Available at www.jpost.com/Israel-News/Elkin-Start-preparing-for-one-million-settlers-in-the-West-Bank-514251.

<sup>102</sup> Israel National News, “The quiet war against terrorism continues”, 30 May 2002. Available at www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/24370.

<sup>103</sup> The Yeshiva World, “Galant: to keep Yehuda, Shomron and the Jordan Valley”, 22 March 2018. Available at www.theyeshivaworld.com/news/israel-news/1495709/galant-to-keep-yehuda-shomron-and-the-jordan-valley.html?utm\_source=General+Mailing+List&utm\_campaign=bd366ef597-EMAIL\_CAMPAIGN\_2018\_03\_30&utm\_medium=email&utm\_term=0\_586030c60d-bd366ef597-82754635.

<sup>104</sup> Lasa Oppenheim, International Law: A Treatise, 8th ed., vol. 1, Peace (London, Longmans, Green and Company, 1955), p. 574.

void.<sup>105</sup> It has also spoken decisively about the illegality of the Israeli settlement enterprise,<sup>106</sup> which is the political and demographic engine that has transformed the Israeli occupation into an annexation. However, those repeated condemnations of Israeli annexationist actions have lacked any meaningful steps by the international community to insist upon accountability. Despite the ongoing record of Israel of non-compliance with the directions of the international community, it has rarely paid a meaningful price for its defiance, and its appetite for entrenching its annexationist ambitions in East Jerusalem and the West Bank has gone largely unchecked. A deep-rooted problem at the heart of the conflict has not been the clarity of international law, but the unwillingness of the international community to enforce what it has proclaimed. As one academic stated succinctly: “The problem is not international law per se, but its lack of enforcement; that in the Middle East, international law is closer to power than to justice.”<sup>107</sup> Nothing could more effectively refute that judgment than for the international community to act on the overwhelming evidence before it and insist that Israel either fully annul its annexations and relinquish its occupation, or be prepared to bear the full consequences of accountability for its mocking of international law.

V. Recommendations

61. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel comply fully with international law and bring a complete end to its 51 years of occupation of the Palestinian territory. He further recommends that the Government take the following measures immediately:

(a) End the blockade and closure of Gaza, lift all restrictions on imports and exports as well as on the movement of people, and facilitate full access to medical care, consistent with genuine Israeli security concerns;

(b) Ensure that regulations governing the use of force for Israeli security forces are in strict compliance with international standards, with particular attention to the use of deadly force;

(c) Ensure accountability for alleged violations of international humanitarian law and international human rights law by Israeli security forces, with particular attention to the demonstrations in Gaza;

(d) Take measures to address concerns raised about the independence, impartiality and transparency of the military justice system.

62. With respect to concerns related to the annexation of territory, the Special Rapporteur recommends that Israel:

(a) Comply with all relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly with respect to East Jerusalem and the West Bank and relinquish any claim of sovereignty over the territory;

(b) Ensure freedom of movement within the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including between Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem;

(c) Comply fully with Security Council resolution 2334 (2016) concerning the settlements;

<sup>105</sup> Security Council resolution 2334 (2016), General Assembly resolution 72/14 and Human Rights Council resolution 37/36.

<sup>106</sup> Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>107</sup> Victor Kattan, From Coexistence to Conquest: International Law and the Origins of the Arab-Israeli Conflict, 1891–1949 (London: Pluto Press, 2009), p. 4.

(d) Pursue a good faith approach to the administration of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem and Gaza as occupied territory, adhering to the tenets of international human rights law and international humanitarian law, with a view to bringing the occupation to a complete conclusion within a reasonable time period and enabling Palestinian self-determination.

63. The Rapporteur further recommends that the international community:

(a) In line with common article 1 to the Geneva Conventions, take all measures necessary to respect and ensure the respect by Israel, and all other relevant parties, of the solemn obligations of international humanitarian law;

(b) Seek to hold Israel to the international standards by which all States are to be held, including the prohibition on annexation;

(c) Ensure full accountability of Israeli political and military officials who are responsible for grave breaches of international law in the occupied Palestinian territory;

(d) Commission a United Nations study on the legality of the Israeli annexation and continued occupation of the Palestinian territory.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
21 October 2019

Original: English

---

Seventy-fourth session

Agenda item 70 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, hereby submits his fourth report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives, United Nations representatives and Palestinian officials in Amman, in connection with the mission of the Special Rapporteur to the region in July 2019. The report addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza.

I. Introduction

1. The present report provides a brief overview of the most pressing human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the time of submission, as identified by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 in conversations and meetings with civil society. The report then presents a detailed analysis of accountability, impunity and the responsibility of the international community to bring an end to the occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and other Israeli practices amounting to violations of international humanitarian and human rights law.

2. The Special Rapporteur would like once again to highlight that, despite his requests, he has not yet been granted access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory by Israel. He most recently requested access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory on 20 May 2019. At the time of writing the present report, no reply had been received. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes once again his view that an open dialogue among all parties is essential for the protection and promotion of human rights and reminds Israel that he is ready and willing to engage. The pattern by Israel of non-cooperation with the mandate is a serious concern. A full and comprehensive understanding of the situation on the basis of first-hand access would be extremely beneficial to the work of the Special Rapporteur.

3. The report is based primarily on written submissions, as well as consultations with civil society representatives, victims, witnesses, Palestinian government officials and United Nations representatives held in Amman during the Special Rapporteur's annual mission to the region, in July 2019. The Special Rapporteur would like to note that several groups were unable to travel to Amman to meet with him owing to travel restrictions imposed by the Israeli authorities. All individuals and organizations based in Gaza were consulted by videoconference as a result.

4. In the report, the Special Rapporteur focuses on the obligations of third parties under international human rights law and international humanitarian law, as set out in the mandate.<sup>1</sup> He calls upon all actors to ensure respect for international human rights law and international humanitarian law, noting that violations of those bodies of law by any actor are deplorable and will only hinder the prospects for peace.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation to the Government of the State of Palestine for its full cooperation with his mandate. He also wishes to extend his thanks to all those who travelled to Amman to meet with him and to those who were unable to travel but made written or oral submissions. He further extends his thanks once again to Jordan for its support and for the opportunity to hold meetings in Amman.

6. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes again his support for the vital work being done by Palestinian, Israeli and international human rights organizations. This work is indispensable not only to the Rapporteur as he seeks to fulfil his mandate, but also to the broader international community. He recalls that these organizations often face significant obstacles in carrying out their work, and notes that such obstacles have only increased and intensified in the past year. He calls upon the international community to safeguard the rights of human rights organizations and to scrutinize and oppose any attempts to delegitimize or discredit their work.

---

<sup>1</sup> As specified in the mandate of the Special Rapporteur set out in Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/2.

II. Current human rights situation

7. Since the previous report of the Special Rapporteur to the General Assembly (A/73/447), the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in Gaza, has continued to be dire. The key issues raised during the mission included the continued shrinking of civic space, the pervasive lack of accountability, especially in relation to the investigation and prosecution of hostilities in Gaza in 2014, home demolitions in the West Bank, in particular in East Jerusalem, the ongoing use of administrative detention and the detention of children, and the impact of various practices on the environment.<sup>2</sup>

8. The present report cannot provide a comprehensive overview of all issues of concern owing to space limitations. Instead, the Rapporteur seeks to highlight several of the most urgent concerns at the time of writing. The discussion will be followed by an in-depth analysis of the responsibility of third States.

A. Gaza

9. The land, sea and air blockade imposed on Gaza has now entered its twelfth year, severely restricting imports and exports, the movement of people into and out of Gaza and access to adequate health care, education and livelihoods, including agricultural land and fishing.<sup>3</sup> Israel has considerably tightened restrictions on the movement of humanitarian staff since 2018, citing security concerns. The blockade of Gaza is a denial of basic human rights and amounts to collective punishment.<sup>4</sup> The economy of Gaza continues to be close to collapse, as determined by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in July 2019 (see TD/B/EX(68)/4). The uncertain financial situation of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and cuts to its programmes have contributed to this situation. As at July 2019, the Agency had managed to raise $110 million, but still faced a shortfall in meeting its annual budget of $1.2 billion.<sup>5</sup> The shortfall is exacerbated by the fact that some countries announced that they would withhold the pledged amounts until information on alleged corruption was clarified.<sup>6</sup>

10. Despite the concerning overall humanitarian situation, there has been some noteworthy improvement in the availability of electricity supply to Gaza. The provision of $60 million by the Government of Qatar in October 2018 helped to provide additional fuel to Gaza, resulting in an immediate improvement in the electricity supply. This has enabled electricity to be supplied for between 14 and 15 hours per day, as opposed to fewer than 7 hours previously. Despite this improvement, the current electricity supply met less than half of the electricity demands of Gaza for

<sup>2</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), “Occupied Palestinian Territory: United Nations human rights expert says Israel bent on further annexation”, 12 July 2019.

<sup>3</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip”, fact sheet, October 2011.

<sup>4</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Increased restrictions on the movement of humanitarian staff in and out of Gaza”, Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, July 2019.

<sup>5</sup> James Reinl, “United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) raises $110m but still cash-strapped after US cuts”, Al-Jazeera, 25 June 2019.

<sup>6</sup> Jewish Telegraphic Agency and Cnaan Lipshiz, “Swiss and Dutch suspend funding for United Nations aid agency for Palestinians over graft scandal”, Haaretz, 31 July 2019.

the first six months of 2019, and interruptions in the power supply still pose a significant obstacle to the functioning of hospitals and medical facilities.<sup>7</sup>

Demonstrations and the use of force

11. The Great March of Return and related protests have resulted to date in 207 Palestinians killed and 33,828 injured.<sup>8</sup> The commission of inquiry set up in the aftermath found that, in all but two cases, the use of live ammunition by Israeli security forces against demonstrators was unlawful (A/HRC/40/74, para. 94). The commission also found that demonstrators were shot in violation of their right to life or of the principle of distinction under international humanitarian law (ibid., para. 97). Indeed, in the vast majority of cases, the victims were situated far from the fence, and Israeli forces were situated behind earth mounds with sufficient protection. Israel has demonstrated virtually no accountability for these actions despite calls by the international community and civil society for independent and transparent investigations into the incidents.<sup>9</sup>

12. Palestinians in Gaza have continued to demonstrate against the blockade and for the right to return to their homes, every Friday since March 2018. On 6 September 2019, for example, two children were killed by live ammunition from the Israeli security forces while demonstrating near the fence.<sup>10</sup> According to human rights organizations, of the injured, the majority sustained wounds from live fire, while others were hit directly by tear gas canisters.<sup>11</sup>

13. The health sector in Gaza still struggles to cope with the massive number of injuries, a majority of them from gunshot wounds. The health system in Gaza was already suffering from restrictions on people and materials, a lack of electricity and shortages of certain equipment and supplies, and is severely overwhelmed, to the point of collapse, by the need to treat the additional massive volume of injuries.<sup>12</sup> The overstretched health-care system of Gaza, compounded by the growing numbers of injuries from protests and demonstrations requiring urgent specialist attention, have contributed to a rise in requests for permits to leave Gaza for hospital referrals, most of which have been denied.

Human rights violations by Hamas in Gaza

14. In May 2019, Hamas forces violently suppressed economic protests in Gaza. According to reports, Hamas beat and arrested scores of Palestinians who were protesting against price rises and dire living conditions across the Gaza Strip. The group of activists who had organized the protests called themselves “We want to live” and led small protests in several locations along the Strip.<sup>13</sup> This latest crackdown by Hamas comes after previous suppression of demonstrations in March 2019, in which

<sup>7</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Improvements to Gaza electricity supply”, Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, June 2019.

<sup>8</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Data on Casualties database, available at www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties.

<sup>9</sup> Farhan Haq, Deputy Spokesman for the Secretary-General, statement attributable to the Spokesman for the Secretary-General on the situation in Gaza, 30 March 2018.

<sup>10</sup> Michelle Bachelet, United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, statement to the forty-second session of the Human Rights Council, 9 September 2019.

<sup>11</sup> Al Mezan Centre for Human Rights, “71th Friday of demonstrations in Gaza, 161 wounded, including 56 children, one woman and six paramedics”, press release, 25 August 2019.

<sup>12</sup> World Health Organization (WHO) and Health Cluster – Occupied Palestinian Territory, Emergency Trauma Response to the Gaza Mass Demonstrations 2018–2019: A One-Year Review of Trauma Data and the Humanitarian Consequences (2019).

<sup>13</sup> Oliver Holmes, “Hamas violently suppresses Gaza economic protests”, Guardian, 21 March 2019.

hundreds of demonstrators were subjected to beatings, arbitrary arrest and detention, torture and ill treatment.<sup>14</sup> These actions by Hamas are alarming and in clear violation of Palestinians' rights to freedom of expression and association, depriving them also of their right to freedom from arbitrary detention and to physical integrity. It is the duty of Hamas to ensure that Palestinians in Gaza are free to exercise their rights without threats, intimidation or abuse.

B. West Bank

15. Against the backdrop of increased calls by the Prime Minister of Israel<sup>15</sup> and senior members of his Government for the annexation of parts or all of the West Bank, levels of settler violence have increased there. Incidents of such violence were recorded in a number of towns in the West Bank, including Hebron, Nablus and Ramallah. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs documented seven Palestinian deaths owing to settler violence in 2019.<sup>16</sup> The frequency of these attacks has particularly increased in parts of the Jordan Valley, especially in the northern district of Tubas, where a number of attacks by Israeli settlers targeted Palestinian shepherds.<sup>17</sup> Many Palestinian inhabitants have been forced to leave these areas as a result of the violence, while Israeli settlements continue to expand, effectively surrounding and reducing the living space for Palestinian communities.

16. In parallel, the rate of home demolitions and seizures of Palestinian-owned structures has increased markedly in 2019 in comparison with previous years. As at July 2019, a total of 362 structures had been destroyed by the Israeli authorities, causing the displacement of more than 481 Palestinians. This marks an increase of 64 per cent compared with the equivalent period in 2018.<sup>18</sup> The locations most affected by demolitions were Hebron, Tubas and Nablus. Israeli authorities have cited a number of reasons for the demolitions, such as security threats and a lack of building permits, including in relation to buildings in the "buffer zone" in close proximity to the separation wall. It is an Israeli policy and trend to reject building permits.

17. Israeli security forces have also intensified their incursions and raids into various parts of the West Bank, targeting specific Palestinian civil society organizations and Palestinian homes, resulting in arrests and arbitrary detentions. For example, on 19 September, Israeli security forces raided the premises of the Addameer Prisoners Support and Human Rights Association and other organizations and seized computer equipment and other documents. The increase in such raids underlines attempts to further silence civil society organizations and human rights defenders, in particular those working on accountability issues.

Restrictions on freedom of expression and association imposed by the Palestinian Authority

18. The Palestinian Authority has continued to impose restrictions on the rights to freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly in the West Bank. In 2018, several journalists were arrested and charged with violating provisions of the

<sup>14</sup> Amnesty International, "Gaza: Hamas must end brutal crackdown against protesters and rights defenders", 18 March 2019.

<sup>15</sup> Oliver Holmes, "Netanyahu vows to annex large parts of occupied West Bank, Guardian", 10 September 2019.

<sup>16</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Data on Casualties database.

<sup>17</sup> B'Tselem, "Israeli settlers and military intensify attacks against Palestinian shepherds in the village of al-Farisiyah in the northern Jordan Valley", 15 May 2019.

<sup>18</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "West Bank demolitions and displacement: an overview", July 2019.

cybercrime law of 2017 (A/HRC/40/39, para. 60, and A/HRC/40/43, para. 46). Despite recent amendments to the law, proceedings that had been initiated prior to the amendment were allowed to continue, including the arrests noted above. In one of the cases, a Palestinian journalist was arrested and charged with defamation and slander on the basis of the law (A/HRC/40/39, para. 60).

C. East Jerusalem

19. Since 2018, several measures have been taken by the Government of Israel to strengthen and promote its claim of sovereignty over East Jerusalem. They include legislation, increased demolition and eviction orders for Palestinian residents, increased construction of settlements and the announced plan for the extension of the Jerusalem municipality into East Jerusalem.<sup>19</sup>

20. Recent figures indicate an increased rate of demolition of Palestinian homes in East Jerusalem, as well as settlement construction and expansion. As at 30 April 2019, 111 Palestinian-owned structures had been destroyed in East Jerusalem since the beginning of the year, either directly by the Israeli authorities or by their owners to avoid fines, following the issuance of demolition orders for the lack of building permits. Of these, 57 per cent were demolished in April.<sup>20</sup> The increase in both demolitions of Palestinian homes and construction of settlements, spearheaded by the perceived consent of the United States of America, cannot be understood in any way other than being for the purpose of changing the demographic balance – reducing the Palestinian presence and strengthening the Jewish majority in East Jerusalem.<sup>21</sup>

21. On 4 October 2018, the municipality of Jerusalem announced a plan to extend its control to all of Jerusalem, including East Jerusalem, and to replace UNRWA services with local municipal services. As part of the announcement, the outgoing mayor of Jerusalem, Nir Barkat, made an explicit commitment to dismantling UNRWA facilities in East Jerusalem and noted the municipality's intention to provide medical, education and sanitation services instead of allowing UNRWA to do so.<sup>22</sup> Subsequently, Israeli forces entered an UNRWA clinic in East Jerusalem and demanded to see a permit.<sup>23</sup> UNRWA has since stated that it was not notified of the municipality's decisions and has expressed its strong opposition to the attempt by Israel to change the Agency's operational area. In a statement dated January 2019, UNRWA reminded Israel of its obligation to protect the Agency's installations in areas under its authority.<sup>24</sup> As highlighted in my previous report to the General Assembly, the extension by Israel of its laws and civil authority to occupied East Jerusalem is part of its continuing efforts to ensure that the de jure annexation of East Jerusalem is irreversible (A/73/447, para. 37).

22. Against the backdrop of the municipality's increased demonstration of control, the Israeli police intensified its incursions into the Palestinian neighbourhood of Isawiyah in June and July 2019, carrying out approximately 340 arrests. Most of those arrested were released shortly afterwards. According to some sources, charges were

<sup>19</sup> Information provided by an international humanitarian organization. See also Al-Haq, "The occupational annexation of Jerusalem through Israeli bills and laws", 5 March 2018.

<sup>20</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "United Nations officials call for an immediate halt to demolitions in East Jerusalem and respect for international law amidst rise", 3 May 2019.

<sup>21</sup> Jerusalem Legal Aid and Human Rights Centre, "Annual report 2018", 2018.

<sup>22</sup> Al-Jazeera, "Jerusalem to remove UNRWA to 'end lie of Palestine refugees'", 4 October 2018.

<sup>23</sup> Nir Hasson, "UNRWA says Israeli inspectors tried to raid its East Jerusalem clinic", Haaretz, 8 October 2018.

<sup>24</sup> UNRWA, "UNRWA was not notified of any decision to close down schools it operated in East Jerusalem", 21 January 2019.

filed against five suspects.<sup>25</sup> The enhanced police operations and presence included the use of roadblocks on roads leading to the village, the close inspection of cars, nightly checkpoints inside the village and late-night house searches and arrests. Clashes broke out in the village as a result of the heightened police presence and the anger of residents. Many residents were reportedly injured in the clashes, most by rubber bullets, and at least one Palestinian man was killed by the police in late June.<sup>26</sup>

23. Finally, Israeli interference with Palestinian children's right to education in East Jerusalem is also a concern. In May 2018, the Government of Israel announced that it would invest 1.85 billion new shekels in infrastructure and services for East Jerusalem. According to the non-governmental organization Ir Amim, however, 43.4 per cent of the budget is intended to narrow the discrepancies in education between West and East Jerusalem, with the condition that the Palestinian matriculation system be transitioned to the Israeli system.<sup>27</sup> Palestinians in East Jerusalem essentially find themselves between a rock and a hard place, having to choose what would provide their children with more opportunities in the short term even if it leads to further erosion of Palestinian identity and autonomy. The attempt by Israel to influence schools to change the curriculum, in conjunction with the municipality's intention to close down UNRWA, paints a concerning picture of efforts to further diminish Palestinian autonomy and identity in East Jerusalem.<sup>28</sup>

D. Human rights of children

24. Children constitute almost 48 per cent of the Palestinian population in the West Bank and Gaza; 1.3 million children live in the West Bank and 1 million in the Gaza Strip.<sup>29</sup> Children in both places continue to suffer adverse physical and psychological affects stemming from their exposure to continuous violence, including in the context of the Great March of Return and other demonstrations. In 2018, according to the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, the United Nations verified the highest number of Palestinian children killed (59) and injured (2,756) since 2014 (A/73/907-S/2019/509, para. 84).

25. Children in Gaza continue to face barriers in their access to adequate health care, including through the denial or delay of applications to cross into Israel for medical treatment. The approval rate for such applications is significantly lower for Palestinian children who were injured during demonstrations in Gaza than for those injured in other circumstances. In 2018, 22 per cent of applications were approved, compared with an average approval rate of 75 per cent for other cases involving children (ibid., para. 94). Israeli authorities continue to deny or delay applications for companions applying to travel with children in need of specialized health care in Israel.<sup>30</sup>

26. Children's access to education is severely restricted in the occupied West Bank and Gaza. According to the annual report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, 118 incidents of interference with education in the Occupied Palestinian Territory were verified in 2018, affecting 23,188 children, with more than

<sup>25</sup> Nir Hasson, "340 arrests and only five indictments: summer-long police sweep strikes fear in Isawiyah", Haaretz, 28 August 2019.

<sup>26</sup> Ibid.

<sup>27</sup> Ir Amim, "The state of education in East Jerusalem: budgetary discrimination and national identity", August 2018. Available at http://www.ir-amim.org.il/sites/default/files/The%20State%20of%20Education\_2018\_1.pdf.

<sup>28</sup> Nir Hasson, "Israel promises 'revolution' for East Jerusalem schools. Palestinians say it's 'brainwashing'", Haaretz, 29 August 2018.

<sup>29</sup> United Nations Children's Fund, "Children in the State of Palestine", November 2018.

<sup>30</sup> WHO, "Health access: barriers for patients in the Occupied Palestinian Territory", June 2019.

half of the incidents involving Israeli forces firing live ammunition, tear gas and sound grenades in and around schools (ibid., para. 91). In Gaza, there is a serious shortage of classrooms, leading to the operation of a shift system for classes. Students study in 274 UNRWA schools across the Gaza Strip, of which 84 operate on a single-shift basis, 177 on a double-shift basis and 13 on a triple-shift basis, staffed by 8,676 education personnel.<sup>31</sup>

27. Palestinian children also suffer along with their families the anxiety associated with living under the threat of demolition of their homes. Accordingly, they have been subjected to growing levels of stress as the number of evictions and demolition orders has risen, in particular in East Jerusalem.<sup>32</sup> In 2019, there have been many examples of Palestinian homes demolished by Israeli forces that resulted, among other things, in the displacement of entire families and adverse effects on children's well-being. For example, on 25 April 2019, Israeli authorities demolished a home in the village of Zawiyah in Area B of the West Bank, on punitive grounds. This demolition resulted in the displacement of five children and their parents.<sup>33</sup> Displacement, in particular for the most vulnerable, is traumatic and has lasting consequences, and this is especially the case for children.

III. Accountability, impunity and the responsibility of the international community

28. Accountability – the duty to account for the exercise of power – is an indispensable cornerstone of the rule of law and a rules-based international order. No legal system, domestic or international, can acquire and sustain popular legitimacy if it cannot impose effective sanctions and provide restorative remedies when its laws are breached. Without accountability, power trumps law, justice becomes a hollow promise and those without power are left either to suffer or to pursue irregular and even violent means outside the legal order to achieve their own rough measure of justice. A right without a remedy is ultimately no right at all.

29. The enemies of accountability are impunity and exceptionalism. As was stated recently in the Security Council: “International law is not an à la carte menu”.<sup>34</sup> Those who maintain that they are exempt from the directions of the international legal and diplomatic order not only defy the rule of law, but also fail the test of political realism. For no country can sustain for long its standing and influence among the community of nations if it asserts special arguments forbidden to others,<sup>35</sup> and no international rules-based order can command the requisite compliance with its laws and directions if it allows defiance and exceptionalism to thrive unchallenged. Impunity anywhere is a danger to justice everywhere.

30. An acute problem in the modern world is not the absence of laws, but the absence of international political will. As the Deputy Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Jonathan Allen, pointed out during a Security Council briefing on international humanitarian law in April

<sup>31</sup> See www.unrwa.org/activity/education-gaza-strip.

<sup>32</sup> Palestinian Counselling Centre, Save the Children and Welfare Association, “Broken homes: addressing the impact of house demolitions on Palestinian children and families”, April 2009.

<sup>33</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians”, Biweekly Highlights, 23 April–6 May 2019.

<sup>34</sup> Christoph Heusgen, Permanent Representative of Germany to the United Nations, statement at the Security Council open debate on the Middle East, 23 July 2019.

<sup>35</sup> Benjamin R. Barber, Fear's Empire: War, Terrorism and Democracy (New York, W.W. Norton and Company, 2003).

2019. “We do not lack law, we lack enforcement and accountability.”<sup>36</sup> Far too often, accountability has been applied by the international community in a selective and partisan fashion to many serious issues, reflecting a dispiriting mixture of design and indifference, collusion and apathy. On too many occasions, defiance has been ignored and outliers have been excused or appeased. This deficit of accountability erodes popular trust in the efficacy of international law, thereby jeopardizing a precious common good.

31. The 52-year Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory – Gaza and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem – is a bitter illustration of the absence of international accountability in the face of the systemic violations of Palestinian rights under human rights and humanitarian law. Accountability is the key to opening the titanium cage that is the permanent occupation, and its principled application is the best path to a just and durable settlement. Israel, a relatively small country in terms of geography and population and with a particular dependence on the international community for both trade and investment and diplomatic cooperation, could not have sustained such a prolonged and repressive occupation in clear violation of international law without the active support and malign neglect of many in the industrialized world. While the international community has issued numerous resolutions and declarations critical of the unending occupation by Israel and its steady designs for annexation, such criticisms have rarely been matched by any meaningful consequences. In a comment that aptly applies to the wider world, the former European Union Special Representative for the Middle East, Miguel Moratinos, stated with regard to the Israeli occupation: “We Europeans excel at declarations. It is compensation for our scarcity of action.”<sup>37</sup>

32. In the next part of the report, the obligations of the international community to bring serious human rights violations to an end and closely regulate belligerent occupation are reviewed, and its duty to ensure that its directions are obeyed by its fellow members is examined. Later in the report, the impunity enjoyed by Israel is assessed. Finally, the various accountability measures that the international community has adopted and applied in select conflicts and zones in relation to human rights violations are discussed, and it is considered which of these could be meaningfully applied to bring an end to the Israeli occupation.

A. Legal responsibilities of the international community

33. Since 1945, the community of nations has codified an impressive body of international law, in which it has established the responsibility of States to live by, and enforce, a rules-based international order. The promise of accountability – the mobilization of the collective will and effective countermeasures to defend justice – is at the heart of the international order. The Special Rapporteur has identified three significant sources for the legal obligations that require the international community to marshal its political authority to compel Israel to completely end its illegal occupation and to remove its barriers to the fulfilment of Palestinian self-determination. They are:

- (a) Common article 1 to the four Geneva Conventions of 1949;

<sup>36</sup> Jonathan Allen, Deputy Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to the United Nations, “International humanitarian law: we lack enforcement and accountability”, statement at the Security Council briefing on international humanitarian law, 1 April 2019.

<sup>37</sup> Akiva Eldar, “Israel can’t afford to postpone Mideast peace much longer”, Haaretz, 12 November 2010.

- (b) The articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, of 2001;
- (c) Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations.

Common article 1 to the Geneva Conventions of 1949

34. The Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949 applies in full to the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory. This was first declared by the Security Council in its resolution 237 (1967), within days of the occupation, and has been reconfirmed by the Council many times since, most recently in its resolution 2334 (2016). Other primary bodies of the United Nations, including the General Assembly (in, for example, its resolution 73/97), the Human Rights Council (in, for example, its resolution 40/23) and the International Court of Justice,<sup>38</sup> have endorsed this view. Although Israel ratified the Conventions on 6 July 1951 and was called upon by the Security Council, in its resolution 446 (1979), to abide by them scrupulously, it denies that the Fourth Geneva Convention applies to the conflict or that it is the occupying Power of the Palestinian territory.<sup>39</sup> However, its position has found little support within the international community or among international law scholars.

35. According to common article 1 to the four Geneva Conventions: “The High Contracting Parties undertake to respect and to ensure respect for the ... Convention in all circumstances”.<sup>40</sup>

36. This solemn obligation is central to the enforcement of the rights guaranteed in the four Geneva Conventions and in international humanitarian law. Contemporary legal scholars have stated that common article 1 has acquired a “quasi-constitutional nature”,<sup>41</sup> an elevated legal status that requires States not only to obey the Conventions themselves, but also to take all steps within their capacity to insist that other States meet their obligations under international humanitarian law.<sup>42</sup> Common article 1 is also reflective of customary international law, giving it universal standing.<sup>43</sup>

37. The authoritative commentary on the four Geneva Conventions was issued by the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in 2016.<sup>44</sup> On common article 1, the ICRC noted in the commentary that the obligation to ensure respect was not a “loose pledge but a commitment vested with legal force”.<sup>45</sup> In interpreting this provision, the International Court of Justice stated that the term “undertake” was “not merely hortatory or purposive”, nor was it meant to simply introduce subsequent obligations, but was itself intended to “accept an obligation”.<sup>46</sup> ICRC further explains

<sup>38</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 101.

<sup>39</sup> International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), “International humanitarian law, ICRC and Israel’s status in the territories”, 31 December 2012.

<sup>40</sup> See www.icrc.org/en/doc/war-and-law/treaties-customary-law/geneva-conventions/overview-geneva-conventions.htm.

<sup>41</sup> Laurence Boisson de Chazournes and Luigi Condorelli, “Common article 1 of the Geneva Conventions revisited: protecting collective interests”, ICRC, 31 March 2000.

<sup>42</sup> Knut Dörmann and Jose Serralvo, “Common article 1 to the Geneva Conventions and the obligation to prevent international humanitarian law violations”, ICRC, 21 September 2015.

<sup>43</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 158.

<sup>44</sup> See <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=72239588AFA66200C1257F7D00367DBD>, paras. 118–191.

<sup>45</sup> Ibid., para. 170.

<sup>46</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, para. 162.

in its commentary that, “by committing themselves to ‘respect and to ensure respect’ for the Conventions, States have also recognized the importance of adopting all reasonable measures to prevent violations from happening in the first place”.<sup>47</sup> When violations of the Conventions occur, the High Contracting Parties will only satisfy their legal obligations under common article 1 “as long as they have done everything reasonably in their power to bring the violations to an end”.<sup>48</sup>

38. ICRC emphasizes in its commentary that the obligations in the Conventions are of such fundamental importance to the international community that they are erga omnes partes, obligations owed towards all other High Contracting Parties, at all times.<sup>49</sup> Regarding common article 1, this creates two primary interdependent obligations: (a) every individual High Contracting Party is duty-bound to all other High Contracting Parties to respect all of its own obligations under the Conventions (a negative duty not to violate); and (b) all High Contracting Parties bear a duty, individually and collectively, to ensure that every other High Contracting Party is respecting all of its obligations under the Conventions (a positive duty to compel others to comply).<sup>50</sup>

39. It is therefore necessary to ask what nature of violations of international humanitarian law would trigger the obligations of other High Contracting Parties to ensure respect for the Conventions. Common article 1 must be read broadly and purposively.<sup>51</sup> Political considerations, such as domestic inertia or unwillingness to confront an ally, are insufficient reasons to abstain from fulfilling the obligations to ensure accountability. As international law experts Théo Boutruche and Marco Sassòli have stated, in their legal opinion on this topic:

By definition, the existence of a legal duty in the form of the obligation to ensure respect requires an objective assessment and prevents a State from using mere political considerations to claim that no steps can be taken under that obligation. The fact that the fulfilment of an international obligation can prove to be politically difficult cannot serve as a ground to refuse to take any measure in the implementation of that obligation.<sup>52</sup>

40. While States have an obligation to ensure respect for the Conventions “in all circumstances” and with respect to all violations, it is abundantly clear that serious violations and grave breaches of the Conventions trigger a particularly compelling international onus on all other High Contracting Parties to use all available means to bring such violations and breaches to an end.<sup>53</sup> Serious violations and grave breaches under international humanitarian law would include: wilful killing; extensive destruction and appropriation of property; collective punishment; unlawful deportation, transfer and unlawful confinement; the launching of indiscriminate attacks affecting the civilian population; the transfer by the occupying Power of parts of its own civilian population into the occupied territory; and practices of racial separateness and discrimination.<sup>54</sup> All of these grave breaches have been either

<sup>47</sup> See <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=72239588AFA66200C1257F7D00367DBD>, para. 121.

<sup>48</sup> Ibid., para. 165.

<sup>49</sup> Ibid., para. 119.

<sup>50</sup> Ibid., paras. 153–173.

<sup>51</sup> Robin Geiß, “The obligation to respect and to ensure respect for the Conventions”, in Andrew Clapham, Paolo Gaeta and Marco Sassòli, eds., The 1949 Geneva Conventions: A Commentary (Oxford University Press, Oxford, United Kingdom, 2015), p. 113.

<sup>52</sup> Théo Boutruche and Marco Sassòli, “Expert opinion on third states’ obligations vis-à-vis IHL violations under international law, with a special focus on common article 1 to the 1949 Geneva Conventions”, 8 November 2016.

<sup>53</sup> Reinforced by the Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 146, and Additional Protocol I, art. 86.

<sup>54</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, arts. 33, 49 and 147, and Additional Protocol, art. 85.

substantively alleged or actually established during Israeli conduct of the occupation.<sup>55</sup>

41. The International Court of Justice, in advisory opinion of 2004 on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, expressly stated that the High Contracting Parties bore a responsibility to ensure that Israel, the occupying Power, fulfilled its obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention.<sup>56</sup>

42. Taken together, the special place of international humanitarian law within international law, the direction of the International Court of Justice that the responsibilities of the international community under the Geneva Conventions are lawful obligations rather than moral sentiments and the emphasis in the ICRC commentary that the Conventions are invested with binding obligations cumulatively place a substantive legal duty on all High Contracting Parties to take all measures within their power to bring the Israeli occupation and its multiple violations of the law to a swift and complete end. While the occasional declarations by the High Contracting Parties regarding the humanitarian principles applicable to the occupation and the conflict are welcome,<sup>57</sup> much more is required to satisfy the obligation to ensure respect for the Conventions.

Articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts

43. In August 2001, at the end of a five-decade-long codification process, the International Law Commission adopted the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts. The General Assembly accepted the articles in December 2001 (see resolution 56/83, annex). A basic norm of international law is that all States are to obey international law at all times, consistent with their obligations under the rules-based international order. It is established in the articles, as a foundational principle, that all States assume a legal responsibility to ensure that other States respect international law at all times. As such, all States bear the responsibility not to recognize as lawful any situation created by a serious breach of an obligation by another State arising from a peremptory norm of general international law. The articles are widely considered to reflect customary international law on State responsibility.<sup>58</sup>

44. According to article 40 of the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, chapter III of the articles “applies to the international responsibility which is entailed by a serious breach by a State of an obligation arising under a peremptory norm of general international law” and “a breach of such an obligation is serious if it involves a gross or systematic failure by the responsible State to fulfil the obligation”.

45. A peremptory norm (a jus cogens norm) of general international law is a lawful obligation that is accepted by the international community as a norm from which no

<sup>55</sup> Human Rights Watch, Amnesty International, Al-Haq, Al Mezan, B’Tselem and Gisha, among others.

<sup>56</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 159.

<sup>57</sup> The Conference of the High Contracting Parties issued statements and declarations on the humanitarian principles applicable to the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory in 1999, 2001 and 2014. Available at <https://unispal.un.org/UNISPAL.NSF/0/E7B8432A312475D385257DB100568AE8>.

<sup>58</sup> James Crawford, State Responsibility: The General Part (Cambridge University Press, New York, 2013), p. 43.

derogation or exception is permitted.<sup>59</sup> According to the substantive commentary on the articles issued by the United Nations in 2008,<sup>60</sup> peremptory norms of law would include respect for the basic rules of international humanitarian law and the right to self-determination, as well as the prohibitions against racial discrimination, apartheid, genocide, annexation, aggression and torture.<sup>61</sup> A systematic violation, as mentioned in article 40 (2), is one that is carried out in an “organized and deliberate way”, while a gross violation “denotes violations of a flagrant nature, amounting to a direct and outright assault on the values protected by the rule”.<sup>62</sup>

46. According to article 41 of the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, “States shall cooperate to bring to an end through lawful means any serious breach within the meaning of article 40” and “no State shall recognize as lawful a situation created by a serious breach within the meaning of article 40, nor render aid or assistance in maintaining that situation”.

47. In accordance with article 41, States assume three basic obligations as part of their responsibility to ensure that other States uphold international law: (a) they cannot recognize as lawful situations those created by serious breaches as understood by article 40; (b) they cannot offer aid or assistance in maintaining any situation involving serious breaches; and (c) they have a positive duty to cooperate with each other in bringing such serious breaches to an end.<sup>63</sup> The purpose for these special third-party responsibilities is to counteract the challenge that such serious breaches pose to the legal, political and moral order of the international community as a whole.

48. The obligation of non-recognition of an unlawful situation resulting from a serious breach of a peremptory norm is to prevent the validation of an illegal fait accompli from crystallizing into a law-creating fact over time.<sup>64</sup> It is grounded in the legal principle of ex injuria jus non oritur: legal rights cannot derive from an unlawful act. According to the articles, States are prohibited from offering recognition to a transgressing State which would allow it to acquire, among other acts, sovereign title to annexed territory, lawful condonation of its practices of racial discrimination or apartheid, or legal acceptance of its denial of self-determination through its sustained defiance and the passage of time.<sup>65</sup>

49. The obligation not to provide aid or assistance for maintaining a serious breach of international law is based on the principles of interdependence and solidarity that underlie the Charter of the United Nations and other lawful duties inherent in the rules-based international order.<sup>66</sup> This obligation requires States to individually refuse to offer any form of support to the transgressing State in its continuation of the serious breach. States that knowingly provide assistance to the transgressing State which aids in the ongoing breach, will themselves become responsible for the adverse effects of their assistance.<sup>67</sup> The Security Council, in its resolution 465 (1980), directed the international community to apply this principle with respect to the Israeli settlements.

<sup>59</sup> Convention on the Law of Treaties, art. 53.

<sup>60</sup> Yearbook of the International Law Commission, 2001, vol. II, Part Two (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.04.V.17 (Part 2)), chap. IV, sect. E.2 (Draft articles with commentaries thereto).

<sup>61</sup> Ibid., commentary on art. 40.

<sup>62</sup> Ibid.

<sup>63</sup> Ibid., commentary on art. 41.

<sup>64</sup> Martin Dawidowicz, “The obligation of non-recognition of an unlawful situation”, in James Crawford, Alain Pellet and Simon Olleson, eds., The Law of International Responsibility (New York, Oxford University Press, 2010).

<sup>65</sup> Draft articles with commentaries thereto, commentary on art. 41.

<sup>66</sup> Nina H.B. Jørgensen, “The obligation of non-assistance to the responsible State”, in Crawford, Pellet and Olleson, eds., The Law of International Responsibility.

<sup>67</sup> Draft articles with commentaries thereto, commentary on art. 41.

50. The obligation of cooperation creates a positive duty on all States to jointly partake in lawful actions on behalf of the international community to bring an end to the serious breaches of the transgressing State.<sup>68</sup> Without providing details of the forms of cooperation that may be required, the obligation nevertheless establishes the duty to take collective action where serious breaches have occurred. This builds upon the obligation of cooperation found in the Declaration on Principles of Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States, adopted by the General Assembly by its resolution 2625 (XXV) in October 1970.

Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations

51. Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations provides that

“the Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the ... Charter”.

The prevailing view regarding the scope of Article 25 is that resolutions adopted by the Security Council in which something is decided, rather than simply recommended, are binding decisions on all Members of the United Nations and must be obeyed and implemented.<sup>69</sup> This binding authority of Council decisions follows the fact that all States, in agreeing to become Members of the United Nations, have consented to be bound by the terms of the Charter.<sup>70</sup>

52. The leading judicial interpretation of the meaning and scope of Article 25 was provided by the International Court of Justice in its Namibia advisory opinion of 1971. In its commentary on Article 25, the Court ruled on three significant issues. First, it dismissed the argument advanced by the apartheid regime of South Africa that Article 25 was limited only to those occasions when a Security Council resolution specifically contained a mention of Chapter VII (the chapter of the Charter on enforcement mechanisms to address threats to or breaches of the peace).<sup>71</sup> This finding confirmed that the Council was entitled to issue legally binding decisions outside of Chapter VII, thus ensuring its effectiveness in compelling adherence to a variety of its resolutions addressing a range of crises, violations of international law and non-compliance with previous United Nations decisions.

53. Second, in the Namibia advisory opinion, the Court laid out a viable legal test to determine when the language of a Security Council resolution constituted a decision and was therefore binding on States Members of the United Nations. It stated that the language of a Council resolution had to be carefully analysed to assess its legally binding nature, including:

- The terms of the resolution to be interpreted
- The discussions leading to it
- The Charter provisions invoked
- All other relevant circumstances<sup>72</sup>

<sup>68</sup> Nina H.B. Jørgensen, “The obligation of cooperation”, in Crawford, Pellet and Olleson, eds., The Law of International Responsibility.

<sup>69</sup> Bruno Simma and others, The Charter of the United Nations: A Commentary, 3rd ed. (New York, Oxford University Press), 2013, p. 454.

<sup>70</sup> Hisahi Owada, “Problems of interaction between the international and domestic legal orders”, Asian Journal of International Law, vol. 5, No. 2 (July 2015).

<sup>71</sup> Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council Resolution 276 (1970), Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1971, p. 16, para. 113.

<sup>72</sup> Ibid., para. 114.

The Court, in the Namibia advisory opinion, had reviewed the language of Council resolution 276 (1970) on the expired mandate of the apartheid regime of South Africa in Namibia. The Court ruled that paragraphs 2 and 5 of the resolution were both legally binding on all States Members of the United Nations, “which are thus under obligation to accept and carry them out”:<sup>73</sup>

- In paragraph 2 of resolution 276 (1970), the Council “declares” that the continued presence of South Africa in Namibia is illegal
- In paragraph 5 of resolution 276 (1970), the Council “calls upon all States” to refrain from dealings with South Africa that are inconsistent with paragraph 2

The Special Rapporteur adopts the position that language used in a Council resolution to make a declaration, demand an action from a Member State or pronounce on the illegality of a situation is likely to be a decision within the meaning of Article 25.

54. Third, the Court, in its Namibia advisory opinion, expressly addressed the issue of the legal responsibility of the international community. It stated that, when the Security Council adopts a decision under Article 25 of the Charter, it is legally binding on all Member States.<sup>74</sup> The Court then elaborated upon the duty of accountability of the international community when a competent organ of the United Nations had issued a binding decision on the illegality of a situation. It ruled that “such a situation cannot remain without consequences” and that the Members of the United Nations would have “an obligation ... to bring that situation to an end”. It continued by stating that “this decision entails a legal consequence, namely that of putting an end to an illegal situation”.<sup>75</sup>

55. Recent debates in the Security Council on the binding nature of its resolutions indicate that some leading Council members accept that such resolutions create legal obligations on States Members of the United Nations. During a special session of the Council devoted to the Middle East, held in July 2019, the Permanent Representative of Germany specifically addressed the binding nature of the resolutions adopted by the Council on the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory, with particular reference to resolution 2334 (2016):

We believe in the United Nations and ... Security Council resolutions. For us, they are binding international law. We believe in the force of international law and we do not believe in the force of the strongest. ... For us, resolution 2334 (2016) – just to name the most recent Security Council resolution – is binding law and that is the international consensus.<sup>76</sup>

56. Speaking after the Permanent Representative of Germany, the Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom expressed her agreement with his view about the binding nature of Security Council resolutions:

I just wanted to pick up on something the German representative said about international law. We share his view that the Security Council is responsible for maintaining international peace and security and we all agree that the Arab-Israeli conflict is a threat to international peace and security. It is therefore right that we have adopted resolutions on that topic. We are bound by those resolutions and we all have a responsibility to implement them, just as we do ... on other topics. Indeed, this is the very basis of the Council’s work.<sup>77</sup>

<sup>73</sup> Ibid., para. 115.

<sup>74</sup> Ibid., para. 116.

<sup>75</sup> Ibid., para. 117.

<sup>76</sup> Heusgen, statement at the Security Council open debate on the Middle East.

<sup>77</sup> Karen Pierce, Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom to the United Nations, “Political and economic progress in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories”, speech at the Security Council briefing on the situation in the Middle East, 23 July 2019.

57. In the view of the Special Rapporteur, all Security Council resolutions in which it pronounces on the illegality of the Israeli settlements, the illegality of the Israeli annexation of East Jerusalem and the failure by Israel to fully comply with its legal obligations under international law, or in which it makes declarations on any aspect of the Israeli occupation, are binding decisions that must be complied with by Israel. Its failure to honour any of these decisions places the onus on all other Member States to enforce the obligations within the bounds of the Charter.

B. Lack of accountability in the conduct of the Israeli occupation

58. Israel has occupied the Palestinian territory for more than 52 years, the longest belligerent occupation in the modern world. In particular, the occupation has been characterized by two defining features. First, the conduct of the Israeli occupation has been marked by numerous intentional and serious violations of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law. The annexation of occupied territory, whether de jure or de facto, is illegal (A/73/447, paras. 24–59). The creation of civilian settlements in occupied territory is a grave breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention<sup>78</sup> and a war crime under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.<sup>79</sup> The location, permanence and continued existence of the separation wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has been found to be a violation of international law.<sup>80</sup> It has been stated in United Nations reports that war crimes may have been committed by Israel during its various military operations in Gaza (see A/HRC/12/48, A/HRC/29/CRP.4 and A/HRC/40/74). Multiple and systematic human rights violations have been credibly documented by the United Nations and by international, Israeli and Palestinian human rights defenders (see A/HRC/40/43). The Special Rapporteur has determined previously that the occupation itself has become illegal, given its flagrant violations of the foundational principles of modern laws of occupation (see A/72/556).

59. Second, the international community has demonstrated great unwillingness to impose any meaningful accountability on Israel for its permanent occupation and its serious violations of international law. In the face of the volumes of resolutions in which United Nations bodies have insisted that Israel unwind its occupation, end its settlement enterprise, undo its annexation of East Jerusalem, respect all of its human rights obligations, investigate purported war crimes, facilitate the return of Palestinian refugees and remove its obstruction to the full realization of Palestinian self-determination, Israel has remained profoundly resistant to international direction. It has rightly assessed that the international community – in particular the Western industrial nations – has lacked the political will to compel an end to its impunity. As a result, it has rarely faced meaningful consequences for its truculent behaviour. As the Israeli journalist Gideon Levy has written: “No country is as dependent on the support of the international community as Israel, yet Israel allows itself to defy the world as few dare”.<sup>81</sup>

Security Council resolutions

60. Throughout its occupation, Israel has acted in direct defiance of a number of Security Council resolutions and decisions.

<sup>78</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 49; and Additional Protocol 1, art. 85 (4) (a).

<sup>79</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (2) (b) (viii).

<sup>80</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 142.

<sup>81</sup> Gideon Levy, “Netanyahu’s right: the occupation can actually go on forever”, Haaretz, 25 September 2016.

61. East Jerusalem. In August 1980, the Security Council declared, in resolution 478 \(1980\), that the de jure annexation of East Jerusalem by Israel that year was null and void and must be rescinded forthwith. It decided not to recognize the “basic law” and such other actions by Israel that, as a result of that law, sought to alter the character and status of Jerusalem. In December 2016, the Council reaffirmed that resolution in adopting its resolution 2334 \(2016\). Almost four decades later, however, Israel remains in violation of Council resolution 478 \(1980\), and its occupation and annexation of East Jerusalem have only become more entrenched.

62. Settlements. The Security Council affirmed in its resolutions 446 \(1979\), 452 \(1979\) and 465 \(1980\) that the construction of settlements by Israel was contrary to international law. In its resolution 2334 \(2016\), it further stressed that the Israeli settlements constituted a flagrant violation under international law. In its resolution 2334 \(2016\), the Council, echoing its earlier demands, stated that Israel must immediately and completely cease all settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and that it must fully respect all of its legal obligations in this regard. Earlier, in 2013, the independent international fact-finding mission appointed by the Human Rights Council to investigate the Israeli settlements had found that,

“despite all pertinent United Nations resolutions declaring that the existence of the settlements is illegal and calling for their cessation, the planning and growth of the settlements continues of existing as well as of new structures” (A/HRC/22/63, para. 100).

In each of his three most recent quarterly reports to the Council on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\), the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority stated that, with respect to the Council’s direction to Israel to cease all settlement activity, “no steps were taken to that effect during the reporting period”. Rather, as the Special Coordinator pointed out previously, the Government of Israel had continued to announce significant settlement housing unit plans and the launch of construction.<sup>82</sup> In 1983, there were 99,000 Israeli settlers in the West Bank and East Jerusalem;<sup>83</sup> today, there are 650,000 settlers, an increase of more than 550 per cent.<sup>84</sup>

63. Annexation. The Security Council has affirmed the legal principle on at least eight occasions, most recently in its resolution 2334 \(2016\), that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible. Although it denounced the annexation by Israel of East Jerusalem in 1980 and of the Syrian Golan Heights in 1981 as unlawful, Israel has not reversed these de jure annexations, nor has its political leadership been impeded from intensifying its de facto annexation of the West Bank through ongoing land confiscation and its burgeoning settlement enterprise. Moreover, the Israeli political leadership continues to regularly express its support for formally annexing parts or all of the West Bank (A/73/447, para. 58). In September 2019, the Prime <sup>82</sup> Nickolay Mladenov, Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, statement at the Security Council briefing on the situation in the Middle East, 20 June 2019; and Nickolay Mladenov, Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, statement at the Security Council briefing on the implementation of resolution 2334 \(2016\), 20 September 2019.

<sup>83</sup> Foundation for Middle East Peace, “Comprehensive settlement population, 1972–2011”, available at <https://fmep.org/resource/comprehensive-settlement-population-1972-2010/>.

<sup>84</sup> Peace Now, “Population”, Settlements Watch database, available at <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/population>; Peace Now, “Jerusalem”, Settlements Watch database, available at <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlementsdata/jerusalem>.

Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu, announced that, if returned to office, his Government would annex the Jordan Valley and “other vital areas”.<sup>85</sup>

64. Occupation and non-compliance. In 1980, the Security Council, in its resolution 476 (1980), reaffirmed the overriding necessity for ending the prolonged occupation of Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967. In the same resolution, the Council stated that it strongly deplored the continued refusal of Israel, the occupying Power, to comply with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly. Two months later, in resolution 478 (1980), it noted that Israel had not complied with resolution 476 (1980) and reaffirmed its determination to examine practical ways and means, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, to secure the full implementation of its resolution 476 (1980), in the event of non-compliance by Israel. Almost four decades later, Israeli defiance of the Council remains unchecked, no means have been adopted to stem the ongoing violations of international law and the ineffectiveness of diplomatic pleas and warnings to end the occupation are glaringly self-evident.

United Nations calls for accountability

65. In a variety of forums, the United Nations has frequently called upon the international community to ensure accountability and to end impunity with respect to the Israeli occupation.

66. In four major independent reports commissioned by the Human Rights Council since 2009, the constant theme has been the serious violations of human rights and humanitarian laws by Israel, the necessity to ensure Israeli accountability and the prevailing culture of exceptionalism.<sup>86</sup> It was stated in the report on the conflict in Gaza in 2008 and 2009 that: “Justice and respect for the rule of law are the indispensable basis for peace. The prolonged situation of impunity has created a justice crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory that warrants action” (A/HRC/12/48, para. 1958). In its report of 2013 on the implications of the Israeli settlements, the independent international fact-finding mission called upon Israel “to ensure full accountability for all violations ... and to put an end to the policy of impunity” (A/HRC/22/63, para. 114). In the report on the conflict in Gaza in 2014, concern was expressed that “impunity prevails across the board for violations of international humanitarian and human rights law allegedly committed by Israeli forces .... Israel must break with its recent lamentable track record in holding wrongdoers accountable” (A/HRC/29/CRP.4, para. 664). Furthermore, in the report of 2019 on the protests in Gaza in 2018, it was found that “to date, the Government of Israel has consistently failed to meaningfully investigate and prosecute commanders and soldiers for crimes and violations” and that “scarce accountability measures arising out of Operations Cast Lead and Protective Edge ... cast doubt over the State’s willingness to scrutinize the actions of military and civilian leadership” (A/HRC/40/74, para. 111).

67. The General Assembly and the Human Rights Council have both accentuated the necessity for accountability by Israel, the occupying Power, in recent years. In a resolution on the Israeli settlements, the Assembly called for the consideration of measures of accountability, in accordance with international law, in the light of continued non-compliance [by Israel] with the demands for a complete and immediate cessation of all settlement activities (General Assembly resolution 73/98, para. 6). Similarly, the Human Rights Council, in March 2019, expressed its alarm and emphasized “the need for States to investigate and prosecute grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and other serious violations of international humanitarian law, to end impunity, to uphold their obligations to ensure respect and to promote international accountability” (see Human Rights Council resolution 40/13).

<sup>85</sup> Times of Israel, “Netanyahu: after Jordan Valley and settlements, I’ll annex other ‘vital areas’”, 16 September 2019.

<sup>86</sup> Alessandro Tonutti, International Commissions of Inquiry and Palestine: Overview and Impact – Study Analysis (Ramallah, Al-Haq Centre for Applied International Law, 2016).

68. Impunity and the lack of accountability by Israel in its conduct of the occupation have also been addressed by the Secretary-General. In 2016, the former Secretary-General, Ban Ki-Moon, stated that the lack of any significant movement towards a political resolution and ongoing violations of international human rights and humanitarian law were exacerbated by the lack of accountability for previous violations. and that tackling impunity must be the highest priority (A/71/364, para. 6).

69. The lack of accountability has also been a central concern of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. In a comprehensive report on accountability issued in June 2017 (A/HRC/35/19), the former High Commissioner, Zeid Ra’ad Al Hussein, reviewed 551 recommendations issued since 2009 by relevant Human Rights Council mechanisms to determine the degree of compliance and cooperation by Israel with respect to the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Of the 178 recommendations issued regarding accountability and access to justice, Israel had implemented 2, had partially implemented 8 and had not implemented 168 (90 per cent). A similarly sparse record of compliance by Israel regarding the implementation of recommendations on the arrest and detention of Palestinians (91 per cent not implemented and 8 per cent partially implemented), on settlements (100 per cent not implemented) and on freedom of movement (97 per cent not implemented) was also reported. In total, Israel had fully implemented less than 0.5 per cent of the human rights recommendations presented to it. In his conclusions, the High Commissioner reminded the international community that “all stakeholders must recognize that compliance with international law is a sine qua non condition for peace” (ibid., para. 81).

70. In a report published in March 2019 on accountability (A/HRC/40/43), the current High Commissioner, Michelle Bachelet, gave details of the long pattern of impunity throughout the Israeli occupation, including:

- In Gaza in 2014, where she noted that the Israeli Military Advocate General had closed a number of cases without any criminal investigation, despite serious allegations and prima facie evidence of international law violations
- In Gaza in 2018 and 2019, where she noted the excessive use of force by Israeli security forces that had killed and wounded a large number of Palestinian demonstrators outside the context of hostilities
- In the case of human rights defenders, in which she pointed to a prevailing atmosphere of intimidation, threats and arrests of human rights defenders and civil society actors by Israel

In the report, the High Commissioner addressed the international community’s responsibility to take measures to prompt States to act in compliance with international humanitarian law. She concluded by observing that the “lack of accountability compromises chances for sustainable peace and security” and urged that addressing impunity should be the “highest priority” (ibid., para. 54).

71. The paradox of accountability is as striking as it is tragic. The international community has knowingly, on countless occasions, either voted for resolutions in United Nations forums or accepted public reports from independent commissions of inquiry and from senior United Nations officials in which the acute lack of accountability, coupled with the abundant impunity that has characterized Israeli conduct of the five-decade-long occupation, have been recognized. It has also displayed extraordinary lethargy in enforcing what its own laws and decisions, its binding humanitarian obligations and its political precedents would compel it to do. It is therefore necessary to ask whether it is simply to be accepted that, with this occupation, international law is closer to power than it is to justice.

C. Countermeasures as the remedy for impunity

72. Countermeasures are a legitimate, effective and commonly used tool of international politics and diplomacy to compel recalcitrant States and organizations to comply with international law and to cease the significant harm that they are inflicting on others. The use of countermeasures is intended as a response to a prior intentionally wrongful act, and not as a form of punishment or reprisal for wrongful conduct. They must be targeted against the offending State, they should be reversible upon a significant reform in State behaviour, they must respect the Charter (including all humanitarian and human rights obligations) and they must be proportionate and effective.<sup>87</sup> In the case of a serious violation by a State or an organization of an obligation owed to the international community, other States have not only the power but also the obligation to initiate countermeasures. Serious violations would include contraventions of the peremptory norms of international law, including grave breaches of international humanitarian law, many of which are widespread in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

73. Countermeasures commonly employed in the modern world would include: (a) diplomatic démarches and public statements; (b) diplomatic sanctions; (c) trade sanctions; (d) the reduction or suspension of cooperation and aid; (e) financial and economic sanctions; (f) flight bans; (g) arms embargoes; and (h) travel restrictions. Countermeasures have been applied in recent years to promote democracy and human rights, advance the rule of law, oppose annexation and aggression, combat terrorism, address threats to international peace and security, rectify serious humanitarian crises, protect vulnerable minorities and end conflicts and civil wars.

74. Scholars have identified three principal purposes of countermeasures and sanctions: (a) to coerce a change in the behaviour of the targeted State or organization; (b) to constrain a targeted State or organization from engaging in a prohibited activity; and (c) to signal and/or stigmatize a targeted State or organization regarding its violations of international laws or norms. Countermeasures and sanctions have been found to be the most effective in the following instances:<sup>88</sup>

- Targeting friends and close trading partners. These States have more to lose than those with limited or adversarial relations. This reflects the willingness of States in a broad alliance to bow to pressure from allies because of the importance of the larger relationship.
- Democracies are more responsive to countermeasures than autocrats. Democratic leaders have to pay more attention to domestic public opinion and independent domestic institutions, which often value good international relations.
- Sanctions with maximum impact work best. If the goal is to change policies of behaviour, high economic costs imposed by the countermeasures or sanctions work best. Minor sanctions may work well as initial signals, but they have to escalate swiftly if they do not modify the targeted behaviour.

<sup>87</sup> See, generally, Jeremy Matam Farrall, United Nations Sanctions and the Rule of Law (New York, Cambridge University Press, 2007).

<sup>88</sup> Gary Clyde Hufbauer and others, Economic Sanctions Reconsidered, 3rd ed. (Washington, D.C., Peterson Institute for International Economics, 2007).

- Significant international cooperation is important, but is not always a guarantee of success. The cooperation of an international organization in which the alliance of countries and the targeted State are members increases the chances of success.
- Choosing the appropriate countermeasures is key. Not just any sanction will do. Understanding the susceptible pressure points of the targeted State or organization is key to success.
- The purposes of the sanctions should be well articulated. This enables stronger public support, clarifies what countermeasures should be used and explains when success has been achieved or changes have to be made.

75. In its 2016 commentary on the Geneva Conventions, ICRC listed a series of non-exhaustive measures that may be taken individually and/or collectively by the High Contracting Parties to ensure respect for international humanitarian law:<sup>89</sup>

- Addressing questions of compliance within the context of a diplomatic dialogue
- Exerting diplomatic pressure by means of confidential protests or public denunciations
- Conditioning joint operations on a coalition partner's compliance with its obligations under the Conventions and/or planning operations jointly in order to prevent such violations
- Intervening directly with commanders in the case of violations, such as an imminent unlawful attack against civilians, by a coalition partner
- Referring, where applicable, a situation to the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission
- Requesting a meeting of the High Contracting Parties
- Applying measures of retorsion, such as the halting of ongoing negotiations or refusal to ratify agreements already signed, the non-renewal of trade privileges, and the reduction or suspension of voluntary public aid
- Adopting lawful countermeasures, such as arms embargoes, trade and financial restrictions, flight bans and the reduction or suspension of aid and cooperation agreements
- Conditioning, limiting or refusing arms transfers
- Referring the issue to a competent international body, such as the Security Council or General Assembly
- Referring, where possible, a specific issue to the International Court of Justice or another body for the settlement of disputes
- Resorting to penal measures to repress violations of humanitarian law
- Supporting national and international efforts to bring suspected perpetrators of serious violations of international humanitarian law to justice

76. Much more can be said about the range of appropriate countermeasures that the international community has at its disposal to ensure accountability and an end to impunity regarding the Israeli occupation. The Special Rapporteur reserves the opportunity to expand upon this issue in a future report. Suffice it to say for now that the international community possesses a great deal of power to ensure a positive, durable and just solution to the occupation. Indeed, it will not end without the international community acting decisively in support of international law and its common values to compel Israel to fulfil its obligations. As Hagai El-Ad, the executive director of B'Tselem, a leading Israeli human rights organization, stated to the Security Council in 2016: "Israel will not cease being an oppressor simply by waking up one day and realizing the brutality of its policies. ... We need your help".<sup>90</sup>

<sup>89</sup> See https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/Comment.xsp?action=openDocument&documentId=72239588AFA66200C1257F7D00367DBD#\_Toc452378926, para. 181.

IV. Conclusion

77. No occupation in the modern world has been conducted with the international community so alert to its many grave breaches of international law, so knowledgeable about the occupier's obvious and well-signalled intent to annex and establish permanent sovereignty, so well informed about the scale of suffering and dispossession endured by the protected population under occupation, and yet so unwilling to act upon the overwhelming evidence before it to use the tangible and plentiful legal and political tools at its disposal to end the injustice.

78. An international community that took seriously its legal responsibilities to challenge and end internationally wrongful acts would have concluded long ago that Israel, the occupying Power, was not sincere about seeking to end the occupation. It would have drawn the necessary lessons from the many unfulfilled Security Council and General Assembly resolutions, the inordinate duration of the occupation, the innumerable facts on the ground and the aimless rounds of negotiations. It would have determined that the status quo of this occupation and annexation was endlessly sustainable without decisive international intervention because of the grossly asymmetrical balance of power on the ground. It would accept that its duty was not to oversee the management of the occupation, but to end it. Such an international community would take the prudent and necessary steps to collectively construct a list of effective countermeasures that would be appropriate and proportional to the circumstances. Should the occupying Power remain unmoved, the international community would apply and escalate the range of its targeted countermeasures until compliance had been achieved. It would realize that bold measures and the determination to enforce accountability in these circumstances would greatly improve the chances that the next obstinate occupier would not likely want to test its resolve.

V. Recommendations

79. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel should fully comply with its obligations under international law and that it should completely end its 52 years of occupation within a reasonable time period and enable the realization of Palestinian self-determination.

80. The Rapporteur recommends that the international community:

(a) In line with common article 1 to the Geneva Conventions, the articles of responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts and Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations, take all measures, including countermeasures and sanctions, necessary to ensure the respect by Israel, and all other relevant parties, of their obligations under international law to end the occupation;

<sup>90</sup> Hagai El-Ad, Executive Director of B'Tselem, statement to the Security Council, 18 October 2018.

(b) Seek to hold Israel to the international standards that all States are required to obey;

(c) Ensure full accountability of Israeli political and military officials who are responsible for grave breaches of international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(d) Adopt the recommendation of the former United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights issued in June 2017. The General Assembly should make use of its powers under Article 96 (a) of the Charter of the United Nations to seek an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the legal obligation of Israel to end the occupation and the international community's legal obligations and powers to ensure accountability and bring an end to impunity;

(e) Commission a United Nations study on the legality of the Israeli annexation and continued occupation of the Palestinian territory.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
22 October 2020

Original: English

---

Seventy-fifth session

Agenda item 72 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, hereby submits his fifth report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives and United Nations agencies. The report addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza, and is the second report focusing on accountability-related issues.

I. Introduction

1. The present report provides a brief overview of the most pressing human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the time of submission, as identified by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 in conversations and meetings with civil society. The report then presents a detailed analysis of the latest human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, with a specific focus on accountability.

2. The Special Rapporteur would like to highlight once again that, despite his repeated requests, he has not yet been granted access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory by Israel. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes once again his view that an open dialogue among all parties is essential for the protection and promotion of human rights and reminds Israel that he is ready and willing to engage. In addition, the Special Rapporteur continues to highlight that access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory would play a key role in understanding the fundamental realities of the human rights situation in the territory. The pattern of non-cooperation by Israel with the mandate is a serious concern.

3. The Special Rapporteur was not able to travel to the region, including Amman, owing to travel restrictions in connection with the spread of coronavirus disease (COVID-19). However, he was able to engage actively with members of civil society and United Nations agencies and collect important information on the topic, most notably through submissions.

4. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur focuses on two issues. First, he reviews the responsibilities of the Security Council in terms of accountability for ensuring that its decisions and directions on the Israeli occupation are obeyed. He then assesses the responsibilities of private corporations in terms of accountability for operating in, or benefiting from, directly or indirectly, the Israeli settlements and the Israeli occupation.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation to the Government of the State of Palestine for its full cooperation with his mandate.

6. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes again his support for the vital work being done by Palestinian, Israeli and international human rights organizations. This work is indispensable not only to the Rapporteur as he seeks to fulfil his mandate, but also to the broader international community. The efforts of human rights organizations to ensure that accurate and complete information about the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is readily available should not go unacknowledged.

II. Current human rights situation

A. Impact of COVID-19

7. The spread of the COVID-19 pandemic in the Occupied Palestinian Territory has accentuated some of the existing and long-standing negative repercussions of Israeli occupation. In some respects, it has exposed further the structural deficiencies in vital sectors, particularly the health sector in the West Bank and Gaza, as a result of Israeli practices on the ground. It has also clearly demonstrated that, during a serious health crisis, one that crosses borders and communities, a two-tier occupation regime reinforces unequal rights, particularly the right to adequate health. Despite existing conditions on the ground, in the initial phase of the pandemic, specifically in the months of March and April 2020, duty bearers applied strict preventive measures that have effectively curbed the spread of the virus. Some coordination, although short-lived, was noted at the time between the Palestinian Authority and Israel.<sup>1</sup> However, an exponential increase in cases has been observed since late June, when the total number of confirmed cases was only at 2,765.<sup>2</sup> By 13 October, the total number of confirmed cases had increased markedly and reached 52,292 in the West Bank and 4,175 in Gaza.

8. This exponential increase has significantly strained an already weakened and overstretched health sector, particularly in Gaza. This additional strain was further compounded by the suspension of security coordination between the Palestinian Authority and Israel on 19 May, which came in the aftermath of the announcement by Israel of its planned annexation of parts of the West Bank and the Jordan Valley.<sup>3</sup> This situation has significantly affected Palestinians' access to health care, generally reduced humanitarian assistance and significantly reduced the Palestinian Authority's monthly revenues by more than 80 per cent, severely limiting its capacity to pay its employees, particularly health personnel. Israel has withheld the Palestinian Authority's tax revenues numerous times in the past. Since December 2019, those revenues have been withheld again. In his briefing to the Security Council, the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process noted that he was also concerned that the level of coordination was far below that which existed at the beginning of the year, when the first wave of the virus hit, a situation that could have serious repercussions on the ability to control the spread of the virus and mitigate its impact on people's lives (see S/2020/736, annex 1).

9. Beyond the impact of this suspension, facts on the ground demonstrate that Israel, the occupying Power, through the imposition of existing measures, has significantly reduced Palestinians' access to health care and to humanitarian assistance. These measures include a vast settlement infrastructure with associated security zones and bypass roads, the separation wall, zoning policies and an extensive network of fixed and mobile checkpoints that effectively dissect the West Bank into separate, fragmented and disconnected areas. In terms of accessing proper health care – including more equipped and specialized hospitals – Palestinians continue to face restrictions on movement not only within the West Bank but also when attempting to receive treatment in East Jerusalem. Moreover, delays continue to be reported in terms of receiving vital medical equipment, including testing kits and other necessary equipment for prevention.<sup>4</sup>

10. Continued Israeli control over law enforcement, planning and reconstruction in Area C, constituting more than 60 per cent of the occupied West Bank, has also hampered efforts to combat the pandemic. Palestinians living in Area C, currently estimated to be around 300,000, face additional complications in accessing proper health care. Palestinians are thus prevented from taking initiatives of their own to curb the spread of the virus while in many cases being offered no alternatives by relevant Israeli authorities. Attempts to coordinate the entry of Palestinian police into the H2 zone in Hebron to reinforce prevention measures with Palestinians living there have so far failed. In East Jerusalem, similar dynamics could be observed. In April, Israeli security forces raided a COVID-19 testing clinic in the Palestinian neighbourhood of Silwan under the pretext that it was run and supported by the

<sup>1</sup> See www.un.org/press/en/2020/sc14167.doc.htm.

<sup>2</sup> See World Health Organization, <https://app.powerbi.com/view?r=eyJrIjoia0JlYWM1YTEtNDIxZS00OTFILThkZjktNDA1ODY2OGQ3NGJkIiwidCI6ImY2MTBjMGJlLWJkMjQNGlZOS04MTBiLTNkYzI4MGFmYjU5MCIslmMiOj99>.

<sup>3</sup> See <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/end-palestinian-authority-coordination-israel-response>.

<sup>4</sup> See <https://mondoweiss.net/2020/09/palestinians-faces-consistent-testing-kit-shortages-during-covid-19/>.

Palestinian Authority.<sup>5</sup> While rates of infection were markedly increasing during that period, Palestinians in East Jerusalem lacked adequate access to medical facilities, services and testing kits. The lack of provision of aggregated data by Israel on cases is also hampering efforts to combat the pandemic. Since then, Israeli authorities have opened another centre in the neighbourhood. With the recent spike in cases, there remain severe restrictions on the operations of health care professionals in East Jerusalem as health development efforts continue to be undermined by the occupying Power.

11. In another worrying development, there was an increase in rates of infection among Palestinian detainees in Israeli detention centres, including one reported case of a child.<sup>6</sup> In April, the Special Rapporteur had called for the release of the most vulnerable detainees, including children, women, older persons and those with pre-existing conditions. The increase in infections among Palestinian detainees again highlights the critical need to release Palestinian political prisoners or find alternative arrangements for detention to ensure their safety.

12. As rates of infection increase significantly in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the impact of structural issues resulting directly from occupation and Israeli practices will continue to be increasingly felt. The complex set of measures applied to different areas by the occupying Power, often resulting in discriminatory practices, is bound to compound the impact of occupation, especially under such a serious health crisis. Even in the midst of a serious health pandemic, the demolition of Palestinian homes and instances of excessive use of force continue to be recorded and, in some cases, have increased. It is imperative that Israel, as the occupying Power, and in the light of the currently alarming rates of COVID-19 infection, reverse these practices and allow for the better protection of Palestinians and improved access to health-care services. Absent such measures, health conditions for Palestinians, who are already suffering the scourge of occupation, are bound to worsen.

B. Planned annexation and illegal settlement expansion by Israel

13. As part of a unity deal, on 20 April, the Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu, and the leader of the Blue and White party, Benjamin Gantz, agreed to formally initiate a process to annex parts of the West Bank and the Jordan Valley.<sup>7</sup> The planned annexation would have affected a third of the West Bank if implemented. The Special Rapporteur stressed that besides leading to a cascade of human rights violations, any annexation, even if partial, would be a serious breach of international law and the Charter of the United Nations and would set a dangerous precedent for the rules-based international order.<sup>8</sup> The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Michelle Bachelet, also stated, on 29 June, that annexation was illegal and that it would have disastrous consequences not only for Palestinians but also for Israel itself.<sup>9</sup>

14. While formal annexation plans appear to have been delayed for the time being, it is imperative to stress that the de facto annexation of Palestinian territory by Israel is ongoing and has intensified in 2020, most notably through illegal settlement

<sup>5</sup> See www.middleeastmonitor.com/20200416-israel-closes-coronavirus-testing-centre-in-occupied-east-jerusalem/.

<sup>6</sup> See www.dci-palestine.org/palestinian\_child\_detainee\_tests\_positive\_for\_coronavirus\_in\_israeli\_prison.

<sup>7</sup> See www.amnesty.org/en/latest/news/2020/07/israelopt-10-things-you-need-to-know-about-annexation/.

<sup>8</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=25857&LangID=E.

<sup>9</sup> See www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26009&LangID=E.

expansion. In 2020 alone, Israel has approved or advanced more than 12,150 settlement homes, making it the single highest rate on record since 2012, when such figures started to be recorded by Peace Now.<sup>10</sup> More than 5,000 of these housing units were approved in mid-October alone. Settlements and settlement construction are illegal under international law and are one of the major obstacles to peace. Concurrently, demolitions of Palestinian-owned structures have increased significantly over the past year. In 2020 alone, more than 560 structures have been destroyed, leading to the displacement of 747 Palestinians.<sup>11</sup> The Special Rapporteur stresses that, while it was important to counter the formal Israeli annexation plans, it is also imperative to counter all measures on the ground that amount to de facto annexation, which Israel advances in the plain sight of the international community and which lead to serious breaches of the human rights of Palestinians on a daily basis.

C. Gaza

15. The Israeli-imposed land, sea and air blockade of Gaza has now entered its fourteenth year, with no end in sight. As a result, the 2 million residents of Gaza, including around 1 million children, continue to endure a grave and worsening humanitarian crisis at multiple levels. Gazans have had virtually all their human rights undermined under the weight of the blockade as they continue to lack access to adequate housing, education, water and sanitation. Food insecurity is endemic. Gaza bears one of the world's highest unemployment rates (estimated to be around 45 per cent), with poverty levels that exceeded 53 per cent as of late 2019.<sup>12</sup> The economy of Gaza is flat on its back, with growth in gross domestic product virtually at zero in 2019 and with an export sector that has nearly expired as a result of the closure and severe restrictions (see TD/B/67/5, paras. 2 and 13).

16. Students in Gaza continue to lack adequate education infrastructure and the tools for distance learning, especially under the current pandemic. More than 575,000 children and teenagers lack access to computer equipment, reliable power supply and the Internet.<sup>13</sup> It is estimated that only 30 per cent of Gaza households have Internet access, while Internet networks crash more than 10 times an hour on average.<sup>14</sup> Despite their availability for more than 15 years, Gaza still lacks 3G networks, meaning that data upload times are significantly slowed down. As part of its comprehensive blockade, Israel prevents the entry of equipment needed for advanced data network infrastructure. With pre-existing limitations on networks and confinement measures, students in Gaza face insurmountable difficulties to learning and to one of the only gateways they have to the outside world. All of this undermines their fundamental right to education.

17. The health-care system in Gaza is at the verge of total collapse, which would result in a full-blown humanitarian catastrophe. After the first community transmissions in Gaza were detected on 25 August 2020, confirmed cases increased exponentially, putting a significant strain on an already battered health-care system.<sup>15</sup> As of 14 October, there were 4,285 confirmed cases in Gaza, a marked increase from 1 July, when there were only 11 cases. Strict preventive measures have been <sup>10</sup> See www.aljazeera.com/news/2020/10/15/israels-settlement-approvals-hit-record-high-watchdog.

<sup>11</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/data/demolition.

<sup>12</sup> See <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/increase-gaza-s-unemployment-rate-2019>.

<sup>13</sup> See <https://gisha.org/en-blog/2020/10/13/remote-learning/>.

<sup>14</sup> See <http://pngoportal.org/en/3049.html>.

<sup>15</sup> See www.aljazeera.com/news/2020/8/25/gaza-in-lockdown-after-first-covid-19-community-transmission.

implemented by the de facto authorities, including the imposition of full and partial curfews and the establishment of quarantine centres. Such measures did mitigate the impact and the spread of the virus but they could not remedy the fundamental structural deficiencies in the health-care sector caused by the blockade.

18. The prohibition of or severe restrictions on the entry of vital and dual-use materials – those that Israel considers could be used for both military and civilian purposes, including cement and steel – chronic power shortages and the contamination of more than 90 per cent of the drinkable water supply in Gaza have debilitated the work of hospitals even before the onset of the current pandemic. Current statistics are extremely disconcerting: it is estimated that there are only 93 ventilators and 110 beds in the intensive care units in Gaza to cover a population of 2 million.<sup>16</sup> As of the end of September 2020, the World Health Organization estimated that 47 per cent of essential drugs were at zero stock level, with supply of less than a month jeopardizing the lives of more than 350 oncology patients and causing the suspension of more than 13,000 elective surgeries. More than 50 per cent of primary health-care staff in Gaza have been reassigned to support the COVID-19 response, gravely affecting an appropriate response to and treatment of non-COVID-19-related illnesses. The Special Rapporteur had specifically warned in early September that “should the COVID-19 pandemic take root in Gaza, the consequences would likely be very serious”.<sup>17</sup>

19. Faced with few alternatives for treatment, Palestinians in Gaza, especially those with critical health conditions, continue to experience arbitrary delays and denials of Israeli-issued exit permits needed for essential and often life-saving health care outside of Gaza. The suspension of security coordination between the Palestinian Authority and Israel in May 2020, in the context of announced annexation plans by Israel in the West Bank, has further complicated and delayed the process of exit permit applications. Since September 2020, the World Health Organization has been operating a coordination mechanism to support Palestinian patients in applying for Israeli exit permits in order to mitigate the impact of the coordination suspension.<sup>18</sup> The Special Rapporteur reiterates that Israel, as the occupying Power, has the primary responsibility to ensure respect for and protection and fulfilment of the right to health of Palestinians in Gaza to the full extent of their actual control, while the Palestinian Authority and the de facto authorities in Gaza also have responsibilities to the extent of their effective control over the population.

20. The Israeli-imposed blockade on Gaza contravenes international law, specifically article 33 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), and amounts to the collective punishment of the entire civilian population in Gaza. The Special Rapporteur stated on 1 September that: “Gaza is on the verge of becoming unlivable. There is no comparable situation in the world where a substantial population has endured such a permanent lockdown, largely unable to travel or trade, and controlled by an occupying power in breach of its solemn international human rights and humanitarian obligations. Our international standards of dignity and morality do not allow such experiments in human despair.”<sup>19</sup> The High Commissioner also noted on 14 September in her global update that “the blockade, which contravenes international law, has conclusively failed to deliver security or peace for Israelis and Palestinians, and should urgently be lifted”.<sup>20</sup> More than ever and after 14 years, the Israeli security rationale for the blockade has been undermined by the reality on the

<sup>16</sup> See www.icrc.org/en/document/icrc-donates-vital-intensive-care-equipment-gaza.

<sup>17</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26201&LangID=E.

<sup>18</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/covid-19-emergency-situation-report-18.

<sup>19</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26201&LangID=E.

<sup>20</sup> See www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=26226.

ground, demonstrating that the civilian population of Gaza continues to suffer the brunt of the blockade.

21. The latest asymmetrical escalation of hostilities between Israel and armed groups in Gaza, which ended with a mediated ceasefire in late August, demonstrates that instability will remain unless the fundamental human rights of Palestinians are achieved and protected. Short-term solutions will only serve to deepen the humanitarian crisis as a result of the blockade and increase the frustration of a population already living in extremely dire conditions. The Palestinians in Gaza urgently require immediate steps to ease the impact of the blockade. The Special Rapporteur calls for a specific set of measures, including the reconstruction of the Gaza seaport, the building of new power, water and sewage treatment plants and the permission of the entry of much larger quantities of construction materials and freedom of movement for Gazans. The crisis in Gaza is human-made, and only through the exercise of concerted political will by those with authority can a full-blown humanitarian catastrophe be averted.

D. Children

22. The daily lives of Palestinian children continue to be especially negatively impacted by the continuation of occupation and the exposure of children to violence. According to the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, in 2019, 32 Palestinian children (29 boys, 3 girls) and 1 Israeli girl were killed in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem. Most of the Palestinian children casualties were attributed to Israeli forces and were mostly caused by live ammunition or air strikes. In the same year, 1,539 Palestinian children (1,460 boys, 79 girls) and 8 Israeli children (5 boys, 3 girls) were maimed (see A/74/845-S/2020/525, paras. 85–86). In that report, the Secretary-General urged Israel to end the excessive use of force against children and ensure accountability for cases involving the killing and maiming of children. He urged Palestinian armed groups to ensure children's safety, including by preventing them from being exposed to violence or by abstaining from instrumentalizing children for political purposes (ibid., paras. 91–92).

23. Palestinian children's access to health care continues to be severely affected. The intricate system of movement restrictions in the case of the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the 14-year blockade of Gaza by Israel have resulted in serious challenges in access to health-care facilities and specialized medical treatment for children. In Gaza, children continue to face denial of or delay in access to health-care facilities or specialized treatment outside of the Strip.

24. The Special Rapporteur also continues to be seriously concerned about reports of ill-treatment of children during arrest, interrogation or detention. In 2019, the United Nations received testimonies of children who reported breaches of due process and ill-treatment by Israeli forces in the context of detention, including physical violence (ibid., para. 84). Children held in Israeli detention report patterns of ill-treatment, such as the use of blindfolds, hand ties or leg ties and the denial of food and water or access to toilets. Children also report being denied access to lawyers or parents during interrogation, being compelled to sign documents in Hebrew, which many of the children do not understand, and not being adequately informed about their rights (see A/75/336, para. 20). Israeli practices and policies thus continue to prioritize the punishment and criminalization of Palestinian children instead of their rehabilitation.

E. Palestinian Authority and the de facto authorities in Gaza

25. There continue to be reports of cases of arbitrary arrest and detention by the de facto authorities in Gaza, particularly of journalists and human rights and political activists. Many continue to be arrested because of their political affiliation and perceived opposition to the Hamas authorities. Serious restrictions on freedom of expression continue to be in place, particularly in the context of reporting on the socioeconomic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. There are also concerning reports of excessive use of force against those who violate curfews in relation to imposed preventive measures.

26. During the COVID-19 crisis, it has been reported that the Palestinian Authority has released some prisoners in order to try to contain the pandemic. However, a number of arrests by Palestinian security forces continued to be reported in the West Bank. Many of those arrested were accused of using social media platforms to criticize the Palestinian Authority or for expressing opposing political views.<sup>21</sup> Limitations on freedom of expression remain a concern for journalists. A number of allegations of ill-treatment of those arrested also continue to be received.

III. Accountability, impunity and the responsibility of the international community

27. Accountability – the institutional check on the exercise of public and private power on behalf of the common good – is the indispensable component of the rule of law. When used purposively and effectively, accountability entrenches fairness and equality, it promotes healing and resolution, it delivers justice to victims and perpetrators alike, it alleviates conflicts and prevents others from igniting, and it sews together the 10,000 threads of accommodation which nurture social trust.

28. Without accountability, the best-designed systems of law and human governance will wither for lack of enforceability and respect. Without accountability, the possibility of political reconciliation, let alone its flourishing, is unattainable. And without accountability, social wounds metastasize, leaving unchecked retaliation, rather than measured restitution, as the likely response to the injustices of the past and present. As the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) has noted, “lack of the rule of law and accountability for human rights violations leads to failures of justice and impunity for crimes, conflict over unaddressed grievances, and oppressive, unaccountable rule”.<sup>22</sup>

29. The accountability principle applies to all stakeholders, public and private, who have the capacity, through their authority or power, to affect the common good. The former Secretary-General of the United Nations, Kofi Annan, endorsed this broad application of the principle in a report to the Security Council in 2004, stating that the rule of law refers to a principle of governance in which all persons, institutions and entities, public and private, are accountable to laws that are publicly promulgated, equally enforced and independently adjudicated, and which are consistent with international human rights norms and standards (see S/2004/616, para. 6).

30. The breadth of this principle ensures that not only must those who are violating the norms of international human rights and humanitarian norms end their transgressions and be held accountable, but – equally as important – those who have the individual and collective capacity to influence the behaviour of these perpetrators are also accountable to utilize, to the extent possible, their weight to meaningfully sanction and end these breaches and crimes.

<sup>21</sup> See www.amnesty.org/en/latest/news/2020/05/palestine-end-arbitrary-detention-of-critics-in-west-bank-and-gaza/.

<sup>22</sup> See <https://bangkok.ohchr.org/rule-of-law-accountability/>.

31. The international supervision of the 53-year-old Israeli occupation of Palestine illustrates that, between international law and accountability, there is an enormous gap between promise and performance. The tragic paradox is that there has been no other conflict in the modern world to which the United Nations has contributed so decisively to the development of international law in such a large number of significant areas – providing depth and breadth to the rights of refugees, the application and meaning of belligerent occupation, the strict prohibition against the annexation of occupied territory, the legal status of civilian settlements in occupied lands and the centrality of the right to self-determination, among other areas – while delivering such a paucity of actual protections to the occupation’s many victims.<sup>23</sup>

32. The United Nations and other authoritative international institutions have spoken, often with lucidity and incisiveness, about the incompatibility of the Israeli occupation with international law and basic rights-based principles. On a number of occasions, they have warned Israel about its defiance of, and non-compliance with, Security Council, General Assembly and Human Rights Council resolutions. Rarely, however, have they actually taken steps to hold Israel accountable – through effective countermeasures and sanctions – for its obstructive policies and practices concerning the occupation.

33. The purpose of this call for consequential accountability is plainly obvious: Israel has been operating a largely cost-free occupation for decades, with every available indicator – whether it is the unremitting growth in the settlement population, the confiscation of more and more Palestinian public and private lands for settlements and the Israeli military, the repeated proclamations by Israeli political leaders that the occupied lands are Israeli by right, or the refusal by Israel to acknowledge that its rule over the Palestinian territory is governed by the laws of occupation – pointing to an unremitting occupation. The former head of the Israeli Shin Bet (the country’s internal security unit), Carmi Gillon, recently observed, with regret, that “the status quo is good for Israel, because Israel gets all it wants without paying a price”.<sup>24</sup>

34. Israel is a rational actor, and it understands that, if the incentives to thicken its occupation are high and the deterrents from the international community are virtually non-existent, it can continue to devour the territory meant for a Palestinian State unimpeded. If impunity continues to be indulged and even rewarded by the international community, then it is magical thinking to expect an acquisitive occupying power would do anything else but further expand its settlement enterprise, prepare even more assiduously for a future de jure annexation claim, doom the Palestinians to a future without hope and write the obituary for the two-State solution.

35. In the report of the Special Rapporteur of October 2019 (A/74/507), the section on accountability focused on the responsibilities of the international community. The present report addresses the accountability responsibilities of two other important and influential actors in the context of the occupation: the Security Council of the United Nations and private corporations. The Security Council is the custodian for ensuring international peace and security and has the authority to impose international sanctions and other actions to protect international law when peace and security are threatened. Private corporations play a significant role in sustaining the economic viability of the illegal Israeli settlements, thereby inextricably entangling businesses in the abusive human rights record of the occupation.

---

<sup>23</sup> Susan Akram and others, eds., International Law and the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict: A Rights-Based Approach to Middle East Peace (Abingdon, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Routledge, 2011).

<sup>24</sup> See www.haaretz.com/middle-east-news/palestinians/.premium-the-palestinians-got-screwed-they-are-now-a-non-issue-1.8968748.

A. Security Council and the Israeli occupation

Introduction

36. Over the past five decades, the Security Council has repeatedly and unambiguously endorsed three fundamental principles with respect to the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory (the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza). First, Israel is the occupying Power, the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949 applies in full, and Israel is required to fulfil all of its obligations under the Convention.<sup>25</sup> Second, the acquisition of territory by force or war is inadmissible.<sup>26</sup> Third, the creation and expansion of the Israeli settlements is a serious violation of the absolute prohibition under international law of the occupying Power transferring parts of its civilian population into the occupied territory.<sup>27</sup> All three of these principles were expressly reaffirmed by the Council in its resolution 2334 \(2016\). These three principles are among the most settled and widely-accepted tenets of modern international law.

37. At no time have any of these three principles been accepted or applied by Israel. The Security Council has spoken, at times sharply, about the defiance of Israel, but it has not imposed any consequences in the face of the ongoing obstructiveness of Israel. There is no other grave international human rights situation, and no other insubordinate State actor, in the world today about which the Security Council has spoken in such quantity and with such critical clarity, but acted with such passivity.<sup>28</sup> And yet, even as Israel has deepened its obstinacy in recent years, the Security Council has not only failed to act, it no longer even speaks on the issue with the regularity it had before: since January 2009, the Council has adopted only two resolutions critical of the Israeli occupation,<sup>29</sup> even as human rights conditions on the ground have progressively worsened.

Principle 1: Fourth Geneva Convention

38. The Fourth Geneva Convention was enacted in the aftermath of the Second World War to offer broad protections to civilians caught in war, who are the most vulnerable people in any armed conflict. Regarding the applicability of the Convention, Israel has argued – virtually alone in the world – that it does not apply to the Palestinian territory, and therefore that the territory is not occupied. This is because, in its view, no other State had a valid sovereign claim to those lands when it captured them in 1967.<sup>30</sup> The Security Council has consistently repudiated this stance, confirming in at least 22 resolutions since 1967 that the Convention applies in full to <sup>25</sup> The Security Council first referred to the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to the Israeli occupation in its resolution 237 \(1967\), adopted within a week of the end of the war of June 1967.

<sup>26</sup> See Council resolution 242 \(1967\).

<sup>27</sup> See Council resolution 446 \(1979\).

<sup>28</sup> Kofi Annan, in his memoirs, observed that “the Council’s aggressive stance against the Syrian presence in Lebanon stood in stark contrast to its passivity regarding Israel’s occupation of Arab lands...the perception of double standards in the Middle East undermined the United Nations”. See Kofi Annan, with Nader Mousavizadeh, Interventions (New York, Penguin Books, 2012), p. 298.

<sup>29</sup> Resolutions 1860 \(2009\) and 2334 \(2016\).

<sup>30</sup> See <https://mfa.gov.il/MFA/MFA-Archive/2003/Pages/DISPUTED%20TERRITORIES-%20Forgotten%20Facts%20About%20the%20We.aspx>.

the Israeli occupation, most recently in 2016.<sup>31</sup> On various occasions, the Security Council has “strongly deplored” the continued refusal by Israel to comply with previous resolutions directing it to abide by the Convention,<sup>32</sup> demanded that Israel “immediately and scrupulously” comply with the Convention<sup>33</sup> and noted that, in the event of non-compliance, it would examine “practical ways and means” to secure “full implementation” by Israel of prior resolutions on the application of the Convention.<sup>34</sup>

39. Twice in 1980 – after 13 years of occupation – the Security Council affirmed the “overriding necessity to end the prolonged occupation of Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem”.<sup>35</sup> Yet, in 2020 – with the Israeli occupation now four times as prolonged as it was in 1980 – the occupation has exponentially deepened and thickened.<sup>36</sup> Israel has rejected the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention since the very beginning of the occupation,<sup>37</sup> and both the United Nations and many respected human rights organizations have determined that Israel has repeatedly breached a number of the guaranteed protections enshrined in the Convention (see A/HRC/43/67).<sup>38</sup>

Principle 2: annexation of occupied territory

40. The annexation of occupied territory by an occupying power is not only strictly prohibited by international law,<sup>39</sup> it is now deemed to be a crime of aggression under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.<sup>40</sup> In the context of the Israeli occupation, the Security Council has expressly endorsed the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war, force and/or military conquest on at least 11 occasions.<sup>41</sup> With respect to the two-stage annexation by Israel of East Jerusalem (in June 1967 by a Cabinet decision and in June 1980 by the Knesset), the Security Council has repeatedly stated that East Jerusalem remains occupied and that the proclamation by Israel of sovereignty is “null and void”, is “a flagrant violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention” and has “no legal validity”.<sup>42</sup>

41. In the face of the persistent refusal of Israel to unwind its annexation of East Jerusalem, the Security Council has “strongly deplored” contravention by Israel of

<sup>31</sup> See, generally, resolutions 446 \(1979\) and 2334 \(2016\).

<sup>32</sup> See Council resolution 476 \(1980\).

<sup>33</sup> See Council resolution 592 \(1986\).

<sup>34</sup> See Council resolution 478 \(1980\).

<sup>35</sup> See Council resolutions 471 \(1980\) and 476 \(1980\).

<sup>36</sup> Ardi Imseis, “Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967-2020”, European Journal of International Law (September 2020); and Michael Sfard, The Wall and the Gate: Israel, Palestine, and the Legal Battle for Human Rights (New York, Metropolitan Books, 2018).

<sup>37</sup> Theodor Meron, “The West Bank and international humanitarian law on the eve of the fiftieth anniversary of the Six-Day War”, American Journal of International Law, vol. 111, No. 2 (April 2017).

<sup>38</sup> See also the Israel/Palestine country pages of Amnesty International (www.amnesty.org/en/countries/middle-east-and-north-africa/israel-and-occupied-palestinian-territories/) and Human Rights Watch (www.hrw.org/middle-east/north-africa/israel/palestine).

<sup>39</sup> See Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, at para. 87 (p. 171), where the International Court of Justice stated that the principal “No territorial acquisition resulting from the threat or use of force shall be recognized as legal” has now achieved the status of customary international law.

<sup>40</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (last amended 2010), 17 July 1998, article 8 bis, para. 2: “Any of the following acts ... qualify as an act of aggression: (a) ... any annexation by the use of force of the territory of another State or part thereof”.

<sup>41</sup> See resolution 2334 \(2016\), in which the Council reaffirmed the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force.

<sup>42</sup> See resolutions 471 \(1980\), 476 \(1980\) and 478 \(1980\).

United Nations resolutions, has “urgently” called upon it to “rescind all such measures” and has demanded that Israel “desist forthwith” from any further action to alter the status of Jerusalem.<sup>43</sup> On other occasions, the Council has confirmed “in the strongest terms” that the annexation is “totally invalid” and deplored “the failure of Israel to show any regard for the resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council”.<sup>44</sup>

42. In reply, Israel has continued to intensify its annexation of East Jerusalem through the creation and expansion of 12 civilian settlements, the presence of 215,000 Jewish settlers and the construction of a wall separating East Jerusalem from the West Bank, and by solidifying the political and infrastructural integration of East and West Jerusalem.<sup>45</sup> No evidence has ever been forthcoming on the part of Israel that it has begun to comply, or intends to comply, with any of the directions of the Security Council on East Jerusalem, with the Prime Minister of Israel proclaiming in February 2020 that the Government had successfully accomplished its annexation of East Jerusalem in the face of great international opposition.<sup>46</sup>

Principle 3: Israeli settlements

43. International law has strictly forbidden an occupying power from attempting to demographically transform an occupied territory through the implantation of its civilian population.<sup>47</sup> The purpose of this prohibition is to preserve the indigenous population’s right to self-determination,<sup>48</sup> to halt an avaricious occupying power from advancing an impermissible annexation claim through territorial colonization,<sup>49</sup> and to avert the immense human suffering that inevitably follows the process of settler implantation.<sup>50</sup> Since 2002, settler implantation has been determined to be a war crime under the Rome Statute.<sup>51</sup>

44. Beginning in 1979, the Security Council has stated on at least six occasions that the establishment by Israel of civilian settlements in occupied territory has “no legal validity” and, more vividly, is a “flagrant violation under international law”.<sup>52</sup> In 1980, the Council “strongly deplored” the non-cooperation of Israel and its rejection of prior resolutions on settler implantation.<sup>53</sup> In 2016, the Council determined that the

<sup>43</sup> See resolutions 252 (1968), 476 (1980) and 478 (1980).

<sup>44</sup> See resolution 267 (1969); see also resolutions 298 (1971) and 478 (1980).

<sup>45</sup> Meir Margalit, The City of Jerusalem: the Israeli Occupation and Municipal Subjugation of Palestinian Jerusalem (Brighton, United Kingdom, Sussex University Press, 2020).

<sup>46</sup> Oren Liebermann and Andrew Carey (Cable News Network), “As election looms, Netanyahu announces new construction in East Jerusalem”, 20 February 2020: “‘We did this then in the face of strong international opposition. We overcame every obstacle and we did it, and see what we have done in Jerusalem’, Netanyahu said. ‘We are connecting all parts of the united Jerusalem, the rebuilt Jerusalem. It is a source of great pride and is great news for the entire people of Israel’.”

<sup>47</sup> See Fourth Geneva Convention, article 49, sixth paragraph.

<sup>48</sup> See E/CN.4/Sub.2/1993/17 and E/CN.4/Sub.2/1993/17/Corr.1, para. 202: “Policies and practices of population transfer may be aimed specifically at denying a meaningful implementation of the right to self-determination, for instance, by altering the relevant unit of self-determination through demographic manipulation, or policies which have that effect”.

<sup>49</sup> See International Committee of the Red Cross, commentary of 1958 on the sixth paragraph of article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, available from: www.icrc.org/ihl.nsf/COM/380-600056?OpenDocument.

<sup>50</sup> See E/CN.4/Sub.2/1997/23 and E/CN.4/Sub.2/1997/23.Corr.1, para. 16: “The range of human rights violated by population transfer and the implantation of settlers place this phenomenon in the category of mass violations of human rights”.

<sup>51</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (last amended 2010), 17 July 1998, article 8 (2) (b) (viii).

<sup>52</sup> See resolutions 446 (1979) and 465 (1980).

<sup>53</sup> See resolutions 465 (1980) and 471 (1980).

settlement enterprise of Israel was gravely imperilling what remained of the two-State solution and demanded that Israel “immediately and completely cease all settlement activities”.<sup>54</sup> By 2020, however, Israel has created approximately 250 thriving settlements, with more than 650,000 settlers, in East Jerusalem and the West Bank, and it has continued to approve record numbers of new settlement housing units over the past year.<sup>55</sup> In his 14 quarterly reports to the Security Council since 2017 as to whether Israel has been implementing the clear direction in resolution 2334 \(2016\) that it absolutely halt all of its settlement activities, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process has reported, on each occasion, that Israel has taken no steps to satisfy this obligation.<sup>56</sup>

Security Council and accountability

45. Under Article 24 (1) of the Charter of the United Nations, the Security Council has the responsibility of maintaining international peace and security. With that responsibility comes the authority, under Article 41 of the Charter, to apply a broad range of enforcement mechanisms, short of military action, in order to compel errant States and actors to cooperate with international law (such as the 1991 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait), to contain a perceived threat to international peace and security (such as regional nuclear proliferation) or to address the malign actions of specific international, national or subnational actors (such as Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant, Al-Qaida and the Taliban)<sup>57</sup>. Since 1966, the Security Council has established 30 sanctions regimes, and currently maintains 14 ongoing regimes. While Security Council sanctions have had a varied record in effectiveness and have been criticized on occasion for their adverse humanitarian impact,<sup>58</sup> more recent history has demonstrated that – when applied with precision, purpose, unity and the flexibility to vary and escalate accountability measures – United Nations-led sanctions can produce meaningful changes in behaviour by States and other actors.<sup>59</sup>

46. The defiance of Israel – as termed by the Security Council<sup>60</sup> – of the direction of the international community is a serious challenge to the rules-based international order. The resolutions and decisions of the Security Council, along with those of the General Assembly, are the bedrock of the international legal consensus on the Israeli occupation of Palestine. As a solemn condition of joining the United Nations, Member States commit themselves to accepting and carrying out the decisions and directions of the Security Council.<sup>61</sup> If the rule of law matters, then so does accountability. If the Security Council is to speak with authority, then the disobedience of Council directions must have consequences.

47. Similarly, the inertia of the Security Council in meaningfully responding to the non-compliance of Israel with its resolutions and directions – particularly on the three

<sup>54</sup> See resolution 2334 \(2016\).

<sup>55</sup> See Peace Now, “4,948 settlement units advanced at October 2020 Higher Planning Council sessions”, 15 October 2020: “These approvals officially make 2020 the highest year on record in terms of units of settlement plans promoted since Peace Now began recording in 2012”.

<sup>56</sup> See, for example, Nickolay Mladenov, Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, statement at the Security Council briefing on the situation in the Middle East, 29 September 2020 (see S/PV.8762).

<sup>57</sup> Larissa Van Den Herik, Research Handbook on UN Sanctions and International Law (Cheltenham, United Kingdom, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2017).

<sup>58</sup> Jeremy Matam Farrall, United Nations Sanctions and the Rule of Law (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, 2007).

<sup>59</sup> Enrico Carisch, Loraine Rickard-Martin and Shawna W. Meister, The Evolution of UN Sanctions: from a Tool of Warfare to a Tool of Peace, Security and Human Rights (New York, Springer, 2017).

<sup>60</sup> See Council resolutions 608 \(1988\), 636 \(1989\) and 641 \(1989\).

<sup>61</sup> See Charter of the United Nations, Article 25.

fundamental principles it has so frequently endorsed – is also a body blow to the efficacy of international law.<sup>62</sup> In his memoirs, Kofi Annan was disturbed by the “prolonged and sometimes brutal occupation” by Israel, and lamented the timidity of the Security Council’s response: “Even when the Council took positions, it did not establish mechanisms to enforce its will”.<sup>63</sup> He also identified a leading source for the Council’s paralysis: the “unhealthy possessiveness of the Middle East peace process” by the United States of America.<sup>64</sup> Since 1973, the United States has cast 31 vetoes at the Security Council against draft resolutions critical of the Israeli occupation; in each case, it has been the only Council member casting a negative vote. No other permanent member of the Security Council has vetoed a Council resolution critical of the Israeli occupation.<sup>65</sup>

B. Private corporations and the Israeli settlements

Introduction

48. In 2011, the Human Rights Council unanimously adopted the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (A/HRC/17/31, annex). The Guiding Principles are a set of non-binding norms to influence corporate decision-making in integrating human rights principles into daily business operations. The Principles are intended to apply to all commercial and corporate sectors and to all geographic regions. They are part of a larger global initiative – including major statements by the International Committee of the Red Cross<sup>66</sup> and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development<sup>67</sup> – to mainstream a responsive and vibrant human rights culture within the corporate world. The Guiding Principles set out three pillars as part of the United Nations “Protect, Respect and Remedy” Framework to advance human rights practices and compliance:

- (a) The duty of States to protect human rights, including against abuses by corporations;
- (b) The corporate responsibility to respect human rights, including by acting with due diligence to avoid violating the rights of others;
- (c) The need for greater access to effective remedies for victims of business-related abuses.

49. The Guiding Principles are not law, and most international human rights treaties do not contain specific obligations with respect to corporations.<sup>68</sup> Nonetheless, a number of States have extended criminal and/or civil liability to corporations domiciled within their jurisdictions through their domestic laws, many of which reflect international human rights standards (see A/HRC/17/31, annex, commentary on Principle 12). Some States have also issued national guidance policies and <sup>62</sup> In 2020, retired Ambassador of the United States of America, Peter Mulrean, observed that the international community’s “words were never matched by action, however, especially because the United States ensured through pressure on other countries and through the United Nations Security Council veto that Israel was never meaningfully punished by or even harshly criticized in that potentially influential forum” (see www.justsecurity.org/69925/trumps-deal-of-the-century-is-bibis-dream-come-true/).

<sup>63</sup> Annan, Interventions, p. 256.

<sup>64</sup> Ibid., p. 290.

<sup>65</sup> See <https://research.un.org/en/docs/sc/quick>.

<sup>66</sup> See www.icrc.org/en/doc/resources/documents/misc/business-ihl-150806.htm.

<sup>67</sup> See www.oecd.org/corporate/mne/responsible-business-conduct-matters.htm.

<sup>68</sup> Note that there are advanced negotiations for a legally-binding international treaty on business and human rights (see www.ohchr.org/Documents/HRBodies/HRCouncil/WGTransCorp/OEIGWG\_RevisedDraft\_LBI.pdf).

advisories to corporations regarding their compliance with human rights standards internationally. The rich body of modern international human rights legal instruments – regarding labour rights, environmental rights and the rights of vulnerable groups, such as minorities, women, children and persons with disabilities, among other guarantees – is the North Star for directing corporations on how to satisfy their human rights responsibilities.

50. Among the relevant principles found in the Guiding Principles with respect to corporate activity in the Israeli settlements and the occupation are the following:

(a) Principle 7. States should assist businesses that are involved in conflict-affected areas to identify, prevent and mitigate human rights risks, and should deny access to businesses involved in gross human rights abuses;

(b) Principle 11. Businesses should avoid infringing the human rights of others and should address human rights impacts with which they are involved;

(c) Principle 12. The responsibility to respect human rights refers to internationally recognized human rights, which would include the International Bill of Human Rights and fundamental labour standards, but would also encompass all other United Nations human rights instruments;

(d) Principle 13. The responsibility to respect human rights requires businesses to avoid causing or contributing to adverse human rights impacts, and to prevent or mitigate human rights impacts that are directly linked to their business relationships;

(e) Principle 23. In all contexts, businesses should comply with all applicable internationally recognized human rights and treat the risk of causing or contributing to gross human rights abuses as a legal compliance issue.

51. In addition to international human rights law, businesses are expected to incorporate the tenets of international humanitarian law and international criminal law in their operational responsibilities.<sup>69</sup> International humanitarian law applies to conflict-affected areas and occupied territories and requires that States and individuals adhere to the gold-standard humanitarian legal obligations found primarily in the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and their legal offspring. While companies operating in a conflict zone or in an occupation could contribute to the economic and social well-being of the affected population, their activities, conversely, could become complicit in the commission of human rights and humanitarian abuses or assisting the occupying power to sustain its alien rule once it has become apparent that it is governing in violation of the laws of occupation.

52. The focus of international criminal law is on individuals (rather than States or other institutional actors) who commit, instigate, order, plan or are complicit in prohibited activity under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, such as war crimes and crimes against humanity. Individual corporate decision makers could be liable under international criminal law. Serious issues relating to international humanitarian and criminal law can arise in occupations where the occupying power is engaged in the transfer of parts of its civilian population into the occupied territory. The Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights require companies in conflict zones and occupations to employ an enhanced due diligence, or “heightened care”, to ensure that their operations are compliant with their legal responsibilities. However, there are some circumstances in which no amount of enhanced due diligence will avoid corporate complicity in human rights violations in a conflict area or an occupation.

<sup>69</sup> For valuable commentary, see: D. Hughes, “Differentiating the Corporation: Accountability and International Humanitarian Law”, Michigan Journal of International Law, vol. 41, No. 1 (2020); and Marya Farah, Business and Human Rights in Occupied Territory: Guidance for Upholding Human Rights (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2019).

Corporations and the Israeli settlements

53. The Israeli settlements are a profound breach of international law, as determined by the leading deliberative and judicial organs of the United Nations, including the Security Council,<sup>70</sup> the General Assembly,<sup>71</sup> the Human Rights Council<sup>72</sup> and the International Court of Justice.<sup>73</sup> Other influential international bodies – including the European Union,<sup>74</sup> the International Committee of the Red Cross<sup>75</sup> and the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention<sup>76</sup> – concur. More seriously, the settlements are a presumptive war crime under the Rome Statute.<sup>77</sup>

54. The disfiguring human rights consequences of the settlements upon the Palestinians in East Jerusalem and the West Bank are pervasive. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has determined that the human rights violations emanating from the settlements include land confiscation and alienation, settler violence, discriminatory planning laws, the appropriation of natural resources, home demolitions, forcible population transfer, labour exploitation, forced evictions and displacement, physical confinement, discriminatory law enforcement and the imposition of a two-tiered system of unequal political, social and economic rights based on ethnicity. Above all, the settlements serve the broader goal of the Government of Israel of staking an impermissible sovereignty claim over parts of the occupied territory while simultaneously denying Palestinian self-determination (see A/HRC/43/67; see also A/HRC/22/63). The Israeli settlements and the corresponding shrinking space for Palestinians have created a “coercive environment” in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, according to the United Nations.<sup>78</sup>

55. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development has found that the territorial restrictions imposed by the settlements – the separate road systems for settlers and Palestinians; the hundreds of roadblocks, checkpoints and obstructions throughout the West Bank; settler violence; and regular area closures and curfews – have created a shattered economic space in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. This has resulted in a highly dependent and captive Palestinian economy, mounting impoverishment, daily impositions and indignities and an accelerating trend towards economic de-development.<sup>79</sup> In 2018, a leaked memorandum by European Union

<sup>70</sup> See resolution 2334 \(2016\).

<sup>71</sup> See Assembly resolution 71/97.

<sup>72</sup> See Council resolution 43/31.

<sup>73</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 2004, at para. 120.

<sup>74</sup> Council of the European Union, “Council conclusions on the Middle East peace process” (18 January 2016).

<sup>75</sup> Peter Maurer, “Challenges to international humanitarian law: Israel’s occupation policy”, International Review of the Red Cross, vol. 94, No. 888 (2012), p. 1503.

<sup>76</sup> Declaration of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, 17 December 2014, available from: <https://unispal.un.org/UNISPAL.NSF/0/E7B8432A312475D385257DB100568AE8>.

<sup>77</sup> Ghislain Poissonier and Eric David, “Israeli settlements in the West Bank: a war crime?” La Revue des droits de l’homme, No. 17 (2020). See also www.amnestyusa.org/lets-be-clear-israels-long-running-settlement-policy-constitutes-a-war-crime/.

<sup>78</sup> See www.un.org/unispal/document/ocha-2019-humanitarian-needs-overview/.

<sup>79</sup> The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: Cumulative Fiscal Costs (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.20.II.D.6).

diplomats in Jerusalem highlighted the “systematic legal discrimination” imposed by the Israeli occupation and its settlement enterprise against the Palestinian people.<sup>80</sup>

56. Corporate and business activities contribute significantly to the economic viability of the Israel settlement enterprise.<sup>81</sup> It is private corporations that, through tenders issued by the Israeli Government agencies that administer the settlement enterprise, construct the settlements and build and maintain the roads and utility infrastructure that service them. Businesses operating in the settlements and the industrial parks – in particular, manufacturing and service industries, and wineries – provide jobs and commercial activity that economically sustain the settlements, while paying taxes to settlement municipalities. Private security companies guard many of the settlements, and those companies and high-tech businesses supply surveillance and identification equipment. Banks and financial institutions facilitate the fiscal infrastructure to arrange residential mortgages and to lend capital to businesses operating in the settlements. Law firms offer legal services to the settlements, settlers and settlement businesses. Real estate firms coordinate the sale and purchase of residential and commercial properties in the settlements. Agricultural corporations grow a range of foodstuffs for domestic and export markets, utilizing large-scale farming and modern technology. Domestic and international tourism is an emerging sector for the settlements, along with hotels and accommodation rentals. Retail store chains operate in the settlements. Transportation companies link the settlements to each other and to communities within Israel. Extraction companies exploit the Occupied Palestinian Territory’s natural resources, including minerals and water. Equipment companies supply the heavy machinery needed to construct residential and commercial building structures. Waste management companies service both municipalities and industrial enterprises in the settlements. The construction and maintenance of the separation wall through occupied territory solidifies an illegal situation.

57. Many of the corporations and businesses supplying commercial services in, or to, the settlement economy are Israeli companies. However, a number of international corporations also contribute to, and profit from, the settlement economy. International banks and financial institutions underwrite loans to, or invest in, businesses with operations in the settlements. Other companies sell goods and services to the settlements, such as construction materials, heavy machinery and solar power technology, or excavate non-renewable natural resources. Major international transportation companies have participated in the building of the Jerusalem light rail system (which connects a number of the illegal East Jerusalem settlements to West Jerusalem) and the high-speed rail connection between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem (which passes through parts of the occupied territory). Major international accommodation booking companies advertise housing rentals in the Israeli settlements. Goods and services from the Israeli settlements, including manufactured goods, wines and foodstuffs, are exported in quantity to the international market.

58. Without this extensive corporate involvement, the settlements – the engine of the occupation – would be an unsustainable economic burden for the Government of Israel. These businesses – domestic and international – benefit greatly from the illegal confiscation by Israel of Palestinian land and natural resources, from the discriminatory Israeli two-tier system of rights, benefits and opportunities between the settlements and Palestinian people, and from Palestinian impoverishment (and the resulting employment of low-cost Palestinian labour in the settlements) that is the inevitable consequence of a settlement implantation enterprise.<sup>82</sup> The question becomes whether companies can become, or remain, involved with the Israeli settlements and still honour their human rights commitments.

<sup>80</sup> Andrew Rettman, “No EU cost for Israeli ‘apartheid’ in West Bank”, EUobserver, 1 February 2019.

<sup>81</sup> Paras. 56–58 are informed by the comprehensive overviews of the corporate dimensions of the Israeli settlement economy provided in Amnesty International, Think Twice (2019); Amnesty International, Destination: Occupation (2019); Farah, Business and Human Rights in Occupied Territory; Profundo and 11.11.11, Doing Business with the Occupation (2018); Human Rights Watch, Bankrolling Abuse (2018); Human Rights Watch, Occupation, Inc. (2016); and Diakonia, The Unsettling Business of Settlement Business (2015). See also the work of Who Profits, available from: www.whoprofits.org/.

Enhanced due diligence or complete corporate abstinence?

59. In 2014, the Working Group on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises issued a detailed statement on the implications of the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights in the context of the Israeli settlements.<sup>83</sup> It pointed to the illegality of the settlements and the wide ranges of human rights abuses associated with them. In its conclusion, the Working Group issued a cautionary yellow light to corporate involvement in the Israeli settlements, stating that:

Business enterprises doing business, or seeking to do business, in or connected to the Israeli settlements in the OPT need to be able to demonstrate that they neither support the continuation of an international illegality nor are complicit in human rights abuses; that they can effectively prevent or mitigate human rights risks; and are able to account for their efforts in this regard.

60. In 2018, OHCHR released an interim report regarding its progress towards creating a database of businesses involved in the Israeli settlements. In its conclusion, OHCHR expressed considerable doubt as to whether a company could engage commercially with the Israeli settlements and, at the same time, comply with its human rights responsibilities (see A/HRC/37/39, para. 41):

Considering the weight of the international legal consensus concerning the illegal nature of the settlements themselves, and the systemic and pervasive nature of the negative human rights impact caused by them, it is difficult to imagine a scenario in which a company could engage in listed activities in a way that is consistent with the Guiding Principles and international law.

61. In 2019, Amnesty International published a substantive study on the human rights and legal implications of companies doing business with the Israeli settlements.<sup>84</sup> It concluded that, given their grave human rights consequences, only a complete red light abstinence would suffice:

A company cannot meet its responsibility to respect human rights and the standards of international humanitarian law while doing business with the settlements. This is because the settlements have been established and developed in breach of the international law rules governing what states can and cannot do in a situation of military occupation. As such, they constitute war crimes and give rise to systematic, widespread and serious human rights violations.

62. The Special Rapporteur takes the view that any form of corporate involvement – whether Israeli or international, whether direct or indirect, whether intentional or incidental – with the Israeli settlements is wholly incompatible with human rights obligations, with the Guiding Principles and with any purposive definition of enhanced due diligence. Three reasons inform this view. First, the Israeli settlements are a flagrant violation and a grave breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention and a presumptive war crime under the Rome Statute. These are among the most serious of contraventions under international human rights, humanitarian and criminal law. Second, corporations and businesses operating in, or benefiting from, the settlements provide the indispensable economic oxygen for their growth. Whatever positive benefits are cited by companies in defending their engagement with the settlements – often, the employment of Palestinian labour, or the payment of local taxes<sup>85</sup> – are far outweighed on the human rights ledger by the scale of gross violations inherent in the settlement enterprise. Third, the settlements are the primary political instrument – the pervasive “facts on the ground” – employed by the Government of Israel to advance its de facto and de jure annexation claims and to deny Palestinian self-determination. Annexation is a crime of aggression,<sup>86</sup> and self-determination is primus inter pares of human rights.<sup>87</sup>

<sup>82</sup> Yael Ronen, “Responsibility of businesses involved in the Israeli settlements in the West Bank”, January 2015.

<sup>83</sup> See <https://www.ohchr.org/Documents/Issues/Business/OPTStatement6June2014.pdf>.

<sup>84</sup> See Amnesty International, Think Twice, p. 25.

63. Under present conditions, the only form of corporate engagement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory that could comply with the human rights responsibilities of businesses would have to: (a) directly benefit the protected population under occupation; (b) withhold any benefits to, or involvement with, the Israeli settlements; and (c) contribute to the inherent sovereignty claim of the Palestinian people over their territory.

Human Rights Council database

64. In February 2020, OHCHR released the database of business enterprises involved in certain activities related to the Israeli settlements (see A/HRC/43/71), pursuant to the request of the Human Rights Council in its resolution 31/36. Databases of business activities had been previously commissioned by the United Nations with respect to other conflict zones, including the Democratic Republic of the Congo (see S/2003/1027) and Myanmar (see A/HRC/42/CRP.3). The Special Rapporteur welcomes the release of the database, as it provides an important spotlight on corporate activity – both Israeli and international – in the settlements and advances public and corporate understanding of the adverse human rights environment sustained by the settlements.<sup>88</sup> At the same time, the Special Rapporteur recognizes that the database had a restrictive mandate (it did not seek to cover all business activity related to the settlements that may raise human rights concerns), it was interpreted narrowly (a number of companies with important supply relationships with the settlements and/or the occupation were not included) and it did not contain an adjudicative mechanism.<sup>89</sup> These concerns must be addressed while enhancing the database’s ability to be a living tool.

<sup>85</sup> Maha Abdullah and Lydia de Leeuw, Violations Set in Stone (Amsterdam, Somo, and Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2020).

<sup>86</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (last amended 2010), 17 July 1998, article 8 bis, para. 2 (a).

<sup>87</sup> Self-determination is the very first human right cited in both the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

<sup>88</sup> Valentina Azarova, “Business and human rights in occupied territory: the UN database of business active in Israel’s settlements”, Business and Human Rights Journal, vol. 3, No. 2 (July 2018), p. 187.

<sup>89</sup> See www.haaretz.com/israel-news/premium-why-the-un-s-settlement-database-doesn-t-go-far-enough-1.8589282.

IV. Conclusions

65. In 1970, the Security Council was faced with an international crisis that has striking similarities to that of the Occupied Palestinian Territory: the prolonged rule of apartheid South Africa over Namibia.<sup>90</sup> Like Palestine, Namibia was ruled through a United Nations-supervised trust relationship – in one case, an occupation; in the other case, a mandate – by an alien power that was exploiting its position and advancing an illegal claim of sovereignty. Like Palestine, South African rule over Namibia was aided by the extensive presence of regional and international businesses. And like Palestine, the alien power in Namibia was defying the long-standing directions of the Council to end its abusive rule and open the path to independence. In response, the Council authorized a comprehensive set of sanctions and countermeasures to bring an end to South African rule over Namibia. These accountability measures – found, among other places, in Council resolution 283 (1970) and the 1971 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on Namibia<sup>91</sup> – laid the basis for the international community’s actions against illegal rule by South Africa and the eventual independence of Namibia in 1990.

66. Without the comprehensive accountability measures developed and applied by the Security Council against South Africa, the independence of Namibia would never have occurred when it did. And without the development and application of comprehensive accountability measures by the international community against the Israeli occupation, it will continue well into the future. This occupation will not die of old age. Nor will it crumble from pleas to respect the United Nations which do not promise the inevitability of adverse consequences if disobeyed. Rights under international law are self-evident, but they are not self-executing.

67. In its resolutions 465 (1980) and 471 (1980), the Security Council called upon all States “not to provide Israel with any assistance to be used specifically in connection with settlements in the occupied territories” and for Israel “to end the prolonged occupation”. Forty years later, it is well past time for the Council to lead the international community by drawing from its own precedents respecting Namibia and other modern sanctions regimes to honour its directions to end assistance to the settlements and to end the occupation. As the International Court of Justice stated in its advisory opinion:

It would be an untenable interpretation to maintain that, once such a declaration had been made by the Security Council under Article 24 of the Charter, on behalf of member States, these Members would be free to act in disregard of such illegality or even to recognize violations of law resulting from it.<sup>92</sup>

V. Recommendations

68. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel should fully comply with its obligations under international law and that it should completely end its 53 years of occupation with all deliberate speed and enable the realization of Palestinian self-determination.

<sup>90</sup> John Dugard, Confronting Apartheid: A Personal History of South Africa, Namibia and Palestine (Johannesburg, South Africa, Jacana Media, 2018).

<sup>91</sup> Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South-West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council Resolution 276 (1970), Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1971, p. 16.

<sup>92</sup> Ibid., at para. 112 (p. 52).

69. The Rapporteur recommends that the Council, or, if it fails to act, the General Assembly, in accordance with the procedure pursuant to its resolution 377 \(V\), entitled “Uniting for peace”, adopt resolutions containing the following directions:

(a) To call upon all States maintaining diplomatic or consular relations with Israel to issue a formal declaration to the Government of Israel to the effect that they do not recognize any authority of Israel with regard to the Occupied Palestinian Territory and that they consider the continued presence of Israel in the Territory to be illegal;

(b) To request all States to refrain from any relations – including diplomatic, consular, trade and other agreements – with Israel implying any recognition of the authority of the Government of Israel over any part of the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(c) To call upon all States to ensure that all corporate enterprises regulated by them cease any and all investment, commercial, operational and trade dealings of any sort with respect to the Israeli settlements and Israeli industrial enterprise zones or with companies regulated by the Government of Israel operating in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(d) To request all States to undertake, without delay, a detailed study and review of all bilateral treaties between themselves and Israel to identify whether these treaties contain provisions by which they might apply to the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(e) To call upon all States to discourage the promotion of tourism and emigration to the Israeli settlements;

(f) Also to call upon all States not to permit the entry of any goods and services produced in or originating from, in whole or in part, the Israeli settlements or Israeli-regulated commercial enterprises in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

(g) To request all States to report to the Secretary-General on measures they have taken on an annual basis in order to give effect to the provisions set forth by the Security Council and the General Assembly.

70. The Rapporteur recommends that the Security Council should ensure that the database of business enterprises involved in certain activities related to the Israeli settlements becomes a living tool, that it clarify and broaden the mandate of the database and that it provide the database with sufficient resources so that its spotlight can properly identify the scope of all business involvement with the settlements and the occupation.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
22 October 2021

Original: English

---

Seventy-sixth session

Agenda item 74 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights
situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent developments.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967,
Michael Lynk

Summary

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, hereby submits his sixth report to the General Assembly. The report is based primarily on information provided by victims, witnesses, civil society representatives and United Nations agencies. The report contains a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and in Gaza, and an in-depth analysis of the responsibility and performance of international actors.

I. Introduction

1. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Michael Lynk, provides a brief overview of the most pressing human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory at the time of submission, as identified by the Special Rapporteur in conversations and meetings with civil society. He then presents a detailed analysis of the latest human rights concerns in the Occupied Palestinian Territory with a specific focus on the responsibilities and performance of international actors.

2. The Special Rapporteur would like to highlight once again that, despite his repeated requests, he has not yet been granted access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory by Israel. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes once again his view that an open dialogue among all parties is essential for the protection and promotion of human rights and reminds Israel that he is ready and willing to engage. In addition, the Rapporteur continues to highlight that access to the Occupied Palestinian Territory would play a key role in understanding the fundamental realities of the human rights situation in the territory. The pattern by Israel of non-cooperation with the mandate is a serious concern.

3. The Special Rapporteur was not able to travel to the region, including Amman, owing to travel restrictions in connection with the spread of the coronavirus disease (COVID-19). However, he was able to engage actively with members of civil society and United Nations agencies and collect important information on the topic, most notably through submissions.

4. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur focuses on an in-depth analysis of the responsibilities and performance of international actors.

5. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express his appreciation to the Government of the State of Palestine for its full cooperation with his mandate.

6. The Special Rapporteur emphasizes again his support for the vital work being done by Palestinian, Israeli and international human rights organizations. This work is indispensable not only to the Rapporteur as he seeks to fulfil his mandate, but also to the broader international community. The efforts of human rights organizations to ensure that accurate and complete information about the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is readily available should not go unacknowledged.

II. Current human rights situation

A. Excessive use of force by Israel

7. According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, 55 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli forces in the West Bank in 2021, all by live ammunition.<sup>1</sup> In one such recent example, on 15 August, five Palestinians were killed by Israeli forces during search-and-arrest operations in the Jenin refugee camp. They were reportedly killed following an armed clash between Palestinians and an Israeli undercover unit, which entered the camp to arrest a Palestinian reportedly affiliated with Hamas.<sup>2</sup> On 28 July, an 11-year-old boy was killed in Bayt Ummar. He was in a car that was slowly driving away from soldiers when some of them started running after the vehicle and opened fire. At his funeral, held on 29 July, during protests against his killing, Palestinians threw stones and Israeli forces opened fire, shooting and killing another Palestinian man.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> See United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Protection of civilians: Occupied Palestinian Territory", 10–23 August 2021 (as at 27 August).

<sup>2</sup> Ibid.

8. Many incidents of killing and injuries to Palestinians occurred as a result of demonstrations and clashes between demonstrators and security forces, many of which were held to protest against settlements and settlement expansion. On 6 August, for example, during a demonstration in Bayta, Palestinians threw stones at Israeli forces, who fired live ammunition, rubber bullets and canisters of tear gas, killing a Palestinian man.<sup>4</sup>

9. Palestinian journalists who report on human rights violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory faced harassment and violence in an attempt to intimidate them and prevent media coverage of peaceful Palestinian protests. On 27 August 2021, Israeli security forces arrested seven Palestinian journalists who were covering a peaceful demonstration against the establishment of new outposts and violence by settlers in the southern hills of Hebron. The journalists were arrested and their equipment confiscated when they headed to their cars shortly after the protest ended, although they identified themselves as journalists to the soldiers. They were handcuffed, left to sit in the scorching sun for an hour, and later taken to the Qiryat Arba' police station, where they were interrogated. Two of the journalists claimed that they were attacked and beaten by the soldiers during the arrest.<sup>5</sup>

B. Gaza

10. During the 11-day escalation of hostilities in Gaza in May 2021, 260 Palestinians were killed, including 66 children. A total of 129 of those were killed were civilians. More than 2,200 Palestinians were injured during the hostilities, including 685 children and 480 women, some of whom may suffer a long-term disability requiring rehabilitation.<sup>6</sup> The escalation in hostilities resulted in 113,000 internally displaced persons seeking shelter and protection at schools run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) or with families.<sup>7</sup> During the escalation of hostilities, 290 water, sanitation and hygiene facilities were damaged or destroyed, including water wells, water pumping stations and distribution networks.<sup>8</sup> As of July 2021, most electricity lines had been reconnected and supplies of Qatari-funded fuel entered Gaza again, resulting in the availability of electricity for an average of 14 hours per day across Gaza.<sup>9</sup>

11. In August 2021, demonstrations resumed along the Gaza fence and were met with force by Israel. On 21 August, a “day of rage” was announced and hundreds of Palestinians held a mass demonstration at the Gaza perimeter fence. During the protest, demonstrators hurled stones and other objects towards Israeli forces while Israeli forces fired live ammunition and canisters of tear gas. Another demonstration followed on 23 August. A 31-year-old man and a 12-year-old child were killed by Israeli fire in these demonstrations and more than 100 Palestinians were injured.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>3</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians: Occupied Palestinian Territory”, 27 July–9 August 2021.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid.

<sup>5</sup> Human Rights Defenders Fund update, 30 August 2021 (on file).

<sup>6</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 8”, 8–28 July 2021.

<sup>7</sup> Ibid.

<sup>8</sup> WASH Cluster–State of Palestine, “Gaza WASH sector damage assessment”, 28 June 2021.

<sup>9</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 8”.

<sup>10</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 9”, August 2021.

12. Gaza humanitarian aid worker Mohammad el-Halabi, who was accused of diverting funds from World Vision International to armed groups, continues to be detained by the Israeli authorities. His trial concluded in August and his verdict is pending from the District Court. The prosecution relied on secret evidence and did not initially allow him access to a lawyer. On numerous occasions, Mr. el-Halabi was reportedly pressured to accept a plea bargain in exchange for a mitigated list of charges and a lenient sentence, which he repeatedly rejected. According to information received, heavy restrictions were imposed on his defence lawyer, the decision of the Court regarding the admissibility of the reported confession extracted under duress was classified and the Court held all hearings behind closed doors. The Special Rapporteur reiterates his concern that Mr. el-Halabi was not granted a fair trial (A/HRC/47/57, para. 17),<sup>11</sup> and calls on Israel to immediately release him.

C. Freedom of movement

13. Restrictions on freedom of movement continued throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory as a method for Israel to enforce its regime of occupation. Restrictions were imposed on the movement of Palestinians between the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and with regard to travelling abroad. Some 593 Israeli checkpoints and roadblocks continue to effectively obstruct Palestinians' access to rights and services, including health, education and work. In addition, Palestinians in the West Bank are barred from using roads built for Israeli settlers.<sup>12</sup> Those who attempt to cross checkpoints are routinely harassed and obstructed, severely hindering their freedom of movement. For example, on 5 July 2021, two Palestinian women travelled from a medical appointment to one of their homes in Hebron. Some 200 meters before they reached the woman's house, the two were stopped and Israeli border police refused to open the gate and let them through. While they were held at the checkpoint, settlers came and attacked one of the women, who was later taken to the hospital to treat her injuries. The Israeli border patrol reportedly did not intervene during this incident.<sup>13</sup> This incident is indicative of the situation in Hebron in particular, which is littered with checkpoints, severely restricting the movement of Palestinians, and in the West Bank more generally.

14. Palestinians were also killed and injured in incidents involving checkpoints and roadblocks. In a particularly egregious incident, on the night of 6 April 2021, Israeli security forces erected a temporary checkpoint between Bi'r Nabala and Al-Jib north of Jerusalem. At the checkpoint, security forces stopped the car of a Palestinian couple, parents of five children, who were driving home from a medical appointment. Soldiers opened fire at the car when the couple drove away, resulting in the death of the man and the wounding of his wife.<sup>14</sup> According to B'Tselem, the Israeli security forces announced the launch of a military police investigation into the incident. However, given the widespread impunity surrounding similar incidents, human rights organizations expressed concerns over a similar outcome in this case.<sup>15</sup>

<sup>11</sup> See also Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, "Gaza aid worker must be given fair trial or released, say UN experts", 12 November 2020.

<sup>12</sup> Amnesty International, Amnesty International Report 2020/21: The State of the World's Human Rights (London, 2021).

<sup>13</sup> B'Tselem, "Border police and settlers attack family in Hebron during argument over crossing a checkpoint, arrest member and demand he not complain against a settler in exchange for releasing him", 8 August 2021.

<sup>14</sup> B'Tselem, "Not an attack or a car-ramming: soldiers at checkpoint shoot and injure Palestinian parents of five, killing father", 27 April 2021.

<sup>15</sup> Ibid.

15. The ability of Palestinians to leave the Gaza Strip continued to be severely impaired, and to a much greater degree following the escalation of hostilities in May 2021. In early July, more than six weeks after the ceasefire, Israel continued to severely restrict travel to and from Gaza through the Erez crossing point.<sup>16</sup> Measures relating to COVID-19 also contributed to enhanced restrictions. In March 2020, Israel announced that it would further reduce the already small number of people granted permits to leave Gaza for medical purposes. As the pandemic progressed, Israel removed some of the movement restrictions imposed on the West Bank (allowing Palestinians work permits to enter Israel, for example), however, the restrictions imposed on Gaza largely remained.<sup>17</sup> The Palestinian Authority's cessation of security coordination with Israel in May 2020, in response to the intention of Israel to annex parts of the West Bank, also contributed to further restrictions. As a result, applications for permits dropped and in March 2021, for example, traffic at the Erez crossing point was significantly reduced to some 6 per cent of its volume in previous months.<sup>18</sup> In May 2021, 1,000 people were recorded leaving the Gaza Strip; the lowest number of exits in the entire year.<sup>19</sup> While it has been reported that the Israeli authorities have eased some movement restrictions for Palestinian patients since the ceasefire, two of every three patients who apply for such permits are not approved by the time of their scheduled appointment.<sup>20</sup>

D. Settler violence

16. Despite the election of a new Government in Israel in June 2021, which includes more “centrist” politicians – some of whom have spoken out in the past against the settlements enterprise<sup>21</sup> – the expansion of settlements has continued, and settler violence has shown no signs of abating. Increasingly egregious cases have been documented in 2021, as well as cases involving active support and collaboration between settlers and Israeli security forces. As at 24 September 2021, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs had documented 246 incidents of settler violence resulting in property damage and 93 incidents resulting in injuries.<sup>22</sup> Violence is predominantly ideologically motivated and designed to deny access of Palestinians to their land and to terrorize them. Besides physical violence against Palestinians, many incidents involve targeting the livelihoods of Palestinians in rural areas, including by vandalizing livestock, agricultural lands, trees and homes.<sup>23</sup>

17. In one particularly heinous incident that took place on 17 August 2021, settlers reportedly struck a 15-year-old boy with their vehicle near Silat ad-Dhahr village on the Nablus-Jenin road, kidnapped him and transported him to the previously evacuated Israeli settlement Homesh, tied him to a tree and beat him and inflicted burns on his feet until he lost consciousness. An Israeli military jeep found the boy

<sup>16</sup> Gisha, “Israel’s restrictions at Gaza crossings are impairing civilian infrastructure, crushing the economy, and violating human rights”, 12 July 2021.

<sup>17</sup> B’Tselem, “Since pandemic, has Israel allowed almost no Palestinians out of Gaza for medical treatment”, 3 May 2021.

<sup>18</sup> Ibid.

<sup>19</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Gaza Crossings database. Available at www.ochaopt.org/data/crossings.

<sup>20</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Response to the escalation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: situation report No. 8”.

<sup>21</sup> For example, see Walla News, “Michaeli v. Yachimovich: there is nothing more to build in the settlements”, 23 December 2012. Available at <https://news.walla.co.il/item/2599418>. In Hebrew.

<sup>22</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Protection of civilians: Occupied Palestinian Territory”, 7–20 September 2021.

<sup>23</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), “Israel/OPT: UN experts warn of rising levels of Israeli settler violence in a climate of impunity”, 14 April 2021.

two hours later and handed him over to an ambulance. The boy was taken to the hospital, where he was treated for contusions and burns. He continues to suffer from serious psychological trauma.<sup>24</sup>

18. Several incidents have been documented of Israeli security forces actively assisting settlers in their attacks. According to B'Tselem, in two separate incidents on 14 May 2021, settlers and soldiers raided two villages, Urif and Iskaka. The settlers, some of whom were armed, threw stones at homes and local residents. Settlers and soldiers jointly opened fire, injuring a total of 12 Palestinians and killing 2.<sup>25</sup>

19. The atmosphere of impunity surrounding attacks by settlers is deeply concerning and sends an affirmation to settlers that there will be no consequences for their illegal and egregious acts against Palestinians. Israeli human rights non-governmental organization Yesh Din analysed 63 incidents of settler violence that took place between 2017 and 2020, including violent offences, property damage and the desecration of mosques. While police complaints were filed in 60 of the incidents, the police concluded its investigations in 38 incidents. No indictments were filed in any of the incidents.<sup>26</sup> Settler violence has an inescapable impact on Palestinians' lives in the West Bank, creating a lingering sense of terror and intimidation.

E. Palestinian Authority and the de facto authorities in Gaza

20. On 24 June 2021, the long-time critic of the Palestinian Authority, Nizar Banat, died in the custody of Palestinian security forces. Since the killing of Mr. Banat in late June, protests have taken place in Hebron, Bethlehem and Ramallah and have been met with excessive force by Palestinian security forces, whether deployed in their regular uniforms or in civilian clothes.<sup>27</sup> On 21 August 2021 in Ramallah, Palestinian security forces arrested 23 Palestinians on the grounds that they were holding a public protest. Those arrested were part of a protest demanding the prosecution of those responsible for the killing of Nizar Banat in June. The majority of those arrested were detained before any protest had started. The planned protest had been reported in advance to authorities as required by law.<sup>28</sup> More arrests appear to be taking place. Most have been charged with participating in an illegal gathering, inciting sectarian strife and the defamation of the higher authorities. Several of those arrested are well-known human rights defenders and political activists. The arrests sparked a wave of condemnation from the United Nations, the European Union and human rights organizations, which warned against a dangerous decline in rights and public freedoms. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the obligation to respect, protect and fulfil human rights rests with the competent authority exercising power. Notwithstanding a harsh occupation by Israel, Palestinian civil society has every right to demand that its own political and security leaders live up to their solemn promises to abide by international human rights commitments.

21. Anger was also fuelled by the decision to indefinitely postpone elections that were scheduled for May and July 2021, and would have been the first Palestinian elections in 15 years.<sup>29</sup> The President of the State of Palestine, Mahmoud Abbas, announced the indefinite postponement of the elections on 29 April 2021, owing to

<sup>24</sup> Gideon Levy and Alex Levac, "Shackled, beaten, strung up on a tree: Palestinian teen brutally attacked by settlers", Haaretz, 26 August 2021.

<sup>25</sup> B'Tselem, "May 2021: two Palestinians were fatally shot in two joint attacks by settlers and soldiers in the villages of Iskaka and Urif – Awad Harb and Nidal Safadi", 24 August 2021.

<sup>26</sup> Yesh Din, "Settler crime and violence inside Palestinian communities, 2017–2020", May 2021.

<sup>27</sup> OHCHR, "Occupied Palestinian Territory: attacks against critics must stop, those responsible arrested – UN experts", 6 July 2021.

<sup>28</sup> Amira Hass, "The Palestinian authority is quashing legal protests – again", Haaretz, 22 August 2021.

<sup>29</sup> Al-Jazeera, "UN, EU condemn Palestinian authority over activist arrests", 24 August 2021.

concerns about Palestinians' ability to vote in East Jerusalem. The Special Rapporteur has noted that the Palestinian elections present an opportunity to renew the democratic process, to address long-standing internal political divisions, to strengthen accountable institutions and to take an important step towards achieving the fundamental national and individual rights of the Palestinian people. For the elections to take place, it is important for Israel to clearly state that it will allow the full democratic participation of Palestinians in East Jerusalem. As the occupying power in East Jerusalem, it must interfere as little as possible with the rights and daily lives of the Palestinians.<sup>30</sup>

22. On 22 July, an explosion took place in a three-story building in a popular market in the Al Zawiya area. It killed a 68-year-old man and injured 14 others, including 6 children. The de facto authorities' follow-up committee announced that they had instructed the Ministry of Interior to investigate the matter. A number of human rights organizations have called for a prompt investigation into the incident and expressed concerns regarding an increase in explosions in residential areas causing harm to civilians.<sup>31</sup> As of the time of writing, the investigation is still ongoing.

III. Responsibility and performance of international actors

23. The international community – and particularly, but not only, the United Nations – has long accepted that it bears a special responsibility for supervising the question of Palestine, fully ending the Israeli occupation, realizing Palestinian self-determination and ensuring that all issues related to the conflict are brought to a just and durable resolution.<sup>32</sup> These issues have understandably taken on an immense political, legal and popular resonance, which ripples well beyond the Levant. Kofi Annan, the former Secretary-General of the United Nations, recalled in his memoirs that: “The Israeli-Palestinian conflict is not simply one unresolved problem among many. No other issue carries such a powerful symbolic and emotional charge affecting people far from the zone of conflict.”<sup>33</sup>

24. It was the United Nations that voted to partition Palestine and enable the creation of the State of Israel,<sup>34</sup> cared for millions of Palestinian refugees for seven decades,<sup>35</sup> established multiple peacekeeping missions in the region<sup>36</sup> and closely monitored the ongoing conflict and occupation through the issuance of hundreds of resolutions and myriad reports.<sup>37</sup> The international community has been intimately engaged in the conflict through numerous diplomatic ceasefire and peace initiatives, massive arms sales and significant quantities of aid, trade, grants and investment. This has long been the most widely documented and reported conflict zone in the world. Whenever the conflict between Israelis and Arabs over the Palestine question has reached an acute stage, the United Nations has served as the diplomatic cockpit to

<sup>30</sup> OHCHR, “Palestinian election: free, fair, democratic and credible vote must include East Jerusalem – UN experts”, 26 July 2021.

<sup>31</sup> Al Mezan Center for Human Rights, “Al Mezan calls for investigation into house explosion in Gaza that killed one person and injured 14 others”, 22 July 2021.

<sup>32</sup> See General Assembly resolution 75/23 (“Reaffirming that the United Nations has a permanent responsibility towards the question of Palestine”).

<sup>33</sup> Kofi Annan, Interventions: A Life in War and Peace (New York, Penguin Books, 2012), p. 254.

<sup>34</sup> See General Assembly resolution 181 \(II\). See, generally, Avi Shlaim, The Iron Wall: Israel and the Arab World, 2nd ed. (New York, Norton, 2014).

<sup>35</sup> Francesca P. Albanese and Lex Takkenberg, Palestinian Refugees in International Law, 2nd ed. (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2020).

<sup>36</sup> Karim Makdisi and Vijay Prashad, eds., Land of Blue Helmets: The United Nations and the Arab World (Oakland, University of California Press, 2017).

<sup>37</sup> Ardi Imseis, The United Nations and the Question of Palestine: A Study in International Legal Subalternity (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, forthcoming).

address the crisis. The conflict has become, in many ways, the most international of international conflicts, and it will almost certainly remain at or near the top of the international community's political agenda until peace with justice has been accomplished.

25. Given this special responsibility of the international community, how can we assess its actual performance in seeking to successfully end the Israeli occupation? This is especially important given the occupation's inordinate length – it is the longest occupation in the modern era – and the fact that leading international actors appear resigned to the fact that the end of the occupation is nowhere in sight, and that they have run out of ideas and energy on how to challenge the strategic patience of Israel and enable genuine Palestinian self-determination.

26. In his report dated 21 October 2019 (A/74/507), the Special Rapporteur addressed the issue of international accountability obligations, pointing to the legal and political duties under the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts adopted in 2001 and Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations. In his report dated 22 October 2020 (A/75/532), the Special Rapporteur critically reviewed the role of the Security Council in supervising the occupation, pointing out that the Council had failed to impose any meaningful costs on Israel for deepening its occupation of Palestine in defiance of its own resolutions and international law. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur examines the role of four international actors, the United States of America, the European Union, the World Bank and the Quartet, which have played various influential roles as mediators, funders, facilitators and/or supervisors during part or all of the Madrid-Oslo process overseeing the Israeli occupation.

A. International responsibility for the deepening occupation

27. In recent years, the now 54-year-old Israeli occupation of Palestine – always repressive, always acquisitive – has been metastasizing into something much harsher and more entrenched: the permanent alien rule of one people over another, encased in a two-tiered system of unequal laws and political rights. More than 680,000 Israeli settlers living in segregated and privileged settlements amid 5 million stateless Palestinians; asymmetrical wars; geographic fragmentation; a smothered and heavily aid-dependent economy; separate networks of roads and utilities; impoverished and fenced-in ghettos unique in the modern world; a coercive environment; the growing amount of violence required to maintain the occupation; the denial of self-determination; the deeply lopsided access to property and to social, health and employment rights. All of this based entirely on nationality and ethnicity.<sup>38</sup> All of this should be unthinkable in the twenty-first century.

28. Legal scholars, including Israeli academics, have confirmed that, under international law: (a) an occupation must be short-term and temporary; (b) an occupation must be strictly conducted in good faith and for the best interests of the population under occupation; (c) the occupying power acquires absolutely no right to settle any of its civilian population in, or to annex any part of, the occupied territory; and (d) the territory must be returned in toto to the sovereign – the people under occupation – as soon as reasonably possible.<sup>39</sup> Israel is in long-standing breach of all of these foundational principles, with its occupation having crossed a bright red line into illegality under international law (see A/72/556).<sup>40</sup>

<sup>38</sup> See the recent reports of Al-Haq, B'Tselem, Human Rights Watch, Amnesty International and the West Bank Protection Consortium.

29. However, the international community has been perplexingly unwilling to meaningfully challenge, let alone act decisively to reverse, the momentous changes that Israel has been generating on the ground. This is a political failure of the first order. This very same international community – speaking through the principal political and legal organs of the United Nations – has established the widely accepted and detailed rights-based framework for the supervision and resolution of the Israeli occupation of Palestine.<sup>41</sup> Accordingly, the protracted Israeli occupation must fully end.<sup>42</sup> Both the Palestinians and Israelis are entitled to live in peace and security and enjoy the right to self-determination, including sovereign, secure and viable States, within the boundaries of Mandate Palestine, based on the 1967 border.<sup>43</sup> Annexation of occupied territory is illegal.<sup>44</sup> All of the more than 280 Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem and the West Bank are flagrant violations of international law.<sup>45</sup> East Jerusalem has been illegally annexed by Israel and remains occupied territory.<sup>46</sup> The Palestinian refugees from the 1948 and 1967 wars have the right to choose to return to their homeland.<sup>47</sup> Gaza is an integral part of Palestine, it remains occupied, and the Israeli blockade is a prohibited form of collective punishment.<sup>48</sup> The political and legal duty of accountability means that the international community bears the responsibility of challenging and vanquishing serious violations of international law and human rights,<sup>49</sup> for which it possesses abundant political and legal powers to sanction violators until they have complied with their obligations.<sup>50</sup>

30. Insisting upon international law and a rights-based framework as the basis for supervising and ending the Israeli occupation, and for the creation of a just and durable resolution for Palestinians and Israelis alike, is neither a flight from reality nor an inflexible impediment to engaged diplomacy. Rather, such a framework establishes the clear political boundaries for permissible and impermissible behaviour that all States and international actors – large and small, strong and weak, democratic and authoritarian – have committed themselves to follow through their ratification of

<sup>39</sup> Orna Ben-Naftali, Michael Sfard and Hedi Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT: A Legal Lexicon of the Israeli Control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, 2018); and Aeyal Gross, The Writing on the Wall: Rethinking the International Law of Occupation (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, 2017).

<sup>40</sup> See also Ardi Imseis, “Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967–2020”, European Journal of International Law, vol. 31, No. 3 (August 2020).

<sup>41</sup> Kofi Annan stated in 2002: “There is no conflict in the world today whose solution is so clear, so widely agreed upon, and so necessary to world peace as the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.” See UN News, “At Arab summit, Annan urges Sharon, Arafat to lead their peoples ‘back from brink’”, 27 March 2002.

<sup>42</sup> Security Council resolution 476 (1980) (“Reaffirms the overriding necessity for ending the prolonged occupation of Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem”).

<sup>43</sup> Security Council resolution 1850 (2008).

<sup>44</sup> Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>45</sup> Ibid.

<sup>46</sup> Ibid.

<sup>47</sup> General Assembly resolutions 73/92 and 73/93.

<sup>48</sup> Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). See also Ban Ki-Moon, Secretary-General of the United Nations, remarks at a press encounter, 28 June 2016.

<sup>49</sup> See General Assembly resolution 56/83, annex (Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, arts. 40 and 41). See also James Crawford, State Responsibility: The General Part (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, 2013).

<sup>50</sup> Jeremy Matam Farrall, United Nations Sanctions and the Rule of Law (Cambridge, United Kingdom, Cambridge University Press, 2009); and International Committee of the Red Cross, “Geneva Conventions of 1949 and Additional Protocols and their Commentaries”, Customary IHL database, available at <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/applic/ihl/ihl.nsf/vwTreaties1949.xsp>.

modern treaties, conventions and covenants, and their membership in the United Nations.<sup>51</sup> Obeying international law is not only a duty among international actors but has actually been a widespread practice among States, demonstrated by the flow of international investment and trade, the respect for borders and sovereignty, the proliferation of international institutions that monitor compliance and promote cooperation and the regulation of such ordinary features of daily life as travel, mail, custody rights and technology.<sup>52</sup>

31. Regarding the occupation of Palestine, among the clear advantages for the international community to demand the compliance of Israel with international legal obligations are the following:

(a) First, it would level out some of the vast disparities in power between Israel and the Palestinians that have plagued the entire peace process, and thereby make the realization of a lasting and equitable agreement more likely;<sup>53</sup>

(b) Second, it would provide well-defined ground rules as to what is legitimately negotiable (such as trade, security, labour migration and equitable adjustments to the 1967 lines) and what is not (such as the retention of settlements, the continuation of annexation and the abuse of sovereignty), in accordance with the long-standing legal principle of ex turpi causa non oritur actio;<sup>54</sup>

(c) Third, it would enhance the chances that an agreement to end the occupation and create a final peace would endure, given that the rules-based international order would provide both predictability and accountability mechanisms in addressing any subsequent difficulties;

(d) Fourth, it would clearly signal to future would-be abusive occupiers that the international community will not accept “no-go zones” for human rights, humanitarian and criminal law. In the modern world, international law cannot be treated as a menu à la carte, with the choice to decide what to obey and what to scorn.

32. Regrettably, the international community’s remarkable tolerance for Israeli exceptionalism in its conduct of the occupation has allowed realpolitik to trump rights, power to supplant justice and impunity to undercut accountability. This has been the conspicuous thread throughout the Madrid-Oslo peace process, which began in 1991. Israel, with little resistance from major international actors, has been able to successfully insist that negotiations with the Palestinians are to be conducted outside of the framework of applicable international law and the prevailing international consensus,<sup>55</sup> notwithstanding the imperatives of the rules-based international order. This has enabled Israel to maintain an obdurate bargaining stance, with the endgame of formalizing its claims to East Jerusalem and to most, if not all, of its West Bank settlements, while acquiescing to a Potemkin statelet for the Palestinians that would enjoy neither meaningful territory nor sovereignty.<sup>56</sup> For the international community, this has created a troubling paradox: while there is no conflict zone in the world where the United Nations has pronounced with as much frequency and detail on the framework for conflict resolution, this framework has rarely informed the various

<sup>51</sup> Zaha Hassan and others, “Breaking the Israel-Palestine status quo”, 2021.

<sup>52</sup> Harold Hongju Koh, “Why do nations obey international law?”, Yale Law Journal, vol. 106, No. 8 (1997).

<sup>53</sup> Susan Akram and others, eds., International Law and the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict: A Rights-Based Approach to Middle East Peace (London, Routledge, 2011).

<sup>54</sup> Rights cannot arise from illegal acts.

<sup>55</sup> Khaled Elgindy, Blind Spot: America and the Palestinians from Balfour to Trump (Washington, D.C., Brookings Institution, 2019).

<sup>56</sup> Seth Anziska, Preventing Palestine: A Political History from Camp David to Oslo (Princeton, New Jersey, Princeton University Press, 2018); and Jeremy Sharon, “Netanyahu calls for Palestinian ‘state-minus’”, The Jerusalem Post, 24 October 2018.

Oslo-related peace process initiatives – including the 1993 Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements, the 1995 Oslo II agreement, the 2000 Camp David negotiations, the 2001 Clinton parameters, the 2003 Quartet principles, the 2007 Annapolis formula, the 2013/14 Kerry initiative and the 2020 Trump Peace to Prosperity plan – that have successively collapsed in the absence of any sturdy legal scaffolding and political will to sustain a rights-based resolution.

33. The cost of the international community's failure to insist upon its own rights-based framework and to enforce its many resolutions has been the evaporation of what lingering possibilities remain for a genuine two-State solution. In its place has emerged what the European Union has acknowledged to be a one-State reality of unequal rights,<sup>57</sup> and what regional and international human rights groups have declared to be apartheid.<sup>58</sup> The Security Council warned in 2016 that Israeli settlement activities were dangerously imperilling the viability of the two-State solution based on the 1967 lines.<sup>59</sup> Former Secretary-General Ban Ki-Moon stated in June 2021 that: "Israel has pursued a policy of incremental de facto annexation in the territories it has occupied since 1967, to the point where the prospect of a two-State solution has all but vanished."<sup>60</sup> The minimalist pink lines that the international community has drawn for Israel – no further de jure annexations, no new settlements, no destruction of Palestinian communities – have hardly slowed down the growth of its settler population, the expansion of its transportation and utility infrastructure linking the settlements, its hermetic sealing of Gaza or the regularity of declarations by many in its political leadership that East Jerusalem and the West Bank belong to Israel by right and will never be yielded. The ritual avowals by major international actors that they remain committed to a two-State solution have become a diplomatic pantomime, a cover for paralysis rather than a declaration of resolve, which is occurring with everyone's eyes wide open about the dynamic reality on the ground.

34. The political trends during the summer of 2021 have been dispiriting, if unsurprising. The new Prime Minister of Israel, Naftali Bennett, expressly stated in September that he opposed the creation of a Palestinian State.<sup>61</sup> The Israeli Minister for Defence, Benny Gantz, said that peace negotiations were impossible because of the Palestinian Authority's opposition to Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem and the West Bank: "We're not taking down settlements."<sup>62</sup> The new Israeli Minister for Foreign Affairs, Yair Lapid, told a meeting of European Union foreign ministers in July that there was no present prospect for a peace process.<sup>63</sup> None of this has been receiving serious international pushback.<sup>64</sup> Instead, with the apparent blessing of

<sup>57</sup> Barak Ravid, "EU foreign policy chief: Israel's land-grab law entrenches one-State reality of unequal rights", Haaretz, 7 February 2017.

<sup>58</sup> Human Rights Watch, A Threshold Crossed: Israeli Authorities and the Crimes of Apartheid and Persecution (2021); Susan Power, "The legal architecture of apartheid", Al-Haq, 12 April 2021; and B'Tselem, "A regime of Jewish supremacy from the Jordan River to the Mediterranean Sea: this is apartheid", January 2021.

<sup>59</sup> Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>60</sup> Ban Ki-Moon, "US should back a new approach to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict", The Financial Times, 29 June 2021.

<sup>61</sup> "I oppose a Palestinian state. I think it would be a terrible mistake that would take the terrible situation in Gaza and recreate it in Judea and Samaria." See Tovah Lazaroff, "Palestinian statehood would be a 'terrible mistake' – Bennett", The Jerusalem Post, 15 September 2021.

<sup>62</sup> Neri Zilber, "Israel can live with a new Iran nuclear deal, Defense Minister says", Foreign Policy, 14 September 2021.

<sup>63</sup> Jonathan Lis, "Israel's Lapid to EU's top diplomats: two-state solution is unfeasible", Haaretz, 12 July 2021.

<sup>64</sup> Anshel Pfeffer, "Israel's Prime Minister now pretends the Palestinians don't exist. It's a brilliant move", Haaretz, 30 September 2021. ("In the past three and a half months since he became prime minister, Bennett has noticed how seldom the Palestinian issue came up in his conversations with foreign leaders and how half-hearted they sounded when they did bring it up.")

major international actors,<sup>65</sup> the focus of the new Government is to “shrink the conflict”<sup>66</sup> and remove some existing irritants for the Palestinians, such as allowing the construction of a modest number of Palestinian homes in Area C, increasing the number of Palestinians allowed to work in Israel and creating more advanced mobile phone networks.<sup>67</sup> Such an economic peace is understood by Israeli political leaders not as a path to genuine Palestinian statehood<sup>68</sup> but as a substitute in order to sustain the status quo.<sup>69</sup> Mairav Zonszein of the International Crisis Group has remarked that: “You can’t have economic peace or stability under occupation, because occupation prioritizes Israeli interests, resources and expansionism over all else.”<sup>70</sup>

35. The present report is focused on the effectiveness of four of the influential international actors involved in the Middle East process and the supervision of the Israeli occupation. The purpose of focusing on the United States, the European Union, the World Bank and the Quartet is to assess whether they have been assiduously advancing, or effectively retarding, the stated goal of the international community to end the occupation, enable Palestinian self-determination and provide peace, security and a prosperous and shared future for both Israelis and Palestinians.

36. To assess their effectiveness, the Special Rapporteur is proposing five foundational criteria to measure the role of these leading actors. These criteria are important to emphasize, because they go to the heart of the disparate relationship between Israel and Palestine. Any efforts by the international community, collectively or individually, to create a framework for supervising and ending the occupation that does not place these criteria at or near the core of its endeavours will almost certainly crash upon the shoals of Middle East realism:

(a) Because of the vast asymmetry in power between Israel and the Palestinians, active international intervention is indispensable. Militarily, Israel has the strongest armed forces in the region. Economically, Israel enjoys a European-level gross domestic product per capita that is 12 times higher than that of the Palestinians. Diplomatically, Israel relies upon the enduring support of major international actors. Territorially, Israel enjoys complete military freedom of action between the Mediterranean Sea and the Jordan River. Only on demography do the Palestinians have the edge: they now constitute a slight majority of the population between the Mediterranean Sea and the Jordan River. Without active and decisive international accountability measures to counter the abuse of this overwhelming power, the vast advantages of Israel will continue to dictate what happens on the ground and at any negotiating table;

(b) The framework for fully ending the occupation must employ a rights-based approach, anchored in international law and human rights. Yesterday’s

<sup>65</sup> President of the United States Joseph Biden, in remarks before the seventy-sixth session of the General Assembly on 21 September 2021, said that he continues to believe in a two-State solution, but “we’re a long way from that goal at the moment”.

<sup>66</sup> Patrick Kingsley, “‘Shrinking the conflict’: what does Israel’s new mantra really mean?”, The New York Times, 30 September 2021.

<sup>67</sup> Adam Rasgon, “In reversal, Israel’s new government engages with Palestinian authority”, The New York Times, 25 September 2021.

<sup>68</sup> After expressing his opposition to a Palestinian state, Prime Minister Bennett added that: “My outlook is a very business-like one. If we create more business, strengthen the economy and improve living conditions for everyone in Judea and Samaria, that would be better.” See Lazaroff, “Palestinian statehood would be a ‘terrible mistake’ – Bennett”.

<sup>69</sup> In reporting on this new approach by the Israeli government, the New York Times noted that: “Even as the Israeli government takes steps to improve the Palestinian economy and security, it has pledged to continue expanding settlements in the West Bank. It has also continued to demolish Palestinian homes built without permits in areas where permits are rarely issued, and to use a heavy hand against Palestinians at protests and clashes.” See Rasgon, “In reversal”.

<sup>70</sup> Kingsley, “‘Shrinking the conflict’”.

peace process playbook – relying on the realpolitik of Israeli “facts on the ground”, Palestinian weakness and the absence of law – has only led to repeated diplomatic cul-de-sacs, while enabling the patterns of human rights abuses and an endless occupation to continue largely unimpeded.<sup>71</sup> Ignoring the established international framework on occupation and rights only accelerates this downward trajectory.<sup>72</sup> Only a rights-based approach can engage the considerable tools of accountability and the already widely endorsed body of international law, including human rights and humanitarian law, to end impunity and advance the interests of both Palestinians and Israelis;

(c) The end goal must be the realization of Palestinian self-determination. Israel already exists, and has since 1948. The missing key to enduring peace has always been the denial of Palestinian self-determination.<sup>73</sup> But the de facto and de jure annexation of occupied territory by Israel, primarily led by the relentless expansion of its settlements, has undercut any meaningful exercise of self-determination on what remains of Palestinian land. Self-determination is at the heart of modern human rights, and it is the sine qua non for a just and final peace. Palestinian self-determination must be based on the 1967 borders and the realization of authentic sovereignty if a genuine two-State solution remains a possibility. If not, then self-determination must be centred on individual and collective equality rights for all those living between the Mediterranean Sea and the Jordan River;

(d) Israel is a bad-faith occupier. This is the inescapable conclusion from the way it has conducted its 54-year occupation of the Palestinian territory. Its non-compliance with hundreds of United Nations resolutions from the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council regarding the occupation, and its refusal to apply the Fourth Geneva Convention, is not an honest policy difference with the world but a sustained show of defiance meant to preserve the fruits of its conquest. To assume that Israel is a responsible occupier, whose intentions are marred only by an errant and unfortunate policy towards the Palestinians, is to indulge in the magical thinking that has led to the past diplomatic failures;

(e) The occupation must end with all deliberate speed. Occupations are designed by international law to be temporary: to last only for the period of time necessary for the occupying power to re-establish State and social institutions and civic life in the occupied territory and for the territory to then be returned to the displaced sovereign (the people under occupation).<sup>74</sup> Alien rule in the twenty-first century can only be justified in exceptional and highly conditioned circumstances. Modern international law and effective international statecraft do not tolerate an indeterminate point in time for when injustice will end, particularly with regard to an avaricious occupation that long ago slipped the restraining bonds of legitimacy.

<sup>71</sup> “Editorial: Israel’s final warning from the ICC”, Ha’aretz, 22 December 2019. (“Even harder to understand is the claim that the issue of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict must be left for dialogue and negotiations and the legal process will only harm it, while it is clear to all that there is no such process on the table because the Israeli government is not interested in it.”)

<sup>72</sup> Dimitris Bouris and Nathan J. Brown, “The Middle East Quartet’s quest for relevance”, Carnegie Europe, 20 July 2016.

<sup>73</sup> General Assembly resolution 75/172.

<sup>74</sup> Security Council resolution 1483 (2003), which welcomed the commitment of the powers occupying Iraq to restore sovereignty to the people of Iraq “as soon as possible”, and that it “must come quickly”. See also General Assembly resolution 75/172 (“Stressing the urgency of achieving without delay an end to the Israeli occupation”).

B. The four international actors

United States of America

37. The United States has played an outsized role in the Middle East peace process over the past 50 years, leading virtually every significant international peace initiative, while at the same time delivering enormous amounts of cutting-edge military aid to Israel and acting as that country's diplomatic patron at the United Nations and other international forums. This two-hatted role of the United States in the peace process has been an overriding reason why the Israeli occupation stays intact and the quest for Palestinian self-determination remains unfulfilled. Kofi Annan spoke of the "unhealthy possessiveness" that the United States has had over the peace process, and its "reluctance to share it meaningfully with others".<sup>75</sup> Ban Ki-Moon has lamented the "political cover provided by successive [United States] governments to Israel", which is "partly to blame for this lack of accountability".<sup>76</sup> In many ways, the role of the United States in defending Israel has been to give permission for the Israeli occupation to continue, while tarnishing the global reputation of the United States. In his memoirs, former President of the United States Barack Obama observed that the shielding by the United States of Israeli violations of international law meant that: "Our diplomats found themselves in the awkward position of having to defend Israel for actions that we ourselves opposed."<sup>77</sup>

38. In May 2021, tensions in Jerusalem escalated over attempts by Israeli settlers to displace Palestinians from their homes, leading to rockets fired by Hamas at Israeli civilian targets and a disproportionate military response by Israel, culminating in 11 days of intense violence with heavy civilian casualties and property destruction in Gaza. The diplomatic role of the United States during this violence was discouragingly familiar: at the Security Council, it successively blocked both a draft resolution seeking a ceasefire and the issuance of a Council press statement, arguing that it would only alienate Israel.<sup>78</sup> This buffer allowed Israel to sustain its assault on Gaza until it had achieved most of its military goals, in the face of diplomatic and public opinion seeking to end the violence much earlier. Since the Israeli occupation began in June 1967, the United States has regularly allowed the Council to adopt resolutions critical of Israel – 77 in total – but it has also used its threat of a veto to thwart the ability of the Council – the most powerful international political forum – to enforce any of these resolutions. In addition, it has vetoed 32 resolutions critical of Israel since 1973.

39. The United States has developed an extraordinary military relationship with Israel, with its annual aid unmatched by any other bilateral relationship in the world. Since the early 1950s, it has delivered more than $100 billion dollars in military aid (along with $35 billion in economic aid).<sup>79</sup> Its military aid has enabled the Israeli armed forces to become one of the most technologically sophisticated militaries in the world. American aid has also allowed Israel to establish a major domestic defence industry, which has permitted it to become one of the world's leading exporters in arms and cybersecurity technology. Indeed, observers have noted that Israeli prowess as a major arms and cybersecurity exporter is due in considerable part to its weapons and security testing as an experienced occupier that regulates the lives of 5 million Palestinians.<sup>80</sup> This American military assistance is provided notwithstanding the fact

<sup>75</sup> Annan, Interventions, p. 290.

<sup>76</sup> Ban, "US should back a new approach".

<sup>77</sup> Barack Obama, A Promised Land (New York, Crown, 2020), p. 627.

<sup>78</sup> International Crisis Group, Beyond Business as Usual in Israel-Palestine, Middle East report No. 225 (Brussels, 2021).

<sup>79</sup> Congressional Research Service, United States, "US foreign aid to Israel", November 2020.

<sup>80</sup> Matt Kennard, "The cruel experiments of Israel's arms industry", Pulitzer Center, 28 December 2016).

that congressional laws governing weapons exports from the United States state that recipient countries cannot be engaged in consistent patterns of gross violations of human rights.<sup>81</sup> A recent poll of American public opinion indicated that a slim majority (50 per cent in favour to 45 per cent opposed) favoured restricting military aid to Israel in order to prevent it from being used in military operations against Palestinians.<sup>82</sup>

40. Given the sui generis relationship between the world's one superpower and a small regional power, one might ask, as Shibley Telhami, a professor at the University of Maryland, has: "If an American president cannot leverage this extraordinary and unprecedented support to advance core American values, what hope is there for succeeding anywhere else?"<sup>83</sup> The United States has played a fundamental role in the shaping of modern international law and the rules-based international order, yet it has stained that achievement by consistently excluding those things from the Israeli-Palestinian peace process. It regularly endorses the two-State solution, but it also insists that there must be no consequences for Israeli practices that have made that objective impossible. It proclaims human rights as a cornerstone of its foreign policy, but does not apply this yardstick to Israeli conduct. The disturbing reality in the Occupied Palestinian Territory is contrary to everything that the United States proclaims it stands for, yet its close identification with the Israeli occupation says otherwise.

European Union

41. In 1980, the then nine-member European Community issued its influential Venice Declaration, which endorsed the right of the Palestinian people to fully exercise their right to self-determination. In the early 1990s, the European Commission was an active participant in the Madrid-Oslo process, declaring that lasting peace between Israel and the Palestinians was of vital importance for Europe. Throughout the 1990s and 2000s, the European Union provided substantial political and economic support for the peace process (including significant funding to the Palestinian Authority), issued sometimes sharp criticisms of Israeli conduct and, beginning in 1999, promoted the creation of a democratic, viable and peaceful Palestinian State. However, as the European Union joined the Quartet and became part of its policies regarding the road map and the 2006 Palestinian elections, its policies and statements regarding the occupation became more cautious, even as its substantial levels of funding continued.<sup>84</sup>

42. Over the past decade, five features have dominated the approach of the European Union towards the Israeli occupation. First, it remains a substantial funder of the Palestinian Authority, UNRWA and other major organizations that provide capacity-building and social services in the occupied territory. Second, the European Union has maintained close political and economic relationships with Israel, even as points of tension have occasionally arisen. Israel is a member of several significant scientific and economic cooperation agreements initiated by the European Union, the European Union is its largest trading partner and several key members of the European Union are major weapons suppliers to Israel. Third, the European Union has developed a "differentiation" policy regarding the Israeli settlements in the occupied territory. This policy states that European Union agreements with Israel are inapplicable beyond the 1967 Green Line, while it has been left to individual member

<sup>81</sup> Josh Ruebner, Salih Booker and Zaha Hassan, "Bringing assistance to Israel in line with rights and U.S. laws", Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 12 May 2021.

<sup>82</sup> Chicago Council on Global Affairs, "Americans split on military aid to Israel, say political status quo unacceptable", 25 August 2021.

<sup>83</sup> Shibley Telhami, "Biden's bungled response on the Israel-Palestinian conflict", Boston Globe, 19 May 2021.

<sup>84</sup> Anders Persson, EU Diplomacy and the Israeli-Arab Conflict, 1967–2019 (Edinburgh University Press, 2020).

States to decide how to apply the differentiation policy in their bilateral relations with Israel. Fourth, in recent years, the European Union has spoken with an increasingly less united and softer voice on the Israeli occupation, as some member States from Eastern Europe have developed close relationships with Israel and a common European position on the occupation has become more difficult.<sup>85</sup> During the recent Israeli violence in Gaza in May 2021, the European Union acted largely as a bystander, unable to issue a common statement of the Council of the European Union because of its “unanimity rule”.

43. The fifth and most significant feature of contemporary European Union policy has been its aversion to employing its considerable economic and political clout to impose substantive costs on Israel for its failure to comply with its international obligations and fully end the occupation.<sup>86</sup> To its credit, the European Union’s diplomatic opposition to the de jure annexation plans made by Israel in 2020 contributed greatly to the shelving of the proposals of the Peace to Prosperity plan put forward by former President of the United States Donald Trump. This was an important defensive accomplishment, but it has done little to alter the thickening occupation and the reality of de facto annexation. Beyond this, however, the European Union has been largely risk-averse. Among its major agreements involving Israel is the European Union-Israel Association Agreement of 1995, which included human rights obligations and respect for common values, breaches of which would entitle the European Union to suspend the Agreement, but the European Union has taken no steps to do so. The most glaring gap in European Union policy is its passive approach towards the Israeli settlements. Its differentiation policy is exacting a small cost that Israel is willing to bear, with no noticeable changes to the permanence of the occupation or to the growth of settlements. The settlements, which are a presumptive war crime under the Rome Statute, are the product of Israeli State policy, and there is no hope of dismantling them until European accountability measures meaningfully target Israel itself (see A/HRC/47/57).

44. European Union policy towards the occupation is ultimately hindered by two interrelated propensities: its commitment to the dead star that is the Madrid-Oslo process, and its unwillingness to separate itself from the United States, no matter how partial and ineffective American policy has been. Whatever its original promise, the Madrid-Oslo process has become a cover for the maintenance of the occupation and the avoidance of hard decisions. With imagination and courage, European diplomacy could create a qualitatively new approach to securing Middle East peace, based on rights and international law.<sup>87</sup> To do this would require an honest reckoning with Israeli intransigence and American dominance. But to do anything less would continue to implicate Europe in one of the greatest diplomatic failures of the past half-century.

World Bank

45. The World Bank has been intimately involved in the development of economic policy in Palestine since the dawn of the Madrid-Oslo process. In 1993, it published a significant six-volume study – Developing the Occupied Territories: An Investment in Peace – which set out a strategy to reform, reorganize and advance the economic and social capacities of the Palestinian territory. Its stated emphasis was technical: to focus on Palestinian institution-building, private sector investment and optimal economic planning, while leaving the issues of security, international law and final status issues to the political arena. A disquieting feature of that report was that its description of the dilapidated Palestinian economy in 1993 – high unemployment, stagnant income, deep poverty, overstretched public institutions and services, a deep dependence on the Israeli economy, vulnerability to Israeli political retaliation and enormous economic disparities between Israelis and Palestinians – remains entirely accurate today even after 28 years of substantive institution-building and billions of dollars in aid.

<sup>85</sup> Omar Dajani and Hugh Lovatt, Rethinking Oslo: How Europe Can Promote Peace in Israel-Palestine (London, European Council on Foreign Relations, 2017); and Hugh Lovatt and Mattia Toaldo, EU Differentiation and Israeli Settlements (London, European Council on Foreign Relations, 2015).

<sup>86</sup> Beth Oppenheim, “Can Europe overcome its paralysis on Israel and Palestine?”, Centre for European Reform, February 2020.

<sup>87</sup> Hugh Lovatt, The End of Oslo: A New European Strategy on Israel-Palestine (London, European Council on Foreign Relations, 2020).

46. In the years since 1993, the World Bank has issued dozens of reports on the Palestinian economy, many of them highly technical reviews of specific sectors, and some of them containing understated observations on the myriad ways that Israel stunts and throttles the Palestinian economy. In particular, the World Bank presents comprehensive twice-yearly economic reports to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of the International Assistance to Palestinians, a body of States and institutions (including the United States and the European Union) that coordinates international aid to the Palestinian Authority and for which the World Bank acts as secretariat.

47. At their best, the World Bank reports depict the encumbering patterns of economic and social control imposed by Israel on the West Bank and Gaza, including the tight enclosures, the restrictions on freedom of movement, the withholding of taxes and clearance revenues, the growth of the settlements, the blockade of Gaza, the restriction of dual-use products and the constraints on Palestinian telecommunications.<sup>88</sup> In addition, some of these reports – particularly those issued in the 2000s – linked these many constraints to wider patterns of distress in Palestinian society, including declines in school enrolment, food insecurity, depression among schoolchildren and fragmenting social cohesion.<sup>89</sup> In 2013, the World Bank released one of its more impactful reports, focusing on Area C (the 61 per cent of the West Bank completely under Israeli security and civil control, where all of its settlements are located). In its report, the World Bank persuasively detailed how the alienation of this critical land resource from the Palestinians was crippling its economy, obstructing freedom of personal and commercial movement and closing the possibility of independent development.<sup>90</sup>

48. But even at its best, the technocratic approach of the World Bank misses the forest for the trees. The punishing features of the smothering Israeli control over the Palestinian economy are not the result of regrettable Israeli policy, and are susceptible to change on the basis of empirically richer data and more comprehensive recommendations by the World Bank. Nor will enhanced institutional capacity for the Palestinians significantly alter the disfiguring reality on the ground. The reports focus on the troublesome symptoms of an economy and society encased in an ossified occupation, while ignoring the larger morbidity. This misdiagnosis is as fatal to a desperate political situation as it is in medicine. The term “occupation” never appears in any of the World Bank reports. Even more troubling, the World Bank’s reports on the “Palestinian territories” only reference the West Bank and Gaza; although East Jerusalem has long been designated by the United Nations as occupied territory that has been illegally annexed by Israel, it is never included in the World Bank’s coverage, apparently because this would require the World Bank to “pre-judge its

---

<sup>88</sup> See, for example, World Bank, “West Bank and Gaza update”, June 2008; and World Bank, “Economic monitoring report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee”, 27 September 2018 and 2 June 2020.

<sup>89</sup> See, for example, World Bank, “West Bank and Gaza update”, November 2004, November 2007 and March 2008.

<sup>90</sup> World Bank, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy, report No. AUS2922 (Washington, D.C., 2013).

status”, hardly a neutral position.<sup>91</sup> And the World Bank does not attribute Israeli policies and practices towards the Palestinians to a strategy of de facto annexation and permanent control over the Palestinian territory, notwithstanding the plentiful economic and political evidence.

49. It does not have to be this way. In comparison to the World Bank’s sotto voce approach, the biannual reports from the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) employ a much sharper analysis, attributing the ravaging of the Palestinian economy directly to the Israeli occupation. In recent years, UNCTAD has issued substantive reports on the cumulative economic costs of the Israeli occupation on the Palestinian people,<sup>92</sup> the barriers posed by the occupation to the realization of Palestine’s oil and natural gas potential,<sup>93</sup> the relationship between the growth of the settlements and widening Palestinian poverty (see TD/B/67/5) and the economic collapse of Gaza behind an airtight blockade (see TD/B/EX(68)/4). By naming the actual phenomena, the UNCTAD reports deliver a more authentic understanding of the economic reality in Palestine and provide a fuller understanding as to why the billions in international aid and the institutional capacity-building for the Palestinians have perversely achieved close to the opposite of the stated goals of the international community: not a state-in-the-making, but a broken territory in formaldehyde.

Quartet

50. The Quartet – made up of the United States, the European Union, the United Nations and the Russian Federation – was created in 2002 to enable a more multinational dimension in the search for lasting peace between Israel and the Palestinians. It was formed in the aftermath of the second Palestinian intifada and the collapse of the 2000 Camp David peace process. At its inception, the benefits of such a unique organization were thought to be its small but influential membership, its adaptability and informality, its ability to make swift decisions and the political buy-in from both Israel and the Palestinians.<sup>94</sup>

51. Today, the Quartet is a shell of what it once was. It has been without a high-profile political envoy since the resignation of former Prime Minister of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Tony Blair, in 2015. It conducts low-level technical and economic improvement projects for the Palestinians, including water, energy, movement and trade, telecommunications and rule of law initiatives.<sup>95</sup> Its most recent statement, issued in March 2021 by the envoys of the four members (after not meeting for more than four years), was brief and antiseptic, expressing concern about the unsustainable economic disparity between Israelis and Palestinians and urging the parties to refrain from unilateral actions.<sup>96</sup> The Quartet’s published strategy for 2021–2023 does not once mention the term “occupation” or reference settlements and their destructive role, does not provide any critical analysis of the harsh control of Israel over the Palestinians and provides no explanation as to how the Quartet’s economic improvement projects can flourish in an economy suffocated

<sup>91</sup> World Bank, Developing the Occupied Territories: An Investment in Peace, vol. 1 (Washington, D.C., 1993), note 45, and table 1.1. In this 1993 report, the World Bank acknowledged the central economic importance of East Jerusalem to the Palestinian economy.

<sup>92</sup> The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: The Impoverishment of Gaza under Blockade (United Nations publication, 2019).

<sup>93</sup> The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation: Unrealized Oil and Natural Gas Potential (United Nations publication, 2019).

<sup>94</sup> Khaled Elgindy, The Middle East Quartet: A Post-Mortem, analysis paper No. 25 (Washington, D.C., Brookings Institution, 2012).

<sup>95</sup> Office of the Quartet, “Annual report: January–December 2020”, December 2020.

<sup>96</sup> United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, “Statement by the Middle East Quartet envoys”, 23 March 2021.

by barriers, walls, tariffs and checkpoints and without geographic trading access to the outside world.<sup>97</sup>

52. The source of the Quartet's ineffectiveness can be traced to two important and fateful turning points early in its existence. In 2003, it issued its road map to peace in the Middle East, with a declared goal of ending the occupation and enabling a two-State solution by 2005, based on detailed performance measures. While the road map placed demands on both parties, the greater demands were borne by the Palestinians (an end to the intifada, elections, new institutions, a reformed government, the acceptance of provisional borders). The final status issues were to be negotiated by the parties, but without reference to international law (particularly with regard to the settlements and the annexation of Jerusalem) and without accounting for the vast disparities in power. Israel ostensibly accepted the road map, but was permitted by the Quartet members to issue 14 reservations, which effectively undercut its viability. According to the most comprehensive appraisal of the Quartet's performance, the United States discarded the road map in 2005 to support the unilateral withdrawal of Israel from Gaza, with the reluctant acquiescence of the other three members.<sup>98</sup>

53. The Quartet's second fateful turning point was the decision in 2006 to boycott the Palestinian Government after the election of Hamas. One can regard Hamas as an organization that had and has committed odious acts, but still recognize that the 2006 Palestinian election was free and fair and that the Quartet's imposition of demands on the new Government, absent any corresponding demands on Israel to comply with its considerable international obligations, debilitated its authority and purpose. Some members of the Quartet supported economic sanctions on the new Palestinian Government, something they had never considered imposing on Israel for its serious violations. This decision contributed to the Palestinian political split which persists today. The then United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority subsequently noted that this post-election position: "effectively transformed the Quartet from a negotiation-promoting foursome guided by [the road map] into a body that was all but imposing sanctions on a freely elected government of a people under occupation as well as setting unattainable preconditions for dialogue."<sup>99</sup>

54. An overriding lesson arising from the Quartet's predicament is that the acceptance by the other three members of American dominance meant that, in these circumstances, the Quartet's positions frequently reflect the lowest common denominator: that of the United States. Hence the quip: "the Quartet sans trois."<sup>100</sup> Given the extraordinary political, diplomatic and military relationship between the United States and Israel, the result was that international law had no place in the Quartet's policies, the United States assumed the sole role of monitoring compliance by Israel with the road map, and the Quartet rarely took positions critical of the role of Israel as a covetous occupier, which might have once salvaged the vanishing two-State solution.<sup>101</sup> This imbalance has not only seriously diminished any potential effectiveness of the Quartet, but it has tarnished the image and role of the United Nations, whose foremost responsibility is to uphold international law and United Nations resolutions.

<sup>97</sup> Office of the Quartet, "Strategy 2021–2023", December 2020.

<sup>98</sup> Elgindy, The Middle East Quartet.

<sup>99</sup> Álvaro de Soto, End of Mission Report (2007).

<sup>100</sup> Patrick Müller, "Informal security governance and the Middle East Quartet", International Peacekeeping, vol. 21, No. 4 (August 2014).

<sup>101</sup> De Soto, End of Mission Report.

IV. Conclusion and recommendations

55. The international community bears a significant responsibility for the persistence of the Israeli occupation of Palestine and the failure to secure a just and lasting peace in the region. The occupation is more embedded than ever. The living conditions of the Palestinians, let alone their political future, have become even more precarious. The defiance of Israel has gone almost completely unchecked. The peace process is moribund, if not comatose, and there is no serious talk about reviving it. In this post-colonial era, in the third decade of the twenty-first century, the world is tolerating the intolerable: the imposition of a colonial reality in Palestine. All of this favours the acquisitive occupier. All of this works against the rights of the subjugated, who are long overdue for restitution.

56. Measured against the five criteria proposed in the present report, none of the four international actors, all of whom have influence on the Israeli occupation of Palestine, come close to incorporating what is necessary to create a viable new foundation for genuine Middle East peacemaking. The door remains open, however. The United States can make good on its promise to stand up for human rights everywhere.<sup>102</sup> The European Union can display diplomatic courage in charting an independent course anchored on a rights-based approach.<sup>103</sup> The World Bank can address the economic reality of the occupation through a human rights lens that will lead to much better policy recommendations. And the Quartet can elevate its impact by insisting upon the established international framework for peace with justice in the Middle East.

57. It should be clear that the realpolitik playbook for the Middle East peace process is well past its best-by date. More of the same is not working, and will not work. The new diplomatic playbook must be endowed with rights and legality at its core. While these are necessary preconditions, they are, by themselves, insufficient. Imaginative and brave diplomacy, and a willingness to finally ask the honest questions as to why this five-decade-old occupation has become indistinguishable from annexation and apartheid, is also indispensable. All of these things, together with the international application of accountability, could finally enable Palestinians and Israelis to enjoy the prosperity of a shared future together.

58. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel fully comply with its obligations under international law and completely end the occupation of the Palestinian territory with all deliberate speed.

59. The Special Rapporteur recommends to the international community, including international actors who are deeply involved in supervising the occupation, that it:

(a) Develop a comprehensive list of accountability measures to be applied to Israel until it complies with all relevant United Nations resolutions and accepts the international direction respecting the administration and termination of the occupation;

(b) Fully support the work of the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court with respect to its investigation of the situation in Palestine;

(c) Adopt the five criteria developed in the present report to guide its future work in supervising the question of Palestine in all its aspects.

<sup>102</sup> Agence France-Presse in Washington, D.C., “Antony Blinken says the US will ‘stand up for human rights everywhere’”, The Guardian, 30 March 2021.

<sup>103</sup> Lovatt, The End of Oslo.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
21 September 2022

Original: English

---

Seventy-seventh session

Agenda item 68 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent information.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese

Summary

In the present report, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, addresses a number of human rights concerns, in particular regarding the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, in the context of the settler-colonial features of the prolonged Israeli occupation.

I. Introduction

1. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, addresses a number of concerns pertaining to the situation of human rights in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza and presents an in-depth analysis of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. She clarifies legal tenets, meaning and implications of this right, which remains unrealized for the Palestinian people despite being foundational to the mission that the United Nations Member States pledged to achieve in the aftermath of the atrocities committed and witnessed during World War II.<sup>1</sup>

2. The Special Rapporteur has not been able to visit the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem (“occupied Palestinian territory”), before the submission of the present report, despite an invitation received by the Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations Office and other international organizations in Geneva. Access to the occupied Palestinian territory is a key element of her mandate and will be pursued in the future. As her request to meet with the Permanent Representative of Israel to the United Nations Office and other international organizations in Geneva was declined, the Special Rapporteur underscores that the pattern of non-cooperation by Israel with the mandate holder is a serious concern. As open dialogue among all parties is essential for the protection and promotion of human rights, the Special Rapporteur reminds Israel that she remains willing to engage.

3. The present report is based on legal research and analysis, and enhanced by consultations and submissions. The Special Rapporteur had consultations with fellow and previous Special Rapporteurs, the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in Israel, and in-person and online meetings with State representatives, academics and non-governmental organizations from the occupied Palestinian territory, Israel and beyond. She examined reports submitted by local and international human rights organizations, in particular from the occupied Palestinian territory and Israel.

4. The geographic and temporal limitations of the Special Rapporteur’s mandate limited the scope of this inquiry, including how violations covered in the report may affect the Palestinian people outside the occupied territory. This does not prejudice the examination of this collective right as it applies to Palestinians who hold Israeli citizenship, and to Palestinian refugees of 1948 and 1967, also entitled to the well-established rights to return, restitution and compensation. Given the interconnectedness of the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 with what preceded it, the Special Rapporteur looks back at certain points in history that may inform and illuminate present circumstances.

II. Rationale for investigating the right to self-determination

A. Current situation and predominant debates

5. For 55 years, three generations of Palestinians in the occupied Palestinian territory have grown up under Israeli occupation. About 40 per cent of them are refugees expelled by Israel since 1948 (including their descendants) who fled the violence that accompanied the creation of the State of Israel.<sup>2</sup> Most of the residents of Gaza, together with many currently facing forcible transfer across the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, are refugees – originally from Galilee, Haifa, Jaffa, Ramleh and Lydda and the Naqab. The 1967 war displaced most of them anew, destroying and depopulating Palestinian villages and denying refugees return, as in 1947–1949.<sup>3</sup> The Palestinians who in 1967 managed to “remain” could not know that, 55 years later, they would still wake up under the yoke of foreign domination, with their rights suspended and, the refugees among them, without concrete prospects of returning to their ancestral lands.

---

<sup>1</sup> Charter of the United Nations, Arts. 55 and 56.

6. Since 1967, the human rights situation in the occupied Palestinian territory has been steadily deteriorating, primarily as a result of gross violations of international law, including racial segregation and subjugation by the occupying Power, Israel. This has taken various forms: draconian restrictions on Palestinian movement inside and outside the occupied Palestinian territory; repression of political and civic participation; denial of residency rights, status and family unification; dispossession of Palestinian land and property; forcible transfers; unlawful killings; widespread arbitrary arrests and detention, including of children; the obstruction and denial of humanitarian aid and cooperation; the denial of ownership and access to natural resources; settler violence; and violent suppression of popular resistance against the occupation. All together, these practices constitute collective punishment of the Palestinian people.<sup>4</sup>

7. The gravity of the situation notwithstanding, the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory continues to be addressed predominantly, and sometimes exclusively, through three main approaches:

(a) Humanitarian approach. The grave economic and humanitarian conditions generated by a violent occupation are addressed as a (chronic) humanitarian issue that needs to be managed, rather than a political issue to be solved according to international law; Israeli violations are largely addressed with the aim of “improving” certain aspects of life under occupation;

(b) Political approach. The question of Palestine is often framed as a “conflict” between opposing parties that can be resolved through negotiations. Accordingly, ending the occupation will come about only through a “negotiated peace agreement”; then the humanitarian and economic emergencies in the occupied Palestinian territory will be resolved;

(c) Economic development approach. In recent years, seekers of a solution have insisted on a framework that hinges on developing the Palestinian territory and artificially sustaining its economy without providing a political solution addressing the root causes of the “conflict”, including the numerous violations of Palestinians’ rights and freedoms. The aim of this approach is to resolve conflict by promoting businesses and creating opportunities that accompany growth and sustainable development, not through the fulfilment of fundamental human rights.

8. The proponents of these approaches seem to believe that the occupation will end when the parties, starkly unequal in power, are able to achieve a negotiated solution. Regrettably, these perspectives leave unchecked the broader context that frames and unites endless emergencies, political challenges and economic fallouts. Failing to capture critical overarching issues concerning the Israeli occupation, these perspectives conflate root causes and symptoms, and focus on Israeli lack of compliance with international law as a siloed phenomenon, rather than a longstanding structural component of the prolonged disfranchisement of the Palestinians under occupation.

<sup>2</sup> Benny Morris, The Birth of the Palestinian Refugee Problem Revisited, revised ed. (Cambridge, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Cambridge University Press, 2004).

<sup>3</sup> Tom Segev, 1967: Israel, the War, and the Year that Transformed the Middle East, 1st ed. (New York, Metropolitan Books, 2007).

<sup>4</sup> A/HRC/44/60 (2020), paras. 24 and 27.

9. In recent years, a number of reputable scholars and organizations have concluded that systemic and widespread discriminatory Israeli policies and practices against the Palestinians amount to the crime of apartheid under international law.<sup>5</sup> While the international community has not fully acted upon it, the concept that Israeli occupation meets the legal threshold of apartheid is gaining traction. This may help overcome a certain tendency to scrutinize Israeli violations, often individual and decontextualized, under specific bodies of international law rather than the very system through which Israel rules over the Palestinians.

10. At the same time, if considered alone and not as part of a holistic examination of the experience of the Palestinian people as a whole, the apartheid framework presents some limitations:

(a) First, with few exceptions,<sup>6</sup> the scope of recent reports on Israeli apartheid is primarily “territorial” and excludes the experience of Palestinian refugees. The recognition of Israeli apartheid must address the experience of the Palestinian people in its entirety and in their unity as a people, including those who were displaced, denationalized and dispossessed in 1947–1949 (many of whom live in the occupied Palestinian territory);

(b) Second, a focus on Israeli apartheid alone misses the inherent illegality of the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem. The Israeli occupation is illegal because it has proven not to be temporary, is deliberately administered against the best interests of the occupied population and has resulted in the annexation of occupied territory, breaching most obligations imposed on the occupying Power.<sup>7</sup> Its illegality also stems from its systematic violation of at least three peremptory norms of international law: the prohibition on the acquisition of territory through the use of force; the prohibition on imposing regimes of alien subjugation, domination and exploitation, including racial discrimination and apartheid; and the obligation of States to respect the right of peoples to self-determination.<sup>8</sup> By the same token, Israeli occupation constitutes an unjustified use of force and an act of aggression.<sup>9</sup> Such an occupation is unequivocally prohibited

<sup>5</sup> A/HRC/49/87 (2022) (advance unedited version); Amnesty International, Israel's Apartheid against Palestinians: Cruel System of Domination and Crime against Humanity (2022) (available at <https://www.amnesty.org/en/documents/mde15/5141/2022/en/>); Human Rights Watch, A Threshold Crossed: Israeli Authorities and the Crimes of Apartheid and Persecution (2021); B'Tselem, “A regime of Jewish supremacy from the Jordan River to the Mediterranean Sea: this is apartheid” (12 January 2021); Al-Haq and others, Joint Parallel Report to the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on Israel's Seventeenth to Nineteenth Periodic Reports (10 November 2019); and Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), Israeli Practices towards the Palestinian People and the Question of Apartheid: Palestine and the Israeli Occupation, issue No. 1 (E/ESCWA/ECRI/2017/1) (2017).

<sup>6</sup> Amnesty International, Al-Haq and others, Joint Parallel Report to the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination; and E/ESCWA/ECRI/2017/1 (see footnote 5).

<sup>7</sup> A/72/556 (2017).

<sup>8</sup> Ardi Imseis, “Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967–2020”, European Journal of International Law, vol. 31, No. 3 (2020), pp. 1055–1085.

<sup>9</sup> Ralph Wilde, “Using the master’s tools to dismantle the master’s house: international law and Palestinian liberation”, The Palestine Yearbook of International Law (Netherlands, Brill, 2021), p. 7.

under international law and contrary to the values, purposes and principles of the United Nations as enshrined in its Charter;

(c) Third, the apartheid framework does not address the “root causes” of the web of racially discriminatory laws, orders and policies that have regulated daily life in the occupied Palestinian territory since 1967 and Israeli animus (intention) in seizing land while subjugating and displacing its indigenous people and replacing them with its nationals. This is the hallmark of settler-colonialism, and a war crime under the Rome Statute.

11. In essence, the limitations of the apartheid framework as currently applied bypass the critical issue of the recognition of the Palestinian people’s fundamental right to determine their political, social and economic status and develop as a people, free from foreign occupation, rule and exploitation. Dismantling the Israeli apartheid in the occupied Palestinian territory in particular, while necessary, will not automatically address the question of Israeli domination over the Palestinians, restore permanent sovereignty over the lands Israel occupies and the natural resources therein, nor, on its own, fulfil Palestinian political aspirations.

B. Resetting the mind

12. Discussions around Palestinian self-determination were once limited to the debate concerning the future of Palestine and its people, as part of the decolonization struggle. The Middle East peace process that started in the early 1990s has altered this, giving the impression that the realization of Palestinian self-determination was being achieved via statehood. Exercising the right to self-determination in the form of a politically independent State in all of the occupied Palestinian territory would be a minimum requirement of justice for the Palestinian people; yet its realization is as distant as ever, largely because of settler-colonial endeavours pursued by Israel through its prolonged occupation of the Palestinian territory.

13. Colonialism, a phenomenon often disguised as a “civilization project” and historically imposed by “Western countries” on “third world” countries, was achieved through cultural subordination of the natives, economic exploitation of their land and resources and suffocation of their political claims.<sup>10</sup> Colonialism is characterized as “settler” when also driven by the logic of elimination of the indigenous character of the colonized land.<sup>11</sup> This manifests in the establishment and promotion of colonies,<sup>12</sup> namely, settlements of foreign people implanted among the indigenous population with the aim of subjugating and dispossessing the natives and “permanently securing hold” over specific areas.<sup>13</sup> The violation of the peoples’ right to self-determination is inherent to settler-colonialism.

14. The normative framework of self-determination, especially as affirmed in the context of decolonization processes, provides the necessary lens to (re-)examine and resolve the legitimate claims to emancipation of the Palestinian people from decades

<sup>10</sup> Antony Anghie, “Colonialism and the birth of international institutions: sovereignty, economy, and the mandate system of the League of Nations”, New York University Journal of International Law and Politics, vol. 34, No. 3 (2002), pp. 513–634.

<sup>11</sup> Patrick Wolfe, “Settler colonialism and the elimination of the native”, Journal of Genocide Research, vol. 8, No. 4 (2006), p. 387.

<sup>12</sup> In the occupied Palestinian territory, the term “colonies” is more accurate than the term “settlements”, as the latter neutralizes their illegal character (this resonates with the term colonies, as used in French: see, e.g., Security Council resolution 2334 (2016)).

<sup>13</sup> Lorenzo Veracini, “Introduction: the settler colonial situation”, in Settler Colonialism (London, Palgrave Macmillan, 2010).

of Israeli occupation, while respecting the rights of all Palestinians and Israelis in the region.

III. Law of external self-determination An indispensable framework

A. Legal foundation

15. The right to self-determination constitutes the collective right par excellence, and the “platform right” necessary for the realization of many other rights.<sup>14</sup> If a population grouping is not free to “determine their political status and ... pursue their economic, social and cultural development” as a people,<sup>15</sup> other rights will almost certainly not be realized.

16. Prompted by the decolonization movement that spread from the late 1950s through the 1970s, the right to self-determination was universally codified in 1966 with the adoption of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. This changed the approach to the self-determination framework from a general United Nations principle<sup>16</sup> into a qualified normative framework for peoples to exercise free will as “cohesive national groups”,<sup>17</sup> choose their independent forms of political organization and determine their cultural and socioeconomic development.<sup>18</sup> This includes two intertwined components:

(a) Political component. The capacity of a people to choose its own Government and govern itself without interference. This has two dimensions: (i) the internal dimension of self-determination, namely, a people’s entitlement to rule themselves through constitutional and political processes that allow for the democratic exercise of the right in practice within the framework of an existing State;<sup>19</sup> and (ii) the external dimension of self-determination that broadens the scope of the right to the formation of the people’s own will to determine their own political status free from external control and alien domination;<sup>20</sup>

(b) Economic component. The people’s collective right to enjoy their natural wealth and resources as an expression of permanent sovereignty over them.<sup>21</sup> This is pivotal to realizing and preserving the independent existence of a people through their own means of subsistence.

17. These two interconnected components allow people to exist as independent both demographically (as a people) and territorially (within a given region) and to pursue

<sup>14</sup> A/72/556, para. 62.

<sup>15</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, common article 1 (1)–(2).

<sup>16</sup> Charter of the United Nations, Arts. 55 and 56.

<sup>17</sup> Ian Brownlie, Principles of Public International Law, 5th ed. (Oxford, United Kingdom Clarendon Press, 1998), p. 599.

<sup>18</sup> Antonio Cassese, Self-determination of Peoples: a Legal Reappraisal, vol. 12, (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1995), p. 53.

<sup>19</sup> James Crawford, The Creation of States in International Law, 2nd ed. (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2007).

<sup>20</sup> Hurst Hannum, “Rethinking self-determination”, Virginia Journal of International Law, vol. 34, No. 1 (1993), pp. 1 and 33.

<sup>21</sup> Catriona Drew, “The East Timor story: international law on trial”, European Journal of International Law, vol. 12, No. 4 (2001), pp. 651 and 663.

their cultural, economic and social development through what the territory and associated resources offer.<sup>22</sup>

18. The external dimension of the right to self-determination is the precondition to the effective enjoyment of both the political and economic components of the right. How can a Government function independently while remaining subjugated, without enjoying full jurisdiction over the whole of its territory, citizens and resources? Alien domination and foreign occupation are thus incompatible with “the law of external self-determination” as a regulatory framework.<sup>23</sup>

19. In essence, the right to self-determination is the right to live and grow as a people within a political community of its own, usually an independent State. This implies the right to resist alien domination, subjugation and exploitation that may impede the fulfilment of this right.<sup>24</sup> In 1977, this was spelled out in Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions, in which people’s fight “against colonial domination and alien occupation and against racist régimes in the exercise of their right of self-determination” was recognized.<sup>25</sup> Liberation and decolonization struggles across history have shown how the right to exist as a people and the right to resist foreign rule and domination are interconnected. History also shows that international support to anti-colonial struggles, especially from Governments and decision-makers, remains critical for the enfranchisement of a subjugated people. Decolonization became possible when anti-colonial movements and States managed to create a consensus at the United Nations on the illegitimacy of colonial domination; respect for basic human rights played an important role in creating this consensus.<sup>26</sup>

20. In the 1960s, self-determination became the normative framework for advancing decolonization. In the wake of the “irresistible and irreversible” process of liberation to which all peoples were entitled, colonialism, and all forms of segregation or discrimination associated therewith, were fully banned.<sup>27</sup> The normative force of self-determination was drawn from the Charter of the United Nations of 1945, in which the principle of “equal rights and self-determination of peoples” are placed among its primary objectives, together with the maintenance of international peace and security. To achieve decolonization, the General Assembly thus recognized that:

All peoples have an inalienable right to complete freedom, the exercise of their sovereignty and the integrity of their national territory ... All peoples have the right to self-determination; by virtue of that right they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development.<sup>28</sup>

21. In the face of persistent colonial endeavours, the General Assembly explicitly prohibited acts that may undermine colonized peoples’ efforts to achieve independence and prohibited “the use of force” by States or the threat thereof, against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, existing international boundaries, armistice lines, established by or pursuant to an international agreement, which may result in the deprivation of peoples’ “right to self-determination and freedom and independence”.<sup>29</sup>

<sup>22</sup> Hannum, “Rethinking self-determination” (see footnote 20).

<sup>23</sup> Wilde, “Using the master’s tools to dismantle the master’s house” (see footnote 9).

<sup>24</sup> Antonio Cassese, “Terrorism and human rights”, American University Law Review, vol. 31, No. 4 (1982), pp. 945–958.

<sup>25</sup> Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions (1977), art. 1 (4).

<sup>26</sup> Roland Burke, Decolonization and the Evolution of International Human Rights (Philadelphia, University of Pennsylvania Press, 2011).

<sup>27</sup> General Assembly resolution 1514 (XV) (1960).

<sup>28</sup> Ibid.

<sup>29</sup> General Assembly resolution 2625 (XXV) (1970).

22. The General Assembly also clarified that the territory of a State could be neither “the object of military occupation” nor “acquisition by another State” resulting from the threat or use of force.<sup>30</sup> This was reinforced in 1974, when, in defining “aggression”, the General Assembly prohibited the “use of armed force to deprive peoples of their right to self-determination, freedom and independence, or to disrupt territorial integrity”.<sup>31</sup>

23. The inviolability of the right to self-determination stems from its erga omnes and jus cogens character. Erga omnes means that all States have an inherent interest in the realization of and obligation to respect the right to self-determination, owed by and to the international community as a whole.<sup>32</sup> Such an obligation exists not only in relation “to their own peoples but vis-à-vis all peoples which have ... been deprived of the possibility of exercising their right to self-determination.”<sup>33</sup> This arises out of the jus cogens or peremptory norm character of the right to self-determination, which cannot be violated or derogated (except by another peremptory norm).<sup>34</sup> The international community is obliged to ensure that all peoples entitled to self-determination effectively achieve it, and that all obstacles are removed.<sup>35</sup>

24. International practice from occupied Namibia in the 1950s to occupied Ukraine in 2022 documents how the international community, whether through international tribunals, such as the International Court of Justice,<sup>36</sup> the International Criminal Court (ICC)<sup>37</sup> and ad hoc tribunals,<sup>38</sup> or the General Assembly,<sup>39</sup> the Security Council,<sup>40</sup> and individual States through domestic jurisdictions and sanctions,<sup>41</sup> have used the means provided by international law to end illegal occupations and forms of subjugation. Under the law of external self-determination, the Palestinian people are entitled to and must enjoy comparable international cooperation and determined action.

B. Applicability to the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territory

25. The right to self-determination is an “inalienable right” of the Palestinian people, as affirmed by the General Assembly.<sup>42</sup> The origins of Palestinians’ right to self-determination can be traced back more than a century, preceding the first codification in the Charter of the United Nations. The people of Palestine (Muslims, Christians and Jews),<sup>43</sup> like other peoples in the Levant, also had their right to self-determination recognized under the Covenant of the League of Nations of 1919.

<sup>30</sup> Ibid.

<sup>31</sup> General Assembly resolution 3314 \(XXIX\) (1974).

<sup>32</sup> Cassese, Self-determination of peoples (see footnote 19).

<sup>33</sup> Human Rights Committee, general comment 12, para. 6.

<sup>34</sup> International Law Commission (ILC), A/CN.4/L.960/Add.1 (2022), conclusions 3 and 17.

<sup>35</sup> Advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice (ICJ), on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

<sup>36</sup> ICJ, Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council Resolution 276 \(1970\).

<sup>37</sup> International Criminal Court (ICC), “ICC Presidency assigns the Situation in Ukraine to Pre-Trial Chamber II” (2 March 2022).

<sup>38</sup> Security Council resolution 827 \(1993\).

<sup>39</sup> General Assembly resolution 43/106 (1988).

<sup>40</sup> Security Council resolution 264 \(1969\).

<sup>41</sup> Government of the United States, Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986, Public Law No. 99-440 (1986).

<sup>42</sup> General Assembly resolutions 3236 \(XXIX\) (1974) and 2672 \(XXV\) (C) (1970).

<sup>43</sup> In the early 1900s, the largest communities were 81 per cent Muslim, 11 per cent Christian and 8 per cent Jewish. See Sergio Della Pergola, “Demographic trends in Israel and Palestine: Prospects and policy implications”, American Jewish Yearbook vol. 103 (2003), pp. 3–68.

Article 22 of the Covenant stipulated that “Class A” mandates (Iraq, Lebanon, Palestine, Trans-Jordan and Syria) would enjoy provisional independence “until such time as they are able to stand alone”.<sup>44</sup> The “wishes” of the local communities were to be “a principal consideration in the selection of the Mandatory”.<sup>45</sup>

26. The culmination of centuries of antisemitism and persecution of Jews in Europe in the genocidal horror of the Holocaust strengthened support for political Zionism. This movement saw Palestine as the land to realize a “State for the Jews” through settlement and colonization.<sup>46</sup> However, in that land a native Palestinian Arab population had resided for millennia. In 1947, the United Nations resolved to reconcile the separate claims to the land of the indigenous Palestinian people and the largely European Jewish settlers and refugees from Europe,<sup>47</sup> by recommending the partitioning of British Mandate Palestine into an “Arab State” and a “Jewish State”.<sup>48</sup> Soon after, the creation of the State of Israel in most of the territory of Mandate Palestine was accompanied by massacres and the mass expulsion, wholesale denationalization and dispossession of most of the Arabs of Palestine. They continue to be deprived of their right to self-determination, together with their descendants, the refugees further displaced in 1967 and other non-refugee Palestinians.

27. The 1967 war that initiated the Israeli occupation was a major turning point. The Security Council, in resolution 242 \(1967\), underscored the “inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war” and called for the “withdrawal of Israel[i] armed forces” from the territory that Israel had occupied and emphasized the right of everyone in the region “to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries free from threats or acts of force”.<sup>49</sup> This mirrored the General Assembly’s condemnation of any use of force that may result in denial of peoples’ freedom and independence as a clear and incontrovertible expression of colonialism.<sup>50</sup>

28. Since 1967, the United Nations, reflecting the postcolonial sensibility of its expanded membership, adopted resolutions that not only reaffirmed the Palestinian people’s right to self-determination but also viewed resistance against outside domination as justified.<sup>51</sup> In 1974, in the face of the already protracted and unwarranted Israeli occupation, the General Assembly acknowledged the “right to self-determination without external interference” and “the right ... to return” of Palestinian refugees as “inalienable” rights of the Palestinian people.<sup>52</sup>

29. By 1982, following continuous non-compliance by Israel, the General Assembly affirmed that “the denial of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination, sovereignty, independence and return to Palestine and the repeated acts of aggression by Israel against the peoples of the region constitute a serious threat to international peace and security”.<sup>53</sup> In the same resolution, the Assembly also urged “all States, competent organizations of the United Nations system, specialized agencies and other international organizations to extend their support to the <sup>44</sup> Covenant of the League of Nations (1919), article 22. The mandate system was established after World War I to deal with ex-Ottoman and ex-German territories. Mandates were classified as A, B or C, based on what was considered a country’s readiness for self-rule.

<sup>45</sup> Ibid.

<sup>46</sup> Theodor Herzl, Der Judenstaat (Leipzig and Vienna, Breitenstein, 1896).

<sup>47</sup> Official Records of the General Assembly, Second Session, Supplement No. 11 (A/364) (Report of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine), vol. I (1947).

<sup>48</sup> General Assembly resolution 181 \(II\) (1947).

<sup>49</sup> Security Council resolution 242 \(1967\); see also Security Council resolutions 298 \(1971\), 476 \(1980\) and 2334 \(2016\).

<sup>50</sup> General Assembly resolution 2625 \(XXV\) (1970).

<sup>51</sup> A/CONF.32/41 (1968).

<sup>52</sup> General Assembly resolution 3236 \(XXIX\) (1974).

<sup>53</sup> General Assembly resolution 37/43 (1982).

Palestinian people through its sole and legitimate representative, the Palestine Liberation Organization, in its struggle to regain its right to self-determination and independence”.<sup>54</sup>

30. The General Assembly’s acknowledgement of the Palestinians’ struggle to “regain” their right to self-determination and independence in the context of the worldwide decolonization process, was an important recognition of the Palestinian national resistance led by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) which, by the 1970s, federated the main Palestinian political forces mostly in exile. At that time, it was clear that the law of self-determination legitimated Palestinians’ right to resist, by virtue of the violent and acquisitive nature of Israeli occupation from which Palestinians were struggling to liberate themselves.

31. By 1983, the General Assembly had already exposed the “repeated acts of aggression” by Israel against Palestinians.<sup>55</sup> Over the past decades, dozens of United Nations resolutions have reaffirmed Palestinians’ right to self-determination, calling for the withdrawal of Israel from the territory occupied in 1967 and for an end to the occupation.

32. In 2016, even the Security Council – generally paralysed on this issue by United States of America support for Israel – declared that “the establishment by Israel of settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, has no legal validity”, firmly condemning the enterprise as “a flagrant violation under international law”.<sup>56</sup>

IV. Before our eyes Fifty-five years of preventing Palestinian self-determination

A. Reality check

33. As an occupier, Israel has no sovereignty over the occupied Palestinian territory. Even if the occupation was established purely for bona fide Israeli security needs (in itself, an aberration, given its adverse impact on Palestinians’ fundamental rights and freedoms), on what basis does Israel continue to seize Palestinian land to build colonies in the West Bank, exploiting water and energy that belong to the Palestinians? On what basis does Israel destroy essential civilian infrastructure of the occupied population?

34. In defiance of numerous United Nations resolutions recognizing the violation of Israeli obligations as an occupying Power and calling for its withdrawal from the occupied Palestinian territory,<sup>57</sup> Israel has consolidated its military rule and presence, making it more visible and painful for the Palestinians, while pursuing its own interests.<sup>58</sup> The way that Israel has administered the occupied Palestinian territory resembles that of a colony, “deeply committed to exploiting its land and resources for Israel’s own benefit, and profoundly indifferent, at very best, to the rights and best interests of the protected people”.<sup>59</sup>

35. The profound illegality of the situation in the occupied Palestinian territory emanates from the intentional unlawful displacement of its native (and refugee)

<sup>54</sup> Ibid., para. 23.

<sup>55</sup> General Assembly resolution 38/17 (1983).

<sup>56</sup> Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>57</sup> Ibid. and Security Council resolution 242 (1967).

<sup>58</sup> Yehuda Z. Blum, “The missing reversioner: reflections on the status of Judea and Samaria”, Israel Law Review vol. 50 (2017), p. 276.

<sup>59</sup> A/72/556 (2017).

Palestinian inhabitants, coupled with alteration of the legal status, geographical nature and demographic composition of the occupied territory through fragmentation of land, seizure and exploitation of natural resources, impairment of Palestinian economic development, through and for a (growing) colonist minority. Altogether, the imposition of settlers, settlements and settlement infrastructure in the topography and space of the Palestinians has served to prevent the realization of the Palestinians' right to self-determination, violating a number of peremptory norms of international law, absolutely prohibited under international law.<sup>60</sup>

36. Evidence laid out in the following sections confirms that the occupation is not merely belligerent, but is settler-colonial in nature and that Israel has prevented the realization of Palestinian people's right to self-determination, violating each component of that right, wilfully pursuing the "de-Palestinianization" of the occupied territory. This is, in essence, proof of the intent to colonize the occupied Palestinian territory, continuing what the Zionist movement had envisaged for modern-day Israel over a century ago.<sup>61</sup> In parallel, for more than 55 years, the international community has systematically failed to hold Israel accountable, thus enabling its impunity and permitting its settler colonial endeavours.

B. The dawn of occupation Sett(l)ing the grounds

37. When, in 1967, Israel invaded what remained of British Mandate Palestine – which had until then been under the control of Egypt (Gaza Strip) and Jordan (West Bank, including East Jerusalem) – many, both in Israel and abroad, saluted the "capture" of the West Bank, Gaza Strip and the Old City of Jerusalem "with ecstatic revelry".<sup>62</sup> Emboldened by the swift control over large swaths of lands, Israeli leaders devised plans to consolidate permanent Israeli control over the territory that it had just occupied.<sup>63</sup> From the onset of the occupation, successive Governments of Israel have acted as if that territory was "captured" terra nullius; this is not dissimilar to the attitude that Zionist movement leaders have displayed towards Palestine since the days of the Ottoman Empire.

38. In the analyses of Israeli strategists of that time, the planned future of the occupied territory would be tied to "creat[ing] a Greater Eretz Yisrael [land of Israel] from a strategic point of view, and establish[ing] a Jewish state from a demographic point of view".<sup>64</sup> The 1967 Allon Plan articulated a formal vision of a unitary "Jewish state" from the Jordan River to the Mediterranean Sea through the full annexation of the Jordan Valley and the creation of demilitarized Palestinian Bantustans therein.<sup>65</sup> The Plan provided for a complete redrawing of the map of Israel, where neither the Green Line nor other armistice lines would be relevant.<sup>66</sup> The Old City of Jerusalem, in the eastern part of the city, was to be annexed and the Palestinians living there

<sup>60</sup> Security Council resolution 478 (1980); General Assembly resolution 3314 (XXIX) (1974); and Security Council resolution 267 (1969).

<sup>61</sup> Rashid Khalidi, The Hundred Years' War on Palestine: A History of Settler Colonialism and Resistance: 1917–2017 (New York, Metropolitan Books, 2020).

<sup>62</sup> Seth Anziska, Preventing Palestine: A Political History from Camp David to Oslo (Princeton, Princeton University Press, 2018), p. 7.

<sup>63</sup> Segev, 1967: Israel, the War, and the Year that Transformed the Middle East (see footnote 3).

<sup>64</sup> Israeli commander (acting Prime Minister, 1969), Yigad Allon, cited by Robert Friedman, Zealots for Zion: Inside Israel's West Bank Settlement Movement (New York, Random House, 1992).

<sup>65</sup> Geoffrey Aronson, Creating Facts: Israel, Palestinians and the West Bank (Washington, D.C., Institute for Palestine Studies, 1987).

<sup>66</sup> Cited in Gershon Gorenberg, The Unmaking of Israel, 1st Harper Perennial ed. (New York, Harper Perennial, 2012).

would be given “conditional residency status”.<sup>67</sup> The rest of the land would be given priority if lightly populated; the lowlands along the Jordan River, argued to be “vital” for the defence of Israel, and the Sinai Peninsula, as well as Bethlehem and Hebron, were to be annexed. The remainder of the territory, more densely populated by Palestinians, was to be granted to Jordanian rule.<sup>68</sup>

39. The Allon Plan has continued to shine and thrive through the actions of successive Governments of Israel. In 1973, the Foreign Minister of Israel, Moshe Dayan, one of the architects of the 1967 occupation, expressed his view for a “new State of Israel with broad frontiers, strong and solid, with the authority of the Israel Government extending from the Jordan [river] to the Suez Canal”.<sup>69</sup> In 1979, the Prime Minister of Israel, Menachem Begin stated: “the green line no longer exists – it has vanished forever”.<sup>70</sup> As former Israeli politician Matityahu Drobles revealed in 1980, the intention had always been “to hold forever the territories of Judea and Samaria. The best and most efficient way [to do so] is an accelerated colonization drive in these areas”.<sup>71</sup> A leading example has been Israeli annexation of occupied East Jerusalem since 1967, which was formally consolidated in 1980 via administrative and legislative measures<sup>72</sup> that altered the status and the character the Old City, repeatedly condemned by the Security Council as “null and void”.<sup>73</sup>

40. Developments on the ground bear testament to the execution of the Allon Plan, even if it was never formally adopted as an official policy. After decades of Israel building facts on the ground to consolidate the annexation of large parts of the occupied Palestinian territory, in 2019, the then Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu stated, “a Palestinian state will endanger our existence. I will not divide Jerusalem, I will not evacuate any community and I will make sure we control the territory west of Jordan”.<sup>74</sup> Multiple Governments of Israel and political and military leaders have reaffirmed these views.<sup>75</sup> The presence of “settlers” and Kahanists in the Israeli Knesset makes it difficult to disentangle settler-colonialism from Israeli public policy.

41. Since 1967, Israel has settled its civilian population in the 22 per cent of Mandatory Palestine that had become (out of political pressures and pragmatism), the territory where the Palestinians would realize their right to self-determination in the form of independent statehood (while, in 1947, the General Assembly had deliberated that the territory of the “Arab State” would correspond to 45 per cent of the territory which had constituted Palestine under British Mandate).

42. In a tragic irony, Palestinians have experienced an entrenching settler-colonialism at a moment in history when the rest of the world was slowly progressing towards decolonization. Worldwide, national resistance movements, symbolically enabled by the United Nations, challenged their colonizers and succeeded in ending their rule. However, in the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem,

<sup>67</sup> Ibid.

<sup>68</sup> Ibid.

<sup>69</sup> Minister of Foreign Affairs of Israel, Abba Eban, cited by Abba Eban, Abba Eban: An Autobiography (New York, Random House, 1977).

<sup>70</sup> “Foreign Minister Dayan on the future of settlements in Judea, Samaria and Gaza”, 24 April 1979.

<sup>71</sup> Matityahu Drobles, “Settlement in Judea and Samaria: Strategy, Policy and Programmes”, in World Zionist Organization, Settlement Section (Jerusalem, 1980).

<sup>72</sup> Knesset, “Basic Law: Jerusalem, Capital of Israel” (1980).

<sup>73</sup> Security Council resolution 478 (1980), para. 3.

<sup>74</sup> “Netanyahu says will begin annexing West Bank if he wins Israel election”, Haaretz, 7 April 2019.

<sup>75</sup> Tovah Lazaroff, “Michaeli: no one thinks half a million settlers will be evacuated”, Jerusalem Post, 9 March 2021; “Benny Gantz, Netanyahu rival, gives campaign launch speech: full English transcript”, Haaretz, 30 January 2019; and Gil Stern Hoffman, “Lapid: US helped Iran fund its next war against Israel”, Jerusalem Post, 26 January 2016.

Israeli expansionism consolidated into an apartheid regime through the longest occupation in modern history.

C. Preventing unity Territorial fragmentation

43. Territorial sovereignty, an essential component of the Palestinian “self-determination unit”,<sup>76</sup> has been targeted since the early days of the occupation. “Strategic fragmentation” has been part of the Israeli toolbox to contain and control the Palestinian people, curtailing freedom of movement inside and outside the occupied territory, depriving them of access to large areas of land, punctuating it with roadblocks, checkpoints, diversions, the Wall and more.<sup>77</sup> This is painfully reminiscent of the destruction and attempted erasure of hundreds of Palestinian villages in former British Mandate Palestine that accompanied the creation of the State of Israel, disfiguring its landscapes, reinventing the land to serve the specific interests of Israel and separating, containing and isolating the Palestinian people through areas under its control. Heavy control of the Palestinian population, epitomized by today’s besieged Gaza, has become a hallmark of Israeli policies of domination.

44. The fragmentation and separation between the West Bank, East Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip have been meticulously planned and executed. As of 1967, the adoption of different administrative and military regimes to the Gaza Strip and the West Bank – signalled by the adoption of separate systems ranging from identification cards to car plates – has been the prime vector for this fragmentation.<sup>78</sup> Since the early days of the occupation, the unlimited land expropriation for the establishment of Israeli colonies has exacerbated it.<sup>79</sup> The establishment of colonies, which already constituted a grave breach of international law in 1967,<sup>80</sup> manifests the execution of Israeli leaders’ plans to permanently settle in those areas.<sup>81</sup> This design is particularly visible in East Jerusalem, which Israel has unlawfully treated as “annexed” for decades.<sup>82</sup> More than 40 Security Council resolutions have reminded Israel of the impermissibility of alteration of the status, character, and demography of Jerusalem.<sup>83</sup> However, the annexation, and de-Palestinianization, of Jerusalem and most of the West Bank, has progressed.

45. The Oslo Accords, which Israel and PLO signed between 1993 and 1995, divided the West Bank into “areas” A, B and C, and further fragmented the territory available to the Palestinians. The fragmentation of the West Bank has facilitated the construction and “protection” of Jewish-only colonies in occupied territory. Meanwhile, thousands of Palestinian structures have been destroyed, with tens of thousands of Palestinians forcibly displaced since 2009. Pastoralist and Bedouin communities in Area C, 70 per cent of whom are refugees, are the most exposed to such a “coercive environment”.<sup>84</sup>

<sup>76</sup> Crawford, The Creation of States in International Law (see footnote 19), p. 428.

<sup>77</sup> E/ESCWA/ECRI/2017/1 (2017) (see footnote 5).

<sup>78</sup> Jean-Pierre Filiu, Gaza: A History (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2014).

<sup>79</sup> Military Order 58 (1967).

<sup>80</sup> Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention), art. 147; International Committee of the Red Cross, commentary of 1958.

<sup>81</sup> ICJ, Legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, advisory opinion (2004) (see footnote 35).

<sup>82</sup> Law and Administration Ordinance (Amendment No. 11) Law of 1967.

<sup>83</sup> Security Council resolution 2334 (2016).

<sup>84</sup> A/HRC/31/43.

46. The transformation of the Gaza Strip into a heavily populated, impoverished enclave controlled by Israel through a suffocating sea, land and air blockade, is part and parcel of that same settler-colonial design. The containment of the colonial population into heavily controlled reserves is at the core of the settler-colonial goal to ensure the demographic supremacy and prevent Palestinian self-determination.<sup>85</sup> Conversely, the obligation to consider the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, as a single territorial unit is rooted in the law of occupation, the principle of self-determination of peoples, and a number of bilateral treaties concluded by Israel and PLO.<sup>86</sup>

D. Preventing economic prosperity Exploiting natural resources

47. Permanent sovereignty over natural resources is integral to peoples' economic development, enshrined in the right to self-determination.<sup>87</sup> The complex system of control and restrictions that Israel enforces in the occupied Palestinian territory to the exclusive profit of its colonies crushes the possibility for Palestinians to freely pursue their economic development and "dispose of their natural wealth and resources".<sup>88</sup>

48. Palestinian communities, historically self-sufficient through agriculture, livestock and fishing (in Gaza), with income generated from the sale of their products,<sup>89</sup> are now trapped in a vicious circle of dependency on both Israeli economy and international aid. Access to livelihoods, water, land and roads has been systematically disrupted through Israeli restrictions.

49. In Area C of the West Bank, which contains the majority of the natural resources and almost all the arable land in the West Bank, Israel maintains complete monopoly over water springs<sup>90</sup> and has designated a mere 1 per cent of land for Palestinian development.<sup>91</sup> The "coordination system" that Israel has ostensibly established to facilitate Palestinians' access to their land is convoluted and inefficient.<sup>92</sup> Israeli control over Palestinian resources hampers Palestinian production and self-sufficiency, particularly endangering the survival of the Bedouin and other Palestinian pastoral communities in the area. According to United Nations estimates, without the Israeli occupation, the West Bank gross domestic product (GDP) per capita in 2019 would have been 44 per cent higher than its actual value.<sup>93</sup>

50. In the besieged Gaza Strip, the economic situation is beyond dire.<sup>94</sup> In 2021 the unemployment rate in Gaza rose above 50 per cent, and 80 per cent of the population was dependent on aid.<sup>95</sup> Repeated large-scale Israeli military offensives, coupled with

<sup>85</sup> Tareq Baconi, "Gaza and the one-State reality", Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 50, No. 1 (2020), pp. 77–90.

<sup>86</sup> Marco Longobardo, "The Legality of Closure on Land and Safe Passage between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank", Asian Journal of International Law, vol. 11, No. 1 (2021).

<sup>87</sup> Drew, "The East Timor story: international law on trial" (see footnote 22).

<sup>88</sup> International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, common article 1 (2).

<sup>89</sup> B'Tselem, "Expel and exploit: the Israeli practice of taking over rural Palestinian land" (2016).

<sup>90</sup> See A/HRC/37/39 (2018).

<sup>91</sup> Orhan Niksic and others, Area C and the Future of the Palestinian Economy (World Bank, 2014), p. 13.

<sup>92</sup> See B'Tselem, "Expel and exploit" (see footnote 89).

<sup>93</sup> See United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: Arrested Development and Poverty in the West Bank (UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2021/2 and UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2021/2/Corr.1) (2021).

<sup>94</sup> UNCTAD, The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: The Impoverishment of Gaza under Blockade (UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2020/1) (2020).

<sup>95</sup> World Bank, Assistance Strategy for the West Bank and Gaza for the Period FY22-25 (156451-GZ) (2021).

Israeli-imposed electricity shortages, have compounded the difficulties faced by the Palestinian people in Gaza, for whom a dignified life is rendered unattainable.<sup>96</sup> The illegal Israeli blockade, a form of collective punishment, has also allowed Israel to exploit the offshore natural gas reserves and oil reservoirs of Gaza.<sup>97</sup>

51. Meanwhile, a web of national and international businesses operate in the illegally occupied Palestinian territory.<sup>98</sup> These businesses “field-prove” military equipment on Palestinians,<sup>99</sup> exploit water denied to and diverted from Palestinians,<sup>100</sup> farm and graze land, quarry for stone, extract minerals and drill for oil and natural gas and allocate resources almost exclusively for the colonies and the occupying Power.<sup>101</sup> Final products are globally marketed as “products of Israel”, generally exported and received within the territories of third States, in some cases tariff-free.<sup>102</sup> The obligation to label these products as from the occupied territory<sup>103</sup> does not resolve the illegality of trading settlement products; it merely transfers the burden to consumers of the receiving States to decide on products that should not be allowed in territories of High Contracting Parties to the Geneva Conventions.

52. The engineered denial of Palestinian access to and control over their natural resources makes any prospect of economic development a mere surrogate for prosperity.<sup>104</sup> The “de-development” that Israel has imposed on the occupied Palestinian territory<sup>105</sup> has irreparably harmed the Palestinian economy and is the antithesis of the self-determination that the United Nations embraced in the rejection of colonialism.

E. Preventing identity

Erasing Palestinian cultural and civil rights

53. In a settler-colonial context and an apartheid regime, any display of collective identity and (re)claimed sovereignty from the subjugated people represents a threat to the regime itself. On 13 May 2022, Palestinian pallbearers were attacked by Israeli forces while also carrying their national flag during the funeral of Palestinian journalist Shireen Abu Akleh who had been killed two days earlier (see para. 58). In fact, Palestinian “symbols”, like the Palestinian flag, are systematically attacked and torn down, in public places, during public events, protests and even funerals, with the display of Palestinian national identity being de facto banned. In the occupied Palestinian territory, preventing the Palestinian people from expressing their collective identity in their own land has taken many forms.

<sup>96</sup> Ibid.

<sup>97</sup> UNCTAD, The Economic Costs of the Israeli Occupation for the Palestinian People: the Unrealized Oil and Natural Gas Potential (UNCTAD/GDS/APP/2019/1) (2019).

<sup>98</sup> Wesam Ahmad, “Business and human rights, conflict and the converging legacies of colonialism in the Palestinian present”, Cambridge Core blog, May 2021.

<sup>99</sup> Marya Farah, “Business and human rights in Occupied Territory: guidance for upholding human rights” (Al-Haq, 2020).

<sup>100</sup> Al-Haq, “Water for one people only: discriminatory access and ‘water apartheid’ in the OPT” (2013).

<sup>101</sup> Al-Haq, “Palestinian human rights organisations submit file to ICC prosecutor: investigate and prosecute pillage, appropriation and destruction of Palestinian natural resources”, 26 October 2018.

<sup>102</sup> Canada-Israel Free Trade Agreement (2014).

<sup>103</sup> Court of Justice of the European Union, case C-363/18 (12 November 2019).

<sup>104</sup> Al-Haq and Emergency Water, Sanitation and Hygiene group (EWASH), “Israel’s violations of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights with regard to the human rights to water and sanitation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory” (2011).

<sup>105</sup> Sara Roy, “De-development revisited: Palestinian economy and society since Oslo”, Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 28, No. 3 (1999), pp. 64–82.

54. This is part of a broader and deeper endeavour to “deconstruct and replace” Palestine from the collective imagination through a combination of cultural appropriation and the erasure of key cultural entities.<sup>106</sup> The Moroccan Quarter in the Old City of Jerusalem, destroyed at the beginning of the occupation to make space for the Wailing Wall esplanade, is one of the first recorded cases of Palestinian venues destroyed or seized and converted to Israeli cultural sites soon after June 1967. Similarly, attempts to erase the Palestinian character of what is left of Palestinian ancestral land include: the elimination of Palestinian history in East Jerusalem schools,<sup>107</sup> the revocation of licences to Palestinian schools not adhering to Israeli curriculum policies<sup>108</sup> and the conversion or closure of sites representing Palestinian cultural, political and religious identity.<sup>109</sup>

55. Attacks on cultural objects of significance to eliminate all traces and expressions of Palestinian existence, and the incorporation of a revisionist view of history to assert (false) claims of sovereignty in the occupied Palestinian territory, demonstrate the occupier’s intention to permanently strip the land of its indigenous identity.

F. Preventing political existence (and resistance)

56. The exercise of the right to self-determination constitutes the beating heart of a people as a collective and as a polity. Since 1967, to maintain its domination, Israel has systematically carried out human rights violations, including extrajudicial killings, arbitrary detention and imprisonments (including of elected representatives), residency revocations and mass deportations, including of political figures outside the occupied Palestinian territory, among others. These violations have hampered the organic formation and functioning of a cohesive Palestinian political leadership and thus the exercise of the right to self-determination by Palestinians.

57. Portrayed as terrorists, many civilian Palestinian political leaders and advocates have allegedly been killed for their messages and their potential impact on the formation of Palestinian political thinking.<sup>110</sup> What started in the 1960s as security operations in reaction to “terrorist operations”, became, over the years, a policy of assassinations targeting not only operatives of such attacks but also political leaders of organizations designated by Israel as terrorists.<sup>111</sup> This includes many members of PLO, even though both the United Nations and later Israel recognized it as the “legitimate representative of the Palestinian people” in 1974 and 1993 respectively. Israel has allegedly used targeted killings – extrajudicial executions – as an alternative political strategy to negotiations.<sup>112</sup> This approach was reportedly implemented

<sup>106</sup> Wolfe, “Settler colonialism and the elimination of the native” (see footnote 11).

<sup>107</sup> Musa Ismael Basit, “The Israeli curriculum and the Palestinian national identity in Jerusalem”, Palestine-Israel Journal, vol. 22, No. 4 (2017).

<sup>108</sup> “Education minister revokes licences of 6 East Jerusalem schools for incitement”, Times of Israel, 28 July 2022.

<sup>109</sup> Luma Zayad, “Systematic cultural appropriation and the Israeli-Palestinian conflict”, DePaul Journal of Art Technology and Intellectual Property Law, vol. 28, No. 2 (2018), p. 81; Mahmoud Hawari, “Capturing the castle: archaeology, architectural history and political bias at the Citadel of Jerusalem”, Jerusalem Quarterly No. 55 (2013); Mahmoud Hawari, “The Citadel of Jerusalem: a case study in the cultural appropriation of archaeology in Palestine”, Present Pasts vol. 2, No. 1 (2010); Tom Abowd, “The Moroccan Quarter: a history of the present”, Jerusalem Quarterly No. 7 (2000).

<sup>110</sup> Eyal Weizman, Hollow Land: Israel’s Architecture of Occupation (London, Verso Books, 2012).

<sup>111</sup> Ronen Bergman, Rise and Kill First: The Secret History of Israel’s Targeted Assassinations (New York, Random House Publishing Group, 2019).

<sup>112</sup> Weizman, Hollow Land: Israel’s Architecture of Occupation (see footnote 110).

during the second Intifada, when 300 Palestinians accused of terrorism were wilfully killed, resulting in a further 150 civilian casualties.<sup>113</sup>

58. Humanitarians and journalists are regularly among the victims of the widespread recourse by Israel to lethal force. Lack of accountability remains pervasive. The killing of Palestinian journalist Shireen Abu Akleh, while documenting an Israeli raid on the Jenin refugee camp on 11 May 2022, remains unaccounted for despite numerous investigations concluding that the journalist was hit by Israeli soldiers' fire.<sup>114</sup>

59. Israel continues to imprison Palestinian Authority ministers, mayors and teachers, human rights defenders and civil society representatives. Ten members of the Palestinian Legislative Council were reportedly incarcerated in 2020 alone. The practice of mass arbitrary arrests, which includes administrative detention without charge or trial, has been increasingly executed since Palestinians began protesting the illegal construction of the Wall in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.<sup>115</sup> Almost 4,500 Palestinians are currently detained, 730 without any charge and largely based on secret evidence. Children as young as the age of 12 have been victims of arbitrary arrest and detention – 500–700 minors are held yearly.<sup>116</sup> Many believed to be leading resistance, such as public servants, religious leaders and activists, lawyers, journalists and students involved in political activities, have been deported to the Gaza Strip.<sup>117</sup> Deporting elected leaders, preventing Palestinians from voting and interfering with Palestinian politics, have inhibited the independent formation of a Palestinian leadership and political will that could challenge Israeli colonial interests.<sup>118</sup>

60. Civil society organizations and human rights defenders have also been the target of Israeli repression. Using mass spyware surveillance to “monitor” human rights activists and defenders’ devices with the Pegasus software – now exported and used across the globe – Israel has shrunk the space for political activities of Palestinians.<sup>119</sup> In 2021, six reputable Palestinian civil society organizations, which are at the forefront of the battle for international justice and accountability in the occupied Palestinian territory, were designated as “terrorist organizations” by Israel without evidence. In August 2022, the premises of these organizations were raided and ordered to be closed by Israel, with some of their senior leaders summoned and threatened. This appears to be an attempt to further shrink, if not outright ban, space for human rights monitoring and legal opposition to the Israeli occupation in the Palestinian territory,<sup>120</sup> while abusing counter-terrorism legislation.<sup>121</sup> As the designated organizations are fully engaged in the ongoing Situation of Palestine case before ICC, Israel, by attacking them and their work, may be “destroying, tampering with, or interfering with the collection of evidence” of war crimes and crimes against <sup>113</sup> Noura Erakat, “Extrajudicial executions from the United States to Palestine”, Just Security, 7 August 2020.

<sup>114</sup> See, for example, OHCHR, “Killing of journalist in the occupied Palestinian territory”, 24 June 2022.

<sup>115</sup> Addameer, Administrative detention fact sheet 2022 (20 January 2022).

<sup>116</sup> Defense for Children International Palestine, “Number of Palestinian children (12–17) in Israeli military detention”, 14 June 2022. Available at www.dci-palestine.org/children\_in\_israeli\_detention.

<sup>117</sup> Miftah fact sheet, “The Palestinian Exodus” (2002).

<sup>118</sup> Ibid.

<sup>119</sup> Front Line Defenders, “Six Palestinian human rights defenders hacked with NSO Group’s Pegasus Spyware”, 8 November 2021.

<sup>120</sup> Michael Kearney, “Lawfare, legitimacy and resistance: the weak and the law”, Palestine Yearbook of International Law, vol. 16, No. 1 (2010).

<sup>121</sup> A/HRC/40/52 (2019).

humanity, absolutely prohibited under international criminal law.<sup>122</sup> This would constitute an offence against the administration of criminal justice.

61. Attacks on human rights defenders and humanitarian operators are far too common in the occupied Palestinian territory. Salah Hammouri, a French-Palestinian lawyer from Jerusalem, has been subjected to harassment, arbitrary arrest and detention since the age of 16. Detained without charges or trial since 7 March 2022 on allegations of terrorism, Hammouri risks the revocation of his residency in Jerusalem on the ground of breach of allegiance to Israel.<sup>123</sup> This would set a dangerous precedent, as he would be the first Jerusalemite deprived of his residency on the ground of secret evidence related to national security threats. Similarly, Mohammad el-Halabi, an aid worker for World Vision in the Gaza Strip, has been convicted of diverting organization funds to Hamas and other terrorism-related crimes, after six years and across 160 court hearings, largely based on secret evidence, and despite an external investigation that found no evidence of wrongdoings.<sup>124</sup>

62. The relentless attacks on the Palestinian people, their political manifestations and even their legal resistance have been assessed as amounting to persecution,<sup>125</sup> which ultimately restricts Palestinians' ability to develop as a people.

G. Preventing statehood “Negotiating the illegal”?

63. Under the law on State responsibility, the breach of an international obligation by a State gives rise to an internationally wrongful act,<sup>126</sup> the commission of which requires first and foremost the State responsible to immediately cease the illegal act, ensure non-repetition and provide reparation for the damage done.<sup>127</sup> It follows that a breach of international law should not be subjected to negotiations, as this would legitimize what is illegal.<sup>128</sup> Therefore, because of the illegality of the Israeli occupation, owing to its prolonged, acquisitive and bad-faith nature, the obligation of cessation of the occupation cannot in any way be conditioned on negotiations.<sup>129</sup>

64. Since the start of the Middle East peace process with the Madrid Conference of 1991, the main political actors involved (particularly the Middle East Quartet) have argued in favour of advancing peace through bilateral negotiations. As with the Palestinian Declaration of Independence of 1988, PLO had yielded to the ineluctability of a compromise solution and its acceptance of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973) was seen as limiting Palestinians' claims to sovereignty to the occupied Palestinian territory.<sup>130</sup> The Oslo Accords, which many see as the benchmark for resolving the Israeli-Palestinian question via statehood within the 1949 armistice lines, neither realized nor advanced the realization of the Palestinian people's right to self-determination. The Accords, which framed the right to self-determination as the final objective of peacemaking after an interim self-rule, built on the mutual recognition of the State of Israel and PLO (not the State of

<sup>122</sup> ICC Statute (1998), art. 70 (1) (c).

<sup>123</sup> Addameer, “Salah Hammouri”, 8 September 2022.

<sup>124</sup> Amnesty International, “Israel/OPT: quash flawed conviction of aid worker Mohammed al-Halabi” (16 June 2022).

<sup>125</sup> Human Rights Watch, A Threshold Crossed (see footnote 5), p. 170.

<sup>126</sup> ILC, articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, art. 2 (a) and (b).

<sup>127</sup> Ibid. arts. 30 (a) (b) and 31 (1) and (2).

<sup>128</sup> Imseis, “Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967–2020” (see footnote 8), p. 1068.

<sup>129</sup> Ibid.

<sup>130</sup> Palestine National Council, “Palestinian Declaration of Independence”, Algeria, 15 November 1988.

Palestine, as it had been declared in 1988),<sup>131</sup> but merely recognized Palestinian autonomy in parts of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and Palestinians' "legitimate and political rights" in the occupied Palestinian territory.<sup>132</sup> In practice, the Accords left open the possibility that Palestinian self-rule short of independence could be extended in perpetuity. Critically, they left 61 per cent of the West Bank under full Israeli control.<sup>133</sup>

65. The right to self-determination remains a fundamental norm of international law that must be ensured by the broader community of States. Under international law, "special agreements [within the terms of the Fourth Geneva Convention] cannot violate peremptory rights nor can they derogate from or deny the rights of 'protected persons' under occupation."<sup>134</sup> Given the peremptory character of the norm, the Oslo Accords cannot waive Palestinians' right to self-determination. Such a fundamental jus cogens norm cannot be negatively affected in negotiations, especially considering the asymmetry of negotiating power between the occupier and the occupied (i.e., between the colonizer and the colonized).<sup>135</sup> Any interpretation of the Oslo Accords that negates the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people would render the Accords themselves questionable, if not invalid.<sup>136</sup>

66. Indeed, any solution that perpetuates the occupation, that does not acknowledge the power asymmetries between the subjugated Palestinian people and the occupier State of Israel and that does not address once and for all Israeli settler-colonialism, violates the Palestinians' right to self-determination, among other critical provisions of international law.

V. Need for a paradigm shift

67. For more than 55 years, the Israeli military occupation has prevented the realization of the Palestinian right to self-determination attempting to "de-Palestinianize" (i.e., diminish the presence, identity and resilience of Palestinians in) the occupied Palestinian territory, attempting to transform most of it into a permanent extension of Israeli metropolitan territory, with as few Palestinians as possible. This behaviour, reminiscent of a colonial past that the international community firmly rejected decades ago, has become more entrenched with the acquiescence of the international community and failure to hold Israel accountable.

68. The Palestinian people's right to self-determination, as part of the decolonization struggle, has nearly disappeared from the international political and humanitarian discourse, even more so in the context of diplomatic "normalization" with Israel, despite reaffirmations by human rights advocates, scholars and civil society. Some seem to approach it as an ideological slogan rather than as a legal reality from which clear responsibilities emanate.

69. Meanwhile the occupation has become further entrenched with systematic and forced alteration by Israel of the legal status, character and demographic composition

<sup>131</sup> Exchange of letters between PLO Chairman Arafat, Israeli Prime Minister Rabin and Norwegian Foreign Minister Holst (1993). Available at www.un.org/unispal/document/auto-insert-205528/.

<sup>132</sup> Israel and PLO, "Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (Oslo I)" (1993).

<sup>133</sup> The Oslo Accords divided the West Bank into Area A (under exclusive Palestinian Authority civil and security control), Area B (under Palestinian Authority civil control and joint Israeli-Palestinian security control), and Area C (under full Israeli civil and military control).

<sup>134</sup> ICC-01/18 (2021), para. 25.

<sup>135</sup> Imseis, "Negotiating the illegal: on the United Nations and the illegal occupation of Palestine, 1967–2020" (see footnote 8), p. 1065.

<sup>136</sup> ICC, Asem Khalil and Halla Shoaibi, case No. ICC-01/18-73 (2020), para. 71.

of the occupied Palestinian territory. Without challenging it, the “humanitarian”, “political” and “economic development” approaches to the occupied Palestinian territory normalize the occupation itself,<sup>137</sup> rendering the regulatory and remedial functions of international law irrelevant.

70. This must change; a paradigm shift is needed as the only possible way to overcome this situation by opting for a solution premised on respect for history and international law. This can only be resolved by respecting the cardinal norm of peoples’ right to self-determination and the recognition of the absolute illegality of the settler-colonialism and apartheid that the prolonged Israeli occupation has imposed on the Palestinians in the occupied Palestinian territory. Given the settler-colonial nature of the occupation, its overall assessment must change, and so the deliberations of the international community.

71. This starts with the recognition of the current reality in the occupied Palestinian territory as that of an intentionally acquisitive, segregationist and repressive regime, which has enabled, for 55 years, the disenfranchisement of the Palestinians, caging them into Bantustans of disrupted memories, broken ties and hopes, pursuing the ultimate goal to consolidate minority rule over a native majority on lands usurped through force, abusive and discriminatory policies and pillaging of resources. A prolonged occupation maintained for ostensible “security reasons” disguising Israeli settler-colonial intentions to extinguish Palestinian people’s right of self-determination while acquiring their receding territory as its own, as explicitly indicated by Israeli political figures, is something that the international community can no longer tolerate. This must be addressed in a holistic fashion.

72. Within the framework of the law of external self-determination, the very existence of such an occupation entails an unlawful use of force and therefore can be seen as an act of aggression. An act of aggression constitutes a violation of the jus ad bellum, which cannot be dismissed, as Israel often does, by claims of “pre-emptive” self-defence. This triggers consequences under the Charter of the United Nations and the law of State responsibility. Such grave violations of international law render (a) an immediate withdrawal of Israeli presence imperative and non-derogable, so that sovereignty can be returned to and regained by the native Palestinian people and (b) reparations necessary as a step toward justice and peace for both the Palestinians and the Israelis.

VI. Concluding observations

73. The violations described in the present report expose the nature of the Israeli occupation: that of an intentionally acquisitive, segregationist and repressive regime designed to prevent the realization of the Palestinian people’s right to self-determination. Since 1967, Israel has wilfully and intentionally violated the self-determination of the Palestinians in the occupied Palestinian territory, by preventing their exercise of territorial sovereignty over natural resources, suppressing their cultural identity and repressing Palestinian political character and resistance. In short, Israeli endeavours in the occupied Palestinian territory are indistinguishable from settler-colonialism; by seizing, annexing, fragmenting, and transferring its civilian population to, the occupied territory, Israeli occupation violates Palestinian territorial sovereignty; by extracting and exploiting Palestinians’ resources in order to generate profits benefiting third parties, including “settlers”, it violates Palestinians’ sovereignty over natural resources needed to develop an independent economy; by erasing or appropriating symbols expressing Palestinian identity, the occupation endangers the cultural existence of the Palestinian people; by repressing Palestinian political activity, advocacy and activism, the occupation violates Palestinians' ability to organize themselves as a people, free from alien domination and control.

<sup>137</sup> Daniela Huber, “The EU and 50 years of occupation: resistant to or complicit with normalization”, Middle East Critique vol. 27, No. 4 (2018), pp. 351–364.

74. Realizing the inalienable right of the Palestinian people to self-determination requires dismantling once and for all the Israeli settler-colonial occupation and its apartheid practices. International law is very clear in this regard. No solution can be just and fair, nor effective, unless it centres on decolonization, allowing the Palestinian people to freely determine their political will and pursue their social, economic and cultural development, alongside their Israeli neighbours. The international community must embrace a more accurate diagnosis of the Israeli settler-colonial occupation in the occupied Palestinian territory and abide by its own obligations under international law to fully realize the Palestinian people's right to self-determination.

75. The Middle East "peace process" and subsequent bilateral peacemaking attempts have proven ineffective; they have not focused their approaches on human rights, particularly the right to self-determination, and have overlooked the settler-colonial underpinnings of the Israeli occupation. As the Oslo process has shown, politically mandated peace negotiations cannot succeed without resolving the Palestinians' enduring subordinate status, ergo without challenging Israeli settler colonial endeavours. The end of the settler-colonial occupation must be the sine qua non condition for Palestinians to enjoy their right to self-determination in the occupied Palestinian territory, without being compelled to negotiate the conditions of their subjugation.

76. As a peremptory norm of international law, the right to self-determination cannot be derogated from under any circumstances and gives rise to obligations erga omnes. Given that the denial of the Palestinian people's self-determination is intentional and inherent to Israeli settler-colonial occupation, the unwavering enforcement of the law of external self-determination and the law on the use of force must be the cornerstone of any solution. International law, as the force that should orient politics in the pursuit of justice, requires the cessation of Israeli subjugation of the Palestinian people and unlawful attempts to acquire sovereignty over portions of the occupied Palestinian territory. This implies an obligation on Israel to withdraw without conditions or reservations. Third States shall not recognize as lawful, nor aid or abet, the illegal situation created by internationally wrongful acts by Israel. Shielding Israel from respect for international law and accountability undermines deterrence and breeds a culture of impunity. The exceptionalism demonstrated towards Israel not only undermines the effectiveness of international law, but also tarnishes the image, trustworthiness, and role of the international community and the United Nations, including its judicial organs.

VII. Recommendations

77. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the Government of Israel complies with its obligations under international law and ceases to impede the realization of the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people, ending its settler-colonial occupation of the Palestinian territory immediately and unconditionally and making reparations for its wrongful acts.

78. The Special Rapporteur recommends that all States:

(a) Condemn the intentional violations by Israel of the Palestinian right to self-determination including through settler-colonial practices. This requires that:

(i) States demand an immediate end to the illegal Israeli occupation, return of all land and resources from which the Palestinian people have been displaced and dispossessed while refraining from making withdrawal subject to negotiation between Israel and Palestine;

(ii) The General Assembly develops a plan to end the Israeli settler-colonial occupation and apartheid regime;

(iii) States stand ready to resort to the diplomatic, economic and political measures afforded by the Charter of the United Nations in case of non-compliance by Israel;

(b) Deploy an international protective presence to constrain the violence routinely used in the occupied Palestinian territory and protect the Palestinian population, in line with the report of the Secretary-General on the protection of the Palestinian civilian population (A/ES-10/794);

(c) Act to ensure a thorough, independent and transparent investigation of all violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law, including those amounting to potential war crimes, crimes against humanity and the crime of aggression, committed in the occupied Palestinian territory. The Special Rapporteur further recommends that the international community pursue accountability for perpetrators through both ICC in its ongoing investigation into the situation in Palestine, and universal jurisdiction mechanisms;

(d) Take appropriate steps to prevent, investigate and redress human rights abuses by all business enterprises domiciled in their territory and/or under their jurisdiction by adopting the necessary policies to regulate business conduct in the occupied Palestinian territory, including disengaging from the colonies and providing effective remedy for victims.

79. The Special Rapporteur recommends that the High Commissioner for Human Rights release, without delay, the updated database of businesses involved in settlements (Human Rights Council resolution 31/36).

80. The Special Rapporteur fully supports the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in Israel, and encourages it to investigate the status of the right to self-determination and Israeli settler-colonial endeavours in more depth than the territorial and geographic limitations of her mandate allow.

General Assembly

Distr.: General
20 October 2023

Original: English

---

Seventy-eighth session

Agenda item 71 (c)

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967***

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent information.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese

Summary

Children comprise half of the Palestinian population under Israel's 56-year-old settler-colonial occupation. As a party to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the occupying Power in the occupied Palestinian territory, Israel is obliged to prioritize the best interests of all children under its jurisdiction. Yet, Israel subjects Palestinian children to severe physical and psychological trauma, burdening them with fears and challenges that no child should bear. The absence of accountability for Israel's actions has emboldened its disregard for international obligations.

Israel's occupation, designed to illegally annex occupied land, stifles Palestinians' civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights. Land confiscation, resource expropriation and confinement contribute to Palestinian de-development, affecting the development of children. Every year Israeli forces kill, maim, orphan and detain hundreds of children of all ages. The resulting trauma is often unaddressed. This coercive environment critically violates the right to life of Palestinian children, preventing them from exercising the right of every child to grow up in safety and dignity. This experience has been characterized as "unchildling", meaning depriving children of the normalcy, lightness and innocence of childhood.

For Palestinian children, life under occupation is a daily struggle: from witnessing the heartbreak of their parents watching their confiscated land being cultivated by settlers, to their grandparents longing to reunite with their land and homes now behind walls; from unfinished homes being self-demolished, leaving only a mortgage to pay; to their schools being perpetually at risk of destruction. The deliberate violations of Palestinian children's rights call for urgent investigation, deployment of protective measures and a durable political solution that addresses root causes. This aligns with the broader goals of realizing the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and safety and security for everyone in the region.

I. Introduction

1. In her report to the Human Rights Council in 2023, the Special Rapporteur exposed how Israel has turned the occupied Palestinian territory into an open-air prison, where Palestinians are constantly confined, subjected to surveillance and punished.<sup>1</sup> This has aided Israel illegally dispossessing Palestinians of their lands and furthered their forced displacement.<sup>2</sup> Children make up almost half of the Palestinian population in this coercive environment,<sup>3</sup> while 30 per cent of the population under occupation is under the age of 15.

2. The present report focuses on the rights of Palestinian children and the meaning of life under Israel's "forever occupation".<sup>4</sup> Despite the legal framework applicable to them, Palestinian children are simultaneously hypervisible in terms of the violence they experience and invisible in terms of their suffering. While Palestinian authorities in the West Bank and Gaza Strip are also responsible for violating children's rights,<sup>5</sup> the report examines the overarching impact of the Israeli occupation on children, in line with the Special Rapporteur's mandate.

3. All children must be able to enjoy their childhood in a healthy, safe and nurturing environment, where human rights are both valued and safeguarded, regardless of identity, race, religion or background. That is the foundational premise of the present report.

4. The report does not include reference to the crimes that have taken place since 7 October 2023, as they unfolded while the report was being finalized. The Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel is conducting an investigation and the Special Rapporteur will also dedicate further analysis to this umpteenth tragic turn in the history of the longest occupation in history.

II. Methodology

5. The present report has been written without the benefit of a field visit, as Israel failed to facilitate the Special Rapporteur's access to the occupied Palestinian territory. It is based on an extensive desk review, submissions, virtual tours and online meetings with Palestinian, Israeli and international stakeholders. The research relied on the advice of psychosocial experts with specialized knowledge of children's mental health.

6. The Convention on the Rights of the Child is foundational for the present report, guiding the research from the formulation of interview questions to the benchmark for the evaluation of local policies and practices. In line with the best interest of the child and the "do no harm" principle, the Special Rapporteur relied on existing recent testimonies from children to the fullest extent possible. Her own interviews with children spanning various age groups and their families enhanced her overall understanding. Profound gratitude is expressed to all the children and adults who shared their testimonies, as well as to the organizations who helped to hold the

---

<sup>1</sup> A/HRC/53/59, para. 4.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., paras. 79–93.

<sup>3</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, "Dr. Awad highlights the Palestinian children's situation on the occasion of the Palestinian Child Day", 5 April 2023. This data refers only to the population of Palestinian children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

<sup>4</sup> A/HRC/47/57, para. 74.

<sup>5</sup> CRC/C/PSE/CO/1, para. 24.

meetings. Throughout the report, names were changed to safeguard the children's privacy. Quotation marks indicate interviewees' words reported verbatim.

7. The Special Rapporteur witnessed the harrowing trauma that Palestinian children face and carry with them, visible on their bodies, in their speech and in their movements. While the children's assertiveness in advocating for their rights was remarkable, the Special Rapporteur noted that their preoccupations were atypical for their age, placing adult-like responsibilities on them that conflict with a carefree childhood. Some children feel that "the world ignores them". Others used the expression: "if only they knew", referring to countries they view as powerful. They urged the Special Rapporteur to convey their pleas to the world.

III. Setting the context: children under settler-colonial military occupation

8. Since 1967, the Israeli military occupation has violated international law, whether by disregarding or by distorting it, to justify its unlawful practices. By treating the occupied territory as "disputed" rather than "occupied", Israel has granted itself latitude to violate its obligations towards the occupied people,<sup>6</sup> including children. With their status as protected persons deliberately denied, Palestinian children have been made vulnerable without redress.<sup>7</sup>

9. To advance the illegal colonization of the occupied territory, Israel has been subjecting the occupied population to a combination of daily deprivations, restrictions and modular levels of violence. The establishment of over 300 illegal colonies in the occupied territory has meant denial of Palestinians' rights to land, livelihood, adequate housing and health, and restrictions on education and employment. Treated as a collective threat, Palestinians are stripped of their individual and collective rights, denying children the ability to thrive.

10. While consolidating its presence in the occupied Palestinian territory, Israel has deployed variable uses of force against the population under occupation, obfuscating the legal distinction between law enforcement operations and the conduct of hostilities.<sup>8</sup> In addition to the macroviolence of State-engineered lethal force and collective punishment against them, Palestinians also endure persistent acts of microviolence, including military raids and settler violence, destruction and pillage of property and resources, humiliation, arrest and detention regardless of their age.<sup>9</sup>

11. Palestinian children live in segregated spaces and hostility-stricken communities. Their families' livelihood, access to employment, health care, opportunities for leisure, future prospects and mobility are all controlled by Israel.<sup>10</sup> Palestinian children are aware of the challenges they face "as Palestinians". Feeling alienated in their own land, children ask questions: "Why is it so? Are we less human?" or "Are we less worthy?"

12. Israel's settler colonial enterprise also has an impact Jewish Israeli children. They are affected by the decisions of their State or, for those living in the colonies,

<sup>6</sup> Orna Ben-Naftali, Michael Sfard and Hedi Viterbo, The ABC of the OPT: a Legal Lexicon of Israeli Control over the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Cambridge University Press, 2018).

<sup>7</sup> Neve Gordon and Nicola Perugini, Human Shields: a History of People in the Line of Fire (University of California Press, 2020), pp. 81–84.

<sup>8</sup> Diakonia, "The use of force in law enforcement in the Occupied Palestinian Territories: questions and answers", December 2021, pp. 7–9.

<sup>9</sup> Human Rights Watch, "Israel: collective punishment against Palestinians", 2 February 2023.

<sup>10</sup> Nadera Shalhoub-Kevorkian, Incarcerated Childhood and the Politics of Unchilding (Cambridge University Press, 2019), p. 33.

their families' choices and ideologies. Some have tragically lost their lives and others typically grow up in an environment saturated with fear, hostility and racism towards Palestinians.<sup>11</sup> The prevailing atmosphere may contribute to the structural violence directed at Palestinians. In the words of a former Israeli soldier: "I don't remember children. When you are in your uniform, it's us and them."<sup>12</sup>

13. It is well documented that from a young age Israeli children are taught narratives that frame Palestinians as threats, falsely tying them to the Holocaust and characterizing them as invaders bent on eliminating the Jewish people.<sup>13</sup> This rhetoric sustains a narrative of a "permanent emergency" justifying the colonization of the occupied territories while dehumanizing Palestinians.<sup>14</sup> In 2023, Israel's ultranationalist Government has exacerbated violence against Palestinians, inciting hatred and settlers' attacks on Palestinian communities. Radicalized settler youth, often enlisted in the military, contribute to severe abuses against Palestinians.

14. This reality is unsustainable, both for the Palestinians and the Israelis. Today's children are tomorrow's adults. In a world committed to child protection, it is imperative to examine how this commitment is to be realized in the occupied Palestinian territory.

IV. Child protection: international legal framework

15. The international legal framework applicable to the occupied Palestinian territory comprises international human rights law, international humanitarian law and international criminal law.<sup>15</sup> This legal framework sets forth the rights and freedoms of children as protected persons and human beings, as well as the obligations of the relevant authorities.

16. Within this framework, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, including the Optional Protocol on the involvement of children in armed conflict, establishes the most comprehensive framework for safeguarding children's rights. The Convention, ratified by Israel in 1991 and the State of Palestine in 2014, is applicable in the occupied Palestinian territory. Signatories must respect, protect and fulfil the rights of children within their jurisdiction or subject to their effective control.<sup>16</sup> The State of Palestine's accession to the Convention and other international human rights treaties does not absolve the Israeli occupying authorities of their responsibilities towards Palestinian children under occupation.<sup>17</sup>

17. The Convention is a vital instrument for promoting and defending the rights and dignity of every child. It enshrines four guiding principles underpinning all other rights:<sup>18</sup> the principle of non-discrimination, the principle of safeguarding the best interests of the child, the right to life that spans from survival to development, and the right to participate in decisions and actions that affect them.<sup>19</sup> The Convention guarantees children the right to a name, nationality and family, shielding them from discrimination, exploitation, ill-treatment and violence.<sup>20</sup> It ensures access to

<sup>11</sup> Nurit Peled-Elhanan, Palestine in Israeli School Books: Ideology and Propaganda in Education (Bloomsbury Publishing, 2013).

<sup>12</sup> ABC News Australia, "Stone cold justice: Israel's torture of Palestinian children", video, 2014.

<sup>13</sup> Peled-Elhanan, Palestine in Israeli School Books.

<sup>14</sup> See A/HRC/53/59.

<sup>15</sup> Ibid., paras. 14–15.

<sup>16</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, art. 4.

<sup>17</sup> Ibid.

<sup>18</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, general comment No. 5 (2003).

<sup>19</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, arts. 2, 3 (1), 6 and 12.

<sup>20</sup> Ibid., arts. 2, 5, 7, 19, 32, 34, 36 and 37.

education, health care and a nurturing environment conducive to their physical, mental and emotional growth. It affords special psychosocial support to children exposed to abuse, neglect or armed conflict.<sup>21</sup>

18. International humanitarian law, the Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land (Hague Regulations), the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, the Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflicts (Protocol I) and customary international humanitarian law, reinforce the protections afforded by human rights treaties to children in situations of armed conflict and occupation. Furthermore, these instruments establish a framework for ensuring the safety and security of schools and hospitals, emphasizing their vital role as civilian objects that should not be subjected to attack or military use during armed conflicts, siege and bombardment.<sup>22</sup> The recruitment of children for military purposes is prohibited.<sup>23</sup>

19. The occupying Power is obliged to ensure public order and civil life and has responsibility for the welfare of the occupied population, including children. This encompasses respecting private property, which cannot be confiscated, and administering public property in the occupied territory as a mere custodian.<sup>24</sup>

20. Fundamental to ensuring the enjoyment of childhood is the prohibition of forcible transfer or deportation of the occupied population outside the occupied territory; extensive destruction and appropriation of property not justified by military necessity, including of hospitals;<sup>25</sup> intentional killing and injury,<sup>26</sup> torture or inhumane treatment;<sup>27</sup> violations of fair trial rights;<sup>28</sup> unlawful confinement of the population;<sup>29</sup> and child recruitment.<sup>30</sup> Intentionally violating any of these obligations is a grave breach of the Third and Fourth Geneva Conventions.<sup>31</sup>

21. Such breaches also constitute war crimes,<sup>32</sup> especially “when committed as part of a plan or policy or as part of a large-scale commission of such crimes”.<sup>33</sup> Under international criminal law, some of these violations may amount to crimes against humanity, such as deportation or forcible transfer of population, arbitrary deprivation

<sup>21</sup> Ibid., arts. 23 (3–4), 24, 27–29 and 39.

<sup>22</sup> Convention (IV) respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land and its annex: Regulations respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 18 October 1907 (Hague Regulations), arts. 12 and 27; and Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and Relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflict (Protocol I), art. 18.

<sup>23</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, art. 38.

<sup>24</sup> Hague Regulations, arts. 43, 45 and 55.

<sup>25</sup> Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949 (Fourth Geneva Convention), arts. 18–19, 49 and 53.

<sup>26</sup> International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), Customary International Humanitarian Law Databases, rules 1–2, 11 and 14. Available at <https://ihl-databases.icrc.org/en/customary-ihl/v1>.

<sup>27</sup> Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War of 12 August 1949 (Third Geneva Convention), art. 13; Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 32; and ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law, rule 90.

<sup>28</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 78 and part III, sects. III–IV; and ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law, rules 87–91, 99–103 and 118–137.

<sup>29</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 42; and ICRC, Customary International Humanitarian Law, rule 99.

<sup>30</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 50 (2); Additional Protocol I, art. 77 (2); and Customary International Humanitarian Law, rules 136–137.

<sup>31</sup> Third Geneva Convention, art. 13; and Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 147.

<sup>32</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (2) (a) (i–vii) and 8 (2) (b) (xxvi); Statute of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, art. 2; and Fourth Geneva Convention, art. 147. See also Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1996, p. 226, paras. 79 and 82.

<sup>33</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (1).

of liberty, apartheid, torture,<sup>34</sup> and persecution against an identifiable group,<sup>35</sup> or other inhumane acts,<sup>36</sup> when carried out “as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against any civilian population”.<sup>37</sup> While these crimes do not specifically refer to children, the International Criminal Court’s Office of the Prosecutor recognizes that crimes against or affecting children are “regarded as particularly grave, given the commitment made to children in the Statute, and the fact that children enjoy special recognition and protection under international law”.<sup>38</sup>

V. “Enjoying” rights in a militarized settler-colonial occupation

22. Violations of children’s rights in the occupied Palestinian territory have been widely documented.<sup>39</sup> Given the scale and severity of these violations, the present report places primary focus on the “inherent right to life” for every child,<sup>40</sup> a right that is to be interpreted broadly.<sup>41</sup>

23. As “the prerequisite for the enjoyment of all other human rights”, the right to life must be effectively protected.<sup>42</sup> Its protection embraces all facets of a child’s existence, with the best interest of the child taking precedence<sup>43</sup> in any matter affecting their safety, dignity and freedom.<sup>44</sup> Upholding the right to life requires State authorities to ensure the survival and well-being of children, protecting them from arbitrary loss of life and promoting an “environment that respects human dignity and ensures the holistic development of every child”.<sup>45</sup>

24. This includes preserving families’ roles in realizing children’s rights: ensuring adequate housing, access to education and the highest attainable standard of health, shielding children from any form of physical or psychological harm, and nurturing their holistic development, physically, mentally, spiritually, morally and socially. This includes ensuring opportunities for leisure, play and engagement in cultural and social activities, as well as involving children in decision-making processes, especially when their rights and freedoms are at stake.<sup>46</sup>

25. The following sections explore the structural violence experienced by Palestinian children in the occupied territory, affecting their lives and collective well-being. This, in turn, undermines the realization of the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people, and their very existence.

<sup>34</sup> Ibid., arts. 7 (1) (d–f and j).

<sup>35</sup> Ibid., art. 7 (1) (h).

<sup>36</sup> Ibid., art. 7 (1) (k).

<sup>37</sup> Ibid., art. 7 (1).

<sup>38</sup> International Criminal Court, Office of the Prosecutor, “Policy on children”, November 2016.

<sup>39</sup> United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), “Children in Israeli military detention: observations and recommendations”, February 2015; and Defense for Children International-Palestine, Palestinian Child Prisoners: the Systematic and Institutionalised Ill-Treatment and Torture of Palestinian Children by Israeli Authorities (Jerusalem, 2009).

<sup>40</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, art. 6 (1–2); and Universal Declaration of Human Rights, art. 3.

<sup>41</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, general comment No. 21 (2017), para. 29.

<sup>42</sup> Human Rights Committee, general comment No. 36 (2019), para. 2.

<sup>43</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, general comment No. 20 (2016).

<sup>44</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, preamble.

<sup>45</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child general comment No. 14 (2013).

<sup>46</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, arts. 5, 12, 19, 23(1), 24, 27(1), 27(3), 28, 31–36 and 37(a).

A. Right to live in safety

26. Preserving the right to life involves preventing the arbitrary loss of a child's life, without derogations.<sup>47</sup> In the occupied Palestinian territory, the fundamental right to life is under threat, as indicated by the mortality rates of Palestinian children: the neonatal mortality and infant mortality rates in the occupied Palestinian territory are, respectively, 9.3 and 12.7 per 1,000 live births, rising to 14.8 per 1,000 live births for children under 5, while in Israel they are 1.7, 2.7 and 3.4 per 1,000 live births.<sup>48</sup> In addition to direct attacks on the right to life, Palestinians also endure structural violence and racial discrimination, which impedes their full development.<sup>49</sup>

“I am afraid they will kill me”

27. In the context of occupation, the excessive use of force not only has outcomes but appears to be a functional component of Israel's policies. This dehumanizing approach deprives Palestinians of their protected status as civilians, irrespective of their age, location or background, placing them (in the eyes of Israel) in the category of legitimate military targets rather than protected persons under international law. This strategy, which also covers extrajudicial killings and arbitrary executions,<sup>50</sup> contributes to the removal and suppression of any impediment to Israel's territorial objectives.

28. Since 2008, over 1,434 Palestinian children have been killed and another 32,175 injured, mostly by Israeli forces.<sup>51</sup> In the same period, 25 Israeli children have been killed, mostly by Palestinian individuals, and 524 injured.<sup>52</sup> The devastating loss of human life reflects a pattern of documented “use of excessive force” against the Palestinians<sup>53</sup>. The spectre of death looms as a dominant element in the lives of Palestinian children. This reality exerts a psychosocial toll on those who manage to survive, as poignantly expressed by Ouadia, age 14: “fearing death does not prevent you from dying but it prevents you from living.”

29. The Israeli occupying forces justify such killings on the basis of “self-defence”,<sup>54</sup> “counter-terrorism”<sup>55</sup> and, in the context of hostilities in Gaza, the consequence of attacking legitimate targets,<sup>56</sup> or of Palestinian armed groups

<sup>47</sup> Human Rights Committee, general comment No. 36 (2019), para. 2.

<sup>48</sup> UNICEF, “State of Palestine”, Country Profile Database, available at <https://data.unicef.org/country/pse>; and UNICEF, “Israel”, Country Profile Database, available at <https://data.unicef.org/country/isr/> (last updated 2021).

<sup>49</sup> See CERD/C/ISR/CO/17-19.

<sup>50</sup> Amnesty International, “Israel/OPT: increase in unlawful killings and other crimes highlights urgent need to end Israel's apartheid against Palestinians”, 11 May 2022.

<sup>51</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Palestinian fatalities” and “Palestinian injuries”, Casualties Database. Available at www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties (up to 31 August 2023).

<sup>52</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Israeli fatalities” and “Israeli fatalities injuries”, Casualties Database. Available at www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties (up to 31 August 2023).

<sup>53</sup> See A/HRC/40/74; and A/77/328.

<sup>54</sup> Noura Erakat, Justice for Some: Law and the Question of Palestine (Stanford University Press, 2019). pp. 178, 182 and 186.

<sup>55</sup> Muhammad Ali Khalidi, “‘The most moral army in the world’: the new ‘ethical code’ of the Israeli military and the war on Gaza”, Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 39, No. 3 (2010), pp. 8–13.

<sup>56</sup> Israeli Defense Forces, “The secrets behind Hamas' terrorist tunnels: meet the officers responsible for the counterterrorism efforts against the Hamas underground tunnel network”, 24 January 2021.

purportedly using civilians as “human shields”.<sup>57</sup> Recently, an Israeli occupation lieutenant asserted that the number of Palestinian children “incidentally killed” during operations aimed at “eliminating terrorists” is “irrelevant”.<sup>58</sup> Such a statement is not isolated and may reflect broader operational ethics and a legal culture within the Israeli occupation forces that devalues Palestinian civilian life.<sup>59</sup>

30. Israel’s attacks against the Gaza Strip, where Palestinians have endured 16 years of unlawful blockade and six large military assaults (2008–2009, 2012, 2014, 2021, 2022 and 2023), have denied and threatened the right to life of its Palestinian people. Rockets and missiles fired by armed groups in Gaza have also denied and threatened the right to life of Israelis, including children.

31. Jointly, these Israeli military attacks have killed 4,269 Palestinians in Gaza, including 1,025 children, and injured 41,348, including 7,588 children.<sup>60</sup> Over the same period, rockets launched by Palestinian armed groups have killed 212 Israelis and injured 2,930. Such violent events terrorize children on both sides.

32. During four of their operations against Gaza,<sup>61</sup> the Israeli forces attacked Palestinian life-sustaining medical structures, services and personnel:<sup>62</sup> the military carried out 180 attacks on hospitals and medical clinics in Gaza, targeted 80 ambulances, and killed 41 medical workers and injured 104.<sup>63</sup> Attacks on health workers, ambulances and facilities have also occurred in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, where severely wounded Palestinians have been unable to receive medical treatment.<sup>64</sup>

33. Amid these hostilities, both Israeli forces and Palestinian armed groups can be found to be in violation of international law. The illegality of the 1967 occupation, including the blockade of Gaza, does not exempt Palestinian armed groups from their own obligations. Their use of rudimentary rockets targeting areas in Israel, endangering civilians, including children, may also amount to a war crime. This does not justify Israel’s indiscriminate attacks in densely populated residential areas in Gaza,<sup>65</sup> including at night when entire Palestinian families are sleeping,<sup>66</sup> with limited or no opportunity to seek refuge, and the targeting of entire residential buildings and other essential infrastructure. Pre-attack warnings have not proven effective at sparing civilian life: entire families have lost their lives in night attacks.<sup>67</sup> Furthermore, in

<sup>57</sup> Neve Gordon and Nicola Perugini, “The politics of human shielding: on the resignification of space and the constitution of civilians as shields in liberal wars”, Environment and Planning D: Society and Space, vol. 34, No. 1 (2015), pp. 182–183.

<sup>58</sup> Maurice Hirsch, Israel Defense Forces Lieutenant, tweet, 9 May 2023. Available at <https://twitter.com/MauriceHirsch4/status/1655840611704897536>.

<sup>59</sup> Yair Sheleg, “Asa Kasher: we can’t let the Israelis get killed in order to save Palestinian civilians”, Haaretz, 19 October 2006.

<sup>60</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Casualties Database, Available at www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties (last updated 31 August 2023).

<sup>61</sup> In 2008, 2009, 2012, 2014 and 2021.

<sup>62</sup> Medical Aid for Palestinians, “Health under occupation”, September 2017, p. 16; Jutta Bachmann and others, Gaza 2014: Findings of an Independent Medical Fact-Finding Mission (Physicians for Human Rights-Israel and others, 2015), pp. 34–35; Elisabeth Mahase, “Gaza: Israeli airstrikes kill doctors and damage healthcare facilities”, BMJ, vol. 373 (2021); and Medical Aid for Palestinians, “Systematic discrimination and fragmentation as key barriers to Palestinian health and healthcare”, November 2021.

<sup>63</sup> Nicola Perugini and Neve Gordon, “Medical lawfare: the Palestinian Nakba and Israel’s attacks on healthcare” (forthcoming in Journal of Palestine Studies (2024)).

<sup>64</sup> Interview with a World Health Organization (WHO) representative.

<sup>65</sup> A/HRC/49/83, paras. 9–10.

<sup>66</sup> Amnesty International, “Israel/OPT: civilian deaths and extensive destruction in latest Gaza offensive”, 13 June 2023.

<sup>67</sup> B’Tselem, Black Flag: The Legal and Moral Implications of the Policy of Attacking Residential Buildings in the Gaza Strip, Summer 2014 (Jerusalem, 2015).

Israel's targeted assassinations, there are no warnings and children become "collateral damage". Palestinians in Gaza have been imprisoned for 16 years and have few if any places to hide when bombs fall upon them; even United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) schools have proved not to be safe. Children from Gaza describe life after military assaults as an act of mourning: "even when one survives, life becomes unbearable".

34. The Israeli military often claims that the Palestinians use their children as "human shields" on the front lines.<sup>68</sup> However, already in 2009 the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict identified a practice that continues today: while Palestinians killed by the Israeli occupying forces, including children, are sometimes posthumously labelled as "martyrs" by political factions, this is not proof of involvement in armed activities, but is part of a collective consciousness and is accepted by the families who receive financial support from armed groups.<sup>69</sup> The same Mission also raised concerns about potential fabrications of Israel's accusations that schools and hospitals were used by armed groups; as Israel itself conceded, the images it provided to the Fact-Finding Mission were not from the 2008–2009 war.<sup>70</sup>

35. Reports by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and independent commissions of inquiry have found that Israeli military attacks against Palestinian civilians were unnecessary or disproportionate, amounting to arbitrary deprivation of life.<sup>71</sup> On documented occasions, Palestinians who were not posing any kind of threat have been attacked with unnecessary force,<sup>72</sup> even as they were standing "in front of a clinic while attempting to leave the village holding white flags"<sup>73</sup> or while playing football on the beach<sup>74</sup> or while gathered around their grandfather's grave.<sup>75</sup>

36. The violence of these multiple lethal attacks is highly traumatic for children in Gaza, where over half of them may be affected by post-traumatic stress disorder.<sup>76</sup> With very few qualified child and adolescent psychiatrists in Gaza, access to mental health services for children is almost non-existent. The children have inconsolable pain and "fears of dying or losing [their] beloved ones".<sup>77</sup>

37. In the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, Israel's assaults on Palestinians have not spared Palestinian children. Since the second intifada, in 2000, the frequency, toll and brutality of Israel's military assaults have persisted. Attacks on cultural spaces and activities have increased, including the violence against worshippers in the Al-Aqsa Mosque during Ramadan in 2021, 2022 and 2023. The experience of the Jenin refugee camp, an area of 0.42 km<sup>2</sup> hosting about 24,000 refugees,<sup>78</sup> is an example of this structural violence. Beyond the incursions and

<sup>68</sup> Israel Defense Forces, "Operation Cast Lead", 30 October 2017; Israel Defense Forces, " Hamas uses Gazans as human shields when launching rockets", 29 October 2012; Israel Defense Forces, "Operation Protective Edge", 30 October 2017; Israel Defense Forces, "Operation Guardian of the Walls", 14 June 2021; and Gordon and Perugini, Human Shields: A History of People in the Line of Fire, pp. 22, 170–179 and 214–216.

<sup>69</sup> A/HRC/12/48, para. 423.

<sup>70</sup> Ibid., paras. 449–452.

<sup>71</sup> A/HRC/49/83, para. 25; A/HRC/12/48, para. 1431; A/HRC/29/52, para. 71; and A/HRC/22/35/Add.1, para. 10.

<sup>72</sup> A/HRC/28/80/Add.1, para. 43.

<sup>73</sup> A/HRC/29/52, para. 59.

<sup>74</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Occupied Palestinian Territory: Gaza emergency humanitarian snapshot", 17 July 2014.

<sup>75</sup> A/HRC/52/75, para. 8.

<sup>76</sup> WHO, document A72/33, para. 15.

<sup>77</sup> Interview with children in the Gaza Strip, August 2023.

<sup>78</sup> United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), "Camp profile: Jenin camp", 2023.

military operations that Israel considers routine, the Jenin camp has been attacked seven times in 2023,<sup>79</sup> killing 40 Palestinians, including 9 children. “They were bombing us from everywhere, they were everywhere, we were so scared that our parents may die,” said Yasmine, age 16, referring to the assault that occurred from 3 to 5 July 2023. The children observing the assaults from outside the camp were scared for their friends and for their Freedom Theatre, “the only place where we enjoy our life and we are not scared”. Children from the Jenin camp spoke fondly of 15-year-old Sadeel Naghniyeh, killed by an Israeli sniper in the head while in her courtyard, during the withdrawal of the occupation forces from the Jenin camp.<sup>80</sup>

38. Repeated exposure to death and violence under Israeli occupation results in high levels of mental and emotional distress among Palestinian children. One teenager in the Dheisheh refugee camp commented: “if this is what life looks like at 15, I swear death is more merciful”. Recently, Palestinian children in the West Bank started to carry farewell letters in their pockets.<sup>81</sup>

39. When asked to describe their main source of fear, Palestinian children referred to the Israeli soldiers and the settlers.<sup>82</sup> The gruesome killings by Israeli settlers of Muhammad Abu Khdeir, age 16, in the Shu’fat refugee camp in 2014 and the Dawabsheh family killing in the village of Duma in 2015 are still vivid for Palestinian children. Israeli settlers, including children and youth, have become increasingly aggressive, coordinating mass assaults on Palestinian towns in the West Bank.<sup>83</sup> Since 2017, the United Nations has documented 3,244 such incidents, resulting in 920 Palestinian casualties and damage to 2,324 properties.<sup>84</sup> Extreme forms of settler violence include incursions into Palestinian property, including at night, regular “pogroms”, the torching of infrastructure and physical assaults against Palestinian residents,<sup>85</sup> all under the eyes of the Israeli occupation forces, with some of it publicly praised by some senior Israeli officials.<sup>86</sup> Within these incidents, children are targeted even when running away from the soldiers, such as Ramzi Fathi, age 17, who was fatally shot in the chest and abdomen.<sup>87</sup> “The life of children should be sacrosanct,” said a mother of three from the Jenin refugee camp. Instead, “our children are killed, threatened, intimidated; it is an entire system designed for it”.<sup>88</sup>

40. As a 13-year-old child in Gaza lamented, “Even when we protest, they kill us,” referring to the Israeli forces’ open-fire policy during the weekly protests in the Gaza Strip during the 2018–2019 Great March of Return, resulting in the death of 223

<sup>79</sup> In January, March, June and July.

<sup>80</sup> Basel Adra, “Her smile never left her face”, +972mag, 5 July 2023.

<sup>81</sup> Qassam Muaddi, “The ongoing Nakba: why Dheisheh camp’s Palestinian teenagers are carrying farewell letter in their pockets”, New Arab, 5 June 2023 (confirmed by Defense for Children-Palestine).

<sup>82</sup> Interviews with children in West Bank, August 2023, and Jerusalem, February 2023.

<sup>83</sup> Norwegian Refugee Council, “Attribution of settler-violence to the State of Israel”, 2023 (forthcoming).

<sup>84</sup> United Nations, “Increase in settler violence, displacement, remarks by OCHA Spokesperson Jens Laerke”, 5 August 2023.

<sup>85</sup> Avishay Mohar, “Settlers have a very effective system for forcing Palestinians out of their homes”, Haaretz, 1 September 2023.

<sup>86</sup> Michael Bachner, “Israel should ‘wipe out’ Palestinian town of Huwara, says senior minister Smotrich”, The Times of Israel, 1 March 2023; and Thomas Helm, “Far-right Israeli minister Ben-Gvir calls for killing of ‘thousands of terrorists’”, 23 June 2023.

<sup>87</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, “17-year-old Palestinian boy succumbs to gunshot wounds from Israeli settlers”, 7 August 2023.

<sup>88</sup> Interview with Palestinian women from Northern West Bank.

Palestinians, including 46 children, and injuring 36,100, including 8,800 children.<sup>89</sup> The independent international commission of inquiry on the protests in the occupied Palestinian territory concluded that “Israeli security forces used lethal force against children who did not pose an imminent threat of death or serious injury to its soldiers. Four of the children were shot as they walked or ran away from the fence”<sup>90</sup> and “Israeli snipers shot them intentionally, knowing that they were children”.<sup>91</sup> A shoot to kill policy<sup>92</sup> is deployed against Palestinian adults and children alike in the occupied territory. Irrespective of whether these children are directly targeted, these attacks cast a profound effect on children.

41. Beyond arbitrarily taking lives, Israel has forced Palestinian children to be at the frontline of military operations, including toddlers.<sup>93</sup> Since 2000, at least 31 children have been forced to stand in front of a military tank or a soldier, witnessing the destruction of their surroundings.<sup>94</sup> One of these children recalls: “I was trembling and crying and shouting to the soldiers to remove me because the bullets were passing over my head, but one of them ordered me in Arabic through a small window in the military vehicle: ‘Stay where you are and don’t move. You’re a terrorist. Stand in your place until you say goodbye to your brother’.”<sup>95</sup>

Maiming

42. “When they do not kill [our children], they may remain ruined forever”, says a Palestinian mother, reflecting how many children have been maimed by Israeli forces and settler violence.<sup>96</sup> Between 2019 and 2022, 1,679 Palestinian children and 15 Israeli children suffered lasting physical injury.<sup>97</sup>

43. Medical personnel in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank report a change in tactics, manifested in the shift from traditional methods of dispersing protests to deliberately targeting protestors’ knees, femurs or vital organs to pre-emptively debilitate the capacity for any other form of opposition to Israel’s oppression.<sup>98</sup> During the 2018 protests in Gaza, Israeli forces permanently disabled many of the 940 children shot during the demonstrations, including 20 children left maimed,<sup>99</sup> and through other lifelong disabilities, such as blindness.<sup>100</sup> Israel’s use of force against <sup>89</sup> B’Tselem and Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, Unwilling and Unable: Israel’s Whitewashed Investigation of the Great March of Return Protests (2021); and United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Two years on: people injured and traumatized during the ‘Great March of Return’ are still struggling”, 6 April 2020.

<sup>90</sup> A/HRC/40/74, para. 67.

<sup>91</sup> Ibid., para. 68.

<sup>92</sup> Amnesty International, “Israel: ‘deliberate attempts’ by military to kill and maim Gaza protesters continues”, 27 April 2018; and B’Tselem and Palestinian Centre for Human Rights, Unwilling and Unable, p. 6.

<sup>93</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, “Israel forces use five Palestinian children as human shields”, 18 May 2023.

<sup>94</sup> Ibid.

<sup>95</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, “Israel forces use Palestinian girl as a human shield in Jenin”, 19 May 2022.

<sup>96</sup> Interview with Palestinian mothers in Jenin, August 2023.

<sup>97</sup> A/74/845-S/2020/525, para. 86, A/75/873-S/2021/437, para. 79, A/76/871-S/2022/493, para. 88, and A/77/895-S/2023/363, para. 89.

<sup>98</sup> Jasbir K. Puar, The Right to Maim: Debility, Capacity, Disability (Duke University Press, 2017), p. 129.

<sup>99</sup> See A/HRC/40/74.

<sup>100</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, “Israeli forces blind 3 Palestinian children with live ammunition, stun grenade”, 20 July 2023.

the protesters was found to be “neither necessary nor proportionate, and therefore impermissible”.<sup>101</sup>

44. Deliberately maiming children and young people reflects the level of dehumanization they are subjected to.<sup>102</sup> Children embody this existential cruelty: it allows life to continue, yet it perpetuates fear and vulnerability<sup>103</sup> and makes life “something resembling an incomplete death”.<sup>104</sup>

Arbitrary arrest and detention

45. Since 2000, an estimated 13,000 Palestinian children have been detained, interrogated, prosecuted and imprisoned by Israeli occupation forces,<sup>105</sup> with an average of between 500 and 700 children detained yearly.<sup>106</sup> Between 2022 and 2023, the number of children detained without charge or trial has risen, with currently 20 children in administrative detention.<sup>107</sup> Cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment is widely reported<sup>108</sup> and their tribulation through arrest and detention is covered elsewhere.<sup>109</sup> Palestinian children can be arrested anywhere, at checkpoints, on their way to school, during operations in towns and camps, or even in their own beds. One mother recounted the night arrest of her son: “They forcefully dragged him, hit him ..., they hooded him while I was standing there screaming ‘He is a child ... have mercy, a child’, and he was calling me, ‘Yamma, yamma [mom, mom],’ and I could not do anything ... Seeing him vomiting while he was being hooded with their bag”.<sup>110</sup>

46. The majority of children are charged with stone throwing<sup>111</sup> at Israeli forces’ armoured vehicles, which may result in sentences of 10 to 20 years. For example, Naveen, age nine, recounted: “I started picking up stones, trash from the street, and even my juice bottle and screamed loudly to prevent them from arresting my father.”<sup>112</sup>

47. In over a decade, at least 1,598 Palestinian children have been subjected to ill-treatment upon arrest and detention.<sup>113</sup> Allegations of torture have been widely documented.<sup>114</sup>

<sup>101</sup> A/HRC/40/74, para. 96.

<sup>102</sup> Hilo Glazer, “‘42 knees in one day’: Israeli snipers open up about shooting Gaza protesters”, Haaretz, 6 March 2020; and Jonathan Ofir, “‘I remember the knee in the crosshairs, bursting open’ – Israeli snipers boast of shooting ‘ducks’ in Gaza”, Mondoweiss, 8 March 2020.

<sup>103</sup> Jasbir K. Puar, “The ‘right’ to maim: disablement and inhumanist biopolitics in Palestine”, Borderlands, vol. 14, No. 1 (2015), pp. 7–8.

<sup>104</sup> Frantz Fanon, A Dying Colonialism (Grove Press, 1965), p. 128.

<sup>105</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, Arbitrary by Default: Palestinian Children in the Israeli Military Court System (2023), p. 20.

<sup>106</sup> Ibid.

<sup>107</sup> Addameer, Statistics Database, available at www.addameer.org/statistics (last update September 2023).

<sup>108</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, Arbitrary by Default, pp. 29–30; Naama Baumgarten-Sharon, No Minor Matter: Violation of the Rights of Palestinian Minors Arrested by Israel on Suspicion of Stone Throwing (B’Tselem, 2011), pp. 37–38; and CRC/C/15/Add.195, para. 36.

<sup>109</sup> A/HRC/53/59, paras. 65–72.

<sup>110</sup> Shalhoub-Kevorkian, Incarcerated Childhood, p. 74.

<sup>111</sup> Save the Children, “Injustice: Palestinian children’s experience of the Israeli military detention system”, July 2023, p. 8.

<sup>112</sup> Nadera Shalhoub-Kevorkian, “Necropenology: conquering new bodies, psychics, and territories of death in East Jerusalem”, Identities: Global Studies in Culture and Power, vol. 27, No. 3 (March 2020).

<sup>113</sup> Annual reports of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, 2010–2023; and Save the Children, “Injustice”, p. 13.

<sup>114</sup> Save the Children, “Defenceless: the impact of Israeli military detention on Palestinian children”; and Defense for Children-Palestine, Arbitrary by Default.

48. Upon arrest, 77 per cent of children are denied access to a lawyer prior to interrogation<sup>115</sup> and nearly 60 per cent of them are deported to Israel.<sup>116</sup> Transferring detainees outside the occupied Palestinian territory constitutes a war crime.<sup>117</sup> It hinders family visits, owing to difficulties obtaining Israeli-issued permits. Typically, a child receives just one sporadic visit from family members, further isolating the child from family and community. Parents are rarely informed of their child's whereabouts upon arrest, which not only violates the Convention on the Rights of the Child but also may amount to enforced disappearance,<sup>118</sup> which, in the context of a widespread or systematic attack directed at the civilian population, constitutes a crime against humanity.<sup>119</sup>

49. Palestinian children often experience solitary confinement in windowless cells that are constantly lighted.<sup>120</sup> This prohibited practice,<sup>121</sup> very common during interrogation, has increased from 12.5 average days in 2022 to 16.5 in 2023.<sup>122</sup> The irreparable effect of solitary confinement on young people at such a critical stage of their neurological, physiological and social development, has a serious risk of long-term developmental impairment and psychological harm.<sup>123</sup> The practice is associated with an increased risk of suicide and self-harm and creates problems with reintegration. Reflecting this troubling reality is the case of Ahmad Manasra, who has been in solitary confinement since November 2021, despite developing schizophrenia.<sup>124</sup> Cases of Palestinian children in Israeli custody resorting to self-harm and attempting suicide are not rare.<sup>125</sup>

50. Trials last three minutes on average, during which children may see their family and lawyer for the first time since their arrest after a protracted period apart.<sup>126</sup> Parents recount the horror of seeing their young children appearing before a martial court for a few seconds, surrounded by guards and with “the judge not even looking at [their] children [while] taking one minute to sentence them to imprisonment”.<sup>127</sup>

51. This calvary deeply traumatizes Palestinian children and their families and communities.<sup>128</sup> Most of the children, like Bassam, aged 11 when arrested, cannot comprehend all this: “What right do they have to arrest me and put me in prison for 100 days, threaten to arrest my father, and hit my mother? I was exposed to torture and spent ages without food or sleep.”<sup>129</sup>

52. Israel's concept of “military juvenile justice” runs counter to fundamental protections for children during arrest and detention, including their right to a fair trial, breaching the obligations to only detain children as a last resort, for the shortest possible duration, with the assistance of a legal representative; respect the presumption of innocence and privacy; and never subject children to torture or cruel

<sup>115</sup> Military Court Watch, Annual Report: 2021/22 (2022), pp. 15–16.

<sup>116</sup> Save the Children, “Defenceless”, p. 9.

<sup>117</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (2) (b) (viii).

<sup>118</sup> International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, art. 2.

<sup>119</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 7 (1) (i).

<sup>120</sup> Military Court Watch, Annual Report: 2021/22, p. 18.

<sup>121</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, art. 37.

<sup>122</sup> Defense for Children-Palestine, Arbitrary by Default, p. 2.

<sup>123</sup> Editorial, “Solitary confinement of children and young people”, The Lancet, vol. 391, No. 10131 (April 2018).

<sup>124</sup> Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, “UN experts urge Israel to free Ahmad Manasra”, 14 July 2022.

<sup>125</sup> Military Court Watch, annual report (2021/22), p. 19.

<sup>126</sup> Baumgarten-Sharon, No Minor Matter, p. 50.

<sup>127</sup> Interview with mothers in Jerusalem, February 2023.

<sup>128</sup> Gwyn Daniel, “‘The strong do what they can and the weak suffer what they must’: Palestinian families under occupation”, Context, vol. 164 (August 2019), p. 49.

<sup>129</sup> Save the Children, “Defenceless”, p. 17.

treatment. Extrajudicial killings of children deprive them of the right to even a trial, as with Ahmad Manasra's cousin Hassan who was armed with a knife, not a gun, but killed immediately.

53. In addition, these practices include instances of house arrest, where parents are compelled to act as the guardians for their detained children within their own homes.<sup>130</sup> "I became my son's jailer, I felt he resented me", said a mother of a 17-year-old sentenced to house arrest after six months in detention.<sup>131</sup> Contrary to the principles of humane treatment and the preservation of family integrity,<sup>132</sup> this disrupts the developmental trajectory of the child and family life. Jamal, detained at age 15, explained: "You have your whole life planned out but then you get arrested, and it ruins everything ... It's as if this experience robs you of your time and your future."<sup>133</sup> Requiring parents to act as the arm of the occupying Power can also produce irreparable rifts in family life, as children may view it as collusion rather than a desire to protect them from prison.

54. Children who have experienced detention report anxiety, depression and personality changes.<sup>134</sup> Parents report noticeable changes in their children's behaviour, including increased clinginess, isolation and a lack of interest in ordinary or enjoyable activities.<sup>135</sup> Children are constantly haunted by the fear of being rearrested, with 59 per cent thinking about this possibility daily. As one mother recalled, "my son became angrier, but he does not want to talk about it".

B. Right to live in dignity

55. "How can children ever be happy under occupation?" asks Adnan, a father of four from the Jenin refugee camp. In the occupied West Bank, the expansion of Israeli-Jewish colonies, discriminatory zoning and planning, and the exploitation of Palestinian land and other resources at the expense of Palestinian sovereignty have confined Palestinians into impoverished and densely populated "enclaves", making the achievement of life in dignity unattainable.<sup>136</sup>

56. The Gaza Strip, under illegal siege and blockade, is the most obvious example of the restrictions on movement and access, but the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, has many areas where Palestinians are effectively corralled into towns and villages surrounded by colonies, military encampments, hundreds of fixed and mobile checkpoints, 400 km of segregated roads, "military zones" inaccessible to Palestinians, and the Wall and the separation it entails.

57. Children feel this physical segregation keenly. It is compounded by bureaucratic obstacles requiring Palestinians to obtain Israeli-issued permits for even basic aspects of life, including travel within the West Bank and Gaza Strip (Jerusalem being inaccessible to most Palestinians) for construction, work, education and health care. Mass surveillance technologies, including cameras, drones and social media monitoring, further augment this control, infringing on privacy and leading to arrests for minor infractions. These controls create formidable barriers to communication, movement and development, depriving families, and especially children, of essential

<sup>130</sup> MIFTAH, "Locked in: Israel's house arrest policy against Palestinian children", 11 April 2020.

<sup>131</sup> Interview with parents and former child detainees, Jerusalem, February 2023.

<sup>132</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, arts. 3, 9 and 16.

<sup>133</sup> Save the Children, "Injustice", p. 3.

<sup>134</sup> Save the Children, "Defenceless", p. 20.

<sup>135</sup> Save the Children, "Injustice", p. 16.

<sup>136</sup> See A/72/556; and Adam Aloni, Expel and Exploit: The Israeli Practice of Taking over Palestinian Land (B'Tselem, 2016).

resources for social and economic growth and the opportunity to live in dignity and reach their full potential.

Coerced poverty and de-development

58. Israel's settler colonial occupation is costing $11 billion to the Palestinian economy,<sup>137</sup> and has driven the “de-development” of the occupied territory, forcing 2.1 million Palestinians in the territory, half of whom are children, below the poverty line.<sup>138</sup> Unequal access to natural resources, including water,<sup>139</sup> together with the consequent gradual erosion of family livelihoods,<sup>140</sup> self-sufficiency in agriculture, industry and fishing<sup>141</sup> entrench economic instability and income decline.<sup>142</sup> Born and growing deprived of critical resources and land, Palestinian children have to rely on foreign aid for basic necessities.<sup>143</sup> Some half a million Palestinian children are food insecure, lacking reliable access to nutritious and sufficient food.<sup>144</sup> This affects their mental, physical and behavioural health, their education, and consequent life opportunities.<sup>145</sup>

59. A quarter of childhood diseases in Gaza may be linked to water contamination<sup>146</sup> as 75 per cent of Gaza's sustainable groundwater is taken by the occupying power,<sup>147</sup> with most of the remainder not fit for human consumption.<sup>148</sup> In the West Bank, where Israel controls 87 per cent of the mountain water, a Palestinian child has access to only a quarter of the water amount available to a neighbouring Israeli settler.<sup>149</sup> To Palestinian children in the water-scarce Jordan Valley, this “water apartheid”<sup>150</sup> manifests itself through their families being forced to buy (their own) drinking water from Israeli companies,<sup>151</sup> give up traditional herding practices and witness their crops withering, while Israeli children in illegal colonies “enjoy ‘lush’ settings, including well-watered lawns, swimming pools and aqua-parks”.<sup>152</sup>

60. Witnessing the erosion of their parents' livelihood and dignity hurts children the most: “It is sad to see our fathers having lost everything they had, now they spend

<sup>137</sup> See A/76/309 and A/75/310.

<sup>138</sup> International Monetary Fund, West Bank and Gaza, Report to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, Country Report No. 2022/298 (2022).

<sup>139</sup> Al-Haq, Corporate Liability: The Right to Water and the War Crime of Pillage (2022); and A/HRC/48/43.

<sup>140</sup> Norwegian Refugee Council, “Area C is everything: planning for the future of Palestine”, March 2023, p. 2.

<sup>141</sup> See A/71/174.

<sup>142</sup> Sara Roy, “De-development revisited: Palestinian economy and society since Oslo”, Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 28, No. 3 (Spring 1999), pp. 64–82.

<sup>143</sup> Mandy Turner, “Introduction: from the river to the sea – charting the changes in Palestine and Israel since 1993”, in From the River to the Sea: Palestine and Israel in the “Shadow of Peace”, Mandy Turner, ed. (Lanham, Maryland, Lexington Books, 2019).

<sup>144</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Needs Overview 2023: Occupied Palestinian Territory (2023), pp. 45–46.

<sup>145</sup> Osama Tanous, Bram Wispelwey and Rania Muhareb, “Beyond statelessness: ‘unchilding’ and the health of Palestinian children in Jerusalem”, Statelessness and Citizenship Review, vol. 4, No. 1 (2022), pp. 106–107.

<sup>146</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Needs Overview 2023.

<sup>147</sup> Communications No. AL ISR 13/2020.

<sup>148</sup> UNICEF, Water, Sanitation and Hygiene Assessment at the Household Level in the Gaza Strip (2017), p. 4.

<sup>149</sup> Amnesty International, “The occupation of water”, 29 November 2017.

<sup>150</sup> Elisabeth Koek, Water for One People Only: Discriminatory Access and ‘Water Apartheid’ in the OPT (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2013).

<sup>151</sup> Al-Haq, Corporate Liability.

<sup>152</sup> Amnesty International, “Demand dignity: troubled waters – Palestinians denied fair access to water”, October 2009; and interviews with children.

most of their time at home,” said children in the Jenin refugee camp. The decreasing household income<sup>153</sup> has been connected to increased levels of domestic violence,<sup>154</sup> school dropout and child labour.<sup>155</sup> Children above the age of 10 in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (nearly 1 per cent of them in the latter) are forced into full-time labour,<sup>156</sup> including in Israel itself or in the illegal colonies, where they face exploitative labour conditions,<sup>157</sup> humiliations by Israelis and stigmatization by other Palestinians.<sup>158</sup> “Many of us have to support our families, but finding jobs in Israel is dangerous: we have to enter illegally and accept to be mistreated all the time by them”, children from the West Bank told the Special Rapporteur.

Coerced homelessness

61. Homes are essential for children to grow, thrive and feel safe. The right to adequate housing includes secure tenure, protection against forced evictions and expulsions, access to services like drinking water and energy, along with the protection of privacy and the freedom to choose one’s residence.<sup>159</sup> Homes should be highly protected, including under occupation or during hostilities: wanton destruction of civilian property not justified by military necessity and carried out unlawfully, as well as destroying or seizing the property, amount to war crimes.<sup>160</sup>

62. For many Palestinian children, the safety and stability of their home remains an aspiration “under the rubble”.<sup>161</sup> Since 1967,<sup>162</sup> as a deliberate tool of erasing Palestinian presence,<sup>163</sup> Israel has demolished 56,500 Palestinian homes through military operations, discriminatory zoning and planning<sup>164</sup> and as collective punishment.<sup>165</sup>

63. Large-scale forced evictions, home demolitions and forced displacement have had a direct impact on children. In the West Bank, Israel has allocated 0.24 per cent of the land (in Area C) for Palestinians’ growth and development,<sup>166</sup> with 99.76 per cent allocated for the growth and development of illegal Israeli colonies.<sup>167</sup> Most

<sup>153</sup> Unemployment rates are 13 per cent in the West Bank and 45 per cent in the Gaza Strip, as presented in the main findings of the Labour Force Survey in 2022 by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics.

<sup>154</sup> Efrain Gonzales de Olarte and Pilar Gavilano Llosa, “Does poverty cause domestic violence? Some answers from Lima”, in Too Close to Home: Domestic Violence in the Americas, Andrew R. Morrison and Maria Loreto Biehl, eds. (Washington, D.C., Inter-American Development Bank, 1999).

<sup>155</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “Child labour increasing in Gaza”, Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, April 2019; and Human Rights Watch, Ripe for Abuse: Palestinian Child Labour in Israeli Agricultural Settlements in the West Bank (2015).

<sup>156</sup> Save the Children, “Trapped: the impact of 15 years of blockade on the mental health of Gaza’s children”, 2022.

<sup>157</sup> International Labour Organization, The situation of Workers of the Occupied Arab Territories (Geneva, 2022), p. 10.

<sup>158</sup> Mark Samander, Captive Markets, Captive Lives: Palestinian Workers in Israeli Settlements (Ramallah, Al-Haq, 2021).

<sup>159</sup> Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, general comment No. 4 (1991), para. 9.

<sup>160</sup> Fourth Geneva Convention, arts. 53 and 147; Rome Statute, art. 8 (2) (a) (iv).

<sup>161</sup> Save the Children, “‘Hope under the rubble’: the impact of Israel’s home demolition policy on Palestinian children and their families”, 2021.

<sup>162</sup> Rashid Khalidi, The Hundred Years’ War on Palestine: A History of settler Colonialism and Resistance, 1917–2017 (Metropolitan Books, 2020).

<sup>163</sup> Amnesty International, Israel’s Apartheid against Palestinians: Cruel System of Domination and Crime against Humanity (London, 2022), pp. 24–26 and 30.

<sup>164</sup> Israeli Committee Against House Demolitions, “Statistics on house/structure demolitions: November 1947–August 2022”, 23 September 2022.

<sup>165</sup> See A/HRC/44/60.

<sup>166</sup> Peace Now, “State land allocation in the West Bank – for Israelis only”, 17 July 2018.

<sup>167</sup> Ibid.

Palestinians are forced to build without Israeli permits, because they are routinely denied. As a result, some 10,000 Palestinian houses in the West Bank have demolition orders pending.<sup>168</sup> In East Jerusalem, where at least a third of Palestinian homes lack a permit, 2,020 houses have already been destroyed since 2004<sup>169</sup> and 20,000 houses have pending demolition orders,<sup>170</sup> placing over 100,000 residents, the majority of them children, at risk of forced displacement.

64. Palestinian children often witness their parents coerced into self-demolishing their homes to avoid facing steep fines.<sup>171</sup> The accompanying feelings of failure and depression have a direct impact on parenting and on parents' ability to support their children.

65. Children are severely traumatized by this all-encompassing destruction and violence.<sup>172</sup> "All I have are sad memories," said Ghassan, age 15. "I still feel traumatized by the soldiers and their dogs attacking and injuring my father [during the demolition]. I have nightmares about the bulldozers ripping away every stone in our house, and the sounds of the explosions still haunt me."<sup>173</sup>

66. Israel also resorts to "punitive" home demolitions against Palestinians accused of having attacked Israeli civilians or forces.<sup>174</sup> Samer, age 11, said: "My father was killed by soldiers who claimed that he was violent around a settlement [colony]... Not only did I lose the most important person in my life, but then they came for our house. First, they made me an orphan, then they made me homeless."<sup>175</sup>

67. In the Gaza Strip, Israel's attacks on residential areas have destroyed 18,507 houses and damaged 26,338 since 2000, affecting half a million Palestinians, half of them children.<sup>176</sup> Israel has justified these actions purportedly for security land clearance or punishing alleged "terrorists".<sup>177</sup> Approximately 200 children were affected by the nearly 300 punitive home demolitions.<sup>178</sup>

68. Even if their own home is not demolished, children live with the daily risk that it may be at any time. Witnessing it happening to friends, they constantly receive the message "you are living on borrowed time", as an interviewee said. Forced eviction and home demolitions rekindle the trauma endured by their parents. This intergenerational impact is likely to continue for future generations.<sup>179</sup>

69. Israel's ban on importing essential building supplies has made repair and recovery exceedingly difficult.<sup>180</sup> In 2009, the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission

<sup>168</sup> Israeli Committee Against House Demolitions, "Israel's demolition of Palestinian homes: a fact sheet", 29 April 2021.

<sup>169</sup> B'tselem, House Demolition Database, available at <https://statistics.btselem.org/en/intro/demolitions> (accessed on 12 September 2023).

<sup>170</sup> B'tselem, "Maintaining a Jewish majority: Jerusalem municipality to demolish entire Palestinian neighbourhood, leaving 550 people without a roof over their heads", 13 June 2019.

<sup>171</sup> Save the Children, "Hope under the rubble".

<sup>172</sup> Ibid., p. 4.

<sup>173</sup> Ibid., p. 12.

<sup>174</sup> B'Tselem, "Home demolitions as collective punishment", 11 November 2017.

<sup>175</sup> Save the Children, "Hope under the rubble", p. 10.

<sup>176</sup> Al Mezan Centre for Human Rights, "Destruction of residential houses between 2000–28 February 2023", Destruction of Residential Houses Database. Available at <https://mezan.org/en/page/20/Destruction-of-Residential-Houses>.

<sup>177</sup> B'Tselem, House Demolitions Database, available at <https://statistics.btselem.org/en/demolitions/alleged-military-purposes?tab=overview> (accessed on 2 September 2023).

<sup>178</sup> Ibid.

<sup>179</sup> A/HRC/50/21, para. 55.

<sup>180</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, "Gaza strip: import restrictions impede delivery of services and humanitarian", Humanitarian Bulletin: Occupied Palestinian Territory, October 2015.

on the Gaza Conflict found that “destruction by the Israeli armed forces of private residential houses, water wells, water tanks, agricultural land and greenhouses ... [served] a specific purpose of denying sustenance to the population of the Gaza Strip”.<sup>181</sup>

70. These policies have led to long-lasting emotional distress.<sup>182</sup> Children recount the desperation of their “dreams for the future disappearing overnight”.<sup>183</sup> After experiencing home loss, most children experience feelings of hopelessness and defeatism, social isolation and disconnection from their community. They feel abandoned by the world, and lose focus on their education.<sup>184</sup> Fadi, age 16, asked: “why should I even entertain the idea of envisioning a brighter future?”<sup>185</sup>

Deprivation of education

71. Central to a child’s psychosocial development and well-being are education and leisure time.<sup>186</sup> Education is a stand-alone human right,<sup>187</sup> cultivating the human personality’s “sense of dignity”, and a pivotal means to realize other rights and the child’s full potential.<sup>188</sup> Schools must serve as a secure space for a child’s development, promoting a continuum with the child’s family life.<sup>189</sup> Intentionally directing attacks on education facilities constitutes a war crime.<sup>190</sup>

72. Palestinian children in the occupied territory express a particular love for education, viewing their schools as a respite from the day-to-day oppression, granting them a sense of “freedom” and fostering the imagination of “a brighter future”.<sup>191</sup> However, attacks on schools, including the military use of schools, is another grave violation committed against Palestinian children.

73. In the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the primary challenge to education is Israel’s discriminatory permit system, which constrains Palestinians’ ability to construct, improve, or even maintain existing schools.<sup>192</sup> A total of 11 Palestinian schools have been demolished since 2010, while demolition orders hang over 59 schools (51 in Area C of the West Bank and 8 in East Jerusalem)<sup>193</sup> serving 6,800 students. In November 2022, the Israeli occupying authorities demolished the only primary school in Masafer Yatta (Isfey al-Faqa) while children were still inside, forcing them to flee from bulldozers through the school’s windows and then confiscating all their textbooks and school furniture.<sup>194</sup> In this environment, schools are unable to modernize or upgrade.<sup>195</sup> In the Gaza Strip, there are not enough

<sup>181</sup> A/HRC/12/48, para. 73.

<sup>182</sup> Save the Children, “Hope under the rubble”, p. 12.

<sup>183</sup> Various reports, including Norwegian Refugee Council, “Learning on the margins: the evolving nature of educational vulnerability in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in the time of COVID-19”, April 2021, p. 32.

<sup>184</sup> Ibid.

<sup>185</sup> Save the Children, “Hope under the rubble”.

<sup>186</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, arts. 28–29.

<sup>187</sup> International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, art. 13.

<sup>188</sup> Convention on the Rights of the Child, art. 29 (1).

<sup>189</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, general comment No. 14 (2013), para. 70.

<sup>190</sup> Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, arts. 8 (2) (b) (ii, v and ix).

<sup>191</sup> Group of girls in Rafah, Norwegian Refugee Council, “Learning on the margins”, p. 30.

<sup>192</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Needs Overview 2023, p. 50.

<sup>193</sup> West Bank Protection Consortium, “Protecting the right to education for children in Area C of the West Bank”, September 2023.

<sup>194</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, “West Bank demolitions and displacement: an overview”, January–March 2023.

<sup>195</sup> West Bank Protection Consortium, “Protecting the right to education for children in Area C”.

classrooms and 70 per cent of UNRWA schools and 63 per cent of government-run schools have to operate through double or triple shifts.<sup>196</sup>

74. In the West Bank, going to school becomes “physically exhausting”,<sup>197</sup> because “sometimes, we have to run away from danger such as soldiers,” said Aladdin, age 14, from Bethlehem.<sup>198</sup> Checkpoints and intimidating soldiers and settlers affect 80 per cent of students.<sup>199</sup> “I can never get to my destination on time. It takes hours because [the soldiers] search us and check our identity cards”, said Rima, age 13, from Bethlehem.<sup>200</sup> Abir, age 14, saw on her way to school “a Palestinian boy walking in the street. The soldiers stopped him, body-searched him, hit him, and arrested him because he refused to take off his pants for their strip search”.<sup>201</sup> Ali, from Masafer Yatta,<sup>202</sup> was escorted to school by the Israeli military for 17 years, as the children of Masafer Yatta continue to be, to avoid physical attacks by settlers; he said: “it is unconscionable that the cost of going to school can mean coming back home with a broken body and losing the whole school year”.

75. Since 2012, over 300 children and teachers have faced arrest and detention while in or going to school.<sup>203</sup> Another 481 had their school equipment confiscated at checkpoints.<sup>204</sup> Military attacks on schools are also frequent, with 1,826 incursions or direct shelling and attacks by the Israeli occupying forces recorded over 12 years.<sup>205</sup> “Soldiers attacked my school three or four times last year. They threw tear gas and shot live ammunition. Some teachers and students couldn’t breathe,” said Farea’, age 12, from Hebron.<sup>206</sup> Tear gas, stun grenades, rubber-coated bullets, live ammunition and other weapons are used against schools, resulting in hundreds of students and teachers sustaining injuries and the disruption of the education routine for thousands.<sup>207</sup> Israeli soldiers “break into schools whenever they want,” said Jamal age 14, from Bethlehem. “The soldiers are always present in front of the school. They could attack us and take us away at any time. They might hit us or arrest us,” said Rima.<sup>208</sup>

76. In the Gaza Strip, at every military operation, school activities are suspended. Moving to online classes is ineffective because of a lack of resources<sup>209</sup> and Israel’s constraints on electricity (which is available around 10–12 hours per day normally but falls to 4–5 hours during offensives).<sup>210</sup> When there are no offensives, “the drones used to enforce the siege of Gaza are our soundtrack”, said Jinan, age 14.<sup>211</sup> Over

<sup>196</sup> UNICEF, Education Cluster Strategy: Palestine 2020–2021.

<sup>197</sup> Norwegian Refugee Council, “Area C is everything”, p. 11.

<sup>198</sup> Save the Children, “‘Danger is our reality’: the impact of conflict and the occupation on education in the West Bank of the occupied Palestinian territory”, 2020, p. 16.

<sup>199</sup> Ibid., p. 13.

<sup>200</sup> Ibid., p. 16.

<sup>201</sup> Shalhoub-Kevorkian, “Necropenology”.

<sup>202</sup> Operation Dove, “Right to education in the South Hebron Hills: At-Tuwani School study case – school year 2018–2019”, 2019.

<sup>203</sup> Annual reports of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, 2012–2021.

<sup>204</sup> Save the Children, “Danger is our reality”, p. 16.

<sup>205</sup> Annual reports of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, 2010–2022.

<sup>206</sup> Save the Children, “Danger is our reality”, p. 17.

<sup>207</sup> Global Coalition to Protect Education from Attack, “Measuring the impact of attacks on education in Palestine”, March 2022, p. 6.

<sup>208</sup> Save the Children, “Danger is our reality”, p. 17.

<sup>209</sup> UNICEF, Education Cluster Strategy: Palestine 2020–2021.

<sup>210</sup> ICRC, “Gaza: ICRC survey shows heavy toll of chronic power shortages on exhausted families”, 29 July 2021.

<sup>211</sup> Interview with members of the Children’s Council Gaza Strip, 24 August 2023.

1,434 schools and kindergartens have been totally or partially destroyed.<sup>212</sup> The construction of underground facilities and the takeover of a school by the de facto authorities in the past<sup>213</sup> have exposed schools to risks of being targeted. However, even in the case of military use of a school by an armed group, a proportionality and military necessity test must be met and civilian protection remains crucial.<sup>214</sup>

77. Amid these adversities, school drop-out rates have risen to 32 per cent among secondary schoolchildren in the West Bank,<sup>215</sup> mostly owing to the lack of safety.<sup>216</sup> Children with disabilities have disproportionately low school enrolment (51 per cent in the West Bank and 43 per cent in the Gaza Strip).<sup>217</sup> In East Jerusalem, at least 13 per cent of Palestinian children are excluded from education owing to residency and registration hurdles.<sup>218</sup>

VI. Unchilding environment

78. Israeli settler colonialism deprives children of their rights and innocence, prematurely subjecting them to adult-like challenges, responsibilities and preoccupations. This intergenerational, every-day experience for Palestinian children, termed “unchilding” by Nadera Shalhoub-Kevorkian,<sup>219</sup> is a reality perpetuated through a system of sociolegal claims, economic exploitation and political control that treats Palestinian children as worthless.

A. Scars of never-ending harm

79. This chronic exposure to violence places children in a perpetual state of heightened stress, anger, isolation and hyperalertness.<sup>220</sup> Many show signs of trauma and profound depression, heightened nervousness, with manifestations including constant shouting, irritability and fear of darkness, and feelings of acute loneliness.<sup>221</sup> Opportunities for post-trauma recovery are extremely limited, a lack compounded by continued exposure to traumatic events. The result is what Dr. Jess Ghannam termed as “continuous traumatic stress disorder”.<sup>222</sup>

80. This ongoing trauma significantly disrupts child development, debilitating generational progress.<sup>223</sup> It also has a predictably devastating impact on the development of Palestinian children and may be sowing the seeds for aggression in

<sup>212</sup> Annual reports of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict, 2010–2022; A/HRC/12/48; and United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, monthly reports and cumulative data, 2009, 2012, 2014 and 2021.

<sup>213</sup> UNRWA, “UNRWA reiterates the inviolability of its installations must be respected at all times”, 11 August 2021.

<sup>214</sup> Additional Protocol I, arts. 51 (6), 53, 54 (4), 55 (2) and 56 (4).

<sup>215</sup> UNICEF, “Palestine education fact sheets”, 2022, p. 17.

<sup>216</sup> United Nations, Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, Humanitarian Needs Overview 2023, p. 50.

<sup>217</sup> Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics, “Press release on the occasion of the International Day of Persons with Disabilities”, 3 December 2021.

<sup>218</sup> Ali Ghaith, “The politics of education in East Jerusalem”, Open Democracy, 23 July 2018.

<sup>219</sup> Shalhoub-Kevorkian, Incarcerated Childhood.

<sup>220</sup> Teresa Bailey, “The terror of childhood in Palestine”, 2023. Available at https://mcusercontent.com/bbabb624d68a80f2ac0f259dc/files/bc78664b-d2d7-f03c-ca5a-687ba09ed9fb/Palestinian\_children\_July\_2023.pdf.

<sup>221</sup> UNICEF, The Situation of Palestinian Children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon: an Assessment based on the Convention on the rights of the Child (Amman, 2010).

<sup>222</sup> Interview with Dr. Ghannam.

<sup>223</sup> Sue Gerhardt, Why Love Matters: How Affection Shapes a Baby’s Brain (Routledge, 2004).

later life.<sup>224</sup> Over 90 per cent of Palestinian children aged 8–14 years grapple with insecurity and anxiety.<sup>225</sup> An increasing number suffer from insomnia,<sup>226</sup> bed-wetting and distress, especially at times of heavy bombardment,<sup>227</sup> and uncontrolled urination.

“No one to protect us”

81. Despite their obligation to protect the human rights of the occupied population and guarantee public order and safety,<sup>228</sup> Israeli officials at different levels all play an active role in victimizing Palestinian children. The occupation has eroded the very foundations of Palestinian society, in particular the family unit. Extensive killing and “long term imprisonment of thousands have left children orphaned”, said a mother from the West Bank. Even “when a father returns after many years in prison, the bond with his children is undermined”, said a Palestinian mother. The stress faced by family heads as they are unable to provide stability, protection and security for their families is significant.<sup>229</sup> The Israeli permit system regularly prevents parents from securing, or accompanying children through, medical treatment. This affects 32 per cent of children in the Gaza Strip who need treatment but cannot obtain it there.<sup>230</sup> Palestinian children can find themselves undergoing kidney dialysis or chemotherapy without the presence of a parent.<sup>231</sup>

82. In the occupation’s fraught and dangerous environment, 65 per cent of parents often exhibit violent behaviour towards each other and their children.<sup>232</sup> The level of corporal punishment in school is also reportedly very high. “Everyone beats us here”, a group of Palestinian children from the Jenin refugee camp cheerfully reported.

83. Parents do not feel able to protect their children. In the words of a father: “I feel helpless when they arrest my children; all the parents here in our neighbourhood try our utmost to protect them ... they are the most precious thing we have, and we try to protect them in any way possible, but nothing is safe here. My son was arrested while sleeping in bed. His bed [was] not safe.”<sup>233</sup> The diminution of parental authority through the inability to protect children profoundly affects parents and children alike.<sup>234</sup> The absence of protection leaves Palestinian children feeling profoundly isolated and disillusioned. “There is nothing that I or my family can do. Not the Palestinian government, not the international organizations, not my parents. No one protects my rights,” said Nadia, age 17 from East Jerusalem, echoing a sentiment shared by other children.<sup>235</sup>

<sup>224</sup> WHO report, p. 13, cited in A/HRC/12/48, para. 1282.

<sup>225</sup> UNICEF, The Situation of Palestinian Children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory; and Abu Hein, F., “Emotional and behavioural problems of Palestinian children and their parents under siege: Gaza experience”, in Siege and Mental Health: Walls vs. Bridges (WHO and Gaza Community Mental Health Programme pre-conference report, 2008), p. 32.

<sup>226</sup> Save the Children, “Defenceless”.

<sup>227</sup> Save the Children, “Trapped”.

<sup>228</sup> Additional Protocol I, arts. 63, 69 and 72–79; Fourth Geneva Convention, arts. 47–78; and Hague Regulations, arts. 42–56.

<sup>229</sup> A/HRC/12/48, para. 1266.

<sup>230</sup> WHO, Eastern Mediterranean Region, “Right to health: barriers to health and attacks on health care in the occupied Palestinian territory, 2019 to 2021” (2022), p. 42.

<sup>231</sup> Daniel, “The strong do what they can”, p. 49.

<sup>232</sup> Ibid. See also Abu Hein, F., “Emotional and behavioural problems of Palestinian children”.

<sup>233</sup> Shalhoub-Kevorkian, Incarcerated Childhood, p. 73.

<sup>234</sup> Gwyn Daniel, Arlene Healy and Mohammad Marie, “Families in chronically unsafe community environments: experiences in Northern Ireland and Palestine”, in The Handbook of Systemic Family Therapy, vol. 4, Karen S. Wampler, Mudita Rastogi and Reenee Singh, eds. (John Wiley and Sons, 2020), p. 197.

<sup>235</sup> Save the Children, “Hope under the rubble”, p. 13.

84. Among the continuous threats to their safety, children may come to perceive violence as their only recourse against a harsh reality.<sup>236</sup> As Rawan, age 11, asserted: “We must fight for our right to breathe, to be here, to stay in our city without the daily pain”, while her older sister, age 15, asked: “Do you understand why we should fight with our bodies? No Palestinian leaders, no international activists are able to help us in preventing the occupation’s criminality. We can do it with our bodies and lives.”<sup>237</sup>

85. In their increasingly insecure environment, children often feel driven to assume more active roles in the national struggle, even conflicting with their parents’ wishes,<sup>238</sup> choosing to formally align themselves with political groups in search of a semblance of protection.<sup>239</sup> Children, particularly those who have lost parents and their sense of security, begin to view “martyrs” and armed group members as adult role models. As armed resistance has re-emerged in recent years, the appeal these groups may exert on children cannot be underestimated. Families live in fear as they struggle to prevent their children from becoming involved with military groups. A mother from the Jenin refugee camp reported: “Parents here fear for their children, no matter their choices. Once they join the resistance their fate is sealed. If they remain within the resistance, they become targets [of the occupation]. If they leave the group, they remain targets, without the protection of the group.”

VII. Conclusions and recommendations

86. As politics cannot be separated from childhood, the violent politics of a militarized settler-colonial occupation cannot be separated from how the children of the subjugated group experience it. In the occupied Palestinian territory, settler-colonial violence and State violence are intertwined owing to normalized dispossession. An inevitable accompaniment to settler colonialism, violence against the subjugated group will at some point risk being met by violence, because no people will willingly cede their land, livelihood, dignity and right to exist in perpetuity. There is only one way to secure a peaceful and dignified future between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean Sea, and it is by ensuring recognition and respect for equal rights, dignity and freedom of both Israelis and Palestinians.

87. The Special Rapporteur recommends that:

(a) Israel abide by the Charter of the United Nations and international law, halting all abusive practices against Palestinian children and prioritizing the best interest of all children in the occupied Palestinian territory; this can only be realized by dismantling its settler-colonial occupation cum apartheid, which stands in the way of realizing the full spectrum of rights of Palestinian children and of Palestinians as a people;

(b) The Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict not delay any further including Israel/occupied Palestinian territory in the Security Council’s list of parties that commit grave violations affecting children.

<sup>236</sup> Virginia Pietromarchi, “Why do some Palestinian teens in Jenin dream of ‘martyrdom’?”, Al Jazeera, 14 July 2023.

<sup>237</sup> Shalhoub-Kevorkian, Incarcerated Childhood, p. 82.

<sup>238</sup> Samir Qouta, Raija-Leena Punamäki and Eyad El Sarraj, “Child development and family mental health in war and military violence: the Palestinian experience”, International Journal of Behavioural Development, vol. 32, No. 4 (2008), p. 317.

<sup>239</sup> Francesca Albanese and Jalal Al Hussein, “Voices of Palestinian refugee youth across the near East: socio-political participation and aspirations”, June 2020, p. 22.

88. In order to ensure this goal, third States should:

(a) Use diplomatic, political and economic measures afforded by the Charter without discrimination;

(b) Not recognize as lawful, aid or assist Israel's occupation given its commission of internationally wrongful acts and international crimes, and call for their cessation and reparations;

(c) Prosecute the commission of international crimes, prioritizing atrocity crimes alleged in the present report, under universal jurisdiction;

(d) Set up a task force to dismantle the settler-colonial occupation and advance a political solution that respects human rights, dignity and freedom of both Israelis and Palestinians, as the only paradigm to ensure safety and peace.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
31 August 2005

Original: English

---

Sixtieth session

Item 73 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Human rights questions: situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

The issue of Palestinian pregnant women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints

Report of the High Commissioner for Human Rights**

1. The present report is submitted pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 2005/7 of 14 April 2005, entitled “Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territory, including East Jerusalem”, paragraph 4 of which reads as follows:

“The Commission on Human Rights,

“

“4. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to address the issue of Palestinian pregnant women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints owing to denial of access by Israel to hospitals, with a view to ending this inhumane Israeli practice, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session and the Commission at its sixty-second session;”

2. On 21 July 2005, the Secretary-General addressed notes verbales to the Permanent Mission of Israel and to the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations Office at Geneva, in which he indicated that he would appreciate receiving any information pertaining to the implementation of the above resolution. No replies had been received at the time of preparation of this report.

3. In addition, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) addressed letters dated 21 July 2005 to the following United Nations entities and specialized agencies represented in the Occupied Palestinian Territory: Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Process (UNSCO), United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), United Nations Relief and Works

---

* A/60/150.

** This report is delayed in order to cover as much updated information as possible.

Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), World Food Programme (WFP) and World Health Organization (WHO).

4. Information was received from UNFPA, UNRWA and WHO in the course of August 2005. WHO quoted statistics from the Palestinian Ministry of Health indicating that 61 women had given birth at checkpoints between September 2000 and December 2004 and 36 of their babies died as a result. A breakdown of these figures shows that in 2000-2001, 31 pregnant women delivered at checkpoints and 17 of the babies died; in 2002, 16 women gave birth in similar conditions and 11 babies died; in 2003 and 2004, the numbers decreased: 8 and 6 women gave birth at checkpoints and 3 and 5 of the babies died, respectively.

5. According to other statistics provided by UNRWA, not yet complete for 2005, in the Gaza Strip, out of eight pregnant women transported to hospital, one woman gave birth inside the Palestinian Red Crescent Society (PRCS) ambulance while waiting at a checkpoint. Another woman, suffering from problems in her six-month pregnancy, aborted inside a PRCS ambulance, as she was held up for one hour at a checkpoint before being allowed to proceed.

6. According to the same source of information, 15 pregnant women in 2004 and 8 others in 2005 were delayed at checkpoints in the Gaza Strip while being transported to hospital by PRCS ambulance. These delays ranged from 1 to 2 ½ hours and increased during the evacuation of emergency cases from closed areas such as Seafa or Mahata; such patients were first brought by ambulance to the checkpoints, where they were transferred to a second ambulance on the other side. It was reported that prior coordination with the Israeli Defence Forces (IDF) was necessary when these transfers occurred after crossing hours.

7. For its part, UNFPA stated that "as a result of increased security procedures at checkpoints and the construction of the Separation Barrier, access of the Palestinian people to hospitals and medical facilities had been significantly impaired. Since 2001, UNFPA had recorded more than 70 cases of women in labour who had been delayed at checkpoints, which resulted in unattended and risky roadside births, causing maternal as well as newborn deaths".

8. The Palestinian Ministry of Health registered an increase of 7.9 per cent in home deliveries in the West Bank (against 0.5 per cent in the Gaza Strip) for 2005, indicating that Palestinian women preferred to give birth at home, without taking the risk of being subjected to potentially hazardous delays at checkpoints. This was also confirmed by UNFPA.

9. Several testimonies of Palestinian pregnant women who were allegedly held at checkpoints by Israeli military were brought to the attention of OHCHR. One such testimony concerned the death of a baby girl at a checkpoint close to Salem village, Nablus Governorate, in August 2003, after her mother gave birth with the assistance of the father, who had to cut the umbilical cord himself with a stone, as both of them were waiting for a second ambulance on the other side of the checkpoint to take them to the hospital.

10. It was also reported that although ambulances were allowed to transport patients through checkpoints during curfews, on the basis of advance coordination with IDF, delays often occurred and ambulances were forced to use secondary roads.

When ambulances were not allowed to go through checkpoints, pregnant women had to be transferred from one ambulance to another on the other side.

11. Several sources indicated that many pregnant women in the Occupied Palestinian Territories feared that they would not be able to reach a hospital in time to give birth. The problem was more acute in rural areas, especially for those women who lived in villages cut off by checkpoints from the cities where the hospitals were located. The drive to a hospital could take several hours, even if the distance was only a few kilometres. Such journeys were impracticable at night, during curfews or when there were military incursions. Additional information received referred to more than 30 per cent of births taking place at home, increasing the risk of complications and the subsequent death of mothers or infants. A growing number of Palestinian women were requesting Caesarean deliveries as a result of psychological apprehension and the fear of not receiving adequate medical care.

12. OHCHR and its Office in Palestine will continue to compile information regarding the issue of Palestinian pregnant women giving birth at Israeli checkpoints, in cooperation with the agencies represented in the United Nations Country Team.

---

General Assembly

Distr.: General
1 October 2024

Original: English

---

Seventy-ninth session

Item 71 (c) of the provisional agenda*

Promotion and protection of human rights: human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives

Situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967****

Note by the Secretary-General

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1.

---

* A/79/150.

** The present report was submitted after the deadline in order to reflect the most recent information.

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese

Genocide as colonial erasure

Summary

In the present report, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, examines the unfolding horrors in the occupied Palestinian territory. While the wholesale destruction of Gaza continues unabated, other parts of the land have not been spared. The violence that Israel has unleashed against the Palestinians post-7 October is not happening in a vacuum, but is part of a long-term intentional, systematic, State-organized forced displacement and replacement of the Palestinians. This trajectory risks causing irreparable prejudice to the very existence of the Palestinian people in Palestine. Member States must intervene now to prevent new atrocities that will further scar human history.

I. Introduction

1. In March 2024, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, Francesca Albanese, concluded that there were reasonable grounds to believe that Israel had committed acts of genocide in Gaza.<sup>1</sup> In the present report, the Special Rapporteur expands the analysis of the post-7 October 2023 violence against Gaza, which has spread to the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. She focuses on genocidal intent, contextualising the situation within a decades-long process of territorial expansion and ethnic cleansing aimed at liquidating the Palestinian presence in Palestine. She suggests that genocide should be seen as integral and instrumental to the aim of full Israeli colonization of Palestinian land while removing as many Palestinians as possible.

2. The present report is based on legal research and analysis, interviews with victims and witnesses, including in Jordan and Egypt, open-source information and input from experts and civil-society organizations. The Special Rapporteur, still refused access to the occupied Palestinian territory, stresses that Israel has no authority to bar fact-finding mechanisms from the territory that it illegally occupies. The persistent denial of access to United Nations mechanisms and investigators of the International Criminal Court (ICC) may constitute obstruction of justice, in defiance of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) order that Israel allow international investigators to enter Gaza and take measures to ensure the preservation of evidence.<sup>2</sup>

3. While the scale and nature of the ongoing Israeli assault against the Palestinians vary by area, the totality of the Israeli acts of destruction directed against the totality of the Palestinian people, with the aim of conquering the totality of the land of Palestine, is clearly identifiable. Patterns of violence against the group as a whole warrant the application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Genocide Convention) in order to cease, prevent and punish genocide in the whole of the occupied Palestinian territory.

II. Legal framework and developments

4. In the present report, the Special Rapporteur relies on the legal framework considered in previous reports,<sup>3</sup> including international humanitarian law, international human rights law, international criminal law and customary international law, in particular the Genocide Convention and the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid, together with relevant legal developments and jurisprudence.

5. Two important legal developments informed the present report. First, in its Advisory Opinion of July 2024, ICJ declared the prolonged presence of Israel in the whole of the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including its colony regime,<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> A/HRC/55/73, para. 7.

<sup>2</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Order, 26 January 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 86 (5); and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Request for the Modification of the Order of 28 March 2024, Order, 24 May 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 57 (2) (c).

<sup>3</sup> A/HRC/53/59, paras. 14–25; A/HRC/55/73, paras. 15–20; and A/HRC/49/87, paras. 19–34.

<sup>4</sup> The French term “colonies” better reflects the colonization process than the euphemism “settlements” commonly used in English, see Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 111.

as unlawful<sup>5</sup> and aimed at annexation.<sup>6</sup> It stated that Israeli annexation was designed to be permanent, creating “irreversible effects on the ground”,<sup>7</sup> “undermin[ing] the integrity of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory”<sup>8</sup> and seeking to “acquire sovereignty over an occupied territory”.<sup>9</sup>

6. The Court recognized the violation of non-derogable norms prohibiting territorial acquisition by force,<sup>10</sup> racial segregation and apartheid,<sup>11</sup> and protecting the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people,<sup>12</sup> concluding that the occupation constitutes an act of aggression, in all but name, deriving in part from its settler-colonial nature.<sup>13</sup> It stressed the obligation to rapidly end the occupation, dismantle and evacuate the colonies, provide full reparation to Palestinian victims and allow the return of Palestinians displaced since 1967.<sup>14</sup>

7. Expanding on the Wall opinion,<sup>15</sup> the Court rejected arguments that Israeli “security concerns” justify the occupation.<sup>16</sup> The declared unlawfulness of the occupation vitiates claims of purported self-defence; the only lawful recourse available to Israel is its unconditional withdrawal from the whole of that territory.

8. Second, in South Africa v. Israel, the Court ordered provisional measures to prevent and/or stop acts of genocide.<sup>17</sup> After recognizing, in January 2024, the existence of a “real and imminent risk [of] irreparable prejudice” to the rights of the Palestinians in Gaza under the Genocide Convention, the Court instructed Israel to “prevent the commission of all acts” outlined in the Convention.<sup>18</sup> In March, the Court took notice of the worsening humanitarian crisis,<sup>19</sup> and in May, recognizing an “exceptionally grave” risk in Rafah, it ordered Israel to “immediately halt its military

<sup>5</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 155 and 261–264.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid., para. 173, 179 and 252.

<sup>7</sup> Ibid., para. 173.

<sup>8</sup> Ibid., para. 239.

<sup>9</sup> Ibid., para. 179.

<sup>10</sup> Ibid., paras. 179, 254 and 261–263; and United Nations Charter, Article 2 (4).

<sup>11</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 223–229.

<sup>12</sup> Ibid., paras. 237–245, 256–257 and 261–262.

<sup>13</sup> Ibid., paras. 155 and 167–169. See also the following under Advisory Opinion of 19 July 2024, see Declaration of Judge Xue, para. 4; Separate Opinion of Judge Yusuf, paras. 2–4 and 12; and Separate Opinion of Judge Cleveland, para. 33.

<sup>14</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 267–271, and 285 (4)–285 (6).

<sup>15</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, 9 July 2004, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 139.

<sup>16</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 205, 254 and 263.

<sup>17</sup> Eight States have formally intervened, see www.icj-cij.org/case/192/intervention.

<sup>18</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Order, 26 January 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 86 (1).

<sup>19</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Order, 28 March 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 21–22.

offensive”.<sup>20</sup> Despite this, Israel, and most other States, continue to disregard such orders,<sup>21</sup> with arms continuing to flow to Israel.<sup>22</sup>

III. The unfolding genocide as a “means to an end”

9. On 14 October 2023, after Israel ordered 1.1 million Palestinians to move south from northern Gaza in 24 hours – “one of the fastest mass displacements in history”<sup>23</sup> – the Special Rapporteur warned of the risk of deliberate mass ethnic cleansing.<sup>24</sup> This proved prescient. At least 90 per cent of Palestinians in Gaza have now been forcibly displaced – many more than 10 times<sup>25</sup> – amid calls from Israeli officials and others for Palestinians to leave and Israelis to “return to Gaza” and rebuild the colonies dismantled in 2005.<sup>26</sup>

10. Meanwhile, violence has spread beyond Gaza, with Israeli forces and violent settlers having escalated patterns of ethnic cleansing and apartheid in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem.<sup>27</sup>

11. High-ranking Israeli officials, ministers and religious leaders continue to encourage erasure and dispossession of Palestinians, setting new thresholds for acceptable violence against civilians. The Nakba, which has been ongoing since 1948, has been deliberately accelerated.<sup>28</sup>

12. In the following sections, the Special Rapporteur examines critical developments on the ground, highlighting patterns of conduct that evidence an intent to employ genocidal acts as a means to ethnically cleanse all or parts of the occupied Palestinian territory.

<sup>20</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Request for the Modification of the Order of 28 March 2024, Order, 24 May 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 29 and 57 (2) (a).

<sup>21</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/statements/2024/09/un-experts-warn-international-order-knives-edge-urge-states-comply-icj-advisory; and www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/06/states-and-companies-must-end-arms-transfers-israel-immediately-or-risk.

<sup>22</sup> Alleged Breaches of Certain International Obligations in Respect of the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Nicaragua v. Germany), Order, 30 April 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 22–24. Consider also, Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 285 (7).

<sup>23</sup> A/HRC/56/CRP.4, para. 94.

<sup>24</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2023/10/un-expert-warns-new-instance-mass-ethnic-cleansing-palestinians-calls.

<sup>25</sup> See www.unrwa.org/resources/reports/unrwa-situation-report-121-situation-gaza-strip-and-west-bank-including-east-jerusalem; and www.unrwa.org/resources/reports/unrwa-situation-report-125-situation-gaza-strip-and-west-bank-including-east-jerusalem.

<sup>26</sup> See www.timesofisrael.com/12-ministers-call-to-resettle-gaza-encourage-gazans-to-leave-at-jubilant-conference; www.economist.com/middle-east-and-africa/2024/08/27/israels-settlers-are-winning-unprecedented-power-from-the-war-in-gaza; www.nbcnews.com/news/world/right-wing-israeli-ministers-join-thousands-event-calling-countrys-res-rcna135863; <https://edition.cnn.com/2024/03/20/middleeast/israel-gaza-settlers-daniella-weiss/index.html>; www.aa.com.tr/en/middle-east/israel-s-ben-gvir-demands-resettlement-of-gaza-voluntary-migration-of-palestinians/3252890; and Nicola Perugini, “Settler colonial inversions: Israel’s ‘disengagement’ and the Gush Katif ‘Museum of Expulsion’ in Jerusalem”, Settler Colonial Studies, vol. 9, No. 1 (February 2019), pp. 44–45.

<sup>27</sup> See www.lemkininstitute.com/active-genocide-alert-1/israel-is-committing-genocide-across-palestine-active-genocide-alert-condemning-ongoing-violence-in-the-west-bank.

<sup>28</sup> Israeli Knesset Member, Ariel Kallner, available at <https://x.com/ArielKallner/status/1710769363119141268>, translated in www.newarab.com/analysis/erase-gaza-how-genocidal-rhetoric-normalised-israel.

A. Failure to cease and punish genocide in Gaza

13. Since the previous report of the Special Rapporteur (A/78/545), and despite the ICJ interventions, genocidal acts have proliferated. Nearly a year of scorched-earth assault has led to the calculated destruction of Gaza: the human, material and environmental cost is unquantifiable.<sup>29</sup>

14. Since March 2024, Israel has killed 10,037 Palestinians and injured 21,767, with more than 93 massacres, bringing the reported totals to nearly 42,000 and 96,000 respectively, although figures from reliable sources are incomplete and may understate the magnitude of the casualties.<sup>30</sup> Aid distribution sites,<sup>31</sup> tents,<sup>32</sup> hospitals,<sup>33</sup> schools<sup>34</sup> and markets<sup>35</sup> have been repeatedly attacked through the indiscriminate use of aerial and sniper fire. At least 13,000 children, including more than 700 babies,<sup>36</sup> have been killed, many shot in the head and chest.<sup>37</sup> Approximately <sup>29</sup> See www.reuters.com/world/middle-east/gazas-huge-reconstruction-challenge-key-facts-figures-2024-09-11/; and www.unep.org/news-and-stories/press-release/damage-gaza-causing-new-risks-human-health-and-long-term-recovery.

<sup>30</sup> See https://gaza-projections.org/gaza\_projections\_report.pdf; and www.thelancet.com/journals/lancet/article/PIIS0140-6736\(24\)01169-3/fulltext01169-3/fulltext).

<sup>31</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-130; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-131; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-140; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-144; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-146; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-147; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-149; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-159; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-180-gaza-strip-west-bank; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-181-gaza-strip; and <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-attacks-humanitarian-aid-distribution-system-enar>.

<sup>32</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-136; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-141; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-148; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-149; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-171; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-172; www.aljazeera.com/news/2024/5/28/at-least-21-killed-dozens-wounded-in-israeli-attacks-on-gazas-rafah; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-182-gaza-strip; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-185-gaza-strip; and www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-191-gaza-strip.

<sup>33</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-131; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-144; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-149; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-184-gaza-strip; and <https://airwars.org/civilian-casualties/ispt120524d-may-12-2024/>.

<sup>34</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-155; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-152; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-171; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-166; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-184-gaza-strip; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-193-gaza-strip; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-200-gaza-strip; and www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-199-gaza-strip.

<sup>35</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-193-gaza-strip.

<sup>36</sup> See www.972mag.com/palestinian-infants-killed-gaza-2024/.

<sup>37</sup> See www.youtube.com/watch?v=yA7MeI65IIM; www.theguardian.com/world/2024/apr/02/gaza-palestinian-children-killed-idf-israel-war; and www.politico.com/news/magazine/2024/07/19/gaza-hospitals-surgeons-00167697.

22,500 Palestinians have sustained life-changing injuries.<sup>38</sup> By May, a further 10,000 people were estimated to be buried under the rubble,<sup>39</sup> including 4,000 children;<sup>40</sup> the voices of those trapped and dying are often audible. An uncertain number are forcibly disappeared by Israeli forces.<sup>41</sup>

15. The magnitude of destruction in Gaza has prompted allegations of domicide,<sup>42</sup> urbicide,<sup>43</sup> scholasticide,<sup>44</sup> medicide,<sup>45</sup> cultural genocide<sup>46</sup> and ecocide.<sup>47</sup> Nearly 40 million tons of debris, including unexploded ordnance and human remains,<sup>48</sup> contaminate the ecosystem.<sup>49</sup> More than 140 temporary waste sites<sup>50</sup> and 340,000 tons of waste,<sup>51</sup> untreated wastewater and sewage overflow<sup>52</sup> contribute to the spread of diseases such as hepatitis A,<sup>53</sup> respiratory infections,<sup>54</sup> diarrhoea and skin diseases.<sup>55</sup> As Israeli leaders promised, Gaza has been made unfit for human life.<sup>56</sup>

16. Continued bombardment of evacuees in purportedly designated “safe zones”<sup>57</sup> has continued to create hardship, terror and death.<sup>58</sup> Displaced people have been systematically chased down and targeted in shelters, including in United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) schools,

<sup>38</sup> See www.who.int/news/item/12-09-2024-who-analysis-highlights-vast-unmet-rehabilitation-needs-in-gaza/.

<sup>39</sup> See <https://news.un.org/en/story/2024/05/1149256>; and www.nytimes.com/2024/03/23/world/middleeast/gaza-missing-bodies-deaths.html.

<sup>40</sup> See www.savethechildren.org.uk/news/media-centre/press-releases/over-20000-children-estimated-to-be-lost-in-gaza.

<sup>41</sup> See www.un.org/unispal/wp-content/uploads/2024/07/20240731-Thematic-report-Detention-context-Gaza-hostilities.pdf, paras. 56–57; and www.unrwa.org/sites/default/files/content/resources/summary\_on\_detention\_and\_alleged\_ill\_treatmentupdated.pdf.

<sup>42</sup> See www.nytimes.com/interactive/2024/01/29/opinion/destruction-of-homes-crime-domicide.html; and www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/04/gaza-un-experts-deplore-use-purported-ai-commit-domicide-gaza-call.

<sup>43</sup> A/HRC/55/73, paras. 60–61; and <https://beiruturbanlab.com/en/Details/1977>.

<sup>44</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/04/un-experts-deeply-concerned-over-scholasticide-gaza; and <https://theintercept.com/2024/02/09/deconstructed-gaza-university-education/>.

<sup>45</sup> Nicola Perugini and Neve Gordon, “‘Medicide’ in Gaza and international law: time for banning the bombing of hospitals”, Institute for Palestine Studies, No. 094, September 2024.

<sup>46</sup> See www.aljazeera.com/news/2024/1/14/a-cultural-genocide-which-of-gazas-heritage-sites-have-been-destroyed; and <https://jacobin.com/2024/03/israel-gaza-war-cultural-heritage>.

<sup>47</sup> See <https://forensic-architecture.org/investigation/ecocide-in-gaza>; and www.theguardian.com/environment/2024/mar/29/gaza-israel-palestinian-war-ecocide-environmental-destruction-pollution-rome-statute-war-crimes-aoc.

<sup>48</sup> See www.unep.org/resources/report/environmental-impact-conflict-gaza-preliminary-assessment-environmental-impacts, p. 7.

<sup>49</sup> Ibid., pp. 32–36.

<sup>50</sup> See www.undp.org/papp/publications/undp/papps-emergency-response-solid-waste-management, p. 1.

<sup>51</sup> See www.science.org/content/article/virus-causes-polio-has-been-found-gaza-here-s-why-grim-news.

<sup>52</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2023/11/israel-must-stop-using-water-weapon-war-un-expert.

<sup>53</sup> See <https://news.un.org/en/story/2024/08/1152791>.

<sup>54</sup> See www.emro.who.int/images/stories/Sitrep\_-\_issue\_38.pdf, p. 3; and www.emro.who.int/images/stories/Sitrep\_-\_issue\_24.pdf, p. 1.

<sup>55</sup> See www.emro.who.int/images/stories/Sitrep\_-\_issue\_38.pdf, p. 3.

<sup>56</sup> S/2024/419, enclosure I, paras. 6, 10 and 24; and enclosure II, para. 6.

<sup>57</sup> See www.aljazeera.com/opinions/2024/1/6/safe-zones-israels-technologies-of-genocide; and <https://forensic-architecture.org/investigation/humanitarian-violence-in-gaza>.

<sup>58</sup> See <https://news.un.org/en/story/2024/05/1149951>; <https://news.un.org/en/story/2024/08/1153406>; <https://news.un.org/en/story/2024/07/1152601>; www.nrc.no/news/2024/august/gaza-new-israeli-orders-force-thousands-in-deir-al-balah-to-flee-again-and-disrupt-last-aid-hub/; www.aljazeera.com/opinions/2024/1/6/safe-zones-israels-technologies-of-genocide; and <https://forensic-architecture.org/investigation/humanitarian-violence-in-gaza>.

70 per cent of which Israel has repeatedly attacked.<sup>59</sup> The Rafah offensive in May caused more than 3,500 direct deaths<sup>60</sup> and new displacement of almost 1 million Palestinians to uninhabitable wastelands of rubble, sewage and decomposing bodies.<sup>61</sup>

17. According to satellite imagery and other sources, Israeli soldiers have built roads and military bases in more than 26 per cent of Gaza, suggesting the aim of a permanent presence.<sup>62</sup> The Israeli military expanded the “buffer zone” along the Gaza perimeter to 16 per cent of the territory, flattening homes, apartment blocks and agricultural farms.<sup>63</sup> By August 2024, repeated evacuation orders over approximately 84 per cent of Gaza<sup>64</sup> had corralled the majority of the population into a shrinking, unsafe “humanitarian zone” covering 12.6 per cent<sup>65</sup> of a territory now reconfigured in preparation for annexation.<sup>66</sup> In early September, two ministers of the Government of Israel openly called for the conquest and annexation of significant areas of Gaza.<sup>67</sup>

18. Israel has continued to use “medical shielding” arguments to target healthcare facilities.<sup>68</sup> According to the World Health Organization (WHO), in 300 days, 32 out of 36 hospitals were damaged, with 20 hospitals and 70 out of 119 primary healthcare centres incapacitated.<sup>69</sup> By 20 August, Israel had attacked healthcare facilities 492 times.<sup>70</sup> From 18 March to 1 April, Israeli forces again laid siege to Al-Shifa Hospital, killing more than 400 and detaining 300 people, including doctors, patients, displaced persons and civil servants.<sup>71</sup> On 26 August, following mass expulsion orders in Deir al-Balah, where 1 million Palestinians were sheltering, Israeli forces compelled the evacuation of all but 100 of 650 patients in Al-Aqsa hospital.<sup>72</sup> On 30 August, Israeli forces bombed a humanitarian truck bound for the Emirati hospital in Rafah, killing several aid workers.<sup>73</sup>

19. On 16 July 2024, WHO detected the first presence of poliovirus in 25 years – a direct consequence of the destruction of water and sewage systems, obstruction of aid

<sup>59</sup> See www.unrwa.org/sites/default/files/photo\_essay\_education\_under\_attack.pdf.

<sup>60</sup> See https://aoav.org.uk/wp-content/uploads/2024/02/gaza\_projections\_report.pdf.

<sup>61</sup> See www.unrwa.org/resources/reports/unrwa-situation-report-111-situation-gaza-strip-and-west-bank-including-east-jerusalem.

<sup>62</sup> See www.haaretz.com/israel-news/security-aviation/2024-07-08/ty-article-static/.premium/israel-seized-26-of-gaza-now-jewish-settlers-see-their-chance/00000190-77cd-d705-a7f5-ffffc000.

<sup>63</sup> See www.amnesty.org/en/latest/news/2024/09/israel-opt-israeli-military-must-be-investigated-for-war-crime-of-wanton-destruction-in-gaza-new-investigation/.

<sup>64</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/humanitarian-situation-update-203-gaza-strip.

<sup>65</sup> Ibid.

<sup>66</sup> A/HRC/55/73, paras. 85 and 95.

<sup>67</sup> See <https://x.com/AmichaiChikli/status/1830868859407970703> (Hebrew); and <https://x.com/bezalelsm/status/1830140531164237947> (Hebrew).

<sup>68</sup> A/HRC/55/73, paras. 87–92; and Nicola Perugini and Neve Gordon, “Medical lawfare: the Nakba and Israel’s attacks on Palestinian healthcare”, Journal of Palestine Studies, vol. 53, No. 1 (April 2024).

<sup>69</sup> See <https://healthcluster.who.int/publications/m/item/300-days-of-war-the-occupied-palestinian-territory>.

<sup>70</sup> Ibid.

<sup>71</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-149; www.who.int/news/item/06-04-2024-six-months-of-war-leave-al-shifa-hospital-in-ruins--who-mission-reports; and <https://mondoweiss.net/2024/04/come-out-you-animals-how-the-massacre-at-al-shifa-hospital-happened/>.

<sup>72</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/humanitarian-situation-update-209-gaza-strip; and www.washingtonpost.com/world/2024/08/27/israel-gaza-war-deir-al-balah/.

<sup>73</sup> See www.theguardian.com/world/article/2024/aug/29/israel-airstrike-aid-convoy-gaza.

and shelter overcrowding.<sup>74</sup> By late August, a 10-month-old baby was partially paralysed by the disease.<sup>75</sup> Despite the looming outbreak, Israel delayed vaccinations<sup>76</sup> and attacked vaccination areas<sup>77</sup> and a United Nations vaccination convoy.<sup>78</sup> While humanitarian organizations called for a ceasefire, Israel issued the highest number of evacuation orders since 13 October 2023, targeting areas with the highest concentration of displaced Palestinians,<sup>79</sup> forcing the United Nations to suspend humanitarian operations.<sup>80</sup>

20. Systematic attacks on Gaza food sovereignty indicate an intent to destroy its population through starvation.<sup>81</sup> Israel has destroyed agricultural land<sup>82</sup> and reservoirs<sup>83</sup> and attacked distribution centres, coordination teams and aid convoys.<sup>84</sup> Hungry crowds waiting for food have been massacred.<sup>85</sup> Following constant evacuation orders and the Israeli takeover of the Rafah crossing,<sup>86</sup> distribution of daily meals fell by 35 per cent from July to August 2024.<sup>87</sup> In August, entry permits for humanitarian organizations nearly halved.<sup>88</sup> Access to water has been restricted to a quarter of pre-7 October levels.<sup>89</sup> Approximately 93 per cent of the agricultural, forestry and fishing economies has been destroyed;<sup>90</sup> 95 per cent of Palestinians face high levels of acute food insecurity,<sup>91</sup> and deprivation for decades to come.<sup>92</sup>

21. In August 2024, the Finance Minister of Israel, Bezalel Smotrich, stated that starving the entire Gaza population was “justified and moral”, even if 2 million people consequently died.<sup>93</sup> In recent months, 83 per cent of food aid was prevented from entering Gaza,<sup>94</sup> and the civilian police in Rafah were repeatedly targeted, impairing

<sup>74</sup> See www.emro.who.int/opt/news/variant-type-2-poliovirus-isolated-from-sewage-samples-in-gaza.html; www.un.org/unispal/document/gaza-aid-agencies-polio-20aug24/; and www.hrw.org/news/2024/08/26/gaza-israeli-aid-obstruction-inflaming-polio-outbreak.

<sup>75</sup> See www.bbc.co.uk/news/articles/cevz7zreyxo.

<sup>76</sup> See <https://news.un.org/en/story/2024/08/1153761>; and <https://edition.cnn.com/2024/08/29/middleeast/gaza-who-humanitarian-pause-intl-latam/index.html>.

<sup>77</sup> See www.aljazeera.com/news/liveblog/2024/9/2/israeli-war-on-gaza-live-israel-bombs-school-killing-11-palestinians?update=3154007; and <https://x.com/EuroMedHR/status/1833448805238181922>.

<sup>78</sup> See www.reuters.com/world/middle-east/israeli-military-says-it-detained-un-convoy-northern-gaza-2024-09-09/.

<sup>79</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-209-gaza-strip.

<sup>80</sup> See www.youtube.com/watch?v=oSQxAU5p1kc.

<sup>81</sup> A/79/171, paras. 42–64 and 112 (d).

<sup>82</sup> See <https://unosat.org/products/3905>.

<sup>83</sup> See <https://oxfamlibrary.openrepository.com/bitstream/handle/10546/621609/bp-water-war-crimes-180724-en.pdf;jsessionid=37827E3BBC47450A27965C80546ACA65?sequence=1>, pp. 6 and 21.

<sup>84</sup> See <https://responsiblestatecraft.org/israel-hamas-war-gaza/>; and <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-attacks-humanitarian-aid-distribution-system-enar>.

<sup>85</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/03/un-experts-condemn-flour-massacre-urge-israel-end-campaign-starvation-gaza.

<sup>86</sup> See www.wfp.org/stories/gaza-updates-wfp-calls-all-access-points-be-opened-rafah-exodus-fuels-hunger.

<sup>87</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-214-gaza-strip.

<sup>88</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-211-gaza-strip.

<sup>89</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/reported-impact-snapshot-gaza-strip-4-september-2024.

<sup>90</sup> See <https://thedocs.worldbank.org/en/doc/ce9fed0d3bb295f0363d690224d1cd39-0280012024/original/Palestinian-Econ-Upd-May2024-FINAL-ENGLISH-Only.pdf>, p. 6.

<sup>91</sup> See www.ipcinfo.org/fileadmin/user\_upload/ipcinfo/docs/IPC\_Gaza\_Strip\_Acute\_Food\_Insecurity\_MaySept2024\_Special\_Snapshot.pdf.

<sup>92</sup> A/79/171, para. 48.

<sup>93</sup> See www.timesofisrael.com/smotrich-it-may-be-justified-to-starve-2-million-gazans-but-world-wont-let-us/.

<sup>94</sup> See www.nrc.no/news/2024/september/israels-siege-now-blocks-83-of-food-aid-reaching-gaza-new-data-reveals/.

distribution.<sup>95</sup> At least 34 deaths from malnutrition were recorded by 14 September 2024.<sup>96</sup> At the time of writing, the Prime Minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, was evaluating a plan to block all food supplies to northern Gaza<sup>97</sup> proposed by adviser Giora Eiland,<sup>98</sup> who previously endorsed introducing epidemics as a military tactic.<sup>99</sup> The killing of civilian police and clan leadership providing security for food distribution further compounded the crisis across Gaza.<sup>100</sup> Starvation and deprivation tactics in the north have been particularly egregious.<sup>101</sup>

22. Palestinians have been systematically abused in a network of Israeli torture camps.<sup>102</sup> Thousands have disappeared, many after being detained in appalling conditions, often bound to beds, blindfolded and in diapers, deprived of medical treatment and subjected to unsanitary conditions, starvation, torturous cuffing, severe beatings, electrocution and sexual assault by both humans and animals.<sup>103</sup> At least 48 detainees have died in custody.<sup>104</sup>

23. Even when conservatively considered, these multiple torments constitute precisely the irreparable harm that ICJ has warned against since January 2024, and which Israel has intentionally inflicted on the Palestinians as a group.

B. Risk of genocide in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem

24. The devastation inflicted on Gaza is now metastasizing to the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. In December 2023, the Defence Minister of Israel, Yoav Gallant, predicted that “when what the IDF did in Gaza becomes clear, that will also be projected on Judea and Samaria [West Bank]”.<sup>105</sup>

<sup>95</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-11; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-116; www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-118-enarhe; www.un.org/unispal/document/ocha-sitrep-188-08jul24/; and <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-attacks-humanitarian-aid-distribution-system-enar>.

<sup>96</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/07/un-experts-declare-famine-has-spread-throughout-gaza-strip.

<sup>97</sup> See <https://aje.io/e90yu2?update=3174278>; www.israelnationalnews.com/en/news/395677; and <https://edition.cnn.com/2024/09/22/middleeast/netanyahu-gaza-hamas-expulsions-plan-intl/index.html>.

<sup>98</sup> See www.972mag.com/northern-gaza-liquidation-scenario-eiland-rabi/.

<sup>99</sup> S/2024/419, pp. 92–93.

<sup>100</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-113; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-116; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-118; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-143; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-144; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-149; www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-188-gaza-strip; and <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-attacks-humanitarian-aid-distribution-system-enar>.

<sup>101</sup> Additional Protocol I to the 1949 Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, art. 54; Additional Protocol II to the 1949 Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, art. 14; International Committee of the Red Cross on customary international humanitarian law, rule 53; and Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 8 (2) (b) (xxv).

<sup>102</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf; and www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/08/israels-escalating-use-torture-against-palestinians-custody-preventable.

<sup>103</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf.

<sup>104</sup> Ibid., p. 91.

<sup>105</sup> See www.kikar.co.il/security-news/s5ieil (Hebrew).

25. From 7 October 2023 to the end of September 2024, Israeli forces carried out more than 5,505 raids.<sup>106</sup> Violent settlers, supported by Israeli forces and officials,<sup>107</sup> conducted 1,084 attacks,<sup>108</sup> killing more than 692 Palestinians – 10 times the previous 14 years’ annual average of 69 fatalities – and injuring 5,199.<sup>109</sup>

26. The pattern of targeting children is shocking. Since 7 October, 169 Palestinian children have been killed,<sup>110</sup> nearly 80 per cent of whom were shot in the head or torso.<sup>111</sup> This represents a 250 per cent increase on the previous nine months,<sup>112</sup> totalling more than 20 per cent of children killed in the West Bank since 2000.<sup>113</sup>

27. Echoing the brutality that swept Gaza, Palestinians in the West Bank have been subjected to appalling detention practices,<sup>114</sup> following orders by the National Security Minister of Israel, Itamar Ben-Gvir.<sup>115</sup> A mass arrest campaign<sup>116</sup> led to the detention of tens of thousands, with 9,400 currently detained.<sup>117</sup> As in Gaza, many are academics, students, lawyers, journalists and human rights defenders,<sup>118</sup> designated as “terrorists” or “national security threats”.<sup>119</sup> Leaked videos and interviews with prison officials revealed intentional and systemic abuse and brutality, degradation, torture and even rape.<sup>120</sup> At least 12 detainees from the West Bank died as a result of torture and denial of medical care.<sup>121</sup>

28. In November 2023, Bezalel Smotrich, “Governor of Judea and Samaria” and staunch advocate of colonization and mass expulsion,<sup>122</sup> claimed that there are “2 million Nazis” in the West Bank.<sup>123</sup> He then promised to turn several areas of the

<sup>106</sup> NGO submissions.

<sup>107</sup> A/HRC/55/72, para. 18; <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-statement-new-wave-settler-attacks-displacing-palestinian-herding-communities-and-consolidating-settlements-and-outposts-occupied-west-bank>; and www.haaretz.com/israel-news/2024-01-24/ty-article/.premium/israeli-army-weighs-plan-to-arm-west-bank-settlements-with-anti-tank-missiles/0000018d-3b7e-d32b-adeb-ff7e83330000.

<sup>108</sup> See <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/atrocity-alert-no-403-israel-and-occupied-palestinian-territory-sudan-and-un-human-rights-council>.

<sup>109</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/data/casualties.

<sup>110</sup> See www.unicef.org/press-releases/child-casualties-west-bank-skyrocket-past-nine-months.

<sup>111</sup> See https://assets.nationbuilder.com/dcipalestine/pages/5323/attachments/original/1725884141/Targeting\_Childhood\_report.pdf?1725884141, p. 7.

<sup>112</sup> See https://assets.nationbuilder.com/dcipalestine/pages/5323/attachments/original/1725884141/Targeting\_Childhood\_report.pdf?1725884141, p. 7; and www.unicef.org/press-releases/child-casualties-west-bank-skyrocket-past-nine-months.

<sup>113</sup> See https://assets.nationbuilder.com/dcipalestine/pages/5323/attachments/original/1725884141/Targeting\_Childhood\_report.pdf?1725884141.

<sup>114</sup> NGO submissions; A/HRC/55/28, paras. 75–80; and <https://spcommreports.ohchr.org/TMResultsBase/DownloadPublicCommunicationFile?gId=28609>.

<sup>115</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf, pp. 7–8.

<sup>116</sup> See www.amnesty.org.uk/press-releases/israelopt-surge-arbitrary-detention-west-bank-palestinians-torture-rife; NGO submissions; and A/HRC/56/26, para. 62.

<sup>117</sup> See <https://hamoked.org/prisoners-charts.php>; and www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/08/israels-escalating-use-torture-against-palestinians-custody-preventable.

<sup>118</sup> See www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/documents/countries/opt/20240731-Thematic-report-Detention-context-Gaza-hostilities.pdf.

<sup>119</sup> See <https://cpj.org/2024/09/arrests-of-palestinian-journalists-since-start-of-israel-gaza-war/>.

<sup>120</sup> See www.amnesty.org/en/latest/news/2023/11/israel-opt-horrifying-cases-of-torture-and-degrading-treatment-of-palestinian-detainees-amid-spike-in-arbitrary-arrests/; <http://mezan.org/uploads/files/2024/4/1712323548Torture%20report-AlMezan.pdf>; and www.omct.org/site-resources/files/Submission\_SR\_Torture\_final-15.2.24.pdf, p. 7.

<sup>121</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf, p. 9.

<sup>122</sup> See <https://hashiloach.org.il/israels-decisive-plan/>.

<sup>123</sup> See www.timesofisrael.com/there-are-2-million-nazis-in-west-bank-says-far-right-finance-minister-smotrich/. See also para. 32.

West Bank into a “pile of rubble like ... [Gaza]”.<sup>124</sup> On 18 August, the Foreign Minister of Israel, Israel Katz, called for the West Bank to receive the same treatment as Gaza.<sup>125</sup>

29. The northern West Bank has been the subject of particularly severe military violence.<sup>126</sup> Protracted sieges,<sup>127</sup> relentless raids<sup>128</sup> and a major escalation since August 2024, including aerial bombardment,<sup>129</sup> have wrought devastation.<sup>130</sup> Forty-six drone and air strike operations<sup>131</sup> killed 77 Palestinians, including 14 children.<sup>132</sup> In Jenin camp approximately 180 homes were levelled and 3,800 structures damaged,<sup>133</sup> destroying or damaging power supplies, public services and amenities,<sup>134</sup> displacing thousands of families and causing widespread disruption.<sup>135</sup> More than 181,000 Palestinians have been affected, many multiple times.<sup>136</sup>

30. On 27 August 2024, Israeli forces launched operation “Summer Camps” against Jenin, Nablus, Qalqilya, Tubas and Tulkarem, fulfilling the promise to treat the West Bank like Gaza.<sup>137</sup> For days on end, thousands were placed under curfew, without food or water.<sup>138</sup> Israeli forces targeted ambulances, blocked entrances to hospitals and laid siege to Jenin Hospital.<sup>139</sup> Bulldozers destroyed streets and electricity and public health infrastructure.<sup>140</sup> Hundreds lost their homes and property;<sup>141</sup> more than

<sup>124</sup> See www.srugim.co.il/999113-%D7%A1%D7%9E%D7%95%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%A5-%D7%90%D7%9D-%D7%99%D7%9E%D7%A9%D7%9A-%D7%94%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%95%D7%A8-%D7%98%D7%95%D7%9C%D7%9B%D7%A8%D7%9D-%D7%AA%D7%94%D7%A4%D7%95%D7%9A-%D7%9C%D7%A2 (Hebrew).

<sup>125</sup> See https://x.com/Israel\_katz/status/1828654399360586025 (Hebrew).

<sup>126</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/06/occupied-palestinian-territory-turk-condemns-over-500-west-bank-killings.

<sup>127</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/humanitarian-situation-update-189-west-bank-enarhe.

<sup>128</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/humanitarian-situation-update-189-west-bank-enarhe; www.ochaopt.org/poc/16-29-may-2023; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-137; and www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-180-gaza-strip-west-bank.

<sup>129</sup> See <https://theintercept.com/2024/06/12/israel-west-bank-airstrikes-drones-palestinians-killed-children/>.

<sup>130</sup> See www.972mag.com/jenin-tulkarem-armed-resistance-israeli-repression/.

<sup>131</sup> See <https://acleddata.com/2024/08/05/palestine-mid-year-metrics-2024/>.

<sup>132</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-186-west-bank

<sup>133</sup> See www.972mag.com/jenin-tulkarem-armed-resistance-israeli-repression/.

<sup>134</sup> See <https://t.me/jenencamb/57875>; www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/09/apartheid-israel-targeting-gaza-and-west-bank-simultaneously-says-expert; and www.972mag.com/jenin-tulkarem-armed-resistance-israeli-repression/.

<sup>135</sup> See www.972mag.com/israel-apartheid-jenin-gaza/; www.972mag.com/jenin-tulkarem-armed-resistance-israeli-repression/; and www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/09/apartheid-israel-targeting-gaza-and-west-bank-simultaneously-says-expert.

<sup>136</sup> See www.un.org/unispal/document/humanitarian-situation-update-201-07aug24/.

<sup>137</sup> See <https://edition.cnn.com/2024/09/06/middleeast/israeli-military-operation-jenin-west-bank-enters-second-week-intl/index.html>.

<sup>138</sup> See www.unrwa.org/resources/reports/unrwa-situation-report-133-situation-gaza-strip-and-west-bank-including-east-jerusalem; and <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-israeli-security-forces-have-killed-36-palestinians-including-eight-children-10-days-during-operation-northern-west-bank-while-settler-violence-intensifies>.

<sup>139</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/09/apartheid-israel-targeting-gaza-and-west-bank-simultaneously-says-expert; and www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-213-west-bank.

<sup>140</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/humanitarian-situation-update-216-west-bank-enar.

<sup>141</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-213-west-bank.

1,000 families in Jenin were displaced.<sup>142</sup> Thirty-six were killed, including eight children.<sup>143</sup>

31. Targeted attacks on the health sector have been replicated in the West Bank. Medical workers and infrastructure were attacked 538 times, killing 23 people and injuring 100 and damaging 54 medical facilities, 20 mobile clinics and 374 ambulances,<sup>144</sup> while critical medical care was impeded.<sup>145</sup> Permits for Palestinians to access medical care outside the West Bank sharply declined.<sup>146</sup>

32. On 29 May 2024, governance of the West Bank was officially transferred from military to civilian authorities – furthering de jure annexation – and placed under Bezalel Smotrich, a committed Eretz Yisrael politician.<sup>147</sup> The largest single land appropriation in 30 years was then approved.<sup>148</sup> Since 7 October, Israel has demolished, confiscated or ordered the demolition of more than 1,416 Palestinian structures, displacing more than 3,200 Palestinians, including approximately 1,400 children.<sup>149</sup> At least 18 communities were depopulated under the threat of lethal force,<sup>150</sup> effectively enabling the colonization of large tracts of Area C.<sup>151</sup> This constitutes an escalation of unlawful conduct already found to be “aimed at dispersing the [Palestinian] population and undermining its integrity as a people”.<sup>152</sup>

33. The crippling of the economy is another existential threat. Amid extreme insecurity and fear, the suspension of financial transfers to the Palestinian Authority,<sup>153</sup> the revocation of 148,000 work permits<sup>154</sup> and severe movement restrictions, the gross domestic product (GDP) of the West Bank contracted by 22.7

<sup>142</sup> See <https://reliefweb.int/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/un-human-rights-office-opt-israeli-security-forces-have-killed-36-palestinians-including-eight-children-10-days-during-operation-northern-west-bank-while-settler-violence-intensifies>.

<sup>143</sup> See www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/humanitarian-situation-update-216-west-bank-enar.

<sup>144</sup> See www.emro.who.int/images/stories/Sitrep\_-\_issue\_41b.pdf.

<sup>145</sup> See www.msf.org/west-bank-israeli-forces-render-healthcare-inaccessible-when-needed-most; www.who.int/news/item/14-06-2024-who-concerned-about-escalating-health-crisis-in-west-bank.

<sup>146</sup> See www.who.int/news/item/14-06-2024-who-concerned-about-escalating-health-crisis-in-west-bank.

<sup>147</sup> A/79/347, paras. 7–10. See also the concern raised in Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 156.

<sup>148</sup> See <https://peacenow.org.il/en/state-land-declaration-12000-dunams>; and www.gov.il/BlobFolder/reports/yafit2heb/he/igal\_%D7%99%D7%A4%D7%99%D7%AA%20-%20%D7%9E%D7%A7%D7%98%D7%A2%D7%99%D7%9D%20%D7%91%20%D7%92%20%D7%90%D7%99%D7%A0%D7%98%D7%A8%D7%A0%D7%98%20%D7%A2%D7%91%D7%A8%D7%99%D7%AA.pdf (Hebrew).

<sup>149</sup> See www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-207-west-bank.

<sup>150</sup> See www.haaretz.com/middle-east-news/palestinians/2024-05-05/ty-article-magazine/premium/since-the-war-began-entire-areas-of-the-west-bank-have-been-emptied-of-their-communities/0000018f-39a9-d9c3-abc7-7bfd66980000.

<sup>151</sup> See www.crisisgroup.org/middle-east-north-africa/east-mediterranean-mena-israelpalestine/246-stemming-israeli-settler-violence; and www.ochaopt.org/content/humanitarian-situation-update-219-west-bank.

<sup>152</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 239.

<sup>153</sup> See www.crisisgroup.org/united-states-israelpalestine/meltdown-looms-west-banks-financial-lifelines; and www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/04/israel-withholding-tax-revenue-and-revoking-banking-waivers-could-paralyse.

<sup>154</sup> See www.worldbank.org/en/news/press-release/2024/05/23/world-bank-issues-new-update-on-the-palestinian-economy.

per cent,<sup>155</sup> nearly 30 per cent of businesses have closed, and 292,000 jobs have been lost.<sup>156</sup>

34. Genocidal conduct in Gaza set an ominous precedent for the West Bank. The deliberate strategy of Israel to render Palestinian life unsustainable has markedly intensified everywhere in the occupied Palestinian territory, with devastating consequences for Palestinian survival.

IV. Understanding the legal complexity and scope of genocidal intent

35. Following the harrowing experience of recent genocides in Rwanda, the former Yugoslavia and, plausibly, Myanmar,<sup>157</sup> what constitutes genocide in law – the destruction of a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, in whole or in part, as such – has become better established.<sup>158</sup> However, preventing and punishing genocide in practice, in particular proving genocidal intent, is still developing.<sup>159</sup>

36. The stigma attached to and the consequences of the crime of genocide often deter perpetrators from recording policies, plans and other indications of intent to carry it out (e.g. in writing).<sup>160</sup> When direct evidence of intent is unavailable, inferring intent requires a complex assessment of facts, statements and circumstances.<sup>161</sup> These factors should be borne in mind:

(a) While recognizing the possible composite nature of genocide is critical to its identification and prevention, the compartmentalization of the conduct into its disparate acts without recourse to broader context can obscure the requisite genocidal intent;

(b) Aside from the five acts that may constitute genocidal conduct, other acts can be indicative of genocidal intent;<sup>162</sup>

(c) The existing jurisprudence has arisen primarily from the criminal prosecution of individuals;<sup>163</sup> this can limit the early recognition of broader State responsibility for genocide, which is crucial to its prevention.

<sup>155</sup> See www.ilo.org/resource/news/war-propels-unemployment-close-80-cent-and-shrinks-gdp-835-cent-gaza-strip.

<sup>156</sup> See www.worldbank.org/en/news/press-release/2024/05/23/world-bank-issues-new-update-on-the-palestinian-economy.

<sup>157</sup> A/HRC/39/64, paras. 84–87; and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (The Gambia v. Myanmar), Order of 23 January 2020, I.C.J. Reports 2020, p. 69, para. 56.

<sup>158</sup> A/HRC/55/73, paras. 15–20.

<sup>159</sup> Paul Behrens, “Between abstract event and individualized crime: genocidal intent in the case of Croatia”, Leiden Journal of International Law, vol. 28, No. 4 (October 2015), p. 934.

<sup>160</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Sylvestre Gacumbitsi v. The Prosecutor, Case No. ICTR-2001-64-A, Appeal Judgment, 7 July 2006, para. 40.

<sup>161</sup> A/HRC/55/73, para. 18.

<sup>162</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, paras. 162, 390 and 434; Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, para. 190 and 344; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-T, Judgment, 2 August 2001, para. 580; and International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Karadžić, Case No. IT-95-5/18-T, Judgment, 24 March 2016, para. 553.

<sup>163</sup> William Schabas, Genocide in International Law, 2nd ed. (Cambridge University Press, 2009), p. 512.

37. Understanding how the intent to destroy manifests – its relationship to the prescribed genocidal acts and the nature and scale of atrocities – is key when identifying conduct that could constitute evidence of genocidal intent as the only reasonable inference.

38. In the following sections, the Special Rapporteur briefly outlines how relevant jurisprudence, analysed in abstracto, is fully capable of capturing genocidal intent in State conduct when a comprehensive interpretative approach is adopted.

A. Considering the plurality of facts, circumstances and conduct

39. The magnitude and complexity of the crime of genocide require close analysis of the genocidal conduct as a whole,<sup>164</sup> properly situated in its broader context.<sup>165</sup> Due consideration should be given to:

- The destruction caused by the nature and scale of atrocities<sup>166</sup>
- The fog of war<sup>167</sup>
- Claims to retribution or alternative motives<sup>168</sup>
- The opportunity to commit genocide<sup>169</sup>

40. In international practice, the same facts can form the basis of multiple charges (and constitute a war crime or crime against humanity and an act of genocide).<sup>170</sup>

<sup>164</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Ferdinand Nahimana and Others v. The Prosecutor, Case No. ICTR-99-52-A, Appeals Judgment, 28 November 2007, para. 524.

<sup>165</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, paras. 419–430.

<sup>166</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Popović and Others, Case No. IT-05-88-A, Appeal-Judgment, 30 January 2015, para. 503; Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, para. 413; Joint Declaration of Intervention of Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (to the case of The Gambia v. Myanmar), 15 November 2023, para. 53; and A/HRC/39/CRP.2, paras. 1436–1438.

<sup>167</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-T, para. 572.

<sup>168</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Aloys Simba v. the Prosecutor, Case No. ICTR-01-76-A, Appeal Judgment, 27 November 2007, paras. 268–269; International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Elizaphan Ntakirutimana and others, Case Nos. ICTR-96-10-A and ICTR-96-17-A, Appeal Judgment, 13 December 2004, paras. 302–304; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Goran Jelisić, Case No. IT-95-10-A, Appeal Judgment, 5 July 2001, para. 49; and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, Separate Opinion of Judge Bhandari, para. 50.

<sup>169</sup> See Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, paras. 431–437; and International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-A, Appeal Judgement, 19 April 2004, paras. 13 and 148–149.

<sup>170</sup> Patricia M. Wald, “Genocide and crimes against humanity”, Washington University Global Studies Law Review, vol. 6, No. 3 (January 2007), pp. 631–632.

When determining genocidal intent, it is critical to assess “whether all of the evidence, taken together, demonstrate[s] a genocidal mental state”.<sup>171</sup>

41. As observed by Judge Trindade in Croatia v. Serbia, an “onslaught of civilians” is not merely a “plurality of common crimes”, but rather a “plurality of atrocities, which, in itself, by its extreme violence and devastation, can disclose the intent to destroy”.<sup>172</sup> The focus should be on whether all the acts – e.g. starvation, torture, killing, forced displacement, extermination – considered together in their totality form a pattern of conduct indicative of genocidal intent.<sup>173</sup>

B. Singularity of intent: destroying “a group” “as such”

42. In proving intent to destroy the group, all relevant factors must be examined holistically. Jurisprudence on genocidal intent is typically focused on “physical or biological destruction” of the group.<sup>174</sup> The fact that the Genocide Convention was drafted when colonialism still played a significant role in international relations, and the vivid horror of the Holocaust’s industrial-scale extermination, may account for the focus on physical and biological destruction over social and cultural factors.<sup>175</sup> However, genocide is not a crime only of mass killing, as specified in the Convention itself.<sup>176</sup> The genocidal act of “forcibly transferring children of the group to another group”, for example, entails no killing at all.<sup>177</sup>

43. Genocide is more structurally complex and insidious, and therefore more difficult to ascertain than crimes such as mass killing or extermination. A wider lens

<sup>171</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Milomir Stakić, Case No. IT-97-24-A, Appeal Judgment, 22 March 2006, para. 55; (cited in) Joint Declaration of Intervention of Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom (to the case of The Gambia v. Myanmar), para. 54; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Karadžić, Case No. IT-95-5/18-T, Judgment, 24 March 2016, paras. 550 and 2592; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-A, Appeal Judgment, 8 April 2015, paras. 246–247; Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia, Case 002/02 Judgment (Chea Nuon and Samphan Khieu), Case No. 002/19-09-2007/ECCC/TC, Judgment, 16 November 2018, para. 803; and A/HRC/39/CRP.2, para. 1416.

<sup>172</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Dissenting Opinion of Judge Cañado Trindade, para. 237.

<sup>173</sup> Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia, Case 002/02 Judgment, para. 801 (citing S/1994/674, para. 94); International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-T, Judgment, 12 December 2012, para. 745; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Milomir Stakić, Case No. IT-97-24-A, Appeal Judgment, 22 March 2006, para. 55; International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Yussuf Munyakazi, Case No. ICTR-97-36A-A, Appeal Judgment, 28 September 2011, para. 142; and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Ildéphonse Hategekimana v. The Prosecutor, Case No. ICTR-00-55B-A, Appeal Judgment, 8 May 2012, para. 133.

<sup>174</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-T, para. 580; and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, para. 344.

<sup>175</sup> Tamara Starblanket, Suffer the Little Children: Genocide, Indigenous Nations and the Canadian State (Clarity Press, 2018), pp. 77–78; and Elisa Novic, The Concept of Cultural Genocide: An International Law Perspective (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2016), p. 28.

<sup>176</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Vidoje Blagojević and Dragan Jokić, Case No. IT-02-60-T, Judgment, 17 January 2005, para. 666; Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia, Case 002/02 Judgment, para. 801; Element of Crimes, art. 6 (PCNICC/2000/1/Add.2, see construction of genocide crimes under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court). See also, International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-A, Appeal Judgment, 19 April 2004, para. 32.

<sup>177</sup> Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, art. II (e).

is required to identify the intent to destroy a group in whole or in part as such. International jurisprudence provides that acts other than the five listed in the Convention may be relevant evidence of genocidal intent.<sup>178</sup> Accordingly, the historical and sociopolitical context in which genocide occurs is key to identifying how intent forms, and then materializes also through these other acts.

44. Jurisprudence has been broadly focused on determining intent through acts targeting “the very foundation of the group”,<sup>179</sup> including the imposition of living conditions leading to “slow death”<sup>180</sup> and “the destruction of the spirit, of the will to live, and of life itself”.<sup>181</sup> In other words, intent to destroy is assessed holistically and in totality.

45. Jurisprudence has also recognized that a group is “comprised of its individuals, but also of its history, traditions, the relationship between its members, the relationship with other groups, the relationship with the land”.<sup>182</sup> Violent destruction of any of these components has a profound impact on the group and its ability to survive.<sup>183</sup> Trauma, poverty, food scarcity, forced displacement, loss of homes, land and cultural heritage – and settler-colonialism as an “enduring structure”<sup>184</sup> – are widely recognized determinants of individual and societal health.<sup>185</sup>

46. In settler-colonial contexts, land and its resources are particularly relevant. Land is intrinsic to both a people’s right to self-determination and the settler-colonial project. An inherent conflict exists between the colonizers, who seek to acquire and control the land, and the Indigenous population, for whom the land is integral to their identity: “where they are is who they are”.<sup>186</sup> Disconnection from land and cultural roots contributes to the erosion of identity and community resilience, resulting in physically destructive outcomes: poorer health, lower life expectancy and abnormally

<sup>178</sup> See footnote 162.

<sup>179</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Athanase Seromba, Case No. ICTR-2001-66-A, Appeal Judgment, 12 March 2008, para. 176; International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Siméon Nchamihigo, Case No. ICTR-01-63-T, Judgment and Sentence, 12 November 2008, para. 331; Israel, District Court of Jerusalem, Attorney-General v. Eichmann, Case No. 40/61, Judgment, 1968, para. 183; and International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, The Prosecutor v. Radovan Karadžić and Ratko Mladić, Case No. IT-95-5-R61; IT-95-18-R6I, Rule 61 Review of the Indictments, 11 July 1996, paras. 94–95.

<sup>180</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-T, Judgment, 12 December 2012, para. 740.

<sup>181</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Jean-Paul Akayesu, Case No. ICTR-96-4-T, Judgment, 2 September 1998, para. 732.

<sup>182</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Vidoje Blagojević and Dragan Jokić, Case No. IT-02-60-T, Judgment, 17 January 2005, para. 666; and A/HRC/39/CRP.2, para. 1405.

<sup>183</sup> See International Criminal Court, Trial Chamber VI, The Prosecutor v. Bosco Ntaganda, Case No. ICC-01/04-02/06-2659, Reparations Order, 8 March 2021, paras. 73–74; and Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Gómez-Palomino v. Peru, Series C No. 136, Judgment, 22 November 2005, para. 146.

<sup>184</sup> Bram Wispelwey and others, “Because its power remains naturalized: introducing the settler colonial determinants of health”, Frontiers in Public Health, vol. 11 (July 2023), p. 3.

<sup>185</sup> E/C.12/2000/4, para. 4; and Kimberly Matheson and others, “Canada’s colonial genocide of indigenous peoples: a review of the psychosocial and neurobiological processes linking trauma and intergenerational outcomes”, International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health, vol. 19, No. 11 (May 2022), p. 2.

<sup>186</sup> Patrick Wolfe, “Settler colonialism and the elimination of the native”, Journal of Genocide Research, vol. 8, No. 4 (2006), p. 388.

high suicide rates.<sup>187</sup> The issue of land is therefore indicative of how the settler-colonial project destroys – in order to replace – the Indigenous population.<sup>188</sup>

47. Consequently, components of conduct, such as repeated forced displacement, that result in the disconnection from the land, as well as the destruction of the cultural, educational and economic structures that tie a people to the land, must be considered “significant as indicative of the presence of a specific intent ... inspiring [other genocidal] acts”.<sup>189</sup> Forced displacement itself, together with aggravating factors – e.g. displacement into dangerous, squalid or toxic conditions – can constitute an underlying genocidal act.<sup>190</sup> The particular vulnerability of the group must also be considered.<sup>191</sup>

48. In short, intent to destroy has become established as the targeting of a group’s existence such that “the group can no longer reconstitute itself”.<sup>192</sup>

C. Genocidal intent in the context of State responsibility

49. Early identification of genocide is crucial to prevent genocide, ensuring that a central tenet of the post-Second World War international legal system is not a dead letter.

50. In assessing State responsibility for genocide – i.e. genocidal intent attributable to the State – ICJ has drawn heavily on the jurisprudence of international criminal tribunals.<sup>193</sup> While acknowledging that State responsibility can be established “without an individual being convicted of the crime”,<sup>194</sup> in Bosnia v. Serbia in 2007, the Court found State genocidal intent only where individual perpetrators had been held criminally responsible. The Court established that, in the absence of direct evidence of State intent, the pattern of conduct must be such that it “could only point to the existence of such intent”.<sup>195</sup> This approach was tempered in 2015, in Croatia v. Serbia, where the Court determined that “reasonableness” must be considered when inferring genocidal intent from patterns of conduct.<sup>196</sup>

<sup>187</sup> A/HRC/21/53, para. 84; A/HRC/54/31/Add.2, paras. 21 and 26; A/HRC/33/57, paras. 4–5; Maria Yellow Horse Brave Heart and others, “Historical trauma among indigenous peoples of the Americas: concepts, research, and clinical considerations”, Journal of Psychoactive Drugs, vol. 43, No. 4 (October 2011), p. 284; and Matheson and others, “Canada’s colonial genocide”.

<sup>188</sup> Wolfe, “Settler colonialism”, p. 388.

<sup>189</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, paras. 190 and 344. See also, International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-A, Appeal Judgement, 19 April 2004, para. 33.

<sup>190</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-T, Judgment, 12 December 2012, para. 740.

<sup>191</sup> Ibid., para. 742.

<sup>192</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Vidoje Blagojević and Dragan Jokić, Case No. IT-02-60-T, Judgment, 17 January 2005, paras. 661 and 666, citing International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-A, Appeal Judgement, 19 April 2004, para. 31; A/HRC/39/CRP.2, para. 1405; and Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia, Case 002/02 Judgment, para. 801.

<sup>193</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, paras. 374–376; and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, paras. 182, 187, 414, 424–430 and 440.

<sup>194</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, paras. 182 and 373–375.

<sup>195</sup> Ibid., para. 373.

<sup>196</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide

51. However, further clarity is needed regarding genocidal intent in the context of State responsibility. State intent can be derived from the aggregate of individual perpetrators' genocidal intents, but States should not be exonerated simply because there are no individual criminal convictions, which, if they do occur, may come too late to prevent or stop genocide. While ICJ acknowledged that State obligations concerning genocide are "not of a criminal nature",<sup>197</sup> the standard of proof required to ground the responsibility of a State is a quasi-criminal standard. Among other things, this would delay or frustrate justice for victims.

52. Intervening in The Gambia v. Myanmar, currently before ICJ, six Western States argued that the "reasonableness criterion" requires a "balanced approach" so as not to make it "impossible" to determine genocidal intent "by way of inference"<sup>198</sup> in other words, urging the Court not to miss the forest for the trees. Otherwise, this risks protecting the State over the victims that the Convention is designed to protect.<sup>199</sup>

53. Three factors help achieve this balance:

(a) Applying the "only reasonable inference" test involves first filtering out other possible intents that could be inferred but are not reasonably supported by the evidence.<sup>200</sup> A balanced consideration of the interplay between motives and intent should determine whether motives "preclude such a specific intent" to destroy a people,<sup>201</sup> or whether they are consistent with, or even confirm, genocidal intent as the only reasonable inference;

(b) International law treats the State as a unit, not as separate organs.<sup>202</sup> This means that conduct and intent of the State must be considered holistically. A rule of law-regulated State must be viewed as a whole, including its Government, parliament and judiciary and their regulatory functions;

(c) Given the high threshold set for establishing genocidal intent, the failure to illuminate the totality of conduct invites the possibility of invisibilizing the crime itself behind the claimed strategies, policies and actions that are advanced by the wrongdoing State in order to obscure it.<sup>203</sup> Failure to recognize genocide in its totality may help create the camouflage that a State could employ to commit it.

---

(Croatia v. Serbia), para. 148.

<sup>197</sup> Ibid., para. 170.

<sup>198</sup> Joint Declaration of Intervention of Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom (to the case of The Gambia v. Myanmar), para. 52, citing Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, para. 148.

<sup>199</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Dissenting Opinion of Judge Cançado Trindade, para. 145.

<sup>200</sup> Joint Declaration of Intervention of Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom (to the case of The Gambia v. Myanmar), paras. 50–52.

<sup>201</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. François Karera, Case No. ICTR-01-74-T, Judgment, 7 December 2007, para. 534; International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Eliézer Niyitegeka v. The Prosecutor, Case No. ICTR-96-14-A, Appeal Judgment, 9 July 2004, para. 53; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Karadžić, Case No. IT-95-5/18-T, Judgment, 24 March 2016, para. 554; and Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia, Case 002/02 Judgment, paras. 4507–4512.

<sup>202</sup> Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, with commentaries (see A/CN.4/SER.A/2001/Add.1 \(Part 2\), p. 35).

<sup>203</sup> Leanne Betasamosake Simpson, As We have Always Done: Indigenous Freedom Through Radical Resistance (Minneapolis, University of Minnesota Press, 2017), p. 15.

V. “Totality triple lens”: Israeli intent towards the Palestinians as a group as such

54. The current intent to destroy the people as such could not be more evident from Israeli conduct when viewed in its totality. In this section, the Special Rapporteur applies the framework set out above to the totality of conduct targeting the totality of Palestinians, in the totality of the occupied Palestinian territory (“totality triple lens”). She then analyses specific components of Israeli conduct: the broader context of the political project of Israel in the region; the nature of the destruction inflicted on the Palestinian people; and the motives obscuring the specific intent itself.

A. Totality of the land: “Greater Israel”

55. The ambition for a “Greater Israel” (Eretz Yisrael), consolidating Jewish sovereignty over the territory now comprising both Israel and the occupied Palestinian territory, has been a long-standing goal since the very inception of the Zionist project and before Israel existed.<sup>204</sup> The legally recognized right to self-determination of Palestinians being tied to that land,<sup>205</sup> together with their large presence, have represented both legal and demographic impediments to the realization of “Greater Israel”.

56. Successive Governments have pursued this goal, predicated on the erasure of the Indigenous Palestinian people.<sup>206</sup> Even after the Oslo Accords, which marked international support for a two-State solution, the plan was advanced.<sup>207</sup> Since then, Israeli colonies have increased from 128 to 358,<sup>208</sup> and settler numbers have grown from 256,400<sup>209</sup> to 714,600.<sup>210</sup> The 2018 Nation State Law asserted exclusive Jewish sovereignty over “Eretz Yisrael” and “Jewish settlement” in that area as a national priority.<sup>211</sup> On 28 December 2022, the current Government of Israel announced its plan to expand the colonies in the West Bank<sup>212</sup> and aggressively advanced substantial land confiscation and settlement expansion. In September 2023, before the General

<sup>204</sup> Itzhak Galnoor, The Partition of Palestine: Decision Crossroads in the Zionist Movement (Albany, State University of New York Press, 1995), p. 66.

<sup>205</sup> A/77/356, paras. 25–32.

<sup>206</sup> Ibid., paras. 38–40; Fayeze Sayegh, Zionist Colonialism in Palestine (Beirut, Research Centre, Palestine Liberation Organization, 1965), p. 27; and Nadav G. Shelef, “From ‘Both Banks of the Jordan’ to the ‘Whole Land of Israel’: ideological change in revisionist Zionism”, Israel Studies, vol. 9, No. 1 (2004), pp. 125–148.

<sup>207</sup> See www.timesofisrael.com/knesset-votes-overwhelmingly-against-palestinian-statehood-days-before-pms-us-trip/; www.timesofisrael.com/netanyahu-boasts-of-thwarting-the-establishment-of-a-palestinian-state-for-decades/; and www.bbc.com/news/world-middle-east-68025945.

<sup>208</sup> See <https://peacenow.org.il/en/30-years-after-oslo-the-data-that-shows-how-the-settlements-proliferated-following-the-oslo-accords>; and <https://peacenow.org.il/en/settlements-watch/settlements-data/population>.

<sup>209</sup> See <https://peacenow.org.il/en/30-years-after-oslo-the-data-that-shows-how-the-settlements-proliferated-following-the-oslo-accords>.

<sup>210</sup> See www.un.org/unispal/wp-content/uploads/2024/08/One-Year-Report-on-Israeli-Settlements-in-the-occupied-West-Bank-including-East-Jerusalem-Reporting-period-January-December-2023.pdf.

<sup>211</sup> See www.badil.org/cached\_uploads/view/2021/04/20/nationstatelaw-positionpaper-badil-oct2018-1618905362.pdf, pp. 11–12; and <https://main.knesset.gov.il/EN/activity/Documents/BasicLawsPDF/BasicLawNationState.pdf>.

<sup>212</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 170.

Assembly, Prime Minister Netanyahu exhibited a map of Israel erasing the occupied Palestinian territory and superimposing Israel.<sup>213</sup>

57. The cultivation of a political doctrine<sup>214</sup> that frames Palestinian assertions of self-determination as a security threat to Israel has served to legitimize permanent occupation.<sup>215</sup> The deliberate dehumanization of the Palestinians has accompanied systematic ethnic purges from the period 1947–1949 to today.<sup>216</sup> Ideological hatred of Palestinians as such has pervaded segments of society and the Israeli State apparatus.<sup>217</sup>

58. Meanwhile, despite the oppression, Palestinians refuse to leave the land, and in fact the population has grown. The increasing risk of a majority-Jewish State becoming unachievable has progressively made destruction an unavoidable part of the process.<sup>218</sup>

59. The events of 7 October provided the impetus to advance towards the goal of a “Greater Israel”. Calls for the displacement of Palestinians into the Arab world, amid conquest, colonization and annexation, grew.<sup>219</sup> The leaked Ministry of Intelligence of Israel “concept paper” from October 2023 outlining the expulsion of the entire Gaza population to Egypt,<sup>220</sup> alongside widespread and explicit support within the governing coalition,<sup>221</sup> identifies an opportunity to recolonize Gaza,<sup>222</sup> which the Government seized, taking advantage of the fog of war. In parallel in the West Bank, following 7 October, annexation and colony construction intensified.<sup>223</sup>

60. The State’s intent to destroy, expressed in various statements and plans, and inferable from conduct considered in context, has gradually become more recognizable. This conduct had already, prior to 7 October, had the effect of “a cumulative, multilayered and intergenerational impact on the Palestinian society, <sup>213</sup> See www.timesofisrael.com/full-text-of-netanyahus-un-address-on-the-cusp-of-historic-saudi-israel-peace/.

<sup>214</sup> See International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, The Prosecutor v. Radovan Karadžić and Ratko Mladić, Case No. IT-95-5-R61; IT-95-18-R6I, Rule 61 Review of the Indictments, 11 July 1996, paras. 94–95; and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Jean-Paul Akayesu, Case No. ICTR-96-4-T, Judgment, 2 September 1998, para. 524.

<sup>215</sup> A/78/545, para. 13; A/HRC/53/59, paras. 4, 36–37 and 42; Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 47 and 205, see also, Declaration of Judge Charlesworth, para. 16.

<sup>216</sup> Idith Zertal, Israel’s Holocaust and the Politics of Nationhood (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2009), pp. 174 and 196.

<sup>217</sup> Nadera Shalhoub-Kevorkian, Security Theology, Surveillance and the Politics of Fear (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 2015), p. 14.

<sup>218</sup> See Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, para. 372.

<sup>219</sup> See www.i24news.tv/en/news/israel-at-war/artc-i24news-exclusive-former-fm-eli-cohen-says-saudi-could-accept-normalization-without-palestinian-state.

<sup>220</sup> See <https://www.mekomit.co.il/%d7%94%d7%9e%d7%a1%d7%9e%d7%9a-%d7%94%d7%9e%d7%9c%d7%90-%d7%a9%d7%9c-%d7%9e%d7%a9%d7%a8%d7%93-%d7%94%d7%9e%d7%95%d7%93%d7%99%d7%a2%d7%99%d7%9f-%d7%9b%d7%99%d7%91%d7%95%d7%a9-%d7%a2%d7%96%d7%94-%d7%95/>; and <https://apnews.com/article/israel-gaza-population-transfer-amas-egypt-palestinians-refugees-5f99378c0af6aca183a90c631fa4da5a>.

<sup>221</sup> See <https://x.com/MiddleEastEye/status/1747967081541255628>; <https://t.me/bengvir/4294> (translated in <https://x.com/KhaledYousry22/status/1798729352412319874>); www.youtube.com/watch?v=I3XLt2yXGI; and www.aljazeera.com/news/2024/1/29/israeli-ministers-join-gathering-calling-for-rebuilding-settlements-in-gaza.

<sup>222</sup> See www.haaretz.com/israel-news/2024-01-28/ty-article/ministers-from-netanyahus-party-jointhousands-of-israelis-at-resettle-gaza-conference/0000018d-512f-dfdc-a5ad-db7f35e10000.

<sup>223</sup> A/79/347, paras. 6 and 15–17.

economy and environment and [had caused] the deterioration of the living conditions of the Palestinians”.<sup>224</sup>

61. The violence and trauma suffered by the Israelis on 7 October deepened collective animosity, and calls for annihilation grew.<sup>225</sup> In a manner reminiscent of other genocides, the ensuing vengeful atmosphere prepared the soldiers to become “willing executioners” of the heinous tasks required of them.<sup>226</sup> An opportunity presented itself to sever Palestinian connection to the land, with foreseeable consequences for their Palestinian existence,<sup>227</sup> as outlined below.

B. Totality of the group: destruction of the Palestinian people

62. Since 7 October 2023, the decimation of Palestinian human life has been swift and extensive. Amid mass killings, eradication of family lines, large-scale targeting of children and torture, the occupied Palestinian territory is being intentionally rendered unliveable – one home, school, church, mosque, hospital, neighbourhood, community, at a time. Spreading from Gaza to the West Bank, calculated destruction reveals a deliberate campaign of connected incidents, which must be considered cumulatively.

63. Israel has pursued a pattern of conduct “deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction”,<sup>228</sup> as evidenced by the systematic destruction of already precarious life-sustaining healthcare, food security and Water, Sanitation and Hygiene for All (WASH) infrastructure. Although varying in intensity across the occupied territory, in Gaza this destructive violence has already led to starvation, epidemics and forced displacement with no possibility of safe return – as expressly intended. The destruction of infrastructure across the occupied Palestinian territory imperils the long-term survival of the group. The deliberate degradation of public health is a technique of genocide “by attrition”.<sup>229</sup> More than 500,000 children with no schooling and 88,000 students without universities<sup>230</sup> are doomed to dire outcomes.

64. For Palestinians, further layers of agony and forced displacement aggravate their inherited trauma and psychological vulnerability as Nakba survivors.<sup>231</sup> Months of relentless shunting of weakened humans from one unsafe area to another – fleeing bombs and bullets, with minimal chances of escape, amid loss, fear and grief, and with little access to shelter, clean water, food and healthcare – have inflicted

<sup>224</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 242.

<sup>225</sup> Martin Shaw, “Palestine in an international historical perspective on genocide”, Holy Land Studies, vol. 9, No. 1 (May 2010), p. 20.

<sup>226</sup> William Schabas, “Hate speech in Rwanda: the road to genocide”, in Genocide and Human Rights, Mark Lattimer, ed. (London, Routledge, 2017), p. 261.

<sup>227</sup> See paras. 46–48 (above).

<sup>228</sup> Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, art. II (c).

<sup>229</sup> See www.aljazeera.com/opinions/2024/9/2/polio-and-israels-attrition-genocide-in; and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Clement Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, Case No. ICTR-95-1-T, Judgment, 21 May 1999, paras. 115–116.

<sup>230</sup> See <https://www.thenation.com/article/world/gaza-students-future/>; and www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-68023080.

<sup>231</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-T, Judgment, 12 December 2012, para. 742.

incalculable harm, especially on children.<sup>232</sup> The movement of displaced Palestinians resembles the death marches of past genocides, and the Nakba. Forced displacement severs connection with the land, undermining food sovereignty and cultural belonging, and triggering further displacement.<sup>233</sup> Communal bonds are broken, the social fabric shredded and reserves of resilience depleted. Systematic forced displacement contributes to “the destruction of the spirit, of the will to live, and of life itself”.<sup>234</sup>

65. As was foreseeable, the overall conduct of Israel post-7 October has inflicted severe psychological harm on all Palestinians, both direct victims and those witnessing in exile. The overall aim is to humiliate and degrade Palestinians as a whole. Prisoners stripped and sadistically tortured en masse; bodies of adults and children piled up and decomposing in the street; survivors forced to eat animal food and grass and drink seawater or even sewage; the maiming of thousands, including young children left limbless before they could even crawl; the destruction of homes and violation of intimate life; having absolutely nothing to return to. Mass graves and the exhumation and relocation of bodies are specific acts of desecration, which themselves can suggest genocidal intent.<sup>235</sup> Combined, these acts go far beyond what international jurisprudence recognizes as “step[s] in the process of destruction of the ... group”.<sup>236</sup> The pain and loss will impact generations to come.<sup>237</sup>

66. Genocide could manifest in the targeting of members of the same group in different parts of their territory, through acts of varying intensity.<sup>238</sup> In the background, Palestinians inside Israel (“the enemies within”) have also experienced suppression.<sup>239</sup> The relentless attacks against the United Nations, and, in particular, UNRWA, threaten the socioeconomic lifelines of millions of Palestinian refugees across the broader region, and cannot be ignored.

67. The destructive consequences of Israeli conduct reverberate well beyond the Gaza epicentre, as the same patterns of genocidal conduct have begun to appear in the West Bank. The only inference to be reasonably drawn from all this is of a clear <sup>232</sup> A/78/545, para. 21; International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Jean-Paul Akayesu, Case No. ICTR-96-4-T, Judgment, 2 September 1998, para. 121; International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-T, Judgment, 12 December 2012, para. 742; International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Clement Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, Case No. ICTR-95-1-T, Judgment, 21 May 1999, paras. 532–533; and Joint Declaration of Intervention of Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom (to the case of The Gambia v. Myanmar), paras. 67–71.

<sup>233</sup> A/79/171, paras. 80 and 110–111; and www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/documents/issues/food/2024-08-27-visuals-palestinian-people-food-sovereignty.pdf, pp. 6 and 12.

<sup>234</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Jean-Paul Akayesu, Case No. ICTR-96-4-T, Judgment, 2 September 1998, para. 732.

<sup>235</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-T, para. 596; www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-99; www.unocha.org/publications/report/occupied-palestinian-territory/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-158; and www.ochaopt.org/content/hostilities-gaza-strip-and-israel-flash-update-164.

<sup>236</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Jean-Paul Akayesu, Case No. ICTR-96-4-T, Judgment, 2 September 1998, para. 732.

<sup>237</sup> International Criminal Court, Trial Chamber VI, The Prosecutor v. Bosco Ntaganda, Case No. ICC-01/04-02/06-2659, Reparations Order, 8 March 2021, paras. 73–74; International Criminal Court, The Prosecutor v. Dominic Ongwen, Case No. ICC-02/04-01/15, Reparations Order, 28 February 2024, paras. 410–412.

<sup>238</sup> Shaw, “Palestine in an international historical perspective”, pp. 3–6.

<sup>239</sup> See <https://zeteco.com/p/palestinian-israel-gaza-genocide-arab-citizens/>; and www.adalah.org/en/content/view/11158.

intention to attack “the group’s capacity to renew itself, and hence to ensure its long-term survival”.<sup>240</sup>

C. Totality of the conduct: genocidal intent rationalized as self-defence

68. In the face of such wholesale destruction, the stated goals of Israel, accepted by some States, remain “to eradicate Hamas”<sup>241</sup> and “bring the hostages home”.<sup>242</sup> Neither of these goals, or motives, preclude a finding of genocidal intent as the only reasonable inference to be drawn. Instead, both motives, together and disjunctively, substantiate the genocidal intent.

69. History reveals that:

(a) As recognized in the jurisprudence, genocide may occur in the context of armed conflict.<sup>243</sup> As Judge Trindade elaborated: “perpetrators of genocide will almost always allege that ... their actions were taken ‘pursuant to an ongoing military conflict’; yet, ‘genocide may be a means for achieving military objectives just as readily as military conflict may be a means for instigating a genocidal plan’.”<sup>244</sup>

(b) Different underlying motives do not displace genocidal intent.<sup>245</sup> As observed by Judge Bhandari, “genocidal intent may exist simultaneously with other, ulterior motives”.<sup>246</sup> In international criminal jurisprudence, intent (the aim to achieve a criminal result: destruction of the group) is distinguished from motive (the reasons behind an action: hatred,<sup>247</sup> revenge/collective punishment,<sup>248</sup> personal political

<sup>240</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, para. 136.

<sup>241</sup> See <https://news.un.org/en/story/2023/10/1142847>.

<sup>242</sup> Ibid.

<sup>243</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-T, para. 572.

<sup>244</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Dissenting Opinion of Judge Cançado Trindade, para. 144.

<sup>245</sup> Consider Genocide Convention, Travaux Préparatoires, A/C.6/SR.77, pp. 131–133; and A/C.6/SR.75, p. 117.

<sup>246</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Separate Opinion of Judge Bhandari, para. 50 (emphasis in original).

<sup>247</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, The Prosecutor v. Goran Jelisić, Case No. IT-95-10-T, Judgment, 14 December 1999, para. 79.

<sup>248</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Separate Opinion of Judge Bhandari, para. 50; S/2005/60, para. 493; and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Clément Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, Case No. ICTR-95-1-A, Appeal Judgment, 1 June 2001, para. 161.

agendas,<sup>249</sup> alleged threat<sup>250</sup>).<sup>251</sup> Although motive is usually irrelevant in criminal law,<sup>252</sup> it can reveal intent.<sup>253</sup>

70. Post-7 October, Israel has framed its military operations in Gaza as a war of self-defence<sup>254</sup> and counter-terrorism<sup>255</sup> against a terrorist group.<sup>256</sup> However, it is well established that Israel cannot legitimately invoke self-defence against the population under its occupation.<sup>257</sup> The occupying Power must protect, not target, the occupied people. In the context of Israel ignoring the ICJ directive to end the unlawful occupation, the aim to eradicate resistance contradicts the rights to self-determination and to resist an oppressive regime, protected by customary international law.<sup>258</sup> It also portrays the entire population as engaged in resistance and therefore eliminable. By continuing to suppress the right to self-determination,<sup>259</sup> Israel is replicating historical instances in which self-defence, counter-insurgency or counter-terrorism were used to justify destruction of the group, leading to genocide.<sup>260</sup>

71. With the dehumanization of Palestinians reaching a peak,<sup>261</sup> the world has become inured to the individual and collective toll of their devastation. In Gaza, Israel has targeted both military operatives and ordinary civilians, including from local <sup>249</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Goran Jelisić, Case No. IT-95-10-A, Appeal Judgment, 5 July 2001, para. 49; and International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Milorad Krnojelac, Case No. IT-97-25-A, Appeal Judgment, 17 September 2003, para. 102.

<sup>250</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Clement Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, Case No. ICTR-95-1-T, Judgment, 21 May 1999, paras. 309–310; International Criminal Court, The Prosecutor v. Omar Hassan Ahmad Al Bashir, Case No. ICC-02/05-01/09, (First) Warrant of Arrest Judgment, 4 March 2009, see Separate and Partly Dissenting Opinion of Judge Anita Usacka, para. 65.

<sup>251</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Tihomir Blaškić, Case No. IT-95-14-A, Appeal Judgment, 29 July 2004, para. 694; International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, Prosecutor v. Radovan Karadžić, Case No. MICT-13-55-A, Appeal Judgment, 20 March 2019, para. 722; and International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Milomir Stakić, Case No. IT-97-24-A, Appeal Judgment, 22 March 2006, para. 45.

<sup>252</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Duško Tadić, Case No. IT-94-1-A, Appeal Judgment, 15 July 1999, paras. 268–269.

<sup>253</sup> Tihomir Blaškić, Case No. IT-95-14-A, Appeal Judgment, 29 July 2004, para. 694; International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, Prosecutor v. Dragoljub Kunarac, Radomir Kovač and Zoran Vuković, Case No. IT-96-23-A & IT-96-23/1-A, Judgment, 12 June 2002, para. 153.

<sup>254</sup> See <https://www.icj-cij.org/sites/default/files/case-related/192/192-20240112-ora-01-00-bi.pdf>, para. 4.

<sup>255</sup> See www.youtube.com/watch?v=sM7Hc7a0vZY; <https://x.com/IsraeliPM/status/1745501853016523013>; and www.gov.il/en/pages/opening-statement-of-mfa-legal-advisor-tal-becker-at-icj-proceedings-12-jan-2024.

<sup>256</sup> See www.israelnationalnews.com/news/382632.

<sup>257</sup> Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, 9 July 2004, I.C.J. Reports 2004, p. 136, para. 139; and Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, see Declaration of Judge Tladi, para. 48.

<sup>258</sup> General Assembly resolution 37/43, para. 2; Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, see Declaration of Judge Charlesworth, paras. 23–24; Western Sahara, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1975 p. 12, see Separate Opinion of Vice President Ammoun, para. 100; and General Assembly resolution 1514 (XV).

<sup>259</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 257, 261–262, 267, 272 and 274.

<sup>260</sup> E.g. Martin Shaw, “Darfur: counter-insurgency, forced displacement and genocide”, British Journal of Sociology, vol. 62, No. 1 (March 2011), p. 59; and A/HRC/39/CRP.2, paras. 99, 1124 and 1480.

<sup>261</sup> Regarding Israel, see www.972mag.com/dehumanization-moral-abyss-israelis/.

governance structures and civil servants.<sup>262</sup> Expanding full-scale military operations to the West Bank further exposes an aim to target Palestinians beyond Hamas.

72. As the President of Israel, Isaac Herzog, announced, Israel has operated on the basis that “it is an entire nation out there that is responsible”.<sup>263</sup> The entire population – deemed “non-innocent” and “not uninvolved” by Israel – has been subject to indiscriminate and disproportionate attacks.<sup>264</sup> Scorched-earth tactics have spread terror among civilians, far exceeding the bounds of legitimate force. Continual, unproven attributions of Hamas affiliation and allegations of “human shielding” in almost every assault help disguise the systematic targeting of civilians, de facto erasing Palestinian civilian-ness altogether.<sup>265</sup> The resulting incommensurate losses sustained by Palestinians compared with Israeli losses,<sup>266</sup> viewed in the context of the vastly superior Israeli military capabilities,<sup>267</sup> suggest an intent other than that claimed.<sup>268</sup>

73. The disturbing frequency and callousness of the killing of people known to be civilians are “emblematic of the systematic nature” of a destructive intent.<sup>269</sup> Six-year-old Hind Rajab, killed with 355 bullets after pleading for help for hours;<sup>270</sup> the fatal mauling by dogs of Muhammed Bhar, who had Down’s Syndrome;<sup>271</sup> the execution of Atta Ibrahim Al-Muqaid, an older deaf man, in his home, later bragged about by his killer and other soldiers on social media;<sup>272</sup> the premature babies deliberately left to die a slow death and decompose in the intensive care unit at Al-Nasr Hospital;<sup>273</sup> the elderly man, Bashir Hajji, killed en route to southern Gaza after appearing in a propaganda photograph of a “safe corridor”;<sup>274</sup> Abu al-Ola, the handcuffed hostage shot by a sniper after being sent into Nasser Hospital with evacuation orders.<sup>275</sup> When the dust settles on Gaza, the true extent of the horror experienced by Palestinians will become known.

74. The second stated goal of Israel is to rescue Israeli hostages.<sup>276</sup> This claim has been undermined by the harm caused by Israel to the hostages themselves: more have been killed by indiscriminate Israeli bombing or friendly fire than rescued.<sup>277</sup>

<sup>262</sup> See <https://opiniojuris.org/2024/08/02/reflecting-on-genocidal-intent-in-the-icj-case/>.

<sup>263</sup> See www.huffingtonpost.co.uk/entry/israel-gaza-isaac-herzog\_n\_65295ee8e4b03ea0c004e2a8.

<sup>264</sup> See www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/documents/countries/opt/20240619-ohchr-thematic-report-indiscrim-disprop-attacks-gaza-oct-dec2023.pdf; and A/HRC/55/73, paras. 58–75.

<sup>265</sup> A/HRC/55/73, para. 55; and <https://jewishcurrents.org/human-shields-gaza-israel-a-legal-justification-for-genocide>.

<sup>266</sup> See www.gov.il/en/pages/swords-of-iron-idf-casualties.

<sup>267</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Mile Mrkšić and Others, Case No. IT-95-13/1-T, Judgment, 27 September 2007, paras. 470–472.

<sup>268</sup> A/HRC/39/CRP.2, paras. 1435–1436.

<sup>269</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Ildéphonse Nizeyimana, Case No. ICTR-2000-55C-T, Judgment, 19 June 2012, paras. 1521 and 1530; and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Separate Opinion of Judge Bhandari, paras. 28–31.

<sup>270</sup> See <https://forensic-architecture.org/investigation/the-killing-of-hind-rajab>.

<sup>271</sup> See www.bbc.com/news/articles/cz9drj14e0lo.

<sup>272</sup> See www.aljazeera.net/news/2024/3/9/%D8%AA%D9%81%D8%A7%D8%B5%D9%8A%D9%84-%D8%B9%D9%86-%D8%AA%D8%B5%D9%81%D9%8A%D8%A9-50-%D9%85%D8%AF%D9%86%D9%8A%D8%A7-%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%AC%D8%B2%D9%8A%D8%B1%D8%A9-%D8%AA%D9%83%D8%B4%D9%81.

<sup>273</sup> See www.washingtonpost.com/world/2023/12/03/gaza-premature-babies-dead-nasr/.

<sup>274</sup> See <https://x.com/IsraelArabic/status/1724371929413365779>; and www.middleeasteye.net/news/israel-palestine-war-army-kills-elderly-taking-pr-photo-safe-corridor.

<sup>275</sup> See <https://theintercept.com/2024/02/14/gaza-nasser-hospital-evacuation-israel-prisoner/>.

<sup>276</sup> See www.thejc.com/news/israel/netanyahu-vows-to-stick-to-the-goals-of-the-war-ovyuo10s; and www.brookings.edu/events/analyzing-israels-strategy-in-gaza/.

<sup>277</sup> See www.nbcnews.com/news/world/american-hostages-hamas-gaza-kidnapped-rcna170170.

Sabotaging the ceasefire negotiations resulted in hostage deaths.<sup>278</sup> The words and conduct of Israeli high-ranking officials,<sup>279</sup> including Prime Minister Netanyahu, indicate that regaining and retaining control over Gaza's territory has overridden the release of hostages as a priority.<sup>280</sup>

VI. Understanding genocidal intent within a State

75. Accountability for genocide cannot be limited to criminal responsibility of individuals, who are to be judged in criminal trials with due process guarantees. It would be a tragic paradox if the rights of victims were subordinated to the guarantees afforded to alleged perpetrators and their Governments.<sup>281</sup> Furthermore, the responsibility of the State must be assessed in its own right. The moment one genocidal act occurs and the special intent manifests, this signals that genocide is taking place. This is the moment to intervene – early intervention being the only way to prevent more atrocities that will scar human history.

76. State responsibility entails actions and omissions that lead to genocide.<sup>282</sup> Conduct attributable to the State includes executive, legislative, judicial or any other functions or actions carried out by State organs<sup>283</sup> and legal persons with government authority<sup>284</sup> (even ultra vires actions).<sup>285</sup> This includes military personnel and persons acting under instructions or control of a State,<sup>286</sup> or conduct acknowledged by the State as its own.<sup>287</sup> All such conduct should be assessed in its totality.

77. A State is obliged to prevent, to not commit and to punish genocide. According to ICJ, the State obligation to prevent genocide arises as soon as the State becomes aware, or should reasonably be aware, of a “serious risk of genocide”,<sup>288</sup> and specifically on the emergence of a reasonable suspicion that genocidal intent has formed within the State apparatus. The State is obliged to investigate and prosecute those suspected of committing genocide and ancillary offences of direct and public incitement, attempt, aid and assist and conspiracy.<sup>289</sup> Knowing the risk of genocide, <sup>278</sup> See www.theguardian.com/world/article/2024/jul/07/israeli-government-accused-of-trying-to-sabotage-gaza-ceasefire-proposal; www.haaretz.com/israel-news/2024-07-10/ty-article-timeline/premium/how-netanyahu-has-systematically-foiled-talks-to-release-hostages-from-hamas-captivity/00000190-9b91-d591-a7ff-fff341120000; www.haaretz.com/israel-news/2024-09-05/ty-article/premium/rattled-by-global-rebuke-netanyahu-scrambles-to-fend-off-charges-of-sabotaging-gaza-deal/00000191-c140-d2e0-a7d5-ddd270f10000; www.timesofisrael.com/gallant-tells-families-all-for-all-hostage-offer-phony-pushes-military-pressure/; www.timesofisrael.com/no-doubt-netanyahu-preventing-hostage-deal-charges-ex-spokesman-of-families-forum/; www.timesofisrael.com/stop-sabotaging-hostage-families-slam-netanyahu-in-rallies-in-tel-aviv-jerusalem/; www.bbc.com/news/articles/cp4wggypwrxo; and www.nbcnews.com/news/netanyahu-added-conditions-complicated-gaza-negotiations-officials-say-rcna166503.

<sup>279</sup> See www.huffingtonpost.co.uk/entry/israeli-government-spokesman-says-war-will-continue-even-if-all-hostages-are-released\_uk\_655db93ee4b0662eb43c2cf0.

<sup>280</sup> See www.gov.il/en/pages/event-press040924.

<sup>281</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, see Dissenting Opinion of Judge Cançado Trindade, paras. 145–146.

<sup>282</sup> Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, art. 2.

<sup>283</sup> Ibid., art. 4.

<sup>284</sup> Ibid., art. 5.

<sup>285</sup> Ibid., art. 7.

<sup>286</sup> Ibid., art. 8.

<sup>287</sup> Ibid., art. 11.

<sup>288</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2007, p. 43, para. 431.

<sup>289</sup> Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, arts. III (b)–III (d).

but failing to act to prevent or to take action to punish these preparatory acts, should be taken as indication of genocidal intent.<sup>290</sup>

78. In autocratic governance systems, checks and balances to curb genocidal conduct are likely either non-existent or non-functioning. Conversely, in a State that claims to have a rule of law system, the legislature, executive or judiciary should be able to curb excesses (generally crimes in and of themselves) that may escalate into genocide. All State organs understand their function as a check on the excesses of others – primarily the executive’s. The failure of an apparent rule of law State apparatus to fulfil those obligations, knowing what the consequences will be, must be seen as an integral part of the totality of conduct that should be assessed when determining State genocidal intent.

79. Acts or omissions of a State may contribute to “the opportunity to commit genocide”, a circumstantial factor that ICJ has considered when assessing inferences to be drawn.<sup>291</sup> Jurisprudence also recognizes that “the prevailing atmosphere of impunity”<sup>292</sup> and “the encouragement of the authorities” may increase the possibility of crimes leading to genocide.<sup>293</sup>

80. A conservative assessment would lead to the conclusion that, at a minimum, the orders of ICJ on 26 January 2024 should have triggered this duty to act. The Court had specifically instructed Israel to:<sup>294</sup>

- Refrain from further acts that may amount to genocide
- Prevent and punish genocidal incitement
- Allow humanitarian assistance
- Preserve evidence
- Submit a report to the Court detailing steps taken to implement the ruling within one month

81. Instead, genocidal violence continued in Gaza with serious risk of expanding to the West Bank amid increasing genocidal incitement, as demonstrated in section III of the present report. No one has been investigated or prosecuted, let alone punished. Immediately after the Court issued provisional measures, Israel launched an unsubstantiated campaign against UNRWA, which jeopardized the fragile lifelines necessary for humanitarian assistance in Gaza.<sup>295</sup> The following examples offer a snapshot of how various arms of the State have participated in forming the State’s intent:

(a) Statements made by the political-military leadership must be adjudicated as evidence of both direct intent and part of the totality of conduct from which intent

<sup>290</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Karadžić, Case No. IT-95-5/18-T, Judgment, 24 March 2016, paras. 3425, 3433, 3514, 3520, 4866–4867, 6047 and 6049.

<sup>291</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2015, p. 3, paras. 431–437.

<sup>292</sup> International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, Case No. IT-05-88/2-T, Judgment, 12 December 2012, para. 1150.

<sup>293</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Clement Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, Case No. ICTR-95-1-T, Judgment, 21 May 1999, para. 290. See also International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić, Case No. IT-98-33-A, Appeal Judgement, 19 April 2004, paras. 13 and 148–149; and International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Prosecutor v. Karadžić, Case No. IT-95-5/18-T, Judgment, 24 March 2016, para. 6047.

<sup>294</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Order, 26 January 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 86.

<sup>295</sup> See www.ohchr.org/en/press-releases/2024/02/states-must-reinstate-and-strengthen-support-unrwa-amid-unfolding-genocide.

is inferable. Direct orders at the highest levels of Israeli leadership, as meticulously documented by South Africa,<sup>296</sup> are the hallmark of the genocide in Gaza. These genocidal statements and incitements have continued unabated throughout the past year and echoed at all levels of the military structure. Relentless genocidal incitement by Israeli officials hastened the “normalization” of exterminatory violence;

(b) The members of the Security and War Cabinets of Israel, and other ministers, have issued such genocidal statements and used their ministerial responsibilities to implement their words, authorizing the various genocidal acts in Gaza, such as starvation, obstruction of humanitarian assistance and creation of conditions of life that would lead to destruction;<sup>297</sup>

(c) The Knesset has fully supported the Government and provided a platform for utterly dehumanizing debates concerning Palestinians. The Deputy Speaker declared on 8 October 2023, “Now we all have one common goal – erasing the Gaza Strip from the face of the Earth”.<sup>298</sup> The Knesset has passed emergency laws,<sup>299</sup> amendments and repeated extensions to the Detention of Unlawful Combatants Law, thereby facilitating the imposition of even more deplorable conditions on Palestinian detainees;<sup>300</sup> condoned torture, including rape of Palestinian detainees (derogatively called “Nukhba”),<sup>301</sup> and approved budgets for military and colony expansion.<sup>302</sup> In July 2024, the Knesset voted against the two-State solution;<sup>303</sup>

(d) The Attorney General has failed to investigate and prosecute acts preparatory to and associated with genocide, such as war crimes, torture and starvation,<sup>304</sup> and to implement the provisional measures against genocidal incitement,<sup>305</sup> while pursuing those “inciting” support for Palestinian resistance.<sup>306</sup> This draws on and consolidates the long-standing environment of impunity recognized by ICJ;<sup>307</sup>

(e) The judiciary has failed to impose limitations on criminal conduct and administrative excesses, or enforce any accountability, in almost 12 months,

<sup>296</sup> See S/2024/419; and A/HRC/55/73, para. 50.

<sup>297</sup> E.g., see www.timesofisrael.com/liveblog\_entry/israel-cuts-electricity-supply-to-gaza/; and <https://oxfamlibrary.openrepository.com/bitstream/10546/621609/1/bp-water-war-crimes-180724-en.pdf>, pp. 15–16.

<sup>298</sup> See www.bbc.com/news/articles/cze5w2wd4x0o.

<sup>299</sup> See <https://en.idi.org.il/articles/51115>; and www.knesset.tv/parliament/1307/61096/.

<sup>300</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf, pp. 31–32.

<sup>301</sup> See <https://x.com/ireallyhateyou/status/1817904053462196523>; and www.aljazeera.com/news/2024/7/29/israeli-far-right-politicians-protest-arrest-of-soldiers-suspected-of-abuse.

<sup>302</sup> See www.gov.il/BlobFolder/reports/seder-gov120424/he/Seder\_Gov\_n563-140124.pdf; www.gov.il/BlobFolder/reports/seder-gov120424/he/Seder\_Gov\_n563-140124.pdf; and www.aljazeera.com/news/2024/1/16/israels-new-15bn-war-budget-whats-it-for-and-what-gets-cut.

<sup>303</sup> See <https://main.knesset.gov.il/EN/News/PressReleases/Pages/press18724w.aspx>.

<sup>304</sup> See https://hamoked.org/files/2024/1666540\_eng.pdf, p. 29; www.aljazeera.com/opinions/2024/7/16/israeli-courts-cannot-and-will-not-prosecute-israels-war-crimes; www.crisisgroup.org/middle-east-north-africa/east-mediterranean-mena-israelpalestine/246-stemming-israeli-settler-violence; and www.adalah.org/en/content/view/11095.

<sup>305</sup> Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the Gaza Strip (South Africa v. Israel), Order, 26 January 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, para. 86 (3).

<sup>306</sup> See www.gov.il/en/pages/news-26-11.

<sup>307</sup> Legal Consequences Arising from the Policies and Practices of Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, Advisory Opinion, 19 July 2024, I.C.J. Reports 2024, paras. 150–154. See also A/HRC/39/CRP.2, para. 1423.

effectively granting impunity to public officials, military personnel and settlers.<sup>308</sup> Courts dismissed a petition regarding Palestinian prison conditions<sup>309</sup> and rejected an appeal relating to media access to Gaza.<sup>310</sup> Following the ICJ provisional measures order, the High Court did agree to hear a petition on humanitarian aid to Gaza in March 2024,<sup>311</sup> and others on torture and conditions of detention.<sup>312</sup> However, no persons or institutions have been held accountable;

(f) The role of the Israeli media in inciting this genocide, by helping to foster an unchecked genocidal climate, ought to be examined judicially – as has occurred in other contexts.<sup>313</sup> Compounding decades of dehumanization of the Palestinians,<sup>314</sup> the media have platformed proponents of genocide and debates legitimating their brutalization<sup>315</sup>, and have withheld the facts from the Israeli public. State actions have exacerbated the situation, including heavy military censorship,<sup>316</sup> the killing of 111 Palestinian journalists,<sup>317</sup> denial of entry to foreign journalists to Gaza and the forced closure of Al Jazeera’s offices in Israel<sup>318</sup> and the West Bank.<sup>319</sup> Meanwhile, Israeli regulatory agencies have neither exercised their authority to revoke broadcast licences nor issued financial sanctions against those using or amplifying genocidal statements.<sup>320</sup>

82. The State of Israel is predicated on the goal of Palestinian erasure; its entire political system is directed towards this goal. State structures have historically architected the oppression of Palestinians;<sup>321</sup> now its institutions, failing to function as a bulwark, are together advancing the course of the current catastrophe.

VII. Conclusions

83. The Gaza genocide is a tragedy foretold, and one that risks expanding to other Palestinians under Israeli rule. Since its establishment, Israel has treated

<sup>308</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf, pp. 115–116; and <https://s3.eu-west-1.amazonaws.com/files.yesh-din.org/FFAmechanism/YeshDin+Mechanism.pdf>.

<sup>309</sup> Israel, High Court of Justice, Association of Civil Rights in Israel v. Minister of Defense and Others Case No. HCJ 7753/23, Judgment, 23 November 2011; and www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf, pp. 115–116.

<sup>310</sup> See www.ifj.org/media-centre/news/detail/article/israel-ifj-calls-on-the-israeli-government-to-lift-ban-on-foreign-media-to-enter-gaza.

<sup>311</sup> See <https://gisha.org/en/aid-access-now/>.

<sup>312</sup> See www.btselem.org/sites/default/files/publications/202408\_welcome\_to\_hell\_eng.pdf, pp. 115–116. E.g., see Israel, High Court of Justice, Association of Civil Rights in Israel v. Minister of Defense and Others, Case No. HCJ 4268/24; and Israel, High Court of Justice, Association of Civil Rights in Israel v. The Government, Case No. HCJ 1357/24. See https://www.acri.org.il/post/\_992 (Hebrew).

<sup>313</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, The Prosecutor v. Ferdinand Nahimana and Others, Case No. ICTR-99-52-T, Judgement, 3 December 2003.

<sup>314</sup> Raz Segal and Luigi Daniele, “Gaza as twilight of Israel Exceptionalism: holocaust and genocide studies from unprecedented crisis to unprecedented change”, Journal of Genocide Research (March 2024), pp. 1–2.

<sup>315</sup> S/2024/419, enclosure I, paras. 18–26.

<sup>316</sup> See www.972mag.com/israeli-military-censor-media-2023/; and <https://theintercept.com/2023/12/23/israel-military-idf-media-censor/>.

<sup>317</sup> See <https://cpj.org/2024/09/journalist-casualties-in-the-israel-gaza-conflict/>.

<sup>318</sup> See <https://main.knesset.gov.il/EN/News/PressReleases/Pages/press1424t.aspx>.

<sup>319</sup> See <https://cpj.org/2024/09/israeli-forces-raid-al-jazeeras-west-bank-office-issue-45-day-ban-on-its-journalism/>.

<sup>320</sup> See www.gov.il/en/departments/units/moatsa.

<sup>321</sup> See <https://s3.eu-west-1.amazonaws.com/files.yesh-din.org/FFAmechanism/YeshDin+Mechanism.pdf>.

the occupied people as a hated encumbrance and threat to be eradicated, subjecting millions of Palestinians, for generations, to everyday indignities, mass killing, mass incarceration, forced displacement, racial segregation and apartheid. Advancing its goal of “Greater Israel” threatens to erase the Indigenous Palestinian population.

84. Obscured by false Israeli narratives of a war waged in “self-defence”, the genocidal conduct of Israel must be viewed within a broader context, as numerous actions (totality of conduct) jointly targeting the Palestinians as such (totality of a people) across the entire territory where they reside (totality of the land), in furtherance of the political ambitions of Israel for sovereignty over the whole of former Mandatory Palestine. Today, the genocide of the Palestinians appears to be the means to an end: the complete removal or eradication of Palestinians from the land so integral to their identity, and which is illegally and openly coveted by Israel.

85. Statements and actions by Israeli leaders reflect a genocidal intent and conduct; they have often used the Biblical story of Amalek to justify the extermination of “the Gazans”, erasing Gaza and violently displacing Palestinians, thereby casting Palestinians as a whole as legitimate targets.

86. Individuals clearly identifiable as perpetrators should be prosecuted. However, it is the entire State apparatus that has engineered, articulated and executed genocidal violence, through acts which in their totality may lead to the destruction of the Palestinian people. This must stop; urgent action is required to ensure the full application of the Genocide Convention and full protection of the Palestinians.

87. This ongoing genocide is doubtlessly the consequence of the exceptional status and protracted impunity that has been afforded to Israel. Israel has systematically and flagrantly violated international law, including Security Council resolutions and ICJ orders. This has emboldened the hubris of Israel and its defiance of international law. As the ICC Prosecutor has warned, “if we do not demonstrate our willingness to apply the law equally, if it is seen as applied selectively, we will be creating the conditions of its complete collapse. This is the true risk we face at this perilous moment.”

88. As the world watches the first live-streamed settler-colonial genocide, only justice can heal the wounds that political expedience has allowed to fester. The devastation of so many lives is an outrage to humanity and all that international law stands for.

VIII. Recommendations

89. The current genocide is part of a century-long project of eliminatory settler-colonialism in Palestine, a stain on the international system and humanity, which must be ended, investigated and prosecuted.

90. The Special Rapporteur reminds all States of their legal obligation to act on their due diligence duties given the clearly serious risk of continuous breach of the Genocide Convention and Geneva Conventions, and urges States to consider and reach an urgent public determination as to what levers and tools each State has at its disposal to ameliorate that risk, whether acting alone or with other States, including at the United Nations; and to explain to the public and the international community the steps which it has taken and why.

91. Whether in compliance with the above due diligence duties or otherwise, the Special Rapporteur urges Member States to:

(a) Use all their political leverage – commencing with a full arms embargo and sanctions – so that Israel stops the assault against the Palestinians, accepts a ceasefire and fully withdraws from the occupied Palestinian territory in line with the ICJ Advisory Opinion of 19 July 2024;

(b) Formally recognize Israel as an apartheid State and persistent violator of international law, reactivating the Special Committee Against Apartheid to comprehensively address the situation in Palestine, and warn Israel of possible suspension of its membership under Article 6 of the Charter of the United Nations;

(c) Support the deployment of an international protective presence throughout the occupied Palestinian territory;

(d) Develop a protective framework for Palestinians displaced outside Gaza, in line with international human rights and refugee law, while fully preserving their right to return;

(e) Support independent and thorough investigation(s) of criminal conduct, including genocide and apartheid, including through the application in national courts of universal jurisdiction over those suspected of such criminal conduct, including all relevant ancillary offences;

(f) Investigate and prosecute corporate entities and dual citizens involved in crimes in the occupied Palestinian territory, including soldiers, mercenaries and settlers;

(g) Ensure unhindered humanitarian assistance to Gaza and full financing and protection of UNRWA, including from attacks on its premises and personnel and from libellous smear campaigns, and ensure the continuity of its mandate in all fields.

92. The Special Rapporteur urges the ICC Prosecutor to investigate the commission of the crimes of genocide and apartheid by Israel, and investigate other prominent individuals mentioned in the present report.

93. The Special Rapporteur urges the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and Israel to investigate the broader context of eliminatory intent and practices of Israel against all Palestinians (triple lens test), including those with Israeli citizenship and the refugees, and recent acts of genocide.